Another observer noted that many of the candidates spoke in rather vague general terms with no one putting forth any new, concrete policies. The platforms and debate statements have tended to be unspecific or unrealistic with the question of "how?" often remaining.

The candidates did address the problem of the apathy surrounding the Student Association at the debates, in addition to describing the qualities the SA treasurer should have. The treasurer is currently chosen by the President.

There is a "need of leadership" in SA, said Charlie Clark, one of the five presidential candidates. Presently the president of Inter-Residence Association (IRA), Clark said SA must take "active stands" instead of being "passive." SA must become more accessible and students must become aware of what is happening at SA, he added. Clark stressed the need for communication in SA itself, and between SA and the rest of the UVM students. He said it was necessary to instill a "sense of belonging" among senators to get them more involved in, and concerned about SA. Clark, in his platform statement, cited more contact between senators and other students, and a newsletter as possible ways to stem apathy.

According to presidential candidate Peter Reigelman, much of the campus apathy concerning SA would dissipate if each student were more aware that he is pumping twenty-four dollars a year into the Student Association. Students would become more involved in the decision making process that determines where their money is spent, he said.

Concerning the SA Senators themselves, Reigelman, himself a senator, said the President must provide "some sort of goal for the people to work for" and must make sure "things are carried through." Academic credit hours for those working on issues would also provide incentive for senators to become more active in SA, he said, but he admitted that this was perhaps unrealistic. Reigelman did, however, note that there was "no excuse" for senators who miss meetings week after week.

The time has come to "bring SA back to the students," said Jesse Gadson, pointing out that in some instances SA is "not attuned to student needs." Gadson, an SA Senator, said lack of publicity is not responsible for student apathy. He did point out, however, that the debates and elections have been poorly advertised. SA must "prove its credibility" to the students and show them it is "representative of them," he added. Gadson and his running mate, vice-presidential candidate, Henry Chamberlain, contend that recently SA has been "getting out of touch with student needs on campus" and is "not lending itself to the role of student leader." This situation, he said, could be remedied if SA took the initiative to account for its policies to the students and campus organizations every couple of months. This would include forums with organizations such as dorm governments and the GCC for their input and ideas, he added.

Gadson and Chamberlain contend that some reorganization of SA will be necessary next year, in the form of abolishing the Student Activities Committee and establishing a Student Research Committee. Gadson, presently a member of the Student Activities Committee, has said in the past, that the committee, while administering the important functions of recognizing and reviewing SA organizations, spends little time on these duties and therefore is often idle.

"Lack of motivational issues" is responsible for the

(continued on page 18)

Above, Eric Kilburn ponders a student's question.

At right, from left to right, are candidates John Martin, Jesse Gadson, and Henry Chamberlain.

SPS Photos by Mitch Sprung

Index

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| News | 3 | Op-Ed | 19 |
| Calendar | 9 | Sports | 37 |
| Briefs | 10 | Sports Scene | 42 |
| Commentary | 11 | Arts | 47 |
| Features | 13 | Random Notes | 54 |
| Basic Health | 14 | Classifieds | 56 |
| Editorial | 18 | Election Supplement | 25 |

FREE Cocktails at St. Gambri's
Filet Mignon at Stuft Shirt
Wheel alignment at Noyes Tires

Over $500.00 of Food, Entertainment and Merchandise for $24.95

The 1978 Gift Book is a promotional campaign for the Burlinton merchants. They are hoping that this offering of free merchandise will introduce new customers to their services and encourage continued patronage of present customers. Out of a possible $500.00 of free merchandise there is something for everyone. The 60 certificates are transferable and may be used by anyone. This offering is genuine so don't miss it!

Share a book with your friends!

Stop by Billings 3/16—3/23 or Call Phil 658—4325

The Student Center.

Going to McDonald's is almost as much a part of school as going to class. You've made us the place to meet, to talk, to have a good time, to celebrate your victories and help forget defeats. You've made McDonald's more than just another place to eat. And that's why at McDonald's we do it all for you.

McDonald's

Burlington
So. Burlington

"Credible" Grievance Process a Possibility

By John Letteri

A uniform campus wide student grievance process wherein a student would be able to initiate an academic or non-academic grievance and see that grievance taken through a "credible, real process" with the possibility of "really accomplishing something" may be instituted next fall, according to Student Association (SA) Vice President Linda Purdy.

Currently, academic and non-academic grievances are handled separately. Student initiated academic grievances against a faculty member are considered by the chairman of the department and the dean of the particular college. Non-academic student grievances are handled by officials of Residential Life. Both these processes, however, "are informal, not guaranteeing any real rights for the students, due process or any real type of action," said Purdy.

The Title IX Committee, currently under the direction of Corrine Richard, dean of students, considers cases of sexual discrimination. A student who initiates a sexual grievance first discusses his/her case with Ms. Richards, who decided whether or not the complaint is legitimate. If she decides it is, the grievance is presented to a committee of faculty, administrative and student personnel. A recommendation is then forwarded to the appropriate vice-president for his approval. If affirmed, action is taken to correct the situation.

Purdy contends that these three different units should be incorporated into an "all-encompassing, uniform, campus-wide, student grievance committee." The committee would have administrative, faculty, and student personnel. A student could initiate any type of grievance and bring it to the committee for consideration. "Even if you don't have enough proof, or you are totally intimidated" the committee will give students the chance "to air their complaint," Purdy said.

Several years ago, students did have the choice to voice their complaints to a hearing body of students or an administration body. Students who sat on the "judicial court" were appointed annually by the SA. The SA abolished the student hearing body, however, and the administration took over this function.

Purdy contends that "there is a real need for this type of thing." She said the grievance process might also "provide an ear to the gripes of students for the SA to possibly base policy on." Although vice-president of academic affairs, Dr. Robert Arns, said he hasn't had enough time to actually get a real "feeling" of the problems of students at UVM (seven months), from previous experience such a process would be helpful.

Purdy stated further that action "had been taken" to create a grievance process in "March 1977." The committee responsible, however, got "caught up in the problem of academic dishonesty" and little work has been done since then. Purdy stated that "I hope by our (SA) taking the initiative, work will begin again on creating a student grievance process."

House Passes Pot Decriminalization Bill

A bill decriminalizing possession of small amounts of marijuana was passed by the Vermont House late last week in a 90-53 vote.

Under the proposed law, an individual convicted of possessing less than one ounce of marijuana could no longer be sentenced to a jail term and would not have a criminal record. The maximum fine for possession of up to an ounce would be reduced from $500 to $100.

Earlier in the week, the House passed an amendment proposed by Chester Ketcham (R–Middlebury), which gave the State Educational Board the power to set drug and alcohol policies if local school boards did not. The amendment, which passed 94-44, enabled the proposed law to obtain the "swing" votes it needed for passage.

Vermont's courts and prosecutors have apparently already taken the initiative in reducing penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana. According to spokesman for Vermont's prosecutors and police chiefs, who were very influential in passage of the bill, judges usually don't fine more than fifty dollars for small possession convictions.

Proponents of the bill have described Vermont's marijuana laws as containing "inconsistency."

Calling on "authoritative studies," Representative Thomas Bonnett (D–Thetford) said "In fact, marijuana is less harmful than alcohol. In fact, it is less harmful than tobacco." "It is entirely inconsistent to impose a penalty as severe

(continued on page 12)

Fleming Museum Undergoes A "Rediscovery" of Itself

By John Letteri

A decline in visitors prompted a "rediscovery" of the Robert Hull Fleming Museum last week. A brief history and slide show of the museum, given by Dr. William Lipke, director of the museum, and a tour of the estimated six million dollars worth of exhibits by Ms. Louisa Judge highlighted Wednesday night's affair.

In addition to housing some impressive collections of Egyptian, Columbian, and Japanese art and artifacts, the museum, according to Dr. Lipke, "also affords undergraduate art students a chance to work with works of art first hand." A student designed exhibition on "War" is currently displayed on the second floor, and another on European and American arts and decorative arts from 1750 to 1950 is being constructed. Increased federal funding for museums, under a recent Congressional National Museum Act, provides "funds for student-designed exhibits and internships" according to Lipke.

The museum is also trying to become "more sophisticated," Lipke said. Currently exhibited Columbian and African artifacts do not "present to the viewer a real perspective on how these things were really used." He contends that "a setting that would show how the societies used these artifacts" would be "much more beneficial."

Dr. William Lipke (left) and Ms. Louisa Judge.

SPS Photos by Jay Arnone

The museum is also running a children's art program on the second floor. "Children get to do paper folding, wood-block folding, and aid in color space and mood choice in conjunction with their own designs, Ms. Louisa Judge, director of development for the museum, said. They are encouraged to learn the basics of art and design of art objects.

Edwin Oure's "Drawings in Glass" is the current special exhibit at the Fleming. It features broken glass designed into various creations of art. The special exhibits change at the museum every seven or eight weeks and feature local as well as out of state artists.

In 1826, the university first recognized the need to house the collection of "natural history specimens and curiosities." In 1867, the museum was in the then university library (Torrey Hall). In 1873, a third floor was added to Torrey, and collections including marble sculpture and plaster casts were added. In 1931, after collections had grown immensely in quantity, the current Robert Hull Fleming Museum was built. Presently, after several archeological and natural history specimens were moved to other buildings, the museum maintains collections of decorative, and ethnographic arts valued in excess of six million dollars.

The museum, although financed by UVM, is "the museum in Vermont" according to Dr. Lipke. Local art also has a chance to be exhibited at the museum, culminating in special collection exhibits of local Vermont crafts. Dr. Lipke wishes all to "come and see what the museum is doing."

"... the musuem, according to Dr. Lipke, 'also affords undergraduate art students a chance to work with works of art first hand.'"

Housing Crunch Cited as Major Problem for Students and Poor

By Diana Palazzolo

At a recent Church Street forum on rent control, housing was cited as the number one problem facing low income residents and students in the city today.

Apartment shortages, high rental fees, and substandard conditions were described as the major problems faced by Burlington tenants. Proposed rent control legislation would set limits on the size of rent increases allowed each year. Tenant push for rent control continues to spread in major cities across the country.

People Acting for Change Together (PACT), a Burlington organization working for low income people, is a strong advocate for rent control. PACT has been working with the King St. Neighborhood Organization and other local community organizations in an effort to urge citizens to speak out and demand rent and eviction controls.

Catherine Hughes, PACT representative, discussing attributing factors which have created a severe housing crisis in Burlington, said "The term shortage comes from the fact that in Burlington there is less than a 1% vacancy rate. High rents and lousy conditions are backing poor working people into a corner." One of the major reasons for the apartment crunch in Burlington, Ms. Hughes noted, is that the university "has not taken the responsibility of providing students with ample housing and as a result, high competition has been created between students and low income families who inevitably are left at the bottom of the scale."

According to Barb McConnel, a worker on the mayor's task force for housing, Burlington authorities have more people on their waiting list than they have housing units, and 28% of the structures are substandard.

"Complicating the factor of increased housing shortages in Burlington, tenants are faced with paying outrageous rental rates" stated Mark Goldowitz, a Massachusetts attorney extensively involved in researching tenant law. Based on Bureau of Labor statistics in 1970, 34% of renter households paid more than they could afford for shelter and 46% of the households are making less than $10,000 yearly, he explained. Goldwitz noted, "For most working and poor people, there is no alternative to renting; only those families earning at least $20,000/yr. can afford new homes, which is less than 20% of the population."

The consequences of the Burlington housing shortage has created an extremely high seller's market. Kathy Garnett, formerly with the City Wide Housing Coalition in Washington, D.C., discussed how rent control can deal with problems of this nature. "Essentially, rent control alleviates rent gouging but at the same time allows landlords a reasonable return, by requiring proof of actual cost increases to justify rent increases," she explained. In addition, rent control would require landlords to prove just cause for eviction thereby eliminating arbitrary evictions, she said.

The new wave of tenant agitation has developed into a heated debate. Worried landlord and real estate investors have strong sentiments against proposed rent control. "Presently landowners feel that rent control stiffles new construction as well as causes landlords to reduce maintenance and to abandon buildings," Ms. Garnett said. In her presentation, Kathy Garnett attacked the myths against rent control citing a study done by

(continued on page 12)

"For most working and poor people, there is no alternative to renting; only those families earning at least $20,000/yr. can afford new homes which is less than 20% of the population." -Attorney Mark Goldowitz

THE
LAST CHANCE
SALOON

St. Patrick's Day
Celebration

Party Hats
Happy Hour Specials
4-7 pm
Special Brews
Rare Poteens
A Night To Remember

Friday March 17
St. Patrick's Day
"WHEN ALL THE WORLD IS IRISH...
OR WISHES THEY WERE"
THE LAST CHANCE
SALOON
147 Main St.

Bicycles
RALEIGH VISTA

Touring
Planning a trip this summer? Come see our complete line of equipment and accessories and pick up some tips on touring while you're here.

Service
Our bicycle mechanics are experienced and ready to work on any make bicycle. Our parts department is very complete.

Bike Repair Classes
Learn how to repair your bike yourself. We offer six week two hours/week courses that will teach you everything from chain repair to repacking wheel bearings. Come down and sign up!

the Ski Rack
9-5 Saturday
9:30-9:00 Friday
9:30-6:00 Monday-Thursday
61—65 Main St. 658—3313

Dave's Cuts the Cost of Car Repair.

$4 Off On Each Hour of Labor on Your Car

On All Semperit Radial Tires 20% Off

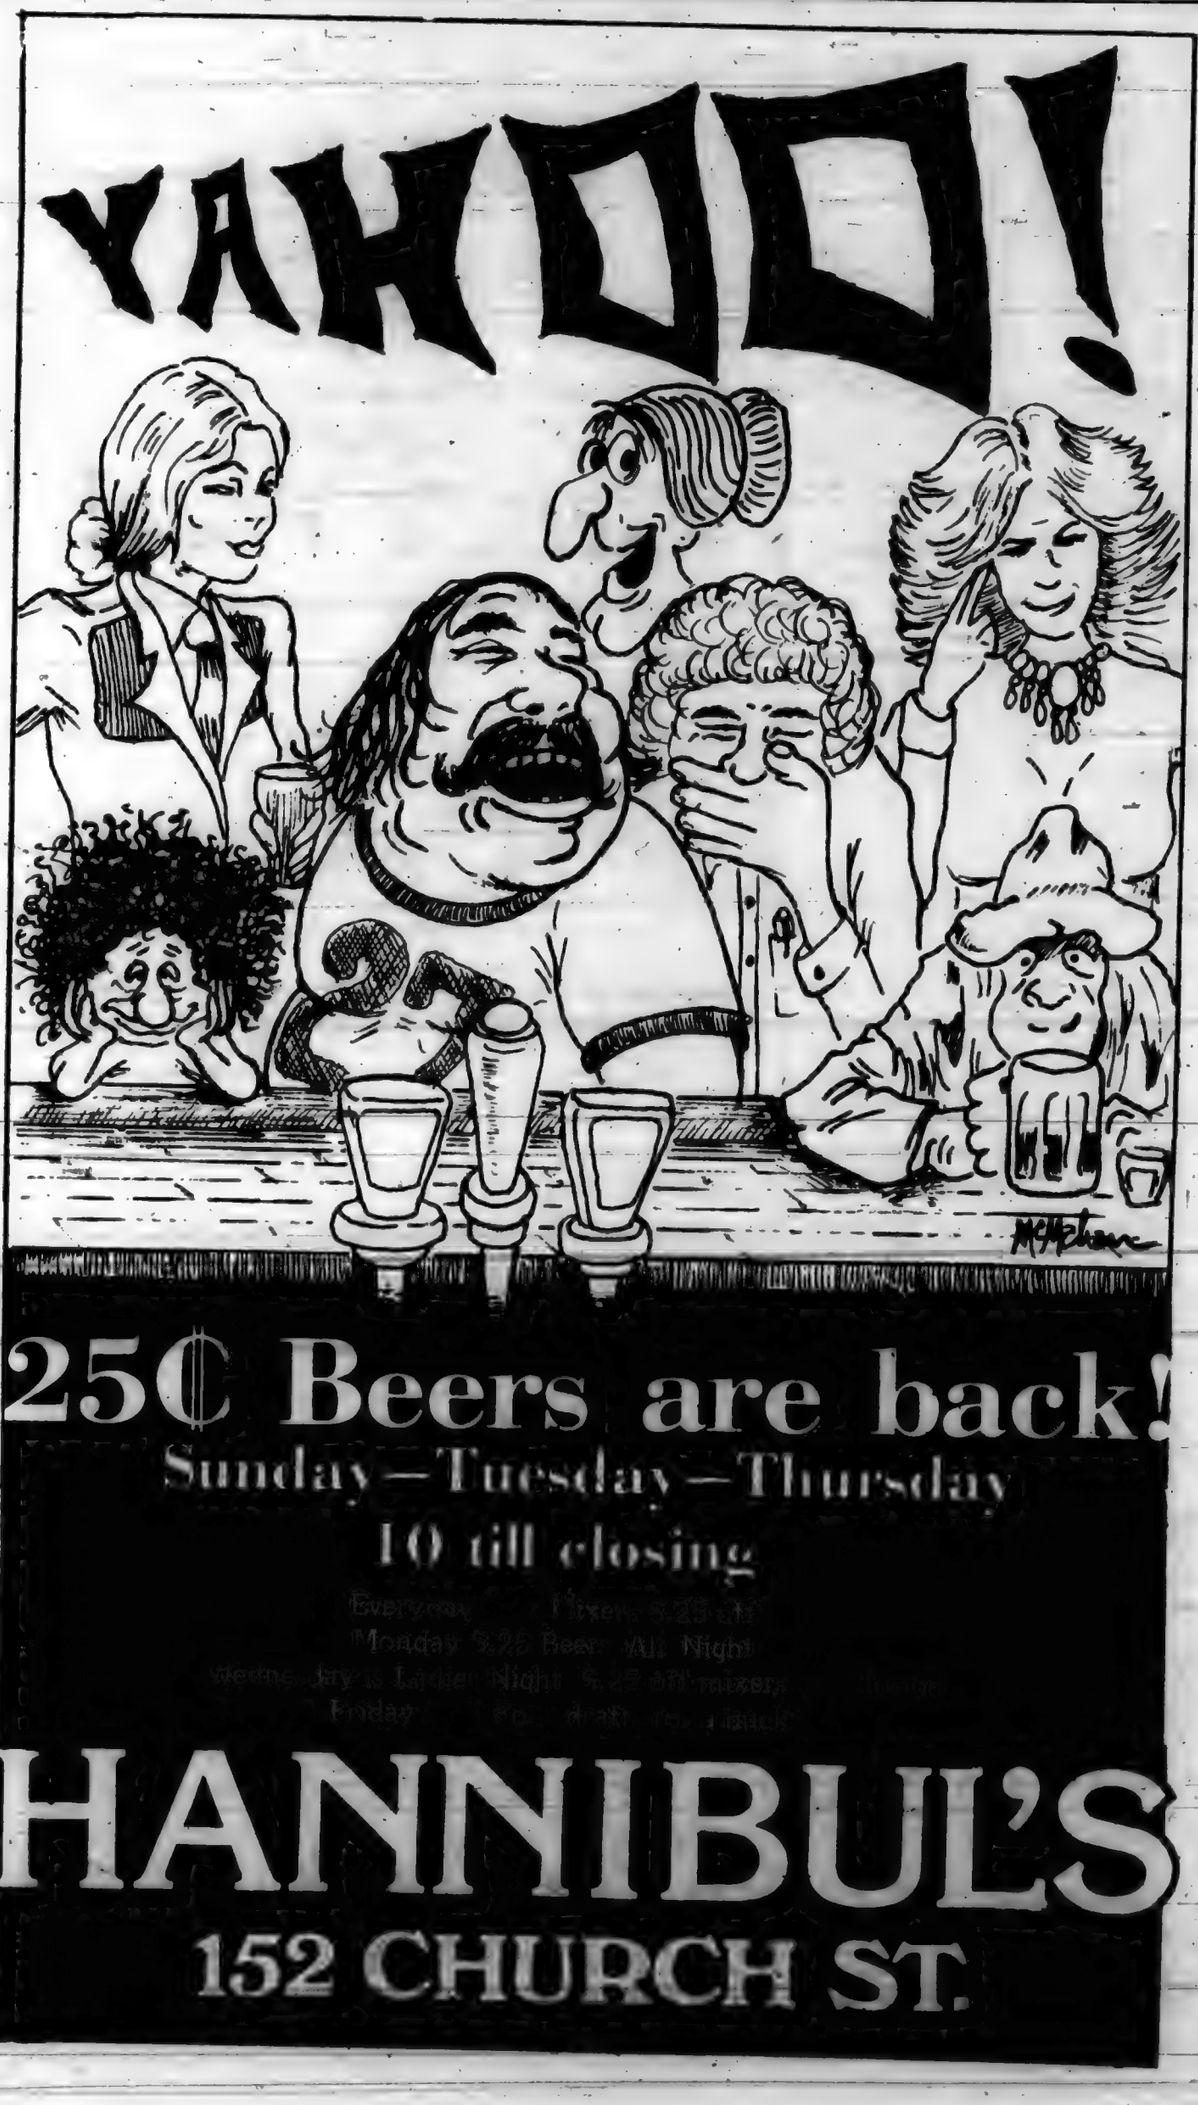
Now Until March 31 With U.V.M ID (student or staff)



Daves Automotive

specialists in foreign car repair

Route 2 Williston 862-7686

25¢ Beers are back!

Sunday—Tuesday—Thursday

10 till closing

HANNIBUL'S

152 CHURCH ST.

Original Student Material Will Be Presented at Intercollegiate Symposium

By Susan Heller

The Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences will hold its 13th intercollegiate symposium giving all Vermont college students a unique opportunity to present original papers, both fiction and non-fiction.

The symposium will be held on April 15 at St. Michael's College where the works chosen by the selection committee will be presented and followed by discussion and criticism.

"If they've done nice work, why shouldn't it go beyond the campus?" commented Professor Jean Davison of the classics department, who will serve as the chairperson of the literature category. Other categories are natural science chaired by Professor Arthur Hessler of the biology department at S. Mike's, social sciences chaired by Professor William Wilson of UVM's political science dept., short fiction chaired by Professor T. Alan Broughton of the UVM English department, and poetry chaired by Professor Jeremiah K. Durick of Trinity College's English department.

The typed copy of the student's work should be sent to the appropriate chairperson by the March 24th deadline.

"I'd like to say right up front that last year was the first year there were no students from U.V.M... we're anxious to see students to submit, we usually get high quality stuff," St. Mike's English professor, F. N. Clary said.

Certificates of recognition will be awarded by the academy to students whose work is selected for presentation and discussion.

The academy was founded in 1965 to make fuller use of Vermont's cultural and intellectual resources. As part of this endeavour, the academy initiated the annual symposium in 1966 for students "to show the interested public and each other what they have composed, produced, and discovered."

By April 3 all participating students will be notified of the selection committee's decision. Any questions should be directed to the chairperson of each category.

VPIRG NEWS

THE VERMONT PUBLIC INTEREST RESEARCH GROUP

Director Criticizes Vermont Yankee Ads

By Tom Daniels

Barry Steinhardt, new director of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG), has continued the consumer group's opposition to nuclear power by criticizing Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corporation last week for its latest ad campaign promoting nuclear power.

On March 8, Vermont Yankee began airing ads on seven radio stations as part of its first public relations effort since Vermont Yankee discarded its fictional "Atom Man" spokesman. Steinhardt dubbed the new ads "Son of Atom Man" and said VPIRG would take a number of actions in response.

In a letter to Vermont Yankee President James Griffin, Steinhardt questioned the purpose of the advertising and called on Vermont Yankee to define its intentions. "You have consistently refused to rule out the possibility of another nuclear power plant in the state. We are concerned that these ads are the first step in a campaign to sell Vermonters a second nuclear power plant," Steinhardt wrote. In 1974, Vermont passed landmark legislation requiring the approval of the state legislature before another nuclear generating plant can be built in Vermont.

Steinhardt also called on Griffin to disclose the costs of the ads, and whether or not utility customers would bear the costs. "We are concerned these ads are being paid for by Vermont ratepayers who might not agree with the point of view being promoted," Steinhardt added.

The VPIRG director also challenged the accuraey of the ads on nuclear safety, economics, and particularly waste storage. Steinhardt cited a 1977 report of the General Accounting Office which concluded that there is "a lack of demonstrated technologies for the safe disposal of existing commercial and defense high level waste."

"We are concerned these ads are being paid for by Vermont ratepayers..." -Steinhardt

Steinhardt said VPIRG will be asking radio stations for reasonable response time under the federal "Fairness Doctrine." "The Fairness Doctrine says the public has a right to receive information from a multitude of sources on controversial issues of public importance," said Steinhardt. VPIRG followed a similar course of action last August when Vermont Yankee began airing its "Atom Man" campaign.

Pulitzer Prize Winner Praises Harlem Renaissance Writers

By Susan Heller

A dynamic performance by poet, novelist and Pulitzer Prize winner Gwendolyn Brooks which included some views of the Harlem Renaissance as well as a brilliant rendition of her own poems, has been one of the highlights of The Vermont Seminars Program.

Ms. Brooks was adept at switching from wry humor to serious tones and began her presentation with some amusing comments. Next she described her relation to famous writers of the Harlem Renaissance, "I certainly admired those writers. I knew Langston Hughes very well. I met Claude McKay... and James Wheldon Johnson." She then related her first encounter with Johnson which occurred when Ms. Brooks was 16 and had sent some poems for Johnson to criticize. When she met Johnson he did not remember her poems and was very cold. Langston Hughes, on the other hand, coming in contact with her poems at about the same time, said she was very talented and should continue writing.

On the uniqueness of the Harlem Renaissance Ms. Brooks had written, "The Harlem Renaissance differed from the black late 60's, the Harlem Renaissance saluted integration, the black late 60's saluted black solidarity." She continued, "The people of the Harlem Renaissance felt that the right thing to do was to involve themselves, for all of us blacks to involve ourselves with American living."

At a writer's conference in Tennessee, Ms. Brooks described a new type of young black poet, "a kind that stood up straight and tall, and felt that everything that was going to be achieved for ourselves would be achieved by ourselves."

Many of these poets felt that black poetry was "... poetry by blacks, about blacks, to blacks." Although many more opposed this view, Ms. Brooks pointed out that many writers speak only to one ethnic or religious group.

Poet, novelist and Pulitzer Prize winner Gwendolyn Brooks.

L/L Co-op Photo

Ms. Brooks read testimony from a writer and then commented comparing black integration and black assimilation. She stated, "There is, in the soul of blacks, even when inarticulate and crippled, a yearning towards black validation."

Then came the exciting readings of the poetry of Gwendolyn Brooks. She began, "I am, you might say, a daughter of the Harlem Renaissance, I came after Langston Hughes (believe it or not) and Countee Cullen, Claude McKay and Sterling Brown and my proper company, I suppose, would include Margaret Walher, and Richard Wright."

The poetry of Brooks is a derivation of the Harlem Renaissance. She included, "The Mother" which is also known as her abortion poem written not from experiencing the situation, but from observation. A tribute to cows and horses which her black poet friends said was "the wrong decision" was also read as well as "The Life of Lincoln West," a story about a boy who "had the cotton-pickin nerve to come here as an African, looking African." Other poems were the children's story, "The Tiger Who Wore White Gloves," three love poems, and a poem dedicated to the black members of the audience called "Primer for Blacks," but about which she quipped, "Those not of the black persuasion are welcome to eavesdrop." The final selection that she recited included "At the Hairdressers," "John Cabot" and "We Real Cool."

It has been said of Gwendolyn Brooks that she "gives the exact pitch to the undertones of Negro life..." When asked about her advice to young poets both black and white she said, "When they are writing, every word should do a job, they should avoid cliches. They should live, live, live... read, read, read... write, write, write."

Gwendolyn Brook's philosophy of life is concise and prolific. She says, "Conduct your blooming in the noise and whip of the whirlwind," and from an Ann Landers column, "When handed a lemon, make lemonade."

Legal Hassles Surrounding Lakes Explained By Law Professor

By Rich Hyland

"Lake management, restoration, and ownership pertain more to legal aspects than ecological ones," said environmental professor Mark Lapping. It was because of this, Lapping continued, that he and professor Dan Bean of St. Michael's College invited professor Stephen Dycuss of the Vermont Law School to speak on the legal aspects of lakes at the Angell Lecture Center last Tuesday night.

Dycuss, although noting the generality of the topic, outlined several facets of thsee legal aspects, specifically those maintained for private and public use and the complications that arise out of these laws.

Many eastern states including Vermont, asserted Dycuss, have their private rights of lakes based on riparian rights: privileges reserved for the owners of land surrounding a body of water. These riparian rights attempt to provide a fair opportunity for all the riparian landowners to use the lake's resources. This encompasses such actions as raising of the water level, construction of dams and piers, as well as recreational purposes. "The most important thing about riparian rights," stated Dycuss, "is that they are determined (in court) by comparison of competing claims. Because of that, there is no security about any certain right. That is the chief criticism made on riparian rights."

Professor Stephen Dycuss

SPS Photo by Ellen Grey

Dycuss also spoke of private rights based on the "prior-appropriation" doctrine, developed in the western states due to the scarcity of water. Unlike riparian rights, this doctrine calls for the physical use of the water in a beneficial manner. As a result of this, recreation and instream rights are not protected. Moreover, these rights can be revoked if the water is not used beneficially, unlike riparian rights which are permanent.

In speaking of public rights, Dycuss said that all navigable waters have traditionally belonged to the state, whereby the state would act in "the public trust" in ownership of these waterways. Riparian owners would retain ownership of the lake beds. Public rights in lakes would include swimming, fishing, and other recreational uses. This basis for law, Dycuss pointed out, did not resolve conflict between the public's right to use the water and

(continued on page 12)

IT'S LIVE EVERY NITE!

FATE
Thurs. 16-Sun. 19

ICE
Mon. 20-Sat. 25

1ST YEAR ANNIVERSARY PARTY
Rock & Roll 2pm-2am—Sun. 26
PLUM CRAZY 2-8
LONDON, the British Invasion 9:30-2

SASS
Mon. 27-Wed. 29

Neutral Grounds Inc.
125 PEARL

Greek Food

Try something new. Sotos offers a full menu of Greek food and specializes in Souvlaki and Pitta. We have live music on Friday and Saturday nights to compliment our fine food. Sotos Restaurant is just off of route 7 on Middle Rd. in Milton. Open for your convenience seven days a week – 6 a.m. – 9 p.m. Add a little international flavor to your life – try Sotos.

SOTOS
RESTAURANT

ARE YOU A BAND LOOKING FOR WORK?

megandra music

Offering diversity for your entertainment needs.
Entertainment for any and all types of engagements.

DORA WHITE ROBERT GAGNIER
Box 164 Claremont, NH 03743 603—542—6437

Last week, the Vermont Seminars featured Woodrow W. Leake Sr. as a speaker for their "U.S. Power and the Third World" program. Leake is a Senior Agricultural Development officer and has had experience as an Agricultural Advisor for Nigeria, Nyasaland, East Pakistan and Iran.

SPS Photo by Mike Simays

Student Apathy

Continued from page three

apathy surrounding SA, said John Martin, an SA senator and presidential candidate. Martin, former chairman of the Special Affairs Committee, does not really consider the apathy to be the fault of the Student Association, describing the present situation as just a "lull" between issues. Martin did note, however, that if people knew the services SA was responsible for, they would realize the "importance of what SA does." In his platform he writes "apathy has always been a problem but not an insurmountable one." Martin would like to make the SA leadership and the administration more "accessible" to students.

A weekly column in the Cynic and increased publicity of SA sponsored organizations and events are important ways SA could deal with the "lack of interest in government," said presidential candidate Eric Kilburn. "Word of mouth" was also cited by Kilburn as a way of getting students interested in SA.

According to Missy Burke, one of the two vice-presidential candidates, the SA must "reach out personally to the people," establishing a "direct contact." SA needs more "student input," she said, later adding that most students don't know what is being discussed by SA. Apathy could be brought under control if senators "would go out and talk to the students more" contends Burke.

Most of the candidates agreed that the treasurer should be efficient and skillful in the handling of money, and should probably have a business background. Riegleman cited as important the ability to deal with people and to know what is being done with SA money. Eric Kilburn contends that a position of assistant treasurer should be created because the workload is too great for one person.

HANG TEN

Second Skin Swimwear

Next to you, luscious Lycra® spandex shapes Hang Ten junior swimwear styles for '78. A rainbow stripe tank and solid sweetheart bra bikini highlight the collection.
Sizes 3-15.
From $12

Pants Plus
12 N. WINOOSKI AVE.
BURLINGTON, VT.
05401
802 • 864-0181

10% OFF WITH UVM ID

New Titles To Take Note Of:

Hardback

Mocking Justice
The Book on Paul Lawrence.

Human Factor
by Graham Greene

Plague Dogs
by Richard Adams

Scruples
by Judith Krantz

Whistle
by James Jones

Paperback

Rich Are Different
by Susan Howatch

Cracker Factory
by Joyce Rebetta-Bardett

Oliver's Story
by Erich Segal

Haywire
by Brooke Haywood

How To Save Your Own Life
by Erica Jong

Wit & Wisdom Bookshop

100 Dorset St. So. Burlington 658-6262

Contributing Staff

NEWS: Curtis Haynes, Hamilton W. Sorrell, Robert Cassidy, John Letteri, Susan Heller, Diana Palazzolo, Rich Hyland, Lisa Wolff.

FEATURES: Randy McMullen, Tom Daniels, Leslie Dunn, Leslie Wassmuth, Peter Millard.

SPORTS: Mark Kevorkian, Paul Gardner, Jim Fletcher, Randy Briggs, Melissa Brown, Kim Honza, Amanda Miller, Darcie McCann.

ARTS: Laura Bell, Tricia John, Shana Schwartzburg, Alex Eschenbrenner, Jim Wright, Peter Relick, Tom Nuccio, Jay Collier, Suzy Karkus, Hugh Bush, Jeannie Cooper, Tim Traver, Claire McCrea.

ADVERTISING: Nat Foote, Peter Voll, Doug Lyons, Mary Landon.

GRAPHICS: Amy Lowry, Shirley Reid, Linda Stanley, Liz Hemingway.

PHOTOGRAPHY: John Freeman, Ellen Gray, Mitch Sprung, Mike Simays, Scott Greb, Neal Desind, Don Cunningham, Mike Koeniges, Bob Davis.

LAYOUT: Ann Stires, Susan Jo Perkins, Jim Otto, April Heitken.

TYPISTS: Sarah Wesson, Nicki Krabbendum.

TYPESETTER: Susan Ball.

The Vermont Cynic assumes no responsibility for unsolicited materials. All submissions are subject to the Vermont Cynic's right to edit. All unsolicited material becomes the property of the Vermont Cynic.

No part of this publication may be reproduced without the expressed written consent of the Vermont Cynic.

Subscription rate is $12 yearly.

Circulation: 8000

Vermont Cynic, Billings Center, Box 20, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

Printed by Upper Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont.

CALENDAR MARCH 17 - 23

FRIDAY

UVM Panhellenic Council, "Northeastern Regional Panhellenic Conference at UVM," twelve schools from New England, N.Y., and Canada will be attending. Focus of conference will be a sharing of ideas on issues of importance to the Greeks. March 17–19.

Shabbat Service and Oneg Shabbat, time TBA, 216 L/L Commons.

9 a.m. – 3 p.m., Pi Beta Phi Bake Sale, Billings Lobby.

11 a.m. – 1 p.m., Hillel Information Booth, Billings Lobby.

12 p.m., Biochem. Seminar, "Nitrates, Nitrites, and N-Nitrosyl Compounds," Steven Tannenbaum, M.I.T., B403 Given.

3 p.m., Psych Colloquium, "Preschool Programs for Culturally Different Children in Australia," with Barry Nurcombe, M.D., UVM, 314 Dewey Hall.

3 p.m., Third World Faculty Conference: Five Panel Discussion. For information call Dean Frank Manchell, x3166. Cont. 9:30 a.m. 18th.

4:15 p.m., History Dept. Colloquium,"Bourgeois Experts in Communist Revolutions," with Irving Smith, Concordia Univ., 101 Wheeler House.

6:45 & 9:30 p.m., S.A. Film, "O Lucky Man," B106 Angell, UVM $1, GP $1.50.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard, x4173.

7:30 p.m., Film "More Than a Carpenter," at the Fireplace Lounge, L/L Center, sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ.

8:00 p.m., International Folk Dancing with the UVM Folk Dance Club, Southwick Ballroom. Everyone welcome, UVM students free, general admission $1.00.

8 p.m., Play, "The Imaginary Invalid," and "Les Precieuse Ridicules," Royall Tyler Theatre, tickets UVM $2, GP $4, through 19th.

8 p.m., Play, The Lost Nation Theatre performing "Ceremony Two," Billings Apse, tickets UVM $2, GP $3, available at Lane Series, Billings and at door.

9 p.m., Power Pop Party starring "La Peste." Nector's Upstairs. $2.00, in association with the UVM Art Department.

9 p.m. – 11 p.m., Reception for Lost Nation Theatre, North Lounge, Billings.

9:30 p.m., S.A. Film, "O Lucky Man," B106 Angell, UVM $1, GP $1.50.

SATURDAY

9:30 a.m., Third World Conference cont.

7:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m., Self-Help/Support Group Formation, Church St. Center, with Kristin Glaser. Pre-registration at the Center; $12. Tel. 656-4221.

10 a.m. – 4 p.m., Ukrainian Easter Egg Decorating, Church St. Center, with Judith Pierce, Pre-registration at the Center; $12.50. Tel. 656-4221.

2 p.m., Play, "The Imaginary Invalid" and "Les Precieuse Ridicules", Royall Tyler Theatre, UVM $2, GP $4.

6:30 p.m., Mass, Newman Center (meet at St. Anselm's Lounge).

7 & 9 p.m., Lane Series Film, "Morocco," Marsh Life Science, $1.

7 p.m., IRA Film, "Towering Inferno," Southwick.

8 p.m., Play, Royall Tyler Theatre cont.

8 p.m., Lane Series, Ella Fitzgerald, Patrick Gym, $7.50 and $4.50.

8 p.m., Lost Nation Theatre play cont.

9 p.m., Lane Series Film, "Morocco," Marsh, $1.

9 p.m., Power Pop Party starring "La Peste." Nector's Upstairs. $2.00, in assoc. with UVM Art Dept.

9:30 p.m., IRA Film "Towering Inferno" Southwick.

9:30 p.m., Saturday Night Fever Dance Contest, Wright Hall. BYOB, mixers provided. Prizes, dancing for all.

SUNDAY

9:30 a.m. Mass, Newman Center (meet at the Music Building)

10:00 a.m. Protestant Services, St. Anselm's (meet in Lounge)

11:30 mass, Newman Center (meet at the Music Building)

1 – 4:30 p.m., Sonorous Sunday, held monthly with singing poetry and music of all kinds. Listen or play. At the Learning Tree, Mt. Philo Rd., Shelburne, $.50 donation.

3 – 5:30 p.m., Literary Workshop, Church St. Center, with Gertrude Stein. Admission one dollar.

4 p.m., UVM Orchestra, Recital Hall, Music Bldg., UVM $1, GP $2.

7 p.m., S.A. Film, "Women of the Year," B106 Angell, UVM free, GP 50 cents.

7:30 p.m., Jitterbug at the Unitarian Universalist Church, head of Church St. $.75 bring records.

9 p.m., GSU Meeting, North Lounge, Billings.

8 p.m., IRA Film, "Towering Inferno," Southwick.

S.A. ELECTIONS

Mon.-Wed., March 20-22.

Polls at Waterman, Billings, Bailey, and all Dining Halls.

Valid I.D. required.

MONDAY

4 – 5:30 p.m., Lecture, "Emission Tomography – A New Medical Diagnostic Tool," by R. Lovell, Nuclear Med. Dept., N.E. Deacon Hosp. 115 Rowell.

4:15 – 6 p.m. Coll. of A & S Work in Progress Colloquium, "Patronage of Baroque Art and Music," with Jane Ambrose and Rev. Dan Daley, UVM, B106 Angell.

5 – 6:30 p.m., VPIRG Meeting, Conference Room C, Billings.

7 p.m., Career Spectrum Panel Disc., "Alternatives to Teaching in the Classroom," Alumni House, free.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard, x4173.

8 p.m., Vermont Seminar, "Jazz Music of the Harlem Renaissance," Ira Allen.

TUESDAY

9 a.m. – 4 p.m., Coupon Exchange for basketball game, Patrick Gym and Billings.

11 a.m., Chem. Colloquium, "High Polymeric Organophosphazeness: Macromolecules with a Difference," with Harry Alcock, Penn. State U. B112 Angell.

12 p.m., Staff Council Meeting, Memorial Lounge, Waterman.

3 – 4:30, Student Activities Committee Meeting, Conference Room C, Billings.

4 – 5:30 p.m., Tertulia, informal gathering of Spanish speaking individuals, Blundell House, all welcome.

6:30 p.m., Lenten Supper, St. Anselm's.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard, x4173.

7:30 p.m., Chitt. Co. Alumni & Parents Lecture, "The War Managers: Problems in Civil-Military Relations," with Douglas Kinnard. 111 Rowell.

7:30 p.m., Vt. Seminar Film, "Harvest 3000 Years," B106 Angell, followed by lecture by film director, Haile Gerima.

7:30 p.m., Presentation of Leonard Bernstein's Mass, St. Anselm's.

8 p.m., Physics Colloquium, "Death of a Star," with Alan S. Meltzer, R.P.I., Carpenter Auditorium, Given, free.

10:00 p.m., Mass, Newman Center.

WEDNESDAY

3 – 5:30 p.m., Entertainment Council Meeting, Conference room C, Billings.

4:30 p.m., S.A. Film, "Dead Reckoning," Marsh, UVM free, GP 50 cents.

7 – 9 p.m., Outing Club Meeting, North Lounge, Billings.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard, x4173.

7:30 – 8:30 p.m., G.C.C. Meeting, Marsh Lounge, Billings.

7:30 p.m., Order of the Tenebrae (Shadows), St. Anselm's.

7:30 p.m., Lecture & Slides, "Impressions of Cuba," by Michael and Paula Bass, Church St. Center. Admission free.

THURSDAY

10 a.m. – 12 p.m., Handling Your Emotional Health, Adult Basic Ed. Center, 110 E. Spring St., Winooski, with Peg Wharton. Admission free.

6:15 – 6:45 p.m., Christian Science College Organization Meeting, all welcome, 443 Waterman.

6:30 p.m., Maundy Thursday Seder, St. Anselm's.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard, x4173.

7:30 p.m., Liturgy of the Supper of the Lord, Newman Center.

8 p.m., Scottish Country Dancing, Southwick, free.

8 p.m., Seminar, "The Bay Region Theory of Polycyclic Hydrocarbon Induced Carcinogenesis," with Donald M. Jerina, M.D., National Institute of Arthritis Metabolism and Digestive Diseases. E 210 Given.

8:00 p.m., Vermont poet David Budbill will give a reading from his recent work "Chain Saw Dance," in the Dewey Lounge on the UVM Campus.

World And National News Briefs

Compiled By Robert Cassidy

Sadat Condemns PLO

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has condemned the Palestinian terrorist raid in Israel last weekend in which more than 30 were killed. Sadat called the terrorist attack "a sad and tragic" event. In an apparent appeal to Israel for restraint in any reprisal action, Sadat called for an end to what he called the "vicious circle" of strike and counter-strike which has engulfed the Middle East for decades. The announcement established Sadat as the first Arab leader to denounce the raid.

Sadat spoke to reporters in the Nile Valley town of Beni Suef, about 70 miles south of Cairo. His words were broadcast by Cairo Radio. It was Sadat's second verbal attack in recent weeks on the Palestinians, who opposed his peace initiative with Israel. He said no peace can be achieved without settling the Palestinian question. This is one of the issues which is stalling negotiations between Egypt and Israel. The indirect appeal to Israel apparently fell on deaf ears as a reprisal raid on the Palestinians was carried out only hours after Sadat's statement.

Sadat has been at odds with Palestinian guerrillas since they killed his friend, editor Youssef el-Sebai, last month. In that case, the two killers were not members of the, Palestine Liberation Organization.

The two Palestinians accused of assassinating Sebai jubilantly raised their handcuffed hands and flashed victory signs as they arrived at a Cyprus courthouse Tuesday for the resumption of their murder trial. Guards told reporters the defendants were elated at the news of the Palestinian raid on Israel.

O'Neill Urges Social Security Reform

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill says congress will try to revise the social security payroll-tax increases which it enacted last year and he urged the Carter Administration to propose its own changes.

The tax increases, aimed at bailing out the Social Security system, are to climb steadily through 1987. O'Neill said this has drawn widespread public opposition and, in turn, is causing panic among congressional Democrats since this is an election year.

Moluccan Terrorists Thwarted

Dutch marines stormed a government complex in the town of Assen Tuesday and freed 70 hostages who were being held by South Moluccan terrorists. A government spokesman said three of the hostages were slightly wounded during the attack, and another hostage was badly wounded by the terrorists. But eyewitness accounts told of as many as a dozen wounded. Three young Moluccan gunmen were captured in the operation, which took only 20 minutes.

The Moluccans had seized the Provincial Government headquarters Monday and threatened to kill their hostages if their demands were not met.

IsraelisRetaliate

The highly anticipated Israeli counter-strike into Lebanon came Tuesday at midnight. Israeli officials were calling the strike a "mopping-up" effort that was more than simple retaliation for the Palestinian raid last weekend that left 33 Israeli citizens dead.

It is believed that the Israelis committed over 15,000 troops to the operation, with planes bombing from the sky, tanks and troops streaming across the border, and gunboats massed off the southern coast.

Leftists Set Back In France

Complete returns from Monday's first round of parliamentary voting in France show that the Socialists and Communists came in behind the center-right coalition which has been governing the country. This appears to decrease chances that the combined Socialists and Communists could take over the government after the second round of voting next weekend. But the leftist opposition parties reached an agreement to run common candidates in the final legislative voting on Sunday. The center-right coalition parties, through mutual agreement, will back a single candidate in each legislative district in the final round. If the Communists, Socialists and Left Radicals had failed to reach a similar agreement, they would have split voters favoring the left and faced certain defeat in the runoff vote.

U.S.Keeps Door To Vietnam Open

A top state department official said Tuesday that the United States remains "unequivocally ready" to establish diplomatic and trade relations with Vietnam, but not under conditions imposed by Hanoi. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke said negotiations still are bogged down over Vietnam's insistence that normalization of relations be preceded by a U.S. commitment to provide economic assistance.

Prison Riots In Argentina

Several hundred prisoners clashed with police at a prison in Argentina Tuesday. Authorities say 44 people were killed and 30 wounded seriously. Police say they crushed the uprising at the prison ten miles from the center of Buenos Aires after about two and one-half hours.

Both guards and inmates were among the injured. Authorities said all of the dead, however, were non-political prisoners killed by smoke inhalation or burns.

The rioting prisoners had set fire to bedding, turning their cellblock into an inferno. No cause was given for the outbreak.

The prison is intended to house 2500 inmates, but human rights groups claim the population has swelled to as many as 5000 because of political prisoners jailed since a military junta overthrew Isabel Peron in March of 1976.

The human rights situation has caused the Carter Administration to ban military aid to Argentina.

Navy May Take Over Shipyard

The Navy is threatening to take administrative control of construction of 16 attack nuclear submarines at the General Dynamics Corporations' electric boat shipyards. The firm has said it will halt work on the vessels in a dispute over a $500 million cost overrun. About 14,000 jobs in Connecticut and Rhode Island hang in the balance.

Carter's Job Program Scores Success

The Carter Administration says its public service jobs program has surpassed its goal of finding 725,000 jobs for out-of-work Americans. In remarks to the Association of Counties meeting in Washington, Labor Secretary Marshall hailed the program's success as a dramatic achievement.

The program, which President Carter seeks to extend beyond its scheduled expiration in September, falls under the comprehensive Employment and Training Act. It provides Federal funding for locally administered public service work programs.

Oil Imports Down

U.S. oil imports reportedly have begun to drop even though Congress has failed to enact legislation aimed at reducing dependence on foreign oil. According to economist Lawrence Goldstein of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, there are several reasons for the trend, including energy conservation, more domestid drilling and the Alaskan Pipeline.

U.S. Reviewing Its Stand On Palestinians

The State Department said it is reviewing the status of the Palestine Liberation Organization in the United States. But spokesman Hodding Carter III said it is not clear what the U.S. can do about the PLO's United Nations mission and information office in New York.

Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz asked the department to close down the operations after the Palestinian terrorist attack on a tourist bus in Israel Saturday in which more than 30 Israelis died.

Rhodesians Transition Struggle Continues

The leaders of Rhodesia's Patriotic Front Black guerrilla group said in London Tuesday that the war with Rhodesia's white government still goes on. Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo said British Foreign Secretary David had failed to persuade them to accept the terms of a Rhodesian accord with moderate blacks.

The agreement, for a turn-over of power to blacks, would continue white control over several aspects of the government during the transition period. It makes no room for the Patriotic Front in the new government.

A spokesman for black Rhodesian leader Reverand Sithole rejected a western proposal for talks with black guerrilla leaders, saying: "The talks are over." He said the U.S., Britain and the U.N. are welcome to organize all the conferences they want, but Sithole feels Rhodesia's problems are solved.

Third Tentative Coal Pact Reached

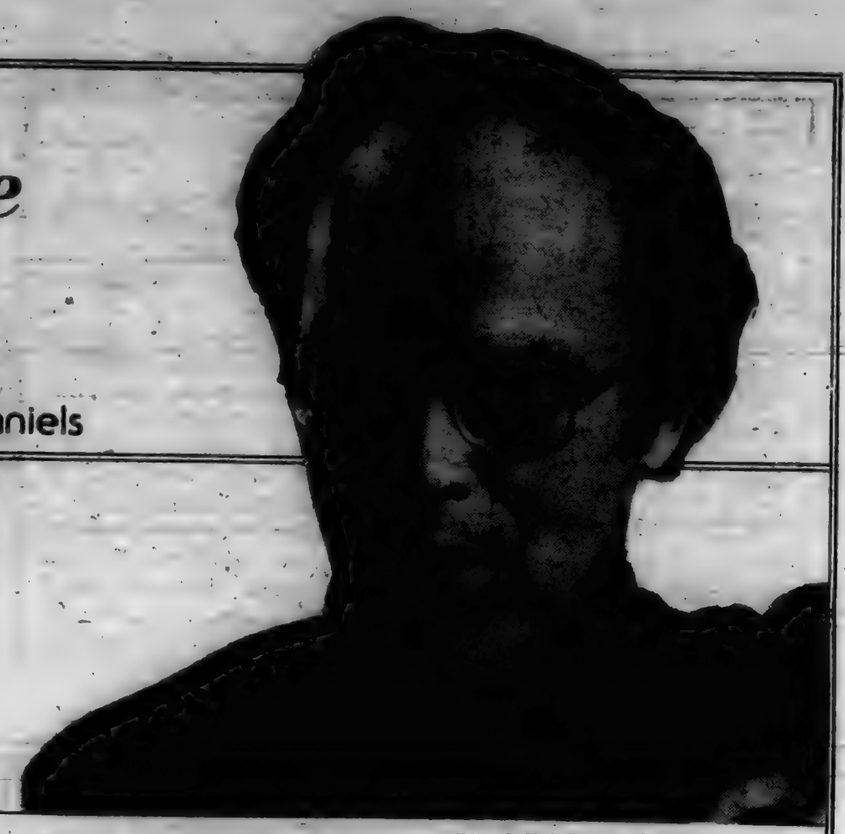
A tentative agreement has been reached which could settle the prolonged coal strike. Negotiators for the United Mine Workers and the coal industry, meeting in Washington, agreed on a tentative contract Tuesday with the strike in its 99th day.

The agreement still must be approved by UMW's bargaining unit and then submitted to the 160,000 striking miners. Twice before, the bargaining unit has rejected tentative agreements and the union membership once, by a 2-1 margin.

Tuesday's tentative contract settlement was announced by Union President Arnold Miller and the industry's chief negotiator, Nicholas Camicia. It is not clear what impact the proposal will have on the Carter Administration's use of a Taft-Hartley injunction to try to end the long walkout. The injunction is being largely ignored by the miners in any event.

In making their announcement, Miller and Camicia said: "We are happy to report to you that we have bargained long and hard and we have finally agreed to a tentative settlement."



They would not discuss the terms of the proposed contract, and Miller declined comment when asked whether he thinks the union membership would approve the pact.

Although terms were not disclosed, it was learned they are tuned to try to win the support of the striking miners. If they agreed to go along with them, the coal strike would be ended without further government intervention.

The tentative pact culminated five days of talks.

A D.C. Day in the Life Senator Patrick Leahy

By Tom Daniels

A self professed fiscal conservative, Senator Leahy, at 37, is the only democratic senator from Vermont.

I first met Pat Leahy late one night at his 1974 campaign headquarters on Church Street. The Senator-to-be was strolling about his empty office and shooting off one rubber band after another to relieve his nervous energy. Energy – and a mastery of media – helped Leahy accede to the seat of venerable George Aiken in an upset victory over Congressman Richard Mallory. In his election, Leahy became Vermont's first Democratic Senator since 1854, the year the Republican party was formed.

The Senate is a star-studded crowd (2 presidential candidates, 2 vice-presidential candidates, a slew of past and future presidential hopefuls, and several well-entrenched veterans.) Leahy arrived in the Senate along with a number of other young Senators eager to make their mark. Leahy recalled, "Senator Humphrey took me under his wing the first week I got down here; I don't know why either. We were very close right up until his death." Leahy received a lot of publicity by being a Democratic Senator from a traditional Republican state. "80% of the national publicity I've received has been unsolicited. I've even turned down interviews," Leahy protests. "But if a Vermont paper called, I'd answer them immediately."

In D.C., the ability to command respect depends in part on image. Bespectacled, balding and trim at 37, Leahy appears somewhat older than his age. His back is always straight and adds to the stature of his 6'2" frame. But a reputation is built on performance. By his own estimate, Leahy ranks in the lower 20% of Senators for introducing new legislation, and ranks in the top 80% for legislation introduced and passed. According to the staff member of another Senator, Leahy is considered "intelligent and possessing the right values." Meanwhile, Leahy freely admits he came to D.C. with the intention of convincing Congress that he could be re-elected, not just a one term Democrat who won a Watergate-influenced election.

Senator Leahy lives in McLean, Virginia with his wife, Marcelle, and their three children, Alicia, Kevin, and Mark. "We don't go to many large dinners with three children," Marcelle laughed. "All Washington social life takes place on the weekdays, so you have to work the next day."

"I regret time away from my family, because we are extremely tight-knit," the Senator added. "My decision to run for the Senate was a family decision. You have to make sacrifices; unfortunately, I don't have much time to myself."

Just before turning in for the night, Leahy commented, "I feel comfortable in the Senate," as he stretched out the full length of the living room couch. "So it appears," I replied. The next day which we would spend together would tell.

At 6 a.m., I was awakened by two soft knocks and a report of the time. Having matched the Senator's 5½ hours of sleep, I struggled to my feet and quickly dressed. Soon after, I ascended from the basement bedroom and met the Senator looking wide awake and dapperly attired in a light brown suit. He greeted me "Good Morning" and sat down to review papers for an early meeting. He explained that 6 a.m. meant sleeping late; usually he got up at 5, but this day we were to have breakfast at an official function.

"How much sleep do you normally get?" I asked, letting a yawn escape.

"The first three years down here, I would get 4 or 5 hours of uninterrupted sleep. When I was State's Attorney for Chittenden County, I'd get the same amount of sleep, but at 1 a.m. someone would come by to have a warrant signed; then I'd have to get up at 3 to go look at a dead body," Leahy smiled. "This year, I'm pushing for 6 hours a night."

Before I had a chance to doze off, it was 6:45 and Pat McLaughlin, the Senator's attractive appointment's secretary and chauffeur for the day, had arrived. Squeezing three sets of long legs into a Honda Civic hardly met my idea of Congressional prerequisites; we should have had a limousine with a telephone and bar.

The Leahy's Virginia town house is a 20-minute drive from the office when the traffic is light, 45 minutes when heavy. Even at 7 a.m., the pace was aggressive along the twisting Potomac beltway.

"Most Senators don't get to work until 9, (or 10!)," Leahy joked. "But I'm glad to have someone follow me around to see if I do anything worthwhile."

At 7:15 we entered the Richard Russell Senate Office Building through the basement, where the smell of garbage assaulted our nostrils as it awaited removal. Again, hardly luxurious. We mounted one flight of marble stairs and passed down a high-ceilinged corridor to Room 232. The plushness of a Senator's office almost entirely depends on seniority. Leahy ranks 76th out of 100, which entitles him to two rooms of cubicles for staff and a comfortable, well-equipped office for himself. On his walls are maps of the world, awards, and the autographed works of famous political cartoonists (Herblock, Oliphant, etc.).

Leahy sat in his high-backed leather chair and studied the day's appointments. Allocation of time is one of the most difficult tasks – whether to attend a subcommittee hearing, receive visitors, confer on proposed bills, or sit in Senate session. And all appointments are subject to unexpected changes. Leahy stuffed his timetable, and papers to read and sign into a small brown briefcase, and we were off to the first meeting of the day.

We descended into a stark underground maze of passageways, miniature subways, and elevators marked "Senators Only."

"There is no orientation tour for new Congressmen, you just have to learn your way around," Leahy said.

We alighted into an enormous chandeliered dining room. The breakfast had assembled several Congressmen and the State Agricultural Commissioners for a meal of scrambled eggs and bacon, no seconds. Organizations often hold meal-meetings merely to snag as many Congressmen as possible. Though Leahy has been on the Senate Agriculture Committee for three years, this was the first time he had attended this annual breakfast. As predicted, the meal accomplished little and we had to step out well before the end.

Back through the labyrinth, we returned to Leahy's office for a meeting with Scott Campbell, head of the Civil Service Commission. Leahy has teamed with Rep. Morris Udall to propose a 'whistleblowing' independent board to receive complaints and conduct investigations of government employee wrongdoing. The 'whistleblowing' bill came out of the Task Force on Bureaucracy which Leahy set up. Campbell and Leahy agreed on the need for a new watchdog agency and seemed optimistic about passage. Suddenly, at 9:30, an obnoxious buzzer sounded, calling the Senators to session.

The Senate Chamber holds a semi-circular sweep of 100 desked seats, surrounded by beige and mustard walls with purple marble columns and French doors. Above, the walls of the spectators' galleries are indented with the busts of 20 Vice-Presidents. And on the ceiling looms a sky-light depicting the Great Seal of the United States.

Few Senators were on hand to hear Leahy's 10-minute speech against a $110 million civic center for D.C. Leahy argued that D.C. taxpayers were "overwhelmingly opposed" to the project as was the U.S. Senate. Leahy heads the Senate Appropriations Sub-Committee on the District, and for his stand against the civic center, D.C. Mayor Walter Washington termed Leahy, "a rinky-dink Senator from a state no one ever heard of." Undaunted, Leahy prides himself on being one of the most fiscally conservative members of Congress. On his wall is a dollar bill and the motto "Every dollar spent by this government comes from the pocket of a working American. Our challenge is to act as if it were our own."

Back in the office at 10:15, Leahy met with Tom McGoff of the Vermont Gasoline Distributers. McGoff described how oil companies are trying to abandon rural areas, and voiced approval of a bill Leahy is introducing which requires oil companies to give prior notification before cutting off a service station. "We need a rational energy policy," Leahy commented, shaking his head. "Right now we (Vermont) are at the end of the pipeline."

After a couple of brief news interviews, Leahy delved into some of the hundreds of letters he receives each week. "I read all Vermont mail," he said, "as well as calling Vermont about a dozen times a day. It involves a lot of memory work."

Just before noon, we hastened to the Senate for the much-heralded start of the Panama Canal debate. Security precautions were strict; this was the first time Senate proceedings had been heard publicly outside the Senate.

Leahy admitted that his mail had been running firmly against turning the Canal over to Panama. But after a trip to Panama, Leahy endorsed the treaties as the "best solution." He estimated that if a vote were taken soon, the treaties would pass or fail by a few votes. However, Leahy was adamant that the upcoming Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) with the Soviet Union were 15 times more important to America's security and the future of the world.

The Canal debate progressed excruciatingly slowly and we gladly departed at 1:30. Straightway, we entered an ornate room for a confidential meeting of the Commission on Security and Co-operation in Europe – set up to oversee America's part in the Helsinki Human Rights Accord of 1976. The meeting featured a prominent Eastern European human rights leader who dared speak only in private. Despite

(continued from page 19)

"Leahy freely admits he came to D.C. with the intention of convincing Congress that he could be re-elected not just a one term Democrat who won — a Watergate-influenced election."

"McGoff (of the Vermont Gasoline Distributors) described how oil companies are trying to abandon rural areas, and voiced approval of a bill Leahy is introducing which requires oil companies to give prior notification before cutting off a service station."

ICE CLIMBING

'Front Pointing' With Nature

There, alleys of wind-packed snow are found between jagged rocks and immense ice spires. These routes of snow are one truly pleasant aspect of ascending a mountain in the winter.

Story and Photos
By Ernie Richards

Every winter an increasing number of hardy individuals find themselves engaged in the grueling exhilaration of working their way up steep frozen mountainsides.

Ascending exposed snow fields and hard blue vertical ice walls is a rigorous experience, requiring individual efforts in addition to cooperation among climbers. A good ice climber combines the unity of endurance, drive and the reality of nature.

FEARLESS FOOLS

Exactly who climbs? Some might think they are self-professed "Joe Outing Club" types or half-crazed fearless fools. This may be true for some, but not in most cases. Some ice climbers are crazy, but they are the exception rather than the rule. They are rather just people with a love for the outdoors and the need for boundless challenge.

Equipment for this lofty pastime includes stiff hiking boots with crampons, a long ice axe used on steep wind packed snow, and "hardware" to tackle the vertical ice. Crampons are a series of ten or twelve sharp spikes made from tempered sheet steel that are strapped snuggly to the bottom of each boot. On many crampons two of the spikes protrude almost horizontally and in the same place as the soles of the boots. These front points are kicked into the ice as one climbs.

Other equipment consists of ice axes and hammers of various sizes, ice screws, and special climbing rope that is strong yet somewhat elastic to help break falls. A definite necessity in winter climbing is warm clothing that should include wool and wind proof wear. One should always be prepared for the worst possible weather because mountain conditions can change surprisingly quickly. A beautiful spring day can turn into a raging blizzard without warning.

Ice climbing requires a lot of time, so getting up before sunrise to make use of the daylight hours is a good idea. As one leaves the security of the car, civilized comforts are parked temporarily as the morning chill makes for a rude awakening. However, there is comfort in the hope that if the wind is mild, and the sun stays out, that the work-out to come will result in a feeling of glowing, radiant warmth.

The start of an ice climbing day leaves adventurers with mixed feelings that can range from "Wow I'm psyched," to "What the f— am I doing this for?" Looking upward one sees snow fields and ice flows sparkling in the crisp winter sun. At this point, no matter what the disposition of the climber, the sight of snow, rock and ice leering high above, results in the urge to "Go For It."

POST HOLING

To get to the steep hard snow that leads to frozen vertical rivers of ice, climbers usually must hack their way through the woods. Ideally, there is a packed trail; if not, then one must involve himself in an activity that all consider a real delight — known as "post holing."

Post holing involves wading through waist deep snow. It's an exercise in frustration, a sweet experience if one enjoys monotonous physical exertion. It's a myth of Sisyphus sort of thing, indeed masochism on a part time basis. Post holing is especially rewarding when there is a layer of crust that will support something weighing about a pound less than you do. Take a step, and think it will support you and crash, nature's trap door opens below.

Finally, emerging from the soft snow of the woods onto the higher exposed alpine regions, one is ready for snow and ice climbing. There, alleys of wind-packed snow are found between jagged rocks and immense ice spires. These routes of snow are one truly pleasant aspect of ascending a mountain in the winter. The crampon bites into the hillside bringing forth a feeling of grip and control – the kind that gives life power. The tools of climbing allow one to adapt to places man should not be found.

On the way up through these steep gullies, a climber often comes across ledges that are covered with ice — comparable to the ice on rock cliffs that line interstate highways in the winter. The encountering of such ice on a climb is where the challenge of ice climbing begins. Time is taken to survey the situation and figure the best route and strategy to be used on a particular section of ice.

STRAIGHT UP

Climbing vertical or near vertical ice is the most difficult challenge. The requirements include strength of body and mind, in order to push oneself beyond expectations. The method most commonly used on ice involves "front pointing" with crampons, and forcefully driving the sharp ends of short ice axes or hammers into the ice. Ice screws are placed every few feet during a climb. To each ice

(continued on page 17)

CLOG-MANIA

Simply means more styles
and the best prices anywhere!

$25.95

$29.00

At Jan's
We Know You Love
CLOGS...

...All kinds. That's why we've put together the greatest selection of styles for you. Closed back, open back, new higher heels Kilted, Braided, laced, and on and on. Come on down today to see all the styles by Krone, Zodiac, and Baretraps.

Jan's

30 CHURCH ST.
DOWNTOWN BURL.
864-4735

Vermont's Quality Shoe Store

Mon. & Fri. 'til 9:00
Mastercharge/VISA
Parking & Bus Tokens

THE RATHSKELLER

Steamers Fri. 4-6

Reduced Drink Prices Daily 4-6

Extensive Seafood Menu

We Welcome Reservations

For Fine Dining in a Unique Atmosphere
BEHIND BENNINGTON NORTH ON COLLEGE ST.
Open Daily For Dinner and Luncheon
Brunch Saturday

863-4429

127½ College Burlington

Ice Climbing

Cont. From Page 16

screw is hooked a carabeaner which is an oval ring of metal that can be opened and closed. The rope a climber is tied into runs through the carabeaner.

If a climber falls, surrendering to the forces of gravity, there are a couple of things he hopes for, as he tumbles past the highest ice screw. First, that the screw placed will hold and if it doesn't that the one below it will, and so on down the line. A second hope is that your belayer (climbing partner) is paying attention so he can quickly secure his end of the rope. Falls on ice are not fun, so one goes through great pains to avoid them.

Working up vertical ice is quite a straining experience. One tries to rely on the feet and legs as much as possible. The arms are often above the head which draws circulation away from them so they tire quickly and get cold. The trick is to use the arms as little as possible, and to use only the minimal effort needed to make a move. Many novice climbers simply burn out halfway up a climb because they expend too much energy in their upper body. This is not to say more experienced climbers are not beyond fatigue. Calling for mind over matter, hidden reserves can be brought forth accomplishing physical feats thought impossible.

The method most commonly used on ice involves "front pointing" with crampons, and forcefully driving the sharp ends of short ice axes or hammers into the ice.

THE CONQUEST

Ice climbing is an experience of the moment. Philosophical considerations always occur in retrospect. Notions of man vs. nature, and the conquest, are all bar room talk entirely ex post facto, sun, snow, wind, ice, rock, the woods below, and the horizon in the distance all combine with the joy of upward movement to make perfect sense at the time.

After surmounting several snow fields and ice flows, the summit is achieved. There is nothing above but sky – everything else below.

Ice climbers have various feelings at this moment. For some it is a triumph over the elements. Others feel themselves integrated with the natural surrounding – 'one with nature,' if you will. With most, there is a sense of personal accomplishment, spiritual fulfillment and being at peace with oneself. There is something almost mystical about being up there, and knowing the task it took to get there. For an instant one is a metaphor of something that can't quite be pinned down. And then, reality protrodes.

The descent awaits.

For President:

Peter Riegleman
John Martin
Eric Kilburn
Jesse Gadson
Charlie Clark

For V.P.:

Henry Chamberlain
Missy Burke

S.A. Pres-VP Elections
Vote March 20, 21 and 22

POLLS!

★Waterman Lobby 9:00-4:00

★Bailey Library 10:00-9:00

★Billings Center 10:00-5:00

★Simpson, L/L, Harris/Mills Dining Halls 5:00-7:00 p.m.

Run FOR OFFICE

Freshmen, sophomores, juniors; it's not too late!

More candidates are needed. Petitions are available in the Alumni Office, 86 South Williams Street. Elections will be held March 20, 21, 22, simultaneously with SA elections. There is still time to campaign and to get YOUR name on the ballot for President, Vice-President, Secretary or Treasurer.

Candidates to date:

For Sophomore Class of 1981:

PRESIDENT.....GLEN TURNER

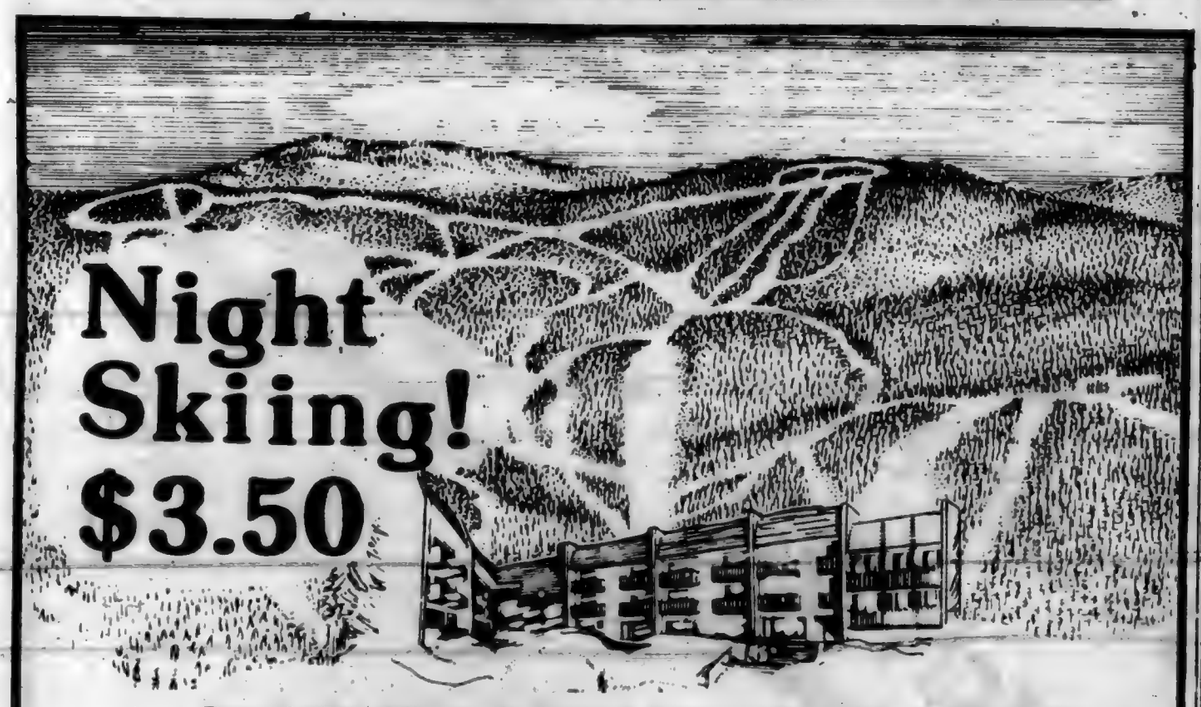
For Junior Class of 1980:

PRESIDENT.....JEFF BECKERMAN
MIKE HOYT
DAVID MAURICE

VICE-PRESIDENT.....JOHN MCCONVILLE

For Senior Class of 1979:

PRESIDENT.....TONY DUBUQUE
GREG BOARDMAN



VICE-PRESIDENT.....ROBBY KOFF
KAREN AMET

TREASURER.....LISA WITTNER

Here is an opportunity to become more involved with your university. Class Officer Structure is "Born Again" at UVM, and you can have an effect on its future. Just obtain 50 signatures on a petition and bring it to the Alumni House by noon on Friday, March 17.

Most men and women lead lives at the worst so painful, at best so monotonous, poor and limited, that the urge to escape the longing to transcend themselves, if only for a few minutes is and always has been one of the principal appetites of the soul.

Aldous Huxley

Night Skiing! $3.50

Part of what skiing is all about at Bolton Valley, just 25 minutes from campus. There's night skiing every Wednesday through Saturday from 7:30-10P.M. Combine an evening on the slopes and live entertainment in Bolton Valley's James Moore Tavern. Take exit 11 off interstate 89, follow Route 2 east to the Bolton Valley access road.

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT NIGHTLY NO MINIMUM/NO COVER

| Weekdays | Adult | Junior |
|---|---|---|
| All day | $9.00 | $7.00 |
| Half day morning or afternoon | $6.00 | $5.00 |

Lift Rates

| Weekends | Adult | Junior |
|---|---|---|
| All day | $11.00 | $7.50 |
| Half day morning or afternoon | $7.50 | $5.00 |

Above Rates Include 3% Vermont Sales Tax.

BOLTON VALLEY RESORT

Bolton, Vermont 05477
(802) 434-2131

Chiquita's and Woody Allen's

BANANAS

By Lisa Palache

In man's efforts to trace his origins back to the ape he has continually overlooked an important linkage. Both monkeys and humans thrive on bananas. In fact, the banana in twenthieth century America has taken over "mom's apple pie" as the cultural symbol. Not only does the banana monopolize all areas of the dietary imagination, but it also has become an integral part of the commercial and entertainment industries. Because of the rising influence of this versatile fruit, the time has come for man to acknowledge the banana.

The versatility of the banana is most evident in the brain washing of the gourmet imagination. While still green, the banana has traditionally been exported directly to the dining room table where it has always been a prime target for snacking. It is much easier to peel than an orange and more exciting than the "one a day keeps the doctor away" apple. While most fruits have limited themselves to the fruit bowl, bananas ventured into the cereal bowl. Sliced on Rice Krispies and Cheerios, bananas have cheered generations of school children to adults on their drowsy mornings. Bananas plunged beyond the weekday cereal bowl when they flipped themselves into pancakes and man discovered that he could not live on yeast breads and water alone. But all these innovations were domesticated as soon as the banana slipped itself under three scoops of ice cream and transformed the sundae into a banana split. Not only did the sundae lose its face, but also campfire favorites such as sommores (graham crackers sandwiching a chocolate bar and melted marshmallows). They became practically obsolete when the girl scouts discovered bananaboats (bananas covered with melted chocolate and marshmallows.)

Desiring to increase its patronage, the banana decided to move up the social ladder. The exquisite banana daiqueri served as the foundation for numerous fruit concoctions thrown into a blender with rum. The social role of the banana culminated in an obscure use known as bananadine: the inner layer of the peel, scraped and cooked into a powder, can provide one with a pleasant high when smoked.

The banana is not affected by extremes in temperature, either. While the French may torture their banana in flaming brandy, The New York Times Natural Food Cookbook subjects it to the freezer, chilling it to ice cream consistency.

While the banana overwhelmed chefs and gastronomists everywhere, Chiquita began to sell copyrights to the commercial industry to highlight various products. Bic pens gained some flair when the banana, in assorted colors, hit the market. Even literary fame did not slow down the banana. Instead, it was spurred on to the sports industry. The chopper bicycles, prized by youngsters before the advent of the ten speed, received much of their status from the banana seat. More exclusive was the banana's traversing into the ski industry, where Nordica's hot yellow banana boot revolutionalized the plastic boot market. As their advertising power grew, bananas not only served as symbols in various products, but they also supported other products. The peanut industry, desiring to promote peanut butter on television, campaigned to show that it complimented many different foods. Peanut butter moved beyond the Pbj with the clinch line "even on bananas."

The versatile banana, capturing the market in food and advertisement, now sought the entertainment circles. Television began to feature Jimmy Durante regularly singing "Yes, we have no bananas, we have no bananas today," while Hollywood presented Woody Allen in one of his most successful films. In the world of entertainment, though, the banana has contributed most to the development of slapstick humor. Nothing brings out the buffoonery of a situation more successfully than someone dropping a banana peel on which the person behind him inevitably slips. The most famous entrepreneur of this classic maneuver was Charlie Chaplin, and, although the device has become a stereotype cue for slapstick, its implementation still affects great amusement.

"Nothing brings out the buffoonery of a situation more successfully than someone dropping a banana peel on which the person behind him inevitably slips."

The diverse areas with which the banana has actively involved itself demonstrate its insurpassable talent. Although the banana will remain the

(continued from page 19)

Student Legal Service

By Alan Marshall

If you've had hassles with your landlord or had to perform too many sobriety tests lately, free legal assistance is now within reach. The Student Legal Service, a newly formed organization of the Student Association, will act as a clarifying referral and information service of mystifying legal terms, and processes.

The purpose of this Student Legal Service (SLS) is not to provide legal counsel or legal advice but to supply standard information on the law to students. SLS exists to educate the student in handling any legal concerns with more confidence and understanding.

Two attorneys at law, Steve Blodgett and Louise McCanen, act as advisors, teaching the directors "to learn the ropes" of statutes and legal jargon. These attorneys are strictly advisory, and thus the SLS provides a lawyer referral service so students can call a lawyer for the cost of analyzing his or her case.

Peter Dracos and Dawna Cobb, the founders of the SLS along with Student Association President Geoff Liggett, are the two directors this semester. Their office in the northwest corner of second floor Billings is slowly attracting visitors as news of the legal aid spreads around campus. Dracos, Cobb, and a student intern Randy Freeman, are available to research individual problems and inform students of options they have available.

Already students have sought help with pending problems such as traffic violations and DWI charges. "They are going to court and they want to know what to do," said Cobb. "That's what we're here for. You have to be careful with what the 'offender' tells you though, because you can be subpoened to release that information. We have to tell the people who come in that we are not legal counsel."

Most students know the basics of the law but few know specifics. Cobb explained a technical aspect of a DWI charge not commonly known. "You have the right," she said, "to ask Already students have the State Attorney to drop the case if you are near the .12% break level between a felony and a misdemeanor and can show that you're a good student, and your record is clear. Most students don't know that."

Four main concerns of the SLS are landlord/tenant problems, criminal charges, consumer fraud, and utility bills.

Tenant regulations, describing such things as the codes of valid causes of eviction, and the Vermont Health Regulations for Housing are available to the interest of off-campus students. Senior director Dracos remarked that the use of the legal service hasn't been high, but he expects it to pick up near the end of the semester when students start unleashing their apartment contracts.

Many questions have arisen regarding the process of disputing various utility bills such as electricity, water, and telephone. The SLS can put you in touch with the right people to contact and the steps involved in questioning your bill. Vermont statutes regarding possession and control of drugs, and consumer regulations such as debt collection are also obtainable at the office.

BUDGET AND STRUCTURE

This new organization is without a formal SA budget because of its new inception, and consequently is crediting out of contingency funds. According to SA President Geoff Liggett, the proposed budget for next year is approximately $4000. So far this year, only $750 has been spent on expenses for the SLS.

The responsibility of the legal service lies on the governing committee composed of the dean of students, the director of student activities, a faculty advisor, SLS directors, SA officials, and the advising lawyers. They set the guidelines and restrictions for its operation and initiate new programs giving the SLS direction. This governing committee, in addition, hires the attorneys and provides student interns and directors.

Because Dracos and Cobb are both seniors, Randy Freeman will be holding the fort alone until newcomers can be trained. Dracos stated in regard to the transitionary periods that "we have set up a structure" for the changeover. How successful this transition and new SA service will be is yet to be seen.

Expectations are high for this legal service, previously unavailable because of the Vermont Legal Service's disregard for students, and use seems to be of little question. "It's reassuring for people to call up and not have to pay anything," said Cobb. "We may not be able to help everybody, but we can at least send them in the right direction."

Adding to that, Peter Dracos remarked that "There's so many laws and regulations that people don't know what their rights, obligations, and liabilities are. This Student Legal Service is so students can start acting within the law rather than as victims of it."

"SLS exists to educate the student in handling any legal concerns with more confidence and understanding."

Senator Leahy

Cont. From Page 15

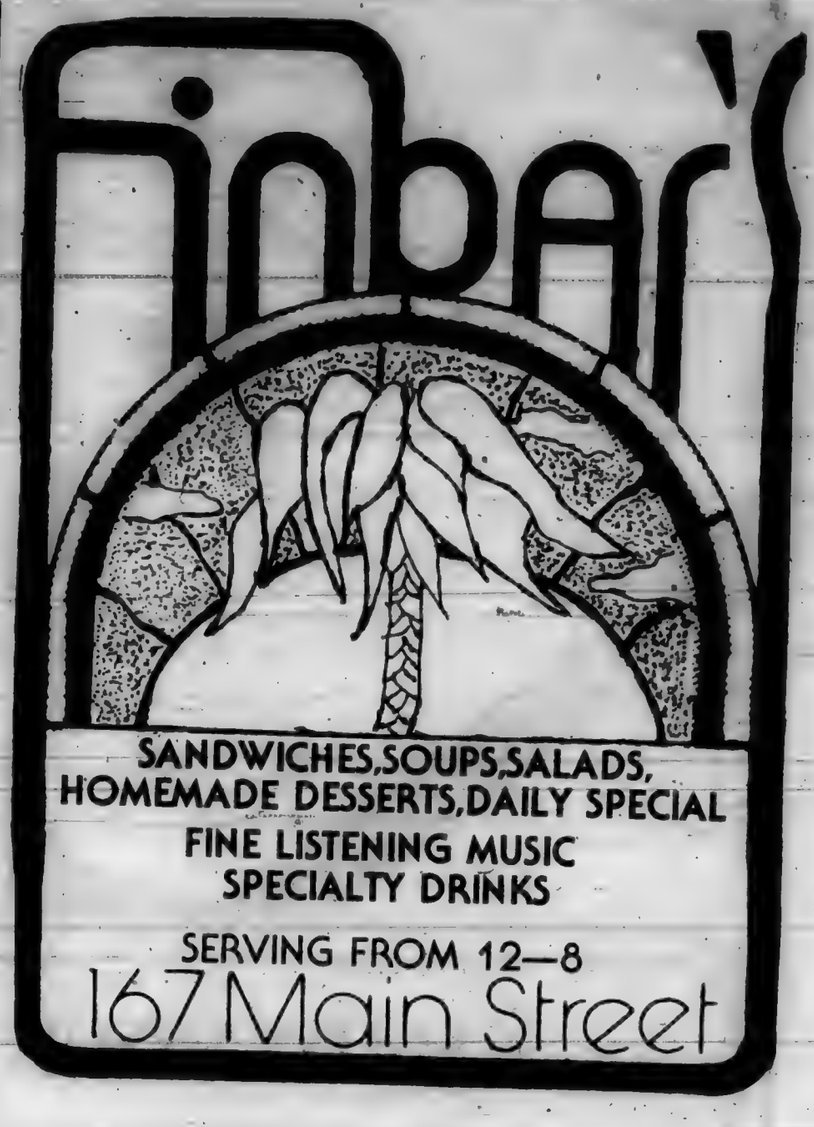
suffering numerous beatings and imprisonment, he said human rights was making progress in his country. His government had allowed him to go abroad for six months, something he would not have been permitted to do five years ago. Still, the committee members were amazed he wanted to go back.

At 2:30, we were in the office for lunch: a cup of low-fat yogurt! Since coming to D.C., Leahy has lost 40 pounds (small wonder).



The late afternoon was peaceful; none of the Senator's 14 sub-committees were meeting. Leahy reviewed the next day's appointments, made phone calls, and planned an upcoming trip to Vermont. "I make it back to Vermont about once a week," he explained. "I get about six weekends off a year. But I enjoy the variety. It's hectic as you can see, but I've never enjoyed anything as much."

Finally, at 6:15, Leahy headed home with a bundle of homework. By his own estimate, Leahy averages 75 to 80 hours of work a week, not including work done at home. "It's a lot like farm work," an aide said. "The work is never done."

Bananas

Cont. From Page 18

monkey's primary food source, it has tremendous potential to influence the development of man's society, particularly in America. Already powerful in the business world, the banana has its own patent with Chiquita and its own slogan "Go bananas," which may be translated either "Go wild" or "Go crazy." Years from now the slogan may be America's national motto, but until then one need only respect the banana as the world's most enterprising fruit.

MAGRAMS
IN-GLEN
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

Albatross

Cont. From Page 13

represented in an overall universal form for the University and that the SA should contribute with personnel and funding, the new version of the Albatross Committee could serve as a nucleus toward that end.

Whether the consumer interests of the students will be spoken to, even if it is so recommended by the Sub-Committee, is uncertain. One of the more frustrating lessons learned by the Albatross Committee was the unavoidable and severe compromises once it became dependent upon the administration and faculty for distribution.

Another lesson concerns the mistake of working from a faulty assumption concerning student interest. Such is difficult to document. Indeed, there are examples of student and faculty support and interest; but no survey was attempted to gather (a) the aggregate interests of the student body as a whole; or (b) whether they were interested in, and/or taking advantage of, the information provided. And, from the beginning, there was a critical shortage of personnel.

"The importance of having a process that is valid is obvious in that otherwise the careers of faculty members could be damaged or enhanced by inaccurate data."

Ultimately, the Albatross Committee did not result from pressure from the aggregate student body for a student-run evaluation process, but erred in concept in that it preceded any sort of pressure, hoping its activities could activate the interest it had assumed. By polling the students this spring, the Sub-Committee is doing what the Albatross Committee should have done two years ago.

It all comes down to one choice: (a) work to recruit the personnel needed to distribute the questionnaire this spring, tallying the data and publishing it in the fall (continue funding); or (b) end the Committee in its present form, developing a non-funded, observation committee to contribute to and await the recommendations of the Sub-Committee on Evaluation of Instruction (stop funding). It's our choice.

Dan Adams was on the Albatross Committee of the Student Association for two years.

CHART YOUR OWN COURSE

You can't ask for better navigator training than you can get from the United States Air Force. And you can't be better prepared to chart your own course for the future than through Air Force ROTC.

If you're a young person who can qualify for navigator training, you've got a good start. You can also compete for a scholarship that will provide financial assistance while you work on your degree.

After commissioning, your top-notch training will continue at Mather Air Force Base near Sacramento, where Air Force navigators are trained in the ultra-modern T-43 jet aircraft.

Following 33 weeks of intensive training, you'll be awarded the silver wings of an Air Force navigator. From there on, the sky's the limit.

Find out about AFROTC and the navigator program. Chart a secure future for yourself.

AIR FORCE ROTC
Gateway to a great way of life.

Contact St. Michael's/UVM Air Force ROTC, 655-2000, ext. 2551.

Here Comes Spring.

A look as young and fresh as summer, the leno print peasant dress with wide ruffled neck to wear on or off the shoulders. The skirt is tiered below the slim and fitted waist. White with small scaled floral print as shown. In sizes 5–13.

PRE SEASON SALE
Summer Shoes & Sandals
by Golo-Bernardo

the Ski shop INC.

388 Shelburne Rd. S. Burlington 862-5488

Short Story Contest

The infamous Cynic Short Story Contest is back once again! Twenty-five smackers for de winner and fifteen for runner-up. Certain conditions prevail for our subjective minds to judge the contest.

(1) No mention of that fat-mouthed Florida orange lady.

(2) Stories longer than 10 typed pages will be fed to our dog, Rex.

(3) No entries following the thirteenth day of April.

Originality of ideas and story are basic requirements. Plagiarisms are seriously shunned at (We're smarter than might appear.)

$25 cash! Go for it.

Photo Contest

A Cynic Photo contest will offer $15 to the highest quality bl/wh .photograph containing a unique spark and eye-catching scene. Two runner-up positions will catch $5 each. A special $10 is available for the best abstract photograph. None should be received after April 20th.

Names and addresses should be contained in an envelope attached on the back of the photo.

Bring your entries to the Cynic office in lower Billings.

collegiate crossword

© Edward Julius, 1977 Collegiate CW77-6

ACROSS

1 Roller-coaster ride sound
7 Fundamentals
13 Feeling of failure
15 Hogan's rank
16 Resort or car
17 Straighten again
18 Wrong
19 Old-English letter
21 Lao-——
22 State ——
23 Well-known club
24 Public disturbance
25 Before
26 "Stompin' at the ——"
27 Bartletts
28 Was ambitious
30 Gives out cards
31 Breakfast dish
32 Baseball hall-of-famer, —— Frick
33 Treeless plain
35 Revives (2 wds.)
38 Part of MTM
39 Openings
40 World War II agency
42 "It's ——!"
43 Stuck in mud
44 Tease
45 Part of NNP
46 Wrestling holds
47 Pertaining to birth
49 Hydrogen, for one
51 Testimonial
53 Vehement speeches
54 Obtains
55 Proceed in a gliding manner
56 Hate

DOWN

1 Predicament
2 Imaginary monster
3 Gorges
4 Sponsorship (var.)
5 Greek Mars
6 "Bei —— Bist Du Schoen"
7 Dutch Africans
8 Rob Petrie's boss
9 Mr. Hurok
10 Sign very quickly
11 Bleeps
12 Makes driving dangerous
14 Original inhabitants
15 Chum
20 Juvenile delinquent
23 "Key ——"
24 Studies
26 Actress —— Hasso
27 Fathers, in France
29 Arctic explorer
30 Like St. Peter's
32 Wooded areas
33 Flowering plant
34 Pillagers
35 Irish city
36 Severe pain
37 Pain relievers
38 Valuable French paintings
39 Ancient Britishers
41 Most competent
43 Bank inventory
46 Mother of Clytemnestra
47 French resort
48 Touch on
50 ——-jongg
52 Famous Barber

Last Week's Answers

| | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| S | U | M | M | E | D | | A | G | A | I | N | S | T |
| C | R | E | A | T | E | | C | O | N | N | O | T | E | S |
| R | A | T | T | A | N | | H | O | O | D | W | I | N | K |
| U | N | I | T | | T | W | E | E | D | | A | N | T | I |
| F | I | E | | T | I | E | D | Y | E | | | G | A | T |
| F | A | R | E | A | S | T | | | | E | L | E | C | T |
| | | | R | U | T | T | E | D | | M | E | R | L | E |
| G | L | E | N | N | | E | P | A | | M | A | S | E | R |
| L | I | M | I | T | | D | I | M | M | E | R | | | |
| I | V | I | E | S | | | | P | I | T | S | T | O | P |
| M | E | G | | | F | O | R | E | S | T | | O | N | A |
| M | I | R | O | | O | M | E | N | S | | A | R | E | S |
| E | T | A | G | E | R | E | S | | T | E | M | P | O | S |
| R | U | T | L | E | D | G | E | | E | L | A | I | N | E |
| | P | E | E | K | S | A | T | | P | A | D | D | E | D |

Now Offering
Daytime Workshops
Monday 12:00 - 5:00 pm.
Wednesday 10:30 - 4:00 pm.
Saturday 1:00 - 5:00 pm.
When you think macrame, think of us
Why Knot
658-6575 18 North Winooski Ave.

SPRING SKI SALE
" Best Prices of the Year on Entire Stock "
SKIS
BOOTS
POLES
SKI PARKAS
SKI SWEATERS
SKI PANTS
WARM – UPS
TURTLENECKS
GLOVES
UNDERWEAR
SOCKS
HATS
AFTER SKI BOOTS
UP TO 50% OFF
ALPINE SHOP
WILLISTON ROAD, SO. BURLINGTON
OPEN DAILY 9 AM-9 PM
COR. CHERRY & SO. WINOOSKI AVE. DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

Fresh Fish From Maine
Lobster, Sole, Haddock, Clams and More
Watch for Weekend Specials
SOLOMON'S VARIETY
1160 Williston Rd. 863-4495

VERMONT CYNIC

EDITORIAL BOARD

Editor-in-Chief: David C. Greeff
Managing Editor: Alex D. Walker
Executive Editor: Russell F. Flannery
Layout Editor: Jerome E. Andrews.
News: Robert J. Moore Features: Alan Marshall
Sports: Rich Chalmers, Steve Larose Arts: Vaune Davis
Advertising Manager: Brian Evans
Business Manager: Julie Voll

The Vermont Cynic is published weekly during the school year except vacations by students at UVM. Opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or the State of Vermont.

A Vote for Gadson and Chamberlain

Once again spring has rolled around and the student body faces the task of electing new leadership for the Student Association (S.A.). In the past this has been an unceremonious process participated in by considerably less than 1/2 of the eligible voters. While apathy is unquestionably the key factor explaining the reason for the low turnout, lack of available information resulting in ignorance concerning the candidates and their platforms has also presented a problem to the potentially aware student. While apathy is a deeply embedded problem not prey to easy solution, unavailable information is more easily dealt with.

Accordingly, in hopes of remedying this dilemma, we have provided under the direction of Executive Editor Russell F. Flannery, a special 12 page supplement giving all the information that we believe is required to make an intelligent choice. Platforms, answers to a special Cynic question, and selected questions from the Candidates' Forums have been presented, along with pictures, in space equally allotted to all candidates. All students are urged to read this section carefully, in addition to attending student forums as the basis for a rational decision on who to vote for.

We, after having carefully read all platforms and heard the verbal articulations of each candidate, have found no significant positional differences among them. All seem to show genuine interest in issues such as apathy, tenure, tenants' rights, coordination of S.A. activities, and the Student Legal Service. These are all important issues and merit serious consideration, but none, we believe, have offered any original or innovative insights — with few exceptions — into how to effectively deal with these problems. None have put forth a fresh or creative program which will lend itself to increased student participation.

Given this situation, the only intelligent way to choose a candidate is on the basis of potential leadership qualities, ability to responsibly allocate the $180,000 budget, political acumen, and the ability to generate student interest. It is on this basis that we believe the ticket of Jesse Gadson for President and Henry Chamberlain for Vice-President should be victorious in next week's elections.

Gadson, an articulate and convincing speaker, has served as WDW dorm government President, an IRA representative, and is currently an SA senator working with the Student Action Committee. In all of these roles, Gadson has displayed keen interest and an ability to effectively work with other people in getting things done.

Chamberlain has served as IRA Vice-President, a member of the Food Service Evaluation Committee, a member of the Albatross committee, and an organizer of the Washington Alumni House seminar. Like Gadson, he is an astute and well-informed student ready to tackle relevant issues that confront UVM students.

While we heartily endorse Gadson and Chamberlain, it can't be emphasized enough how important it is for every student to hear the candidates and make their own decisions. The belief that S.A. activities don't affect the individual student, and that therefore one has no reason to get involved, is not only false but irresponsible.

Editorial

LETTERS

In Response

Deepest, Blackest Regrets

To the Editor:

In response to your less than favorable article in the March 2nd, Vermont Cynic concerning the Black Angus, I can only offer my deepest regrets. This was unequivocally the worst night we have ever experienced.

The winter months and especially the weekends are considerably slower for most restaurants in the Burlington area. From our reservations we anticipate the size of our business for the evening. This particular Saturday indicated, as do most Saturdays at this time of year, a maximum of one hundred fifty to one hundred seventy five dinners. This figure can quite accurately be arrived at based upon a constant percentage of reservations versus walk-in business. However, we broke all records for this particular evening seating well over three hundred people, and turning away approximately fifty customers. Since we never serve frozen or precut portion control steaks, but instead cut all our own steaks fresh individually here on the premises, we must be careful not to overstock our meat supply in order to avoid obvious waste.

I realize that this is not an excuse for your experience on that evening; but I am sure you realize a restaurant of our caliber does not retain its fine reputation, nor do the business that we do, by trying in any way to mislead or cheat the customer. We or anybody would be out of business very quickly if we did.

I hope that you gentlemen will take all this into consideration and return again to sample our fine bill of fare.

This, I assure you, is not a sales pitch but a reflection of our philosophy and policy of operation. Thank you.

Sincerely yours,
Christopher W. Potter
Black Angus Steak
House Corp. of Vermont

P.S. We do not serve canned peas and our waitresses really are not that dangerous!

Dept. Of Disobedience

Clamshell Alliance Goes To Sea

To the Editor:

As you know, the Clamshell Alliance has held three progressively larger occupations of the site of the proposed Seabrook Nuclear Power Plant in Seabrook, New Hampshire. At the most recent demonstration on May 1, 1977, 1415 people were arrested. The next citizen occupation is planned to be an even larger action on June 24, 1978.

The Clamshell Alliance has begun simultaneous plans for another type of direct civil disobedience action against the proposed Seabrook plant. We are now working on a blockade by land and by sea of the reactor vessel.

The reactor vessel is the heart of a nuclear plant. It is inside the reactor vessel that the fuel rod assemblies are contained, the fission process takes place, and heat and new radioactive isotopes are produced. It is the primary safety containment. The vessel is a seamless steel structure weighing 427 tons. It is 16 feet in diameter and 44 feet long.

The vessel for unit I at Seabrook is presently being stored at Brayton Station fossil fuel plant in Sommersett, Massachusetts. The vessel is too large and heavy to move by roads, so a special dock is being constructed at Hampton Harbor near Seabrook to receive it. The vessel must travel by barge from Brayton Station on the Taunton River, near Fall River, Massachusetts out Narragansett Bay, through the Cape Cod Canal and into the special dock in Hampton Harbor.

Plans of the blockade call for civil disobedience actions by participants trained in non-violence practice who will attempt to block the path of the barge with small boats. The size of this action depends on how soon the vessel is moved. At this point we don't know when Public Service Company of New Hampshire will try to move the vessel. An alert network, non-violence training and other preparations are in the beginning planning stages.

The communications committee is preparing to send you periodic news releases. We would also like to provide you with any other information that might be helpful.

Thank you very much for your attention.

Sincerely,
James Ellis

On Nutrition

Is Your Bread Buttered ?

To the Editor:

This is in reference to one of your previous nutrition articles which explained that butter contains cis chains, while in margarine this is transformed into what is perhaps a more harmful substance, trans carbon chains.

Having lived on campus for a year and a half, I painfully remember, ever so vividly, those revolving, ferris-wheel like toasters, sitting comfortably against the walls of each elegant, Saga dinner. In the morning, in a semi-conscious stupor, I would put butter on my toast or english muffin before placing it on the upturning tricky apparatus. The pre-butter phase would allow the heat within the contained red-hot burner to kill any harmful substances within the butter. You never know what pilled or powdered substance can find its way into one of those "open" foods. Having placed my untoasted butter yeast squares on the water wheel crisper, I wait and wait, appearing as though I have a firm interest in those eggs, beside me, happily frying away. All right now, they should be ready now, it's been five minutes. Yes, I'm sure the next ones are mine. Here they come. They now wait a second. Those are mine. I'm sure. Oh, what the hell, it happens all the time. Well, I'll just take the next one, here they are. What the ?!x&*X)0, they're already greased over, and bagels yet. Now what do I do? You just can't win around here. Is that bubbling liquid butter or deadly margarine? I suppose this clearly illustrates the learning process is fine on paper, but where and when can you apply it?

Unsatisfied,
Scott Greb

Music

How Do You Spell 'Jazz'?

To the Editor:

I'd been getting annoyed for a while at the apparently liberal application of the term "jazz" to any kind of music striving to maintain an air of melodic sophistication (eg: folk-rock-jazz), but recently allayed this by asking if the music being referred to is good "jazz." Much to my dismay, however, I now find a local Burlington band has been formed claiming to play "jazz at its best."

Having not heard the band, I don't wish to rank them with the pseudo-sophisticated jazz-you-name-it syndrome, or even to say they can't be good. I'd simply like to say that to claim to play "jazz at its best" is to play oneself amongst the likes of John Coltrane, Thelonius Monk, Booker Little, or the younger Sonny Rollins (to name just a few), and unless this band can equal or surpass these men's innovations, they are lying. The reason I say this is that I hate to see a music so beautifully developed outside the realm of commercialism not only being exploited like art work displayed by a punk-rock group, but sold like it was a can of cheap beer (eg: Schlocklager natural light jazz — beer at its best).

Eric Sorensen

School-wide election endorsement letters to be found on page 34 within the Election Supplement.

Opinion:

In Defense Of Coolidge Hall

By Dan Adams

A $600,000 renovation planned for Coolidge Hall this summer has raised a difficult question. With the renovation – to which the Department of Residential Life is irreversibly committed – as a given, what steps might the Department take to protect its investment?

The time for the Coolidge renovation has come. The expenditure has been approved by the UVM Board of Trustees, and it is one in a series of expenses projected over the next ten years. The final plans will be finished shortly and the department will soon be receiving bids. Work will begin at the current semester's end.

The issue concerns a reputation Coolidge has developed over the years. That reputation, which has resulted at least partially from a factual record of irresponsible student damage, has suggested to some students and members of the Department that the current destructive treatment of the hall might continue after the renovation is completed. As is certainly their legal right, the department is looking into possible changes which could result in better treatment of the building.

In an effort to assure student input a role in the decision-making process, the IRA Student Advisory Committee on Housing has recently been asked to look into the issue. They have been considering some of the numerous options open: changing the hall to all women; all freshmen; all male; and so on. Another option is making no change at all, but this would require some sort of credible guarantee from current Coolidge residents that the present disrespect for property would cease to exist, especially after the building was renovated.

The question was put to Coolidge residents last Monday: What could they propose that would assure the Student Advisory Committee and the department of the needed change in behavior. The highly emotional meeting which followed testified both to the strong interest in present residents that Coolidge not be required to accept any of the other options and to the difficult nature of the question put before them.

That extensive and unnecessary damage exists in Coolidge seems to be a universal observation. It is the causes which are hotly debated. A common argument is that Coolidge is a dump, and that it is hard to respect a place of residence with such intolerable conditions. As a result, behavior unacceptable in other halls has become the norm in Coolidge. It is meant by "norm" that behavior which the local peer pressure condones and, to at least some extent, insists the majority of residents engage in.

Another concern is that much of the damage is caused by outsiders, both Coolidge alumni and others, who return to engage in and induce destructive behavior.

Whatever the causes, one senses a feeling of hopelessness among those Coolidge residents bothered by the damage and interested in doing something about it. And there seem to be many who are bothered, yet who have resigned themselves to a peer pressure which, in terms of damage, is clearly negative.

If the poor conditions of the hall are the cause of the destructive behavior, in this lies the challenge for those in Coolidge: how to convince the department to give current residents a chance to prove themselves in a renovated, more pleasant and more accommodating hall. This line of reasoning is up against that which suggests that disrespect for property, regardless of the condition of the property, is inherently wrong, and thus that the causes of the damage in Coolidge are not structural, but stem from the personal character of some of the residents.

Many in Coolidge feel this latter line of reasoning has been taken too far, that the so-called "Coolidge reputation" is based on inaccurate stereotypes and generalizations, and thus clouds the issue unfairly. Indeed, as it now looks, it is questionable as to whether the Student Advisory Committee on Housing could base a recommendation of "no change" solely on promises from current Coolidge residents concerning respect for the hall next year.

Credibility and trust are gained or lost over a long period of time. Due to whatever causes, the amount of trust outsiders currently put in Coolidge residents concerning respect for their hall is generally low. Because of the necessity of the department's commitment to renovate the hall, Coolidge residents are being asked to greatly increase their credibility in a short period of time. The demand may be excessive and even unrealistic, but is one the department is entitled to make if they find it necessary.

That prejudices and biases can be included in one's assessment of another's credibility is a sad reality–Coolidge residents might have to cope with. The demand for credibility being placed on them is a large one. Yet, for the department of residential life, $600,000 is big money, and, in relation to current behavior, a significant change is needed in Coolidge to ensure the investment is protected.

There is no question that the Department values the community spirit in Coolidge Hall. Yet as damage there contributes to each student's room and board costs, and as all of the nearly 4000 students in UVM residence halls will contribute to the $600,000 renovation, the department has a responsibility to all the students in the system to protect the investment.

With such as a given, and considering the critical role of the slow-to-develop credibility, Coolidge residents may have broken themselves into a hole from which they can't escape. The best they can do is display a willingness to make a commitment towards respecting the building they live in, present their position in rational, unemotional terms, and hope their sincerity is seen by others.

Insight:

A Grain Of Salt

By Eric Pollard

Washington is again rumbling over the SALT II agreements. One faction stresses the fact that SALT would make the Minuteman system of land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles vulnerable to attack. The other group counters that the Minuteman system is already vulnerable and that SALT II would erase the numerical superiority in missiles that the Soviets have as a result of the first SALT accords. Neither group can develop a better justification for the continuance of arms production and deployment than that the Soviets have X, so the United States must necessarily have XXN. Paul Nitze, a delegate to the 1969-1974 SALT talks, is concerned with the amount of kill power or throw weight of the new Soviet missiles. He feels that by 1985, Soviet technology will have produced a missile that is as accurate as the Minuteman and can carry a larger warhead payload. Paul Warnke, the current director of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, does not think that this is a matter of great import, arguing that any potential weakness in the American strategic defense structure would not be the result of the SALT talks, but of the program under which that structure was developed.

While all of this debate is thought-provoking, it totally avoids the question that lies at the root of any discussion of nuclear capabilities – that being what is the point of all this concern over nuclear weaponry? The American system of land, sea, and air based nuclear weapons is described as defensive, designed to prevent any attack directed at this country from abroad. One might find this acceptable if one also believed that the best defense is a good offense. There is nothing, in the technical sense, defensive about the nuclear forces currently deployed by the United States and the Soviet Union. The official wisdom on the subject is that the bigger and more menacing the threat of nuclear war, the less likely it is that the Soviets or any other party will choose to pay the inevitable consequences in order to strike the United States with strategic weapons. Someone seems to have neglected the probability that if another party felt so incensed that they would consider the use of their first strike capabilities, there is little that is likely to deter them. The decision to launch a nuclear war is one of such magnitude as to overshadow the consequences, which can only be reckoned in percentages of population.

"The decision to launch a nuclear war is one of such magnitude as to overshadow the consequences, which can only be reckoned is in percentages of population."

No matter how ridiculous the threat of nuclear war appears or how real the Soviet potential for destruction, the United States has an edge that cannot be neutralized by numbers of missiles or volume of payload. The United States is the only world power ever to use its nuclear capability on human beings. The psychological impact of the devastation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki cannot be minimized by those responsible for the formulation of strategic policy. An uneasy air of irrationality hangs over the heads of American negotiators, an air which should be capitalized on. Even if the momentum of the negotiations has shifted toward the Soviets, it would not hurt the American effort to act as if we were holding the trump.

The final analysis of the nuclear program of the United States and the disarmament talks with the Soviets is this: there is no need for further development of our nuclear capability. While it is argued that the Soviets have constructed a massive civil defense system to protect their population in the event of a nuclear war, one must also remember that there is no way available to protect their domiciles and crop production areas above ground. Despite the reports of a certain reticence within the Soviet peoples, it is difficult to believe that they would allow their normal livelihoods to be wiped away by the actions of the ruling elite. After all, Russians are people too. Sooner or later the leadership in this country will realize that the continuous growth of American nuclear capabilities is not necessary for the security of the state. They will also realize that the money spent on the missile program could better be wasted in the area of social programs. It is difficult to imagine a situation in which the use of nuclear weapons would be the best alternative possible. While still very powerful in destructive terms, nuclear weapons have lost whatever political power they once held. One day the United States government will trade the blueprints for the B-1 bomber and 75 cruise missiles for six atomic reactors and season passes to the Bolshoi Ballet.

Save $350

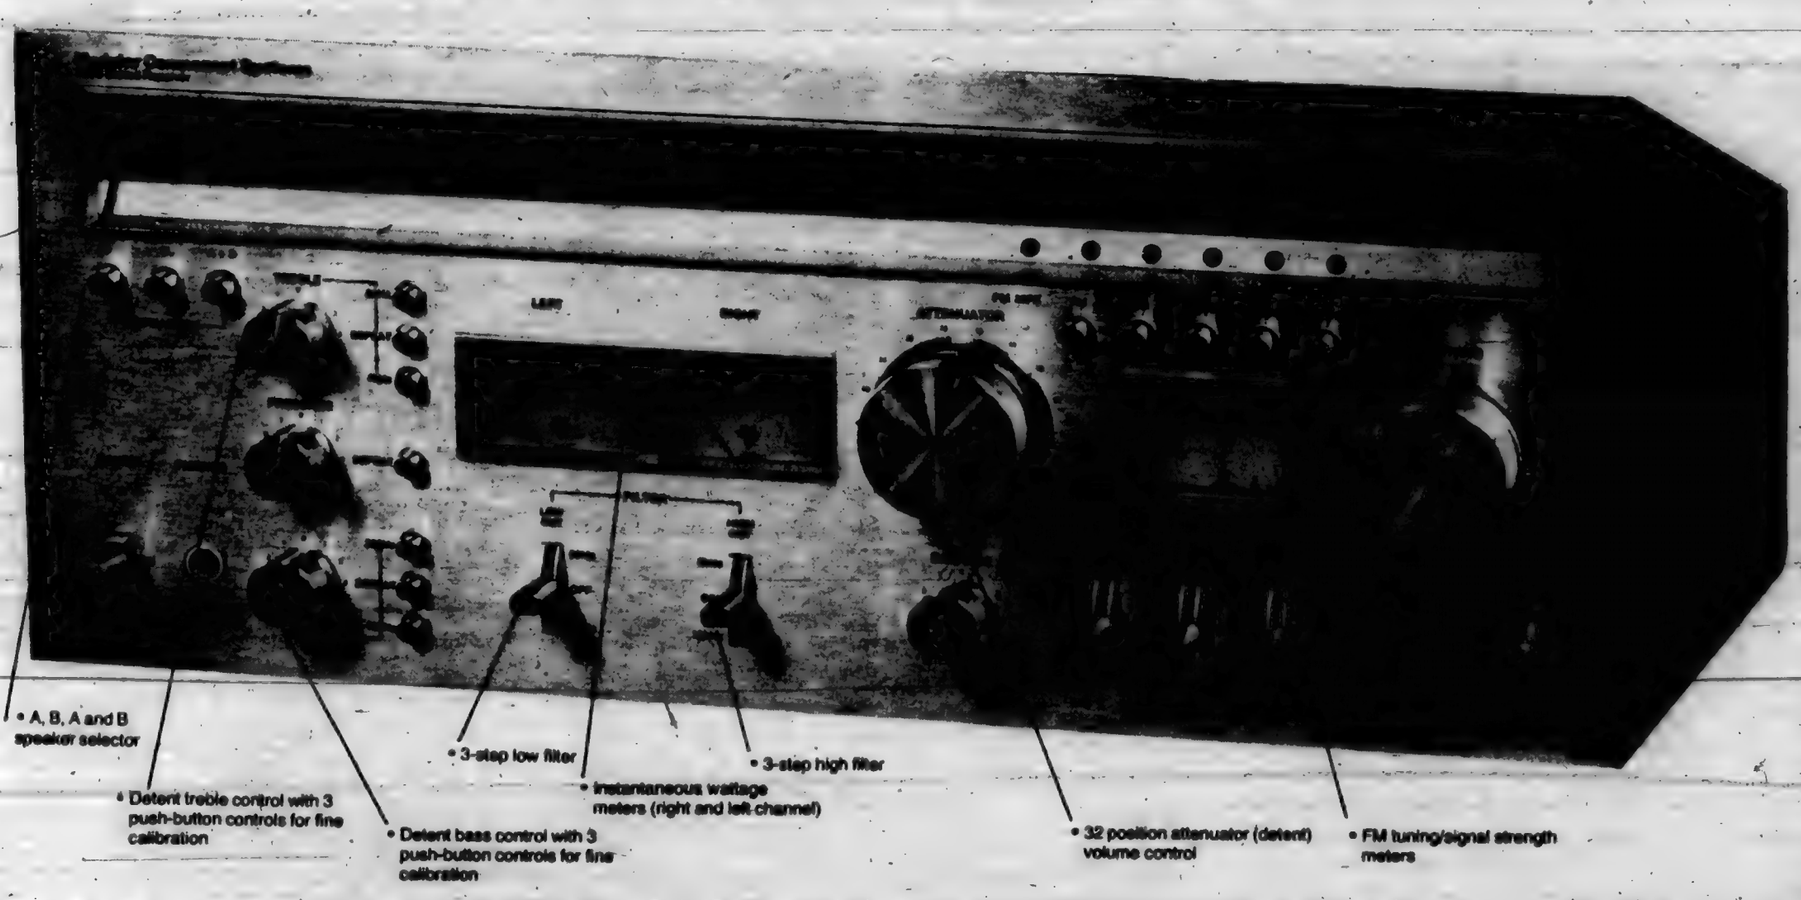
MCS™ Series 53-watt* receiver and two 3-way air suspension speakers.



Sale 649.85

If purchased separately would be 999.85.

*53 watts RMS minimum per channel, 2 channels driven at 8 Ohms, 20-20,000 Hz with not more than 0.5% total harmonic distortion.

Sale prices effective thru Saturday, March 11th.

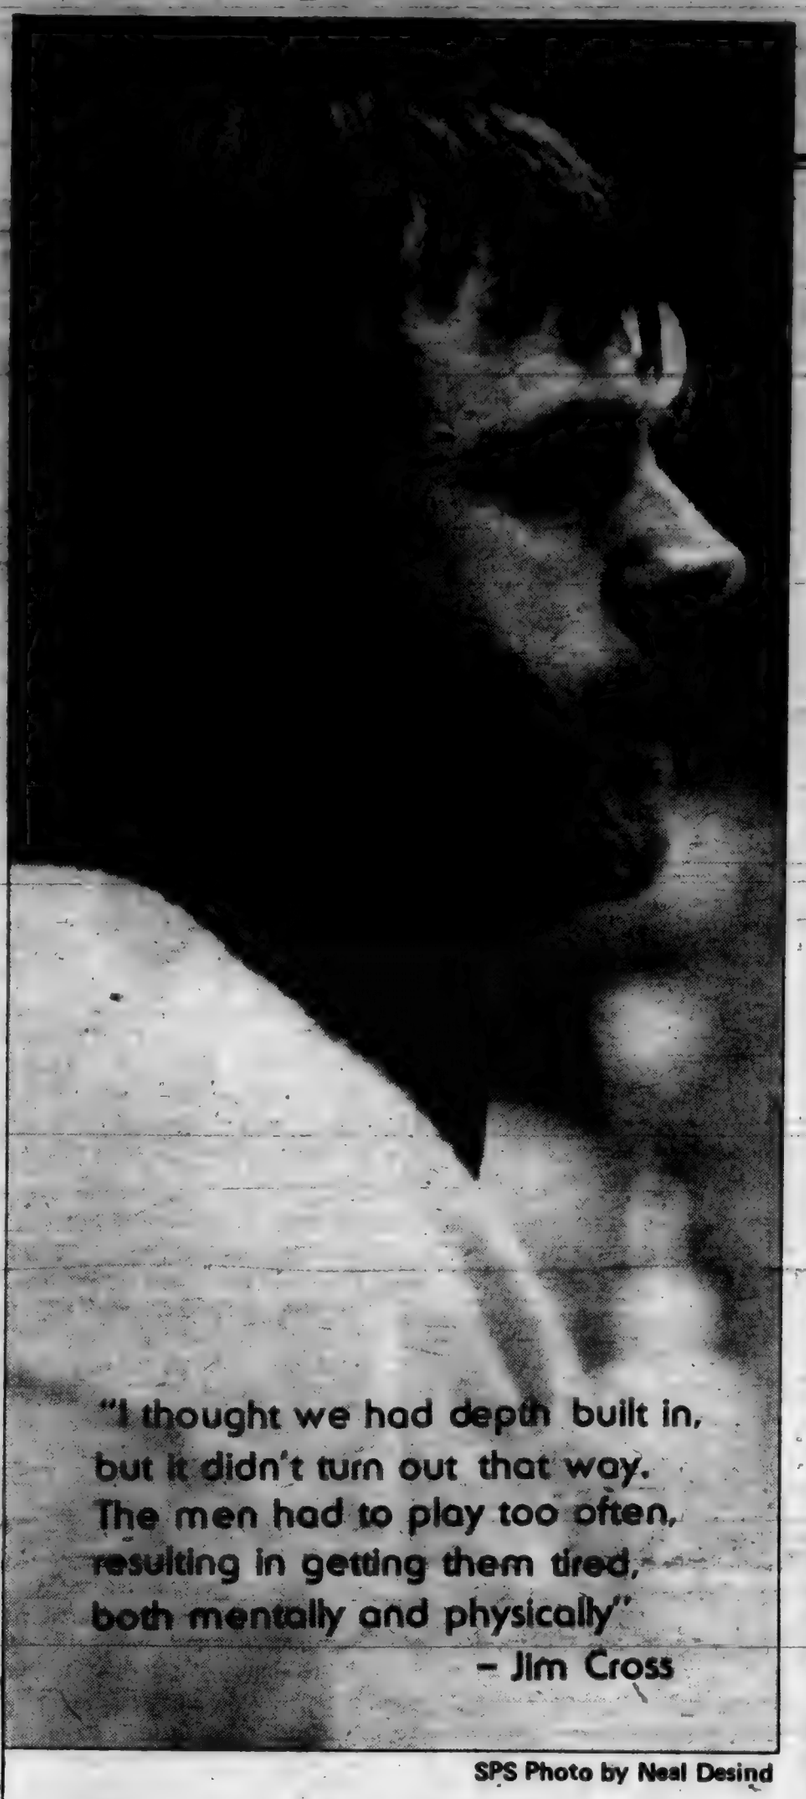
Modular Component Systems MCS™ Series Warranty
*Full 5 years on speakers
*Full 3 years on receivers, turntables and tape decks
Within 5 years of purchase of speakers, and 3 years of purchase of receivers, turntables and tape decks, we will at our option repair or replace any defective component. Simply return it to JCPenney.



Bus and Parking Garage validation available tel: 863-6881

JCPenney
Downtown Burlington

Store hours:
Monday-Friday 9:30-9:00
Saturdays 9:30-5:30

SPORTS

Cross Remains Enthusiastic Despite Lukewarm Season

"I thought we had depth built in, but it didn't turn out that way. The men had to play too often, resulting in getting them tired, both mentally and physically"
– Jim Cross

SPS Photo by Neal Desind

By Paul Gardner

Since the University of Vermont's triumphant entry into the world of Division I hockey, Coach Jim Cross and his team have had a number of tough seasons. For the first time in ten years Vermont has begun to wonder about its hockey strength. Nevertheless, Coach Cross is enthusiastic and confident the team will regain some of its status. His strong belief that the puck will soon bounce UVM's way will be influential in producing better seasons in the years to come.

"We played really well," Cross said, "You can't fault the men for the way they played. If we had a few more players to spell these guys, it would have taken a lot of pressure off their shoulders." That, in Cross's eyes, was a key factor in the team's demise. "I thought we had depth built in, but it didn't turn out that way. The men had to play too often, resulting in getting them tired, both mentally and physically." Cross expected to use four solid lines but ended with only ten forwards down the stretch.

When asked why UVM did so poorly at home, Cross said he couldn't put his finger on it. For some reason, the squad was able to put it all together against top teams away, but not at home. "I think it'll even up soon. We just had a bad run at home, and a good one away. We played some great hockey games this year, but they just didn't go our way."

The fact remains that there is pressure everywhere. When UVM went thirty-seven out of thirty-eight in Division II and lost a game, people got upset. Now, the team is concentrating on having a winning season. "Things have a way of evening out," Cross said. "You wouldn't believe some of the close games that have been played this season. When eighth seed UNH played first seed BU, in the playoffs, they hit the goal post two times in overtime only to have BU move and win the game. They're the best team and they deserve to be there, but even their coach would admit things have gone their way."

Cross described his strategy as constantly changing. The Cats shift from an open to a more closed checking game as the need arises. "You have to break your pattern once in a while or other teams will figure you out. Overall, I think it's strong hustle and good defense that wins games. Our defense this season was good enough to make the playoffs, but our offense was right at the bottom. We've got to get more goals next year."

Many of the younger players came through well for the squad this season. Craig Homola scored seventeen goals and Chris Zimmerman proved his potential time and time again. McFarlane added another seventeen points.

Although UVM may not have been entirely successful in Division I, Cross sees no reason to consider moving back down. Middlebury and Norwich are competing for the Division II title and the Cats have handled both of these teams with ease. "We are a Division I team," Cross stated. "We were 9-14 and lost to BU, the best team in the nation, by only one goal. We're not in the top eight right now, but neither are nine other teams. We're in every game, we just haven't been able to pull it out."

Cross has been pleased with the team's attitude. "We're going to graduate a great group. It's a little early now, but I anticipate a top recruiting year so we should be able to build well on the strong nucleus we already have. We really need numbers though, because we have to build up the depth of the team. We can't go on with this small a squad. It puts too much of a load on each individual player. We had a solid bunch of guys with a good 'hang tough' attitude. Once you get a few players like that, it affects everyone. A real team hangs together even when things aren't going well, and we've got strong team spirit here. We've been able to bounce right back after defeats much more than we ever could have last year. I'm proud of this bunch."

Cross stressed the need for more depth in next year's squad and pointed to Pennsylvania and Southern Quebec as good recruiting areas. "The competition is very tough for top-notch hockey recruits. We've got our eyes on a number of good prospects, but then, so do many other schools. Our standards are tough for out-of-state students, and they constitute about 99% of the team. Students that we don't accept here may score three goals against us next season, but I accept that. I wouldn't want it any other way. If we can't find enough academically strong hockey players, then maybe we shouldn't be in the game."

"Chuck Ross did an excellent job this season," Cross added. "He had a million things

(Continued on page 45)

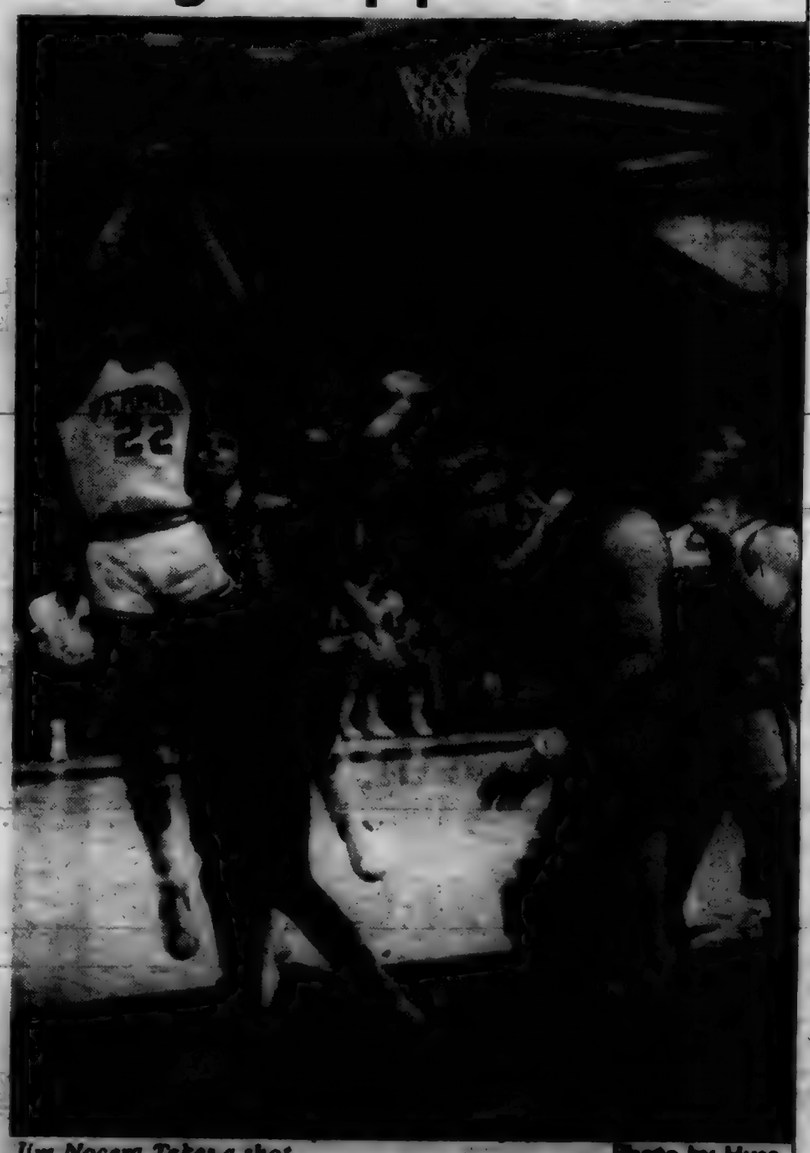
Basketball Express Stalled by Tough Opposition

By Steven Larose

"Several positive things went unnoticed because we played national powers this year instead of cupcake teams. If we had beaten a lot of pushovers, the record might be more impressive, but I wouldn't be very satisfied," remarked University of Vermont Basketball Coach Peter Salzberg while discussing the 77-78 season recently.

Salzberg further explained, "We played a lot of good teams, and gave them a run for their money several times. If a couple of critical games went our way, we would have had an all-around successful season. We had a few close defeats, and a few close wins, but a lot more people remember the defeats than remember the wins."

Vermont's season began with a bang when the Cats put together a string of wins over Dartmouth, Norwich, Ohio State and St. Michael's. But as soon as they hit the road, a curious pattern began to emerge. After two embarrassing losses to Massachusetts and Fairfield, Vermont narrowly defeated Colgate and then suffered a five game losing streak at the hands of such national powers as New Mexico, Mississippi State and Oregon. In all their losses, Vermont held its own for five minutes, and then was steamrolled by their opponents.



Vermont returned to winning form with back to back two point wins over Boston University and Brandeis, but the troubled Cats slumped again with four more straight losses. The flu and several injuries further hindered Vermont. The season continued to drag on, with the Vermont squad winning by three points one day, and losing by 33 the next. An 84-70 win over St. Michael's closed out the season with some hope for next year, when the Cats managed to dominate the contest from start to finish. Vermont finished with an 11-15 record.

Salzberg singled out Kevin Kelly's injury as a key factor in the season. "When we lost Kevin, we lost most of our offensive punch. On top of this, our freshmen developed as we expected. Considering the competition they had to play against, they did well, although they did lack consistency." Salzberg remarked that the lack of consistency caused the fluctuation in Vermont's performance.

In looking at his departing seniors, Salzberg said that Mark Sobolewski provided leadership and offensive muscle, but unfortunately came down with the flu during the Cats' losing streak. "Charlie Trapani also gave us some good performances, but he had some muscle trouble and played under a lot of pain. All our seniors had some problems beyond their control, and that hurt us considerably."

Salzberg had no predictions to offer for next year, commenting that "next season is a light year away. We have to go out and recruit four new big men to replace our senior forwards, and the people coming back need more improvement. However, our players will be participating in summer leagues to gain some valuable playing time. We have some raw ingredients for a team, all that has to be done is the fine adjustments to swing the close games over to our side of the ledger." Vermont will play 16 home games next year, which Salzberg believes will be an advantage in the Cats' quest to become a contender.

"Our mental attitudes are exceptional. We are physically overmatched on the court, so we have to have a superior attitude or else we don't stand a chance," Salzberg concluded. "If we can win our share of close games next season, instead of splitting 50-50 like we did this year, then it will be a good season and a step in the right direction."

Jim Nocera Takes a shot Photo by Huse

Guinness
T-Shirts at...
Feeney and daughters

Three Hoopsters to Graduate

By Randy Briggs

When Kevin Kelly first came to the University of Vermont the basketball program was at one of its lowest points in history. The team had not had a winning season in years and Vermont fans were anxious for one. In Kelly's first year he helped the team post a fine 16-10 record and dreams of further success were nurtured.

Kelly looks upon his expereince at Vermont as a richly rewarding one. "I have been very happy here at Vermont. There have been a lot of good times and also a lot of tough times. As far as basketball goes, I did not accomplish what I wanted to but that's the way it goes sometimes. This has been a tough year with all the injuries that I have had."

Kelly has been a crucial cog in the rise of UVM basketball program. "I've been pleased with the program here. I've grown with the program and because of this I have gotten a lot out of playing basketball at UVM. It was tough in the first year or two. I thought I was going to be treated as a star, but I got a rude awakening. Everybody was just as good or better than I was."

When asked about the respective strengths and weaknesses of the UVM program, Kelly also had some interesting comments. "You need the money and the talent to win consistently. We don't have that here. I feel that UVM will always be competitive in the Northeast but not on a national scale. I like the program as it is now. When there can be a fine blend between academics and athletics, then I feel you are in a proper situation. The individual also has to fit into a team atmosphere here. There are no big name stars. I think that players at big time schools get too many favors. Everything is handed to them. If the program ever does change, the force will have to come from the administration."

Kevin Kelly

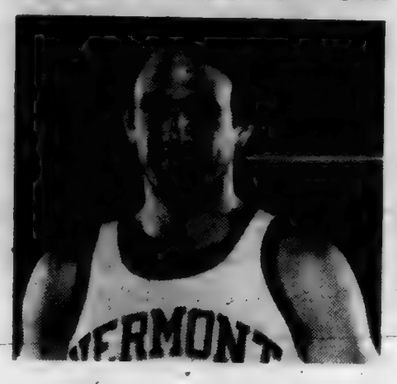
Any performer can attest to the fact that seniors will always look back and say that they wish they could have done particular things better. Kelly had a lot of trouble staying healthy while at Vermont. "My main improvement could have come in terms of physical conditioning. I grew very quickly, but some parts of my body did not mature along with it. In many cases I've had trouble staying at a certain weight. My physical condition should have been better than it was. As far as specifics go, I could have been a much better rebounder than I was."

When asked what his greatest moment was in basketball at UVM he quickly said it was the Ohio State game. "That win wiped out the frustration of the previous years when everyone said we would never beat a team of national prestige. Vermont gained national exposure from that win. That win represented the greatest moment I've ever had in sports."

All Things Wise and Wonderful



James Herriot
20% off
March 20-25
in stock cash only
BOOKSTACKS
Pine Street between Main & College
862-8513
Open Weeknights 8pm. (fri.-9)

Ever since Mark Sobolewski (Sobo) arrived at the University of Vermont four years ago, people have said that sometimes they haven't noticed his presence out on the basketball court. He is that type of player. Sobo did what he had to do in a very workman-like way. Sobo was never a player that showed a lot of flair. He got the job done though. Sobolewski's four years have been marked by the word everyone looks for in a solid athlete – consistency.

"I've had a lot of fun here at Vermont," said Sobo. "The team could have been more successful, but wins and losses often do not tell the whole story." When asked about his expectations when he arrived at UVM, he said, "I did not know what to expect but a lot of people did help me decide on Vermont. I talked with Coach Salzberg before I came here and he explained the situation to me. The program was young and growing and I decided I wanted to be a part of it."

Sobolewski had many positive things to say about Vermont's basketball community. "I've been very pleased with Vermont's program. I didn't expect us to be a power in just one year. I was very realistic about the situation that existed here. I did want to be on a good team and get a good education at the same time. The last two years our record has not been good, but the program continues to make positive progress in my opinion. The schedule continues to grow tougher every year. You have to take some lumps in order to get the recruits. Obviously UVM is not geared toward a big time athletic budget. Overall though, I feel that this University has maintained a good basketball program in my four years here."

Mark Sobolewski

In the same way that Sobo has been instrumental in victory he has shared in the defeats. "There were many games in which I could have scored more," said Sobo. "We had several players who were cast in the role of scorers. I felt that by playing good defense and hustling I was contributing a lot to the team effort."

Sobo has also had a senior year which was marred by physical problems. "I felt 100% in about half our games. In fact after we started off with a 4-0 record, the whole team was never completely healthy. I don't like to make excuses, but our overall team health did not do us much good this season."

Sobolewski concluded by expressing his feelings in regards to his life at Vermont and how he has grown as an individual. "I have loved Vermont because I have had time to do other things than just play basketball. The players can live where they want and can intermingle with a lot of people. I like being so free. I can deal with people so much better now. I used to be shy with people, but now I can talk with confidence to anyone. I've also gained a lot of confidence in school as well. I had a tough freshman year but I kept working hard. I am real confident of myself as a person right now. I think I proved that if you work hard things will go your way."

When Charlie Trapani stepped on the court for his freshman year he immediately showed the characteristics of a rugged rebounder and a hustling ball player. But when the future looked bright for Trapani, a terrible, unforeseen accident happened against Columbia in the first weeks of his sophomore year. He injured his knee which forced him onto the operating table. In every game since he had to wear a brace to stabilize the knee. His mobility and skills greatly diminished, but his hustle and desire were even more prevalent.

The NCAA gave Trapani a fifth year of eligibility which was probably the best thing that ever happened to Vermont basketball. His experience and leadership have helped many freshmen to mature more quickly than they might otherwise have. Trapani looked back on the UVM experience in favorable terms. "I felt like I really improved myself as a person as well as academically. As far as accomplishing all my goals in basketball I didn't come close."

Charlie Trapani

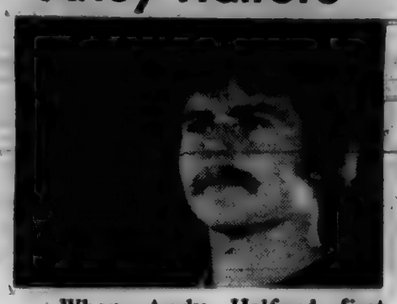
Trapani was also enticed to attend Vermont through many factors. "I knew it was a young program with a new coach and I could help the progress of the program. I also liked Vermont a lot with its outdoor activities like hunting and hiking. Another factor was the full scholarship that I received."

Trapani was hampered by his knee injury but basked in the glory of winning seasons in his sophomore and junior years. "Things did start out well when I came here, but in the last two years I have been displeased and disenchanted with the way we have played. We should have done better."



Trapani has been valuable to the team in areas not indicated in the boxscore. "I hustled and always went after the loose ball when the situation called for it." Trapani said, "I learned that scoring and statistics weren't everything to me."

Trapani was quick to point out the areas in which he could have improved. "I know my inside game could have been much better. I feel it did improve a little this year, but it should have been better."

Hockey Cats Bid Adieu To Six Seniors

By Paul Gardner

Andy Halford

When Andy Halford first skated out for the Cats in 1974, he was one of the brightest new lights on a team that was going places. Coach Cross says of Halford, "He has that ability to be a finesse player." That was immediately apparent to Vermont fans. Nobody could outskate him when it came to dodging and weaving defensemen. Around the net he is deadly. This year he had five short handed goals – his last on a unique feed from fellow senior Randy Koch in their last UVM game against BU two weeks ago.

Although it was his worst year in point production, it was his best effort in sweat and hard work. According to Cross: "I don't care what he scored for goals. He just played super." Used often on the point during power plays as well as against power plays, Halford drew a lot of attention when he was dashing about with the puck, but worked very hard all the time. He finished his Vermont career fifth on the UVM all-time scoring list.

Randy Koch

It was late in the game with UNH up 3-2 in a game that would have a lot to say about which team would gain home ice in the upcoming playoffs. The noisy Snively arena crowd was sure of the win with less than 20 seconds left, but as the puck sailed into the UNH end, the Wildcat's standout goalie Cap Raeder elected to chase it into the corner. Timmy O'Connell got the puck after a weird bounce sent it out of the way of Raeder. O'Connell slid it to Randy Koch fresh out of the penalty box and alone in front of the net to give Vermont an unexpected second life. Koch then picked up his third goal of the game on feed from Andy Halford. The 4-3 win left the Cats in third place for the playoffs.

Following up an opening act like that is not easy, and there haven't been many thrills to match it since. Randy is a hard nose player. "Randy's just a hard all-round player and if he plays professional hockey, he'll probably play wing because of his toughness," says Cross. Though Koch is not the great finesse player, he plays so hard and is such an all-round athlete, that when Wilkie and McAlduff were off for the defense for a few games, it was Koch who stepped in to play defense. His aggressiveness has cost at times and he leads Vermont in penalty minutes, but his style complemented the smooth skating of Gordie MacFarlane and the hustle of Jim Duffy on the line that was number one most of the year. With 165 points Randy is second on UVM's all-time list.

Bill McAlduff

McAlduff has always been a defenseman who had trouble getting the recognition he deserves. He is not a flashy skater. He has made some mistakes that hurt (unfortunately they were the visible kind). The best way to tell his real importance is to see how regularly Cross has played him. His four year accomplishments include 93 points, a large total for a defenseman. He has improved noticeably over those four years and has many times made brilliant plays on defense that were overlooked by the spectators because they didn't think he was capable. Providing a new dimension to the UVM power play when it was having troubles, McAlduff got his slapshot down this year and became one of the team leaders in power play goals. Like roommate Randy Koch, he is a hard nose player who has seen his share of penalty minutes, and is certainly not the type of player you push around much. According to McAlduff, one of the best parts of this year was the attitude on the team. "We just had a super bunch of guys this year."

Dave Otness

Oto, as Dave Otness is known around these parts, was a joint recruit of Bill Reber and coach Cross out of the hockey factory at the University of Wisconsin. An eye injury forced Dave to miss a couple of seasons and to wear the visor attached to his helmet which became a trade mark for Otness and a source of constant curiosity for fans. Dave was lucky to be playing at all after several operations to repair a detached retina. Once he chose Vermont it took a year of waiting to be able to play, because of the rules governing transfers. It then took another season to get into the form he showed as a freshman at Wisconsin. But after three years of waiting, he finally found his place on the ice with Vermont.

It's too bad Dave didn't get here sooner. The way he hustled this year makes one think the best might have been just around the corner.

Bill Reber

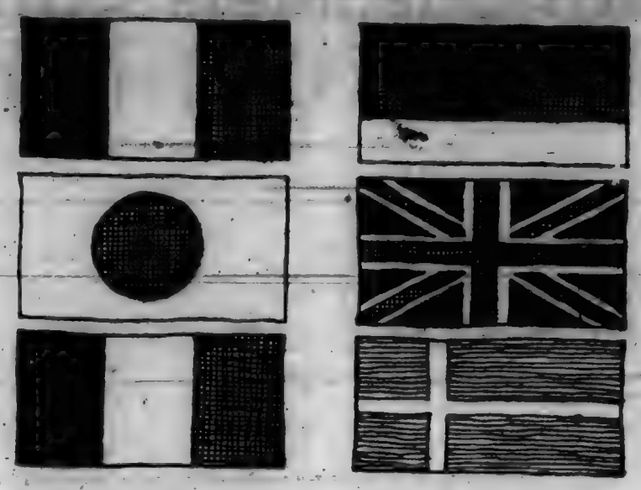
Reber is a demon on skates. Questioned as a scorer, Bill proved his worth as a skater this year as the whole Minnesota connection line caught on fire down the stretch. Freshman center Craig Homola, with talent and two hard skating seniors for wings, got 17 goals, many scored at the end of the year when the line really produced. Reber got the team's only hat trick when he tallied three against Holy Cross (a playoff team in Div. 2 east). Known principally for his smooth and fast skating, Reber has always been fun to watch.



In his freshman year, he, Andy Halford and Randy Koch formed about the best group of freshmen wings anywhere in the country. Coach Cross was looking for big things from Reber; they just didn't work out the way they were supposed to. If they had, that is had Reber been healthy the previous two years, Vermont probably would have done much better than it did. Reber is the perfect type of skater for Cross's system. It is no secret that Cross does not like dump and run tactics. His teams rely on execution and skating. To have his system work well it takes a skater or two like Bill to keep it running. Had it not been for the pneumonia and the following year of physical fatigue Reber's part would have been far greater than that of Vermont's most exciting skater.

Chuck Ross

If Reber represents potential that didn't get full expression, Ross represents potential that Cross felt might never be proven. After winning a starting berth with the team that went to the Garden, Ross all but disappeared from sight. First it was mono, then it was a knee. After surgery, it wasn't known whether Ross would even play this year. At the start of the season he was not even suiting up. The surprise came when, halfway through the year the knee seemed good enough to skate on, not only did he win his way back onto a depleted squad, he played standout defense and won high praise from Cross. "Chuck Ross did an unbelievable job. In fact if I had to pick an all-time UVM all-star team his defensive ability would make him a top nomination." Ross is not the dazzling type, but he's got a lot of guts. It must take some thing to come off a knee injury like that and then stand up at the blue line and calmly defy all forwards trying to get past him.

Get the right Foreign Car Part you need the first time

Worse than getting no part at all is getting a part that doesn't fit. That's why your Beck/Arnley expert makes sure he gives you the right foreign car part for your import the first time. So you don't have to come back for the same part a second time.

10% Student Discount

Imported Parts Center

3060 Williston Road

South Burlington, Vermont 05401

658-0707

beer THE ONLY wine

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE

IS IN WINOOSKI

Lowest Prices Largest Selection

kegs soda

Run into the vacation spirit

ACT TWO

97 Church St. 658-2050

Vermont Skiers Connect for Third Straight Undefeated Season

By Rich Chalmers

Head Coach Chip Lacasse and Alpine Coach Mike Schoenfeld have led the University of Vermont men's ski team to its sixteenth straight carnival victory, its third straight Eastern championship and its third year of competition without a regular season loss.

"This season has been a definite success," Lacasse commented. "The pressure was on us, and we felt it. People want to beat us badly. We probably have the longest winning streak of any team in the history of skiing. We were ranked second in the nation under Colorado and an NCAA victory would have really put the icing on the cake, but it didn't work that way."

The cross-country team had a number of serious problems this season. Mark Wagner, previously UVM's top runner, fell sick early in the season and had trouble recovering to his previous form. "Nobody could really tell me what I had," Wagner explained, "but it really hurt my skills. This summer I didn't train as heavily as I have in the past because I had a very demanding job. When I came back to school I tried to make up for lost time. The first few races went really well, but when I got sick, it laid me off for two weeks and I had to start all over. By that time, it was too late."

Last year, Wagner won four out of five carnivals and placed fifth in the NCAA's. This season he hoped to be in the top three or four in every carnival and place above third in the NCAA's. The potential was there, but Wagner's 27th place in the NCAA's this year showed his troubles.

Karsten Midtvedt has taken up many of the cross-country responsibilities that were previously on Wagner's shoulders. "Midtvedt has improved tremendously this year," commented a pleased Lacasse. "He has been a very pleasant surprise. He's made a steady progression from day one all the way to the NCAA's."

Mark Quinlan had viral bronchitis for most of the season and just began to pull out of it as the schedule drew to a close. Seven weeks on the sick list obviously had a serious effect on his abilities.

"Kent Karns' efforts secured the Dartmouth and UVM carnivals for us," Lacasse explained. "He took the responsibility very well under heavy pressure."

Doug Bruce has been an extremely steady alpine skier for UVM. Lacasse, among others, considers him to be one of the top racers in the country. He twisted his knee and was out for the UVM carnival, but was able to compete at Dartmouth while still injured. A broken binding robbed him of a possible win in the NCAA's and he was forced to settle for fifth.

Scott Light is one of the most consistent alpine skiers in the country. He has never placed below third in regular season competition and has won every combined alpine Carnival title this year. "He's had the best season any skier has had here at UVM," Lacasse stated.

Jerry McNealus also ranks within the top skiers in the United States. "He made amazing turnaround after the UVM carnival," said Coach Schoenfeld. "He won the giant slalom and placed in the top ten in the slalom at Dartmouth. He has probably more natural talent than any other UVM skier, especially when the course gets rutty and tough." He changed his technique this year and it isn't quite engrained in him yet. "He's the Bread and Butter man," added Lacasse. "He has the potential to win all the races he enters."

"We had an almost faultless year in the Alpine until the NCAA's," Coach Schoenfeld commented. "We really did outstandingly at Dartmouth, sweeping the giant slalom. Light's performances were flawless until the NCAA's."

"Kare Herje has done extremely well," Lacasse added. "He gets right in there and wins the jumping events. Roger Hoden had an advantage on long hills, but he's turned out to be a great small hill jumper too."

This is the third straight year UVM has been undefeated during the season but has come up empty handed in the NCAA competition. "Everyone's given a lot of thought to our NCAA problems," Wagner commented. "We didn't have the team this year that we had in the past and that was good for us because we had to work really hard to win all the carnivals. So everyone was used to trying our hardest and we felt this was going to be the year. There were a lot of really good skiers in the NCAA's," said Wagner. "I think we have the best skiers and the best team, but it's something you have to prove. Some teams can put it all together, but it just wasn't our day."

Looking ahead, Light commented, "It looks like we're going to have a lot of good racers next season. Schoenfeld attracts a lot of good alpine skiers to Vermont. I'm confident we'll dominate next year."

The loss of Kent Belden, Larson, and Lambert, among others, will hurt the team heavily for next year, but recruiting looks good. In addition, UVM's Calvin Erdman and Rich Wright are members of the team who haven't competed in the carnivals. "They ski well enough to make any other team in the country," said Schoenfeld.

So next season is a matter of waiting and training. One thing is for sure, the pressure will be on.

Smooth landing at the Middlebury Carnival

SPRING VACATION SPECIALS

Oil & Filter Change

$8.88

Tires

20% Discount

with U.V.M. ID

Tune-Ups

Labor on 8 Cylinder $18.75
Labor on 4&6 Cylinder $12.50
Plus Parts

20% Discount on Parts

with U.V.M. ID

Expires 3-31-78

Gordie's University Texaco

860 Williston Rd. South Burlington 862-7535

Providence Shocks BU in Semi-finals

ECAC Hockey Playoffs Feature Unprecedented Upsets

By Jim Fletcher

The results of last week's ECAC playoff games were unprecedented. For the first time in history, there were three and nearly four upsets in the quarterfinal round.

The biggest surprise was No. 6 Brown's 6-2 win at No. 3 Clarkson. Clarkson was upset by St. Lawrence in their last regular season game 9-4 losing their momentum. On that same night, Princeton avenged an earlier last minute loss to No. 2 Cornell by beating the Big Red 5-4 in o.t., ending their 14 game winning streak. Tuesday, No. 7 Providence, the only team to leave Cornell without losing, went back and shocked the defenseless Big Red 8-5. For the first time in 13 years, Cornell would not go to Boston Garden, the site of the final. It was the Friars' first playoff win since capturing first prize in 1964.

After losing to Providence 4-0 on March 3rd, Boston College appeared to be headed for an eighth place seeding and another one goal quarterfinal loss to BU. The Eagles rebounded, beating UNH 4-2 to get the No. 5 seeding before ending No. 4 RPI's seven game winning streak with a 7-6 o.t. playoff victory. It was the first time RPI had a home ice for the first round, and nearly 5000 fans showed their support.

In the other quarterfinal round, No. 1 BU beat No. 8 UNH in overtime 6-5. UNH has had terrible luck against BU in the last three years. The perfect example comes from the NCAA consolation game last year. UNH took a 5-1 lead and lost 6-5 when Rick Meagher scored with 49 seconds left.

In the semifinals, BC defeated Brown 6-4 and then Providence did it again, beating BU 5-1 (including an empty netter) The Friar win ended the Terriers' thirteen game playoff winning streak. It was BU's first loss since January 30, 1976 when Vermont goals from Gordie MacFarlane, John Glynne, Michel Lebeau and two from Randy Koch beat the Terriers 5-1.

Thus, for only the second time since 1966, neither BU nor Cornell would be ECAC champions, and for the first time ever, the champion would come from the second four. BU beat Brown 8-4 in the consolation game.

In the championship, it was Providence vs. BC in a battle of teams without Canadian players. When it was over, BC, despite being outshot 39-30, had its first championship since 1965, winning 4-2.

This situation left a question mark as to who would join BC in the NCAA Tournament. A five man committee voted that Providence should play BU again to determine the entry.

The runnerup doesn't receive an automatic bid because the ECAC Tournament is sometimes inconclusive in determining the 2nd and 3rd place teams. This situation last arose in 1975 when both No. 1 Harvard and No. 3 UVM lost to BU and beat Cornell. Based on the tournament, one couldn't say that the championship loser (Harvard) was any better than the consolation winner (UVM). In fact the comparative scores favored UVM. A decision had to be made and the committee sent Harvard to NCAA's based on their regular season record.

In this year's tournament, however, the championship loser (Providence) defeated the consolation winner (BU) producing a clear cut 1-2-3-4. BC beat PC, who beat BU who beat Brown who also lost to BC. There is a definite distinction between the championship loser and the consolation winner and therefore no need for a committee decision. The Terriers had their chance but were convincingly beaten. BU had a great season, but so did the Friars. After they recovered from early injury problems, they finished the season 11-3-2 and beat the two favorites in the playoffs. Theoretically then, RPI should play Providence in a playoff, not BU. RPI gave BC the toughest time in their three games, losing in overtime. If the pairings had been different, RPI might have won two games and lost to BC in the finals. The tournament did not give an RPI–Providence comparison, but it did give one between BU and Providence. The Friars finished on top.

I predict that Providence will win again. My prediction record during the regular season (excluding UVM games) was 120-47-5 (.712) with 12 scores exactly right. In the playoffs I predicted that Providence would get an empty net goal and beat BU, BU would beat Brown and beat UNH 6-5. All those things happened. I got the five other games wrong. My standings prediction looked very good with two weeks left in certain departments (e.g. RPI and Providence neck and neck for the number eight spot), but late season action disrupted the third to 15th place order and the coaches' poll beat me badly.

Bowling Green won the CCHA championship sweeping No. 4 Ohio St. in the semi-finals and demolishing No. 2 St. Louis in the finals 3-1 and 10-2. St. Louis earlier swept No 3 Northern Michigan in the semifinal round. Lake Superior St. finished fifth and Western Michigan was sixth and last at 7-12-1.

In the WCHA quarterfinals, No. 1 Denver beat No. 8 Notre Dame 6-6, 7-1. No. 2 Wisconsin swept Minnesota-Duluth 9-2, 5-4. No. 3 Michigan Tech barely beat No. 6 North Dakota 2-2, 3-2 ot. And in the only upset, No. 5 Colorado College beat No. 4 Minnesota 3-3, 5-4. Minnesota got an upset in the first round last year. Michigan finished ninth after being NCAA runner-up last season. Michigan St. was tenth and last.

In the semifinals held yesterday and Tuesday, Colorado visited Denver while Mich. Tech visited Wisconsin. If Denver (ineligible for NCAA's) beat Colorado, then the winner of the MT–Wisc. matchup will play the winner of Sunday's Providence–BU playoff on March 23 in the NCAA first round. The loser of the MT–Wisc. series would play Bowling Green Saturday or Sunday for the right to meet BC on March 24. If Colorado upsets Denver then they will play BG and the winner of the MT-Wisc. series will play PC or BU. The NCAA consolation and championship will be held March 25. BG could meet PC in the final. They played on November 2nd and BG won 5-4. Predictions: DU over CC, Wisc over MT, BG over MT, PC 5 BU 4, PC over Wisc., BG over BC by 1, and BG over PC for the national championship – the first ever for a CCHA team, unless the Eastern teams get some long overdue luck. Remember, if BG or BC wins the tourney, then UVM will have beaten the national champion.

Randy Koch fires off a shot against Clarkson Photo by Huse

LAST CHANCE TO BUY HATHAWAY FOR HER

★Stock is Limited

Buy Now and Save

Retail $22-26

Factory Prices $10-12

A Spectacular Sale For Ladies

$8 ea. or 3 for $18

Hathaway Factory Outlet

153 Cherry St. Downtown

Open Friday until 9:00 864-4828

TPI EXPRESS

24 MAIN ST. WINOOSKI

655-3005 655-0977

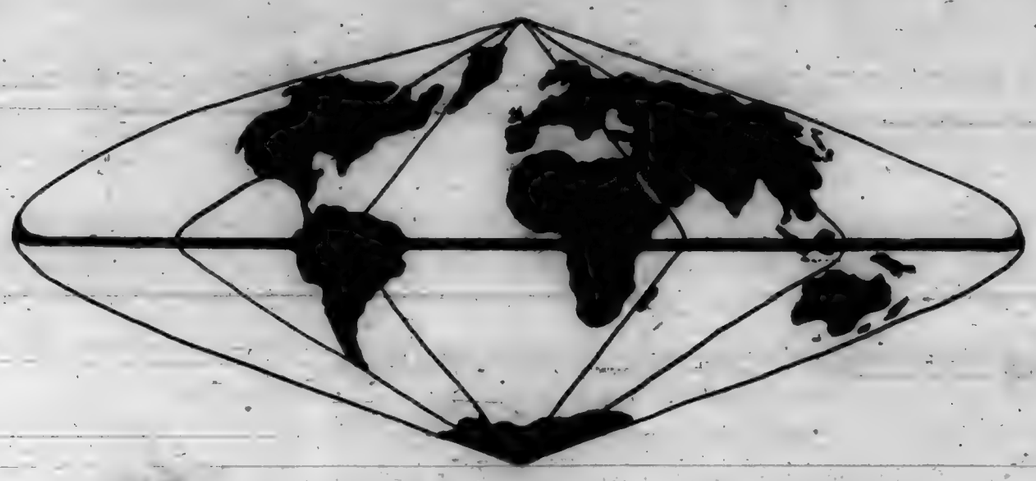
... FAST, FREE DELIVERY!

also 23 Park St. Essex Jct. 879-6333

Try Our Whole Wheat Pizza

10 cent Pitchers

with Purchase of One Large Pizza (Winooski Store Only)



$1 off any large itemed pizza

one coupon per pizza expires 3-30-78

$1 off any large itemed pizza

one coupon per pizza expires 3-30-78

Poetry & Essay Contest

Topic: World Power

First Prize: $25.00

Entries Due April 3-5

For More Information Call Worldwide X4084 or at Billings Desk

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

SPORTS SCENE

By Mark Kevorkian

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps knows the score. "You can forget about regular season records," Phelps says of the NCAA playoffs, "because they don't matter now. Any team can beat any other. Aside from a team's ability, the most important factors are momentum and ability. Who knows, we could have Fullerton State and Miami of Ohio in the finals."

Neither Cal-State Fullerton nor Miami of Ohio will probably play in the NCAA finals at St. Louis on March 27, but both teams scored big upsets in the regional playoffs held over the weekend. Although widely unknown and certainly unranked, Fullerton State and Miami of Ohio are the kind of teams which make the NCAA playoffs the most exciting basketball around. Fullerton State beat New Mexico, the nation's highest scoring squad and Miami of Ohio topped Marquette, last year's national champ. Both wins (and losses) were unexpected, but are further evidence that anything is possible in the topsy-turvy playoffs. A region-by-region rundown follows:

MIDEAST REGIONAL

Out of the four games played in this regional, two were upsets. Western Kentucky knocked off Syracuse in overtime 87-86 in one, and Miami of Ohio topped Marquette in overtime 84-81 in the other. The "expected" winners fared better in the other games. Michigan State beat Providence easily 77-63 and Kentucky scored an 85-76 win over pesty Florida State. In the semi-finals of this regional, Michigan State plays Western Kentucky and Miami of Ohio faces Kentucky.

Michigan State is led by freshman Ervin Johnson, who was third in the Big Ten in rebounds, sixth in scoring and first in assists. His nickname: "Magic," what else? The Spartans should be too quick for Western Kentucky and move into the regional finals. In the other game, Kentucky should end the season for Miami of Ohio and win the regional finals too.

MIDWEST REGIONAL

Upsets are likely, but no one is likely to upset Notre Dame, least of all Utah, which faces the Irish this week. Notre Dame demolished Houston 100-77 in the first round behind center Bill Lambeer and a host of others. The Irish may have the most functional lineup in the country – all the parts fit just right. Utah beat Missouri in double overtime 86-79 but the Utes will probably find the masses of Notre Dame too tough to handle. Also, the game is this Thursday – That's St. Patrick's Day.

In the other game in this regional semi-final Depaul will face Louisville. Depaul beat Creighton 80-78 with a furious second-half comeback after trailing 48-34 at halftime. Center Dave Corzine is the top player for Depaul, and one of the best in the country for that matter.

Louisville beat St. John's 76-68 on Sunday to move into the semi-finals. Darrell Griffith (21 points) and Larry Williams (25) led the way in that game. Look for Louisville to beat DePaul, but lose to Notre Dame in the finals.

EAST REGIONAL

Picking a winner from the remaining teams here (Penn, Duke, Villanova and Indiana) isn't easy. Duke was expected to stroll past Rhode Island but barely came away with victory. The Blue Devils needed two Mike Gminsky free throws with seventeen seconds left to top Rhode Island 63-62. Duke won't find the going any easier against Penn, which beat St. Bonaventure 92-83 behind Kevin McDonald's thirty-seven points. McDonald is an all or nothing player – either he does or he doesn't – and could lead Penn past Duke, but Duke will probably win.

Indiana faces Villanova in the other semi-final. The Hoosiers beat Furman 63-62, while Villanova topped LaSalle 103-97 in the first round. A shot in the dark, I pick Indiana to win over Villanova and Duke to take the Easter championship.

WEST REGIONAL

It's showdown time in Alberquerque when UCLA faces Arkansas this week. Hot-shooting guards Roy Hamilton and Raymond Townsend led UCLA past Kansas 83-76 in the first round. Hamilton and Townsend are a devastating pair of back court bomb squaders for the Bruins but get a little itchy with their trigger fingers at times.

Forward David Greenwood is the latest in the never-ending parade of UCLA do-everything forwards. Arkansas is led by three 6'4" dynamoes – Ron Brewer, Sydney Moncreif and Marvin Delph, who can do it from anywhere, anyhow. The Razorbacks beat Weber State easily 72-53 to move into the semi-finals but aren't likely to beat UCLA.

San Francisco, the winner over North Carolina 68-64, will face Fullerton State, which upset New Mexico 90-85, in the other semi-final. Behind Center Bill Cartwright and forward Alan Hardy, the Dons should handle Fullerton State but won't beat UCLA in the final.

FINAL FOUR

If the whole ball of wax does indeed boil down to Kentucky, Notre Dame, Duke and UCLA (and I'm not so sure it will) I pick UCLA to win all those NCAA marbles.

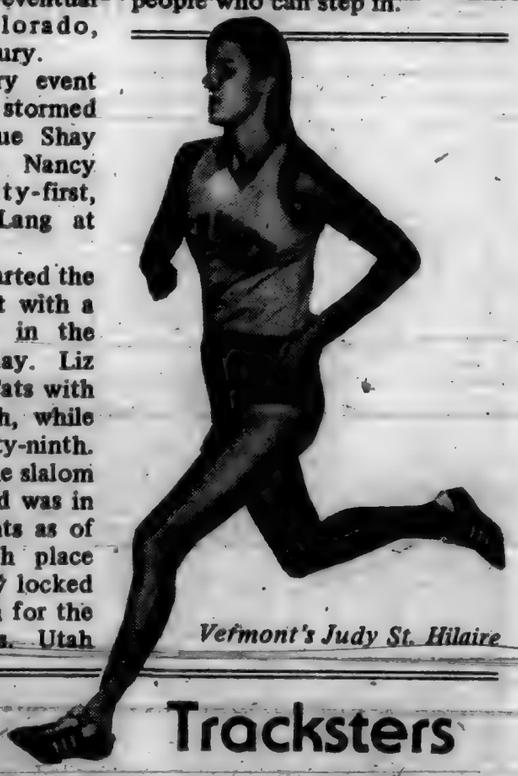
Womens Skiers Capture Fourth In Nationals

By Steve Larose

High altitudes and a dangerous course posed problems for the University of Vermont women's ski team, but clutch performances by the quartet of Gail Lebaron, Janet Reynolds, Sue Shay and Nancy Dickson enabled UVM to place fourth in the National Collegiate Women's Ski Championships held this past weekend in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

A thin oxygen atmosphere characteristic of the Rockies severely hindered eastern contenders, along with a steep course that caused many skiers to fall. But according to Coach Perry Bland "the girls came through, even with a lot of pressure on them."

Gail Lebaron seized a tie for eleventh in Thursday's giant slalom. Melissa Papworth finished fourteenth while Lisa Morrison took twenty-eighth for the Cats. The giant slalom performance boosted Vermont to a fifth place standing after one event, trailing eventual winner Utah, Colorado, Dartmouth and Middlebury.



In the cross-country event on Thursday, Reynolds stormed to thirteenth, while Sue Shay captured fourteenth. Nancy Dickson took twenty-first, followed by Mimi Lang at thirty-second.

Melissa Papworth started the ball rolling for Vermont with a thirteenth place finish in the slalom event on Friday. Liz Wormer also paced the Cats with a twentieth place finish, while Gail Lebaron took twenty-ninth. Vermont took fifth in the slalom with seventy points, and was in fourth with 153.5 points as of Friday. Vermont's sixth place finishes in the 4x5 relay locked up a fourth place finish for the Cats at 199.5 points. Utah totaled 289, Middlebury had 260, and Dartmouth racked up 247.

Coach Bland further commented "I was pleased by our performance. We lost two people to disqualifications, so the pressure was on for the other skiers to finish. In the giant slalom we did a super job as Gail Lebaron was our highest finishing performer. Melissa Papworth also was very reliable."

In analyzing the cross-country performance Bland said "Janet Reynolds came through with some stamina in the high altitude. People around her were passing out. Also making a strong showing were Sue Shay and Nancy Dickson. Our relay team of Shay, Amy Lang and Dickson really smoked. We had a fast last leg and almost beat Dartmouth. Shay stood out in both events." Bland also mentioned that Vermont had a balance of power between individual events. He lamented that the tournament was not well run and the alpine course was as hazardous as jumping over a bed of spikes. "We took a lot of risks and our skiers did well to just finish."

Bland then discussed the ski team's overall performance this year. "We had a lot of improvement. Our alpine team is young, but reliable. Our cross-country team had only one returning skier, but the freshmen came along fast. It was kind of a let down not to be able to do our best at the nationals because of factors beyond our control, but next year looks better. Also both our alpine and cross-country teams are evenly matched, so if someone is unable to compete, we have other people who can step in."

Vermont's Judy St. Hilaire

Women Tracksters Race to Second in N.E.'s

By Barbara Luneau

The University of Vermont Women's Track team finished tenth overall and second in New England out of the twenty-six teams that competed in the Eastern Championship this past week-end at Tufts University in Medford, Mass.

Janet Terp won the Pentathalon with 3434 points which qualified her for the Nationals. She competed against four other entrants and took first in the shotput with a throw of 30'7", first in the high jump clearing 5'4", second in the 880 yd. run, tied for third in the long jump, and third in the hurdles.

Judi St. Hilaire also had a spectacular performance when she ran a 4:59.2 mile good enough for fifth place. Penn State's Kathy Mills won the event in record time, 4 min. 50.3 seconds. She also won the two mile. Vermont's Amy Bouchard placed seventh in the two mile with a personal best time of 11 min. 17 sec. Robin Snyder, also of Vermont, won her heat of the two mile with a personal best time of 11 min. 35 sec.

Marie Dowling, Carol Marinelli, Lori Dane, and Judi St. Hilair, represented Vermont in the 880 relay. Lori Dane participated in the hurdles and long jump while Deja Thorton and Barb Luneau hurled the shot put for the Cats.

JOHNSON STATE COLLEGE

'78 SUMMER SEMESTER

JUNE 19 – JUNE 23, 1978
Learning Disabilities: Educational and Neurological Implications

JUNE 19 – JUNE 30, 1978
Individualizing Classroom Instruction, Language & Reading, Strategies for Teaching in Special Education, Metric Workshop.

JUNE 19 – JULY 7, 1978
Vermont Landscape, Introductory Photography, Piano Music of Chopin & Liszt.

JUNE 19 – JULY 28, 1978
Ceramics I & III, Women in Literature, Music Theory I, Blues People, Reading Clinic, Child Development, Learning Theory in Education, Foundations of Education, Models of Teaching, School Administration and the Law, Speech, Hearing and Language: Problems of School Children, Consumer Economics, Socio-Economic Impact Analysis of Rural Resources, Women in U.S. History, Introduction to Psychology I, Introduction to Psychology II, Alternate Psychologies, Introduction to Sociology, Basic Human Sexuality, Egypt of the Pharaohs, Chemistry, Energy and the Environment, Basic Math.

JULY 10 – JULY 28, 1978
The Figure in the Natural Setting, Advance Photography, Printmaking.

JULY 30 – AUGUST 7, 1978
Learning Disabilities: Educational and Neurological Implications.

Vermont Resident $35 credit
Non Resident $50 credit
+ Application fees

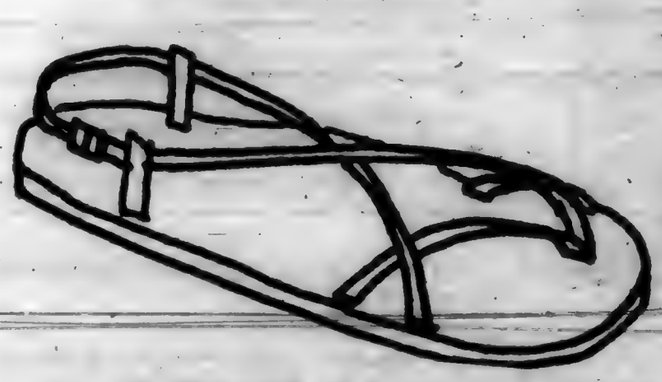
SPECIAL WORKSHOPS

STERLING MOUNTAIN DANCE WORKSHOP
June 17 – July 28
Under the direction of Erin Martin and Kei Takei
Jose Limon Technique. Introductory & advanced. Modern Dance Technique, Composition, Improvisation, Body Awareness, Jazz, Performance-Acting for Dancers, Ballet

GREEN MOUNTAIN WRITERS WORKSHOP
July 9–22
Fiction: George Garrett. Plays: John Ford Noonan. Poetry: W. S. DiPiero. Form of Fiction and Poetry: Roger Rath. Distinguished Readers

THE ORPHEUS PIANO WORKSHOP
June 19 – July 7
Under the combined direction of Juilliard trained artist-teachers: Suan Halligan, Genaro Santoro, Samuel Viviano. Private lessons. Master classes.

THE BABCOCK NATURE PRESERVE SUMMER PROGRAM
June 5–16 – Field Ornithology
June 19–30 – Green Mountains Natural History. Physicochemical Evaluation of Aquatic Environments
July 3–14 – Ecology of Freshwater Invertebrates
August 7–18 – Introduction to Aquatic Plants



Consult brochure or catalog for workshop's special costs.

FOR MORE INFORMATION AND APPLICATION MATERIALS WRITE TO SUMMER SEMESTER
BOX A-51
JOHNSON STATE COLLEGE
JOHNSON, VT 05656
OR PHONE
802 635 2356 Ext 314

Bosch Castrol
Parts For Most Foreign Cars
Super Sprint Exhaust
(With Lifetime Warrenty)
Lucas NGK
IMPORTED CAR PARTS
OF VERMONT
75 North St. Burlington, Vt. 864-0238

ROAD APPLE
And Beyond
Available at:
- Bailey's
- Upstairs Records
- Recordsmith
- Vt. Book Shop

Vacation Bound?

Handmade with formed arches.
Women $24.
Men $26.
Go With Happy Feet!
SUNDANCE
A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH ST. • BURLINGTON • OPPOSITE WOOLWORTH'S

Sets Two School Records

Levy Powers Swimmers to 13th in N.E.

Steve Levy set two school records as the University of Vermont's Men's swim team captured 13th place in the New England Championships, held last week in Springfield, Mass.

Since early September the Vermont swimmers have been preparing for the championships by swimming over 6,000 yards a day (nearly 4 miles) in Forbush pool. The training also included a two week stay at the University of Miami Fla., where the AquaCats swam twice a day accumulating more than 12,000 yards.

On the initial day of competition, the 800 freestyle relay team of Steven Levy, Dave Hammer, Dave Platow and Mark Kinne put the AquaCats on the right track, when each individual in the relay recorded his best time ever. The final time set a new school record and placed Vermont 13th in a field of over 30 teams.

Vermont set four school records and a freshman record on the second day, with every member on the team racking up his best time ever. Levy led the way by setting two school records. He broke his own school records by going 2:02.6 in the 200 Individual Medley (old mark 2:04.3) and then he broke his own school record in the 200 backstroke by recording a time of 2:04.5 (his old mark was 2:05.2) Levy was ranked sixth and tenth respectively in these events.

Mark Kinne smashed his own school recordof 2:06.2 by dropping more than three seconds and taking 10th in New England with a time of 2:02.6.

Still more records fell as senior Allan Kopel and freshman Andy Daniels led the way in the 200 breaststroke. The experienced Kopel broke a school record with a time of 2:22.8, crushing the old mark of 2:27.2 set by Mike Delaney. Following Kopel's example, Daniels improved his own freshman record of 2:27.8 by dropping it down to a 2:26.1.

In addition to the 800 free relay, the other Vermont relays also performed well. In the 400 medley relay (Back, Breast, Fly and Free) Vermont's team of Levy 56.7, Daniels 104.3, Kinne 53.8, and Kirkwood 50.2 qualified tenth, but fell to twelfth in the finals. In the four by 100 free relay Dave Platow (49.8), Dave Hammer (49.2), Capt. Peter Galhaar (48.8) and Ron Kirkwood (49.5) captured tenth place.

Adding to the remarkable Vermont showing were Kinne, in the 100 butterfly, who took 11th with a time of 54.5. Also in the 100 fly fine performances by John Henriguer, 55.5, and Kym Berman, 56.0, were clocked. In the 200 fly Berman did a 2:08.4 while Henrigual came home with 2:09.0.

In the 100 freestyle outstanding times were recorded by Dave Platow (79.9), Ron Kirkwood (49.5), Dave Hamer (50.4), Peter Gelhaar (50.5), Mark Haun (52.2), and Sam Sfuctski (53.9).

In the 200 breaststroke Kopel, Daniels and Dave Road led the way. In the 100 breaststroke Daniels came in with 1:04.7 followed by Kopel 1:07.2 and Rood in 1:08.5. Finally in the 200 IM Platow, 2:07.5, and Kym Berman, 2:11.0, came on strong.

Coach Leggett later remarked, "I knew the team would perform well, despite the pressure. Our record of four wins and five losses is not a true indicator as two of the losses were deaded by no more than three points." Leggett concluded by stating, "Our aim is for respectability in New England swimming. I feel we proved ourselves in the New Englands. The team did not let up, despite our mediocre win-loss record."

Vermont Women's Basketball B-Team wins St. Michaels' Tournament

By Grace Christie

The University of Vermont women's basketball B-team, coached by Jennifer Oakes, and captained by Donna Morale and Nancy Lee, topped off their season by capturing first place in the St. Michael's basketball tournament held March 4th and 5th.

In the first round of the tournament UVM met Norwich University in a tough battle which UVM won 55-47. The top three scorers for Vermont were Pat Spicer (fourteen points), Linda Johnson (thirteen points), and Karen Smith with twelve points. UVM met Lyndon State in the second round of competition. Although Lyndon is a strong team, Vermont managed to stay in control of the game to win 75-70. Leading scorers for Vermont were Grace Christie (eighteen points), Pat Spicer (sixteen points), and Donna Morale with thirteen points.

Johnson State, which UVM had met and defeated twice during regular season play, was the Cats' opponents in the final game. Throughout the season Johnson has steadily improved, and nearly defeated UVM in their second encounter. In the first half UVM had trouble in putting together a steady attack but managed to stay even with Johnson in a 24-24 halftime tie. The second half was all Vermont's. The Cats regrouped and broke out in front of Johnson, leading by as much as twenty points during one point in the half. The final score was 63-46, thus capturing first place and leaving the team with a 9-3 season. Top scorer for the Cats was Karen Smith with fourteen points. Donna Morale had thirteen points, and Annette Buergeron added twelve points.

Two members of the Vermont squad were recognized for outstanding tournament play. Pat Spicer was elected to the All-Tournament team, and Karen Smith was awarded Most Valuable Player.

Although scoring may be an important aspect of winning, there are other ingredients to be considered in the making of a winning team. Important ingredients include rebounding, passing, defense and most important, cooperation in the form of teamwork. Performing these functions were Holly Eager, Grace Elzinga, Nancy Lee and Valerie Parks.

Vermont Varsity Women B-Ballers on the offensive Photo by Huse

Cross Remains Optimistic

Continued from page 37

go wrong with him physically, but he hung in there and played outstandingly his last half year. He's one of the finest defensive linemen that has ever played here. He played within his limitations and it helped him tremendously."

Louis Cote, on the other hand, is an aggressive defenseman capable of making things happen. Playing thirty-five minutes a game, however, made him readjust his strategy to less of a rush attack to more of a cautious game. "He did much better waiting for the opportunity than trying to create it," Cross said.

Rogie Mallette was the first French Canadian player to break the ice and play for Vermont. Since then, UVM has come to rely more and more on a ready and waiting supply of skilled hockey players in southern Quebec. The question is who's going to get them: UVM or its competitors. Boston presents a continuous threat to UVM recruiting with Harvard, BC, BU, Northeastern, Providence and Brown all in the general area. "I think we can outshadow them," Cross said, referring to some of Quebec's player's wishes to stay far up north.

"As far as it looks now," Cross concluded, "recruiting is looking good and we should have a good squad next year."

Gymnasts Complete First Season

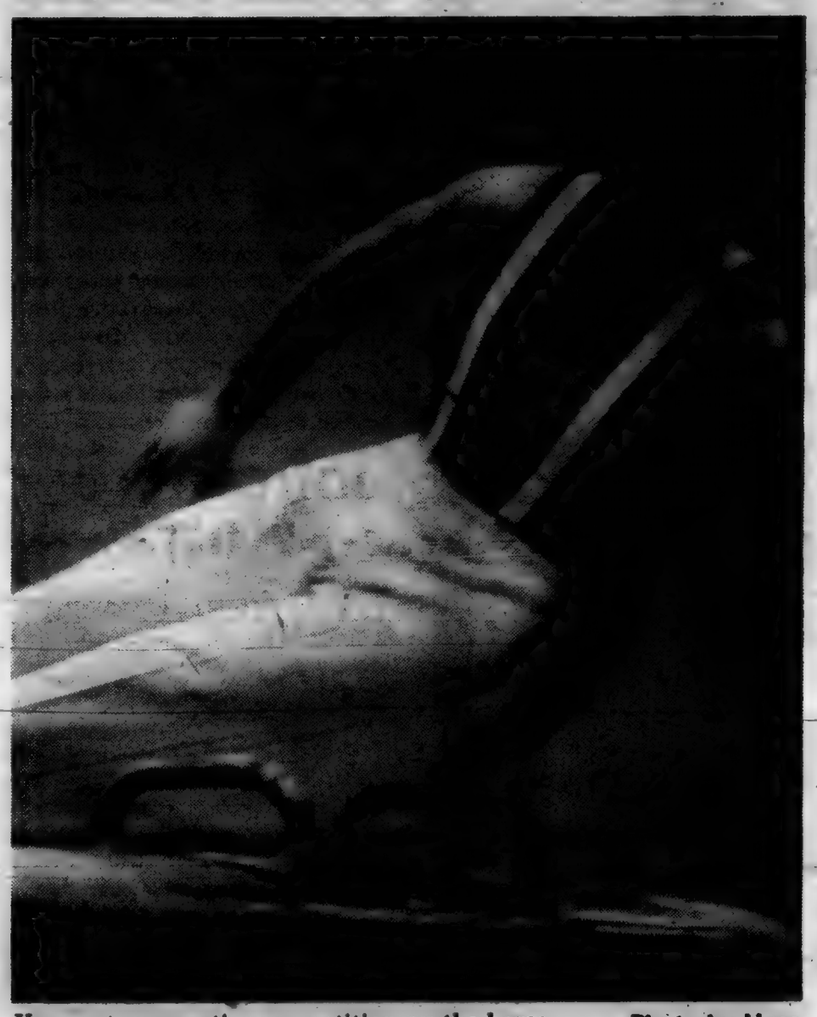
The University of Vermont men's gymnastics team completed its first official varsity season this year with a record of 2-2 in the North East and 3-4 overall.



Coach Tom Dunkley was impressed with the success of the team's first season. "Despite numerous injuries, everyone stuck to it and we worked to our maximum."

Dunkley recruited many of his gymnasts from the UVM gymnastics club he has headed since 1967. "Injuries did hurt us," he said. "We have twelve men but only half that number competed at times. We had two men in casts and two on crutches. Only one man performed throughout the season without visiting the infirmary."

Hans Nilsson has been a crucial member of the team. "He started out strongly, wavered, and then finished strongly again. He produced for us every meet and in the all-around event remained undefeated all season." Dunkley continued, "Co-captain Mark Ricard was undoubtedly our most improved gymnast. He put in a lot of work and pulled his score up by an impressive ten points. If everyone had that drive, then we'd be in good shape." Although hampered by wrist injuries, co-captain Bill Ahern also made an important contribution.

There is a great deal of hope for next season. Steve Rancor, out all this year on crutches, should be pushing close to Nilsson next season. "It's encouraging," Dunkley added. "We have tentative prospects, but as it is, we have to cross our fingers and hope. The mortality rate of prospects is high, though, because UVM gives no gymnastics scholarships and it takes a higher amount of academic capability to get in here."

UVM gymnastics has been quite successful when compared to a number of other schools. Plymouth, Plattsburgh and UNH teams have all folded, and the Cats placed above MIT and Southern Connecticut. "The team has held up well despite little backing by the university. We won't win the New Englands, but we'll always be there competing."

Vermont gymnastics competition on the horse Photo by Huse

Women Icers Destroy Engineers

By Melissa Brown

The University of Vermont women's ice hockey team ended their season on a winning note defeating the sluggish and less skilled RPI Engineers 6-1.

The game was never close as UVM outshot RPI 39-3. For this reason the Catamounts employed fourteen forwards instead of the usual three lines.

The win put UVM at 8-8-2 overall. The Cats should be in good shape next season as they will have 17 returning players. There has also been word that several incoming freshmen have inquired at the Physical Education Department about the women's ice hockey program.

SEASON REVIEW

Looking back over the season, the first half was the most successful when UVM won or tied five of their first six games. However, following the Christmas break, the players returned without having played hockey since the first week of December, and the lack of practice showed as the Cats lost their next five games. The final weeks of the season were more optimistic with four wins, two losses and one tie, including second place in the first Dartmouth invitational tournament. Goalie Ann Bartlett had an exceptional season allowing 51 goals in 18 games and making 486 saves for a 2.85 goals against average. Several hockey coaches commented on Bartlett's talent and finesse throughout the season.

High scorers for the team come primarily from the first two lines. Paula Priestley led the team with nine goals and five assists, and her left wing Cathy Sagaser had five goals and nine assists. Right wing Doris Bonner added five goals and three assists. Other high scorers included center Lynn Rupe, who missed eight games due to a back injury, with nine points, five goals, four assists; Sara Dougherty, eight points, seven goals, one assist; and Kim Nalen, seven points, four goals, three assists. In addition Wendy Pirtle played on the second line in place of Rupe and added four assists. The third line of Carmen Gaudreau, Ellen Gray and Melissa Brown was very effective in the latter five games adding eight additional points.

The three defensive tandems of Bonnie Barnhart and Amy Tutwiler, Pamela Cheeseman and Joy Veronneau, Casey Nolen and Margot Huber were many times the highlight of a game with their excellent skating and passing abilities. The defense has not been coached as a scoring unit and consequently their efforts were rewarded more by keeping goals out of their own net rather than by their own scoring. Bonnie Barnhart led the defense with one goal and four assists.

In scoring by periods, for and against, UVM was about even offensively. They scored 15 goals overall in the first and third periods and 14 in the second. The opponents were most devastating in the second period scoring 24 goals. The third period was the best defensively allowing just 11 goals for the season. The first period had 17 against.

227 Main St.

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP

XC RENTAL SALE

Fri. & Sat. March 17 & 18

| Rental Boots | Rental Skis | Rental Poles |
|---|---|---|
| $15.00 | $20-$40 | $5.00 |

quantities limited

X-C Boots 20% off

X-C Skis 30% off

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP

863-5581
227 Main St.
Burlington

Hours
Mon.-Fri. 9-9
Sat. 9-6

pagocycle

BICYCLES

We are the Burlington area's only authorized Motobecane & Univega dealers. Our sales people can help you find the right bike for you.

PARTS & ACCESSORIES

We stock parts for all kinds of bikes from manufacturers such as Shimano, Campagnolo, Suntour, Weinmann, and others.

SERVICE

Our guaranteed service is fast & efficient. If you need a tire fixed or a complete overhaul, we can do it right, the first time.

pagocycle
227 Main St.
Burlington
864-6878

HOURS
Mon.-Fri. 9-9
Sat. 9-6

·WATERBEDS
·FURNITURE

Emerald City of Oz, Ltd.
71 St. Paul St. Burlington, Vermont, 05401
862-4298

northern Vermont's complete waterbed headquarters!

HIFI... VERY, VERY CHEAP.

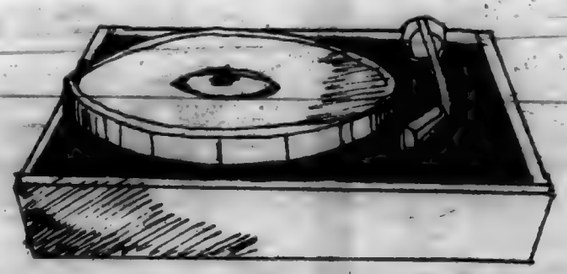
Here's your chance to pick up a real hi-fi bargain! We've accumulated quite an assortment of used and demo receivers, turntables, speakers, and other hi-fi equipment... all in prime condition... and all selling this week at Tech Hifi for fantastically low prices. Brands like Sansui... Nikko... Phillips... Advent... Tandberg... and prices starting from $35. Most of these units carry our own parts and labor warranty, so you really can't go wrong. Here are some examples of the type of equipment you'll find (the price in parenthesis is the original price):



Nikko 3035 receiver ($250) — $169

Large Advent speakers ($242) — $159

Sansui AU101 amp ($130) — $79

Tandberg 1055 receiver, demo, one of the best! ($699) — $460

BSR automatic turntable ($69) — $35

TECH HIFI'S DEMO AND USED STEREO SALE

tech hifi

150 Church St. Soundrooms you can play in. 862—2638

Hill, Dempf and Moore Represent AquaCats in N.E.

By Amanda Miller

Linda Hill, Missy Dempf and Sarah Moore represented the University of Vermont women's swim team in the Eastern Championships, putting the icing on a 6-6 year for the Aquacats.

Hill placed 11th in the butterfly 100 meter at the New England championships, in addition to finishing 16th in the 200 meter IM and 17th in the 500 meter freestyle. Sarah Moore also stood out in New England competition, finishing 20th in the one meter dive and 13th in the meter dive.

Moore finished 23rd in the three meter dive at the Easterns, as she excelled along with Dempf, who finished 28th in the one meter, and Hill.

Women's swimming coach Sandra Farrell commented on the season by remarking "we seem to have our best meets against tough schools. We had a successful season, and the post season action some of our girls participated in allowed them to get a firm idea of what they will be facing next year. Our team this year was made up of freshmen and new swimmers, with one returning from last year. With everyone coming back and now experienced, it looks good for next year."

Coach Farrell continued by stating "Next year the team will know what they face and will be able to prepare for the competition. Additional freshmen next year will add even further to our depth."

Intramural Notes

MEN'S SQUASH

Both tournaments have advanced to the quarterfinals. Results of semi's and finals will be recorded.

WOMEN'S RAQUETBALL DOUBLES

In the finals, Tama Chung and Larae Wales beat Melody Chung and Lisa Halvorsen 15-8, 15-14. Both teams were from the faculty-staff.

MEN'S RAQUETBALL DOUBLES

A Tournament — in the finals, Don Levin and David Berson of Harris beat John Arndt and Wes Bennett of Sigma Phi.

B Tournament — in the semi-finals, the team of Pluff and Bateman from Delta Psi beat the Austin Hall team of Pyne and Rocheleau. In the other match, it was Marsh and Sudbay from Sigma Phi over Boucher and Barbin from the Independents.

C Tournament — incomplete up to semi-finals.

HOCKEY RESULTS

Women's A Division — Mother Puckers 4-0; Mixed Nuts 2-3; Angels 2-3; Davis 4 1-4.

Women's B Division — Pee Wees 4-0; Tri Delt 2-2; Aco 1-3; Mason 2 0-2.

Women's C Division — Tupper one 3-1; Upper Tupper 3-1-0; Tupper Two 2-2; Slightly Off 1-3.

Men's A Division — Team Torso 3-1; Eagles 2-1; Meds A 2-2; Ground Hogs 2-2.

Men's B Division — League one, Chittenden 3-0; Coolidge 3-0; Top Wills 2-2; Austin 4 2-2. League Two, Fiji 4-0; Simpson 4-1; SAE 2-0; Austin 3 2-0; Hotel Manor 2-2.

Men's C Division — Davis 3-0; Marsh 4 3-1-0; AAA 2-2; Sabers 2-0.

ARTS/ENTERTAINMENT

Argan (Bob Stanfield) "gets a piece" while Beline (Elin Zimmerman) consoles her unsuspecting husband Monseiur Bonnefoi (Kris Garnjost).

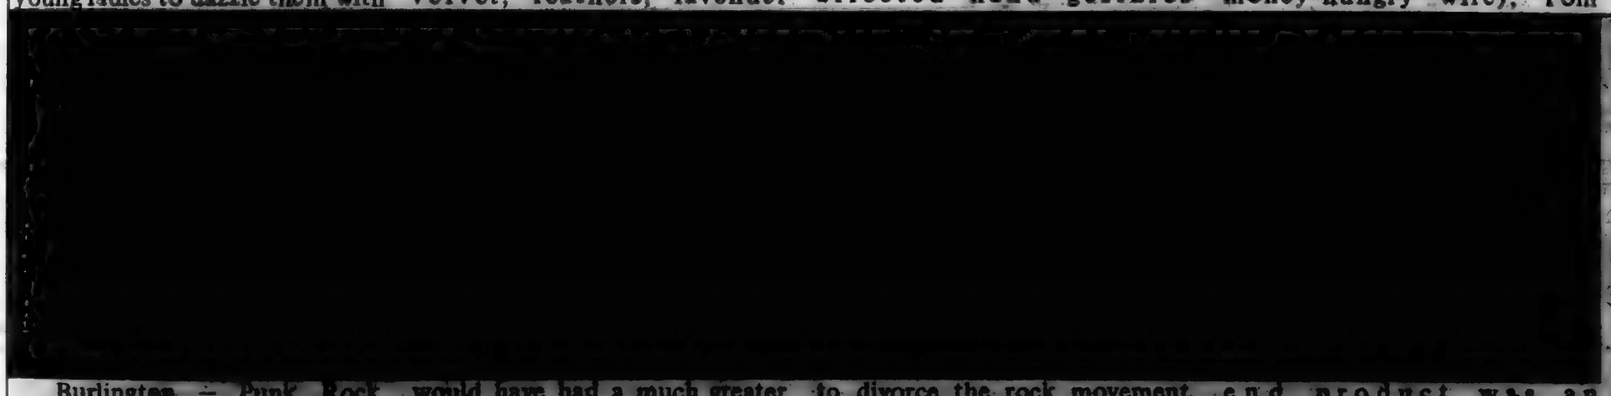
By Tricia John

Comedy poses a host of problems for actors and directors because its success is measured in the immediate response of the audience: if they're laughing it's good. And, of course, you've got to keep the audience laughing, keep the comic tension high, the timing exact, the action new and unpredictable. Once an audience starts to laugh it expects to laugh right through, so the play, actors and director have got to be good.



A sign of genius is when a performance can keep us rolling in the aisles even when we can't understand much of the dialogue because it's in French. Obviously much of the point of the play is completely missed, but through costumes, mannerisms and slapstick, Moliere's Les Precieuces Ridicule comes alive with humour. All aspects to this short farce are excellent. The audience is first exposed to the mood while waiting for the play to begin. The music of the age — court music of Lully and Charpentier — fill the theatre; much of it is the authentic music Moliere used in his performance. The play opens with two men (La Grange and Du Croisy) cursing two women and arranging an embarrassing scheme to teach them a lesson. It seems these men have not embraced the snobbish ways of the trendy preciosite and have been rudely ignored by two women who think themselves to be more refined and morally superior than the rejected suitors. They take revenge by dressing up a servant as a ~~precieux and having him~~ visit the young ladies to dazzle them with his good taste. This scene with Dawson Lane and Evelyne Germain as the female precieuse and Kip Kinnard as the disguised servant is excellent — all three seem to feed on each other's pomposity and pretentiousness. Kinnard's entrance in itself is outrageously funny — he arrives on a sedan chair carried by two bumbling servants (Rich Whitmore and Kris Garnjost), steps out to reveal his outlandish costume of lace, ribbons, pink velvet, feathers, lavender stockings, heeled shoes with oversized color co-ordinated bows on them, long golden locks and a little lace hankie as the perfect accessory.

Evelyne Germain consistently carries a lovely expression of stupidity combined with an intense concentration as if unable to fully understand the conversation. Dawson Lane's overdone French along with her affected hand gestures contribute beautifully to the overall comedy.

The main production is The Imaginary Invalid, again by Moliere, and translated into English by director Geno. It's much longer, more problematic and carries a more serious message. The comic quality is always high, thanks to a superb translation and the outstanding performances of Bob Stanfield (as the imaginary invalid Argan), Elin Zimmerman (as his money-hungry wife), Tom Blachly (as Monsieur Diafoirous) and Greg Patnaude (as his son, suitor to the Argan's lovely daughter). Each of these characters has his own individual idiosyncracies and/or disgusting habits that he exploits for the fullest comic effect. Molly Smith, in the crucial role of Argan's servant, was at times too overbearing — her tone of voice (which "causes brain damage," M. Argan tells her) never changes, whether she is speaking to Argan, his deceitful wife, or his charming daughter. But her scenes as the saucy, domineering maid with the crotchety, ill-humoured Argan are terrific; diversity in tone is really the only thing lacking in her performance.

There are charming additions to the play. Before the performance starts, Louis XIV promenades with four friends to the foot of the stage and sits attentively for the entire performance. What is truly interesting about this is their polite applause when a new character appears on stage. Upon hearing the applause each actor leaves his role for a second, looks at the group, smiles and bows. A totally unnecessary addition to the action, but a delightfully clever way to bring the play closer to its seventeenth century reality.

Kudos also goes to Eugenie Seidenburg for imaginative and spirited stage design and Muriel Stockdale for the beautifully colorful costumes of both plays. Surely these two plays are the most delightful yet of the RTT season — make a point to see them.

Burlington — Punk. Rock will never make it in this town. It found a public hearing in Nector's this past weekend, but the event was techniquely reduced to an evening of school-boy rock and cave-man colloquialisms.

A weekend gig by The Furor and La Peste — two supposed elements of the new wave music movement — did not succeed at introducing a new brand of music to Burlingtonians. What was achieved, however, was an ear-splitting, but instinctivply appealing rendition of primordial rock and roll. It was a slippery revival of jukebox history that dated back to the mid-60's. And hard core rock fans who came perhaps to witness a new musical attitude, were instead treated to an old and forgotten gimmick: raw and rebellious power.

Granted, there were some qualities displayed that were uniquely new wave-ish: the angrily contorted facial expressions, and knock-kneed, spasmodic guitar licks (shades of Elvis Costello); as well as a socially malicious attitude that would have had a much greater impact had the sound system permitted it.

This is, in essence, where both bands failed in their attempts to be progressive. Punk, or new wave music, is basically the utilization of simplistic rock to promote anger and damnation. Without audible lyrics, though, the message gets lost in the distortion.

Ten years ago, The Furor and La Peste might both have been labeled as Who prototypes. And indeed, the Who's roots seem to be deeply embedded in the characteristics of punk music today. In both cases, you have a band that is dependent upon guts more than talent, and that likes to bolster their music with powerful amplification as well as intentional feedback and sound distortion techniques. It can also be noted that punk and new wave music, much like the Who, gained cult popularity through rebellion. Punkers are generally shouting at the working class, while Peter Townshend's lyrics were reaching out to his generation.

The Who was the first group to divorce the rock movement from political progression. They even rejected the 60's revolution, and proved it by pooting around Abbie Hoffman at Woodstock. Today, groups like The Furor and La Peste are just as politically isolated, and they relish it. Punk and new wave music in England lash out at the "facist queen" of England, while the movement in the U.S. seems to warn that life in general is out to take you for a ride.

But the Furor, who led off both shows, simply wasn't capable of promoting any social discontent. Their act was basically in the hands of lead guitarist Bill Ross, who power-chorded unrelentlessly and ran himself dizzy across the stage. His music had strength, and he occasionally got in a good riff or two, but Walter Clay's vocals might just as easily have been nonexistent. His voice was lost somewhere in the screeching feedback he incorporated. And while his mike-molesting gestures indicated that he was saying something nasty, The Furor's end product was an overamplified blur of heavy metal and mashed potatoes.

It cannot be denied, however, that this style of music has a place in the hearts of some souk fans. And even though a few people went leaving as early as the second number (protecting their already abused auditory passages), many more were moving to the front to jiggle and bop, letting their instincts match those of the crazed mentors on stage, and surrendering to the animal magnetism that has made rock and roll in all its forms an undying social phenemenon.

Bill Ross and The Furor enticed those in the audience that chose to remain, but La Peste actually appealed to them. They were a more polished band than The Furor, but their music was less creative and guitarist Peter Dayton only rarely strayed from his straight power-chording antics. What La Peste had going for them was a well-rehearsed adolescent hype. They looked innocent and determined, but their atmosphere was gnarled and challenging.

"Shaddup, and listen to us play!" shouted Dayton.

"Eat it!" someone cried back, and the audience seemed to marvel at what was a mutual case of pseudo-repugnance that La Peste was instigating. Unfortunately, they too were hampered by technical sabotage, and the lyrics to songs like "Don't Wanna Die," "Better Off Dead," "After Dinner Crime," and "Kill Me," (all of which might have been very interesting) never reached their mark.

Dayton himself was somewhat akin to Iggy Pop although he was less fluid and less subtle. Mark Kiff on bass and Roger Tripp on drums gorged out a rhythm that was the essence of their performance. The music was so undemanding that it challenged people to dance. The beat was

(continued on page 52)

"Shaddup, and listen to us play!" shouted Dayton. "Eat it!" someone cried back, and the audience seemed to marvel at what was a mutual case of pseudo—repugnance that La peste was instigating.

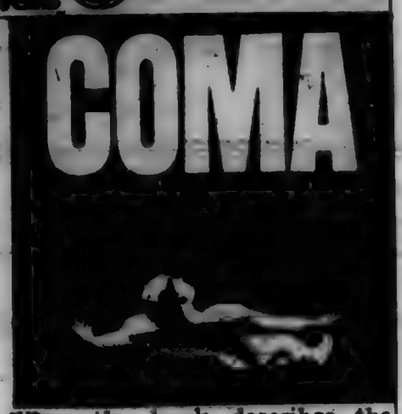
Kaufman & Hart's
THE MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER



Essex Playhouse · March 16-19, 21-23 & 25 · 8 p.m.
Junction of Routes 15 & 128 · Essex Center
TICKETS: $2.50 · RESERVATIONS: 879-0393

A member of the opening night audience will win a dinner for two at McCopp's Restaurant in the Burlington Square Mall

Reseved tickets must be picked up 24 hours before performance. Box office hours: Mon.–Fri., 5–7pm

NOVELS

The Advent of the Moviebook

By Jeffrey B. Aronson

Over the past decade publishers have transformed paperbacks into moviebooks. As with many cancers, a paperback can contract the disease in several ways. Some books, like The Towering Inferno, spring from the movie itself, repeating the disaster perpetrated on the screen. Other permutations include non-books like the Star Wars Log. These works offer no insights into the film itself, but like other parasites, feed off of the success of another body.

The last manifestation, as exemplified by the paperback edition of Robin Cook's Coma, also stands as the most insidious. This edition destroys the suspense of an otherwise strong story through the inclusion of "8 pages of spine-tingling movie photos," smack in the middle of the book. For careful readers of the first half, the photos point out exactly what happens in the second half, as well as promoting the stars of the film.

Imagine, if you will, the reverse of this phenomenon. You have just paid an outlandish sum for a cinema seat, along with a higher figure for some munchies. The movie progresses until the half-way point when an announcement appears on the screen summarizing the action in the second reel. You might be annoyed and disgusted.

The moviebook depresses further when, as with Coma, the book really works. At a prestigious teaching hospital in Boston patients lapse into comas after simple operations at a rate other than might normally occur. The book's central character, medical student Susan Wheeler, finds herself morbidly fascinated by the high incidence rate and begins her investigation. When the book describes the pressures of clinical training, women in medicine, and hospital politics, it is as good as the first portion of Andromeda Strain. The sections on operations, especially the fright of the anesthesiologist as his patient slipped into a coma, had me clutching at my missing tonsils in horror. Coma did me in for simple operations the way Jaws kept summer visitors off of Martha's Vineyard beaches. Once Wheeler springs into action during the second half, the book sags, replete with a bad ending.

What is so unfair is that the photos and their captions tell you the rest of the tale, as weak as it is, right in the middle of the story. You cannot help but read the damn things. I would almost rather see the Kent cigarette ads, which appear in many paperbacks, instead.

Even if the photos served some useful purpose, they contradicted the descriptions in the book. Robin Cook describes Susan Wheeler as "the girl of the Pepsi-Cola's people's dreams... her hair was the color of winter wheat and very wispy... young, healthy, and sexy with that American, California style." When you turn to the pictures, you discover the brunette Genevieve Bujold in the title role, and actor Rip Torn featured as the chief of anesthesiology, a black man named Dr. Robert Harris. One must also wonder what makes head shots of actors "spine-tingling."

The book makes for perfect vacation reading providing you will not enter an operating room during the week. When you buy the book, rip out the pictures and save them for later viewing.

Dead Rumours Squelched

By Vaune Davis

Contrary to rumors circulating throughout the campus, plans for a concert this May by the Grateful Dead are not yet definite, said Pat Butler, S.A. Concert Bureau chairman last Tuesday.

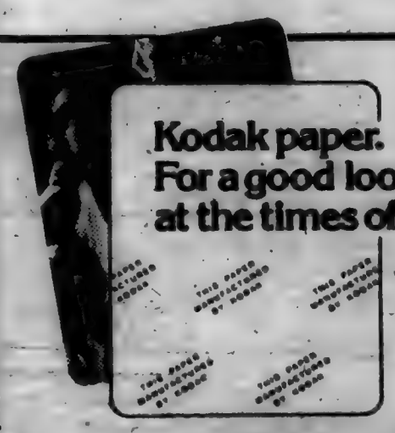
The Concert Bureau has been working on the arrangements since December and they are now waiting for the final word, said Butler, adding that "Bob Weir and Jerry Garcia are both doing individual tours right now and we are just trying to get them together."

Nevertheless, Butler stressed that the concert could fall through and that all rumors are unfounded. "WRUV has made a lot of rumors that are uncalled for as far as I'm concerned," he said. "Hopefully," he added, "the show will come through for us because if it doesn't, there are going to be a lot of disappointed people." The Concert Bureau has not as yet released any definite information regarding the Grateful Dead concert other than the fact that they were trying to arrange it.

Because of the amount of preparation involved and the projected cost of the show, the Grateful Dead would be the last S.A. concert this semester. Part of the gym will have to be rewired to supply enough power, a stage must be rented and another show would only hinder ticket sales in between. Butler said that at nine dollars a seat, it would be necessary to sell "all the seats" to cover the cost of the $40,000 production.

If the Concert Bureau is able to book the Dead, the concert will be Saturday, May 6th, at the Patrick Gym with tickets going on sale to students first during the first week of April. However, if the show falls through, there will still be one more concert this semester. "We'll probably do something at the end of April," Butler said, "But there will be one more show either way."

VERMONT CYNIC



FILM DEVELOPING SPECIAL

12 Exposure Kodacolor Print Film
C-22 or C-41 Process Only
Printed on Kodak Paper
$1.99
Limited Offer. Offer Void On Foreign Film

20 Exposure Kodacolor Print Film
C-22 or C-41 Process Only
Printed on Kodak Paper
$2.99
ASA 400 20 Exp.

20 Exposure Slide Processing
Ektachrome or Kodachrome or 8 mm or Super 8 mm Movie Processing
$1.29
Limited Offer. Offer Void On Foreign Film

36 Exposure Kodacolor Print Film
C-22 or C-41 Process only.
Printed as Kodak Paper
$4.99
ASA 400 36 Exp.

Kodak paper.
For a good look at the times of your life.

UNIVERSITY STORE

Offer Expires March 23

Rehearsing With the Man Behind Moliere

By Tricia John

Tom Geno sits by a little table making notes on a yellow legal pad. He smiles. Something funny is going on onstage and he likes it. Moliere's little play Les Precieuces Ridicules is working, and Friday night's rehearsal shows great promise. "Bravo, he yells to the players after the performance. "We've got a show."

This weekend Un Moliere Spectacle will be presented at Royall Tyler under the direction of Prof. Thomas H. Geno. Besides devoting considerable time to directing this production, Geno is a French teacher at UVM, teaches a drama course in Moliere's plays, and is considered an expert on French theatre by his students and colleagues. Both plays, Les Precieuces Ridicules and The Imaginary Invalid are stamped with the mark of a director who has a passion for Moliere, the French theatre and the seventeenth century.

Both plays present different sorts of problems for Geno. Precieuces is done in French, and several of the actors are dealing with the language for the first time. Not only do they have to speak it, but it must sound natural and convincing. Geno's wife, Marie, is the French vocal coach for the production, but after rehearsal the director also must iron out the remaining kinks in pronunciation. The actors are of course receptive and grateful for any suggestions and corrections, and all seem to be enjoying the chance to act in French.

Why bother to do a play that only French majors will fully understand? "So that people realize that the French do more than read books," comments Geno. There is a magnificent dramatic culture throughout French history, and Americans are now only scratching the surface of this rich French tradition. Through these performances Geno is not only giving the audience a chance to see French theatre but actors a chance to perform in a way that is quite different from "Anglo-Saxon theatre" as Geno calls it. "Today actors rarely get a chance to overact, to actually ham up their roles. Anglo-Saxon theatre, television close-ups and modern drama call for underacting and underdirecting. Moliere is just the opposite."

"Today actors rarely get the chance to overact, to actually ham up their roles. Anglo—Saxon theater, television close—ups and modern drama call for underacting and underdirecting. Moliere is just the opposite."

And Geno insists on overacting, to be sure. He strives for a consistency in mannerisms, in idiosyncracies that the roles demand. The effect is always comical. In Precieuces, Moliere emphasizes the absurdity of the seventeenth century "preciosite," the trend among the upper classes to display acute snobbery and pretensiousness by exaggerating mannerisms, ornamenting the language and even creating new words. What seemed ridiculous to Moliere in his time is now even more ridiculous to twentieth century audiences, and Geno plays on this idea by taking the affectations of the precieuce husband-hunting cousins to their limits. Their snobbery is manifested through their costumes, hand gestures and movement, language inflection, and facial expressions (of boredom or excitement, depending on what sort of man is in their company). To someone who doesn't understand French, language unfortunately becomes secondary — but the play remains funny and fresh because Geno stresses consistency; in the end, we know that the two young women learn nothing, understand nothing and remain the comical yet forceful brunt of the Moliere joke.

Tom Geno translated The Imaginary Invalid for this production with the intent that twentieth century Americans could hear with their ears the same sort of language seventeenth century Frenchmen heard with theirs. In other words, Geno translated the French play into common, natural English with familiar phrases and vocabulary. The translation is as natural to us as Moliere's French was to his contemporary audience. Yet his translation is more than functional — it is clearly the language of the aristocracy, having great elegance and rhythm. Geno sighs when he tells of the five long weeks it took to translate the play, but it's remarkably very little time when considering how beautifully he mastered Moliere's subtle humor to flow just as comically and evenly in English.

In this play, centered around an impossible hypochondriac with a most extraordinary anal fixation, Moliere strikes out against doctors, their remedies, their ignorance, their reactionary old world beliefs about the human body. To these doctors, the idea of the circulation of the blood is a revolutionary absurdity, and deemed as one of the contemptuous and useless "discoveries of the century." Marvelous arguments between the hypochondriac Argon and others in the play successfully illustrate the raging controversy of the seventeenth century.

Geno is quick to sharpen each actor's comic characteristics and timing, and gives each actor full freedom to upstage another. He carefully watches all movements and mannerisms, and knows instinctively what is appropriate to the action and what is not. "Stacey, in this scene you're standing like those little Cambodian women do when they tinkle in the street." Everybody laughs while Geno hops up on stage and slightly squats with knees apart to show her what he means. "I think you should kneel instead." The point is taken.

"Stacy, in this scene you're standing like those little Cambodian women do when they tinkle in the street." Everybody laughs while Geno hops up on stage and slightly squats with his knees apart to show what he means.

It's almost 11 p.m., five hours after rehearsal began. The actors are tired but Geno still bursts of creative energy and excitement. They listen, agree and absorb what he says. Tom Geno and company most certainly have got a show.

The Cat in Milk & Water Soaks and After 13 Years it Croaks.

weck's
WINE & CHEESE
Burlington Square Mall 658-2070

The Sheik Cafe
presents
Thurs. 16- MIKE MARIO
Fri. & Sat. 17&18- PAUL ASBELL QUARTET
Nitely Drink Specials
Long List of Imported & Domestic
Beers & Wines
41 King Street 864-5395

THE ONE THAT TOWERS ABOVE THEM ALL!

Fri. March 18 at 7pm
Sat. March 19 at 8pm
IRA Theatre at Southwick
Special Show: Sat. at 9:30
Films Incorporated

Wells Recital Varies In Vitality

By Tricia John

Barbara J. Wells gave an impressive piano recital last Sunday in the auditorium of Burlington High School. Because of publicity indicating that this would be her "only Burlington appearance of this season," I went with the "chance-of-a-lifetime" anticipation of an absolutely superb performance but left somewhat disappointed.

It goes without mention that Wells is one of the best musicians in the area. She plays with tremendous precision and clarity; her readings are never muddled by sloppy scale passages or arpeggio. Her interpretations of Liszt (Concert Etude No. 3) and Chopin (Scherzo Op. 31, No. 2) emphasize this quality most clearly and she played her Romantic selections with such passion and brilliance that they easily outshone the other pieces in the program. But Beethoven's "Tempest" Sonata and Brahms' Rhasodie Op. 31, No. 2 lacked much needed vitality and force.

Her Schubert selections were excellent concert openers — crisp, clear phrasing, and although the three sections of the impromptu lacked sufficient contrast, the low-key reading seemed appropriate to the upcoming Beethoven. I was waiting for forceful dynamic contrast in the Beethoven, but what seemed to have been a mixture of the Baldwin (the Baldwin SD-10 Concert Grand) piano's inability for great volume and Wells' own concept of the Sonata, the "Tempest" became a somewhat anti-climactic finish to the first half of the recital. The second movement was well played but lifeless and directionless, and the third movement offered little variance in texture. It was a timid interpretation at best, lacking the needed fierceness and purpose that I believe Beethoven intended for the composition. In this case Wells did not, as her program notes stated, have "the power to bring the composer to her audience." (If she did bring Beethoven to the audience he must have been napping.)

After intermission she played the Brahms' Rhapsodie, a competent yet unconvincing performance which emphasized her left hand technique (very strong and vibrant) more than the melodic passages of the right hand.

The Romantics Liszt and Chopin without doubt are Barbara J. Wells' forte. She played the final two pieces with such power and concentration that the possible flaws of the rest of the program were forgotten. Her hands flew across the keys with ease and precision. Wells had a feel for both composers. She combined both passion and control for subtle imaginative interpretations — never allowing her personality to overwhelm the music (as some musicians are wont to do) but completely letting the composer speak through his music. Her Debussy encore again reflected her ability for this and she played the "Fireworks" with the same untiring vitality. It was a pleasure to hear her perform; indeed a very important concert to attend.

The Luck of The Irish

By Peter Relick

On Friday, March 10, Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy came to Burlington in conjunction with Saint Patrick's Day, and not only Irishmen, but people of all nationalities were at Memorial Auditorium to bid the troubadours welcome.

The duo's easy banter instantly calmed the audience. If one was quick enough and could cut through their pungent Irish accents, he could pick up a variety of wisecracks, punchlines and anecdotes between numbers. Just to hear Liam Clancy say that he does not need alcohol to get high and that he doesn't need to smoke turf either gave the audience an idea of the kind of blarney that was to permeate the concert.

Vocally, the two singers were well matched and their voices blended perfectly. Liam Clancy took control of the tenor while Tommy Makem provided the necessary intensity with his rich and mellow bass.

The performers used the enthusiasm of the audience to their benefit and included them in many of their dialogues and songs. The first, and possibly the best sing-along song, was "One For the Morning Glory." This humorous ballad about a sailor who takes four sisters as lovers really involved the crowd and made them feel as though the whole production was a little group of friends sharing a bottle of Guinness at an Irish countryside pub.

Clancy accompanied the singing with guitar, while Makem picked the banjo and played the bodhran, a flat Irish drum. The Duo's rendition of "Rise and Follow Charlie," which explained the details of a battle between British mercenaries and Scot highlanders, was both beautiful and stirring. Somehow the songs came alive, and they were not just history: they were happening in the present, and the fear and false courage felt by every soldier was suddenly present in the group with its eyes riveted on the two singers lit up upon the stage.

Tommy Makem did a fine a cappella number about a cobbler and his marital problems. The a cappella singsong was unique, enjoyable and provided a seldom-seen type of entertainment. Liam's specialty was a "Country-Western" song sung in his best "down-south" accent.

A piece entitled "Peter Kagan and the Wind" was one of the most moving songs I have ever heard, and the interpretation rendered by the Irish singers sent chills up my spine, and made me want to buy the ten-dollar album just to have that song.

The evening provided great entertainment, and gave one a good perspective on life, and how it should be lived, with a bit of humor and a grain of salt. Liam Clancy and Tommy Makem live it, talk about it, joke about it, and they sing about it, but most of all, they feel it.

RECENT CUTS

Deodato's Musical Sominex

By Tom Nuccio

Eumir Deodato, *Love Island

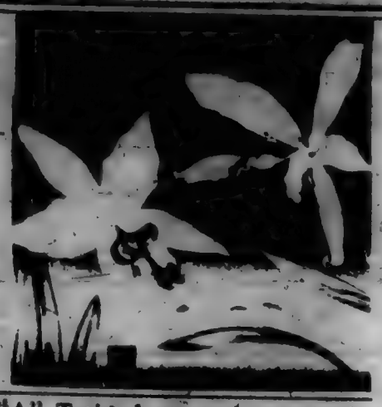
Contemporary jazz audiences tend to focus much applause and praise on only instrumentalists. Granted, this is fine, but by doing this they unfortunately overlook the most essential facet called composition. The skillful preparation, often consisting of several months involved in scoring and orchestrating, functions as the foundation solely responsible for the production of an excellent tune. A performer cannot go anywhere without the aid of a good composition. The greatest tenor player, without this important aid, can sound like a mediocre novice. Thus, the composition is the essential key to effective jazz and the composer faces a highly difficult task in its production.



Keyboardist Eumir Deodato ranks as one of the most creative composers in modern jazz. His perfectly mixed "electro-orchestral" compositions were explosively fantastic. His tunes explored radical rhythms, chord patterns and colours never previously dreamed of. Brasses floating over a supportive background of strings, synthesizers and reeds; and solo guitars jetting above a heavy-handed rhythm section were essential components of many Deodato compositions. The tunes were musical revelations — each making an indentation on the listener's mind. This creative genius in composition produced pace setting jazz albums such as 2001 and Artistry, utilizing orchestral jazz rock as his main implement.

Disappointingly, this characteristic orchestral punch remains totally absent from Deodato's latest album, Love Island. On this Warner Brothers outing, he relinquishes the igniting factor which provided him with past success. Instead, he experiments with mellow, moody compositions which produce little excitement and attentiveness. This daring experiment has definitely blown up in Deodato's face leaving him musically destroyed.

"This album could effectively serve just one purpose— background music in a dentist's office."

An example of this poor tactic can be found in his boring rendition of "Take The 'A' Train." The original Billy Strayhorn version, mastered by the Duke Ellington Orchestra in the forties, was an up-beat and extremely bright big band tune. Despite this accepted fact, Deodato intently slowed the "A" Train down and as a result his song ran out of gas dead on the tracks. Soloists that once blew quick and tricky licks now sit back and become engulfed within the mellow atmosphere. The rest of the album presents this same undesirable effect. Deodato, throughout the course of Love Island swallows bright sambas, funk and fusion within this newly conceived and extremely boring technique. This album could effectively serve just one purpose — background music in a dentist's office. It is extremely relaxing — relaxing to the point where it becomes sleep inducing.

While listening to this album my only reaction was a 39 minute yawn. Dr. Deodato has prescribed a dosage of musical Sominex and jazz enthusiasts will not like it. Hopefully, he will recover and begin producing albums in his previous fashion. A fine jazz composer has put his loyal audience to sleep — a sleep that can only be interrupted by the old Deodato.

Starship Takes Off

By Russell Flannery

Jefferson Starship, *Earth

Because Bob Dylan, the Grateful Dead, and Jefferson Starship/Airplane have endured the counter-culture movement, a good deal of drug and political references are expected in their songs. Dylan, by writing "Hurricane" and creating the "Thunder Revue," apparently has not lost the 'vision' of the sixties. Nor have the Grateful Dead, who still regularly play the cocaine ballad, "Casey Jones." Although the key personnel of Jefferson Airplane rejoined or remained to form Jefferson Starship, the band's recent popularity is a result of two strong top-forty ballads, not revolutionary lyrics. Consequently, the band has faced the dilemma of public acceptance versus personal direction. On Earth, Jefferson Starship's fourth album, the band achieves considerable success in balancing the two extremes.

Musically, Earth contains a variety of concepts. The stronger cuts are basically the less "hyper" ones; the driving guitars characteristic of the Jefferson Airplane era have been balanced by tighter vocal harmonies and extensive keyboard usage. Interesting cuts include "Love Too Good," which exemplifies the more frequent usage of keyboards and "Show Yourself," one of the best anti-government songs that Grace Slick has written in years. The teeny boppers may find interest in "Count on Me," a standard Marty Balin vocal effort, and "Skateboard."

Despite the improvements, difficulties arise. Eventually, Balin is boring, and songs written by members other than Slick show a lack of polished quality. ("All Nite Long" indeed seems to last all night long.)

Nevertheless, Earth is a pleasant fusion of the Jefferson Airplane and Starship styles. After the slightly ailing Spitfire album, it's quite a welcome surprise.

Records Compliments of Bailey's Music Rooms

9.31%*
Car and Boat Loans are a part of your life at Chittenden TRUST COMPANY
Equal Opportunity Lender
Member F.D.I.C.
*Annual Percentage Rate

Stuft Shirt
Open for Sunday Buffet
11:00-4:00
All You Can Eat for $3.95
Featuring Bloody Marys $.75
Open 11-11 Fri.-Sat.
Open 11-10 Mon. thru Thurs.
Stuft Shirt 135 Pearl St. 864-9544

FINAL REDUCTION

★ROSSIGNOL ALPINE SKIS

★NORDICA & GARMOUNT SKI BOOTS

★SKI POLES & ACCESSORIES

★40% OFF CROSS COUNTRY SKIS & BOOTS

★CLOSING MARCH 25

Odd Steen Ski Shop

Open Mon.-Fri. 9-9; Sat. 9-5; Sunday 12-4 862-5552

Downstairs in The Ski Shop, 388 Shelburne Rd., Burlington

ST. PATRICK'S DANCE

Sponsored by

Coolidge & WDW

BOSTON'S

SASS

WRIGHT DINING HALL

MAR. 17, 9PM-1AM

$1.50/PERSON

ADVANCE TICKETS: WDW DESK
FROM MAR. 13-17 8AM-4PM

Mixers, Chips & Dips Provided

By Jim Wright

Editors are very often viewed by writers as a subspecies, related to real people but somehow a step lower on the evolutional ladder. If you talk with any author his/her most chilling stories will concern things which editors have done to their works before publishing them. The SF field has had its share of editors who feel they can write better than the author and feel that they must rewrite and cut any manuscript that reaches their desk. Fortunately the cases of this have been relatively small, perhaps because the SF community is such a close knit group of people (you don't treat family bad).

One of the best editors to come along since John Campbell or Judy-Lynn delRey is James Bean. Jim was a long time "fan" of SF who was given the task of editing Galaxy four years ago. Almost from the start he built up a reputation of fairness and honesty almost unprecedented in the editing business.

Jim plans to make Ace one of the major publishers of SF and he has already taken giant steps in that direction in the few short months he has been there. One of his innovations took place last month. February was "Poul Anderson Month" at Ace with Ace reprinting six of Anderson's early novels giving each a new cover, restoring the original titles of some and including a new introduction to each by Anderson telling a brief history of each book. This sort of attention to the back list is almost unprecedented in the book industry, but Jim plans it as a matter of course.

The Man Who Counts (Ace Books, $1.50, 209 pp.) is an important work for two reasons. It is Anderson's first attempt at the "game" of planet building and it is the first real appearance of one of Anderson's best loved characters, Nicholas van Rijn. Planet building is a joyful art, if you have that sort of mind. The object is to construct a planet totally different from what we are used to and yet make it as consistent with known science as possible (Hal Clement is the proclaimed master of this art). Nicholas van Rijn is the main character in Anderson's later novels concerning the Polesotechnic league.

In the story, Nicholas and two companions, Wace and Sandra are shipwrecked on an alien world whose native habitat is poisonous to humans. The three have a limited supply of food and water and must, somehow, reach the human settlement halfway around the world. To complicate matters the three become involved in an inter-species war which must be settled before either group will help the humans return to their settlement. It is in this context that the character of Nicholas van Rijn, merchant prince, first shows its head. Nicholas manages to lie, cheat, bribe, bully, persuade and wheddle the aliens until he gets what he wants, solves the reason for the war and almost gets himself proclaimed king in the process. By the end of the book you get the feeling that he could make the mountain come to him if it suited his needs. "By damn, ommipotent because there was no other element of the music to disguise it, and so La Peste was at least successful in leading much of the crowd out of its seats.

La peste

Continued From Page 47

Occasionally, Dayton – also the vocalist – would tone down his guitar enough to shout out his thoughts. He challenged the audience to watch him die, and he added, "I don't know about you, but we're fed up!" What it is that they're fed up about, though, was never really expressed.

Ironically, it was backstage that the members from The Furor and La Peste finally proved that there is punk to their purpose. It was after they put aside their instruments, and turned down the amps, that they put across their message.

Mark Karl, the bassist from La Peste, called their music a "complaint against boredom and mediocrity." He also said, among other things, that the new wave is not new. "A lot of people have been playing this stuff for the past ten years," he said, implying that they were hard-core rockers performing with a new and progressive outlook.

The Furor, like La Peste, seemed to be down on life, society, and just about everything one could think of except professional wrestling. Said their guitarist, "We (The Furor) feel that professional wrestling is the only honest sport. All the other professional sports are rigged."

Had their lyrics been heard, The Furor and La Peste might have been an intriguing punk rock experience. But their technical mishaps were probably financially and socially predetermined. America is simply not ready or willing for this type of music. "It's too fragmented a country," said Ross, "The working class here hasn't got enough to gripe about. They're cozy, and so they'll listen to the Eagles and Fleetwood Mac." He added that whereas England is ready for a "marxist revolution," the U.S. is still hung up on the status quo.

And he may be right. Perhaps it is the American status quo that keeps the punk movement in this country inside of small bars with cheap equipment. Then again, it could be because their music is just too damn loud.

VERMONT CYNIC

The Man Who Came To Dinner

Polishing the Production

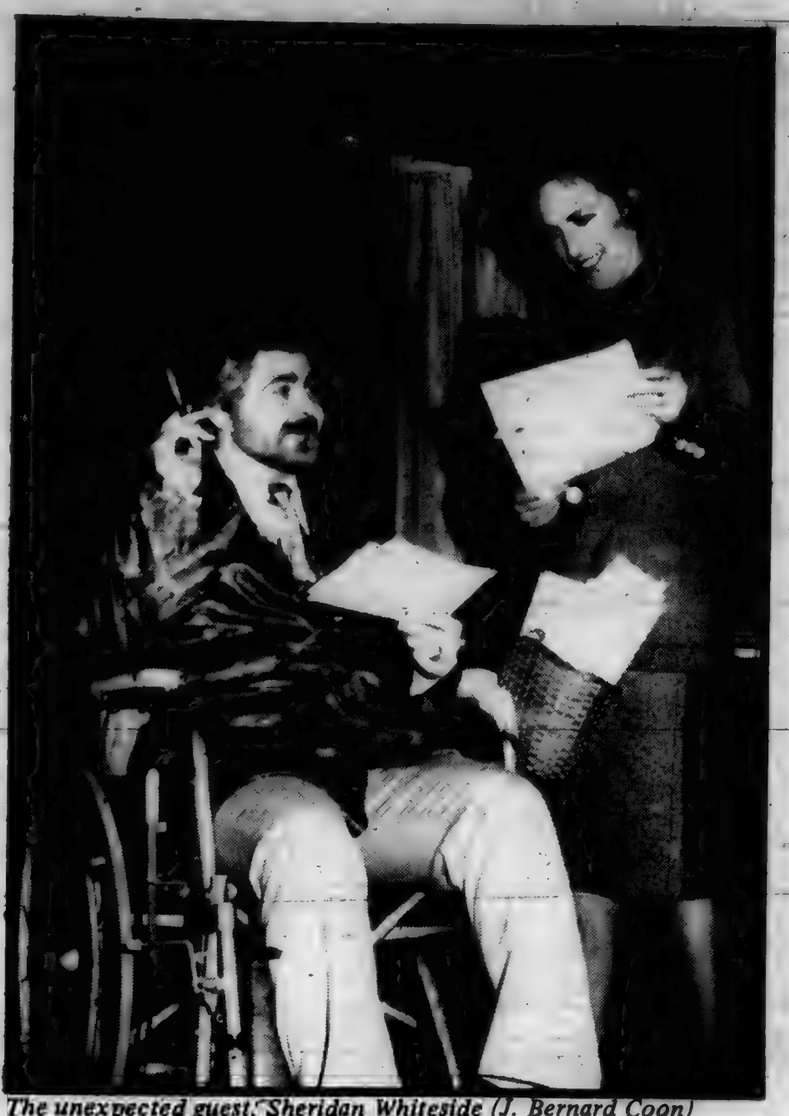
By Jay Collier

The Essex Community Players are putting finishing touches on Kaufman and Hart's The Man Who Came to Dinner which will open on Thursday, March 16 at 8 p.m. in the Essex Playhouse. The director is W. Howard Delano, who has produced, directed and appeared in more than forty shows, and Karen Ashley is the production supervisor.



Set in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley in a small town in Ohio, the "man" is Sheridan Whiteside, famous critic, lecturer and radio announcer, who accidently slips on the Stanley's doorstep and injures his hip. The resulting chaos overturns the household while Whiteside remains at the Stanleys, recovering from his mishap.

The cast includes J. Bernard Coon as Whiteside, Frank Donath and Kay Ryan as the Stanleys, Elizabeth Stracke as Whiteside's secretary, and Gloria Dickinson as his nurse.

The townsfolk include Jim Ashley as the newspaper editor, Richard Rocheleau and Donna Lefebvre as Richard and June, Larry Sontag as June's boyfriend, Roger Couture and Marj Devlin as the servants, Elli Delano as Mr. Stanley's spinster sister, Art Scott as the doctor, Tanner Bent as the professor, and Kim Swain and Jean True as the neighbors.

Sheradan Whiteside's visitors include Jan Peterson as the New York actress, Paul F. Ugalde as the world traveler, and Jeff Burns as the famous film-maker.

The set was designed by Suzanne Kneller, decoration and properties by Phil Scharf, and lighting and sound by Mike Rowland. Stage Manager is Kim Swain and Business Manager is Gene Szatkowski.

The unexpected guest, Sheridan Whiteside (J. Bernard Coon)

The Man Who Came to Dinner will run Thursday through Sunday, March 16–19, Tuesday through Thursday, March 21–23, and Saturday, March 25 with curtain time at 8:00 p.m. Tickets can be reserved by calling 879-0393, and all tickets must be picked up 24 hours prior to performance. Box Office hours are 5-7 p.m. on weeknights.

CINEMA

Mel's Intense Insanity

By Hugh Bush

Mel Brooks has put out another comedy. This time the setting is in an insane asylum where the employees seem just as crazy as the inmates.

As with Mel Brooks' past films such as Blazing Saddles and Young Frankenstein, his style is clearly evident. The line between actors and film crew (previously a taboo) is broken as cameras moving in for closeup shots, break through windows and walls. Sheer folly is made out of everything with which the picture deals. But High Anxiety is not as successful as Brooks' earlier efforts. The underlying plot in a Mel Brooks film is expected to be thin, but it is also expected that the humor will render the plot unnecessary. Despite this film's curt length (1 and 1/2 hours) the fast paced ridiculousness becomes tiresome rather than humorous. There are some funny spots, but the movie is not up to the caliber of past Mel Brooks films.

The leading roles are played by Mel Brooks, Harvey Korman, Madeline Konn and Cloris Leachman. Brooks and Korman were ok, but their parts were of such a nature that it would have been hard for any actor to make them inspiring or offensive. Konn, even in a role as a dizzy blond (which would seem to fit her real personality), had trouble and her ability as an actress appears to be dubious.

Cloris Leachman's (T.V.'s Phyllis) performance was one of the two attributes High Anxiety had to offer. She was delightfully amusing. Cast in a role as a witch/nurse, she is analogous to a modern-day wicked-witch of the west. She is the "bad guy;" she wears black and inflicts bondage.

The other attribute was the background scenery. The photography was well done, and the insane asylum, located right on the west coast nestled among lush gardens, made for surprisingly beautiful landscape. Also included were some intriguing shots of San Francisco and the Golden Gate bridge.

However, all considered, it is questionable whether this Mel Brooks film is worth the high prices that box offices are presently charging.

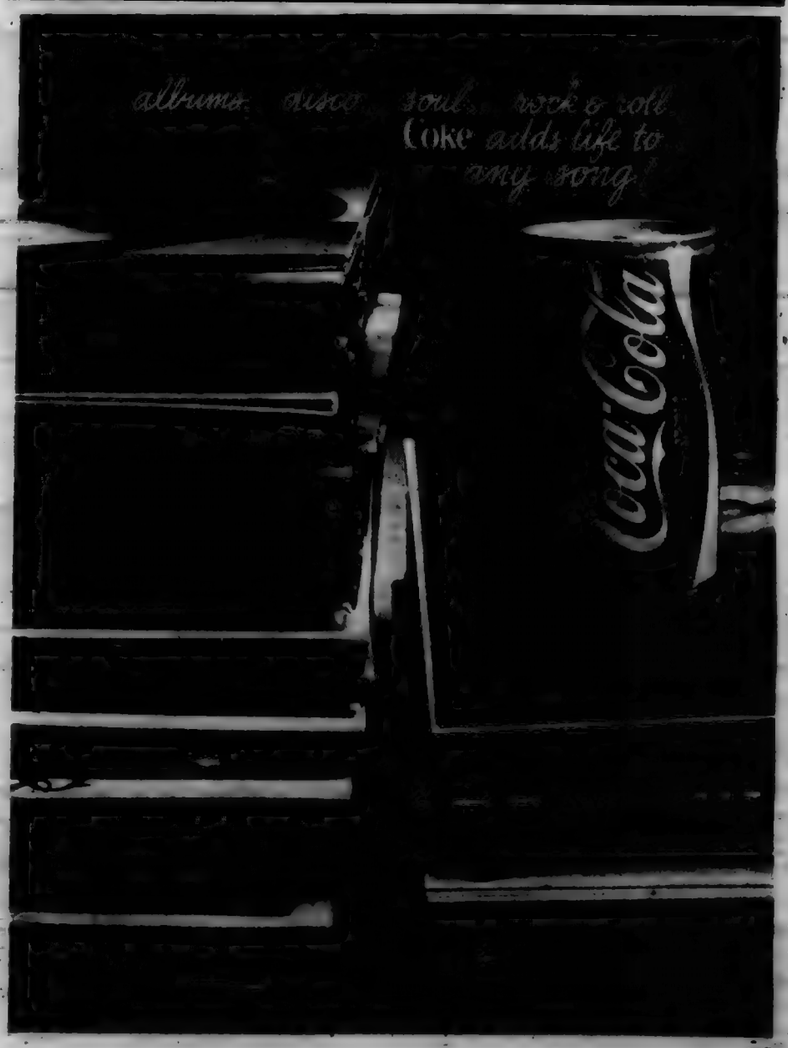
Ladies Nite
Thursday 9-12

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30

St. Patrick's Day Opening at 1:00

what ale's you

152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364



SPRING
for Your Car

It's the middle of March and Spring is almost upon us. Whether you are starting your car for the first time after a long winter hibernation or priming it for the trip south, Spillanes has what you need to make it run smoothly. We're just down the road from Campus, conveniently located near route 89 for all car service that may be necessary: tune-ups, oil and filter changes, general service or just a fill-up. It's your car — do it a favor at Spillanes Service Center.

Spillane's Mobil Servicenter

Next to Gaynes on Williston Road

RANDOM NOTES

Horse Sense

Interested in horses? Come to the Horse Sense Suite's Career Seminar Day, Living/Learning Center, Saturday March 18th. From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. speakers from many areas of the horse world can answer your questions on available options. Represented will be blacksmithing, photography, race track work, combined training event organizing, construction and the Extension Service for just a few.

Lunch will be served. Cost for the day is $5.00. Call x4246, Horse Sense, for reservations.

Alternative to Med School

Interested in medicine but unwilling to spend all that time in school? There are many interesting and worthwhile alternatives in medicine that students often overlook. The Career Spectrum Program will explore several of the alternatives available to students. The program will take place on Monday, April 3 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Alumni House, 86 South Williams Street. The panelists will be Dale Bernhardt, Physical Therapist at MCHV, UVM '74; Martha Burt, Assistant Nutritionist at UVM, UVM '73; Jerry Page, Vocational Rehabilitation, Burlington; and Professor Larry Weed, Problem Oriented Medical Records System. Refreshments will be served.

Center for Service Learning

The Center for Service-Learning at the University of Vermont is recruiting volunteers for various positions within the Burlington and surrounding community. If you are interested in any of the following positions, or wish to look at our catalogs for other options, call or drop by the Center for Service-Learning at Mansfield House at 656-2062.

(1) The American Cancer Society needs individuals to do various forms of filing, typing, stuffing envelopes, etc. for their annual Cancer Drive. Do your share for this nation's no. 2 killer!

(2) Great opportunity for Speech Pathologists! Young boy with speech articulation problem needs coaching and tutoring in speech sounds.

(3) The Burlington Convalescent Center needs individuals to spend time with the patients. Volunteer needs and wants will be matched with patients' needs.

(4) Students are needed to counsel, transport, and coordinate student services for the physically handicapped students on campus. Hours and days are negotiable.

(5) The Red Cross Blood Center needs people to recruit donors, contact donors, file, type, drive blood runs, and a variety of other things. Challenge yourself!

ACT Facts

Did you know that the Department of Residential Life predicts that each student living on campus will spend about 1/5 of his/her total room fee and 14% of the department's budget for 1978 on utilities (that's $170.43 per student). The total cost for UVM will be $662,567 per year. Want to learn more about this kind of activity and do something about it? Join ACT. They meet every Thursday in Robinson Hall at 6:00.

Alternative to Teaching

There will be a Career Spectrum Program to explore the variety of teaching environments other than the traditional classroom setting. All interested students, faculty, and community members are invited to attend. The program will take place on Monday, March 20 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Alumni House, 86 South Williams Street. The panelists will be: Dorothy Helling, Program Coordinator, Peer Counseling in Washington County; Barbara McConnell, UVM '75, Coordinator Consumer Education ACCESS Program; Johannes Troost, UVM '70, '74, Advocate, Children's Advocacy Council; and Kathy Trazaskos, UVM '75, Title I Program Coordinator (Adult Education). Refreshments will be served.

Parapsychological Research

The UVM Society for Parapsychological Research will meet on Monday, March 20 at 4:30 p.m. in the Living and Learning Center, Commons 216. Bernice Skowyra will discuss Psychic Phenomena. Open to the public.

Life Guard Positions

Applications will be accepted through Saturday, April 8, 1978 for Life Guard positions at the UVM pool for the academic year 1978-79. Any student currently certified in WSI or Y.M.C.A. Lifeguarding and First Aid may apply by submitting the following information in typed form: Name, address, and phone; training and certifications with date and place received; experience in guarding and/or teaching; one reference.

Please apply to Miss Sandra Farrell, Patrick Gymnasium. Personal interviews and pool sessions will be scheduled in April following vacation. Reference should be sent to the above address also.

Students currently guarding at UVM should re-apply if interested for next year.

Study in Journalism

The Scripps-Howard Foundation offers undergraduate and graduate scholarships for the study of journalism. Individuals and schools are eligible to apply.

Roy W. and Margaret R. Howard Awards offer straight aid to students seeking careers in journalism. One hundred and sixty such awards were given in 1976-77 from 613 applications. Scholarships are renewable each year and applications are due April 15th.

Journalism students who can work to provide part of their educational expenses are able to apply for a different Scripps-Howard scholarship worth $1,000. An equal number of these grants (160) were given in 1976-77. Applications are also due April 15th.

Application forms are available from Craig Smith, 340 Waterman, x3360, on a limited basis. To obtain your own, write: The Scripps-Howard Foundation, 200 Park Ave., Rm 3720, N.Y., N.Y. 10017.

Hillel Foundation

On Friday, March 17th the UVM Chapter of the Hillel Foundation will sponsor a Friday Night Service followed by an Oneg Shabbat at 8:00 in L/L Commons 216. Prof. F. Magdoff will be the guest.

Also on Sunday, March 19th at 6:00 in L/L Commons 216 Hillel is holding a meat Deli. We'll have corned beef and pastrami sandwiches as well as salads and desserts. The cost is $3.00 per person.

Everyone is welcome to both events.

Professor Nadworny

Prof. Milton J. Nadworny of the University of Vermont economics faculty has been selected by the Board of Governors of the National Academy of Arbitrators for membership in the select group (there are fewer than 500 members) which is generally recognized as the leading U.S. organization in the field.

He has also been re-appointed to the Labor Arbitration Advisory Panel for the New England Region of the American Arbitration Association, his term to continue through 1980.

The Academy is devoted to refining professional standards among arbitrators of labor-management disputes, and sponsors activities designed to improve general understanding of the nature of arbitration and its use as a means of settling labor disputes.

Prof. Nadworny is the Converse Professor of Commerce and Economics at the University, where he joined the faculty in 1952. He is a graduate of the City College of New York and holds the M.A. from Columbia University, and the Ph.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin.

He frequently serves as a management consultant, labor arbitrator, and has often been an advisor to Vermont state government.

S.A. BUDGETS

The following S.A. Recognized Organizations are requested to appear before the S.A. Finance Committee this Thursday, March 16th at Marsh Lounge in Billings, from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. for budget reviews:

WRUV, S.A. Concert Bureau, S.A. Films, Student Photo Service, S.A. Speakers Bureau, Ariel.

These budget hearings are open to the public. All interested students are invited to attend.

There will be extremely important budget hearing meetings for the following S.A. sponsored organizations tonight, Thursday, March 18th at the listed times.

6:00 Speakers
6:30 Films
7:00 Concert Bureau
7:30 Ariel
8:00 Billings Center Governing Board
8:30 SPS

Attendance is critical if your organization expects to be S.A. funded.

Panhellenic Conference

The University of Vermont is honored to be the host of this year's Northeastern Regional Panhellenic Conference, to be held Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, March 17, 18 and 19. The purpose of the conference is for sororities to share information through discussion and workshop participation. All five UVM sororities will be participating as well as eleven other schools from throughout the Northeast and Canada.

"The Secret of Loving"

UVM's Campus Crusade for Christ will sponsor two films featuring author and international travelling speaker Josh McDowell. Have any questions about God's perspective on love, relationships and sex? Josh offers clear and practical advice on these subjects in a quality film "The Secret of Loving" on Thursday, March 16. And on Friday, March 17, Josh considers the most outstanding personality of history, Jesus Christ, in a dramatic film, "More Than a Carpenter." Both films will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Fireplace Lounge at the Living/Learning Center. See ya there.

Friday at Four

For those who missed it at the Radisson a couple of weeks ago, a special presentation of Second Stage Productions' Duck Variations will be shown at the Royall Tyler Theatre on Friday, 17 March at four p.m.

Written by David Mamet, Duck Variations is directed by Jonathan Bourne, a UVM graduate and of Candide fame. The role of Emil Vare is played by Kent Cassella, also a UVM graduate and an all-time favorite seen in such roles as Launce in Two Gentlemen of Verona and Dromio of Syracuse in The Comedy of Errors in the Champlain Shakespeare Festival. George Aronovitz is played by Adam Zahler who has been active in UVM theatre and is one of the major forces behind the City Company.

Spend an afternoon in the Royall Tyler Theatre with Duck Variations. Admission is free. The public is cordially invited.

World Power

Student Forum-Vt. Seminar is sponsoring a poetry and essay contest. The topic is World Power and the prize for both is $25.00. Approach the question with your imagination and your creativity. Thoughts on Vietnam? Cultural Imperialism? For more info see Billings desk or call Worldwide x4084. Entries due April 3–5.

Gift Books Available

1978 Burlington gift books will be available 9:30 – 1:00 March 16 – March 23 or call Phil Glaize at 658-4325.

Summer Session

Experimental courses for the University of Vermont 1978 Summer Session will be developed by eight UVM faculty members who have received grants from the University to explore new course topics and approaches.

Dr. David Holmes, director of the UVM Instructional Development Center, said the educational development grants are designed "to promote unique course offerings during the summer, with an eye toward transplanting the ideas to the University's regular fall-spring curriculum."

The grant recipients and their projects are: James Barbour, home economics, and Kay Schmucker, counseling, $2,000 for a program in human sexuality; Chester Liebs, history, $800 for an institute in historic preservation; and Anthony Bradley, English faculty, $1,000 for a program in Irish studies.

Also, Philip Rhinelander, music, $500 for a course on guitar for elementary school teachers; Margaret Roland, art, $950 for a survey of oriental art.

Also, Howard Biel, geography, $780 to develop a course on urban studies; and David Morency, mathematics, $1,400 to develop a course on mathematical modeling techniques.

Dr. Holmes called the grants "part of a continuing University program to provide support resources for faculty in their efforts to reform and improve instructional offerings. Over the past five years 95 grants have gone to over 130 faculty. The Summer Session, which has been a locus for experimentation and innovation for several years, serves as a unique laboratory for trying new ideas and course models."

CLASSIFIED ADS

SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Tandberg reel to reel 3300x. Extras: Mayell tapes, head demagnitizer, Meister take up reel. Call 863-2181 after 3:00.

For sale — Eumig Mini-5 Super 8 movie camera. Zoom lens, macro capability, with case. Brand new in carton with warranty. Never used. List $330, sale $125. Call Roger 1—4 at 2920.

For sale — Gibson L6-5 electric guitar, 6 position tone control, versatile, 1 yr. old, excellent condition, $325. Call 3011, ask for Rob. Also BSR turntable, 1 yr old, good condition, $35.

Marmac blank cassettes for sale any quantity. originally a studio tape only. C-45 thru C-120 available. Quantity prices negotiable. C-90's for $2.75 each. Call Danny 656-2516 or Davis Hall, 313.

WHEELS

1964 Chevy 2 asking $50. Alan Aldaz, 425 Marsh, 2908.

Car parts: 2 new premium belted summer tires (G78-14) 1972 Fiat 128A parts (anything you need), 1971 Renault R10. Call 863-4475.

Audi Fox 1974. Red, 4-door, front-wheel drive, rust-proofed. Excellent condition. 63,000 miles. $2,250. Call Meg at 656-3024 (days) or 434-3507 (nights and weekends).

1972 GMC sierra 3500 pickup chasis; 33,000 miles. 402 cu in. engine; 4 10-16.5 highway tires; just tuned; new exhaust; beautifully maintained, $1000 or best offer. Call UVM rescue 656-3350.

1970 VW bug new muffler and tires, needs very little work. Best offer. Call Dan at 655-1067.

1973 Capri 2600 V-6. 65,000 well cared for miles. Koni, Talbots, Semperit snows, and new clutch, exhaust. Very tight. $2200. Call Alex at 878-4675.

1976 Honda 550-4F. 12,000 miles (mostly highway). Fairing, saddlebags, quartz light, soni shocks. Mechanically perfect. Cosmetically immaculate. Call Alex 828-4675.

MISCEL—LANEOUS

Excellent money-making opportunity. Make good money part-time — campus representative needed for fun and easy to sell product — no gimmicks — proven campus winner. Send your name, address, phone, school, year of graduation and self-addressed stamped envelope to: Fantasy Productions Inc., 23 Stone Ave, Ashland, Ma. 01721.

For sale — unique bureau, single mattress, box spring. Bureau & bed sold together $50. Bureau alone $45. bed alone $15. Prices are negotiable though. Please call 655-3948.

For sale — antique white wicker table 2 foot diameter, 3 foot height $5. Desk lamp, fluorescent, new $30, asking $10. Double bed mattress with square wood frame 2 feet high, excellent for storage underneath, $15. Unfinished wood desk, 3 side drawers 1 top drawer less than 1 year old, new $40, asking $25. Tea crates, 2 $3.50 each, refinished large spool table, $15. Call Julie, 862-1052.

Typing at reasonable rates. On-campus pickup and delivery. Call Randy at 863-8505. Keep trying.

For sale coupon books. 1 full $50. 2 half $25 each. Call Bill 658-4263 after 6 p.m.

ROOMS & ROOMIES

3 bedroom apt. wanted in May. Call Rick at 656-4248

Colchester woman wanted to share 3 bedroom house with two others. All conveniences across from cross country trails. Rent $115. Please call Diane or Melinda at 655-3948.

Two women looking for one woman to share 3 bedroom apt. Rent $75.00/month incl. heat & hot water. Call Kathy or Peggy 864-5189.

Looking for a way to spend an exotic summer? We need people to share a house or apartment on Martha's vineyard. Call Leslie or Kris at 656-2193.

Brand new apartment available starting June 1. Wall to wall carpet, dishwasher, disposal, porch, parking plus pool facilities. Walking distance to UVM. 2-4 people. Call 863-2143.

Roommate wanted 2 miles to UVM, own bedroom. $75 month plus share utilities, 655-3609.

OUTDOOR EQUIPMENT

Must sell — Lange banshee ski boots, size 7½, skied on 6 times. $90 or best offer. Call Pat at x2196.

Kastle National Team 190 cm w/Solomon 444's used 1 season $150. Reiker Boots 9½ $25.00 Poles $15. Call Bill 656-4263.

For sale — Women's ski jacket, size medium. Navy blue saska parrot, $10. Sears 1100 watt blowdryer, three setting, excellent shape, $10. Reversible warm-up pants, women's medium, navy & stars & stripes, $10. Call Celeste, 864-4370.

For sale — one pr Kastle CPM skis 185 cm with Solomon 444 bindings. Price negotiable, good to excellent condition. Call Peggy 864-5189.

For sale — Olin Mark IV skis, 180 cm, with Solomon 555 bindings, excellent condition, $140 or best offer. Call 3844, ask for Gary.

VOLUNTEER SUMMER PROGRAM
June 24 — August 13, 1978

The program combines Christian community living experience with volunteer service to the poor. The program is open to single Catholic men, 18-30 years of age. Write or call Jim Robichaud, OMI, 100 Cushing St., Cambridge, Ma. 02138. Tel 617-868-3740.

ACADEMIC RESEARCH — All fields. Professional writing & editing. Send $2 for listing of over 7,000 topics. Authors' Research, Suite 600, Dept. A, 407 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60605. (312) 922-0300.

'St. Patrick's Day at McCepp's'

Friday is the big St. Patrick's Day celebration at McCepp's, and this Department suggests you come early if you want to be in on the fun. Ever since Christmas was over, McCepp has been all atwit about this night. He has ordered a brand new, three-dollar, mostly green (with some purple) Hawaiian shirt especially for this occasion. There will be green beer. There will be funny green hats and a drove of Irish delicacies. McCepp has taught bartender Candy Carlotta three score jigs and several lullabys with which she might entertain the merry makers.

Oh what a night it will be! The most important thing is that McCepp's Irish relatives will all be there for the party. McCepp's father, Patrick, has prepared a special rendition of "Danny Boy" to be inserted somewhere between courses of his Irish dinner. Benny McCepp has been invited to fly in from Nutely and perform his shillelagh twirling routine. Uncle Benny happens to be one of the four best shillelagh twirlers in the country. Last year he was invited to perform at half time in the game between the Nutely Green Hornets and the Ridgeway Fatted Hens.

Now if for some reason you can't join us at McCepp's for St. Patrick's Day, remember that the food is excellent any old time. Dinners at McCepp's are always a special treat, and don't forget the great movie and dinner deal every Tuesday through Thursday for just $6.95. Unbelievable!

DINNER SERVED TILL MIDNIGHT
McCepp's
Burlington Square
Breakfast, lunch and dinner served all day

The Austrian alternative

Apply now to experience one of the most exciting 'year abroad' programs available, centrally located in Bregenz, Austria, near Europe's finest winter sports areas.

Live with an Austrian family • No language requirement for admission • Learn German by using it • Independent travel and organized excursions throughout Europe • Skiing and ski instruction • Fully accredited • Transferrable credits.

CURRICULUM INCLUDES:

Art, Art History, Economics, Education, English, Languages, History, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Physical Education and Theatre.

WAGNER COLLEGE STUDY PROGRAM
Wagner College
Staten Island, New York 10301
Name
Address (Street and Number)
(City) (State)
College

Grass By Mail?

Not from us. Not yet. But for everything else you need now, send for our FREE, illustrated, direct mail, consumer catalog. Choose from the widest, wildest collection of pipes, bongs, smoke savers, papers, clips, carburetors, rollers, scales, carrying and storing stashers, head literature—to nothing-left-out!

Use your free copy for one-stop-shopping-by-mail ... with the convenience and privacy of mail delivery included in Mellow Mail's moderate prices (never an extra charge!)

Put together by us, this handsome catalog of top-quality smoking paraphernalia is ours alone. And yours for the asking. Please include your Zip Code.

Send for your FREE CATALOG today!

MELLOW MAIL/P.O. Box S-80 /New York/NY/10011

a complete selection of calligraphy supplies
boutilier's
112 church street

CHEESE SPECIALS

Cabot Cheddar. . . 1.65/lb. Ends
Jarlsberg. . . . . 2.59/lb.
Finnish Havarti. . 2.19/lb.
Sbrinza. . . . . 3.59/lb. grading cheese from the Alps

Plus many other cheeses, cheesecake "seconds" & homemade quiche

CHEESE OUTLET
398 PINE ST.

Papa Dominics
Pizzas, Hot Oven Grinders, Homemade Lasagna and More.
1160 Williston Rd.
863-2556
Papa Dominics
$1 OFF

THERE ARE 25 NEW ITEMS IN THIS AD!

IF YOU BUY ANY ONE OF THESE NEW* ITEMS CREATIVE SOUND WILL GIVE YOU A PAIR (1.) OF SUPEREX TRL3 HEADPHONES ABSOLUTELY FREE

*NEW ITEMS ARE CLEARLY MARKED WITH "NEW" ONLY. THOSE ITEMS SO MARKED ARE CONSIDERED AS PART OF THIS OFFER. LIMIT ONE HEADPHONE PER CUSTOMER. OFFER EXPIRES SATURDAY MARCH 6TH, 1978. (BY THE WAY, THE SUPEREX TRL 3 HEADPHONES SELL FOR $39.95)

NEW FROM SONY STR7800 RECEIVER

THIS RECEIVER PRODUCES 125 WATTS RMS @ CHANNEL WITH NO MORE THAN .07% T.H.D. FROM 20-20,000 Hz. YOU ALSO GET GREAT FM PERFORMANCE (1.7 uV SENS.) NAT'L PRICE $700 $588

TWO NEW RECEIVERS FROM KENWOOD

THE KENWOOD KR6030 PRODUCES A VERY CLEAN 80 WATTS @ CHANNEL WITH .1% THD 20-20,000 Hz. WHEN YOU BUY KENWOOD YOU GET MORE FOR YOUR MONEY COMPARE AND BELIEVE NAT'L ADV. PRICE $500 439.

THE KENWOOD KR4070 ALSO PRODUCES POWER CLEANLY (.1% THD). IT HAS ABOVE AVERAGE POWER: 40 WATTS RMS @ CHANNEL. BUT SINCE IT ONLY COSTS $269 YOU'RE GETTING EXCEPTIONAL "WATTS PER DOLLAR VALUE! NAT'L ADV. PRICE $300. 269.

NOT THE BOTTOM LINE TURNTABLE

TOO OFTEN PEOPLE ARE SET AGAINST STACKING RECORDS, HENCE BAD FEELINGS OF AUTOMATIC CHANGERS EVOLVED, BUT HERE IS AN EXCEPTION! THE GARRARD 775 CHANGER TAKES CARE OF YOUR RECORDS! AND SINCE IT'S EQUIPPED WITH A SHURE M93E CARTRIDGE YOUR RECORDS GET THE CARE THEY NEED. NAT'L ADV. PRICE $119.95 $77.

FOR THOSE WHO PREFER SINGLE PLAY TURNTABLES BOTH ARE FROM TECHNICS AND BOTH ARE DIRECT DRIVE!

THE TECHNICS SL1900 IS A FULLY AUTOMATIC TURNTABLE. IT'S FEATURES; SPEED CONTROL, DUAL GIMBEL TONE, REJECTS AND SETS DOWN AUTOMATICALLY WILL REPEAT PLAY! NAT'L PRICE $199. $179.

THE TECHNICS SL1700 IS A SEMI-AUTOMATIC TURNTABLE. IT REJECTS AT THE END & SHUTS OFF. THIS IS ONE OF THE BEST TURNTABLES WE'VE EVER SEEN IF YOU'VE BEEN BOTHERED BY A TONE ARM BOUNCING ACROSS YOUR RECORDS EITHER THROUGH ACCIDENT OR PUTTING THE DUST COVER DOWN, YOU'LL BE THRILLED WITH THE INCREDIBLE STABILITY OF THIS SL1700 (NAT'L $249) $195.

WE'VE TAKEN "GUESS WORK" OUT OF PUTTING RECEIVERS, SPEAKERS, AND TURNTABLES TOGETHER! HERE ARE TWO MATCHED SYSTEMS WELL WORTH YOUR INVESTMENT.

SYSTEM $499. NEW

WHEN YOU PUT THE KENWOOD KR3090 RECEIVER, PRODUCING 26 WATTS/CHANNEL WITH THE SMALL ADVENT SPEAKERS, YOU APPRECIATE QUALITY EVEN MORE. THE SMALL ADVENTS PRODUCE EXTREMELY SMOOTH CLEAN SOUND, DON'T STOP THERE, WE'VE INCLUDED THE TECHNICS SL-23 BELT DRIVE TURNTABLE FOR SUPERB PERFORMANCE!

SYSTEM $599. NEW

THE NEW ADVENTS ARE SIMILAR TO THE OLD ADVENTS IN THAT EVEN THE LOWEST ORGAN PEDAL COMES THROUGH, BUT NOW THE LARGE ADVENTS HAVE AN EVEN SMOOTHER HIGH END AS WELL. TO THESE FINE SPEAKERS, POWERED BY THE TECHNICS SA5270 RECEIVER 35 WATTS/CH. WE'VE INCLUDED THE JVC JAL20 SEMI-AUTOMATIC BELT DRIVE TABLE. YOU GET IT ALL!

NEW! "JUST LIKE TWO MATCHED PEARLS"!

TECHNICS ST8080 TUNER

A PRECISION INSTRUMENT 10.8dBf SENSITIVITY, HIGHLY STABLE, IMPROVED STEREO SEPERATION, FM PILOT CANCELING CIRCUIT, ADVANCED FLAT GROUP DELAY IN I.F., LOW DISTORTION NAT'L PRICE $279. 249.

TECHNICS SU8080 AMPLIFIER

.02% TOTAL HARMONIC DISTORTION BOTH CHANNELS DRIVEN 20-20000 Hz AND STILL PRODUCES 72 WATTS PER CHANNEL, IN HOME USE MOST PEOPLE WOULD USE ABOUT 36 WATTS MAXIMUM — AS A RESULT THE DISTORTION DROPS TO AN INCREDIBLE .0015% AND THERE'S A MUCH LARGER STORY TO TELL LIKE DUAL POWER SUPPLIES, DC OPERATION AND NOT ENOUGH ROOM IN THIS AD! 395.

LET YOUR EARS, EYES, AND BUDGET PICK THE CASSETTE DECK THATS RIGHT FOR YOU!

* REMEMBER WE PROTECT YOUR PURCHASE WITH "THE GREAT VOWS"! THAT PROTECTS YOU EVER AFTER.

NEW PANASONIC RS612 WITH DOLBY, FREQ. RESPONSE IS 30-15000 Hz, WOW & FLUTTER .12%, A VERY STABLE CASSETTE DECK, WE THINK IT'S A GOOD BUY FOR LITTLE CASH OUTLAY! $159

SANYO RD5300 NICELY STYLED, CONVENIENT DECK 30-16000 Hz FREQ. RESPONSE, WOW & FLUTTER IS A VERY RESPECTABLE .1%, SIGNAL TO NOISE RATIO IS AT 58 DB 179.

NEW AKAI 702D 40-15,000 FREQ RESPONSE +OR- 3dB, 1.5% TOTAL HARMONIC DISTORTION, .08% WOW & FLUTTER, S/N RATIO 51dB (DOLBY OUT). IT'S EASY TO HEAR WHY THIS IS A POPULAR DECK $199

KENWOOD KX620 30-16,000 Hz FREQ. RESPONSE S/N RATIO 61dB, WOW & FLUTTER .09% DECK. AN EASY TO OPERATE DECK, THAT IS DEFINITELY A FINE MACHINE! $209

NEW SONY TC K3 30-15,000 FREQUENCY RESPONSE +OR- 3dB, S/N RATIO 58 DB, THD 1.3%, WOW & FLUTTER .08%, SONY HAS ADDED RECORD MUTE WHICH ALLOWS YOU TO MUTE THE RECORD FUNCTION $220

TECHNICS RS630TUS A HARD ACT TO FOLLOW! FREQ. RESPONSE 30 TO 16000 Hz, S/N 63dB, WOW & FLUTTER .09%. PEAK READING METERS ONE OF THE MOST RELIABLE DECKS WE'VE ENCOUNTER $229

NEW SONY TC K4 30-16000 Hz FREQ. RESPONSE (+OR- 3dB) WOW & FLUTTER .08%, SIGNAL TO NOISE RATIO 59dB, HARMONIC DISTORTION A GRAND 1.3% $279

NEW AKAI GXC 709D 35-16000 Hz FREQ RESPONSE (+OR- 3dB) DISTORTION LESS THAN 1.5%, WOW & FLUTTER .06% A VERY SMOOTH OPERATING DECK WITH CONSERVATIVE SPECS. $335.

NEW KENWOOD KX1030 3 HEADS CONTINUOUSLY VARIABLE BIAS CONTROL WITH BUILT IN OSC. TONES TO MAXIMIZE TAPE PERFORMANCE. AN ASTONISHING FREQ RESPONSE OF 20-20000 Hz $375.

NEW AKAI GXC 725 3 HEADS STEREO REVIEW MEASURED THE FREQUENCY RESPONSE OF 36-19000 Hz +OR- 1.5dB WE TOLD YOU THPT AKAI WAS A CONSERVATIVE COMPANY $380.

NEW SONY TC K7II TOUCH CONTROLS, RECORD MUTE 60dB SIGNAL TO NOISE RATIO, WOW & FLUTTER .045% T.H.D AT 1.4%, SIMPLY AN EXPLOSIVE DECK, WITH GREAT SPECS AND FEATURES $477.

NEW SONY TC 158SD PORTABLE NOW YOU CAN TAKE GREAT SPECIFICATIONS WITH YOU. 20-16000 Hz FREQ RESPONSE, S/N RATIO 55dB, WOW & FLUTTER .08%, THD 1.3% $369.

THE LAFAYETTE STORES CARRY A HUGE SELECTION OF PORTABLES, TV'S, ANTENNAS, CB'S, SCANNERS, TELEPHONES, AND OTHER ELECTRONICS

JVC 3060 HIGHLY COMPACT PORTABLE AM, FM, CASSETTE RECORDER, AND TV. IT'S AN ALL AROUND DO ANYTHING GO ANYWHERE UNIT $269.

IMAGINE, YOURSELF AT THE "MET", YOUR WIFE LIKES OPERA, BUT YOU LIKE FOOTBALL AND...

THE FAMOUS EPI 100 (VINYL)

A FINE BOOKSHELF SPEAKER LINEAR SOUND FROM THE 1" AIR SPRING TWEETER & WOOFER CONFIGURATION THEY'VE BEEN RATED "A BEST BUY" MORE THAN JUST THIS YEAR! $79.

YOU SPEND A LOT OF TIME IN YOUR — MAKE IT FUN — CAR

MECCA AM-FM STEREO & 8 TRACK PLAYER YOU CAN HAVE GREAT SOUND WITHOUT PAYING ALL OUTDOORS FOR IT. $89.

EPI POWERPLAY T180 CASSETTE 12 WATTS/CHANNEL AUTO REVERSE, LOUDNESS, BASE & TREBLE CONTROL, POWER OFF-EJECT 99.

TRIAXIAL SPEAKERS A REALLY GOOD SOUND CAN BE YOURS AT A FRACTION OF THE COST THE PAIR $49.95 SAVE $20 BIG ONES

*AND THE GRILLES ARE FREE!

NEW FROM EPI THESE AUTO SPEAKERS ARE JUST FANTASTIC. THERE IS NO COMPARISON BETWEEN THEM AND ANY 6X9 SPEAKER! AND THEY MOUNT JUST LIKE A 6X9 OR IN A 5" CUTOUT. 75.

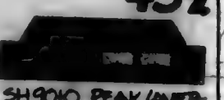
STACK OR RACK MOUNT THESE OUTSTANDING NEW SEPERATES FROM TECHNICS



ST9080 TUNER. .08% THD STEREO MODE, 90dB SELECT. PILOT CANCELLATION 3 GANG TUNING CAPACITOR, 10 ELEMENT FLAT GROUP DELAY! 395.

SU9070 DC PREAMP. PHONO S/N 86dB MM AND MOVING COIL INPUTS, 3 GANG VOLUME CONTROL 420.

SH9010 PARAMETRIC EQUALIZATION (FREQ, BANDWIDTH, LEVEL. 10 SLOTS/5 CHANNEL DOUBLE INTEGRATOR ACTIVE FILTER 439

SH9010 PEAK/AVERAGE/HOLD METER UNIT MONITORS PWR, INPUT/OUTPUT (LINE) 310.

SE9060 DC AMPLIFIER RUNS MONO OR STEREO (180 WATTS OR 70 WATTS) WITH NO MORE THAN .02% THD. 6 PWR SUPPLIES 3 STAGE DARLING TOU OUTPUT. 420

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

157 PEARL ST. ESSEX JCT • BARRE MONTPELIER RD • IN THE MALL BETWEEN K-MART • MARTINS SO. BURLINGTON

Electronics

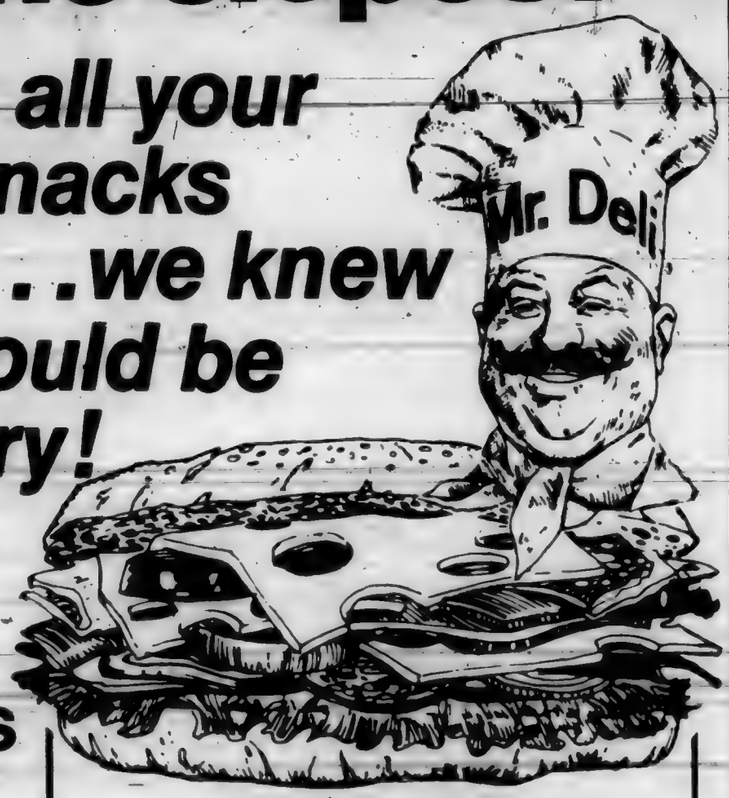
CYNIC COMPREHENSIVE WRAP-UP

CYNIC COMPREHENSIVE WRAP-UP

CYNIC COMPREHENSIVE WRAP-UP



CYNIC COMPREHENSIVE WRAP-UP

VOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVO
OTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOT
EVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEV
VOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVO
OTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOT
TEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTE
VOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVO
OTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOT
EVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEV
IOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVOTEVO

After an exciting day on the slopes!

Finast has all your favorite snacks waiting . . . we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruit
- Your favorite cold beverages

825 WILLISTON ST.,
BURLINGTON VERMONT

Finast

Visit our Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

Clark Calls for "Better Communication"

Photo supplied by the candidate

During the past year, I have been President of the Inter-Residence Association (IRA) and have gained more experience from this position than any of the other candidates for S.A. President. I am the only candidate who has had the opportunity to be both a representative and the head of an organization, so I am the most equipped to know what works and what does not work from both sides of an organization. The Student Association is badly in need of a strong, positive leadership which will set attainable goals and find the most effective means for reaching them. My greatest contribution to IRA has been strong leadership which effectively kept a group of thirty-five people working together all year. The S.A. needs leadership and experience and I believe that I am the most qualified to give it.

The S.A. has been criticized this year and, in many areas, rightly so. A lack of communication has fragmented the organization to such an extent that S.A. is made up of separate parts instead of a unified whole. A clique has developed internally which separates S.A. from the rest of the University. Above all, there has been a continuous lack of direction to keep the S.A. senators motivated to work as a group throughout the year. In many cases, one committee does not know what another committee is doing. These shortcomings have to stop, for the students are not getting the best representation and leadership possible.

Here is what I believe the S.A. should do:

*The S.A. needs to take active stands on issues for the benefit of students, rather than reacting to someone else's proposals.

*The S.A. should stand behind faculty members who are not being treated fairly under the present tenure process. If not, students will lose out by missing these professors' abilities in the classrooms. If students and faculty do not stick together, then they are going to be the victims of the financial crunch. Good faculty will not be offered tenure and students will end up paying higher tuition for a lower quality education.

*The S.A. should increase student input into the tenure process through effective faculty evaluations. We will work for the acceptance of student evaluations as a viable tool in determining who should or who should not receive tenure.

*The S.A. should assist students in obtaining credit for work and projects outside the classroom. This is especially important when there is no comparable academic program in the UVM curriculum.

*The S.A. has to be more accessible to students and their views and opinions throughout the school year. Otherwise a clique will form and the government will be ineffective. This contact should include open hours for students to come into the S.A. office, as well as regular S.A. representation at dorm meetings.

*The S.A. should work to improve the academic advising system, especially for freshmen and transfer students. This means working with the Advising and Referral Center (ARC) to ensure that students are getting the best advising possible.

*S.A. funded clubs and organizations are an integral part of the Association. To ensure that they are receiving every possible benefit from being in the S.A., the President and Vice-President should meet regularly with the leadership of the clubs and organizations. If they feel that they are a part of the same Association, the S.A. as a whole will be stronger.

I support Missy Burke for Vice-President of S.A. Together we bring different abilities and experiences which compliment each other. We have developed a good working relationship and are sure to lead S.A. in the right direction. Missy's experience both in S.A. and as a Resident Assistant (RA) has made her the most qualified of the two candidates.

I believe that I am experienced and the most qualified to give the needed leadership to the S.A. The search for realistic goals with obtainable results will lead to a better organization and better representation for the students of the University of Vermont.

Charles H. Clark

SPS Photo

Where Have the Senators Been?!!

The last two weeks I know at WDW Government meeting there has been an SA representative there. That, I think grew a little bit out of the Cynic article and that's a reaction, not a proactive position of SA. The SA senators are elected in the fall, and that's the last we hear from them.. They have to make some effort on their own to forward the information from the SA. If you ask the majority of students to name three or four SA senators, they'd be hard pressed to give an answer. I think that has to stop. The question is why aren't we doing it this year, not what are we going to do next year. We are all going to do everything. We're all going to "save the world" next year.

The previous statement is a verbatim transcription of the 3/20 debate.

"The S.A. senators are elected in the fall, and that's the last we hear from them. . . They have to make some effort on their own to forward the information from the S. A. If you ask the majority of students to name three or four S. A. senators, they'd be hard pressed to give an answer. I think that has to stop."

The Cynic Question:

Most agree that one problem of this Student Association has been a failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities. How do you plan to rectify this situation, if you perceive this to be a problem?

The failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities has been a major problem for the Student Association this year. This problem stems from a lack of strong leadership and publicity. Just because we are elected to an office does not mean people are going to listen to what we have to say. You have to sell your organization and only then will people respect it.

There are three different groups of students at the University of Vermont. First, there is the group of students who take initiative and interest in student government by their very nature. This group hardly needs any motivation. Second, there is the group who takes no interest in student government and do not wish to have any part of it except to receive its benefits. Third, there is the middle group which is the largest. They need a little extra prodding to get involved and should not be dismissed by using the easy excuse of student apathy. Many people care about the decisions being made and just want to be informed. By eliminating the clique atmosphere and reaching out to this group of students, the S.A. can motivate student interest in governmental activities.

Two obvious remedies come to mind. First, there should be more contact with Senators and Executive members at resident hall government meetings. Senators have to be informed of what the rest of the S.A. is doing in order for this to be effective. Second, a newsletter would be ideal for informing off-campus students as to S.A. activities, issues and decisions.

The cost of sending a newsletter I have estimated at about three hundred dollars each time. To be effective as a regular tool of communication, the newsletter approach might be too expensive. A weekly or bi-monthly column in the Cynic would be more effective and more realistic. This might include regular decisions of committees as well as features outlining current issues and personalities. A regular radio program with call-ins would be another effective way of communicating. We have to keep people informed of the issues if people are going to be motivated.

Kilburn Advocates Externship Program and Film Series

I believe the S.A. can and should play a greater role in education and action on political issues that affect the University and the community. This could be accomplished within existing S.A.-funded organizations, and by the creation of new programs designed to combat student apathy.

One new idea that I've been working on is the "Externship" program. Coordinated jointly through the S.A., Alumni Office, and Career Planning and Placement, this program would offer a student the chance to spend a week of his/her vacation time in an observatory role with an alumnus working in a field of the student's choice. I feel this would provide an important perspective on what goes on "out there," with little risk to the student. In addition, a program like this could help to direct student interests more toward experiental rather than traditional, memorization-regurgitation education. Since no credit, grades, or salaries would be given, the cost of the program can be kept to a minimum, and a provision for eventual University funding should be included.

Photo supplied by the candidate

With its one percent vacancy rate, Burlington is a landlord's paradise, and many of UVM's 3500+ off-campus students have paid the price with substandard housing and excess rents. The newly-created Student Legal Service will spend much of its time dealing with the symptoms of this problem, but the overall causes will remain untouched. Burlington needs a rent control law, and the S.A. should take a greater part in joining with local citizens' groups to make this a reality. I would like to see information on housing and rent control distributed to all UVM students, with the urging that they sign a rent control petition. In addition, a questionnaire on housing costs and conditions should be mailed to all off-campus students. The data from this could provide the impetus for unified action against particular landlords with a high incidence of poor quality or overpriced housing.

The potential role that S.A. Speakers and Films can play in raising student consciousness should be utilized more fully. I would work for the creation of a weekly series that would show films of a current, relevant and thought-provoking nature, similar to the "Films for Change" series sponsored by Green Valley Films last fall. S.A. Speakers can also be more controversial, and I would like to see speakers like Dick Gregory, Ralph Nader, Barry Commoner, and Frances Moore Lappe, rather than the recent offerings of hypnotists, tricksters, and losers like Bert Lance.

The S.A. should make a greater attempt to inform students on what is happening in the S.A., the University, and the community. Incorporating reports from the various Senate committees, the president should write a weekly column on S.A. activities for the Cynic. Comments would be encouraged, and the Cynic would have the right to delete any portions it viewed as propaganda or useless information. In addition, whenever an issue confronts the campus or the UVM community, the S.A. should enlist the aid of the Senate and General Assembly in compiling and distributing a pro and con flyer on the subject, taking a stand when appropriate. In order to encourage student involvement every flyer should contain names of contact persons, times, places, and agendas of meetings and proposed modes of action.

One of the more amazing ironies of this University is that students, who are the most affected by teaching quality, have no direct input in the tenuring of faculty. Past S.A. administrations have called for a formal student role, yet nothing has happened. Realistically, the process of getting a student on the Academic Affairs committee may take more than one year, but the S.A. should continue to improve its rapport with the UVM administration and faculty in the hopes of achieving this goal in the future.

Please stop by at 35 Isham Street, or call me at 658-0876 if you have any questions, comments or suggestions.

Eric Kilburn

SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

Increased Student Awareness

How can SA work to raise the consciousness of students on more political and social type issues, and working for making students fit into a bigger political picture, instead of having SA just working on student activities and getting students involved in things on campus?

One thing is a more political role for the SA Speakers and Films Bureau. Recently SA Speakers has offered Bert Lance, hypnotists, musicians... I think the SA Speaker's Bureau needs a more political orientation. I like people such as Ralph Nader, Dick Gregory, people who are involved in active social change now and can serve as examples for students. When Ralph Nader came six years ago, VPIRG started. It may not have started if he hadn't come. Dick Gregory, in two hours of speaking to a crowd at the gym, got 100 people to fast... I'd work for the creation of a weekly film series that would show films of a current political and relevant nature to this campus. Films, like things on Seabrook and nuclear power. There's a film currently available on Vermont and how it's being manipulated by corporations. Things that are relevant to New England and to this campus which could be used in a more effective way than they are now.

Assistant Treasurer Needed

I have talked to Larry about the role of treasurer in the past week. One thing he's put forth which makes a great deal of sense is the creation of an additional role as assistant treasurer, who would handle some of the paperwork that Larry's bogged down with... A lot of the treasurer's role is just signing checks. It's not that the treasurer should have all the exciting work and the assistant should sign all the checks, but the workload of that office is so great that I think the creation of an additional role of one working in conjunction with the treasurer is necessary.

"One of the more amazing ironies of this University is that students, who are the most affected by teaching quality, have no direct input in the tenuring of the faculty."

The Cynic Question:

Most agree that one problem of this Student Association has been a failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities. How do you plan to rectify this situation, if you perceive this to be a problem?

The failure of the S.A. to make itself accessible and relevant to students is one of the prime reasons for the lack of interest in government. Apart from the aforementioned S.A. column in the Cynic, one way of dealing with this is through increased publicity on S.A. sponsored clubs, organizations, and events. At the beginning of every semester, there should be an exposition of all S.A. funded groups in Billings, where each organization would explain their activities to students. This would at least let students know where their money is going, and could facilitate increased student involvement in the S.A. and its member clubs.

My platform contains several proposals designed to increase S.A.'s potential effect on students' lives. When students perceive that the government is more interested and can do more for them, it is likely that they will become more interested in S.A. Without question, an S.A. president or administration cannot singlehandedly politicize the student body, but the S.A. can do much more than it is currently.

Martin Proposes A Student Credit Union

The Student Association has two main functions. The first is to represent the interests of the students to the University Administration and other areas of student contact like the State Legislature. The second function is to provide funding for clubs and service organizations that could not otherwise survive. S.A. goes far beyond those two areas of student concern.

Student Rights has always been a major issue and shall continue to be so in years to come. We as students are in essence consumers of education and as consumers we should be allowed a large degree of input into the education that we are buying. This input should be firmly established in several levels, not just here on campus.

Student lobby group: UVM receives a major portion of its overall revenues from the state, a factor that can and has influenced the prices we pay for tuition. In addition, the state has recently considered on the UVM gym expansion, decriminalization of marijuana, rathskeller, tenant/landlord relationships – all of which are of concern to students. We have tremendous untapped potential as a voting block and we should have used it. Let's establish a serious lobby group, perhaps with the other Vermont state schools to help make the legislators work for us for a change. This can only help out us as students.

Student Credit Unions: A common problem to virtually all students is one of money. Many schools today are creating their own non-profit credit unions. This can be accomplished through legislation already passed by the federal government and would allow students, all students, to borrow money more easily and for lower costs. A successful credit union is now in operation at UMass and is being planned at U.Maine, U.Conn. and UNH. It is time we set up such a system here at UVM.

S.A. Financing and Funding: This year S.A. will have close to $180,000 of our money, but how many people really know where it goes? We need to set up a Treasurer's office that is more accessible to the student. Many clubs have complained of having problems obtaining the funds that have already been allocated to them by student votes. This must be corrected. The Treasurer will see that the S.A. organizations are doing well financially and will be willing to help out when they have problems.

Student Input on Tenure: The tenure issue has been a persistant problem for S.A. We have gained some progress but we must continue our efforts. I will fight for more recognition in this area through added student input into the Faculty Senate. In addition, I favor with the administration in their efforts to rebuild the new ailing Faculty Senate structure.

S.A. Services: The services that the S.A. offers are numerous, but there are still several areas that are weak. One problem is the off-campus group needs to strengthen its Tenant's Association so that it can work equatably with IRA and GCC. A Commuter's Union should be organized within the Tenant's Association to better represent such a large part of our student body.

Your S.A.: The Student Association is organized to serve the students and that can only be accomplished with student input. Apathy always has been a problem but not an insurmountable one. More importantly, S.A. should always be able to handle whatever the problem is, if the students feel it needs correcting. I would like to see days when students could come to an easily accessable place and speak with S.A. leadership and the administration. Unlike the General Assembly, this would be more casual and could establish the missing link to much better understanding and a more responsive S.A.

My Qualifications: My experience in Chairman of the Special Affairs Committee of S.A. and as a member of the Executive Committee. I have served as Chairman of the 1978 Winterfest Committee and sat as a Student Representative to the UVM Board of Trustees. I have lived on campus for two years and have served as the MAT Government Moderator for a year and a half. In addition, I am a Greek and have a strong feel for the concerns of both the Greeks and the off-campus students.

John S. Martin

Photo supplied by the candidate

SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

Martin Supports Increased Regimentation in the Senate

I would be in favor of much more regimentation in the senate, where the committee chairmen are responsible for having other senators at meetings, or just to have them up there to be involved, to be important. This is so because it's very easy for a senator to get brushed aside, especially if they're on a large committee. I think it's important that the chairman should seek out and make sure every senator is working on something and saying, "Well, OK. We're working on this..." Student Action has such a wide scope of what could be happening that most of the time all ten senators can not be working on the same issue. So you have maybe a couple of issues while you're there, but making sure that those senators are working on it, and make them feel responsible for those actions, to more or less delegate things that need to be done. Like they'll come up and say "I'm really interested and I think this should be done." I think that the SA administration should say "This looks good, go after it and get it and follow it," because if you get a senator who is working on something, that senator just votes, it's not going to get done. You have to be realistic in looking at people, what people are going to do. So I would tend to funnel people toward interests and put people on committees who are interested in whatever. I would be in favor of having the senators regimented and directly responsible.

The previous statement is a verbatim transcription of the 3/20 debate.

"Apathy always has been a problem, but not an insurmountable one. More importantly, S.A. should always be able to handle whatever the problem is, if the student feel it needs correcting."

Martin's Treasurer Will Be Responsible

The way it seems to run now, is they have to put in a voucher and all this. What I would look for is a person who is dedicated – you don't even have to have a real business background to run. It's just getting in there, signing 'em and making sure they get logged. There are two bookkeepers which do all the accounting. The treasurer is mainly a person who makes everything flow and makes sure all the clubs get their money. I would have the treasurer be responsible to make sure when a club comes in with their purchase order and says "I need the money" that they get the money within however long it takes to get through Waterman; it has to get like three or four signatures. But I see no reason for a bog down. The treasurer has to be there, he has to be accessible to handle any problem that comes up with any club.

The previous statement is a verbatim transcription of the 3/20 debate.

The Cynic Question:

Most agree that one problem of this Student Association has been a failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities. How do you plan to rectify this situation, if you perceive this to be a problem?

Not since the Vietnam war have students been highly motivated in student government. The problem is not unique to UVM, this is a national trend. There are no burning issues that the students as a whole are interested in so there is little reason for the students to jump in. There must be a line of communication set up so that the students do know what is going on and if an issue did come along, there would be a well-oiled machine ready to deal with it. The problem here is not that there is a motivation problem; it is the lack of issues that deeply concern the student.

Gadson and Chan
Hope To Bring Th
Back to the Stude

SPS Photo by Neil Desind

JESSE GADSON

I feel it is time that the S.A. at this university becomes closer to its student body. It is time for the students to become part of the S.A. That is why I have chosen to pursue the office of Student Association president. Once in office, with the help of the students, the S.A. will attune itself to student needs. The S.A. and the student body will become one next year with the emphasis on student desires.

Over the past three years at UVM, I have become well aware of student needs on campus. Last year I was the WDW dorm government president as well as the IRA representative from Davis Hall. Presently, I am an S.A. Senator working with the Student Action Committee. Additionally, in coordination with the Admissions Office, I work on the recruitment of students to the UVM campus.

I think through Henry's and my diverse campus experience, and the help of the other senators, the S.A. will move next year. Our interests are for student involvement in S.A. The direction of the S.A. will be to represent the students, not merely to interpret their needs. We want to be your voice next year.

HENRY CHAMBERLAIN

I responded to the Cynic article "The Student Association, Going... Going... Where?!" with a letter to the editor entitled "Overdue Assessment" the following week. This, out of a feeling that an important organization such as the S.A. should be examined and improved where necessary. I am running for the office of SA vice-president in an effort to ignite the S.A. organization into the effective, dynamic, and responsible association that it has the potential to be.

For a little background on myself, I began as an IRA representative, and subsequently one of its vice-presidents last year. I am a member of the Food Service Evaluation Committee at Residential Life and a member of the Albatross Committee. Additionally, I am one of the organizers of the Washington Seminar at Alumni House.

With that varied background, I feel that I will be able to provide a level of creativity, coordination, and leadership which the S.A. needs. You see my credentials above, and Jesse's and my platform below – this will give you an idea of what I will mean as the S.A.'s vice-president next year.

THE PLATFORM

The need for a system which will provide for the fair and equitable treatment of any grievance initiated by a student is an important service. According to a study done by the Student Action Committee in March of 1977, "...there are no formal means to facilitate an equitable resolution of a student grievance." There is no student grievance procedure. We feel that a vital part of the academic process is for the student to have the right to grieve about inequalities in his/her academic system. This, especially when they are paying a major portion of the cost of that service. Students are being recognized across the country as consumers of their education. This was recently acknowledged by the Board of Trustees of UVM. We would like to see that philosophy imbedded in the thought of the UVM campus.

Over the last few months, the S.A. seems to have forgotten the basic reason that this organization functions for the students. The S.A. is getting out of touch with student needs on campus. The S.A. is not lending itself to the role of student leader. In time of need, this organization should be able to tell the student that it is doing all in its power to rectify the problem or need. This sort of leader will help in such problems as the problems with on-campus parking. With a louder voice more would be accomplished. It should be noted that more coordination with IRA would not hurt here. In the past there has been an ad hoc committee to try and alleviate the parking problems.

Addition
more coord
sponsors.
eliminate m services, and that we have going to fu remain in co
the year.

It is reorganiza necessary n creativity an emphasis is g of the Stude group of 5 utilized wit projects in duties of Committee
the Execu Assembly, an

Throu amendment create the St
This group research nec
of the SA co

"Our interests are for student involvement in S. A. The direction of the S. A. will be to represent the students, not merely to interpret their needs."

EDITOR'S NOTE:

The surrounding two page spread is not intended in any way to prejudice the reader in favor of these candidates. Gadson and Chamberlain wrote a joint platform and made it clear from the start of the campaign that they were running on the same ticket. Given this information it was clearly logical to place them opposite each other.

Jesse Gadson

On Senate Attitude

I think we have to look at this year first. Geoff Liggett had something very good going at the beginning of the year. He had a workshop where the senators had a chance to deal with each other, experience things together, and create a sense of community. I thought it was very effective...

I think that senators definitely need to be accountable.. I just feel that if you look at this year and you see the mistakes and they weren't major mistakes; it was the type of attitude the administration chose to take... It worked to a certain degree, but it has faults. I think we need to use those faults..

On Kilburn's Increased Awareness

That sounded fine and dandy... I think when you're making a move like that you have to be aware of how much can you actually divulge into one of your own organizations. How can you go to the speakers and tell them you should get so and so. They're an independent organization. I think these choices should be more or less left up to them. I don't think we should be delegating to OVP...

SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

d Chamberlain
ring The S.A.
e Student

Additionally, the S.A. should execute more coordination over the clubs it sponsors. This coordination would eliminate much of the overlapping of services, and in some cases, equipment that we have here at UVM. If the S.A. is going to fund certain clubs, it should remain in contact with them throughout the year.

It is our belief that some reorganization of the S.A. will be necessary next year to maximize the creativity and action of the group. One emphasis is going to be on the elimination of the Student Activities Committee. This group of 5 senators could be better utilized with a more varied array of projects in a new committee. All the duties of the Student Activities Committee can be distributed between the Executive Committee, General Assembly, and Student Affairs.

Through the constitutional amendment process, we will attempt to create the Student Research Committee. This group will be responsible for research necessary for different projects of the SA committees. The attraction of such a group will be the visibility and accomplishment members will get in dealing with the SA and the UVM administration in persuance of its job.

Additionally, next year the SA is going to put more emphasis on member attendance. If a member loses interest and cannot have that interest rekindled, then that member should be replaced. At the SA Senate meeting of 2/12/78, only 19 of 37 senators were present. We are going to try to prevent this occurrence from reoccuring next year.

The Albatross is an SA funded group which receives an annual allocation of $4,500. It is a course-teacher evaluation which currently deals only with courses in Arts & Sciences. Even within that college, the service is only partially reaching its goal. Its present course is hazy, and it is time for this group to reorganize its procedure and policy. At present there is another independent committee working on evaluations at UVM which will issue a report in the Spring of 1979. It is our feeling that the Albatross should not be funded for fiscal 78-79, but rather remain as a development group. When the report comes out in the Spring of 1979, then the issue of funding can be reevaluated.

As part of a new direction for student coordination, we propose that an amendment to the SA Constitution concern, the inclusion of the IRA President as a permanent voting member of the SA Executive Committee (upon approval from the IRA Council). This will give a broader base for the tapping and implementing of student ideas on the UVM campus. With a direct (formal) connection between the two student groups, the whole spectrum of student activity will be strengthened, broadened, and improved.

The students at UVM currently have no formal way of airing their grievances with Saga. There is not a group where students with complaints can go to seek satisfaction. However, at present, there is a committee at Residential Life which is putting together a program to deal with the quality of service. The SA, with its own group to receive the voice of the students, can aid this committee with information and aid student interests concerning Saga.

For every campus-wide organization, visibility is a key ingredient to success. The most visible public forum at UVM is the Cynic. Since the SA is a newsworthy group, we intend to imploy the Cynic to publicize the activities of the SA. Next year we will be more than accountable – we will be newsworthy and known.

Jim A. Gadson
Hey H. Chamberlain

SPS Photo by Neil Desind

"I am running for the office of S. A. vice-president in an effort to ignite the S. A. organization into the effective, dynamic, and responsible association that it has the potential to be."

by Mitch Sprung

Henry Chamberlain

Why is no effort made by the senators to communicate with the complex government?

I'm not in SA obviously, but I've worked with the Albatross and other things and I think the problem that happened with SA this year is the fact that it started from a very good idea. Geoff Liggett came in, he had new ideas. They (SA) came together. They had their workshop, which is something new. The SA became a unified body and was going along a different way. Then it did what it usually does in any kind of an organization; it started to splinter and the SA was not able to stand that, and the committees started going off in their different directions; some of them started faultering and some of them started doing things.

Before you can realize what is happening, you haven't created communication between them. And here you are in February or March – the SA is coming towards the end of its year. Some committees are working. The other committees look at that and say we're not really doing anything, what's happening to us, why aren't we having some sort of responsibility at this time. All you can say is you had an idea, the idea didn't work, and maybe we'll try to come up with something else. It's started from a nice idea and it started to splinter and the result was the SA ended up in a heap. I'd like to deal with that next year as Vice-President.

The Cynic Question

Most agree that one problem of this Student Association has been a failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities. How do you plan to rectify this situation, if you perceive this to be a problem?

A definite problem of the S.A. is the lack of motivation of students towards the association. The S.A. has a responsibility to be visible and responsive towards student needs. Once the S.A. can establish its legitimacy by becoming part of the students' lives, the organization will involve the student body. With a senator in the office at all times, senators at student meetings, and at IRA, the students will respond to the S.A. through voicing their thoughts. One of the roles of the S.A. next year will be to join the student body, while moving away from direct influence of the administration. Next year, the S.A. is going to become the independent student voice it should be.

Riegleman Will Concentrate on 'Long Range Goals of the S. A.'

Having lived in the Burlington area for most of my life, I have had extensive contact with the University of Vermont. As a student, I have been involved with S.A. Concerts for three years, with the work and security crews, and managed security for Wild Rose Productions. I have also played UVM lacrosse for the past two years. In working with the lacrosse team to attain varsity status, I became interested and concerned with the operation of the Student Association. Becoming an S.A. Senator this year, on the Special Affairs committee, I assisted with the coordination and implementation of Winterfest 1978. My major responsibility centered around the Broomball program. In this range of experience, I have gained a good understanding of the workings of the Student Association, as well as the Student Activities Office, and the University administration. This involvement prompted my candidacy for S.A. president. I feel that my ability to work well with other people is an asset, and a necessity for effective leadership of the S.A.

As president, my responsibilities would include coordinating the administrative functions and representing student interests in a clear and concise manner. Primary attention must be given to planning the long range goals of the organization.

Most student clubs and organizations share a common goal: to get students involved in activities outside the classroom. To be more effective in attaining this goal, the S.A. should make an effort to improve ties with I.R.A., G.C.C., and others, sharing resources rather than competing for them.

There exists a need at UVM for an organization which would help off-campus students find adequate housing. The fledgling Tenants' Association exists on paper; all that it needs to become a viable enterprise is some hard work. The minimum services provided should include apartment listings, landlord evaluation, and clarification of tenants' rights. The Tenants' Association should be expanded to cover other areas if the need and interest is shown by the students. The Student Legal Service does provide valuable legal assistance to tenants, and I would support its expansion. VPIRG, while representing consumer and student interests, also provides a vital educational experience for many students. I support the present funding system.

The S.A. could improve the continuity of student involvement on faculty/administrative committees by maintaining a complete list of committees that have or desire to have students. Openings should be well publicized, and the applicants screened to determine the most qualified individuals. A system to get feedback on the student member's participation and attendance is needed also.

Student input into the tenuring process is essential to insure the quality of teaching at UVM. To accomplish this goal, a University-wide teaching evaluation form is needed, to be administered by the different Colleges, but recognized throughout the university community as a fair and equitable means of judging teacher performance. Student involvement in the planning of the criteria of the tenuring process is also necessary.

The S.A. must continue to make its presence known in Montpelier. An active student lobby is essential to maintaining our direct contact with legislators. The Student Trustees must be supported strongly, with the S.A.'s resources providing a strong backing.

The possibility of a change in the governance structure at UVM warrants a close look by the S.A.; a whole-University senate, now being considered as an alternative, would alter the representation of students' interests. All potential changes in the governance structure should be considered, and carefully weighed before acceptance.

The student grievance process fills a gap in the area of student rights; it enables students to file a formal complaint against a faculty or staff member. I strongly support this concept.

You pay $24 a year to support the Student Association. Take an interest in where this money is going. It is, in effect, your insurance policy to guarantee the student voice is heard at UVM. I welcome comments and criticisms; my phone number is 862-6530.

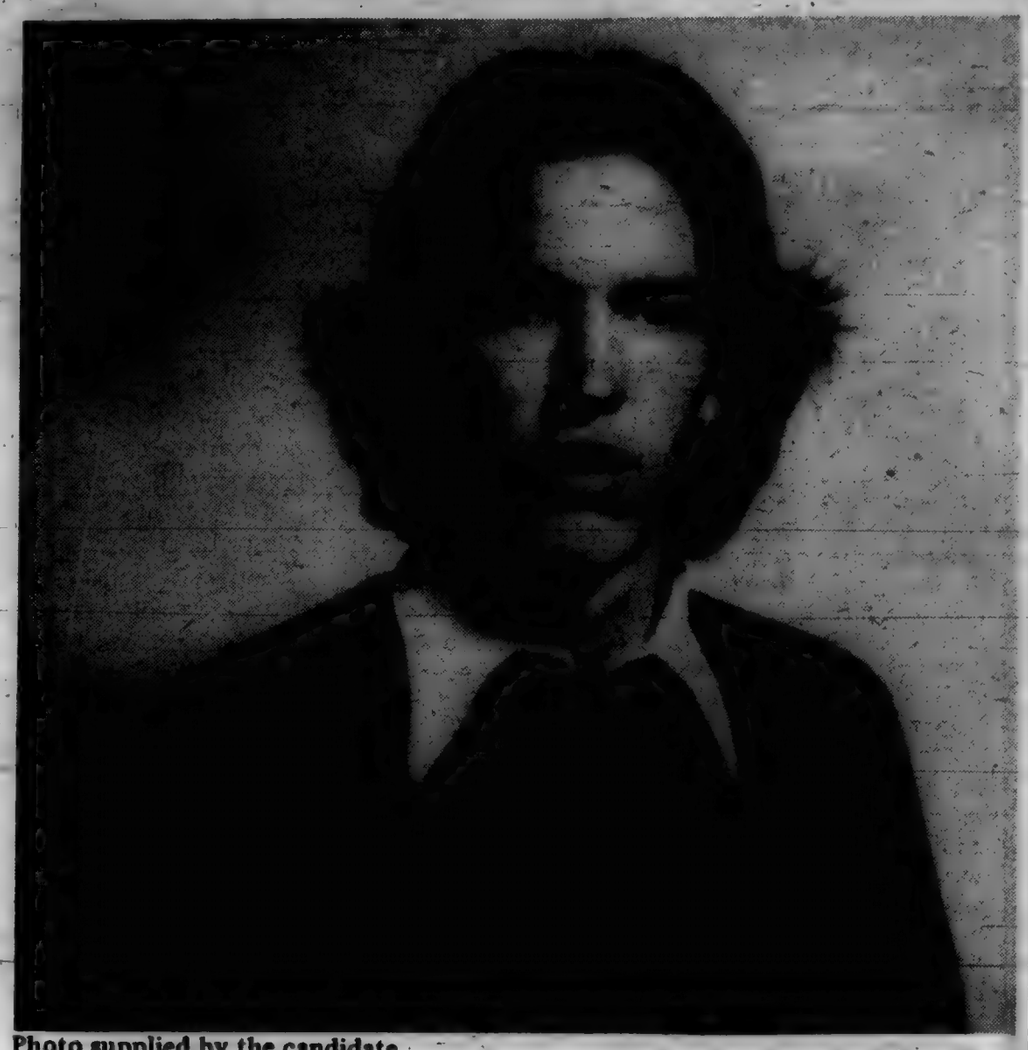

Photo supplied by the candidate

On Insentive for Senators

One problem with the senate is providing a goal for people to work towards, proviiding some sort of concrete thing that they can say "I went and worked on this; I did this; I wasn't able to do this, but this is what I've done about working on it." If you can try and provide, or make sure that things are carried through, and that some sort of satisfaction that you've accomplished something is really essential. One way I'd like to accomplish this, granted this is a difficult thing, is to try to get people some sort of academic credit in the issues that they're working on... That is a hard thing to corrolate, I admit, but I think that more of an effort could be made to do that.

One area within the senate that is a problem I think is attendance. I personally feel that there's no excuse for people that constantly miss the meeting week after week and I agree with Jesse that if there are people who are not coming to meetings, bag 'em and get someone else. I think that we should set a limit on how many meetings should be missed and if somebody goes over that limit, the buzzer goes on; they're gone. I think that's realistic. You have to have people in there who are interested in what's going on and will do their job and be accountable to the students.

Another Cynic Question:

The Treasurer

Peter Riegleman — Treasurer

One important task is to pick a treasurer... The allocation of the 180,000, which is funded through student fees, is an issue that has not been discussed enough. What do you believe are the qualities and talents that the person you would pick as treasurer should possess?

One area that SA has obviously had a problem with is in efficient administration — the basic functions it performs: administering security to concerts, speakers, etc. To do that, I think that SA could go a long way in conduction of their affairs. The person who is treasurer is a major part of that office running smoothly. I already have some people in mind for candidate as Treasurers. But the qualities I would look for in a person are that they are efficient, that they know what they're doing with money, and that they can deal with people on a one to one level. Just basically, that they know how to do their job, and that they make sure that they get it done.

SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

Most agree that one problem of this Student Association has been a failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities. How do you plan to rectify this situation, if you perceive this to be a problem?

I am reminded of the old adage, "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." A large majority of students want nothing to do with governmental activities. Most are content to settle for the services provided by the S.A., without any input other than their $24 Student Activities fee.

One of the S.A.'s major obstacles is convincing students to put time and effort into projects that do not necessarily offer any tangible rewards. A major effort to connect student organizational work with academic credit would help.

The S.A. administers a budget of close to a quarter of a million dollars. This financial base comes directly from students. When more students start to question how this money is spent, the S.A. will become more responsible and efficient. The S.A. is only as strong as its members.

Burke Advocates New Grading Policy

Photo supplied by the candidate

During the past three years I have had the opportunity to work both inside and outside the UVM Student Association. As a senator for two years I served on the Student Action and Special Affairs Committees. From this experience I learned a great deal about the Student Association itself, and became familiar with various channels within the University.

Although I was not a senator this year, I have remained actively involved in the issues which have arisen by my continued association with related committees. I am student representative for the Board of Trustees Educational Policy Committee, serve on the Student Advisory Committee for Vice President Arns, and on the Academic Affairs Subcommittee on the Evaluation of Faculty. In addition, I have worked closely with students as a resident assistant (RA) in Wing Hall.

Removing myself from the S.A. for a year has given me the chance to view it from a different perspective. I can now see where problems do exist and what possible solutions might be effective in improving the organization.

Student Action Committee: The vice president is chairperson of the S.A. Student Action Committee which acts on matters concerning students on the state, local, federal, and university levels. If this committee is to actively take stands on issues and influence important policy decisions affecting students, broad-based student input is vital. These issues should not be conceived merely by the ten committee members, nor should the Committee simply react to issues which come out of other UVM governing bodies. All students should be encouraged to bring their concerns to the Student Action Committee with the confidence that prompt action will be taken.

Promotion and Tenure: Presently, administrative decisions on promotion and tenure are made by examining a faculty member's performance in three major areas: research, public service, and instruction. The overwhelming importance of the third area, instructional performance, must be stressed, for we as students are consumers of education. S.A. and all students should continue to support efforts now underway to improve current procedures for student evaluation of teachers.

Grading Policy: During the past year, the subject of the accuracy of UVM's grading policy has been widely discussed among faculty and students. One possible way of improving the current policy would be to initiate a twelve-point grading system which takes into account the distinction between plus and minus grades on the transcript.

Academic Advising: The current advising system provided to incoming freshmen should be evaluated and improved. The Advising and Referral Center, other student advisory committees, and the Student Action Committee should work together to investigate the problems students now face in this area.

Tuition: Each year, University administrators must decide how to meet best the rising costs of the institution. Next semester tuition for both Vermont residents and out-of-state students will increase. If the UVM student body is to remain diverse, these increases cannot continue. More of an effort should be made by administrators and students to seek alternative ways of meeting costs. Student participation with the Alumni Office in the area of private giving is one possibility.

Progress can be achieved in these and many other areas if student leaders are well informed and a realistic approach is taken. I feel that Charlie Clark is the best candidate for President of S.A. As this year's Inter-Residence Association President, Charlie has demonstrated his ability to effectively and responsibly lead a student organization. Together we would provide the leadership S.A. needs.

My own experiences with the Student Association and in other areas will help me to deal with the issues mentioned above and other issues which will arise in the coming year. I would like to contribute to the future of the Student Association as Vice-President.

Missy Burke

S.A. Should Take Stand on Federal Issues

As part of the job as the role of chairman of Student Action Committee next year, I'd like to see a broadening focus and I guess this would include dealing with, or taking a little bit of a stand on issues at the federal level that might effect us as UVM students. I think that all students on this committee should be cognizant of what's going on just in the event that something could cause chain of reactions so that we're not just left hanging. Not enough action or stands are taken to make students aware. I think UVM students for the most part can go weeks and not know what's going on. I think the people on this committee should. For instance, the lack of a rational energy policy – what could UVM do? I think that the Student Action Committee should take more of a role in Federal issues.

"During the past year, the subject of the accuracy of UVM's grading policy has been widely discussed among faculty and students. One possible way of improving the current policy would be to initiate a twelve-point grading system which takes into account the distinction between plus and minus grades on the transcript."

The Cynic Question

Most agree that one problem of this Student Association has been a failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities. How do you plan to rectify this situation, if you perceive this to be a problem?

The failure to motivate student interest in governmental activities has been a big problem of the Student Association. Students must be informed before they can become interested in the progress of their Student Association. Keeping students informed on all of the activities and projects is a task which requires a strong, well-coordinated effort on the part of all active participants in the organization.

In the past, the Cynic has been an effective way to reach students, however newspaper coverage of S.A. issues and events should be just one part of a larger system of communications between S.A. and the UVM student body.

Increased motivation has to begin within the Student Association itself. Thirty-seven senators are elected each September, representing off-campus, on-campus, and Greek students. Each senator must take on a more participatory role by getting out and talking to the students they represent. Senators should be sent to residence hall government meetings on a regular basis to discuss S.A. projects and to gather new ideas from students. Periodic attendance at sorority and fraternity meetings would keep that segment better informed. More than half of all undergraduates live off-campus. Although this has always been the most difficult group to reach, there are a number of possibilities which should be considered. Students should be encouraged to go up to the S.A. office on second floor in Billings to make their concerns known to the officers and senators directly. A special column in the Cynic covering S.A. activities which affect off-campus students might be instituted. An attempt should be made to redevelop the "Gripe Vine," a suggestion-box system devised by last year's Student Action Committee. Finally, the progress made by this year's S.A. Communications Committee in publicizing S.A. events must continue.

Jesse Gadson and Henry Chamberlain:

"Sincere"

To the Editor:

The first S.A. candidate forum was held in the Harris Millis complex Monday night. All the presidential and vice-presidential candidates outlined their platforms and later responded to questions which were posed by members of the audience. I felt that two of the candidates Jesse Gadson and Henry Chamberlain (who are running for president and vice-president respectively) stood out from their opponents in a positive manner. I came to this conclusion because of their conceptualizations of how the S.A. has worked, and how it should and could work, but more importantly, because of their sincerity in regards to their willingness to work towards their goals.

Their main issue was that of bringing the S.A. back to the students. A number of ways they proposed to do this were by making the S.A. a more aware and integrated organization, partly through the efforts of a new committee and partly by directing activities of the S.A. towards immediate and relevant student needs. Accountability of senators and their committees was also touched upon.

I felt the need to write this letter because of the extremely low student turnout Monday night. I believe that it is vital for each student to know the issues, and each candidate's platform, and to make a choice based upon these facts, instead of on the basis of friendship or familiarity. I also believe that if a representative sample of the student body had been present the night of the forum, and if a vote had been taken, it would have been obvious who would have been elected.

Dave Lord
Davis Hall

"Creative"

To the Editor:

Watching the Student Association candidates debate last night made me more aware of how important the SA really is to the student body. Throughout the debate as questions were being asked covering a broad area, two candidates consistently came out with new, sound, and creative ideas for a stronger, more assertive, more effective Student Association. One member of the duo was running for president, the other for vice-president. Obviously they were prepared for the debate, both were in tune with each other. When a question was directed towards them, their response was clear, concise, and logical.

All of the candidates agreed that a change was necessary in the Student Association. It was mentioned time and time again that the Student Association was in desperate need of leadership. That the students had to pull away from the university bureaucracy and stand on its own two feet. Of the seven candidates, only two were able to convince me that they could achieve the goals stated in their platforms. The Cynic in an article entitled "The SA, Going... Going... Where?!" was itself asking for a stronger leadership. The solution to that question lies with two people, Jesse Gadson and Henry Chamberlain.

Tony Lopez
Student

Potentially Powerful

To the Editor:

The present problem with SA is caused by the leadership. Although they may be competent, they lack the aggressive nature needed to get things accomplished. A low key approach is taken on subjects so as not to arouse any opposition. Unfortunately, they also don't arouse interest. If SA could become more student activating, goals could be met.

I feel Jesse Gadson and Henry Chamberlain maybe have the type of character with tremendous drive needed to turn SA into a powerful organization in the student interest.

Being a senator on the Student Action committee, I know that a major problem has been getting information on an issue. Their idea of turning Student Activities into a research committee to funnel data back to Student Action is to be applauded. Therefore I enthusiastically endorse the ticket of Gadson and Chamberlain for S.A.

Jens T. Jensen
S.A. Senator

Charlie Clark:

"A Leader"

To the Editor:

Having lived through four springs at UVM I am fully aware of one of the rites of spring: student government elections. Annually we are put through a bombardment of posters, flyers, editorials and promises that soon become campaign history.

Presently I am an officer of IRA, the Inter-Residence Association, which is the on-campus student government representing the 4000 students living in the residence halls. A year ago IRA had bottomed out. The organization was ineffective and unproductive, only existing because it was going through the motions, which is all that can be expected from a student government which at best attracts only half of its members.

Today, IRA is an effective and productive group of students working together and tackling projects. Committee work is done with enthusiasm and the level of student commitment is high.

This marked improvement over last year's council can be attributed to the leadership that was elected last spring. Effective leadership is essential to good government and good government is something that we often do not see on the college campus.

Charlie Clark, IRA president, has spearheaded this organization for the past year. Charlie's drive, enthusiasm and leadership capabilities have been the major force behind IRA. His intelligence, ability and concern for the student are all vital attributes that an effective leader must have, qualities that must be seen in an SA President.

Having worked with Charlie, I know his capabilities and strongly and enthusiastically endorse Charlie Clark for election to the office of SA President. He is the leader that the Student Association so badly needs. The leader with experience and perspective that the other candidates would not bring to the office. Charlie will do more than just the job, he will improve the entire Student Association and be a leader concerned not about the office but about the student.

Sincerely,
Mark W. Weber
IRA Treasurer

"Concerned"

To the Editor:

As members of the Inter Residence Association Council and Executive Board, we have spent this past academic year working under the leadership of Charlie Clark, President. We recognize that his strong leadership abilities, his vast experience, and his concern for the organization have been the major force behind the growth of IRA. We wish to endorse Charlie for the office of S.A. President, as we know he will be the quality leader of S.A. that he has been for IRA.

IRA Executive Board Members
IRA Council Members
Carolyn M. Weinberg
June Robinson
Leonard Welstad
Steven A. Bushey
John L. Allen

(The list was not printed in its entirety due to lack of space.)

Meany Supports Reigelman and Burke

To the Editor:

Again it is time to elect a Student Association President and Vice-President. While many dismiss the importance of this, I can speak from various experiences that these positions carry with them responsibilities, obligations, and opportunities that do have an impact, directly or indirectly, on our educational, social and other experiences at UVM. Who will hold these offices is something we should consider carefully and express our opinion on in the elections next week. There are two candidates that hold promise for fulfilling these positions.

Peter Reigleman, candidate for S.A. President, I have known for over two years and have seen him grow in concern, confidence, and ability, that few would have expected. Peter, while not the most experienced in S.A., has been an S.A. Senator who has shown a willingness and capability to independently assume responsibility and to work with others. His other activities have proven similar. He has exhibited a quiet, modest determination and thoroughness. I believe he has the potential, enthusiasm, and competence, to effectively lead the Student Association in fulfilling its various purposes.

There is a vice-presidential candidate that has a unique blend of experience and ability. I have worked with and known Missy Burke for nearly three years in my capacity as Chairman of Special Affairs Committee, as vice-president and chairman of Student Action Committee, on the Albatross Committee, in work on numerous other issues, and as a friend. Throughout, she has shown an ability to work effectively with students, faculty and administrators, to work independently and with others. In her two years as S.A. Senator she was outstanding and achieved a thorough knowledge of the S.A. and its problems, and yet she has spent a year on activities outside the S.A. that have given her a broader perspective. Few students have achieved her knowledge of the University and how it works. Missy has an awareness of the responsibilities and unique opportunities of the office of S.A. vice-president. She has worked with past and present V.P.'s and knows our mistakes. She understands how to use the office to achieve results and has the humility to realize that these results require long hours and the assistance of others, and produce little recognition.

Dennis Meany
S.A. Vice-President
1976–77

Missy Burke:
"A Unique Student Leader"

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to express my support for Missy Burke for Vice-President of the UVM Student Association.

Having worked closely with Missy during my own tenure as SA Vice-President, I am extremely excited about her decision to pursue this office. Missy has demonstrated on countless occasions her willingness to serve and contribute to the university community. Her numerous and varied involvements qualify her beyond a shadow of a doubt to step into a position that I know will offer an incredible challenge.

Missy has clearly demonstrated her ability to work successfully with diverse groups of people and their ideas, a trait that has distinguished her as a unique student leader. In short, Missy Burke has the commitment to people, leadership skills, and integrity to make a very positive contribution to the office of Vice-President of the S.A.

My best wishes for an enthusiastic election and continued success in the UVM Student Association.

Sincerely,
Paul C. Ajamian
Vice President
UVM Student Association,
1975-76

John Martin:
Experienced and Dedicated

To the Editor:

It's that time of year again when political platforms are swept and podiums dusted in anticipation of the Student Association elections. Names previously unknown to us now greet us at the opening of every dorm, door and lobby floors become littered with their colored posters.

There is though, one person whose name stands out amidst these political hopefuls. That person is John Martin, candidate for Student Association President. John has had considerable experience in the workings of UVM government. He has served as Chairman of the S.A. Special Affairs Committee and is a member of the Executive Committee. John is also Student Representative to the University of Vermont Board of Trustees Student Activities committee, and this year was Chairman of Winterfest Committee. In addition, John has served as Moderator of the MAT complex. It is on the basis of John's active contributions to these committees and all his endeavors as a student of the University of Vermont that we write this letter of support. John has proven time and time again that he is honest in his actions and sincere in his commitments. In our opinion, John's past experience, performance, and dedication to get the job done right the first time surely makes him the most capable candidate.

We strongly believe that the next S.A. President should be John Martin.

Randy Gridley
Donald E. Saul Jr.

The Cynic Editorial Board Endorsement Is Located on Page Twenty-two.

Allen Sees Need for Greater IRA — S.A. Cooperation

My decision to run for President of IRA is based on a number of reasons. I feel that in recent years (at least over the three years I have been at UVM) the prestige of IRA has increased tremendously. That rise in prestige has been awarded to IRA by the administration, especially the Office of Residential Life. Resident students seem, for the most part, to be unclear as to just what IRA is, and what it does. The truth is that any student who lives in a residence hall is a member of IRA and yet, the weekly council meeting seldom, if ever, turns up one representative from each hall.

Most students are probably unaware that IRA is responsible for part of the funding and planning for Oktoberfest and Red Square Affair. IRA was instrumental in bringing about the new room choosing system by lottery. Each week IRA theatre shows some fine movies at Southwick. There are many other examples of IRA functions as well. I think it can be definitely stated that IRA has improved the quality of life on our campus.

This confusion about IRA prevents students from recognizing the merits and accomplishments of IRA. This prevents IRA from being quite as responsive to student needs as it could be.

Also, I would like to see more cooperation between IRA and SA. I think that attempts have been made in the past to coordinate activities, but these plans have never progressed beyond preliminary stages. I think the coordination would be beneficial to both organizations.

My personal experience this year has shown me that a good rapport has been established between IRA and the Office of Residential Life. It will be important to maintain this relationship and use it to bring about the changes resident students find necessary in residence halls.

"... Confusion about IRA prevents students from recognizing the merits and accomplishments of IRA. This prevents IRA from being quite as responsible a to student needs as it could be."

The same is true of the relationship of IRA with Saga food service. As President, I would work to keep ties open to Saga because the kind of relationship IRA has with Saga presently is beneficial to students.

I feel that I am qualified for this office. I've been involved with hall governments since my freshman year. I have worked indirectly with IRA, until this year when I was elected to the Council as the representative from Wright Hall. I have worked on several of the standing committees associated with the Council and also have worked personally with several members of the Executive board. I have learned a lot about how IRA works and it is, for the most part, one of the more efficient and least appreciated organizations on campus. I feel that with the experience and relationships I have established this year I could work effectively as President and perhaps improve the status of IRA which would benefit all resident students.

John L. Allen

Bushley Wants to Present 'Opportunities and Challenges" of IRA

The most serious problem I have encountered in running for IRA (Inter Residency Association) president is that very few people are aware of IRA's function and capabilities. Many people are unsure of the existing differences between IRA, Student Association and class governments. Therefore, I find it necessary to explain my perception of IRA and how I as president would benefit the organization.

IRA is a governing body composed of all residents from all UVM residence halls. Its function as outlined in the IRA constitution preamble is to "enhance the quality of Residence Hall living," represent hall residents to the campus community and "promote a balanced program by co-ordinating the efforts of individual residents."

In the spirit of the preamble, IRA sponsors a movie theater at Southwick Gym on weekends, rents regrigerators to residents in the Fall, sponsors social activities such as dances, and contributes financial, organizational and personnel aid to residence halls and resident organizations. IRA also is an important communication line between Residential Life, SAGA food, or any organization that wishes the attention of residence hall students.

Unfortunately, many people are unaware of IRA's capabilities. Because of this, people are deprived of an opportunity to use their government. It is critical next year that IRA reach residents and have the residents understand its function. If this can be done, more people will benefit from their organization.

The IRA president has administrative duties to fulfill. These I am capable of administering too, being in the past an organizer of a hiking club, presently IRA theater manager, and an organizer of the upcoming St. Patrick's Day dance. As an IRA representative, I feel I have developed a feeling for the workings of the presidency, council and committees that I would need to deal with next year.

By far the most important, as I have mentioned, is to make the hall residents aware of the capabilities of IRA. This would be my goal, through massive publicity if necessary, to present to people the opportunities and challenges of IRA. If this can be achieved, the vitality and usefulness of the organization should be enhanced and preserved.

Steven A. Bushey

Students Must Pick Six VPIRG Trustees

By David White

Next week UVM students will elect six students to the VPIRG Board of Trustees from ten candidates, all of whom have had experience with VPIRG.

VPIRG elections will accompany S.A. elections, and each student may vote for six trustees. Polling places will be set up in a variety of places around campus.

VPIRG has 15 trustees, with the largest contingent from UVM. Seven of the other trustees are from the other six member colleges, and the other two are at-large trustees.

THE CANDIDATES

Krista Billings, a sophomore and native Vermonter, is currently coordinating VPIRG's Energy Waste Hunt on the UVM campus. "I will be a UVA student next year, and will have a great deal of time to devote to the VPIRG trusteeship. I am primarily interested in women's rights and women's health issues, and would like to see VPIRG involved in these areas. I am also interested in energy conservation, and feel VPIRG can be effective in developing an energy conservation plan for Vermont."

Bill Gehr is a junior, majoring in Resource Economics. "As a four year resident of Vermont, I have become sensitive to the needs of Vermonters. This semester I am researching the economic development plans of the state and local governments, a project I hope to continue this summer as an intern with VPIRG. Next year I wish to pursue land-use planning issues, economic self-sufficiency, and owner-built energy efficient housing. I would like to stress VPIRG's educational role and increase student participation by making students aware that they can have a significant impact on policy-making organizations in Vermont."

Lewis Heyman is a political science major, interested in consumer law. "I have worked with VPIRG primarily in the organizational meetings. As a trustee I would like to apply myself to the organizational aspects of VPIRG, such as planning research projects and workshops. I also want to help see student projects turned into Vermont policy. Dealing with local projects, I am especially interested in counter-balancing corporate interests, such as the proposed Williston Mall. I feel I have plenty of energy and enthusiasm, as well as the time to devote to VPIRG next year." Heyman is a sophomore, and lives in Robinson Hall.

Beth Reiman is a freshman majoring in Environmental Studies. "I became familiar with VPIRG this year by working on the Energy Waste Hunt, through petitioning, and by being a dormitory representative. I plan on taking courses over the summer so that I will have sufficient time next year to devote to research of Vermont's water systems, the current job situation, the reasons for the rapid development in certain areas, as well as the long-term effects that such development may have. As a trustee, I would have the opportunity to coordinate these projects with other people, and, perhaps, begin to fulfill some of these goals."

John Matarese, a freshman, is an English major and plans to write as a career. "I am seeking the position of VPIRG trustee due to my concern for a better life for Vermont residents and students, and for the valuable learning experience this position provides. During this past year I have assisted VPIRG on a committee opposing the Williston Mall, and have followed the Act 250 hearings concerning Pyramid and recent land use planning with interest. As a trustee, I would further my involvement in environmental advocacy, as well as pursue differing issues of public concern, while responding to the interests of the students I shall represent."

Lisa Shulock is currently a trustee of VPIRG, and has been active with VPIRG for two years studying nuclear power and energy conservation. "VPIRG is one of the greatest educational resources at UVM, and I would like to see as many students as possible benefit from an experience with VPIRG. On the state level, VPIRG is Vermont's only true research and advocacy organization. Energy conservation is one of the most important issues facing Vermonters, and I would like to see VPIRG continue its effective work in this area. I feel my two years experience with VPIRG is my greatest asset." Lisa is a sophomore, majoring in Environmental Studies.

Tom Storrow is a Junior, majoring in Environmental Studies and General Agriculture. "I am currently working as a VPIRG Intern in Montpelier on land-use issues, particularly wetlands protection legislation that is now in the House. I have also been active in the fight against the Williston Mall. I am a strong believer in the wise use of our natural resources and in protection from developmental pressures and growth, and feel that VPIRG can make significant contributions in these areas." Tom is a native Vermonter, and has lived in Jericho for 15 years.

Lori Stratton is a Botany-Environmental Studies major, and is a sophomore. "I am naturally interested in environmental issues and social change. I know social change is very feasible in Vermont, through VPIRG. I worked last semester on energy conservation legislation, which has now passed in the House, and am currently doing research on an upcoming Vermont issue, the use of an insecticide called Carbaryl. I am aware of the time commitment involved, as a VPIRG trustee, and am enthusiastic to go to it and contribute as much as I can. One never knows what one can accomplish."

Don Taylor is a freshman majoring in Political Science. "My main interest is in the prevention of nuclear power as an energy alternative for Vermont and the country. This semester I am working with VPIRG preparing materials to inform the public on the costs and dangers of nuclear power. VPIRG will become increasingly important in the future of Vermont as the resources and unspoiled landscape of the state become threatened by developmental pressures. I would like to gain experience in environmental law, and help make VPIRG an integral part of more students' education."

Cindy Wemple is a freshman and is from upstate New York. "Being from a rural area, I feel I understand the problems of a rural state. I am currently majoring in Resource Economics with a coordinate major in Environmental Studies. This semester I am working with VPIRG investigating economic development in Vermont, and am particularly interested in agriculture and small business. I hope to get involved with research on energy conservation and land-use planning. I feel that I have a lot to offer VPIRG, and that VPIRG can remain a strong instrument of social change in Vermont."

David White recently replaced Whitey Bluestein as VPIRG director.

The Mess to Address Before You

Make Your Election Selection

FREE

VERMIO CLINIC

FREE

VOLUME XCV NUMBER 21 "One well-placed hand is worth a thousand apologies." APRIL 6, 1978

The Fourth
George D. Aiken Lectures

Africa:
The Emerging Continent

The United States Identifies with the Aspirations of the Black Majorities.

Senator Dick Clark (top), keynote speaker in the fourth annual George D. Aiken Lectures, spoke on Africa and U.S. policy with a response from Senator Aiken.

SPS Photos by Mitch Sprung

Mountaineering #1.

FUNDAMENTALS OF MOUNTAINEERING

What is mountaineering all about? Funny you should ask. Because we just happen to have an answer. (Ah-h, life's little coincidences.) Mountaineering is a skill, a science and an art. Yet anyone with a thirst for excellence and normally developed motor skills can master it. Simply study these fundamentals and follow them faithfully.

1. Step one, appropriately enough, starts by selecting the correct site. To do so, pick up a bottle of Busch® Premium Beer. This is called heading for the mountains.

2. Okay, here's where the fun begins. Hold the mountain firmly in your left hand, grasp the mountain top with your right hand and twist the little fella off. There you go.

3. Now for the tricky part. Neophytes, listen up: the proper pour is straight down the center of the glass. Only in this way will the cold, invigorating taste of the mountain come to a head.

4. Once poured, pacing becomes paramount. As any seasoned mountaineer will tell you, the only way to down a mountain is slowly, smoothly and steadily – savoring every swallow of the brew that is Busch. If you're a bit awkward at first, don't be discouraged. Perfection takes practice. Soon enough, having emptied your glass and filled your soul, you too will be a mountaineer.

Fig.1 Before Mountaineering.

Fig.2 During Mountaineering.

Fig.3 After Mountaineering.

Premium Beer.

BUSCH®

Don't just reach for a beer. Head for the mountains.

© 1978 Anheuser-Busch, Inc St Louis, Mo

Student Leaders Elected

Voter Turnout is Light

By Russell Flannery

Low voter turnout plagued last week's student government elections, as roughly 20% of the student body elected new Student Association and Intra-Residence Association officers, in addition to five members of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG).

Although out-going S.A. President Geoff Liggett termed the turnout "a national norm," the number of students voting in this year's election was 4% lower than in the 1977 balloting. Liggett said, "To say it's disappointing – I'm not sure if I'm disappointed or not. Usually the turnout is between 20 and 25%. There are very few schools that get more than 25%."

The final count showed that running mates Charlie Clark and Missy Burke were elected the positions of S.A. President and Vice President. Clark, with 53% of the total vote, emerged from a field of five candidates. His closest competitor, Jesse Gadson, gathered 21% of the vote. Burke defeated vice-presidential challenger Henry Chamberlain by a 66 to 34% margin.

"I felt that the final margin would be much less than it actually was," said Clark, who added, "Of course, I was pleasantly surprised."

Liggett later stated, "I feel that Charlie's margin of victory was significant enough to show that he did have a good organization this year in IRA. I'm sure he will carry that over into the S.A. next year. I have confidence in his ability."

John Allen, a Wright hall junior, was seated as IRA President, succeeding Charlie Clark. The 1978-79 IRA Vice-Presidents will be Lynn Morse and David Maurice. Sue Vessels will serve as treasurer, and Eileen Mahoney was elected as secretary.

Contrary to a previous announcement stating six members would be selected, five UVM students were elected to the VPIRG Board of Trustees. The representatives are Bill Gehr, a junior, sophomores Lisa Shuloch, Krista Billings, and Lori Stratton, and freshman Beth Reiman.

New class officers are as follows: Class of 1979: Greg Boardmen, president; Karen Amet, vice president; David Ullman, secretary; Lisa Whittner,

(continued on page 12)

| S.A. PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE | NO. OF VOTES | % OF TOTAL |
|---|---|---|
| Charlie Clark | 505 | 33 |
| Jesse Gadson | 318 | 21 |
| Eric Kilburn | 268 | 18 |
| Peter Riegelman | 150 | 10 |
| John Martin | 133 | 9 |
| S.A. VICE-PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE | NO. OF VOTES | % OF TOTAL |
| Missy Burke | 368 | 66 |
| Henry Chamberlaine | 444 | 34 |

*figures supplied by the Student Association

Charlie Clark, new S.A. President.

SPS Photo by Michael Koeniges

Students Will Be Responsible for Upkeep of Co-op Dorm; Will Save $130 on Room Bill

"...the co-op simply will not work. The enthusiasm will be there at first, but after a while, who's going to really want to clean up someone else's mess?"
—A Student

By John Letteri

One hundred and seventeen students will control the Hamilton dormitory next fall by dictating policies concerning academic and non-academic activities, as well as being responsible for the general upkeep of the dorm.

In addition, students who opt to live in the co-operative dorm (co-op) will save 130 dollars on their room bill.

During the first week of the next fall semester, residents of the co-op will hold several dorm meetings to explore as a community what they expect from living in the co-op. "Hopefully, these meetings will establish three or four common priorities" said Student Association (SA) Senator Peter Corbett, designer of the co-op. After this is accomplished, the next step will be to elect a student leadership. The leadership will be responsible for enacting the priorities voted in by the students as well as making sure the housecleaning duties are performed. They will also handle administrative details such as the ordering of custodial supplies. Although there will be three Resident Assistants (RA'S) and a Hall Advisor living in the co-op, "it's going to be a student-run dorm, not ours (Residential Life)" contends Rick Searer, from the Dept. of Residential Life. The RA's will take part in the custodial work and their input in the dorm government will be equal to that of a student. The Hall Advisor will not take part in the actual workings of the dorm, but will act as a liaison between the dorm, the Housekeeping supervisor and the Department of Residential Life.

The housekeeping duties students will be responsible for fall under seven categories. Daily work will include the removal of trash and the sweeping of stairways. Bathrooms will be "scrubbed" three days a week. Such things as mopping the recreation room, stairs and halls will be done on a weekly basis. Each month, the halls and recreation room will be waxed, and the trash cans and trash room scrubbed. Dust mops will be dry cleaned every six weeks, and light bulb changes and spot cleaning will be done as needed. This represents about "one and a half to two hours of work per student every third week" said Corbett. The jobs will be on a rotating basis so that "everyone will get a chance to clean the bathrooms" said Corbett. Since students will perform these housekeeping duties, they will save $130 on their room bills that would normally represent the cost of housekeeping per student per year.

Director of Residential Life, Stephen Petersen contends that Hamilton "is a sound facility." It is a "self-contained dorm without people walking through it all the time to get somewhere else," said Peterson. Hamilton is also one of the smallest dormitories, housing approximately one hundred and seventeen students. "If the co-op works on a small scale, it will be installed as a permanent option and perhaps tried in larger dorms," said Petersen.

Corbett contends that the co-op living situation will be an alternative to the current campus life, that is mere co-existence with a lot of insensitivity on the part of students to each other and the dorm itself. "The polarization of students with a common concern will create a sense of community, wherein there will be an inherent need to cooperate, to counteract and understand those living around us," said Corbett. With the responsibility for the governing and upkeep of the dorm placed with the students Petersen contends this will engender student respect for their home and as a result "alleviate some of the vandalism problems." Searer believes that the "sense of community" created by the co-op living situation will be "beneficial" to the students and the dorm. There are three possible problems in such a situation according to one SA senator. First, he said the idea of having a student leadership "may create two separate groups or cliques of students in the co-op, the powerful and powerless," that would not enhance a sense of a whole community. Corbett contended that a student leadership would be much better than the normal dorm government because any problems that develop will be handled on a "student to student" basis. He added that the students who are elected to

(continued on page 6)

SPS Photos by Scott Greb

Will students faithfully perform their cleaning duties?

Index

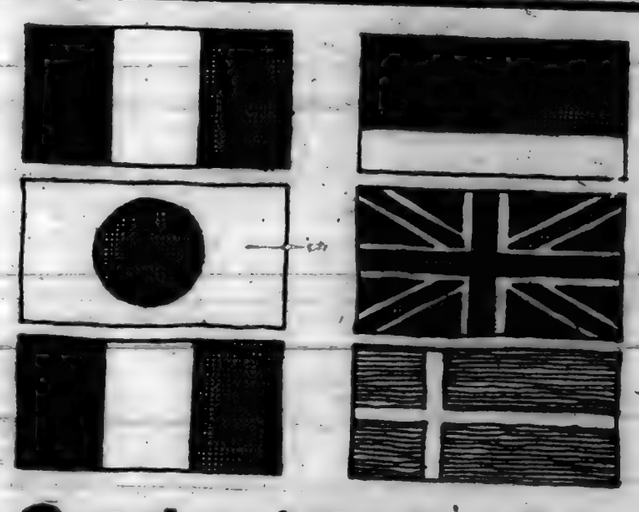
News.....3
Coverstory.....10
Commentary.....11
Features.....13
Health.....14
Calendar.....21
Op-Ed.....23
Sports.....25
Profile.....30
Random Notes.....33
Arts.....35
Classified.....42

It's Crispin Leather's way of saying thank you for making our first six months of business such a smashing success. Break away on an exciting windjammer cruise for a week of sun and fun island hopping through the Caribbean. There's no purchase necessary. Just come down to Crispin Leather and register for paradise.



For The Largest Selection and Latest Styles In

FRYE

CRISPIN LEATHER

169 College St. 863-2216 (Next to Burlington Savings Bank)

Get the right Foreign Car Part you need the first time

Worse than getting no part at all is getting a part that doesn't fit. That's why your Beck/Arnley expert makes sure he gives you the right foreign car part for your import the first time. So you don't have to come back for the same part a second time.

10% Student Discount

Imported Parts Center

3060 Williston Road

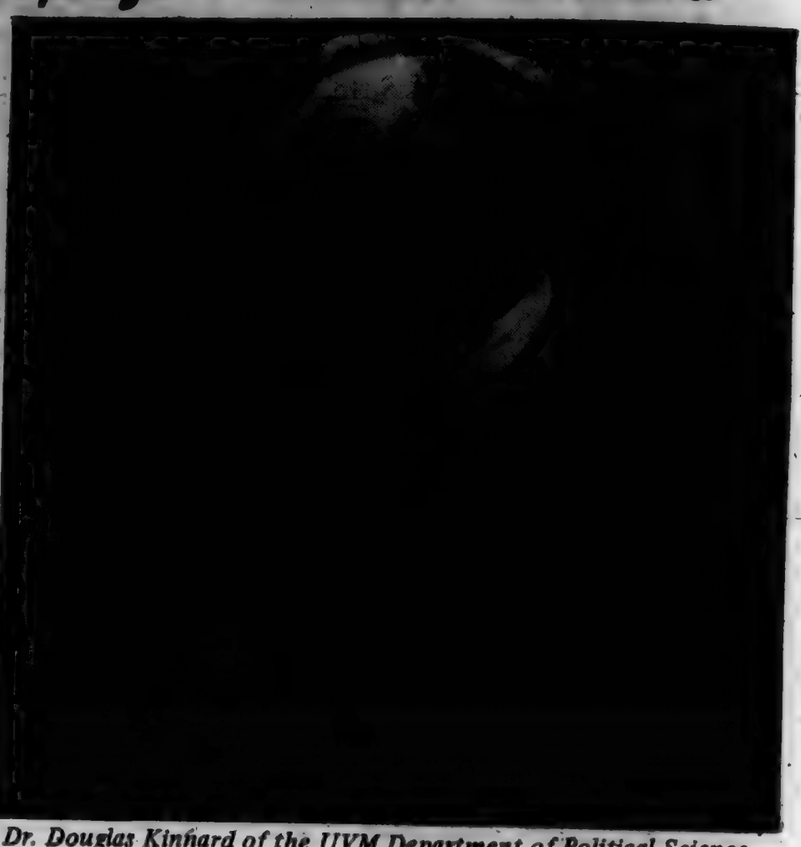
South Burlington, Vermont 05401

658-0707

Vietnam Commanders Were Skeptical of War Objectives, Says Professor Kinnard

By John Letteri

Over half the commanding personnel in Vietnam said that the war "wasn't worth fighting" and found the objectives of the war "unclear," as evidenced in a questionnaire study conducted by Dr. Douglas Kinnard, who lectured on the results of his work last week.



A retired brigadier general who himself saw action in Vietnam, Kinnard stated that one of the problems of fighting in Vietnam was U.S. administrative policies during the war. The gap between administrative and military policy created a situation in which the military played the "role of a spectator." They (the military) were responsible for the fighting, but Washington held the power and made all the strategic decisions, he said. The problem was exacerbated, said Kinnard, by the fact that two successive administrations (Johnson's and Nixon's) used the defense budget to their advantage, threatening big cuts if the military did not heed administrative whims. In addition, the National Security Council, made up of top administrative personnel and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, became a 'rubber stamp' committee for Johnson's Vietnam strategy. 70% of the commanders in Vietnam responding to Kinnard's questionnaire were "very critical of Washington's policies during the war," he said.

As a direct result of this civilian military gap, 68% of the commanders Kinnard interviewed felt the objectives of the war were "unclear" and 61% "did not approve of the tactics used." This alienation, said Kinnard, showed its effects in the field in the form of morale problems and drug usage. The U.S. objectives in Vietnam changed from stabilizing South Vietnamese government in 1967 to an effort to save American prestige in 1973. This "could only cause problems from the top to the bottom" of the military, according to Kinnard.

This civilian military gap was widened by the secretaries of defense during the war, Robert MacNamara and Melvin Laird, who both mishandled the problems confronting their office. Kinnard contended that MacNamara, under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, "gave the military too much leeway, did not allow the Joint Chiefs access to the President, and never worked out a trusting relationship with the military." MacNamara did introduce an analytical mode of thinking to the Pentagon about Vietnam. But "what's that against $150 billion and 50,000 American lives?" asked Kinnard.

Kinnard stated that Laird, under President Nixon, used the

(continued on page 12)

Dr. Douglas Kinnard of the UVM Department of Political Science.

SPS Photo by Donald Cunningham

Faculty Senate to Consider Add/drop And Withdrawal Proposals on April 6

Student Association Recommends Revisions of the Proposals

The add/drop and withdrawal policy proposal recommended by the Academic Affairs Committee will be voted on by the Faculty Senate this Thursday, April 6. The proposal provides for the extension of the add and drop periods by one week, making both four weeks long. Most significantly, the new withdrawal policy proposal would be university-wide in application.

The present system is handled through the individual colleges, which often results in inequitable treatment of students due to the varying academic philosophies of the individual colleges. Because the new policy would be standard for all the colleges, inequities in withdrawals would be eliminated.

The decision to withdraw would be in the hands of the students, their advisors and instructors, rather than the dean's office. The instructor would carry the burden of determining the student's present status in the course and the withdrawal policy would appear in this format:

(1) No drops will be allowed after the 4th week except in cases where the student is enrolled by administrative error and has not attended the course. The disposition of such cases would be handled by the Registrar's Office.

(2) From the end of the fourth week to the last day of classes, the student who wishes to withdraw would fill out the course withdrawal form, consult his or her advisor and submit the form to the instructor. The instructor would record an evaluation of the student's work and the week of the semester when the withdrawal takes place. The evaluation options are shown below.

WA to WF — appropriate letter grade for the student's work at that point in time.

WN — could not be evaluated.

One copy would go to the student's dean for information purposes and the other copy would go to the Registrar to be recorded on the transcript. The transcript would show the following entry:

WGT — Where W indicates withdrawal, G indicates Grade (including N), and T is the week the withdrawal occurred. For example, WC6 means that the student withdrew while doing C quality work in sixth week of the semester.

(3) The grades of WA — WD (including WN) would not enter into the GPA, but WF would be treated as an F and enter into the GPA.

(4) No withdrawals would be allowed after the last day of classes.

In response to this policy proposed by the Academic Affairs Committee, the S.A. Senate approved the following recommendations within the new course withdrawal policy:

(1) Preference for a WP, WF format (withdrawal passing/withdrawal failing) instead of the committee's proposal of WA — WF. The WP — WF distinction is more than adequate, while the WA — WF one is cumbersome and confusing.

(2) Preference for the week of the withdrawal eliminated from the report, as the sole distinction of WP/WF is sufficient, anything more is unnecessary information.

(3) While the S.A. Senate endorses the proposal indicating that we prefer it over the present systematic process, the above suggestions improve the format and cohesiveness of a new withdrawal policy.

This proposal was approved at the March 14th S.A. Senate meeting by a vote of 16 to 1.

S.A. contends that a standard withdrawal format for the entire university would eliminate the inequities prevalent in the present system and supports the Academic Affairs Committee's policy proposal. S.A. feels that the proposed policy is superior to the one now in effect but contends that their recommendations would further improve it.

The Cynic Interview With the New S.A. President Charlie Clark

In the three year period following the revitalization of the Student Association, the role of administrations have varied from reestablishing respect within the UVM administration, to reestablishing support within the student body.

It is clearly unreasonable for one to expect incoming S.A. President Charlie Clark to define the specific character and tone which his administration will eventually assume. However, in hopes of providing an overview of the general attitudes held by the new Student Association leader, Cynic Executive Editor Russell Flannery recently talked to Charlie Clark on issues ranging from a lack of racial diversity at UVM to his conception of the relationship between the S.A. President and the student trustees.

Cynic: How do you perceive the relationship of the S.A. President to the dean of students (Keith Miser) and student advisor (Dave Nestor)?

Clark: The S.A. President has to have a good relationship between the dean of students and the director of student activities to be an effective organization. Some people have commented that it's better to work outside and then present a program or plan right to them and expect a yes or no answer. That I don't think will work. The adversary relationship that was apparent years back is no longer there. I think students and administrators like to work together rather than fight each other. I think we've learned that. I see a close relationship between S.A. and the dean of students.

Cynic: Should the Student Association serve as an initiator of programs, or as an organization who only responds to solicited student requests?

Clark: I think the S.A. should be both. The S.A. is the elected student government, and to that extent, it's responsible for initiating programs for the well-being of the student body. There are times when the S.A. won't seem to be initiating and representing the students in the best manner. It's at that time when additional requests should come into the S.A., and at that time, we'd respond in that fashion. For the most part, I think we should initiate; that's what we were elected for.

Cynic: Are there any programs you tentatively plan to initiate in the early fall?

Clark: I think what is going to happen is this summer I'll be up here for a good part of the time doing research. I'd like to look into the credit union. There's a conference coming up in a few weeks in April, which has the heads of all student governments. I think some valuable ideas can come out of that. That is where the credit union idea came from,according to Geoff Liggett. I think that I'm going to lean a little bit away from pet projects because I see that as beholding the S.A. President to one project while the rest of the Student Association gets neglected; because once you have your pet project, nothing could really get in the way of that. A lot of people don't particularly like that, and that's no way to keep an organization together.

Cynic: How do you view the relationship between the student trustees and the S.A. President?

Clark: The student trustees are not representing students as such. They're representing an age and a lifestyle. What I can do as Student Association President is inform trustees, as much as possible, what students' wants and needs are. The student trustees are not going to listen to everything the Student Association has to say — that's not the concept of what a trustee is. What I can do is clarify things for the trustees, making sure they have all the resources available to them... This should not be a pressuring of the trustees.

Cynic: Less than 1% of the student body is composed of minority students. Do you consider yourself in any position to influence the diversity of students attending the University, if indeed you recognize a need for greater diversity?

Clark: I think that 1% is kind of ridiculous. I don't think people are getting enough of a diverse education here. It might be unrealistic to say that we can get a well-balanced student body in Vermont, but... I think the Student Association definitely has an interest in keeping the student body diverse racially and diverse monetarily. Racially, it's obviously not very diverse. Monetarily, we're getting less diverse, because we're pricing ourselves right out of the markets. Unless we get ourselves balanced economically, we won't leave the resources for different programs, which would allow for increased minority participation.

"The student trustees are not representing students as such. They're representing an age and a lifestyle."

Cynic: September elections are frequently mentioned as a contributing factor to the traditional lack of major activity by S.A. during the Fall Semester. Do you have any solutions or alternate proposals to address this problem. If not, how do you plan to deal with the given situation?

Clark: With the S.A. Senators being elected in October, we obviously have a problem that there are a small number of people working in September. I think a lot of what we can do in September is plan our programs and move quickly as soon as October comes. That, I think, is a fault in the structure of S.A. right now. If we didn't have fall elections freshmen couldn't participate. I think they're very valuable and energetic to the Student Association.

Cynic: Given this year's low voter turnout and failure by the S.A. to maintain polling booths at previously announced locations, do you see the need for some form of election reform?

Clark: I think the elections are squeezed into too short a period. It's about three weeks of just intense work from the Cynic article to the campaigning to the voting — just compact. People see names all over the campus, but they can't link those names with faces. There were opportunities to meet the candidates at the forums. Those were not well publicized. I think the elections have to be planned out much further in advance. We have to make sure there are voting polls where they're supposed to be, and they're announced correctly. So many people that I ran into during the campaign didn't even know there was an election going on.

the Ski shop INC.

388 Shelburne Rd. S. Burlington 862-5488

UPSTAIRS RECORDS

OPPOSITE PENNEY'S · DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

These Series 7.98 Records

Now On Sale

For Only $4.95

Grand Opening

NEW LOCATION!!!

1776 Williston Rd. Next to the Flight Inn Motel

Will be at Present Location until June 1

The NORCO Specialists

35 White St. So. Burlington

Mon - Fri 8am - 8pm Sat 8am - 5pm

864-7871 864-4283

Rathskellar Bill Finally Passed by Legislature

By Tom Daniels

Last week, the Vermont Legislature approved a bill allowing Vermont Colleges to serve beer and wine in campus 'rathskellars,' patterned after the cellars of German city halls where beer is sold. Under the bill, colleges must obtain licenses for beer and wine 'clubs' and only students would be permitted to join the clubs, but they could bring a limited number of guests.

The current alternatives are drinking in the dorm/apartment or traveling downtown to one of Burlington's many bars. There has been concern about students drinking alone and the rathskellar aims at providing alcohol in a controlled social setting. Especially at other Vermont colleges, students often drive miles to buy liquor, and endanger themselves and others on the drive back to campus.

A major problem in the rathskellar bill arose over liability insurance which requires colleges to obtain coverage for up to $2 million. Randall Niquette D-Winooski, a prime mover of the bill, cited the famous $1.5 million ski accident case as a possible precedent.

First introduced in 1970, the rathskellar bill passed the House last year. Last week, the Senate okayed the measure by one vote. In casting a tie-breaking vote, Lt. Gov. T. Garry Buckley declared colleges students "have the same rights as the rest of us."

But opposition to rathskellars was stiff. "It looks like we're turning the snack bars into beer parlors," quipped Sen. Henry Manchester. "All the students will be under peer pressure to drink, whether they want to or not."

Sen. Keith Wallace argued, "We found students who opposed it, parents who opposed it, and college administrators who opposed it." Wallace added that the state would be subsidizing campus bars in competition with private establishments.

Gym Expansion Funds Forthcoming

A Senate proposal to incorporate funds for expansion of the University of Vermont's gymnasium in the State's capital construction budget was quickly passed by the House of Representatives Saturday, 112-21.

During the last legislative session, UVM had appealed to the legislature for one million dollars to enlarge the women's facilities at Patrick Gym in order to conform to federal equal-opportunity guidelines. The House rejected the request.

An alternative $960,000 request was brought before the legislature this year, but the House voted not to reconsider the expansion funds appeal. Lacking the expansion funds, the construction budget was passed by the House and forwarded to the Senate, where the expansion funds provision was reinstated, due largely to the efforts of Lt. T. Garry Buckley.

This led to the reconsideration of the measure by the House last Saturday. For approval, the measure only needed a majority. In earlier considerations it would have had to garnish three-quarters of the votes to pass.

Vehement opposition to the expansion funds came from only one legislator, Rep. Lucille C. Milinaroli, R-Barre.

"Don't they (the Senate) have any consideration? We've killed it twice in the same biennium," said Mrs. Molinaroli.

"I don't care if they add three buildings, the taxpayer shouldn't have to pick up the tab," she said.

Mrs. Molinaroli said she was angry when she discovered that the proposal presently contained a stipulation that it did not contain last year, namely that $260,000 of the $960,000 would be raised by student athletic fees.

UVM "came here last year with its pockets sewn up," she said.

A portion of the capital construction budget will also be used to make traveling in Carrigan Hall of UVM easier for handicapped students. In addition, UVM will undergo energy conservation and heating system improvements.

Co-op Dorm

Continued from page three

leadership positions will be responsible for their own custodial duties as well as making sure others are doing their jobs.

Second, students may be inclined to live in the co-op simply because of the $130 savings, he said. The sense of community would not be of first priority with these students, he added.

Thirdly, he pointed out that some students may become disillusioned with the co-op, leaving the bulk of the work to just a few. Jobs would go undone. He also noted that this type of apathy might have two solutions, according to Corbett and Searer. First, students who wish to live in the co-op will be made fully aware through flyers and other information sources, of the responsibilities involved in being part of the co-op. They will also be required to sign a contract that specifies all the duties and the ideals involved in the co-op. In this way, "it is hoped that we will get students committed to the overall design of the co-op to start with," said Corbett. Second, if a student does not do his job one week, he will be assigned the same job a second week. This will continue until a student hasn't done his job for the third week in a row. "He or she will then be asked to leave the co-op," according to Searer.

Several students contended that "the co-op simply will not work. The enthusiasm will be there at first, but after a while, who's going to really want to clean up someone else's mess." Others feel that "to get 117 people to agree on what a dirty bathroom is and who's going to

(continued on page 12)

Senator Clark:

U.S. Advocates Majority Rule in Africa

By John Letteri

Recognizing the need to convince the emerging African countries that the United States is committed to the black majority aspirations for the control of their governments and individual rights, "American Foreign policy has changed more with regard to the African continent than would be the case with any other part of the world," said Senator Richard Clark (D–Iowa), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on African Affairs, Tuesday night at Ira Allen Chapel.

In an effort to undo the mistakes of past administrations, current American foreign policy towards Africa advocates the "peaceful transition of power (to the black majority) through free elections" minority governments, said Clark. In addition, the problems of attaining black majority rule in Rhodesia, Southwest Africa, and South Africa are treated as "separate policies" by the U.S., he continued.

Senator Richard Clark. SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

In Rhodesia, American efforts are now directed towards a settlement of the civil war that continues in that country by "arriving at a settlement that includes all the black leaders," according to Clark. A recent "internal settlement" agreed to by three black leaders and the current Prime Minister of Rhodesia, Ian Smith, has failed to resolve the conflict. Clark contends that "after a settlement has been reached, the real power over the country should be given to Great Britain for a six month period in order for UN supervised elections for a new government of Rhodesia" to be approved by the majority of Rhodesians.

In Southwest Africa, the solution to the problem of continuing South African presence in that country despite a World Court decision against that presence, is according to Senator Clark, "an attempt by the U.S. and the five permanent members of the National Security Council of the UN" to enforce the World Court mandate and set up "free elections" in that country.

Although the problems of racism and minority rule are present in South Africa, Senator Clark claims "the South African

(continued on 12)

Solution To World Food Problem Seen As Self-Reliance

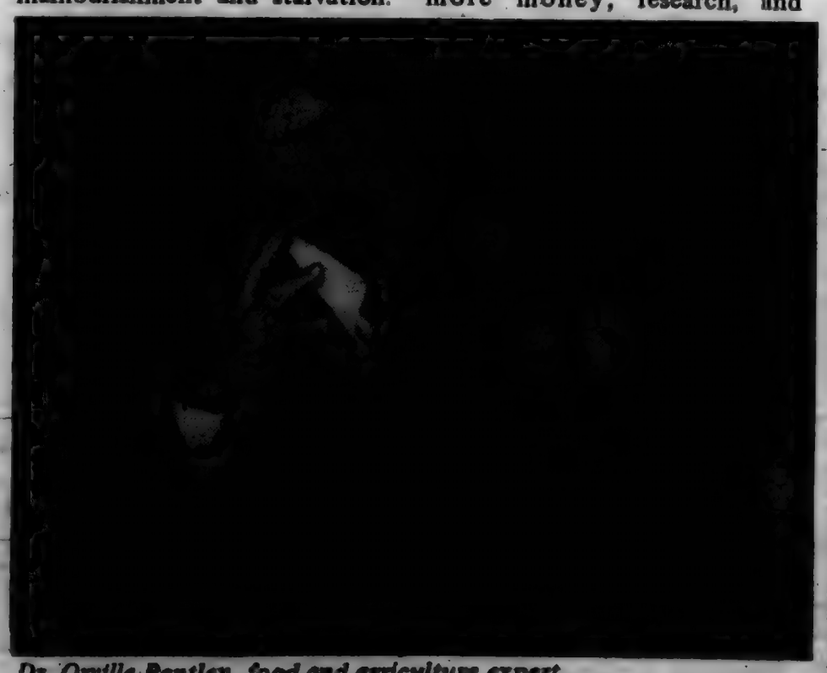
By John Letteri

Dr. Orville Bentley, internationally recognized food and agriculture expert, contends that "foreign aid in the form of direct food allocation is not enough," and that the peoples of the underdeveloped nations "must be educated in new ideas in food production and most importantly taught to be self-reliant."

For the underdeveloped nations of the world, the demand for food is immense. Unable to compete economically on the world trade markets, and without access to the technological knowledge to increase food production, the underdeveloped nations face a grain deficit that will triple by 1985.

Current statistics show that 700 million people suffer from malnutrition in the world, and that 70% of these live in underdeveloped nations. In Latin America, over 60% of all deaths of children of pre-school age are attributable to malnourishment and starvation. In addition, India's impoverished population continues to grow at one million people per month, and overall the underdeveloped countries' populations are growing at a rate of 2% per year as opposed to a world norm of .8%.

Bentley contends that there is a two part solution to the problem of world malnourishment. The "management of world population increase" coupled with "intensive efforts on the world's part to increase food production from existing land" must begin if we are going to meet the food needs of the future, he said. Bentley quoted Dr. Henry Kissinger, who said at the 1974 World Food Conference in Rome, that "no human being's growth should be stunted by hunger."



Bentley concedes, however, that "the world has known and will always know hunger." Yet, if the governments of all nations put an adequate diet at the top of their priority list and allocate more money, research, and resources to the problem, a solution to malnutrition and starvation "is a real possibility," said Bentley.

Bentley cited Illinois as an example. In 1947, Illinois was producing two bushels of corn per acre. Today, Illinois is producing 150-200 bushels of corn on the same land. In addition, milk production per cow has doubled since 1945.

The benefits from this technological knowledge "should be applied worldwide," according to Bentley. It should not be a direct transfer, but instead the technology should be applied to each country according to that nation's ability to understand and use it, he said. Bentley stressed the fact that in addition to technological education, there should be "self-reliance." To have the technology and still be dependent on another country for the knowledge to implement it "is not the long term answer." "True progress must be internally motivated, self-reliance and self-confidence is necessary to endure setbacks because all will not be well in any situation," he added.

Although some personal sacrifice of freedoms may be the result of population control programs and increasing food production, Bentley contends that "people cannot be so obtuse and unrealistic as to continue a population trend and governmental policies that will ruin themselves and other countries."

He concluded by re-affirming the importance of self-reliance as the primary and long-term goal of any food production program, "Our U.S. policy has been to help in this great effort, and the only acceptable position for the future is to continue our efforts in the interest of world harmony and justice."

Dr. Orville Bentley, food and agriculture expert.

SPS Photo by Michael Simays

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsis with small pizza
4-Pepsis with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

It's not whether you win or lose, but how well you eat after the game.

We do it all for you.
McDonald's

SPEEDO '78

Hey You! Champ! Cut the water speedo-style. . .If you're into racing, set your speed in this little streamlined suit: designed to give you the maximum of everything. And it's so light, like having a second skin.

Talk about Skinning? That's what you'll do to the competition in a Speedo. Speedos suits. $15.50 to $28.00. Swimwear.

It's an experience
MAGRAMS
DOWNTOWN RUTLAND

U. S. Striving For International Power

By John Letteri

The United States conducts itself in international politics not only as a champion of democracy, but as a nation striving for its own interests and power, a "dangerous" combination, according to UVM History professor Mark Stoler, who spoke, along with James Toner from Norwich University, and Lowell Shakter of the Vermont Law School, on "Ethics and Foreign Policy," last week at UVM.

"What is right for the world and what is right for the U.S. are two different things, yet the U.S.'s foreign policy refuses to see them as separate," Stoler said.

The end result of this type of policy, contends Stoler, is that "anybody who opposes the U.S. on the international scene appears evil to the rest of the world." The U.S., as a nation that is 'one under God,' with a population that enjoys many freedoms, is hard to oppose, he continued. Yet the U.S., according to Stoler, is just as interested in expansion, power extension, and the resulting profit from these initiatives, as is any other country. Stoler said that President Woodrow Wilson's 14 points policy "meshed expansion and morality." By spreading democracy abroad, through the League of Nations, U.S. prosperity would also have been enhanced and the power position of the U.S. strengthened, he said. "By spreading this ideology to under-developed nations, the U.S. will technologically tutor them at a U.S. profit."

James Toner, professor of political science and history, claimed that "foreign policy is an attempt to make the best of a miserable and rotten situation." He stated that although American Society is worth protecting and advancing, an annual defense budget of close to $130 billion per year "is not justified in light of the starvation in less developed countries (LDC) and our own country." "National Security is a farce," Toner stated. "Was Vietnam a threat to our national security? Is spending $60 billion a year on nuclear replacements justified?" Toner argued that the U.S. must aim at "the survival of a nation in a way that reflects national values." This, he said, could be accomplished by the "promotion of a world environment that promotes peace and prosperity for all states."

Shekter offered a test case for both Stoler and Toner's views of the international political scene. He stated that recent findings of valuable manganese nodules on the floor of the Pacific Ocean will offer a strong test for international behavior. At this point, the United States is the only country with the ability to mine the nodules, even though many countries have an interest in them. The less developed countries feel that the U.S. should mine the nodules and give them (LDC's) the first portion. Shekter stated that "this will be a good test for how far the U.S. is willing to go for the development of other countries by the redistribution of wealth and natural resources." In his view it will be a test of a possible "new international order."

VPIRG NEWS
THE VERMONT PUBLIC INTEREST RESEARCH GROUP

Spokemen Cite Legislative Successes

By Jonathan Roth

The 1978 State legislative session which ended on April 2 was marked by many pleasant surprises for the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) according to two staff lobbyists. Their success in passing health and energy related legislation was cited by the spokesmen as being above expectations.

According to VPIRG, student lobbyist John Jagelsky helped direct an energy bill through a maze of opposition, including the Governor's office, towards its passage by the legislature. The bill, H.555, provides tax credits to individuals purchasing energy devices that utilize renewable resources such as sunlight.

VPIRG health researcher Debbie Katz, with the aid of several senior citizen groups, surprised state legislators by scheduling a meeting for advocates of proposed generic drug legislation at the State House. Meetings like this are not often held at the Capital Building, and when they are, legislators are often critical of the proceedings, said Katz. According to Katz, the meeting catalyzed a movement which resulted in Vermont's adoption of what VPIRG has termed one of the country's most progressive generic drug laws.

VPIRG operates on a budget of only forty thousand student funded dollars, with just three full-time staff members. This puts it at a great disadvantage when competing with large corporate and utility lobbies, according to Katz. In this light, the results of the 1978 campaign are even more impressive, she added.

Chuck Sheketoff, VPIRG's energy lobbyist, attributed much of their success to the effectiveness of student lobbyist efforts. "Passage of H.555, the alternative energy tax credit bill, proved that a student can do a good lobbying job in the legislature," he said. Sheketoff also gave credit to VPIRG's student board of trustees. "They set the group's agenda and deserve much credit for their ability to focus on crucial issues affecting consumer and environmental concerns."

Health researcher Katz commented: "VPIRG provides valuable information that is respected and used by many state representatives. This information is especially critical since there is no research arm of the legislature."

SPS Photo
by Scott Greb

Plan to Demolish Bishop's House to be Considered by Court

By Curtis Haynes

With the advent of the spring construction season, the Vermont Supreme Court on April 13 will hear appeals from the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont concerning its intent to demolish the Bishop's House and asphalt the area for 150 parking spaces.

After months of legal maneuvering, the Bishop's House controversy may at last be settled. Last fall, Superior Court Judge Wynn Underwood issued an injunction halting the destruction of the 124-year-old house until the hospital obtained an Act 250 land use/development permit. The hospital then appealed to the State Environmental Board which also ruled that the Hospital needed to go through the Act 250 process and receive a permit before the house could come down. The Board said a new parking lot would affect more than 10 acres (the hospital complex covers 33 acres), thus requiring an Act 250 permit.

It is uncertain, however, when the Supreme Court will hand down a decision. Should the hospital lose its appeal, it will file for an Act 250 permit from the District 4 Environmental Commission.

Efforts to save the Bishop's House at 52 South Williams Street have come from an ad-hoc citizens group, and adjoining landowners Sigma Nu fraternity and Dr. Thomas Sachs. The house has been placed on the national, state, and city Registers of Historic Sites. Built in 1854, the house was extensively renovated in the 1880's. Of major concern is the intricate woodwork, which the hospital said would be rescued if the house were razed. From 1918 to 1977 the house was owned by the Roman Catholic Diocese. In 1977, the house, grounds, and DeGoesbriand parking lot were sold to the hospital for $800,000.

The hospital wants to expand parking for the DeGoesbriand unit which UVM now owns, and part of which the hospital has leased back. The University Health Center, an outpatient clinic, has been behind schedule in moving into the DeGoesbriand. To find a solution to the parking problem, the UVM trustees have offered $100,000 toward the construction of a parking deck if the Bishop's House cannot be demolished.

Corporations Accused of Abusing Less Developed Countries

By John Letteri

Sharply conflicting opinions about the presence of multinational corporations (MNC's) in less developed countries (LDC's) highlighted the Third World Seminar "Effects of Investments and Multinational Corporations" last week.

Corporate investment in LDC's was assailed as being oppressive to the people, harmful to their economic well-being, and responsible for the continued power of oppressive right wing dictatorships. "Under socio-economic conditions existing now in LCD's, MNC's serve to strengthen a dominant oppressive elite that the majority doesn't want. This tends to polarize the wealth, oppress the society, and stunt development," contended Nesar Ahmad, of the Graduate Department of Social Change at Goddard College.

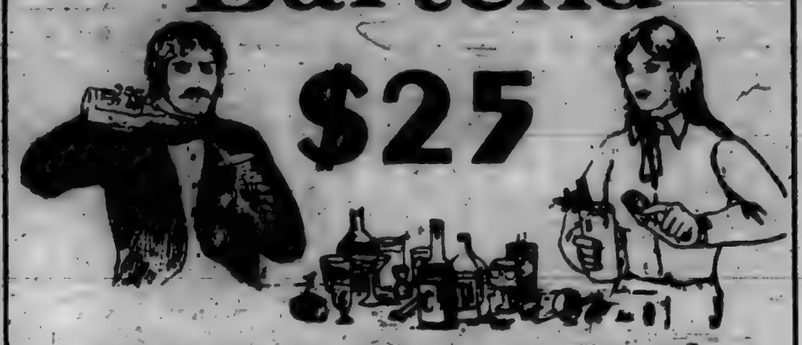
Bruce DeCastro, of the UVM economics department, reinforced this statement by stating that the outflow of wealth from the LDC's to the U.S. through MNC investment "worsens" the entire economic situation of the LDC. He explained further that an MNC will enter a country, rely on that country for 80% of its operating capital and resources, then return "literally nothing" to the LDC while realizing large profits on the world market.

H. Sogi Soder, an international strategist for the General Electric Corporation, countered these statements by contending that "GE doesn't go into a country unless that country wants us." GE, Soder said, does a complete "investment profile" on any country before investing in that country. Such things as market conditions, labor relations, and governmental policy are investigated before GE decides whether or not to invest in a country. "We firmly believe that successful business relationships must be mutually beneficial," said Mr. Soder.

These mutual benefits were questioned by UVM Economics professor Tim Bates who contended that MNC investment in LDC's "is not beneficial" to the LDC. The majority of the land in the LDC's is presently in the hands of a few large landowners who profit by keeping the peasants oppressed, allowing the landowners to remain economically and politically elite, he continued. Bates feels that MNC's "are attracted" to this type of country where most people are paid very low wages, with little or no fringe benefits. The threat of strike is virtually non-existent and investing in these types of countries, the MNC is guaranteed a stable government and a constant low-cost labor force that makes it possible to maximize profits, he said.

For profit oriented reasons, the MNC and the elite of the LDC's want to keep the majority oppressed, according to Bates. By allying themselves with the U.S. through MNC investment, he continued, the power elite of the LDC's also stave off Communist-inspired peasant uprisings. Therefore, "any development of the majority in an LDC would be harmful to the investments of the MNC and the elite."

Mr. Soder responded to Bates' criticism of MNC's by stating that GE "does not support corrupt governments." He stressed the fact that an MNC investment in a country can produce benefits in the way of jobs and an increased standard of living, as well as economic strength for the whole country. He added that GE "is recognized as a good corporate citizen throughout the world."



A member of the audience pointed out that GE is operating in South Africa, thus helping to strengthen a dominant white minority government that oppresses the black majority. In justifying such an action, Mr. Soder said that GE "followed all the rules" put forth by the South African Government before investing there. He added "we employ some blacks, and are recognized as a good corporate citizen in South Africa."

In response to a question about GE's arms sales to the

(continued on 12)

"Under socio-economic conditions existing now in LDC's, MNC's serve to strengthen a dominant oppressive elite that the majority doesn't want."
—Nesar Akmad

Learn To Bartend

$25

Last Two Classes Ever!

April 10,11, & 12 plus May 1,2, & 3

($5 Discount with Advance Payment)

To pre-register, call Brad Cook at 879-0653.

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Free Pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza

4-Pepsi's with large pizza

Exp. 5-16-78

658-3333

The 160 mpg shiftless wonder.

10% discount to students with this ad.

Say hello to Vespa Ciao ("Chow"—Italian for "hi"). About as easy to ride as a bicycle, but a lot less work. Up to 160 miles of fun per gallon, hardly any maintenance. Takes you anywhere in town with no parking problems when you get there. Take a Ciao for a ride.

DOES NOT REQUIRE MOTORCYCLE LICENSE OR HELMET

LAKE CHAMPLAIN MOTORS

Shelburne Rd So Burlington Vt

658-2277

give your life a little vespa.

Mileage quoted is based on CUNA Standards. Yours may vary.

© 1977 Vespa of America

World And National News Briefs

Compiled By Robert Cassidy

Park Denies O'Neill Connection

South Korean rice dealer Tongson Park told house investigators more about his contributions to members of Congress Tuesday. But Park testified before the House Ethics Committee that he has no idea who wrote a document which claimed House Speaker Thomas O'Neill once asked for contributions to other congressmen. Park said it was a "false report" that O'Neill had requested such contributions.

The document in question was in the form of a report to South Korean officials, recommending that contributions be handed to the congressmen when they arrived on a trip to Korea led by O'Neill, then House Democratic Leader, in 1974. Federal investigators found the document at Park's house in Washington after he left the country.

The South Korean rice dealer again insisted that none of the payments he made to congressmen was intended to buy influence for his country. He said his respect for his friends in Congress was such that he never made any attempt to twist their arms or tell them how to vote.

Park answered questions about the details of the $850,000 in payments he said Monday he had given to about 30 present and former congressmen.

Carter Says No On Neutron Bomb

President Carter has tentatively decided against producing neutron weapons, but West Germany's Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher is in Washington trying to persuade Carter to modify his decision. At the White House, a spokesman denied that the President had made any decision on neutron weapons. A State Department spokesman also denied that any decision had been made.

It is understood, however, that Carter relayed his tentative decision to West Germany late last week and the visit of the Foreign Minister was then arranged. Genscher told American officials that his country supports the production of neutron weapons.

The neutron weapon has a relatively small explosive force, but it yields twice the radiation of a regular nuclear weapon.

On Capitol Hill, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said any decision against production of a neutron warhead would be what he called "another in a long line of national defense mistakes." He compared it to the decision not to produce the B-1 bomber.

Begleman Pleads Innocent

Former Columbia Pictures President David Begelman has pleaded innocent to grand theft and forgery charges. Municipal Judge Bernard Kaufman, in Burbank, California, ordered Begelman to appear for further arraignment in Pasadena Superior Court on April 25th. A trial date could be set at that time.

Begelman was whisked into the Burbank courthouse Tuesday through an underground tunnel. He was released on his own recognizance after the hearing.

The 57-year-old Begelman was charged with forging the names of Hollywood figures in three checks that totalled $40,000. If convicted, he could face a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison for grand theft and 14 years for each forgery charge.

District Attorney John Van de Kamp, who filed the charges last Friday, said the checks were written on a Columbia Pictures account.

Van de Kamp listed the forged checks as $10,000 in actor Cliff Robertson's name, $5,000 in director Martin Ritt's name, and $25,000 cashed in the name of Pierre Gruleau of La Maison restaurant.

Begelman has publicly admitted misappropriating studio funds. He repaid the money with interest, and Columbia refused to press charges. The company instead reinstated Begelman as production chief last December, a short-lived plan which led to his resignation in February.

Columbia has since signed Begelman to an independent producing contract which guarantees him a minimum of $300,000 a year.

Two Palestinians Sentenced To Hang

A court in Cyprus has found two Palestinians guilty of premeditated murder in the assassination of a prominent Egyptian newspaper editor. They were sentenced to death by hanging with the execution date set for June 1. A defense lawyer said he will appeal the verdict.

The Palestinians were convicted of shooting Youssef El-Sebaei in the lobby of a Nicosia hotel in February. Sebaei was the editor of Cairo's leading newspaper.

After the shooting the Palestinians held eleven Arab officials hostage aboard a Cypriot airliner for 24 hours. Fifteen Egyptian commandos were killed by Cypriot soldiers after they flew to Cyprus and tried to storm the plane.

Official Calls For More Rail Safety

A federal safety official said Tuesday that the railroads' 20,000 "jumbo" tank cars should be equipped with improved safety equipment this year, not in 1981 as required by law.

Chairman James King of the National Transportation Safety Board said train derailments involving dangerous substances are on the increase. He urged that tank cars be equipped with crash shields and improved couplers.

King said, "Every month in which unprotected tank cars ride the rails increases the chances of another catastrophic hazardous materials accident. And if, God forbid, such a tragedy should occur... the human cost will be borne by innocent citizens who will pay with their lives, their health, their property and their fear."

King spoke as the board opened hearings on the derailment problem. The Chairman said the board proposes to dramatize for Congress and the public the critical nature of the problem. He said the Safety Board is not satisfied that those who own the cars and those who historically regulate railroad operations now share that same sense of urgency.

A blast of liquid propane from a derailed train killed 15 persons recently in Waverly, Tennessee. Two days later a cloud of chlorine from a train wreck near Youngstown, Florida seared the lungs of eight young people, killing them as they fled. Since then, trains carrying deadly chemicals have derailed in Bruceton, Tennessee; Justin, Texas; Frederick, Maryland; Trenton, New Jersey; Maupin, Oregon; Lewisville, Arkansas; Pineville, Kentucky; and Brownson, Nebraska. No one died as a result of those accidents, but the Safety Board is concerned about the potential for disaster.

A spokesman for the Safety Board, Edward Slattery Jr. said, "So far most of the derailments with hazardous substances have occurred in rural areas or small towns; but can you imagine if one happened in downtown Washington, or any town or city where trains often run right down main street?"

Soviet-Cuba Influence In So. Africa

A Johannesburg newspaper reports there are increasing numbers of Soviet and Cuban military advisers in Southern Africa. The reported increase is going on despite President Carter's recent warning that outside intervention threatens stability in Africa. Soviet advisers are said to be assisting Angolan government troops, along with Cuban and East German support units, in a drive to stamp out insurgents in southern Angola.

Another Letter From Moro???

Another letter purportedly from kidnapped former Italian Premier Aldo Moro, asking his party to "do quickly what is necessary," to gain his freedom, was received Tuesday in Milan. It came as Premier Andreotti was telling Parliament in Rome that his government still does not know where Moro is. But, he said, investigators are following what he called "significant leads."

Moro, the 61-year-old President of the Christian Democrat Party, was abducted and his five bodyguards were killed in an ambush March 16th in Rome.

As Parliament met, police in the northern city of Milan said they had gotten a message from Moro's kidnappers, the urban guerrilla group called the "Red Brigades," along with a fourth letter supposedly written by Moro to his party's Secretary, Benigno Zaccagnini. It also appealed to other Christian Democrat leaders, including the Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga.

Andreotti, speaking before word arrived of the new messages, said Moro had written three letters from captivity, one to the Interior Minister, one to his family and another to an aide. The Italian news agency ANSA said the latest letter made reference to a possible exchange of some sort.

Farm Bill Proposes Parity Prices

House and Senate conferees have agreed to emergency aid for grain and cotton farmers which government economists say would add two to three percent to already rising consumer food prices.

After the conferees finished their work, Agriculture Department Economist Howard Hjort said there is no chance President Carter would sign such a bill. It still must be approved by both the House and Senate. Congress has never enacted a farm bill over a presidential veto.

The measure would allow wheat, feed-grain and cotton farmers to obtain federally guaranteed parity prices if they idle one acre for every two they plant this year. That would satisfy the stop-gap goal of the protesting farmers' group called "American Agriculture." If the measure ever becomes law, its provisions would expire this year and existing programs would return in 1979.

Parity prices theoretically would give the farmers the same favorable balance between costs and returns that growers of those crops enjoyed in the 1910-1914 period.

COMMENTARY

A Journey to Notingwash

By Henry Chamberlain

For the past six years, since 1973, the Alumni Association at Tervomt University has sponsored a Notingwash Seminar. Notingwash is the capital of the Merica. This program is an excellent opportunity for future bureaucrats to get a feel for their government. By staying at the homes of former alumni, the students are able to get to Notingwash relatively inexpensively.

Last week I participated in the program, staying in a suburb of the nation's capital called Alenderxia. The family I stayed with was pure gold, making the stay very pleasant. My roommate (Essej) was my running-mate on a losing bid to preside over the university's student assembly.

The trip into the bureaucratic jungle was interesting. We took our GM land cruiser to a bus stop. From there for 90 cents we were taken to another stop alongside a strange five sided structure. Short, haired, serious, and somewhat pompous individuals were to be seen scurrying around with their secrets – military security you know.

From there we transferred to the brand new metro system. Here is the ultimate in human technology. No people, just you and your computer card. No smoking, no drinking, and no spitting. Breathing and talking are still permitted if kept to a minimum. The sterile cement and steel stations make you wonder what happened to the old-fashioned "All aboard" – you know, the old personal touch. However, for 40 cents you get a quick, comfortable ride into the city in your glass capsule to begin your day.

Notingwash is kind of a strange city by normal standards. It is famous for architecture it copied from another country. Among other people celebrated with buildings to recognize their value is the first president of Merica himself – Notingwash. He was denoted as the "father of his country" and so through an interesting sense of humor, the bureaucrats erected a giant phallic symbol which can be seen all over the city. A most interesting structure.

Besides its structural peculiarities, Notingwash is not representative of the ethnic composition of Merica. The city is 80% Black as opposed to 20% nationally. This difference adds to the feeling of being in a different city.

The first speaker we heard was a member of a commission on Mental Health. He explained how the states were not adequately able to alter the brain waves of their patients, and needed help in dealing with cerebral breakdowns. The government uses regional community centers to bring inexpensive cerebral moderation to local residents. Why the local centers were not adequate was not clearly explained. Just another government intrusion into local self-determination.

After that, Essej and I visited some of the shrines which house man's conquests over his environment. These buildings included houses to protect the various works of artists from throughout the ages. Another series of buildings house man's technical brilliance at conquering the natural world. Such contrivances as cars, planes, and rockets were on display. As we left these man-made marvels, we came to one of the stark realities of this southern city, you are unable to get a hot dog after noon.

Next we met with aides to President Tercar. They were arrogant, confident, and impatient – overall, splendid examples of successful politicians. Whenever you ask a politician a question, he/she begins by qualifying your question before even thinking of how to qualify the response. Then a decision as to whether or not to ridicule your question because of your naivete or to actually respond to your question. Inevitably, the final result is that a brick wall would have relayed as much new information as the speaker.

The following day, I spent the morning observing the diverse group of people who walk the city's streets. Notingwash is really no different than other cities. There are important dignitaries walking around in their leather shoes accompanied by snappy three piece suits. Tourists – the ones with the dark glasses, straw hats, jungle shirts, and shorts – go around in their haphazard manners. Then you have the real characters, the guy who is so cool that he looks up towards the second floor of all buildings so that his eyes will never make contact with anyone. The woman in high heel shoes who goes up and down the street without a purpose.

To round out the speakers, we heard a reporter from the Daily Rumors. He relayed tale after tale, as well as actual information. After two weeks with coal miners, he was happy to relay that they were civilized people, not the dangerous thugs we have come to read about. His claim to fame is a story he wrote about former President Rofd. Above his story was a sort of catchy headline – "Rofd to City: Drop Dead." Rofd lost the next election and the loss of the city was one of the reasons.

Our conclusion was a wine/cheese reception at recessed Senator Heli's office. And Sadam, the student organizer, was there. So was Prof. Hanmoff. Besides that, the rest of the motley crew was there, including one of the editors of the cynical Tervomt U. paper, Fussell Rannery. Overall an interesting, enjoyable, and amusing trip to the city of Notingwash.

A Subtle Power of the Press

By Dan Adams

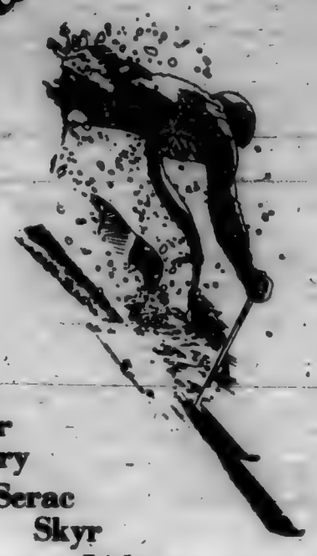
On February 18th, an estimated six thousand demonstrators took part in Jobs or Income Now (JOIN), a march and day of protest in Washington, D.C. Where smaller demonstrations in recent months have received extensive coverage (the anti-Shah protests received front page coverage by the New York Times) JOIN went largely unmentioned in most major newspapers. An awareness of this lack of coverage is important for the concerned citizen, for it represents the ability of the press to pick and choose which issues are to enter into the public forum.

The actual march formed a mile long column of demonstrators, almost as wide as Pennsylvania Avenue. It proceeded from the White House to the Capitol and on to the north of the city. Various eye witnesses suggest the gathering was the largest of its type since protests in the late 1960's and early 1970's. Participants were from all over the country, including the West Coast and Hawaii.

The cause supported by JOIN was the establishment of the right for all citizens to have a job or a guaranteed income above a decent minimum. One participant described the event as a "movement of many poor people," and one organized by the masses as opposed to a group of elite. Instead of rising out of a single event (such as a response to an assassination) or rallying around a reknown figurehead, the demonstration which surfaced was said to be the result of long-time, slow burning frustrations felt by the participants.

Thus perhaps in the very nature of the protests one may find the reasons for the lack of coverage by the press. Many would describe the cause as radical, and the march demonstrated a significant and widespread concern over current conditions. Yet why there was not coverage is less important than whether or not the event received exposure. As a demonstration designed to bring attention to the plight and needs of a large group of American citizens who are suffering, the press, in its neglect, was able to undermine the event's effectiveness. Indeed, noted one participant, to most everyone outside of the Washington area, the demonstration simply did not take place.



In a republican democracy where public opinion, based on relevant and/or irrelevant factors, plays a significant role in a politician's striving for power, inherent in the ability of the press to present what news it wishes is a considerable control over what issues the public will use to form their opinion. In the case at hand, the concern is not of the stand which most papers took, but that, by offering little coverage, the problems dramatically represented by over six thousand citizens did not, and have not, been entered into the public forum for discussion.

Frustrated demonstrators may now be back at the drawing board conceiving of ways to receive more national exposure for such an event. It would seem that to attract a headline-seeking press, an event requires reknowned participants, a dramatic act (apparently six thousand marchers on Pa. Avenue is not enough), and/or critical implications for those in power. Lessons of the past have shown that protests without the charisma of a national leader or the momentum from a major act or occurrence have often had to resort to violence to draw the media in. While not a desired form of protest, one can understand the frustration behind violent demonstration, a feeling stemming from a group of citizens frustrated in their attempts to make their plight known.

By neglecting – intentionally or not – to cover an event such as the JOIN movement, the press can greatly weaken the effect of such an effort, and contribute significantly to the frustration those suffering already feel. Readers should keep this in mind in attempting to gain an awareness of the society in which they live.

The Downhill Edge

Winter Last Week Sale

Clothing up to
50% off
Alpine Design
Hot Gear
CB Sport
Ski Levi
Beconta
Meister
Gerry
Serac
Skyr
Lido

Skis 20%off
Rossignol
Dynastar
Hexcel
Kastle
Olin

Boots up to 40%off
Dolomite
Nordica
Scotts

They've just arrived...

running shoes from:
Nike • Puma • Tiger • Etonic • New Balance

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

MNC Investments

Continued from page nine

oppressive regime of the Shah of Iran, Mr. Soder said, "If we don't do it, somebody else will."

Bruce DeCastro contended governments of the LDC's should be dynamic and growing, not the MNC's.

Election Results

Continued from page three

treasurer. Class of 1980: Peter Wentworth, president; John McConville, vice president; Doug Mohns, treasurer; Steve Marsh, secretary. Class of 1981: Glen Turner, president, Linda Jeffries, vice president; Lisa Tucker, secretary; Jim Shanley, treasurer.

Co-op Dorm

Continued from page six

clean it and when will be very difficult. What about if I have an exam the night my job is to be done?"

A survey conducted in February of this year showed that of 168 students polled across campus, 100 responded favorably to the idea of living in a co-op dorm.

Others felt that the co-op is a "viable alternative" and could produce real benefits. "Any time UVM offers another option to students, it is a good thing," said one student, "and this one may well prove to work." Another feels that the experience of having to clean up the dorm will prove very useful in the outside "world."

Kinnard On Vietnam

Continued from page four

threat of defense budget cuts "time and again, increasingly angering and alienating the Joint Chiefs." He spent an enormous amount of time with the politicking behind the war strategy, instead of dealing with the direct problems confronting his office. As the outcome of the war became increasingly evident, Laird would not admit that "the U.S. lost." Although in 1969 Laird designed the U.S. withdrawal program, the politics of the war prevented the program from being implemented properly, said Kinnard. The Joint Chiefs wanted the program to be implemented slowly, ensuring success. Because of Nixon and Kissinger, however, American troops were arriving back in the U.S. before the November 1972 Presidential elections.

Clark On Africa

Continued from page seven

problem is unique." Prime Minister Vorster administers a "legalized racism" in South Africa. Black people are not allowed to vote, hold office, own property, or live in a city by South African law. The U.S. position has been to pressure the Vorster regime into loosening some of these restrictions tnrough embargoes. This policy "has become more determined" since the death of black leader Steven Biko and increased oppressive actions by the South African government in October, 1977. Francis Caldwell, a resident of Zamibia and student at the Vermont Law School, asked Senator Clark why the United States does not advocate a total withdrawal of all U.S. interests in South Africa. "Rather than using up all our leverage in one fell swoop," responded Clark, "you're better off using the carrot and the stick approach." Each embargo placed on South Africa by the U.S. is designed to emit a response to try and alleviate black oppression. Clark "hopes that they will respond" and if they don't, then a total U.S. embargo "would be justified."

The increased United States interest in African affairs results from the economic, cultural and political opportunities on that continent. The U.S. and Africa could realize "significant" economic benefits through trade, according to Clark. 11% of the people in the U.S. today are of African descent, which provides the cultural interest. Politically, Clark believes that "Africa is kind of a testing ground for the encouragement of political freedom and human rights."

Prior to 1970, American foreign policy with regard to Africa was one of "neglect" according to Clark. The United States had no colonies in Africa, as did several other world powers, and therefore "did not have the same kind of direct political and economic ties with Africa as did Portugal, Great Britain," and other European powers. In addition, American policy with regard to Africa was relegated "a back seat" along with most other foreign countries during the Vietnam war.

In 1970, a year-long study conducted by the Nixon administration, in the form of National Security Council Memorandum, (NSCM) outlined what American policy in Africa "had been," "where we were," and "above all what our future policy should be," said Clark. The tendency of the NSCM, however, "was basically to favor the white minority regimes in southern Africa," contended Clark, because the study also concluded that "the white minority governments were there to stay."

As a result, during the period of 1970-1976, the United States "really lost" whatever credibility they had with the black majorities, as far as being a nation that "was committed to what it advocated" in terms of individual freedoms and majority rule, said Clark.

Dr. Henry Kissinger went to Africa in April of 1975 to try to convince the black Africans that the U.S. "identified with the aspirations of the majority" in helping to bring about changes in Rhodesia, Southwest Africa (Zamibia) and South Africa. Senator Clark contends that "this policy was almost too late because American policy had been directed in the other direction (towards white minority rule) too long."

"Indian Melassie"

From an Iroquois Tomahawk to Plastic Pipelines

Story and Photos by Ernie Richards

The melting snow that begins mud season each spring means to many Vermonters that it is once again time to begin an age-old pastime, maple sugaring. The combination of warm days and cold nights spurs the flow of sweet sap in the sugar maple tree (acer saccharum).

Vermont is well known for a number of different things, but perhaps most widely for its maple syrup. Vermont, one of the largest producers in the country, combined with New York, produced over half the maple products in the United States.

The European settlers of this continent were thankful to the Indians for the knowledge that a sweet, very flavorful substance could be made from the sap of maple trees. Early explorers and settlers of the Northeast noted that various tribes worked hard each spring at making "Indian molasses" or "Indian sugar."

The Indians collected sap by slashing the trees with a tomahawk, placing birch bark vessels sewn together with fibers of basswood or spruce root under the slash to catch the dripping sap. They boiled off the sap in large hollowed out logs coated on the outside with clay.

Maple sugar was used by the Indians primarily as an addition to their simple diet, often cooking their venison and fish in it. The syrup was sometimes mixed with bear fat to make a spread for their food. Hunting expeditions would bring a mixture of cornmeal and maple sugar, a compact food and a decent source of energy.

Iroquois legend has it that a brave left his tomahawk implanted in a maple tree under which his squaw had left some cooking vessels. Sap ran from the wound into one of the vessels filling it. When the squaw discovered this, she decided to use this sweet water to cook dinner with because the nearest water hole was a long way off. And so maple syrup was discovered.

A record one million gallons were produced in 1860. By comparison only 870,000 gallons were produced in 1972. The reasons for the decline in commercial production lie in its high price (about fifteen dollars a gallon this year) and the fact that major food corporations have developed artificial syrups that are sweetened with cane sugar or corn syrup. In the last five years, however, there has been an increase in demand for the real syrup. A significant rise in enthusiastic backyard operations, where small quantities of syrup are made for family use are a representation of people's desire.

Until recently all sugaring operations have used buckets for sap collection. During a good flow, the sap will drip into a bucket at the rate of a leaky faucet. This usually fills a bucket in just less than a day. Collection involves emptying the buckets into tanks that are hauled through the woods by horses, oxen or a tractor. It is a very labor intensive process. For a while labor costs threatened to price maple products beyond a realistic commercial economic level.

Contemporary large scale sugaring involves the tapped trees feeding into a system of plastic tubing. The area of trees being tapped, known as a 'sugar bush,' becomes laced with an intravenous network of plastic pipelines that all empty into a central location. This method of collection greatly reduces the number of man hours required to produce a given amount of maple produce. In some instances the labor it once took to operate a certain size sugarbush with buckets can now, with tubing handle a sugarbush twice the size.

Some of the larger operations take tubing one step further and use electric pumps to create a vacuum. In doing this a tree will yield up to 300 percent more sap. Authorities maintain that this procedure has no adverse effects on the trees.

UVM does extensive research in all aspects of sugaring from improvements in the trees themselves to possible alternative marketing strategies of maple products. Scientists at UVM, in conjunction with the National Forest Service, have been working on improved genetic strains of maple trees that will give a higher sap yield, techniques of sugar bush management and maple tree pathology. However, this research takes a long time. For instance, development of new genetic strain of maple requires trees to mature fifteen to twenty years before they can properly be analyzed.

The UVM researchers are working hard on improved aspects of the production of maple products as well. Many experiments have been carried out with plastic tubing systems to develop improvements in collection of sap. Storage of sap is being investigated because improper means of storage can result in inferior produce. More efficient methods of boiling sap is another challenge that UVM researchers are facing. Improvements in oil burning evaporation as well as the development of a wood chip burning evaporation are being sought.

The possibility of freeze drying maple syrup is being explored. Such a development would aid in storage, and transport, thereby expanding the market potential.

Maple syrup comes in different grades as set by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. They are Fancy, A, B, and C. The first three are all very tasty while Grade C is somewhat bitter but often usable in cooking. Fancy is the clearest and lightest in flavor, the hardest to produce and of course the most expensive. It is priced more for its appearance rather than its flavor. Grade B is often held in high esteem because of its stronger, heartier maple flavor.

Connoisseurs of syrup like to match a grade to the type of pancake served. Very light peach style crepes do well topped off with fancy, while buckwheat flapjacks are best smothered in Grade B.

jewelry for the hands
the ultimate fashion, wear a 14K "Golden Nail" on you pinky or index finger

AVAILABLE AT:

O'brien's
Beauty Salon Inc.
135 Main Street
Burlington, Vt.
864-5993

SPRING SPECIALS

GIN & VODKA DRINKS
AT REDUCED PRICES
WEDNESDAY APRIL 12

HAROLD J'S
BURLINGTON'S NEWEST NITECLUB
165 CHURCH ST.

Basic Health

Watch For Bad Weed

By Peter Millard

Since 1973, the U.S. government has been paying the Mexicans to destroy marijuana crops and supplying them with the potent herbicide paraquat to do so. Mexican growers have harvested the dying crops, mixed them with uncontaminated weed and exported it to this country for street sale. It is not known how much contaminated pot has been sold in the past five years and it is only in the last few months that the "paraquat scare" has become widespread.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse has just released the first animal toxicity studies ever conducted on the herbicide, and the results look frightening indeed. HEW Secretary Califano summarized the results in the following words, "Preliminary findings suggest that if an individual smokes three to five heavily contaminated cigarettes each day for several months, irreversible lung damage will result."

Paraquat is one of the most toxic herbicides still in legal use. Whether smoked or consumed by mouth it will cause irreversible lung fibrosis which cannot be treated medically. Extremely small doses (in concentrations of parts per million) cause these toxic effects. At least six men in Northern California have been reported in the past ten days to have symptoms of paraquat poisoning and it is not known how many cases have gone undetected in the past five years.

"Since 60% of all pot imported into the U.S. comes from Mexico, the 20 million pot smokers in this country ought to be concerned."

Paraquat is particularly frightening its effect is so insidious: no symptoms are noted by the smoker until serious lung damage has occurred.

The scare appears to be legitimate. Laboratory analysis of pot samples in California determined that fully 25% of all Mexican marijuana may be contaminated. Since 60% of all pot imported into the U.S. comes from Mexico, the 20 million pot smokers in this country (some of whom are undoubtedly in the audience) ought to be concerned.

Listening to Vermont's dope dealers gives one the impression that all the pot we buy is "guaranteed Columbian" but that does not appear to be the case. About 40% of the dope imported into New England is Mexican. That which is not Mexican may also be contaminated with pesticides which may produce another such scare in five years. Except for laboratory chromatography, there is no way to detect contaminated pot. It doesn't look, smell or taste different, nor does it produce immediate side effects. Because the poison has been absorbed by the leaves, it cannot be washed off.

With warm weather just around the corner, we expect that industrious Vermonters will be thinking about spring planting of peas, beans, corn and even the evil weed. Marijuana seedlings can be started in peat pots very soon, and ought to be transplanted to warmer pastures about the first of June. Besides being cheaper and safer than "store bought," Vermont green also gets you high!

Peter Millard is a student at the College of Medicine.

Has any man attained inner harmony
by pondering the experience of others?
Not since the world began!
He must pass through the fire.

Norman Douglas

The Individual Design Major

Self-Directed Educational Objectives

By Howie Lincoln

"So, what's your major?" queried an interested classmate at a recent party. "Well," I replied, "I'm an individual designed major in the school of Education and Social Services with my program emphasis on recreational therapy for the multiply handicapped." "Oh," he said, forcing a smile across his puzzled face, "I think maybe you've had a little too much to drink."

I could have just as easily told him that I was majoring in "Student Personnel" or "Environmental Communications," as are other individual design students at UVM, but it would have made little difference. Some people will always be skeptical of different approaches to learning, especially if they don't know much about them.

Such skepticism, from students and faculty alike, has hounded the individual design program since its inclusion at UVM as a recognized degree option some five years ago. Despite some views that the program was an unnecessary appendage, that it deflated academic quality, and that the degree itself lacked validity, the individual design major has survived and emerged as one of the university's most unique educational offerings.

At a time when more and more students are seeking to derive the most from the expensive investment of time, energy, and money in higher education, the self-directed approach to learning has increased in popularity. This article will utilize a variety of viewpoints from faculty and students to examine some reasons behind this trend, the nature of the individual design program, and the outlook for its future.

The program grew out of a combination of needs, rooted both in the students' desire to obtain more control over their educational objectives and the university's attempt to expand and diversify its academic offerings. Students, in their endeavors to piece together a meaningful and satisfying course of study, were, and are in some instances, finding their educational needs limited and frustrated by established curriculum. In an effort to meet these needs, the university sought to offer non-departmental degree options using available resources: i.e. creating the individual design major.

Three schools within the university have instituted the individual design major in their undergraduate degree listings. They are the College of Arts and Sciences, the College of Education and Social Services (EDSS), and the Environmental Studies Program (ENVS). All three have witnessed a substantial increase in the number of students opting for the program since its infant stages. From just a handful of participants in 1972-3, the enrollment has grown to include about 40 students in the College of A&S, 90 in EDSS, and 50 in ENVS.

Each school has its own guidelines, requirements, and review processes for the individual design degree. Every student must include a minimum of 36-48 credit hours in his or her "major sequence" along with the necessary distribution requirements and grade point averages. In addition, each student's proposal must initially be approved by a review committee in order to ensure a well-defined and well-developed curriculum plan. So, for those who see the individual design major as an easy way to breeze through college, they're in for a surprise.

Unquestionably, every degree program is rigorous and demanding in its own way, but the individual design major assumes a unique kind of a challenge. It is an exciting blend of risk, responsibility, and self-discipline. "Sure it's a gamble," commented Bruce Albert, a senior in EDSS, who calls himself an "Educational Development Counselor," but "the rewards are big. The greater awareness of my skills as an educator and the self-satisfaction in knowing that I've gotten what I wanted out of college is proof."

"You can ride on the cow catcher and meet everything head on, or you can ride in the boxcar and watch it all pass by." Professor Mark Smith

The process of designing one's own major, from the initial proposal to the completion of the custom-made curriculum plan can be an education in itself. Ginger Hinman, a senior in the Environmental Studies Program in the College of Agriculture, feels that her self-designed "Wildlife Conservation and Illustration" major was a great exercise in self-discipline and self-discovery. "At first, I wasn't really sure I was doing the right thing," she said, "but as I got into it, the more exciting it became. You're constantly thinking about and working with the curriculum that will expand you the most, and prepare you the best for whatever you decide to be."

The question of career opportunities is a common one faced by all students. We often ask ourselves, "What am I going to do with my degree?" or "What skills has it given me to confidently work with?" For the individual design major, having a degree without a recognizable label or commodity may pose some problems on the career horizon. But judging from various student and faculty responses on the subject, the sentiment seems to run the other way.

Larry Simmons, director of the Career Planning and Placement office at UVM, feels that individual design majors have just as good a shot at job placement, if not better than candidates with recognized degrees. "For most positions," Simmons said, "candidates should be determined and confident that their skills are marketable and unique." He went on to suggest that the edge might come for individual design majors by virtue of their strong sense of purpose and direction of study. "This," Simmons said, "tended to put them more in touch with their intended occupation."

John Murray, a "Counseling and Student Relations" major in the College of Education and Social Services, seemed to reflect some of those qualities. He's a highly directed and motivated sophomore who has designed a curriculum to include appropriate courses in psychology, sociology, education, counseling, organizational skills, and related human service fields to meet his educational objectives. His outlooks for career work are similarly well defined and directed, and he feels he'll be a strong candidate for hire with his undergraduate degree.

While career goals are central to

(continued on page 17)

The Cynic Photo Short Story Contests

Cash Prizes! Including $10 for the most interesting abstract photograph. One $15 prize and two $5 awards for the best photos. They are due April 20th.

The Winners of the Short Story Contest

"The Farm"

Tennessee's Complete Community

By Randy McMullen

I remember hearing about The Farm from some friends of mine who followed the Grateful Dead, and who enjoyed reading about the glory days of San Francisco, Ken Kesey, the Koolaid Acid Tests, Haight Ashbury, and the rest of the so-called "counterculture" movement that lusted for a revolution and hoped that utopia would remain after the dust had settled.

But there was this one guy, named Stephen Gaskin, who realized that "utopia" was an oversimplified concept. To him it implied that the world was going to get better simply by wishing it that way.

Gaskin was more interested in forming an alternative lifestyle through hard work so he set up a farming community in Summertown, Tennessee. At first, it sounded like just another commune: a flower child here, a guru there, rusted over "peace" medallions, and yellowed pages of Ginsberg poetry...

But it fascinated me when I learned that there were some 1100 people there, providing for themselves on about 1700 acres of Tennessee forest and farmland. The Farm is, in itself, a whole new version of small-town America, where people live entirely off the land, and not off of any sort of income. There is no government, no shopping malls, and no traffic signs. And since The Farm is run on a basis of self sufficiency, and not commercial output, the labor is cheap and the land is supporting a lot more people.

Since The Farm's conception in late 1971, thirteen others have been established across the U.S. All of them employ the same setup, and all of them communicate regularly with Gaskin and the nucleus in Tennessee.

********

Over this past semester break, I coaxed my old Pontiac into making the long drive to Summertown, so that I might learn more about The Farm, its philosophies and organization. I drove down with three friends of mine through Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and finally Tennessee.

We arrived at Summertown on a bitter cold night. An old man at a gas station sent us down this dirt road until we came to a small gatehouse with a sign that read simply "The Farm."

Inside we met some young men and a very pregnant young woman; all were around 25 years old. They invited us to warm ourselves up by the wood-burning stove, while they telephoned the visitor's tent to let them know we were coming. Visitors, we were reminded, are expected to work like anybody else.

When I asked if I might be able to interview Stephen Gaskin, a fellow with sharp blue eyes and black hair down past his shoulders laughed and informed me that Gaskin was in Australia, and that I would probably need an airplane or a "damned good tape recorder."

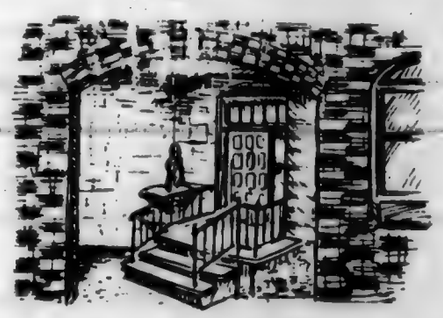
"Australia?" I asked, and learned that he had been invited there to consider starting a farm. Gaskin has also formed an organization called PLENTY, The Farm's foreign aide program (kind of an ironic asset for an establishment that, according to the U.S. Internal Revenue Service, exists below the poverty level).

"It's hard for Americans to realize," said one resident, "that it's a luxury in many countries to have running water. By those standards, we (The Farm) are rich; and we feel obligated to help those who are worse off that we are." PLENTY has sent representatives to Mexico, Guatemala, and Bangladesh, where they often go unrecognized because of their long hair and ragged clothes. It seems, however, that although these "Tennessee hippies" fail to fit the mold of an American foreign aid emissary, their accomplishments have been quite impressive. PLENTY representatives have rebuilt a town in Guatemala that was lost to an earthquake, set up an FM radio station for Sololan Indians, and have basically concerned themselves with teaching life support technologies, such as health care and nutrition. All in all, PLENTY has provided some $700,000 worth of capital and labor to foreign countries, with most of the material goods being provided from outside donations.

******

By the time we arrived at the visitor's tent – which was really a shack with a wood stove, some picnic tables, and a few bunk rooms – most everybody was getting ready to turn in. The cold weather was making the work even tougher, and everyone seemed exhausted.

The visitor's tent was crowded, which wasn't unusual I learned, since The Farm receives about 6,000 overnight visitors a year. Don, the tent's supervisor, told us that in the morning there would be several phone calls from the various work groups, called "gigs" telling which chores needed attention. We could basically join up with any gig that could use help. I decided to work with the compost gig – responsible for transporting organic waste to the fields and burying it – when a newly made friend, named Robert, asked me to work with him. "It's the best gig," he assured me, "because you get to be outside all the time."



Robert was a native of Toronto, a college dropout, and a self-proclaimed member of The Farm for life.

"I was tired of watching myself grow fat," he said while grabbing his stomach and wiggling it for emphasis, "and tired of chasing women that meant nothing to me. Life is a flytrap for hedonists, who get caught up in a happiness-is-consumption rap. It's all so mundane, man it really is!"

He sounded like some Nietzschian disciple, who was finding himself at The Farm, instead of a series of Greek tragedies. He went on, saying that the moral standards there were "healing his deflated ego," and I found out later that they are surprisingly conservative. Cigarettes and alcoholic

(continued on page 17)

THE RATHSKELLER

Steamers Fri. 4-6

Reduced Drink Prices Daily 4-6

Extensive Seafood Menu

We Welcome Reservations

For Fine Dining in a Unique Atmosphere

BEHIND BENNINGTON NORTH ON COLLEGE ST.

Open Daily For Dinner and Luncheon

Brunch Saturday

863-4429

127½ College Burlington

CLOG-MANIA

Simply means more styles

and the best prices anywhere!

$25.95

$29.00

At Jan's

We Know You Love CLOGS...

...All kinds. That's why we've put together the greatest selection of styles for you. Closed back, open back, new higher heels Kiltied, Braided, laced, and on and on. Come on down today to see all the styles by Krone, Zodiac, and Baretraps.

Jan's

30 CHURCH ST.
DOWNTOWN BURL.
864-4735

Vermont's Quality Shoe Store

Mon. & Fri. 'til 9:00
Mastercharge/VISA
Parking & Bus Tokens

Gaskin's Creation

Cont. From Page 16

beverages are prohibited, and it is preferred that sex be practiced only between those who are joined in wedlock ("If you sleep with someone to whom you're engaged, and if she gets pregnant, you're married," I was told later). Apparently, marijuana is allowed, but they are very careful at The Farm because Gaskin was busted a few years ago for growing about an acre of the stuff.

Just before everyone went to bed, Don played a cassette recording of one of Stephen Gaskin's Sunday morning sermons. Sunday is the day of rest at The Farm, no work is done at all, and Gaskin's talks are a weekly tradition while he is there. Most farm members are religiously oriented, and their sect is based on the idea that god, and all the religions, and in fact the entire universe is but one single creation. Everything and everybody is considered equal and natural. It seems to be a very simple religion that parallels closely the Chinese thought of taoism.

The next morning there were whole wheat pancakes for breakfast. The phone was ringing constantly, and Don was calling out job offers: "The soy dairy needs two, the cannery needs a few, the infirmary needs one..." I couldn't believe there were so many different units of activity.

"What did you think," said Don laughing, "that every one of 1100 people is going to spend all day pulling weeds and chopping wood?"

The Farm is actually a well-developed community. There's a school that provides a complete high school education, a soybean dairy plant (regular dairy products and all animal byproducts are shunned by The Farm), a flour mill, an infirmary with an ambulance, and even a print shop.

The Farm has, in fact, a yearly operating budget of over a million dollars. "It's ironic," added Don, "that most of the people here don't even have a dollar to their names. But together we're all millionaires!" Revenue comes from the sale of Farm books and albums (would you believe an evangelical rock band?), some private donations, and from the income generated by a few Farm members who construct houses and such for the outside community. All the business and financial matters are governed by a group of people known collectively as The Foundation. The Farm is legally classified as a non-profit church organization, so their activities are all tax free.

At around eight in the morning, Robert and I were picked up by a tall, powerful looking man named James, who was organizing the compost gig that day. He reminded me slightly of Herman Munster, friendly, simple, and pleasant in an awesome sort of way.

"The ground's too damn hard to plant any compost today," he announced, "but there's a whole lot of other things we can do."

As we drove around in this ancient truck that cracked and snapped from odd job to odd job, I noticed that communications is an integral part of The Farm's daily operations. Every place we went had a telephone. Every truck, bus, and tractor had a CB radio. People were always contacting one another, to report on which jobs had been done, and which jobs still needed doing.

"There ain't really any bosses," said James while we rumbled along, "people just keep in touch with one another, to make sure that nothing gets forgotten."

"But who keeps track of everything?" I asked.

"You know, I don't believe I've ever figured that out. But the system works."

We stopped for lunch at the cannery, the food preparation and packaging center. As I gazed around at the surrounding farmland, I was amazed at the movement I could see. Trucks and cars were drifting along the dirt roads, people walking and working and moving about... everywhere I looked there was something going on.

What a contrast this was with the farms I had seen in Vermont, where acres of farmland would be only sparsely dotted with a few trees and cows. Here, however, people and machines could be seen all over the place doing odd jobs. It wasn't crowded, just active.

Lunch was kale, taco chips, and soybeans. Just about every meal at The Farm will involve some form of soybeans; they are the dietary staple there, because for a strict vegetarian, they provide one of the few sources of complete protein as well as vitamin $B_{12}$. Soybean products, such as tofu (curdled soy milk) and tempeh, are also eaten frequently.

After lunch, we had picked up two new workers; Jim, who was also staying at the visitor's tent, and Rudolph. We collected garbage for a while, until Jim and I were let off while the others went off to buy propane tanks somewhere in Summertown. The two of us wandered around for a while, until we came upon The Farm's laundromat, where we went inside to get warm. Something seemed strange to me about the laundry machines, and I stared at them until it hit me: there were no coin slots.

"That's right," said Jim, "in fact all the goods and services here are supplied for free." He went on to explain that each house – some having as many as 50 or 60 residents – receives a certain allotment of food per person, and the rest of the necessary items can be picked up at certain warehouses.

It's an interesting setup. Communal and egalitarian. It was hard for me to decide whether The Farm is closer to being perfect communism or perfect democracy.

When it grew dark, Jim and I walked back to the visitor's tent. It was the end of my first and last day at The Farm, since I would have to leave the next day to get back to school. As we walked, I asked Jim why he had come to The Farm. "To escape the superficiality of normal life," he replied. He went on saying that it had been a quick decision. He had quit his job, sold his apartment and car, and left for The Farm all on the same day.

"Weren't your folks a little upset?" I asked.

"Oh yeah!" he replied. "They sent my brother out here to try and talk me into going back home."

"What was the result of that?"

"He's going to move out here next month." Jim then asked me if I would ever return to The Farm to live, and I pondered the question for a while.

"I don't know," I said finally, "maybe I should talk to your brother."

Self-Design Major

Cont. From Page 15

many students' college course work, some students approach the curriculum from a more purist point of view: learning for the sake of learning. Professors Tom Hudspeth and Robert Gussner offered some insights on this topic in relation to the individual design major. Hudspeth, assistant director of the Environmental Studies Program, said, "We work with each student where they're at... some are in the program just to learn – others are in it to develop special skills." Professor Gussner, chairman of the College of Arts and Sciences' Committee on Honors and Individual Studies, saw self-directed education as having great learning potential irregardless of career objectives. He did note, however, that many individual design proposals recently submitted for review were distinctly more job or skill oriented than those in the past.

With roughly five years behind it, the individual design program has grown, matured, and established a strong foundation to build on. Well-developed support, evaluation, and advising mechanisms in all three schools also lend an additional base of strength. Despite its sound structure, the program may be threatened by a laissez-faire, limited responsibility attitude among overworked staff who have to deal with the increasing number of interested students. Nonetheless, the future is bright and the outlook is optimistic for this form of self-directed learning.

On a larger scale, the whole concept of self-directed learning seems to unveil a more important aspect of education and life. Professor Mark Smith, director of the individual design program in the School of Education and Social Services, called it "the difference between active and passive learning." He likened one's educational process to a train. "You can ride on the cow catcher and meet everything head on," he said, "or you can ride in the boxcar and watch it all pass by."

ROOTS

Presented by IRA as a service to all UVM students.

FREE

SECOND WEEK

April 10 4-6 p.m. 101 Votey and 7-9 WDW Lobby
April 11 4-6 p.m. 235 Marsh Life Sciences and 7-9 WDW Lobby
April 12 4-6 p.m. 101 Votey and 7-9 p.m. WDW Lobby
April 13 4-6 p.m. 235 Marsh Life Sciences and 7-9 p.m. WDW Lobby
April 14 4-6 p.m. 101 Votey and 7-9 p.m. WDW Lobby

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsis with small pizza
4-Pepsis with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

The Sheik Cafe
presents
Thurs. 6- BLAIR & BURKE
Fri. 7 & Sat. 8- HORNS WILLIAMS
Nitely Drink Specials
Long List of Imported & Domestic
Beers & Wines
41 King Street 864-5395

Mocking Justice
The Book on Paul Lawrence
In His Image
David Rorvik's Book on an actually cloned child

Wit & Wisdom Bookshop
100 Dorset St., South Burlington, Vt

Behind the Marble Shroud

The 1978 UVM—DC Seminar

By Dan Adams

(The UVM-Washington D.C. Seminar, held over spring break, was attended by twenty-eight students. Participants enjoyed input from faculty adviser Professor Dan Hoffman of the political science department, and are indebted to Janet Bill and Richard Sachs, both UVM alumni, and Professor Woodrow Leake, for lining up housing and speakers.)

For many students participating in this year's seminar, it was a venture into the unknown. Besides attempting to avoid a near certain death on the frantic Beltway (495), while attempting to find host families (UVM alumni in the D.C. area), meeting with Morton Halperin, six members of President Carter's staff, Vic Pfieffer of the President's Commission on Mental Health, and Frank Van Riper of the New York Daily News, helped expedite each participant's attempt to bridge the significant gap between ideals and realities concerning the nation's government.

Many found Carter's staff to be young, relentlessly optimistic, and hesitant to comment on delicate issues (none would pick up on the Snepp case). Halperin was more outspoken, with a negative assessment of Carter's willingness to follow through on campaign promises concerning secrecy in the government. Pfieffer opened participants' minds to some of the agonizing logistic problems inherent in the commission process, and Van Riper gave an assessment of the President's one-year performance from his perspective as a writer. It was difficult to avoid coming away with a feeling for the awesome complexity and pressures involved in fulfilling the role as president, and for the difficulty for the political technicians in making such significant and far-reaching decisions in keeping in mind the probable effects of their policy on specific individuals.

The meetings were held over two full days, with receptions in the evenings at the residence of former Congressman Hastings Keith and at Vt. Senator Leahy's office. With heads spinning from conflicting views, assessments, and observations of Carter's first year in office, we then turned to the streets for lessons of a different sort:

Legal — one student was fined $5.00 for walking against a DON'T WALK sign at an intersection; another fined $10.00 for driving the wrong way in a one way road.

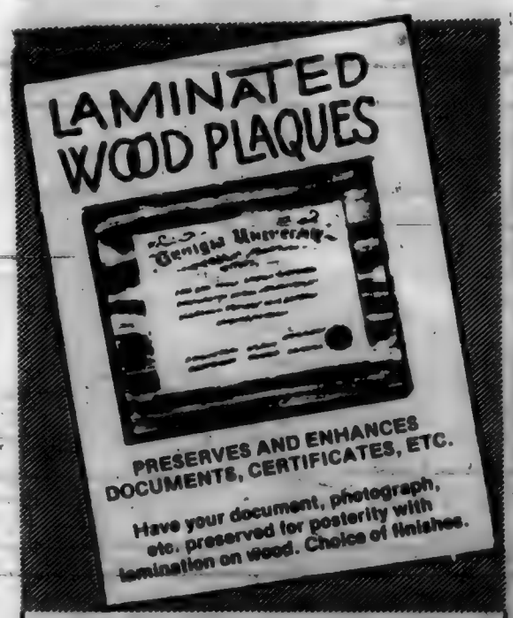
Environmental (political?) — a student was a target of an accurate pigeon (a Carter aid?) which could spot a "staunch Republican" miles away.

Domestic — Tuesday morning two dogs escaped from one host family's home, and students used interpersonal skills, stick-ology, and a lb. of bologna to bring the dogs home.

Social — the difficulty of rendezvousing in a cement jungle; distinguishing between D4's and G4's; avoiding lines; the virtues of host families with connections at local sororities; the how's, where's, and when's concerning free shots in town; and with how many grains of salt to take any advice or directions from the student director.

Morning Legislation — mornings always come, regardless of the previous day's activities.

Yet for all the exposure that seminar participants experienced, perhaps the most significant question was raised by that which was not seen. In spending a few days in the nation's capitol investigating the federal government, one is impressed by the beauty of the city, of the clean streets and smartly dressed inhabitant. Yet for one willing to head off the beaten track, hidden behind the marble shrouds are the pains of long-term poverty, of malnutrition and housing, problems, and of prejudices and mistreatment of the poor.



The federal government sector of D.C. has insulated itself from all of this. The problems can go unnoticed to a casual visitor of the city. I recall, while working for a former government official last summer in D.C., how easy it was to roll up the windows and turn on the air conditioning when over the radio came warnings not to go outside due to the bad air conditions. It was so much easier to build a wall between the harsh realities of the city's slums and one's own situation, than to think of confronting the difficult problems of the poor.

Sometime when you visit D.C., take a tour bus of the city, and, remembering the problems of the city which, interestingly, is over 80% black, note the liliwhite affluence the tour guide points out; or in the winter months stroll around the Kennedy Center in the early morning hours and see homeless souls sitting on the heating ducts in the parking lot to keep from freezing.

As the seminar answered some of the questions in students' minds, it sent many students away troubled by others; for example, the cutting irony in the realization that just a few blocks away from the home of one of the most powerful men in the world there were people suffering from malnutrition, poor clothing, and inadequate housing.

Usually underlying any irony is an unsolvable issue which reinforces the view that life, in fact, is not accurately explained with response to True-False questions. Students who experienced Washington with open eyes and open minds are most likely destined to lose some sleep in the coming nights. There is no consolation to be offered; no one promised that reality would be painless.

Students who experienced Washington with open eyes and open minds are most likely destined to lose some sleep in the coming nights. . . No one promised that reality would be painless.

GALERY 410
214 COLLEGE ST.
BURLINGTON, VT.
802-863-3695

• WATERBEDS
• FURNITURE
Emerald City of Oz, Ltd.
71 St. Paul St. Burlington, Vermont, 05401
862-4298
northern Vermont's complete waterbed headquarters !

collegiate crossword

© Edward Julius, 1977 Collegiate CW77-7

ACROSS

1 Jet ——
7 Goes away
13 Dobie Gillis's girlfriend, et al.
15 Small crown
16 Senior citizen, usually
17 Dance performance
18 Formation
19 Roman 151
21 —— system
22 Polynesian warriors
23 Statement of faith
25 College in Houston
26 Telephone-dial trio
27 Actress Norma ——
29 —— Synephrine
30 Gulf-state food fishes
32 Jazz instrument
34 First-rate
35 Baseball's Manny ——
36 Actor Navarro
38 Gridiron play
41 Comedy producer —— Roach
42 Reads
44 Editor's insertion in a quote
46 Lupino and Cantor
48 Woodturning machine
49 Sound amplifier
50 Covered with hoarfrost
52 ——-neck shirt
53 Pioneer in mental health
54 Varnish ingredient
56 Do car work
58 Oscar ——
59 —— box, in psychology
60 U.S. industrialist, Samuel ——
61 Avaricious

DOWN

1 Layers
2 Richard Burton film (2 wds.)
3 Frantic scramble (2 wds.)
4 Inventor Howe
5 Breezy
6 The ever-popular —— Busch
7 Oriental actor Jack ——
8 Technical name for the shank
9 Helicopter part
10 Dye ingredient
11 Dangerous ones
12 Car accessory
14 Discharge
15 Town ——
20 Pastures
23 Waterway
24 Aficionado
27 Senator Jackson
28 Last ——
31 On the —— •
33 —— Harbor, Maine
35 Flirtatious fellows
36 Math symbol
37 California city or shaded walk
38 Stringed instrument of old
39 Stupid
40 Compared
41 Former Senator Fong, et al.
43 Poe's bird
45 Dieter's food
47 What to do with a new watch (2 wds.)
49 Creator of Winnie-the-Pooh
51 Measure of medicine
53 Poker hand
55 And not
57 Record of heart activity

Last Issue's Answers

| | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| S | C | R | E | A | M | | | B | A | S | I | C | S | |
| C | H | A | G | R | I | N | | C | O | L | O | N | E | L |
| R | I | V | I | E | R | A | | R | E | A | L | I | N | E |
| A | M | I | S | S | | T | H | O | R | N | | T | S | E |
| P | E | N | | L | I | O | N | S | | R | I | O | T | |
| E | R | E | | S | A | V | O | Y | | P | E | A | R | S |
| | A | S | P | I | R | E | D | | D | E | A | L | S | |
| | | E | G | G | S | | F | O | R | D | | | | |
| | L | L | A | N | O | | C | O | M | E | S | T | O | |
| M | O | O | R | E | | P | O | R | E | S | | O | P | A |
| A | B | O | Y | | M | I | R | E | D | | | R | I | B |
| N | E | T | | L | O | C | K | S | | N | A | T | A | L |
| E | L | E | M | E | N | T | | T | R | I | B | U | T | E |
| T | I | R | A | D | E | S | | S | E | C | U | R | E | S |
| S | A | S | H | A | Y | | | D | E | T | E | S | T | |

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Free Pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza

4-Pepsi's with large pizza

Exp. 5-16-78

658-3333

Juniors ! Juniors !

Get your Senior picture taken...

NOW NOW NOW

Ariel Office Billings

MAKE

THE OUTFITTERS

YOUR BICYCLING HEADQUARTERS

- Full line of bicycles
- Raleighs, Azuki, Gitane, Nishiki, Panosonic, Paris Sport and Recordman
- Quality 10 speeds from $89.95
- 18 to 28" frames on 27x1¼" wheels
- Friendly courteous service
- Repairs & tuneups on any make
- Many bikes at 1977 prices and below
- Free Kurly Kable, Kickstand and tool kit with 10 speeds over $100 while supply lasts

THE OUTFITTERS

Essex Junction Shopping Center, Essex Junction
North Avenue Shopping Center, Burlington

Wasteful Heat at Front of Billings?

The blasting heat from the radiators at the front entrance of Billings symbolizes to many the hypocrisy of an environmentally concerned University. Students are dismayed that 'their' building is probably one of the most heat wasteful structures on campus.

There is a simple explanation.

If there wasn't any heat provided at either entrance, a draft would sweep through the center of Billings when both doors are open. The middle area between North Lounge and the Round Room has no central heating elements and consequently is very susceptable to cold air seeping in, making it impossible to keep warm.

The constant heat between the double doors at the front of Billings and coming from the radiators at the back entrance is lost as people enter, but prevents the potential draft and results in net savings for the electricity bill.

DO YOU WANT TO FLY?

Face it . . . you've always wanted to fly! Many of us have had the feeling . . . and for some it has never gone away.

If you have that feeling, then you're in luck. Air Force ROTC Flight Instruction Program (FIP) is available to you. It's designed to teach you the basics of flight through flying lessons in small aircraft at a civilian operated flying school.

The program is an EXTRA for cadets who can qualify to become Air Force pilots through Air Force ROTC. Taken during the senior year in college, FIP is the first step for the cadet who is going on to Air Force jet pilot training after graduation.

This is all reserved for the cadet who wants to get his life off the ground . . . with Air Force silver pilot wings. Check it out today.

Contact St. Michael's/UVM Air Force ROTC, 655-2000, ext. 2551.

AIR FORCE ROTC

Gateway to a great way of life.

Been Downtown Lately...

wooden picture frames, molding, and the largest selection of mat frames — for the finished look.

boutilier's

FRYE Boot Sale
$39
Reg. $68
CRISPIN LEATHER
160 COLLEGE ST • 863 2216

..jewelry by Ed Levin.

AT Agenda
28 Church St.

"On Top Of Church Street"
Hawks Point
Never A Cover Charge
68 Church St.
Equinox...Fri. night Windows...Sat. night

Sunflower
Natural Foods

Come and inspect our new custom-made bulk food bins! Neat, clean, and efficient! Now you can help yourself to our complete stock of grains, seeds, and beans!

211 College St • Burlington, Vt • 862-3654

THE APPALACHIAN GAP
Clothes for Men & Women

199 College St.

CALENDAR April 7-13

Friday

9:30 a.m., Discussion, "Human Rights: Contemporary Issues," with Milton Katz, Harvard University, John Dewey Lounge.

12 noon, Biochemistry Seminar, "Clinical Studies of Vitamin D Absorption and Hydroxylation," with Edward Krawitt, M.D., University of Vermont, B403 Given Bldg.

12 noon Lecture, "Avogadro's Molecular Hypothesis in its Time Frame: Legends and Realities of its Neglect," by Mario Morselli, A229 Cook Physical Sciences Bldg.

3:10 p.m., Political Science Colloquium, "Money and Politics," by Milton Katz, Harvard University, John Dewey Lounge.

3:10 p.m., Economics Colloquium, "The Future of School Financing in Vermont," with Daniel J. Sullivan, University of Vermont, 110A Old Mill.

7 & 9:30 p.m., S.A. Film "Day for Night," B106 Angell Lecture Center, general admission $1.50, with UVM ID, one dollar.

7:45 p.m., Open Poetry Reading, with R. Tinker Greene, Church St. Center, admission free.

8 p.m., Department of Music recital, Frank Taylor on the Charles Fisk University Organ, assisted by members of the University Choral Union, recital hall, Music Bldg. Tickets are $2; one dollar for students.

7, 9:30, 12 midnight, Andy Warhol's "Frankenstein." Southwick Gym, $1. Sponsored by Wilks 4.

Saturday

9 a.m. – 4:30 p.m., 35th Anniversary Program, School of Nursing, Rowell/Given complex. Pre-registration and fee required; contact Barbara Potter at 656-3830.

9 a.m. – 5 p.m., Woodcuts, Church St. Center, with Mary Azarian. Pre-registration at the Center, $19. Tel. 656-4221.

10 a.m. – 9 p.m., Folk & country music in the 20th century: the singers & the songs, Church St. Center, with Roy Berkeley. Pre-registration at the Center, $10. Tel. 656-4221.

10 a.m. – 5 p.m., Porcelain handbuilding, Church St. Center, with Josette Noll. Pre-registration at the Center, $16. Tel. 656-4221.

7 p.m., IRA Films triple feature, "Dirty Duck" (cartoon), "Death Race 2000," and "Eat My Dust," Southwick Gym, admission one dollar.

7 & 9 p.m., Lane Series films of Marlene Dietrich, "Shanghai Express," 235 Marsh Life Sciences Bldg., admission one dollar.

8 p.m., St. Michael's College Jazz & Wind Ensembles present a benefit concert for the St. Pius X Youth Ministry, of Essex Center at the McCarthy Art Center, St. Michael's College. Tickets $2. Call 863-5986 for more information.

Sunday

1–4:30 p.m., an open afternoon of music and poetry exchange at The Learning Tree, Mt. Philo Rd. in Shelburne. Bob Teer will M.C.

1 p.m., Baseball, UVM at North Adams State (two seven-inning games).

2 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, UVM at New England College.

3 – 5:30 p.m., Charles Olson & Poetry Cosmology, Church St. Center, with R. Tinker Greene and others. Pre-registration at the Center, $1.

4 p.m., Department of Music, senior recital by Judy. Cookson, soprano, and Joanne Mislan, guitar, recital hall, Music Bldg. Admission is free.

7 p.m., S.A. Film, "Born Yesterday," B106 Angell Lecture Center, general admission 50 cents; with UVM ID, free.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., Chittenden Co. Alumni and Parents' Lecture, "Winetasting – Red Wines," by Marie and Thomas Geno, University of Vermont, faculty lounge, fifth floor Waterman. Admission $3.50.

8 p.m., Lane Series, Tashi, Ira Allen Chapel. Ticket prices are $7.50 and $4.50. Tel. 656-3418.

8 p.m., IRA films triple feature, "Dirty Duck" (cartoon), "Death Race 2000," and "Eat My Dust," Southwick Gym, admission one dollar.

8:00 p.m., Slade Hall, an evening of slides (of past and present Slade students) and refreshments for those interested in living in La Maison Francaise next year.

April 9 – 15: Exhibition of Photographs by students of Janica Yoder.

Monday

12 noon, Lecture, "The Molecular Hypothesis in its Interpretation after 1811 by Dumas, Berzelius, Ampere and Gaudin," by Mario Morselli, A229 Cook Physical Sciences Bldg.

4:15 – 6 p.m., College of Arts and Sciences Work-in-Progress Colloquium, "A Plate Tectonic View of Vermont," by Rolfe Stanley and Dion Stuart, University of Vermont, B106 Angell Lecture Center.

7 p.m., Lecture, "The Lessons of Solzhenitsyn's 'The Gulag Archipelago'" by Patricia Blake, Columbia University and Time Magazine, 108 Terrill Hall. Admission free. Sponsored by the Program of Russian and East European Studies.

8 p.m., Speakers Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee. Both are renowned performers on stage, television and film. They have appeared in Purlie Victorious and A Raisin in the Sun and directed Cotton Comes to Harlem. They will give a dramatic presentation of Harlem Renaissance literature. Royall Tyler Theatre. Admission $2, with UVM ID one dollar.

7:30 – 9 p.m., Career Spectrum, "Careers in Computers and Management Information Systems," Alumni House, admission free.

Tuesday

9:25 a.m., Seminar, "Critique of Solzhenitsyn's Work," with Patricia Blake, Columbia University and Time Magazine, John Dewey Lounge. Sponsored by the Program of Russian and East European Studies.

3:10 p.m., Mathematics Colloquium, "Against Euclid," by Philip Kitcher, UVM, 305 Votey.

7:30 p.m., Film "Memories of Underdevelopment." (Cuba, 1968, directed by Tomas Gutierrez Alea) First film to be released in U.S. from post-revolutionary Cuba. The diary of a bourgeois intellectual caught in the midst of the rapidly changing social reality of revolutionary Cuba. B106 Angell Lecture Center. Admission free.

Wednesday

12:15 p.m., Lunch bunch film, "The Tall Ships Are Coming," Church St. Center, admission free.

3 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, UVM at Massachusetts.

3 p.m., Psychology Colloquium, "Behavioral Medicine for Epilepsy," with David I. Mostofsky, Boston University, 314 John Dewey Hall.

4:30 p.m., S.A. Film, "African Queen," 235 Marsh Life Science Bldg., general admission 50 cents, with UVM ID free.

7:30 – 10 p.m., Discussion, "Vermont's Land Use Laws: How Will We Know They've Worked?" with Jonathan Brownell, Church St. Center, admission free.

8 p.m., A folk music concert, featuring a composite of songs from Jimmy Rogers to Malvina Reynolds, Woody Guthrie to traditional works, all performed by Bob White in the back room of The Mill Restaurant in Winooski. Sponsored by The Mill Folk Club.

Wine in the Coburn Gallery. Meet the photographers (students of Janica Yoder) and talk about the work.

Thursday

3 p.m., Men's Tennis, UVM at Middlebury.

3:10 p.m., Mathematics Colloquium, "Against Euclid," by Philip Kitcher, UVM, 305 Votey.

4 p.m., UVM College of Medicine Century Forum, "Minor Brain Difference: Individual Variations in Cerebral Organization," with Peter Wolff, M.D., Children's Hospital Medical Center, Carpenter Aud., Given Bldg.

7 p.m., Film, "The Agony and the Ecstasy (the Story of Michaelangelo)" at the Fleming Museum basement auditorium. Sponsored by the Art Dept. and Medieval Renaissance Studies. Donation $1.00.

7 p.m., S.A. Film "Tom Jones," B106 Angell Lecture Center, general admission 50 cents; with UVM ID free.

8 p.m., Spring Women's film series, "Mosori Monika, Behind the Veil" and "The Black Woman," Williams Science Hall, two dollar donation.

VERMONT CYNIC

EDITORIAL BOARD

Editor-in-Chief: David C. Greeff
Managing Editor: Alex D. Walker
Executive Editor: Russell F. Flannery
Layout Editor: Jerome E. Andrews

News: Robert J. Moore
Features: Alan Marshall
Sports: Rich Chalmers, Steve Larose
Arts: Vaune Davis
Advertising Manager: Brian Evans
Business Manager: Julie Voll

The Vermont Cynic is published weekly during the school year except vacations by students at UVM. Opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or the State of Vermont.

Editorial

Legislature Bags Two Out of Three

Last week the closing sessions of the 1978 Vermont legislature proved once again to be busy with many bills receiving last minute approval or denial. Three pieces of legislation in particular directly affect UVM and the student population. They are: the rathskellar bill, the pot decriminalization bill, and the gym expansion bill.

The legislature should be highly commended for approving the belated but nonetheless adequate funding of nearly $1 million for the Patrick gym expansion. Given the obvious inadequacies of the present facility — built in 1961 for a student body less than half the current size — it was high time this new construction be approved.

The lawmakers also deserve praise for finally approving the rathskellar bill which allows state colleges and universities the option to sell beer and wine on campus. Keith Miser, who testified in favor of the bill on behalf of UVM, should be recognized for his active role in getting the final bill through.

It is now time for students to let their views be known and decide whether UVM should have a campus pub — and if so where. The Student Association is more than willing to act on this issue provided they know where the students stand. We believe a campus pub is a good idea because students ought to have at least one place on campus where they can relax and have a beer at their leisure. Walking downtown to one of the many Burlington bars is not overburdening but shouldn't be the only choice.

********

While the rathskellar bill and the gym construction bill were positive achievements, the legislature's failure to pass the proposed bill to reduce the penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana was clearly a negative one. It appears that the proponents of the bill had the necessary votes for ratification until the emotional, and we believe, out of place speech by Chester Scott (R-Windsor County). Mr. Scott appealed to his colleagues to vote against the legislation because his son, who apparently had serious drug problems, told him that marijuana was "the doorknob to hell."

In our view, the highly dubious and unproven assertion that marijuana leads to further and more harmful drugs is insufficient justification for the senate to act against this legislation. Unfortunately, it appears that they allowed themselves to be influenced by the dramatic appeal of an individual case which has little direct bearing on the issue. It is our hope that when the legislature reconvenes next January it will reconsider and pass a decriminalization bill so that law enforcement officials can devote more of their limited time to more serious criminal offenses.

LETTERS

Reduce Candidate Expenditures

To the Editor:

"Looking out at the road rushing under my wheels, I don't know how to tell you all just how crazy this life feels."
Jackson Browne

The legalized insanity process known euphemistically as the S.A. Elections will remain indelibly etched in the memory of all candidates, regardless of who wins or loses. It's been intense, frustrating, enjoyable, absurd, and a hundred other adjectives simultaneously, but above all, we've learned a great deal. I'd like to thank all the people who have supported and encouraged my candidacy (someday I'll forgive you), especially Allison, Dan, David, and everyone in my house. The men in white suits have yet to take me away, and I owe a lot of this to you.

If I have one suggestion for next year's elections, it would be to establish a maximum amount of paper or reduce the expense allowance for each candidate. The saturation effect of this year's posters has obviously had little effect in deciding votes, since only about 20% of the students voted, versus 25% last year. Over 10,000 sheets of paper were used in this year's S.A. elections alone, which works out to about seven posters or flyers for every person who voted! As this tremendous waste of paper is neither pragmatic, aesthetically pleasing, or ecologically sound, steps need to be taken toward more rational limitations on spending and/or paper in the future.

Eric Kilburn

Criticism For A Critic

To the Editor:

I wish to express my reaction to the Cynic article reviewing Barbara Wells' free piano concert on Sunday, March 12 at Burlington High School. Apparently, the critic went to the concert with the "chance of a lifetime anticipation of an absolutely superb performance but left somewhat disappointed." I felt the performance was indeed superb, and although the young, talented artist is not a Vladimir Horowitz, she certainly performed an ambitious and exceptional concert. To my dismay, the article was overly critical, particularly in regard to Ms. Wells' performance of Beethoven.

The critic described Ms. Wells as playing one of the more successfully performed pieces, Beethoven's "Tempest," with lack of vitality and force... contrary to that review, I felt Ms. Wells played the "Tempest" with a great sense of dynamic contrast and vitality. To say that she did not have "the power to bring the composer to her audience" in "a somewhat anti-climatic finish to the first half of the recital," is a rather harsh misjudgment. She certainly "brought the composer" to me, and although the audience may have been more introverted than usual, her depth of playing was facilitated by a fine technical, emotional and creative handling of the music. I find it rather difficult to view her performance of the second movement as "lifeless and directionless" and the third movement as "little variance in texture." Rather, Ms. Wells performance of the Sonata as a whole was an extraordinary and edifying experience. She seemed to achieve that brilliant balance in Beethoven's music between the structural discipline and the romantic emotionalism. Ms. Wells describes Beethove s music as "moral, philosoph , autobiographical, the most thorough going in its structure, yet it has the power in emotion." She has lived with the "Tempest" for months; she has practiced the piece since last summer and has performed it a number of times in concert this fall. I felt her familiarity, genuine dedication and precise interpretation of the piece certainly reached the audience.

Sincerely,
Laurie Samuel

Les Punk Pestes

To the Editor:

We would sincerely like to thank the Cynic for the consideration and attention given to our recent engagement in Burlington. The full page ad was executed with remarkable professionalism, as was the article on New Wave (the Blondie pix was outrageous!) As virtual unknowns to this area, such recognition is more than welcome.

And Randy McCullen – that kid's alright! We've submitted his name to a local fanzine for a "punk of Punk journalism" we've ever read. Misquoting Peter and comparing him to Aggy Pop (we met Aggy at a party once – he's really not so fluid); bring along a photographer who didn't take any photos (that kid owes us two bucks); and his interpretation of Punk rock (we're fed up with all of these pseudo-intellectuals who try to find some kind of hidden meaning behind the punk scene) all made for a primordial piece of Punk poetry. And calling our music "school by rock." Wow! what a compliment. Does he play guitar? Or maybe he could just write louder.

Anyway, we say "Never Mind the Rock n Roll. Here's the Critics."

Punkishly yours,
La peste
the Combat Zone
Boston, Mass.

Sucrose Defended

To the Editor:

The column on Basic Health, "Sucrose A Sweet Enemy" by Barry Gustin in the March 2 issue of the Vermont Cynic contains several errors about nutrition.

Sucrose is not the major constituent of honey and corn syrup as stated.

We question the expertise of many experts who claim "that a vast majority of the American populace has hypoglycemia to some degree." Most professional nutritionists and medical scientists do not promote hypoglycemia as a major problem.

The comparison of eating a bowl of sugar with that of eating a bowl of rice in terms of their effect on body metabolism is silly and overdramatic. A bowl of sugar contains four times as much energy as a bowl of cooked rice. In addition complex carbohydrates are not high in vitamins and minerals, as stated. It is the foods that contain these complex carbohydrates that also contain vitamins and minerals to varying degrees depending upon the foodstuff.

There is not adequate scientific data to support the conclusions that sucrose in particular inhibits absorption of thiamin and chromium, nor that sucrose would affect metabolism differently than other carbohydrates in situations in which thiamin or chromium are low.

While high sucrose intake has sometimes been shown to increase blood fat, it is much less certain that blood cholesterol is also increased, as stated. The scientific evidence concerning cholesterol is so uncertain, that recommendations to a general population cannot yet be made.

In reference to diabetes and heart disease the statement "Only a change in dietary habits will save us from an inevitable epidemic of these nutritionally related diseases" is totally without basis in either the nutritional or medical profession. This is utter nonsense, and ignores the possible influences of genetic, environmental, infectious and other agents in the etiology of these diseases.

We have no argument with the need for widespread nutritional education and changes to a more prudent diet, including less sugar. However, to accomplish this by exaggeration and in an overly dramatic and overly emphatic manner minimizing scientific truthfulness and dispassion is not acceptable, particularly in a university publication. Perhaps the current writers on nutrition should use faculty or students highly trained in nutrition as sounding boards for their columns. Even better, maybe these columns should be written by students with extensive training in nutrition and an ability to put it into a proper perspective with present knowledge in nutrition. Otherwise, these writings are a disservice to a critical area of human health.

Lyndon B. Carew
Prof. Animal Nutrition & Human Nutrition & Foods
Merton P. Lamden
Prof Biochemistry
Eleanor Schlenker
Head, Human Nutrition & Foods

Op-Ed

The Rise of American Socialism

By Eric Pollard

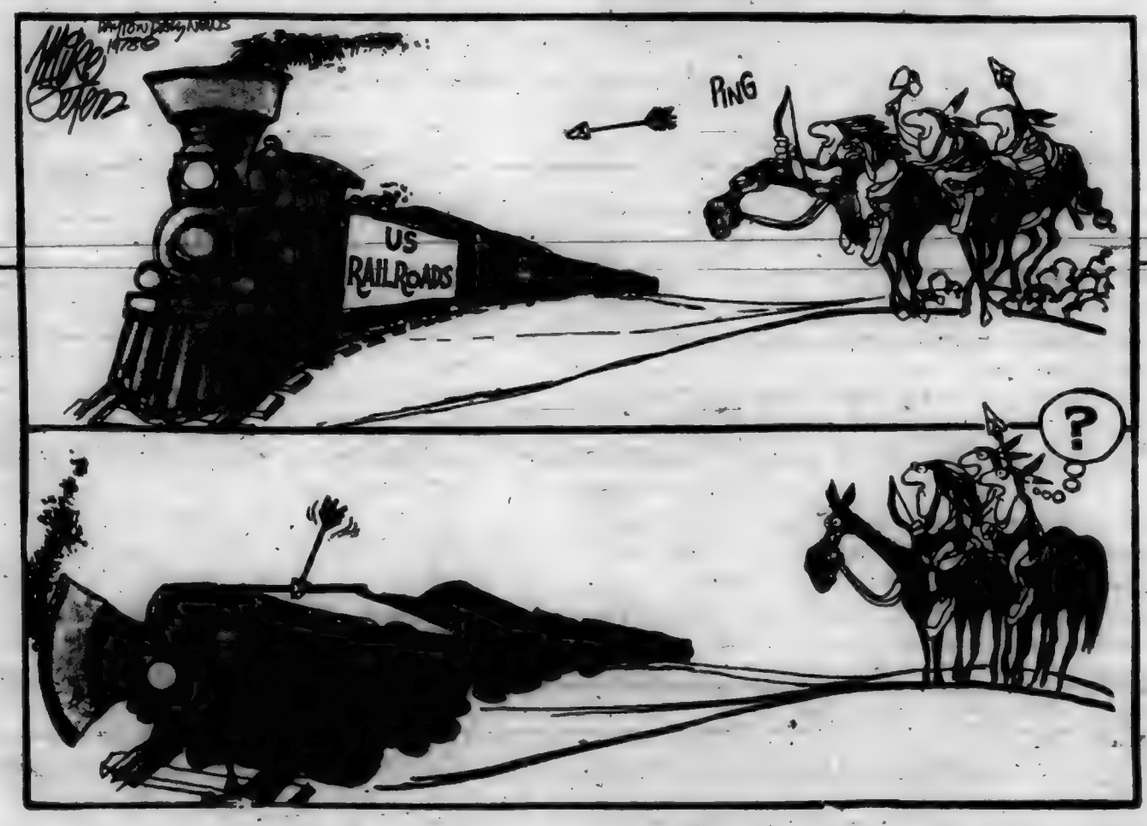
For all the rhetoric to the contrary, the United States has developed into a quasi-socialist state. The steps toward that end have been so small to go virtually unnoticed by the average citizen and unchecked by those aware of the ultimate conclusion of such actions.

The nationalization of the passenger rail system in America, the government monopoly of the postal system, and the increasing shift of welfare payments to the federal budget are examples of this trend. The most recent and by far the most blatant example of the growing socialist nature of American society is the ongoing discussion of a national health insurance plan. While Senator Kennedy has been pushing for some form of national health care plan for several years, President Carter is the first executive to consider such legislation as desirable and politically expedient. Carter has, over the objections of Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Califano and Secretary of Treasury Blumenthal, initiated the development of a comprehensive national health insurance program to be presented to Congress before the end of this year. Two other bills dealing with national health care are already before the Congress, one calling for an additional 130 billion dollars in expenditures in 1980 to be financed from general tax revenue and a graduated payroll tax, and another, more limited plan calling for sixteen billion dollars in additional expenditures by 1980.



The United States government already spends something on the order of fifty-nine billion dollars a year for health care programs already in existence. Carter's proposed program would cost at least twenty-two billion dollars a year from its inception in 1980 on and has the potential for large overruns. His proposal is an excellent one in principle, but does not extend far enough to accomplish the ultimate goal of such a program, the equal and free access of health services to all American citizens. The very fact that he is willing to consider such a program speaks rather strongly of the influences that exist in this country that are pushing toward a more equal, free society.

Carter first espoused the idea of socialized medicine in the primary campaign of 1976 in response to pressure from liberal and labor elements within the Democratic party. He appears to be genuine convert to the cause, pushing his program ahead of some long-standing HEW projects for welfare reform. His advocacy of the national health insurance plan is symptomatic of the willingness with which government is coming to view such projects that years ago would have been rejected as meddling in the affairs of the free enterprise system. The concept of government as the servant of the people has long been accepted in theory, and the transformation of the theoretical acceptance to an acceptance in real and practical terms is most certainly a development of the last quarter century. Programs and plans that call for a denunciation of traditional capitalist ethics have come more to the fore than at any other time in history. While the challenge to the traditional ethics has proven to be somewhat less than successful, the very fact that such programs receive the attention of our lawmakers is certainly a switch. There appears to be a growing sentiment in America, or at least among the people who affect policy decisions, of fraternity and equality that has not in the past been altogether prevalent.

INSIGHT

These attitudes are the result of a maturing awareness of the position of the United States in the international community and of the fact that there is an outer limit beyond which technological advancement cannot be pursued and that evidence indicates that this limit is fast approaching.

The prospects for the Carter plan are cloudy at this time, but the atmosphere in Congress makes its passage a distinct possibility. The fact that the proposal is supported by Senators Kennedy and Ribicoff is certainly a mark in its favor. But whether it passes in Congress or not, it will be very interesting to listen to the arguments that will pour forth both for and against. There is no question but that some form of standardized health protection should be developed, either by the insurance establishment or by the government. It will require a great deal of money to affect the changes in the current system that would be necessary in order to develop a truly effective system of national health care. Perhaps more important than the concept of federally sponsored health insurance are the attitudes that are bringing people to support that concept. In that respect, the growth of socialism in America is not in and of itself good, but the ideas and ethics that are symbolized in socialist organization are laudable indeed. Whether or not the United States is ready for limited socialism is a question to be addressed as well, but the relative willingness of the United States government to consider programs such as this health insurance plan is evidence of a growing maturity in American government and society as a whole.

After A Laugh, Reality Hurts

By Russell Flannery

Student Association. Association. Even the name tself brings visions of smiling bureaucrats looking for volunteer workers and membership dues.

SA — Successful Arabs; Soviet Armaments; Socialist Army; Southern Aristocracy; Southeastern Asia. Obviously unAmerican initials, much less suitable as an abbreviation for the student body of a respectable New England, semi-private university, yet the Student Association performs a vital role in balancing the extremes of diversity of any student population.

Given the disappointing turnout for the recent student government elections (eighty percent of the student body could not have left a full week in advance for Fort Lauderdale), one is forced to reassess whether SA policy reflects actual student sentiment. Hence, a variety of reforms are available for the new leadership to consider:

*The "We Like Everybody" Alternative: Cancel funding for all SA clubs, and restrict allocations to projects that directly affect the entire UVM community. For example,

-Allocate $100,000 from the SA funds to the UVM administration for South African investments

-Attempt to buy a seat on the Faculty Senate Academic Affairs Committee

-Erect a memorial in honor of Vermont Lt. Governor T. Garry Buckley for his support of the Gym Bill and easing penalties for possession of pot.

-As a token of appreciation for their staunch support of consumer interest groups, the SA could donate its entire $175,000 budget to VPIRG in the names of Al Beauchamp and Jack Morgan.

-Finance the construction of an underground tunnel from Waterman building to Billings. Given the number of students crossing South Prospect Street and University Place, the risk of a traffic accident is rather high, and SA could work to significantly lower the number of fatalities. Naturally, a security station would be placed at one end to deter sexual assault and robbery.

*The "We Love Ourselves" Alternative: Make service in the SA more desirable by increasing the benefits for those directly involved.

-Give free spring trips to Bermuda for all club officers, SA senators, and Cynic editors

-Guarantee enrollment in a Dale Carnegie course for all elected officials of SA

-Distribute copies of The American Political System to all freshmen senators.

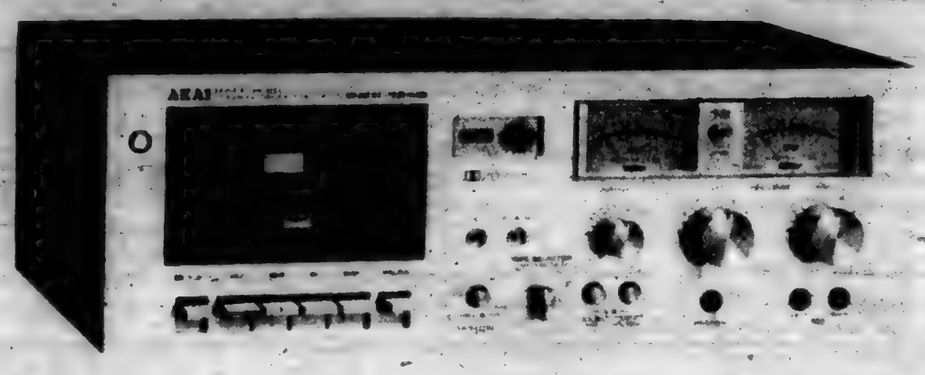
*Attempt public revitalization of the Student Association, and hope for the best.

Of these worthless "reforms," it should be noted SA was, indeed, revitalized three years ago. Ironically, while the administration confidence in SA has apparently increased, the level of student interest has steadily declined. The four percent drop in the seventy-eight election voter turnout, despite on-campus and WRUV broadcast debates, the Cynic supplement, and over 12,000 campaign posters, only confirmed the growing problem here. As Charlie Clark prepares to assume the presidency, one fundamental question awaits him: to what degree can an official who was elected with slightly over one third of the total vote, motivate the student body where his actual level of support is less than seven per cent?



One biased election observer noted the time may have arrived for the SA to "give up" on the apathetic masses, and gear its energies toward more realistic goals. Prior to the election, this political dumping was unacceptable. However, the election results, the percentage of voter turnout, and the method by which SA handled the entire election process all tend to reinforce the radical view.

At this time, a serious reevaluation of SA priorities clearly is in order. Should this year's budget assembly fail to draw an acceptable measure of student support, serious consideration should be given to constitutional revision of the role of the General Assembly. Its irresponsible performance of late requires nothing less.

"Should this year's budget assembly fail to draw an acceptable measure of student support serious consideration should be given to constitutional revision of the role of the General Assembly. Its irresponsible performance of late requires nothing less."

As Seen in Stereo Review Magazine December 1977

Akai GXC-725D Cassette Deck

● Laboratory Measurements. The playback frequency response was measured using TDK AC-331 and Nortronics AT200 test tapes for the "standard" 120-microsecond equalization, and Teac 116SP tape for the 70-microsecond equalization used with $CrO_2$ and FeCr tapes. In both cases the response was within ±1 dB over the full range of the tape (31.5 to 10,000 Hz), most of the variation being at the lower frequencies.

The record-playback frequency response was measured for each of the tape-selector positions using the recommended reference tape or a close equivalent. For the LN and LH tapes we used TDK SD and Maxell UD-XL in place of the specified Fuji FL and Maxell UD tapes. We also tried a Scotch Master tape with the LH setting. It is interesting to note that the $CrO_2$ performance of the recorder is specified only with cobalt-treated ferric "chrome equivalents" such as TDK SA and Maxell UD-XL II, and no actual chromium-dioxide tapes are listed in the table. We tested the machine with the recommended TDK SA and also with BASF Chromdioxid Super. Finally, the FeCr position was checked with the recommended Sony Ferrichrome and the alternate Scotch Classic.

Although there were of course differences in frequency response between the tapes, the similarities between them were striking. For example, the overall response of the TDK SD and Maxell UD-XL were virtually identical over most of the audio range. Most of the deviation from flatness was in the low-frequency "ripples" caused by the head geometry. The overall response was within ±2 dB from 36 to 13,000 Hz with SD and from 34 to 15,000 Hz with UD-XL. Scotch Master (LH) had a mild high-frequency rise and a ±2-dB variation from 35 to 15,000 Hz. The TDK SA, used as a $CrO_2$ tape, had a slightly stronger and extended high end, with a ±1.5-dB variation from 37 to 16,500 Hz. The BASF chrome tape had a more pronounced high-frequency rise above 4,000 Hz, giving it a ±2.5-dB variation from 35 to 18,500 Hz. The ferrichrome tapes gave the widest and flattest frequency response. Sony FeCr was within ±1.5 dB from 36 to 19,000 Hz. Scotch Classic had a very smooth, linear response which sloped downward slightly. It was within ±3 dB from 34 to 17,000 Hz. All these figures result from the tape/machine interface and do not necessarily reflect results that would be obtained with the same tapes on other machines.

All measurements were made at a −20-dB recording level. At a 0-dB level there was the expected rolloff of high-frquency response due to tape saturation. However, the loss of highs was much less than we normally measure on cassette decks, and the 0-dB curve remained above the −20-dB curve at all times instead of intersecting it, as usually happens with cassette recorders. This can undoubtedly be credited to the use of separate recording and playback heads whose gaps have been optimized for their particular functions.

The MPX FILTER cut off sharply above 13,000 Hz, reducing the recording response at 19,000 Hz by nearly 20 dB. The "tracking" of the Dolby circuits was excellent, with no more than a 2-dB difference between frequency-response curves run with and without the Dolby system at levels of −20 and −30 dB. The GXC-725D uses a "double-Dolby" system with separate Dolby circuits for recording and playback functions, so that programs can be monitored from the tape as they are made and heard with the correct frequency response and noise levels.

For a 0-dB recording level, the required input was 53 millivolts at the line jacks and 0.18 millivolt at the microphone jacks (the microphone amplifier overloaded at 43 millivolts input). The meters were calibrated so that the Dolby level of 200 nW/m registered +3 VU as marked. Their ballistic characteristics were exactly as specified for VU meters, so that they indicated 100 per cent of steady-state readings when driven with 0.3-second tone bursts once per second. The PEAK LEVEL light began to glow at a +7-dB input.

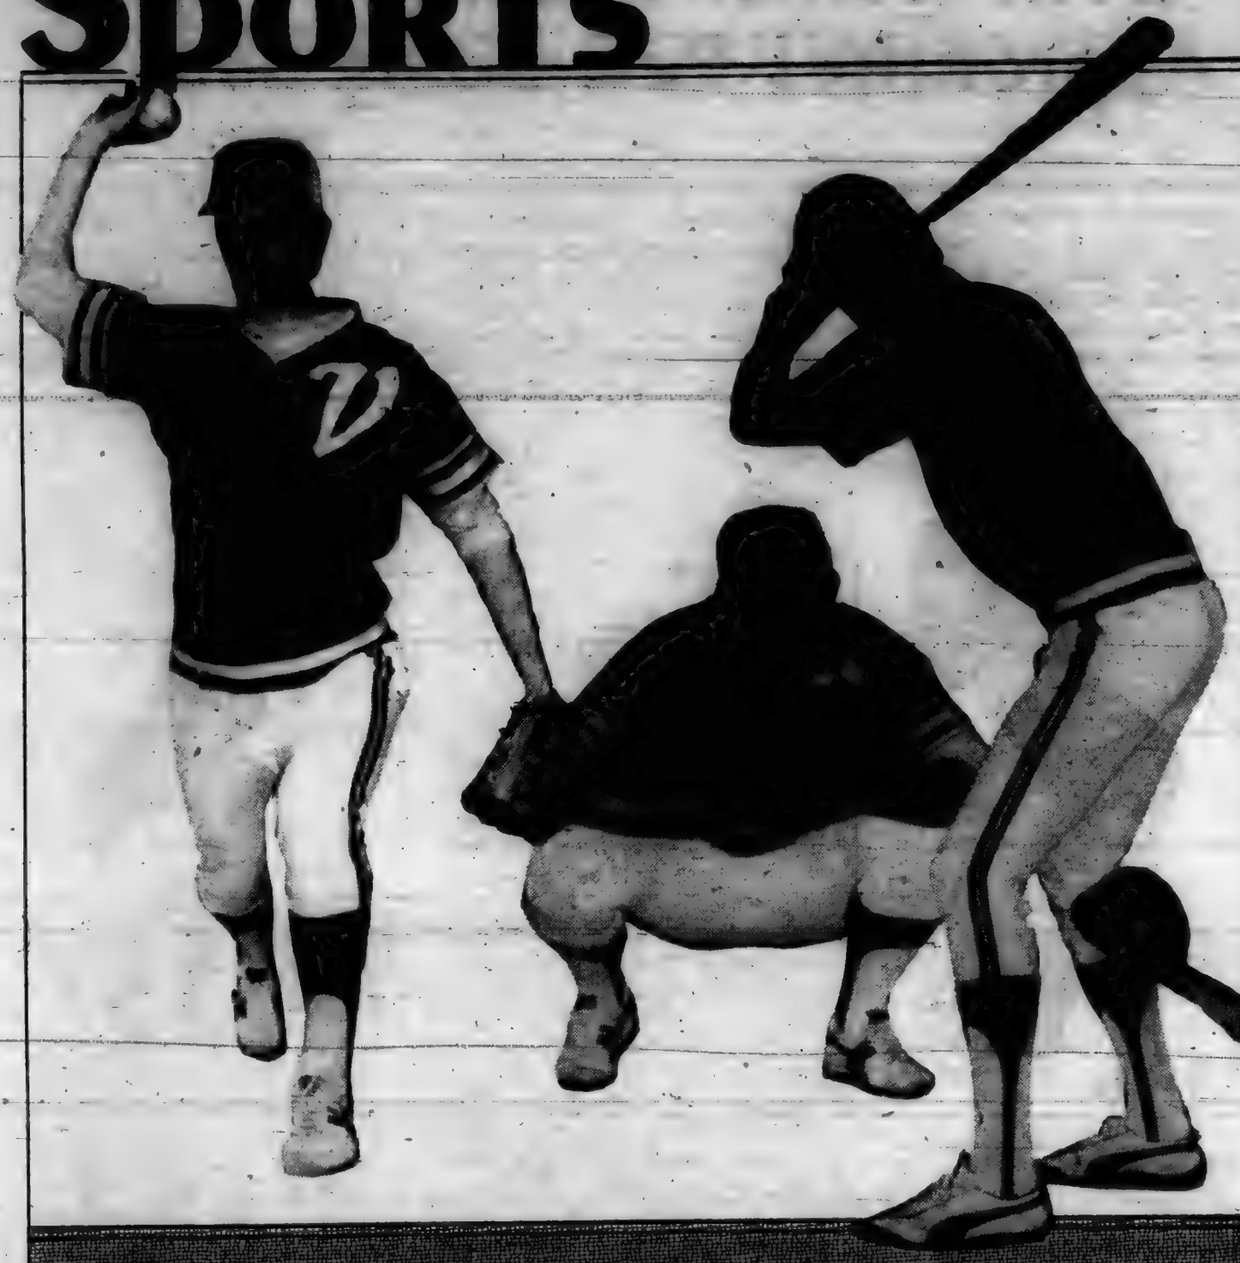
The 1,000-Hz, 0-VU playback distortion was only 0.25 per cent with TDK SD (LN), about 0.45 per cent with Maxell UD-XL (LH) and TDK SA ($CrO_2$) and 1 per cent with Sony FeCr. All of these are well below the rated distortion levels for the recorder. The reference distortion level of 3 per cent was reached at an input of +9 dB for LN, +10 dB for LH, +7 dB for $CrO_2$, and +6 dB for FeCr.

The signal-to-noise ratio (S/N) was measured for each tape using unweighted measurements, IEC "A" weighting, CCIR weighting, and CCIR with Dolby noise reduction. The differences between tapes were slight, with only about 2 dB separating Maxell UD-XL from TDK SD in a weighted measurement with Dolby. Considering that the worst S/N we measured under those conditions was a very good 64.6 dB, it seems that "noisy" is hardly the proper adjective to use when discussing either the machine or any of the tapes! The noise level increased by 8.5 dB through the microphone inputs at maximum gain, but it was not obtrusive at normal gain settings.

The tape transport worked smoothly and quietly. The unweighted rms flutter was only 0.09 per cent. In fast forward or rewind the machine covered a C-60 cassette in 90 seconds. The PAUSE control started up the tape interstation FM tuner hiss and hear almost no difference between the input and playback signals from the recorder at a −10-dB recording level. Instead of the usual dulling of the highs, the major change in the playback quality was a slightly heavier low end, perhaps from the cyclic response variations below 100 Hz. In this test, the performance of the GXC-725D was closer to that of an open-reel tape deck than to other cassette decks (especially those in its price range).

● Comment. Before making any measurements on the Akai GXC-725D, we connected it to a music system and put it into operation. Its quality was immediately audible, to the extent that the later measurements did not surprise us at all.

We noticed that recording levels can be set up without placing the machine in the record mode (or even loading a cassette). The "headroom" is considerably greater than is common in cassette recorders, so that it was safe to let the meters reach 0 dB regularly (which resulted in an occasional flash from the PEAK LEVEL light) when recording from FM or records. Of course, with live program material having greater dynamic range, one should keep the average levels a bit lower.



It was also apparent that the bias and equalization characteristics had been chosen to make the machine compatible with a variety of tapes, unlike some machines whose proper performance can be realized only with the specific type of tape for which they have been adjusted.

The Akai GXC-725D is a rare combination of an absolutely first-rate recorder (which sounds every bit as good as it measures) with a highly affordable price tag. This caliber of performance is available in a very few other cassette decks, all of which are much more expensive than the GXC-725D. It is also worth mentioning that this machine met or surpassed—usually by a wide margin—every one of the ratings for which we were able to test, and it had not a single idiosyncrasy or "bug" that we could find. This might seem to be no more than one would expect from any well-made product, but it is nonetheless rare, and it contributed to our totally positive feeling about the GXC-725D.

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

157 PEARL ST. ESSEX JCT • BARRE MONTPELIER RD • IN THE MALL BETWEEN K-MART & MARTINS SO. BURLINGTON

SPORTS

Baseball & Lacrosse Tackle Challenge of Varsity Status

Vermont Baseball To Feature Strong Pitching

By Randy Briggs

The University of Vermont Varsity baseball team heads into the 1978 season with many strengths and weaknesses. Returning to varsity status for the first time since 1971, the Catamounts have their work cut out for them as they play all the Yankee Conference powerhouses on the road in their first year back.

The strengths on this year's ball club appear to be pitching and defense. The core of any good baseball team begins on the mound and despite the relative inexperience of this year's mound corps, the pitching should become stronger as the season progresses.

The ace of the staff is Montpelier senior right hander Tony Seagle. He has a very smooth pitching style and also has a good fastball and curve ball. Also returning is last year's top winner J. B. McCarthy, also a right-hander from Montpelier. He posted a nifty four to one record last season. Despite getting rocked hard against UMass over the weekend, he will be one of the Cats' best pitchers this year. Another hard thrower is right hander Mal Kimball. Kimball will be at third base when he is not on the mound.

Leading the left-handers on the mound will be the hardest thrower on the team, Brian Meyer, a sophomore out of Brattleboro. The other southpaw is Chip Ziegler, a sophomore out of Rutland, Vermont. Rounding out the pitching staff are two freshmen, Mike White and Peter Mitchell. Coach Leggett has commented, "We have several pitchers who could throw for any team in New England."

Catching will also be an asset for Vermont as veteran Bill McAlduff is returning along with Rice High School graduate Chuck Borsavage. McAlduff is a very good defensive catcher while Borsavage has the better bat of the two. Pushing the two veteran performers is freshman Andy Brown. He may be the best all-round catcher of the three, but his inexperience will probably limit his playing time this year.

The infield is where the major weakness of the team lies. The lack of overall speed and depth in this area will most likely be a major drawback. There are some strengths though. At first base there is strong offense in Bob Czachor. He led last year's 11-3 club team in hitting. Pushing him will be freshman Jason Laird from Rutland. He was the MVP in last

(continued on page 29)

Laxers Face A Tough Schedule

By Rich Chalmers

The University of Vermont men's varsity lacrosse team will compete in its first year in the big league this spring, and although having no previous varsity seasons to back him up, Coach Rick Farnham is confident UVM will break into the league well.

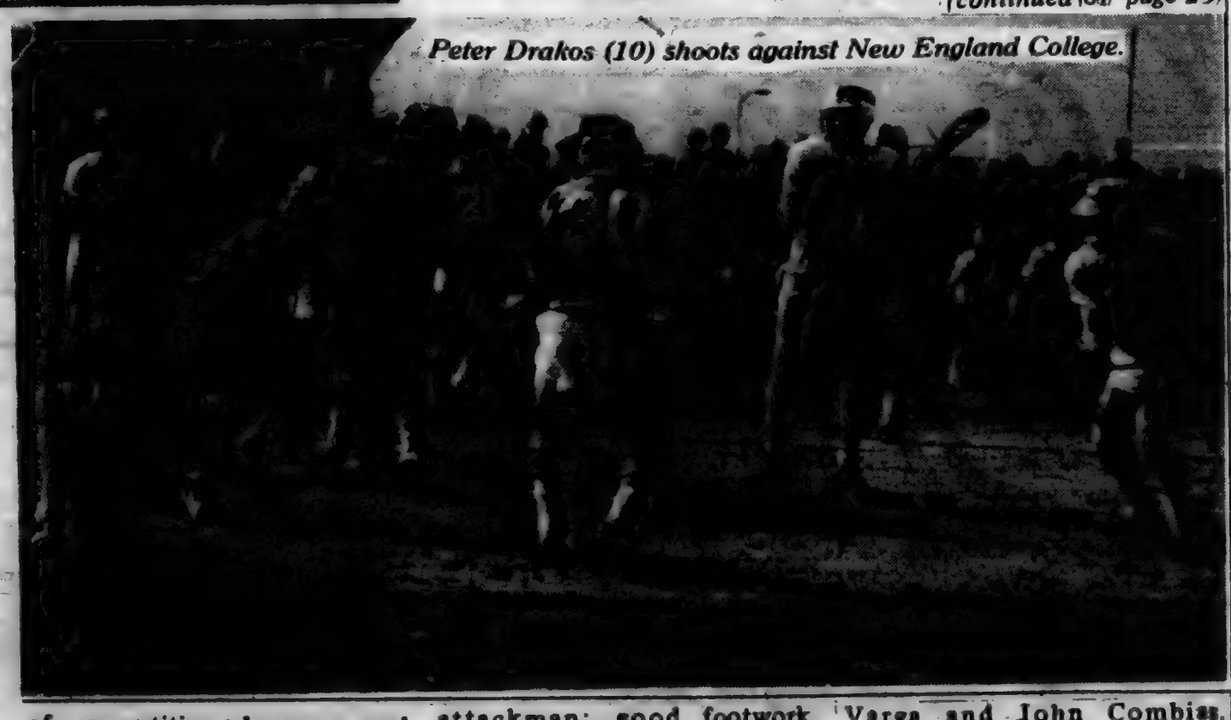
When asked about the upcoming season's record, Farnham replied, "Who knows? It's a question mark!" But underneath that simple answer lies a confident approach. "We're going to play a lot of tough teams and we're going to get beaten, but we're not going to roll over and play dead. Win or lose, those teams are going to know they played a tough game."

Coach Farnham is pleased to have the honor of leading the team through its first varsity season. It is a long jump from a club to a varsity squad and he is approaching the situation with a realistically optimistic attitude. His initial objective will reportedly be to create a competitive team with less emphasis on the win-loss record. "I want to establish the team concept found in a disciplined unit, not the carefree aspect of a club," he explained. "My main goal is to instill in each player a strong sense of team goals, responsibilities, and spirit."

Coach Farnham, new to lacrosse, will be assisted by last year's captain Brooks Mohrman. Ineligible this year, Mohrman will be a great asset in coordinating the offense. He adds, "We have great talent on the attack as evidenced by our thirteenth national scoring ranking last year." He continued, "This will change some due to our increased competition. We are at a great disadvantage not being able to be outside before our first game. Whereas our opposition has already played several games, we have not."

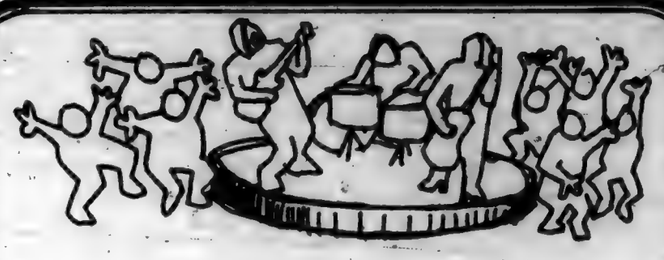
UVM will need every one of its promising athletes this season as it holds a difficult schedule. Clarkson, St. Lawrence, and sixth in the country UMass will be amongst the more formidable foes to oppose the Cats. The players are pleased with the level of competition, however, and are happy to be able to play more competitively than they were able to on a club basis.

The Cats' strong point is their personnel. "We've got strong athletes," Farnham confided, "I could go right down the list and name the benefits of each man on the squad."



"Attack is our strongest area by far," the Vermont coach claimed. "Courtney Jenkins, second to Brooks Mohrman in scoring last year, possesses all the skills required to be a top attackman: good footwork, speed, stick handling and scoring ability. The excellent velocity on his shot is always a threat to score." Topher Slack and John Pitts are two other attackmen expected to be crucial this season. Slack's fine shot and durability combined with Pitts' consistent strength in all areas will compliment Jenkins' talents in a full Catamount effort. David Osborn and Sam Smith are also attackmen to watch.

On midfield the Cats are led by repeating captain George Varga and John Combias. Combias' excellent shot will be teamed with Scholastic All-American Doug McSpadden for one midfield. Returning middies Pete Drakos, Barny Myhrum, Ian DeGrott and Dave Hurd will be leading this year's crop of freshmen. Other freshmen standouts include Andy Ashforth, Donner Carr and Bruce White.



The Cats defense may be its weakest point but a number of experienced veterans and

(continued on page 29)

Peter Drakos (10) shoots against New England College.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsi's with small pizza
4-Pepsi's with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

IT'S LIVE EVERY NITE!

Thurs. 6-Sat. 8-BRONIN HOGMAN

Sun. 9-Mon. 10-TEASER

Tues. 11-Sun. 16- HOT FLASH

Neutral Grounds Inc.
125 PEARL

Stuft Shirt

Open for Sunday Buffet
11:00-4:00
All You Can Eat for $3.95
Featuring Bloody Marys $.75

Open 11-11 Fri.-Sat.
Open 11-10 Mon. thru Thurs.
Stuft Shirt 135 Pearl St. 864-9544

UVM Women's Softball Team Approaches Rewarding Season

By Rich Chalmers

The University of Vermont women's softball team is expected to surpass last year's squad with a combination of veteran experience and rookie strength. Coach Sally Guerette is confident that the 1978 season will bring many rewards to the team. "We have a lot of defensive talent and our batting strength is increasing continuously. We should have a very good team this year."

Pam Packard

The 21 game schedule lasting from April 20 to May 7 is not only one of the largest in the team's history, but also the most competitive. Oswego and Herkiner Community College will provide the first big tests for the girls on April 28 and 29 respectively. Connecticut College and Plymouth defeated the Cats at their last meeting, but Coach Guerette is optimistic this new team will be more capable of coming through in the clutch. "UMass clobbered us last season," she added, "but they better watch out this year."

Although there are a number of quick offensive athletes, the team's strength lies in its defense. The women have done well against strong pitching in the past, but Coach Guerette is stressing the need for a stronger batting lineup to offset the stronger opponents they will meet this spring. "We're going to have to work hard on offense, building up our batting skills. Lack of experience may hinder us at first, but we'll make up for that as the season progresses."

The roster will include 21 women, eleven of them returning from last year's 8-5 squad. Jennifer Lowell and Rachel Liff will make up the pitching staff with the possible assistance from strong infielder Belinda Emerson. Pam Packard's excellent speed will prove to be crucial combined with Cathy Schmitt's hitting prowess. Linda Shiffler will appear behind the plate. Her strong throwing arm and good team spirit can be expected to be important this season. Pat Spicer and Julie Winter will be players to look for as the season progresses.

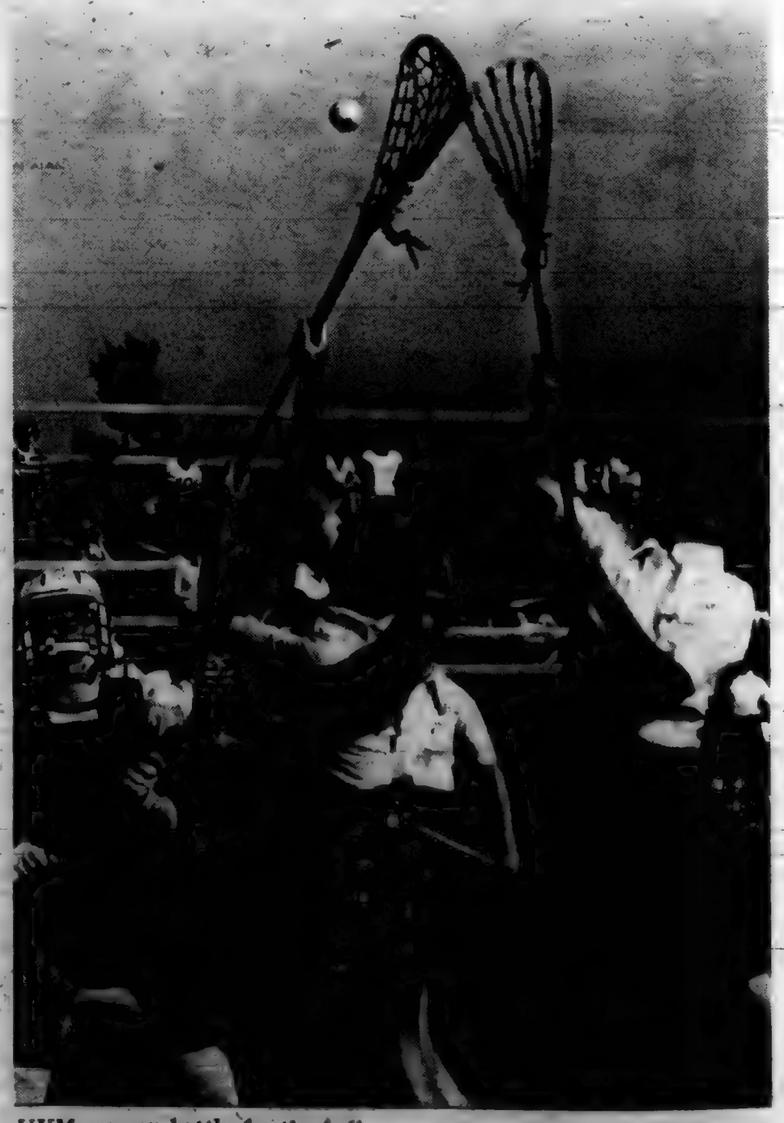
UVM's chances for the tournament at the end of the year will probably depend on its performances against Oswego, Herkimer, UMass and Plymouth. Surprising a number of teams in last year's tourney, hopes are high for an even better showing this spring.

Jennifer Lowell

Coach Guerette concluded by saying "The entire field of competition has improved and we're glad. There will be few runaway games this season and it presents the challenge we've been looking for. I'm confident we'll make it to the tournament and we'll do well there too."

Women Laxers Feature Speed and Stick-handling

By Steven Larose



Speed and stick-handling will be the strongest assets of UVM's women's lacrosse team, which opens the season by taking on a tough St. Lawrence squad April 17th.

Coach Cathy Schiller remarked "We should be strong on the attack, but we won't have much depth in defense. Most of our experience lies in the attack. Our goalies look promising, and the girls have been conditioning for seven weeks. We will be quick at mid-field, relying on speed and stick handling. We have to work on our man to man checking also."

The Vermont line-up features Karin Abrahamson and Susan Dana as attack wings. They will provide the Cats with most of the scoring and offensive power. Kerry Bryan will spearhead the offense, playing at center. Bryan was termed by Coach Schiller as the fastest player on the field, with command of the whole game. At the home positions will be Liz Seabury and Lisa Palache. The goalie position is currently up for grabs, with Ann Bartlett, Laura Williams and Kela Burr all looking strong.

The Vermont line-up is rounded out by stalwart defensive players Barb Anderson, Alice Barry, Eileen Giguere, Gail Lebaron and Sandy Wood. The Cat Laxers have several up and coming freshmen who should see considerable action this season. Included are Suzanne Brown, Lisa Cleverdone, Susan Cummings, Kathy deCaracena, Tori Ryder, and Hilary Robinson. Vermont has all but three of last year's players returning.

Coach Schiller continued by stating that Vermont is at a disadvantage, not being able to practice outside. But the women, according to Schiller, "have done a lot more conditioning and practicing this year." "In the past we have not been serious enough. Hopefully we are now strong enough to improve our 4-4-1 record of last year." Schiller closed by remarking "We were too individualized last year. Now we are concentrating on passing and plan to play as a unit."

UVM women battle for the ball.

Stone to Spur on Vermont Racquetmen

By Steven Larose

The loss of Frank Babbott and a scarcity of doubles combinations had UVM tennis coach Hal Greig worried, but a strong showing from Jeff Stone has turned uncertainty into confidence that Vermont can duplicate their successful fall season.

"Losing Babbott hurt us," remarked Greig. "We also expected Peter Folick to play, but he took a semester off. It looks like it may be a rebuilding year." Last fall Vermont placed 10th in the ECAC Division II tournament, took 4th in the Yankee Conference and held a 3-2 dual meet record.

Jeff Stone returns as the number one man for the Cats, after gaining experience last fall. Greig sees Stone as one of the toughest players in New England, and the best man on his squad. Scott Turban, team captain, will fill the number two spot. Backing him up will be Bruce Rockowitz, a returning sophomore. Marc Compagnon, Andy Deery and Jamie Freedman will all be battling it out for number four, five and six spots. The Vermont roster is rounded out by Chris Holmquest, Bill Shean and Scott Light. Greig will also draw heavily from his B squad.

Greig continued, "We have a young and thin squad. Our most critical point is that we have no doubles combinations as of yet. Possibilities include Turban & Stone, Rockowitz & Deery, plus Shean and Holmquest. Our ranks were somewhat undermined by losing key players, but we have more than made up for it with team spirit and Turban's leadership."

Greig lauded Turban for his fast rise to the top, along with Rockowitz, who has finally realized his potential. Greig remarked that he "needs some work, but past showings have been good." Also on Greig's list of accomplished players are Compagnon and Deery, who have both been pleasant surprises.

Graduation will leave Vermont without the services of Turban and Freedman, and Greig sees a dark cloud forming on the Vermont tennis horizon. "We are having a terrible time recruiting people because the tennis facilities at UVM are the worst in New England. No one will play here."

Greig closed by commenting "We used to be strong at doubles, but now we're questionable. We'll have to get back into the swing of things by practicing drills, strokes and strategy and trying to assemble some order."

Vermont's tennis season starts April 24th with a home match against Middlebury at 3 p.m.

Rugby Men To Do It For Another Season

By Steven Larose

The University of Vermont Rugby team will open the spring season with high hopes to better their near perfect 9-0-1 fall record.

The deciding factor will be Vermont's strong defense, which allowed the Cats to pull off a flawless fall season. Coach Bob Kaplan explained, "We have a strong forward pack which is very mobile. We've been conditioning and hope to improve our ballhandling this spring. We won most of our games in the fall because of our defense, so now we are trying to work on our passing game to bring it up to par."

Rugby is far more than drinking beer.

Jeff Travaline, captain and leader of the backs, with three years of experience under his belt, spearheads the Vermont rugby effort. Jeff Small, club treasurer, will again serve as the forward leader. Along with Kaplan, Dave Scrase will coach the club this spring.

Kaplan continued, "We are trying to build up our knowledge. We play for the fun of the sport, but we also are doing some serious work to train for the season. Our key to success this year is the ability of the players to work hard and commit themselves to the team. We have to be serious about the conditioning aspect of rugby, and by doing that we have come away with no injuries. Rugby is more than beer drinking. The players pay attention to the defensive aspects of the game and have sharpened their basic skills. By doing this, we have a group of talented and skilled players that have learned to play the game well and still have a good time."

Kaplan closed by commenting that Rugby is a true spectator sport, that is a combination of the skill of soccer with the contact of American football. Vermont begins its spring schedule this Saturday with a game against the University of Maine at the Archie Post Field, with the A team starting at 1:00. Vermont hopefully will field three teams this year, and will compete in the New England Rugby Tournament for the first time in May.

Synchronized Swimmers Capture Third Place in East

By Maggi Hayes

The UVM Synchronized Swim Team, represented by only five of its members, turned in solid performances to finish third in the Eastern Intercollegiate Synchronized Swimming Conference Championships held at SUNY, Albany, March 31st and April 1st.

The Synchrocats vied with seven other teams, competing in junior and senior level figure and routine events during the two day meet.

The junior team, whose "Russian Folk Dance" finished second in that event, gave UVM enough points to overtake Villanova (Penn) in team totals. Swimmers in that routine were Chris Dabrowski, Lynn Grieger, Marie Lubbers and Laurie Wilhite. Lisa Nystrom took second in the senior figure event and first in the senior solo event, adding valuable points with her performance.

Additional points were added by Chris Dabrowski, fifth place junior solo; Chris Dabrowski and Lynn Grieger, fifth place junior duet; and Lynn Grieger, Nuttsie Lubbers and Laurie Wilkite, fourth place junior trio.

Other schools competing were SUNY Albany, Hunter College, Villanova, Wheaton College (Mass) and SUC Plattsburg.

The final event of the year for the Synchrocats is the annual water show April 20-22 in Forbush Pool.

There will be a Co-ed Foosball tournament. Entries end end April 13. Contact Tim Miller at 863-9198 or come by the I-M office, room 213, Patrick Gym.

beer THE ONLY BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE IS IN WINOOSKI wine Lowest Prices Largest Selection
kegs soda

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsi's with small pizza
4-Pepsi's with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

PI EXPRESS
10¢ Pitchers
with pizza (Winooski store only)

See Our New Face!
24 Main St. Winooski
for free delivery call:
Winooski – 655-3005, 655-0977 Essex Jct. – 879-6333

SPRING for Your Car
It's Springtime in Vermont and all the snow has melted from the roads. Whether you are reviving your car from a long winter hibernation or simply taking off your snow tires, Spillanes has what you need to make it run smoothly. We're just down the road from campus, conveniently located near I-89 for all car services: tune-ups, oil and filter changes, 24-hour wrecker service or just a fill-up. It's your car – keep it in shape at Spillanes Service Center.

Spillane's Mobil Servicenter
Next to Gaynes on Williston Road

Rejuvenated Red Sox To Challenge Yankees

By Rob Smith

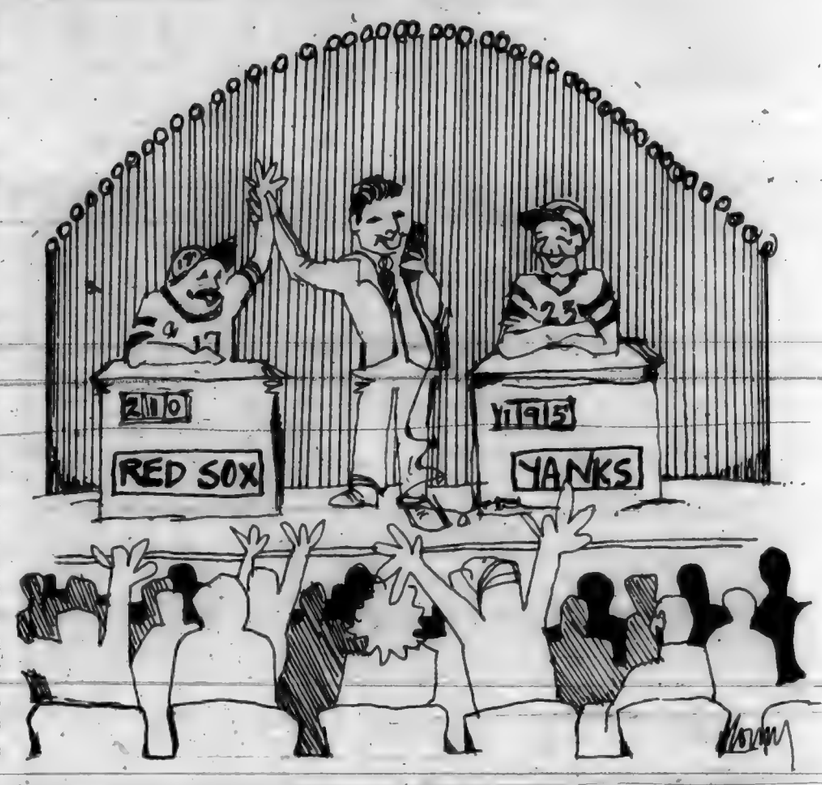
Along with the winter thaw and NBA playoffs, the thought of a new major league baseball season enters the brains of millions who still cherish the grand old game. With the free agents draft and deluge of off-season trades completed, baseball gets out of the lawyers' courts and returns to the field where the new millionaires decide it's time to try and earn their inflated salaries. In New England, the focus is on the Boston Red Sox, the team that will make fans everywhere forget Steinbrenner, the "Reggie-Bar" and the rest of those Bronx Blowhards (formerly known as the New York Yankees).

By way of numerous off-season trades, the Red Sox improved their pitching staff and infield depth to complement their outstanding outfield of Yastremski, Lynn and Evans.

Pitchers obtained this winter include Dennis Eckersley, a 23-year-old right handed fireballer formerly with the Cleveland Indians who is considered to be one of the top five pitchers in baseball today. They also obtained former Minnesota Twin lefty, Tom Burgmeyer to strengthen their bullpen, and Yankee World Series sensation Mike Torrez, an experienced right-hander who has proven to be a real "money" pitcher. Add to these three a rejuvenated Bill Lee (4-0 this spring), rookie sensation Allen Ripley (he will murder the Yankees), reliable Bill Campbell, a trim Louis Tiant, and you've got a strong pitching staff. Yankee hitters will be seen crawling to the dugout once they face this pitching crew.

The Red Sox did not overlook last year's infield problems this winter, obtaining 23 year old second baseman Jerry Remy (he'll make the All Star's this year) and solid infield backups Frank Duffy and Jack Brodamer for needed depth. Thus, the Sox infield will consist of George Scott (30+ home runs last year) at first base, Remy (Massachusetts born and bred) at second base, Rick Burleson (an All-Star last year) at shortstop and Butch Hobson (100+ RBI's as a rookie) at third base. The addition of Remy will give the Sox a top-notch defensive infield and complement the hitting prowess of Scott, Burleson and Hobson.

The Sox outfield will consist of Carl Yastremski in left field, Fred Lynn in center field and Dwight Evans in right field. With Lynn and Evans both fully recovered from injuries, the Red Sox now have the best all-around outfield in baseball. All three are exceptional defensive outfielders and Yaz and Lynn have consistently hit near .300. If Evans stays healthy, he can easily hit 25 home runs and bat near .280. Last season, in just 73 games before knee surgery, Evans hit 14 homers at a .287 clip. In pre-season this spring he's hitting over .400. Thus, baseball fans can see the talent and power represented by the Red Sox's outfield.



One cannot leave the Sox outfield without mentioning the name of Jim Rice, last year's home run king who also drove in over 100 runs while batting over .300. Establishing himself as the premier power hitter in the game, (Reggie who?), Rice will again be the Red Sox's designated hitter this year and back up Yaz in left. Rice will lead the Red Sox awesome power display this year, which also consists of All-Star catcher Carlton Fisk, Hobson, Scott, Evans, Lynn, and Captain Carl Yastremski. Remember fans, this is the same troupe who helped the Red Sox hit over 200 home runs last year. The Yankee crew of Munson, Jackson, Chambliss, Nettles and Johnson look like little leagers compared to Rice and Co.

Key pitchers for the Red Sox include Torrez, Eckersley, Lee, Campbell, Tiant, Burgmeyer. Pitchers for the Yankees include Hunter, Gullet, Guidry, Figueroa, Lyle, Gossage.

On paper, the Red Sox are superior to all their Yankee counterparts at every position save right field with Jackson when it comes to hitting ability. Defensively, the Red Sox outfield outshines that of the Yankees, while the two teams' infields are on a par. With the addition of Torrez, Eckersly, Burgmeyer and Drago, the Red Sox pitching staff equals and may better that of the Yankee's if Sparky Lyle, Rawly Eastwich and Rich Gossage continue to bitch about "rotting" away from lack of activity.

What it comes down to is that the Red Sox have the superior team in 1978. The Sox have talent, depth and a positive attitude, while the Yankees have a team whose talent is destroyed by having zealous, overpaid, egotists as players. Also, it is a known fact that Lyle, Rivers and Munson would love to pack their bags and play baseball elsewhere. Their urge to leave the Bronx won't help this team survive the inevitable turmoil that came close to tearing the team apart last year and is sure to be evident once again.

For these reasons, don't be surprised if you see the Bronx Blowhards asking President Carter for more federal aid this summer, as they will probably need it to survive as a team and hold off the internal warfare (never mind trying to catch the Red Sox!) Meanwhile, I'll be sitting in the Fenway bleachers, beer in hand with the sun beating on my tanned back, watching the Red Sox clinch the pennant.

The Bronx Bombers Are Here To Stay

By Randy McMullen

A lot of people are waiting and hoping for the Yankees to be dethroned this year. Their unpopularity at this time may be unmatched by any other in history. But this is only because they are undeniably the best team in baseball.

Of course, there are a few sportswriters who claim that Boston is capable of fighting their way into this year's world series. Especially since they have acquired Denis Eckersly, the gutsy southpaw, for the price of a newly disgruntled Rick Wise. But for all his youth and talent, Eckersly still has one glaring flaw: he's coming from Cleveland, a city whose sports teams have traditionally been inflicted with loseritis.

The most frustrating thing about "loseritis" is that it can destine the most talented athletes to waves of mediocrity. Cities like Cleveland (Atlanta also) can buy the finest talent around, and they still won't find themselves any closer to a championship. And now Eckersly is bringing "loseritis" to Boston. And Carlton Fisk hasn't even called him any names yet! If you're going to acquire yourself a ballclub, you've got to get your players (the right players, mind you) in style. And you've got to treat them like mud when you do.

The Yankees, for their part, have practically ignored newcomer Rich Gossage; and while they haven't tried anything particularly nasty as yet – like giving him a copy of last year's schedule, or chintzing on his ration of Reggie Bars – Mr. Gossage has not been the glamour boy he might have hoped. Reason? Reggie Jackson, of course. This worldly superstar is attracting all sorts of attention because he is already starting to work out. He runs nearly 10 miles a day between advertising firms looking for successful campaigns to promote his new candy bar. And then he actually goes back to the ball park to practice. Some definite problems could arise from this. Jackson could conceivably get himself in shape, and then where would the Yankees be?

There are still some signs, however, that things are satisfactorily unsettled in the big apple. Sparky Lyle is fuming; it seems he wants to be traded to a warmer climate where he can grow his own chewing tobacco. Mickey Rivers and Willie Randolph are also raising some unholiness concerning George Steinbrenner, the less-than-charismatic owner of the Yankees.

So while Boston might be a threat to the Yankee's bid for a third straight pennant, and a second straight world series, there are other problems more severe. The most obvious one is the world series itself. The Yankee's dynamic victory there last season (which demoralized Los Angeles so much that I should be very surprised if they make it back again this year) may have made them all into good friends. That would unquestionably be the end of any New York dynasty. After all, it wasn't very long ago that "loseritis" was a Yankee disease (remember Horace Clark?).

Sports Shorts

Water Skiers To Glide In May

By Bruce Vielmetti

The UVM Water Ski Club will compete in the Northeast Intercollegiate Water Ski Championship in Oakham, Mass. this May.

Last year UVM finished a close second behind Plymouth State College of New Hampshire. Senior Greg Allen, founder and president of the UVM Water Ski Club, led the Vermont team by capturing the men's overall title. Allen won the tricks event handily as well as finishing among the top three in jumping and slalom.

Lack of depth was the main reason for UVM's second place finish. The Vermont team consisted of only three skiers, all men. With any fair representation at all in the women's division, UVM could have easily taken home the first place trophy. The club hopes to attract more skiers, especially women, to the roster for this year's Championship.

This year marks the fourth season of the Northeast Intercollegiate Water Ski Championships. Held every year on Adams Pond near Oakham, Mass., the Championship attracts skiers representing colleges as far away as Buffalo, N.Y. Lex Carroll, current manager of the World Champion U.S. Water Ski Team, organizes and hosts the event. Carroll and his wife extend warm hospitality to all the skiers as well as donate their time to judge, score and officiate the championship. The Intercollegiates utilize the best facilities and tournament tow boars, besides benefiting from the services of some of the finest tournament drivers in the East.

Borg Tickets Going Fast

Tickets for the E. F. Hutton Tennis Challenge Match at UVM's Patrick Gym, May 2, featuring Bjorn Borg, are going fast and only 800 $4.00 tickets and approximately 125 $50.00 patron seats remain.

The tennis match, featuring a singles match between Borg and Bill Scanlon, 1976 Rookie of the Year on the pro tour, and a doubles match with Borg and Jeffersonville's pro, Ted Hoehn, against Scanlon and Billy Martin, past NCAA singles champion (1975) and a rising star on the tour today, is for the benefit of the University of Vermont's athletic program and the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont.

The singles match is scheduled for 8:30 p.m., preceded by the doubles at 7:30 p.m.

A clinic, beginning at 3:30 p.m. the day of the match, will feature Borg and the other three pros. Borg will demonstrate shots and strategies to the clinic participants. Only those who have purchased $50.00 patron tickets will be admitted to the clinic, scheduled for Twin Oaks. A champagne reception, with Borg, will follow the clinic at

(continued on page 29)

Vermont Batmen Stymied In Season -Opening Tournament

By Steve Larose

A new era in University of Vermont baseball was clouded by three losses to Siena College, Southeastern Massachusetts and the University of Massachusetts in the Southeastern Massachusetts University Invitational Tournament.

Siena College rallied for a 4-3 win over the Catamounts in the first game of Saturday's double header, and the host Corsairs squashed a UVM comeback to post a 9-8 victory in the night cap. UMass pushed across 17 runs in the first three innings during Saturday's consolation game to whip the Cats 18-10.

Vermont trailed 6-2 with two out in the bottom of the sixth against Southeastern, but the Cats surged back. Bob Czachor reached on an error, Mike Pash walked and freshman outfielder Jim Smullen made it 6-4 with a two-run triple to left center field. Southeastern was not to be outdone and roared back to hold a 9-4 grip on Vermont. The Cats wiggled free once again, and almost tied up the contest. Two runs came when Ed Barry and Craig Ramini were issued walks, advanced on an error and scored on a grounder by Andy McDonnell. Walks to Pash and Smullen filled the bases, and pinch hitter T.J. Valley bashed out a double for two RBI's and sent Smullen to third for the potential game tier. But Bill McAlduff popped up and Vermont's threat died.

Siena successfully played catch-up ball in the first game, after Vermont had taken a 3-1 lead on Czachor's RBI single while McAlduff hammered out a double and Barry tripled to deep center to further add to the three run total. Barry then raced home on Ramini's sacrifice fly.

Vermont pitcher Tony Segale faltered on the mound, giving up runs in the 5th and 6th innings. J. B. McCarthy came in to relieve Segale, and loaded the bases in the seventh. McCarthy then served up a wild pitch and the Siena runner streaked home to hand the Cats their first loss.

A hitting explosion quickly killed any Vermont chance of victory on Sunday against UMass, as the Cats allowed 17 runs in the first three innings. Ed Barry opened the game with a line-drive homer to give Vermont a short-lived lead. But UMass cranked out two runs in the first and four more in the second. J. B. McCarthy started out strong for the Cats, but was milked dry. The third inning was the clincher, as UMass collected 11 runs on six hits.

Vermont coach Jack Leggett still remains optimistic, despite the three losses. He feels that Vermont is building up experience, and a never-say-die reputation. "Even though we didn't win, the way we played says a lot about the team. They have the spirit to come back, and all we need to do is play more games. These three teams were good. We left the field with a good feeling for what we can do and I feel it was a good start."

The Cats sport a 0-3 record and take on North Adams State Saturday before meeting St. Lawrence April 17th for a double header at Centennial field.

Baseball Back To Big League

(Continued from page 25)

year's Vermont State Legion Tournament.

Second base is being occupied so far by Mike Pash. Pash went three for seven in the opening three games. Backing him up is Phil Spillane, a sophomore from White River Junction. Spillane is a good all-round player who will most definitely help the team.

The shortstop position will be handled by co-captain Craig Ramini. Ramini had a rough 0 for 10 start, but as the season goes on his bat will come around. He is a fine defensive player, trying to fill the shoes of last year's MVP Jim Edgerton. As mentioned earlier, Mal Kimball will be the starter at third when he is not pitching. The starters will have to stay injury free because Jim Smullen is the only other player who can play in the infield. At this date it appears Smullen will play in left field or at the designated hitter position.

The outfield has good overall speed when Smullen is in left. Perhaps the best player on the ball club is Ed Barry, the center fielder. He is the team's lead-off hitter. Ed possesses outstanding speed and uses this speed to his advantage when playing the outfield. He covers a lot of ground in the field. He is hitting .400 as a result of going four for ten in the past weekend's games. If Barry has a good year, the team will also most likely have one.

The leading power hitter on the team is rightfielder Andy McDonnell. He has struggled off to a one for twelve start. Vermont must get a better hitting job out of McDonnell if they are to win their share of games. The reserves in the outfield are Keith Allen who is a fine defensive ballplayer. Allen is the type of player who gives 110 per cent and should see considerable playing time. Rounding out the outfield is T. J. Valley, a freshman who played baseball at Spaulding High School.

Although the outfield is strong, an injury or two would hurt tremendously. A lack of depth will hurt the team everywhere except on the mound and behind the plate. It is these two areas that Vermont will still be strong even if an injury or two should strike.

Overall the Cats will be exciting. What they lack in speed and experience they will make up with hustle and good defense. It appears that the present team will not score heavily. However, with a sound pitching squad staffed with hard throwers, Vermont will be in every ball game. The overall lack of team speed will be a drawback, but if they take advantage of their opportunities they will win their share of ball games.

Lacrosse

(Continued from page 25)

talented freshmen make Coach Farnham optimistic. "Mark Brown, off the hockey team, will be important," added the coach. "We'll be counting on Jeff Steinberg. He's small, but he makes up for it in hustle." Mark Stevenson and Jeff Bartholet could prove crucial as well.

Gary Vreeland, tenth best goalie in the country last year, will appear in the crease for the Catamounts. "Gary has quickness, size and a good knowledge of the game. His quick stick and keen reactions make him a solid goalie and he should keep us in many games."

Borg Tickets

(Continued from page 28)

5:30 p.m.. The $50.00 ticket holders will also have courtside seats for the match that evening.

The 2,200 $6.00 tickets, which have been sold out, will be located in the lower bleachers, while the $4.00 seats are in the upper bleachers at Patrick.

Sports This Week

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Baseball – Men | April 8 (Sat) | North Adams St. | North Adams, MA | 1 p.m. |
| Lacrosse – Men | April 8 (Sat) | New England Col. | Away | 2 p.m. |
| Rugby | April 8 (Sat) | Univ. Maine | Burlington | 1 p.m. |
| Lacrosse – Men | April 12(Wed) | Massachusetts | Away | 3 p.m. |
| Tennis – Men | April 13 (Thur) | at Middlebury | Middlebury, VT | 3 p.m. |
| Rugby – Men | April 15 (Sat) | Dartmouth | Burlington | 1 p.m. |
| Outdoor Track – Men | April 15 (Sat) | at Massachusetts Relays | Amherst, MA | 9 a.m. |
| Lacrosse – Men | April 15 (Sat) | Clarkson | Burlington | 1:30 |
| Outdoor Track Women | April 15 (Sat) | at Massachusetts Relays | Amherst, MA | 9 a.m. |
| Rugby – Men | April 16 (Sun) | at Concord RFC | Away | |
| Lacrosse – Women | April 17 (Mon) | at St. Lawrence | Canton, NY | TBA |
| Baseball – Men | April 17 (Mon) | St. Lawrence | Burlington | 1 p.m. |
| Softball | April 18 (Tue) | at St. Michael's | Winooski | 4 p.m. |
| Rugby – Men | April 19 (Wed) | B team vs. Vermont Tech | Burlington | 4 p.m. |
| Outdoor Track Women | April 19 (Wed) | at Dartmouth w/ Fitchburg St. | Hanover, NH | 2 p.m. |

E.F. Hutton
CHALLENGE MATCH

ALSO, DOUBLES MATCH WITH BORG AND JEFFERSONVILLE'S TED HOEHN AGAINST SCANLON AND BILLY MARTIN, 1975 NCAA CHAMPION.

MAY 2, 1978 7:30 PM
UVM'S PATRICK GYM

TICKET PLANS AVAILABLE:
$50.00 PATRON - INCLUDES ADMISSION AND PARTICIPATION IN CLINIC AT TWIN OAKS, MAY 2, AT 3:30 P.M. BORG WILL CONDUCT CLINIC HIMSELF, ALONG WITH SCANLON, MARTIN AND HOEHN.
CLINIC FOLLOWED BY CHAMPAGNE RECEPTION AT 5:00 P.M.

NOTICE:
All $6.00 Seats Are Sold Out! A Few $4.00 Seats Are Still Left But You Must Hurry!

TICKETS AT AREA TENNIS CLUBS, BURLINGTON SAVINGS BANK, PATRICK GYM AND E.F. HUTTON. FOR FURTHER INFORMATION ON TICKETS, CALL UVM'S ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE, 656-4410 OR HUTTON OFFICE, 658-2424.

ALSO, ORDER BY MAIL:
E.F. HUTTON CHALLENGE MATCH
BOX 177, R. D. 1
SHELBURNE, VT 05482

MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO:
MEDICAL CTR. HOSP.—
UVM ATHLETICS

GOV. RICHARD A. SNELLING WILL SERVE AS HONORARY CHAIRMAN.
WCAX-TV TONY ADAMS WILL BE THE MASTER OF CEREMONIES

DOUBLES: BORG/TED HOEHN VS. SCANLON/BILLY MARTIN

E&E TIRE

★ FULL LINE OF TOP-QUALITY RETREADS FOR ECONOMY & SAFETY

★ NEW RADIALS FOR ALL FOREIGN, COMPACT & FULL-SIZE U.S. CARS

★ HEAVY DUTY TIRES FOR CAMPERS

★ WHITE ROCKET WHEELS FOR PICKUPS & 4-WHEEL DRIVES

★ 70 & 60 SERIES TIRES

Extra Effort Service

E & E Tire

Extra Effort Service

152 Riverside Ave. 864-7759

Visit the TENNIS SPECIALTY SHOP

• One Day Stringing

• Instant Repairs

TENNIS RACKETS by:

Davis, Bancroft, Head, Wilson, Donnay, Yamaha, Dunlop, Prince.

TENNIS CLOTHING by:

Bogner, Wilson, Profile, Duofold, Head, White Stag, The Line, Billie Jean King, Jelenk, Robert Bruce, Court Casuals, Adidas.

SKI SALE

UP TO 50% OFF

SKI EQUIPMENT
SKIWEAR
RENTAL EQUIPMENT

ALPINE SHOP

WILLISTON RD., SO. BURLINGTON

OPEN DAILY 9 AM-9 PM

COR. OF CHERRY & SO. WINOOSKI DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

SPORTS PROFILE

Jean Selvig; Resident Paddle Pro

By Rich Chalmers

Paddle tennis is becoming more and more popular all over the United States and Burlington is no exception. Three years ago, the Lakeside Tennis Club constructed two courts and hired Jean Selvig as the paddle pro. Mrs. Selvig has taught UVM's physical education course in paddle for the last three years and has met with great success. "Most of the students really enjoy it," she said, "and many of them take it two or three times."

Mrs. Selvig moved to Vermont in 1974 from New Jersey, where she began her paddle tennis career. "I was lucky," she explained "I started to play paddle when the sport was just beginning to grow. A friend of mine named Charlotte Lee began helping me with my game. I started playing with people who had played all along so I learned very quickly under those conditions. By the end of the first winter I was even going to tournaments." Mrs. Selvig went on to win three national titles and is presently the women's national seniors champion. She organized a New Jersey Paddle tennis league four years before she came to Vermont. The program met so much success that 1500 women were competing at four different levels within four years. When asked if she misses being on the circuit, Mrs. Selvig replied, "Yes, I miss the competition. It was satisfying. I made some very good friends and I miss the companionship on the paddle circuit, but I'm happy here."

Paddle was slow to develop as a public sport because it was originally limited to club competition. Now that it has become more public and commercialized its popularity has increased considerably. "It's still one of the least expensive ways to get some healthy recreation." Mrs. Selvig explained, "That's one reason I like it; You're outdoors. It's a social game with lots of fresh air and exercise. It complements other racquet sports, and it really helps your tennis, especially at net."

Students who take the phys. ed. course are offered an inexpensive way to learn the game well. Twenty-five dollars buys one quarter year of classes, which average out to only $1.75 per hour. The classes are two hours long, held once a week and transportation to and from the club is usually no problem. "They are beautiful courts," Mrs. Selvig added, "They're probably amongthe best I've ever played on."

"I enjoy working with the students even more than I imagined."
Jean Selvig

The students have enjoyed the sport so much, many are interested in forming a paddle club. "There's a lot of enthusiasm, but UVM administration will only accept a club standing if the students instigate it. If they could get a club started, I'd love to do anything I can to help. It would be a lot of fun and people really like the competition. St. Michaels and Middlebury would love to play against us." Middlebury just built three courts and has recently organized their own paddle club as a result of student support. UVM invited them to Burlington for a very successful day of competition and Mrs. Selvig hopes to organize another get-together soon.

"I enjoy working with the students even more than I imagined", Mrs. Selvig added. "I've taught at the junior high level and I like the college level even more. We have over sixty students involved this quarter and it's becoming more and more popular each semester."

Every Thursday night at Lakeside is university night at which time all UVM students are encouraged to come and play. The price is only two dollars and it provides an excellent opportunity to improve one's skills and meet new people as well. "It's a social event," said Mrs. Selvig, "People come by themselves or with a date and there are always people to play with."

This weekend the Lakeside tennis club will host the Burlington Paddle Tournament. The womens tourney will be held on Friday, mens on Saturday, and mixed competition will be held Sunday. Mrs. Selvig is very optimistic concerning the tournament. "It's going to be the strongest tournament we've ever had up here. There are some top level players and there should be a lot of excellent caliber play. I urge everyone to come and watch. It should be very exciting and a lot of fun. It will give everyone in the area a chance to see some top notch players in action."

The Name of the Game Is Money

By Mark Kevorkian

Welcome back. Hope Burlington mud is a suitable replacement for Florida Sun. Don't get your tan dirty...

The longest running game show on or off television starts its season this week in thirteen cities across the country. That's right, from the chill of April through the heat of August and into the cold of October you can watch some of the nation's wealthiest malcontents, most enthusiastic rookies and polished veterans compete for top prizes through a grueling 162 game schedule.

The name of this game folks is money. Only one team out of twenty-six is going to win the big prize, but almost every contestant on every team is going to cash in on payday. It doesn't take much to make a bundle in this game nowadays. Was a time when only the best players received the big pay – $100,000 and up. Today, any journeyman can get a long-term contract for one-hundred grand or more, provided he has a good agent (another new facet to the game). Everyone from the team organist to bat boy has one of those. May come a time soon when agents will be allowed to sit on the bench to better represent their clients. They may yell constructive comments too, like "Don't slide head first – there's no incentive clause in your contract for hustle," or, "If you single, I can get you a $10,000 raise, double $20 thou, and a homer will be worth fifty at negotiations."

Slide head first? Single? double? Homer? Can this game be... Yes, some still call it that, but lately the old game has taken on a new face. First, it's a lot more popular than it used to be. Last year, almost thirty-nine million fans attended games, breaking the previous record of thirty-two million set (you got it) the year before. Barring catastrophe, a new attendance record will be set this year. One team, which plays in Los Angeles, may even get three million fans to attend their games. That's a lot of people. That's a lot of money.

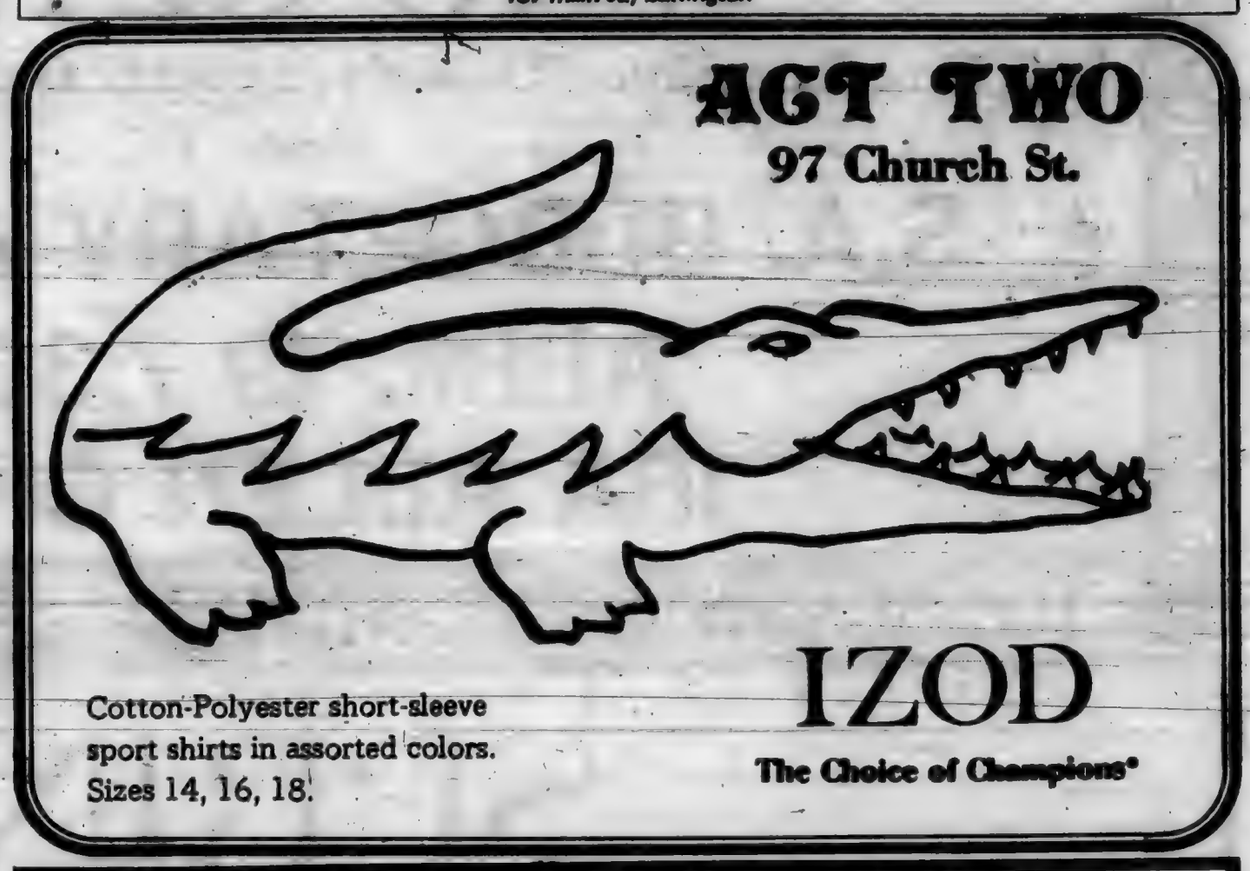
The players have changed too. Some would say they are better, some would say they are richer, period. The better players aren't necessarily the wealthiest, but it's getting that way. If a player feels he's not making the bundle he deserves, he can let his contract run out and place himself on the open market for the highest bidder. This is another new concept to the game called the free agent draft or marketing for instant millions. Last year, ten players became instant millionaires, to compliment fourteen the year before.

You may ask, "They don't play for just money, do they?" Again, some would say yes, some would say no. Being a romanticist, I'm inclined to agree with the latter choice. Some players make a lot of money and hustle too. These players forget about payday when they're, as they say, between the white lines. They run and dive and leap and do other athletic things. They sprint to first on a pop-up, go from first to third when an outfielder bobbles the ball, and sacrifice themselves to move the runner along. You know these players: Burleson, Rose, Munson, and a few more.

There is another group which players fall into: those that make a lot of cash (this is a constant, if you hadn't already guessed), hustle occasionally and talk too much. Because these players make me nauseous, I will not detail their characteristics any further. It seems to me though that any player who claims to have an IQ of 160, as one does, would know when to shut-up.

Thus, ball players are unlike the rest of society: the rich get richer and the poor get richer too. However, this is not true for teams, which are like society. If a team is rich, it can afford to buy better players and, in turn, get better. Poor teams, on the other hand, are destined to stay poor because they cannot afford to pay top flight players. The teams that pay the most usually win the most, and are favored to win their respective division titles this year. In the American League, these teams are the N.Y. Yankees and Texas Rangers. In the National League they are the Philadelphia Phillies and Cincinnati Reds.

Some of these picks make me uncomfortable, especially the one concerning the Yankees. It may seem logical to choose the world champions to repeat as champions, but logic is not usually present in a sports column. This is no exception. I will not be so illogical as to pick the Cleveland Indians to win the American League East, but loyalty compels me to pick the Boston Red Sox as first-place finishers. In a close race, the Sox will beat the Yankees. Money can't buy happiness every year, George Steinbrenner.



The other choices of Texas in the AL West, Philadelphia in the NL east and Cincinnati in the NL West seem safe. Texas will be challenged by Kansas City and California, but money will finally buy happiness in the Lone Star State.

The Phillies are solid all around and should repeat as champs in the NL West. Cincinnati had their year of complacency last season and will charge to the pennant behind Tom Seaver's twenty-five or so wins.

And although the thermometer reads twenty-five degrees, the sun is shining in my window and the first touches of green appear over the brown grass. Spring starts this week when the first ball is thrown out before the first game.

The name of that game? Baseball. Baseball, baseball, baseball.

$175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000

THE S.A. '78-'79 BUDGET

WHO GETS IT?

If You Care How YOUR $175,000 Is Going To Be To Be Spent.....

Come To.....

S.A. BUDGETARY ASSEMBLY

APRIL 19 7:30 P.M.

IRA ALLEN CHAPEL

$175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000

$175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000 $175,000

SPRING SPECIALS

Oil & Filter Change

$8.88

Tires

20% Discount

with U.V.M. ID

Tune-Ups

Labor on 8 Cylinder $18.75
Labor on 4&6 Cylinder $12.50
Plus Parts

20% Discount
on Parts
with U.V.M. ID

Expires 4-13-78

Gordie's University Texaco

860 Williston Rd. South Burlington 862-7535

Random Notes

Openings In Slade Hall

The French Residence Hall, La Maison Francaise, will be open during the academic year 1978-79 to sophomore, junior and senior students who can and want to use the French language as their prime means of communication.

Participation in all activities planned by the dorm is also strongly encouraged. These have included, in past years, a visit to Montreal, Mardi Gras, Halloween and Christmas parties, volleyball games at the Chittenden Correctional Center, potluck dinners, hikes up Mt. Mansfield and (coming this semester) lectures by Romance Language professors.

Any students interested in the possibility of this type of living experience for the coming year are invited to an evening of slides (of past and present Slade students) and refreshments, Sunday, April 9th at 8:00 p.m. in Slade. If unable to attend, please contact June Robinson (x4228) or Mary Palmer (x4229).

Protesters Wanted

There will be a meeting on April 6 at 7 o'clock at Robinson Hall for all people interested in being part of the upcoming (but date unknown) blockade at Seabrook. The reactor vessel, which will be the core of the Seabrook Nuclear Plant, is going to be moved by barge from Sommerset, MA to Hampton Harbor. A land and sea blockade based on non-violent principles of civil disobedience is planned. For further information come to the training on Thursday night.

Admissions Wants Student Reps

You might be the right person for the UVM Student Admissions Representative Program. A group of approximately 30 undergraduate volunteers share the responsibility of meeting with high school students and parents, answering questions about the University's students, programs and lifestyle and leading campus tours. Prospective UVM applicants are encouraged to visit us in Burlington, schedule an informal informative interview and look over the residence halls, class buildings and student body.

UVM students who are eager to learn more about UVM and who are willing to spend at least one hour per week visiting with high school students and working with the Admissions staff are encouraged to file an application. The process involves the completion of a simple form, a peer recommendation and a low-key meeting with the Admissions Office. Applications are available at the Admissions Office, Clement House, 194 So. Prospect St. The application deadline is April 15, 1978 for the fall of '78. Feel free to call Debbie Beretta or Tom Sherrer at 3370 with questions and ideas.

Photography Exhibits

Photography students of Janica Yoder's are exhibiting their works in the Coburn Gallery, 3rd floor Williams Hall, the week of April 9-15.

You're Invited!!!

This Wednesday, April 12 at 3:00 p.m. the Department of Psychology is presenting a colloquium entitled Behavioral Medicine for Epilepsy. The featured speaker will be David I. Mostofsky, Ph.D. from Boston University's Department of Psychology. It will be held in Rm. 314, John Dewey Hall. All are invited.

VPIRG Results (again)

Five UVM students were elected to the VPIRG Board of Trustees in the SA/VPIRG elections before vacation. The students are Lisa Shulock, Krista Billings, Lori Stratton, Beth Reiman and Bill Gehr. At the May annual meeting, they will join students from seven other member schools and two at-large Trustees to form the entire 15-member VPIRG Board. Each of the new Trustees has been active with VPIRG over the past year, studying such topics as energy, pesticides and economic development.

In addition to the five Trustees elected, UVM will be represented by five alternate Trustees. Lewis Heyman, John Matarese, Tom Storrow, Cindy Wemple and Don Taylor will be working on VPIRG projects and will assist the Board in the next year. Any students with ideas on what VPIRG should work on in the future, or wishing to get involved should talk to one of the new Trustees.

Rush Robinson

Robinson Hall, UVM's environmental house, is beginning its selection process for the fall semester. Pot luck dinner and dorm meeting for all interested on April 16, interviews start April 18. Please come by, speak with us, pick up an application.

Missy's Troubled Again

Missy is getting bogged down with her work. She can't seem to keep on top of things. "I sit in my room trying to study but I can't seem to concentrate on my work," she exclaimed. Are you having a problem keeping your mind on your work? Need someone to talk to? Come to the Advising Referral Center at 337 Waterman Building or call x4174 for an appointment.

Ping-Pong Tourney

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity is sponsoring the first annual All-Campus Ping Pong Tournament on Saturday, April 8th from 9 a.m. until the champions have been declared. Registration for this magnificent event will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, April 5, 6, 7 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Billings Center.

Contestants will compete in four categories: A & B for men and A & B for women. An entry fee of $1.00 will be charged and trophies will be awarded to the top two finishers in each category.

So if you think that you have the potential to be UVM's Ping Pong Champ or you just want to have a good time, we invite you to register at Billings on the above dates.

Environmental Majors Meet

On Tuesday, April 11 from 4 to 6 p.m. in 216 Commons L/L there will be a meeting of all Environmental Studies majors and coordinate majors and students considering majoring in Environmental Studies to consider fall course offerings, general advising matters, etc. The formal part of the meeting will be followed by socializing.

Studying Lessons

Are you overwhelmed with all your studying, finding it difficult to organize your time? Well, the Living/Learning Center is offering a two-week workshop for those interested in improving their exam strategies, helping to predict exam questions, writing S.A. exams, and organizing your studying in preparation for finals.

The seminar will meet from April 10th thru 21st, meeting twice a week for an hour. Registration begins Wednesday, April 5th through Friday, April 7th from 8:00 to 5:00 p.m. in Commons B-161 at L/L Center. For further information call 656-4200.

Students' Comments from the last Study-Skill Workshop held at the L/L Center during February:

—"I feel the information and techniques I have learned will be a guide and a reference for the rest of my schooling."

—"I feel it is a very valuable course. It should be offered again and again to those students who are interested in improving their study skills."

—"I learned a lot from this course. I solved one of my biggest problems, how to study."

—"I do think this systemized approach to studying works."

—"I study more often, enjoy it more and I think I'm learning more."

—"A good review for getting back into the swing of things."

Submit English

Submit your poems, short stories, essays, reviews, criticism, photographs or drawings to "The News and the Weather" for publication in the Spring issue.

This is an excellent opportunity to get your work in print. Don't hesitate — submit now!!

Submit material to "The News and the Weather" mailbox in the S.A. office in Billings, or to Tom Simone's mailbox in the English office on the 3rd floor of the Old Mill.

Deadline for submissions is April 10th. So don't delay.

Volunteers Wanted

The Center for Service Learning at the University of Vermont is recruiting volunteers for various positions. If you are interested in any of the following, or wish to look at our catalogs for other options, call or drop by The Center for Service Learning in Mansfield House at 656-2062.

(1) The Chittenden Community Action needs individuals to form social groups of low-income people and to help them to create a sense of identity and eliminate feelings of powerlessness.

(2) Consumer Protection Division needs someone to handle telephone complaints and inquiries, and to do some preliminary investigative work.

(3) Housing and Neighborhood Development needs people to act as a food stamp and housing rehabilitation advocate.

(4) Center City South End News needs someone to do any type of work on their community newspaper.

(5) Vt. Children's Aid Society needs someone to assist the Business Manager and Fund Raiser.

Skiing Refunds

Refunds for the Physical Education Department Ski Program may be picked up at the Cashier's Office. Refunds will be made to students in the Monday and Tuesday classes for days when skiing was cancelled and to students who dropped the course. Refunds will not be made for absences on days when the ski classes met.

All refunds must be picked up at the Cashier's Office between April 10 and May 15, 1978. No refunds will be made after May 15.

Any questions call Ms. Lange, Ext. 3240.

Temporary Summer Employment

Orientation Aide positions are open for this summer. The sessions will be June 10, 11, 17, 18, 19, 20, 24 and 25. Applications are available at the Counseling and Testing Center, 146 So. Williams St. Any fulltime undergraduate students are eligible.

UVM Rescue Wants You!

Feel like helping out? UVM Rescue is looking for new applicants willing to devote some energy into a worthwhile organization. The requirements are simple: Advanced First Aid, Emergency cardiopulmonary resuscitation certified (ECPR), and some time.

Time? It will take up too much of my time. Don't worry, there are two study rooms at our disposal, plus a bunkroom. Although someone is on duty 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, it doesn't mean we can't sleep.

I'm not pre-med. I won't fit in. Among the pre-meds, there are a variety of majors, including engineering, business, economics, and even recreation management. We do it, not because it looks good on our record, but because it's a worthwhile experience, and the knowledge gained is invaluable.

Call 656-3350 or come down to the infirmary anytime for a free tour or to have any of your questions answered.

On Writing Resumes

The College of Education and Social Services will hold its last workshop in resume development for its seniors on April 15 at the Waterman Building. The first session will begin at 9:00 a.m. and will focus on developing the first draft. The second session will begin at 1 p.m. and will concentrate on the final drafts. Typists will be available to assist students at a $10 per resume package fee (rough and final, ready-for-printing drafts). Seniors in the College of Education are encouraged to sign up by calling the Career Planning and Placement Office 656-3477.

Become an O.T.

Did you know that you can become an O.T. in two years after completing a baccalaureate degree in a related field? Do you know what an O.T. does?

If you like working with people, this career area may be of interest to you. An informal seminar will include several films from the American Occupational Therapy Association and discussion by two occupational therapists from the Burlington area. The seminar is scheduled for April 12th, 4:00 – 5:30 p.m. at the Center for Cultural Pluralism (former Blundell House) on the Redstone Campus. This will be a good opportunity to learn about an allied health profession which is not part of the UVM curriculum.

What's the difference between an optician, an optometrist, and an opthamologist? Did you know that pre-optometry courses are the same as pre-med courses?

Come find out about becoming a vision care specialist at a special evening seminar about careers in optometry. Two optometrists from the Burlington area will discuss informally their professional responsibilities and interests.

The meeting will be held Thursday, April 13 from 7:30 – 9:00 p.m. in the Alumni House living room.

LIVING/LEARNING CENTER

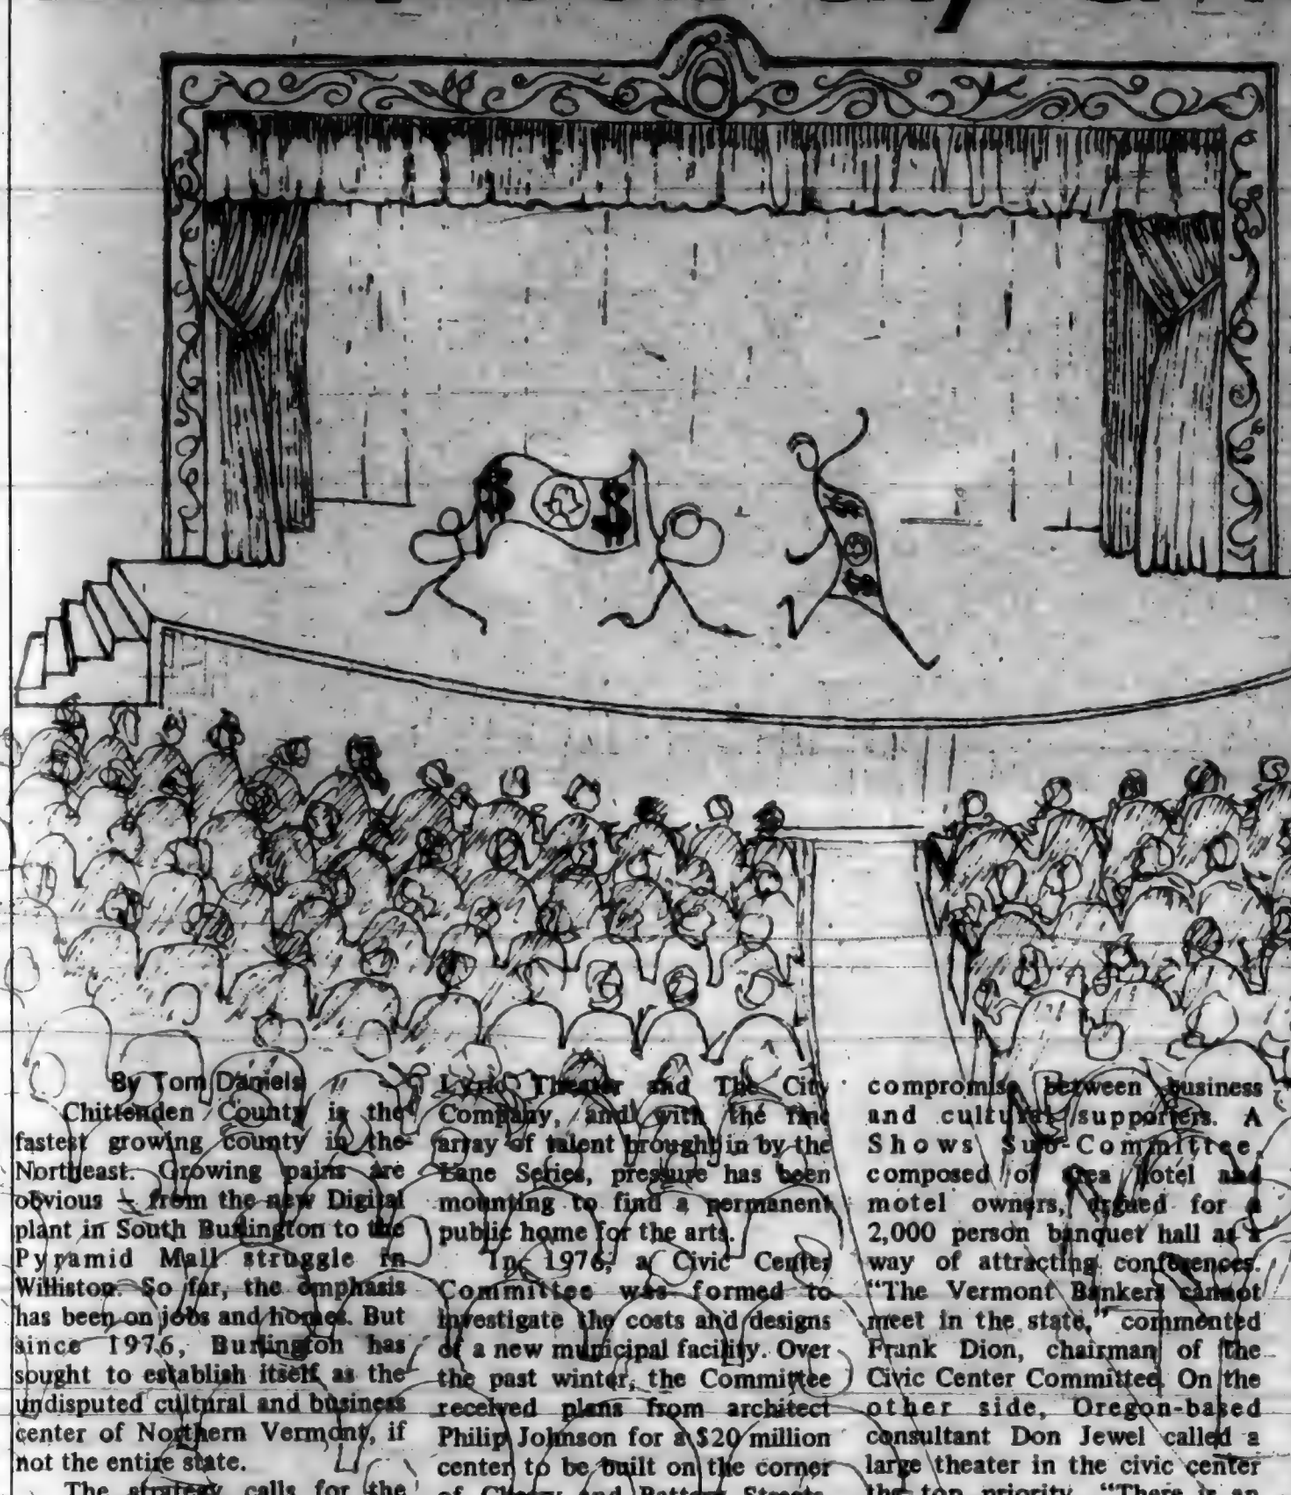
NOW RECRUITING for l/lc PROGRAMS 1978-79

| NEW PROGRAMS: | CONTACT: | PHONE |
|---|---|---|
| American Cluster Experience (ACE) | Prof. Marshall True | x3180 |
| Architectural and Environmental Design | Prof. Robert Rindler | x2014 |
| Asian Religions: Text and Teachers | Prof. Ted Brennemen | x3081 |
| Bilingual Education | Ann Woolfson | x4161 |
| Braille | Marie Yannich | x4361 |
| Business Administration | Prof. John Antil | x4015 |
| Cycling | Warren Wheelock | x4249 |
| Early American Craft | Jane Mitchel | x3446 |
| Emergency Medicine | Thomas Orent | x4242 |
| Environmental Communications | Nancy Moore | x4254 |
| German House | Prof. Roy Allen | x3430 |
| Green Mountain Design | Mary Jane Tankard | x4248 |
| Green Thumb | Stephanie Leach | x3447 |
| G.Y.S.T. | Prof. Karen Edwards | x4050 |
| Horse Sense | Bonnie Turpin | x4246 |
| Integrated Humanities | Prof. Bill Daniels | x3180 |
| International Business | Burkhard Hoene | x3447 |
| Journalism | Marianne Jones | x4263 |
| Joy of Cooking | Jonathen Blitz | x4082 |
| Learning About Living | Prof. Armin Grams | x4050 |
| Mime | Mark Muscatello | x3301 |
| Modern Dance | Cheryl Symmes | x4255 |
| Natural Foods | Susan Childs | x2694 |
| Nineteenth Century Vermont | Jonathan Richardson | x3874 |
| Noah's ARC (Animal Raising & Care) | Karen Lubold | x4257 |
| Outdoor Recreation Management | Mark Young | x2668 |
| Panhellenic | Jeanne Wall | x3850 |
| Photography | Steven Larose | x4252 |
| Pottery | Gail Rosenfeld | x2614 |
| Resource Awareness Program | John Engroff | x4200 |
| Rocks: Geological Evolution of Burlington Area | Prof. Dion Stewart | x3396 |
| Running | Paul Fiederlien | x4245 |
| Rural Options in Urban America | Prof. Garrison Nelson | x2601 |
| Russian House | Prof. Kenneth Nalibow | x3430 |
| Scandinavian Suite | Kristin Nelson | x4361 |
| Special Education | Patricia Pierson | x2936 |
| Strummin' and Pickin' | Adam Haut | x2229 |
| Student Academic Planning in the Sciences | Dave Bianchi | x2907 |
| Sunshine on a Cloudy Day (Peer Counseling) | Beth Alter | x4265 |
| Theatre Centre Players | Mary Krause | x4247 |
| Tropical Plant Biology | Prof. David Barrington | x3221 |
| Visual Astronomy | Michael Farnsworth | x3820 |
| Wilderness Sports | Jim LaFontine | x4250 |
| Worldwide | Prof. David Conrad | x3356 |
| Written Way | Richard Dean | x4242 |

IN-HALL ROOM CHOOSING
APRIL 18, 19, 20



OPEN ROOM CHOOSING
APRIL 30

Program Recruiting Fair

Saturday April 15 11—3 115 L/LC

The Queen City Civic Center:

Room Under the Golden Dome

By Tom Daniels

Chittenden County is the fastest growing county in the Northeast. Growing pains are obvious – from the new Digital plant in South Burlington to the Pyramid Mall struggle in Williston. So far, the emphasis has been on jobs and homes. But since 1976, Burlington has sought to establish itself as the undisputed cultural and business center of Northern Vermont, if not the entire state.

The strategy calls for the construction of a civic center to provide space for conventions, Lane Series performances, concerts, and exhibits. With four colleges in the vicinity and an expanding population, the demand for cultural events is heavy. But the sprucing up of downtown Burlington also has its economic side. Downtown merchants and city officials are obsessed with keeping their bailiwick "vital," especially in the face of the Pyramid Mall threat. A civic center, along with a developed waterfront and a Church Street pedestrian mall, would surely attract visitors; and people who can afford conventions and culture can usually afford a lot more. As Terry Demas, director of the Lane Series, put it, "A civic center will be a commercial center, not a cultural center." And small local groups will be priced out.

Most Burlington residents would agree that the existing theaters, gyms, and halls are inadequate, and a new space is needed. Now that the city has two respectable drama groups, Lyric Theater and The City Company, and with the fine array of talent brought in by the Lane Series, pressure has been mounting to find a permanent public home for the arts.

In 1976, a Civic Center Committee was formed to investigate the costs and designs of a new municipal facility. Over the past winter, the Committee received plans from architect Philip Johnson for a $20 million center to be built on the corner of Cherry and Battery Streets. The complex would include a 2,500 seat performing arts theater, an exhibition hall, a convention hall, and meeting rooms. And a 600 space parking lot would be built over the existing lot behind the Radisson Hotel. At the earliest, a new civic center, tentatively named the Champlain Civic Center, is about five years away.

Key to the fate of a new civic center is Mondev USA, Burlington's urban renewal developer, which owns the proposed site, the Radisson, the Cherry Street parking garage, and Burlington Square mall, the underground shopping center. Last year, Mondev, likely to profit hamdsomely from a civic center, was about to donate the building site for a nominal fee. Now negotiations are somewhat uncertain. To sweeten the deal, architects plan to connect the civic center through a series of stores to both the mall and the parking garage; and with 600 parking spaces, the Radisson should be busier.

So far, the civic center is a compromise between business and cultural supporters. A Shows Sub-Committee composed of area hotel and motel owners, argued for a 2,000 person banquet hall as a way of attracting conferences. "The Vermont Bankers cannot meet in the state," commented Frank Dion, chairman of the Civic Center Committee. On the other side, Oregon-based consultant Don Jewel called a large theater in the civic center the top priority. "There is an above-average interest in culture in the community," he said. "Any type of theater would be well utilized."

A large theater is deemed necessary to accommodate touring artists who draw big crowds. Jewel added that touring artists, not local productions, would make the theater pay for itself. He cited price per seat as the ruling factor; audiences would not be able to afford tickets in a theater with less than 2,500 seats.

Terry Demas had high praise for the theater design, which includes a deep stage, orchestra pit, and a sound ceiling. "It's a first class theater," he said. Demas was concerned that a large theater be built; otherwise, he said, "The character of the Lane Series 25 performances would have to change dramatically. We have a proven track record, and we need the space."

Nonetheless, Andrea Rogers of the Champlain Arts Council was doubtful of how often the civic center would be used. "I fear an empty facility," she remarked.

The civic center is expected to run an annual operating deficit of between $20,000 and $100,000; and Burlington Mayor Gordon Paquette, a major proponent of the civic center, feels the city can absorb any loss. But to keep the deficit from rising, the civic center will have to see plenty of use. For example, the theater is scheduled to be rented at $500 a performance and would have to be filled 120 days a year; the exhibition hall would cost $600 a day with 150 use days a year; and the convention hall must run at $150 a day at least 100 days out of the year.

Terry Demas was "surprised the rental fee for the theater was that cheap." He said the Lane Series has paid up to $400 a night for Memorial Auditorium and the Vermont Symphony has shelled out as much as $1,500 for a weekend night at the Flynn Theater.

Chairman of the exhibition hall sub-committee, Stanley Williston, said the $600 figure for exhibitions could be "high for locals." However, Williston concluded, "We need it (the center) regardless of what it costs. Let's get the thing built and then figure out how we're going to pay for it."

But with high rental costs, use of the civic center would be prohibitive to small groups, according to City Company Vice-President Elizabeth Bernstein. The City Company is looking for a "flexible performance area" with about a 300 seat capacity. "We need a home for growth potential, and space to rehearse," Mrs. Bernstein added. Lyric Theater, which performs about 12 nights a year, could use a home too.

THE ALTERNATIVES

The Flynn Theater, Memorial Auditorium, and St. Paul's Church are most often used for the performing arts in Burlington. Anyone who has heard a concert at Memorial Auditorium will attest to the deplorable acoustics, wasted spaces, and uncomfortable seats. Built in 1927, Memorial is usable, but woefully drab, and obsolete. And the city loses $50-60,000 a year keeping Memorial open. St. Paul's is good, but generally too small for Lane Series events.

The Flynn Theater at 153 Main Street remains a possibility and has caused discord within the Civic Center Committee. Many members want to build an entire new facility. But Terry Demas, chairman of the arts sub-committee, believes the city can eventually afford to buy the Flynn as well as construct a civic center. "Space creates its own use," he said.

Andrea Rogers, who chairs the Flynn Committee of the Champlain Arts Council, explained that the Council is examining the Flynn as "one option for some performing arts needs." She said Burlington's lone movie theater is in good condition and urged the Civic Center Committee to "factor the Flynn into your considerations."

With a capacity of almost 1,500, the Flynn runs a close second in space to Memorial Auditorium. "It is an ideal setting not only for musicals, but for any stage production," commented area art critic Richard Clark. "Given the Flynn's superior acoustics, seating arrangement, and plush atmosphere, it is a wonder Memorial is used at all."

Originally host to scores of vaudeville shows, the Flynn was converted to a movie house many years ago, and regained its stature only after being purchased by present owner Merrill Jarvis in 1972.

All of the original curtains and "flying" backdrops were still intact after decades of disuse when Mr. Jarvis took possession. Recognizing the potential for a quality theater, he replaced the old fixed movie screen with a moveable one, giving the Flynn a chance to relive past glories.

The ornate Flynn does have some problems, however. A little-known fact about the theater is that it consists of two buildings. The stage in a building of its own is connected to the main section only at the stage opening and two fireproof side entrances. The resulting narrowness of the stage/backstage has seriously restricted the movements of stage crews.

Demas said that the Flynn could be purchased and renovated for about $2 million. Alterations might include a new building to house performers as well as expanding the stage.

********

Comparable to Burlington's quest for a civic center is the case of Washington, D.C. The nation's capital has been unable to squeeze a mere $110 million out of the U.S. Senate to build a civic center. Vermont Senator Patrick Leahy, who chairs the D.C. appropriations sub-committee, has reported that D.C. taxpayers are opposed to the project, and private businessmen are reluctant to invest any money.

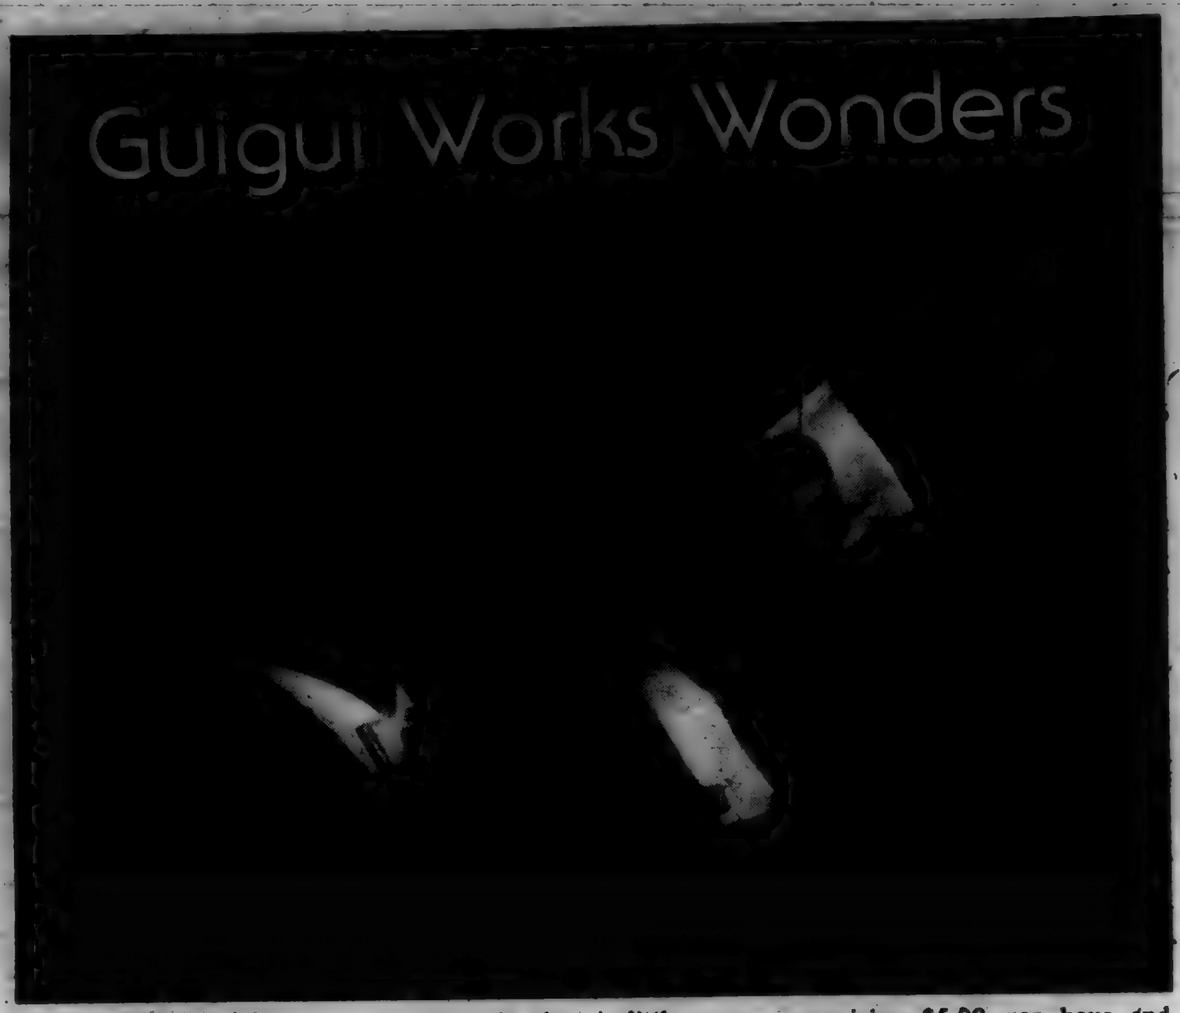
Ultimately, a bond issue (i.e. higher taxes) will probably be presented to Burlington voters. But if Burlington does not get its new civic center, the city should take heart. Washington D.C. has been trying unsuccessfully for 137 years.

To sweeten the deal, architects plan to connect the civic center through a series of stores to both the mall and the parking garage; and with 600 parking spaces, the Radisson should be busier.

"Downtown merchants and city officials are obsessed with keeping their baliwick "vital", especially in the face of the Pyramid Mall threat. A civic center, along with a Church Street pedestrain mall, would surely attract visitors, and people who can afford conventions and culture can usually afford a lot more."

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsis with small pizza
4-Pepsis with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

Ladies Nite
Thursday 9-12



Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30
what ale's you
152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

20% off
NATURE BOOKS including field guides

Next Week April 10-15
in stock cash only
BOOKSTACKS
Pine Street between Main & College
862-8513
Open Weeknights 8pm. (fri.-9)

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsis with small pizza
4-Pepsis with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

Guigui Works Wonders

By Tricia John

When the conductor of the Vermont Symphony was asked why he gave up his job to come and join the VSO (for half the salary) he said, "because it's very challenging to develop a symphony." This is a curious comment to make about a symphony orchestra that is 44 years old, but Maestro Efrain Guigui has in fact done just that: developed an orchestra that now attracts packed houses all over Vermont, and more importantly has drawn the state's finest musicians to serve as its members. On an extremely meager budget, the VSO has risen out of the sea of mediocrity to become a first-rate symphony that the state is proud to expend money for. This was done by the perseverance and hard work of many dedicated people — the executive director, the board of trustees, the fundraisers, volunteers, and last but not least, the conductor and the musicians.

The VSO was established in 1935, and old friends proudly talk of how its founder, Alan Carter, paced about in his living room one Sunday late in 1934 and discussed with a friend the possiblity of a state orchestra in Vermont. Thus, the VSO was conceived and thereafter nourished by the loving and dedicated hands of Alan Carter, music director and conductor. For years the symphony expanded through his musical ideas and understanding, gaining respect throughout the state as well as money appropriated from the legislature (this began in 1939).

Eventually morale in the orchestra declined because of numerous external and internal problems, deeply effecting the quality of the music and the outside financial support of the symphony. The board of trustees wanted to replace Alan Carter and find another musical director who could re-establish the symphony's fine reputation that Carter had built and lost.

Though Carter was revered for his hard work and firm belief in the VSO, the board felt he had really lost touch with the urgent needs of the VSO, and Carter retired unwillingly as musical director in 1974. Argentinan Efrain Guigui replaced Carter with new ideas and changes which raised the quality of music-making tremendously. A little over a year later, Alan Carter, creator and musical director of the VSO for almost 40 years, committed suicide in September, 1975. A eulogy for Carter was written by Vermont composer Lionel Nowak and played by the VSO a month later.

Since these troubled times for the symphony, a lot of good has happened. Long-standing debts are being systematically wiped out and the orchestra has never played better or as frequently. This year, the VSO will play 51 concerts in 21 Vermont cities. 25 concerts are full orchestra concerts, others are string quartet, Little Orchestra concerts and recitals. For the first time Guigui established auditions and thus the orchestra attracted high-quality musicians and a major re-staffing was made possible. The members of the orchestra also began getting paid regularly, another problem that the financially crippled orchestra could not alleviate until a new management under Joel Gratwick (he is the new management) worked steadily to put the VSO in the black. Now, while a previous debt of $40,000 still exists, the operating expenses have remained within the $200,000 annual budget for a couple of years already. A fund-raising drive is now underway to wipe out the old debt. Last year's move to Burlington (from their headquarters in Middlebury) also increased support and drew more good musicians from around the Chittenden County area.

Nevertheless, remaining to the confines of a still inadequate budget has its obvious disadvantages. New music and sufficient rehearsal time are sacrificed, not to mention adequate salaries for VSO management. (In an interview, Guigui says he came to Vermont for half the salary he was receiving in Puerto Rico as conductor of the Casals Festival.) With regular musicians receiving $5.00 per hour and principals $6.00, rehearsal time is surprisingly little — for even ten hours of rehearsal of this 80 member orchestra would cost the VSO about $3,500. Considering this lack of time together, the orchestra plays extraordinarily well, and Guigui remarks without hesitation that "every performance is a miracle."

What makes up the symphony budget? About 25% of the budget comes from the State, and grants from the Vermont Council of the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts, ticket sales and fund drives comprise the rest of the budget.

Soloists to the orchestra also contribute by playing for outrageously little money — a fraction of their normal fee. While they receive about $150 for a performance with the symphony, Betty Allen (soprano who sang in last summer's VSO series), whose normal fee is $2,000, came for $100. She is a friend of Guigui, and like so many other famous soloists of the VSO in the past, a lover of Vermont and strong believer in what the symphony is trying to accomplish.

"You have to have the right approach. If someone somebody is playing Mozart like Tchaikovsky, that's wrong."

—Maestro Efrain Guigui

But no one believes more in the potential of the VSO than Efrain Guigui himself. A visitor to Vermont many times, Guigui participated in the Composers' Symposium held here every year. Although his concentration in the past has been on composing and conducting contemporary music, his understanding of music and the forces around it is thoughtful and historically sensitive. With each piece of music the VSO plays, Guigui carefully analyzes the score to understand its melodic and harmonic structure and unifying elements. "In finding your own interpretation," says Guigui, "you must fully understand what was written. The wrong approach is to go to other recordings to learn what other

(continued on page 40)

Theatre In Burlington: For Varied Tastes

GIGI

Lyric Theatre Inc.

Essex Community Players

The City Company

By Jay F. Collier

The excited murmur of the audience signals that the curtain is about to rise. As you await the opening night performance, the lights blink off, and a muffled thrill runs through the house. For an hour or two, you will exist in another place and time, glimpsing the lives of others as they unfold on the stage. You know the contented feeling of the theatre, so you sit back and relax...

Whether you are watching a musical, drama or comedy, the show is evidence of the growth of community theatre on the Burlington scene during the past few years. Today, amateurs perform before sell-out audiences, even though the troupes operate on a strictly volunteer basis. Companies such as the Essex Community Players, Lyric Theatre and the City Company provide a variety of theatre to the Burlington area.

THE ESSEX COMMUNITY PLAYERS

The old town hall in Essex Center was unused until a group of theatre enthusiasts leased it from the town and set up their own resident theatre. As well as volunteering their time for cleaning, painting and wiring, the Essex Players have presented almost forty-five shows, and are currently in their 19th season.

The Essex Playhouse is a small, intimate theatre with about 125 seats, which enables the actors to perform in the aisles and draw the audience into the show. The last few seasons have consisted of musicals, dramas, mysteries, and comedies, and each show usually runs on eight evenings during two weekends. This season, Godspell, Count Dracula and The Man Who Came To Dinner played to sellout audiences and received favorable reviews from the critics. Sean O'Casey's drama The Plough and the Stars will open early in June.

The many talented directors, producers, actors and playwrights of the Players present quality entertainment. The entire group is a family of good friends, and rehearsals follow the traditional pattern of reading, blocking the stage movement, memorization of lines, and character development. The Players emphasize assimilating newcomers into the family quickly as they feel this facilitates both a cohesive production and a pleasant atmosphere. Proof can be found by attending the consistently strong entertainment presented by the group.

LYRIC THEATRE

On a cold, winter evening late in 1973, lights could be seen in the windows of Pine Ridge School, where a number of theatre enthusiasts met to discuss the possibility of community musical theatre in Burlington. Their first show, How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, was produced in May of 1974. Forthwith, two musical comedies have been presented yearly. More than 200 individuals are involved with every show that is presented at the Flynn Theatre in downtown Burlington.

One of the largest theatres in the state, the Flynn has a large balcony and accommodates 1450. In the 1930's, the theatre was used for vaudeville, but the stage hadn't been used to its fullest until Lyric Theatre was formed. Performances are usually held on five consecutive evenings, with a Saturday afternoon matinee. Recent productions have included Oklahoma! The King and I, and Mame; and the curtain of Lerner and Loewe's Gigi will rise on April 19.

Lyric musicals are fun. Casts enjoy preparing musical theatre as much as audiences enjoy watching, and Lyric Theatre is no exception. The rehearsals are planned so that the cast feels exhilerated with the product of eight to nine weeks of exhausting work. Following auditions, the chorus, dancers and principals meet separately for a week or two to take care of the basics, but when the thirty to fifty members of the cast start rehearsing together, everything quickly falls into place. The result is a delightful presentation of acting, singing and dancing.

THE CITY COMPANY

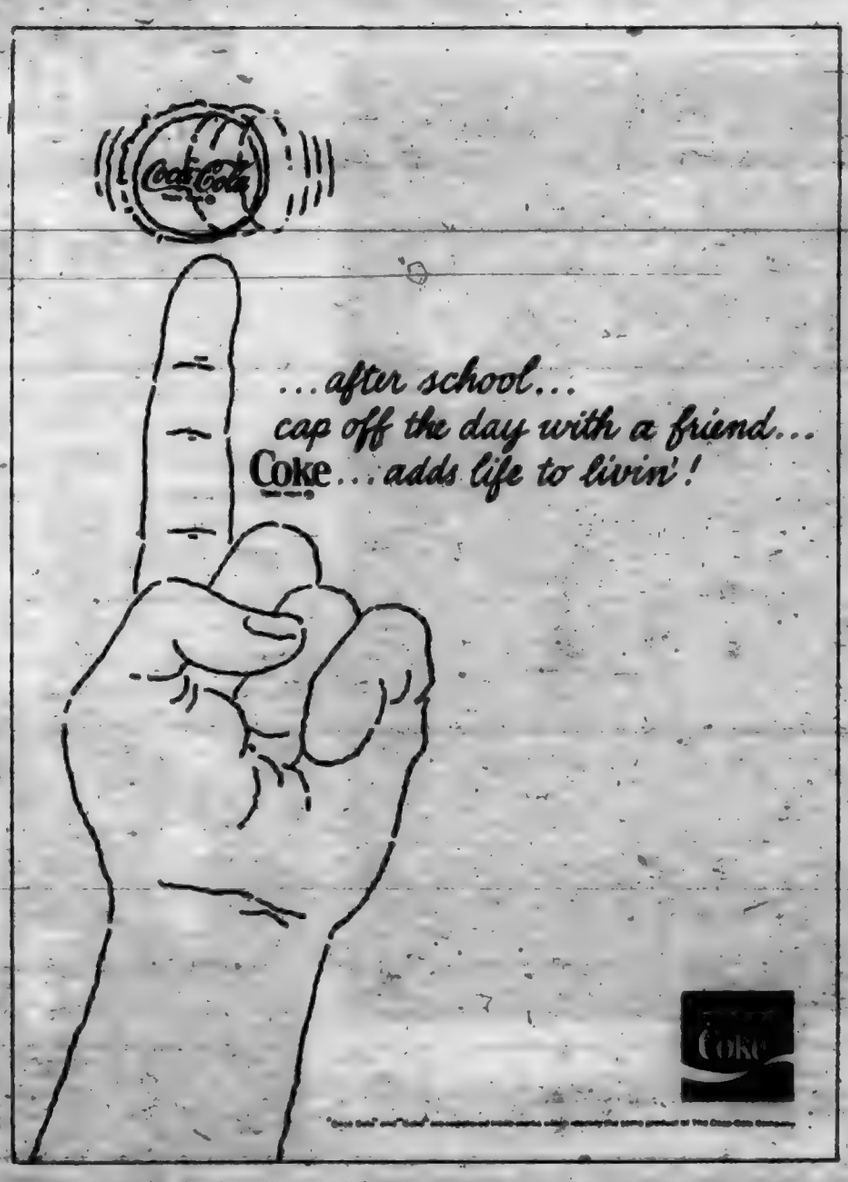
In early 1975, a group of UVM alumni presented A Lion in Winter, and the response was great enough to prompt the formation of a continuing company. "The City Company of Burlington is a group of local residents, both amateur and professional, who have banded together to create theatre."

In February 1977, following several one-acts and a show by Thornton Wilder, the Company produced Jubilee Jim, a musical play written by Burlington's Anton Mastaler. It all came about in a very unusual way. One day, while Mastaler was fishing the headwaters of the Winooski River, he heard a Canadian radio drama about one Col. James Fisk of Brattleboro, Vermont, who had become a millionaire in New York in the early 19th century. Jubilee Jim firmly established the City Company in the social fabric of Burlington. The first full season, held in Mann Hall Auditorium at Trinity College, included Williams' Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and Brecht's A Man's A Man. Herb Gardner's comedy A Thousand Clowns will conclude the Three at Trinity in May.

Rehearsals with the Company seem as disorganized as the first week at UVM. Walk into the rehearsal hall, and you will see a handful of actors with the director improvising, interpreting and tearing the script apart. Their goal is to recreate the lives of the characters that the playwright had in mind. Each cast member is at every rehearsal, watching intently, hoping to grasp the aura of the play. The family atmosphere is also important here, as personalities are an essential factor in experimental theatre. Overall, the play is an experience which opens up the actor to himself and others, and during the process he makes lasting friendships..



The curtain goes down on the final scene and the audience simultaneously rises to its feet. The applause spreads throughout the house, and the cast returns to the stage for its curtain call. After the show, the conversations continue as the audience leaves the theatre. As soon as the last people have gone, the cast, crew and director sit informally on the stage to discuss what needs to be corrected the next evening. No one is paid, yet the sweat of weeks of rehearsals culminates in a few hours on five or six nights. But why? David Robertson of the Essex Players summed it up, "Community theatre has brought people together to write, produce, direct, act and organize plays. In a special way, it creates community." Check it out.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsis with small pizza
4-Pepsis with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

The Modest, Sober, Bone Dry Hen Lay Eggs For Nogs and Dies at Ten.

weck's
WINE & CHEESE
Burlington Square Mall 658-2070

DOMINO'S PIZZA
Free Pepsi
2-Pepsis with small pizza
4-Pepsis with large pizza
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

Forecast Forecast Forecast

Pat Metheny

Jazz guitarist Pat Metheny will be playing at Hunt's next Wednesday and Thursday. Well known for his light, lyrical style, Metheny has played with vibraphonist Gary Burton and Weather Report drummer Jaco Pastorius, and has recently formed his own quartet consisting of Lyle Mays on piano, Mark Egan on bass, and Dan Gottlieb on drums. In a recent magazine interview, Joe Pass mentioned the twenty-three year old Metheny along with John McLaughlin, Larry Coryell, Al Dimeola, and Ralph Towner as possible future kings of virtuoso guitar. There will be two shows nightly, at 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. Tickets are $5 in advance, $6 at the door.

Ella Fitzgerald

The Lane Series has rescheduled the Ella Fitzgerald concert for Saturday, May 13, at 8:00 p.m. in the Patrick Gym. Ella sings the hell out of her songs, flashing out the melody, caressing each note, extending the harmonies, and inserting nuances that the songwriter might have written if he'd possessed her musicianship. A Fitzgerald performance spans the decades, tastes, modes and composers of the century: Ellington, Bacharach, Carole King, Cole Porter, Gershwin, Randy Newman, Stevie Wonder and many more. There are still tickets available for the May 13 performance — $7.50 and $4.00. For reservations please call the Lane Series box office at 656-3418. Tickets for the March 18 performance will be honored at the door on May 13.

Mummenschanz

Mummenschanz, the delightful three-person Swiss mime troupe that has recently taken the New York theater world by storm, presents performances that are totally unique and a joy to watch on Wednesday, April 19, 8:00 p.m. at the Jack O'Connell Theater, Lebanon, N.H., Opera House. Reserved seats are $7.50, students $4.50.

Cecil Taylor

Cecil Taylor, one of the finest and most inventive jazz pianists of today, is acclaimed for his improvisational genius and the power of his performances. He has been called "the most vital of contemporary musicians" by the Village Voice and has been a dominant figure on the jazz scene for 20 years. He will play at Dartmouth with his five-man backup group on Monday, April 10, 8:00 p.m. at the Spaulding Auditorium. Reserved seats are $5.00, students $3.50.

Tashi

On Sunday, April 9, at 8:00 p.m. the Lane Series will present Tashi in the Ira Allen Chapel. Tashi brings together some of the country's most exciting young solo artists — including pianist Peter Serkin, son of the veteran pianist Rudolf Serkin; violinist Ida Kavafian; and clarinetist Richard Stoltzman. Tashi's great success with audiences and critics alike was best summed up when the New York Times wrote, "The easy informality of the members of Tashi is balanced by a fierce emotional commitment to the music they play..." Tickets are $7.50 and $4.50, reservations may be made by calling the Lane Series box office at 656-3418.

Vt Symphony Orchestra

Under the direction of Maestro Efrain Guigui, the Vermont Symphony Orchestra will perform in Burlington on April 8th, Johnson on April 9th, Arlington on April 15th, Middlebury on April 30th, and Montpelier on May 6th. The Symphony's spring program is exciting and diverse, centered around Brahm's Academic Festival Overture and Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition which will be performed at all concerts. The Burlington program will be completed with the help of the UVM Choral Union performing Bernstein's Chichester Psalms. For more information about the concerts, and for a copy of the full spring schedule of events, contact the V.S.O. office, 163 S. Willard St., Burlington, 864-5741.

The Acting Company

The Lane Series will present the Acting Company in three performances, on April 24, 25, and 26. The Acting Company is a permanent touring repertory company performing classical and modern plays coast to coast. Now in its sixth season, the company was originally formed with the first graduating class of the Drama Division of the Julliard School, and is under the artistic direction of its founder, the noted producer-director-actor, John Houseman. To date the Company has performed 31 plays, in 150 cities, in 35 states; and is the recipient of two Tony Award nominations. Performances are on Monday, April 24 — King Lear, Tuesday, April 25 — Mother Courage, and Wednesday, April 26 — Chapeau. All performances are at the Flynn Theatre and will be held at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $7.50 and $5.50, reservations may be made by calling the Lane Series box office at 656-3418.

Joffrey II Ballet

On Saturday, April 15, the Lane Series will present the Joffrey II Ballet Company at 8:00 p.m. in the Memorial Auditorium. The Joffrey II Dancers called "the best small classical ballet company in the country," compliment their remarkable technical proficiency with an immense amount of imagination and a contagious display of enthusiasm. Tickets are $7.50 and $4.50, reservations may be made by calling the Lane Series office at 656-3418.

Concord String Quartet

On Tuesday, April 18, the Lane Series will present the Concord String Quartet in its third sell-out performance of the season. This final program will include works by Haydn, Ezra Laduman and Dvorak. Tuesday, April 18, 8:00 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

Joe Pass

The Lane Series will present Joe Pass, jazz guitarist, on Friday, May 5, new date, in the Ira Allen Chapel. Wholesome and immaculate are not words normally associated with jazz guitarists, but then Joe Pass is not a normal guitarist. He's breathtaking. Speed and flash are only part of his strength — his playing carries a depth of feeling and originality which makes him unique, and his clarity of touch on the strings, best heard without sidemen, is simply lovely to hear. Tickets are $7.50 and $4.50; for reservations call the Lane Series box office at 656-3418.

Kurtz and Blasdel Exhibit Shows Life of Its Own

By Judith Gerber

A diversified exhibit of drawings and sculpture by John Kurtz and Gregg Blasdel opened April 1 in UVM's Colburn Gallery.

Kurtz came to Burlington from New York City six years ago to pursue an active career of drawing, painting, woodwork, teaching at UVM, running (three marathons this spring) and enjoying life. The six large drawings in the exhibit are currently being transformed into larger paintings (50" x 60"). They will continue to exist with a life of their own, however, and will be shown with the paintings at the Robert Miller Gallery (57th & 5th) in October, 1980. "The transition from a drawing to a larger painted surface absolutely fascinates me," says Kurtz.

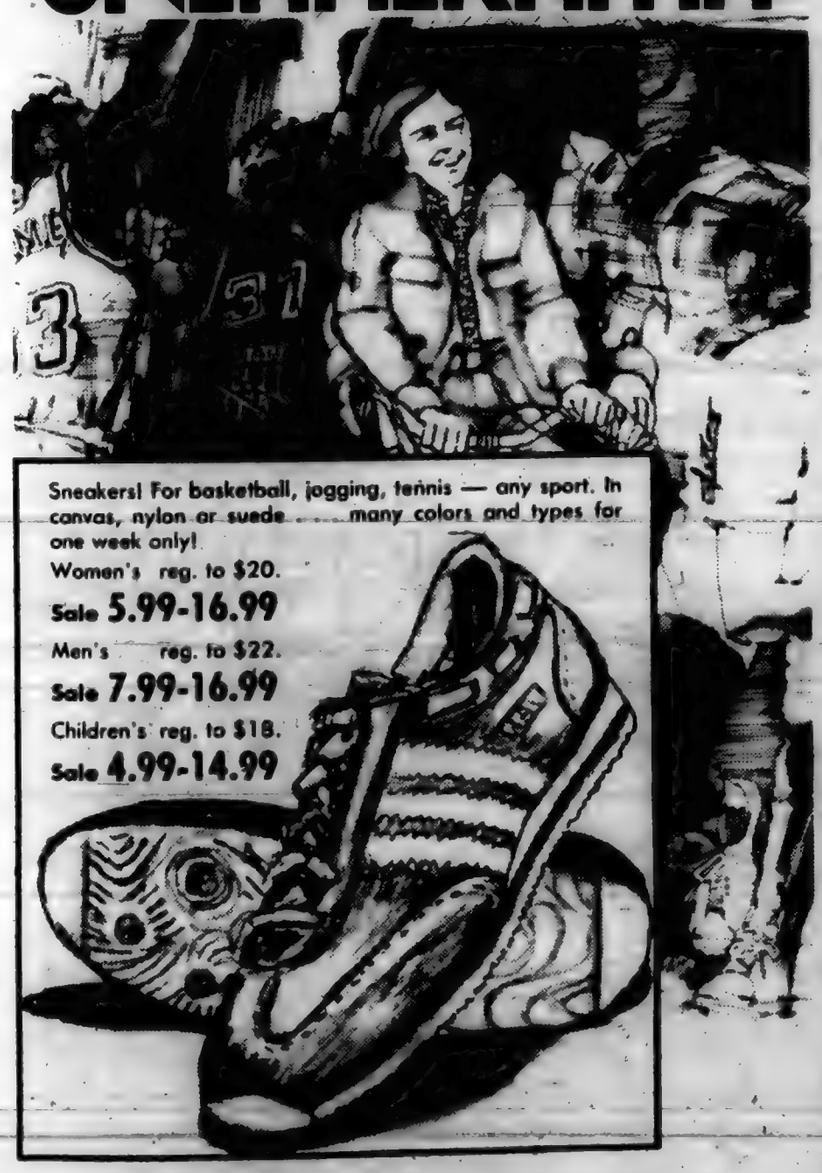
The drawings exist in black and white – large untouched spaces offset by meticulous obsession with detail – clean surreal landscapes inhabited by descriptive people, plant life, and objects. On canvas, these white spaces are transformed by layers of delicately transparent oils – a method the artist researched and perfected last summer. He finishes several drawings, matts and frames, then looks at them over a period of a few years, constantly reconstructing in his mind the color that will evolve on canvas.

Kurtz speaks frequently of edges – the edges of the composition and the edges within the rectangular format. It is obvious that living with a photographer for eight years has affected the way he crops the scene. A dying cowboy drawing, for example, is strengthened by the surging muscles of two horses rushing into the lower left hand corner of the picture plane. In another composition, a St. Sebastian in chaps has his right hand cropped by the matt in a photographic way. Kurtz explores the logical implications of this aesthetic by simply lopping off the body of a pick-up truck – short of the matt – leaving the cab suspended in mid air with only the front wheels for support. Inside a drowsy onlooker hangs out the open window observing what appears to be the saint receiving a blow job.

Which brings me to the subject matter – the most obviously bizarre aspect of the artist's work. How is one to respond to a tree with a vaginal opening or a cowgirl with bared torso and chaps hanging crucified on a wooden structure with an organic phallic shape looming behind? Sexual references are overt, but fancifully combined with historic allusions. Mantegna comes through in the St. Sebastian with agonized face reminding of the tortured Hellenistic expression on the Laocoon.

John Kurtz grew up in Montana – hence the Western imagery. He was first exposed to Greek and Roman sculpture in history books and comics. He cites Bosch, Michelangelo, Blake, Bottecelli, and Durer among the numerous other influences. Although he recalls Dillon saying, "If my thought life could be seen, they'd put my head in a guillotine," his images are not so outrageous when laid alongside a Bosch, Blake, or Bottecelli. Kurtz packs an ecstatic monk, weight lifting cowboy, feminine centaur, Polykleitan torso, equestrian female and lurking lone ranger into a sort of group portrait. Rambling roses thornily weave this disparate group together. A red rosette sun (one of his very selective additions of color) weeps blue tear droplets upon these oblivious beings. Attached to an incomplete horizon line miles away, another figure waves his last goodbye (to someone who isn't looking) before he rides off into the sunset.

On Greg Blasdel's side of the gallery, window shades are pulled, creating a comfortable womb-like space. Inhabiting this area are two forty inch high sets of plaster cast steps, placed back to back, with a suspended plastic sheet between. The artist speaks of the Janus-faced nature of his work – in this case setting up the two staircases to oppose each other, yet interceding with plastic for reflective qualities. The viewer is intrigued by the ensuing dialogue. On the first set of steps, a plaster hat floats in a pool of green light. The second set retorts in red tones (picked up from light seeping from under the staircase), dancing on the edges of foot square window panes which slice each step like a razor.



Blasdel is fervent about integrity of materials – plaster looks like plaster, glass like glass. In this particular sculpture, the glass challenges the crispness of

(continued on page 40)

John Kurtz and Gregg Blasdel

SNEAKERAMA

Sneakers! For basketball, jogging, tennis — any sport. In canvas, nylon or suede . . . . many colors and types for one week only!

Women's reg. to $20.
Sale 5.99-16.99

Men's reg. to $22.
Sale 7.99-16.99

Children's reg. to $18.
Sale 4.99-14.99

GLADSTONE SHOES

PLATTSBURGH BARRE RUTLAND BENNINGTON WINOOSKI ST. ALBANS NEWPORT BURLINGTON

practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy

★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

Student Photo Service

656-2050

Passport/Resume Photos Taken

All kinds of custom photography and darkroom work available

LOWER BILLINGS CENTER (by the phones)

DON'T MISS!

SIGMA NU'S ANNUAL SPRING BLAST

FRIDAY APR. 7 9 PM

16 KEGS - MIXED DRINKS $1 DONATION

DONT MISS THE BIGGEST PARTY OF THE SPRING!

PASSOVER SEDER

Sponsored by the Hillel Foundation

Vermont Symphony Orchestra

Continued from page 36

conductors have done. You have to do your own work."

Guigui tries to interpret in terms of what the composer would have wanted to hear. "You have to have the right approach. If somebody is playing Mozart like Tchaikovsky, that's wrong."

Guigui compares the creative process of a composer to that of a painter. "When a composer writes something down on paper, he has a precise idea of how his music will sound and should be played." Painters, too, have their own preconceptions about their creations, but have the advantage of being the sole producers of their ideas. Composers, on the contrary, have to let other performers play what they have written, and many conductors today and in the past have mercilessly butchered music to suit their own taste and/or imagination. An analogy to this could perhaps be that fellow who painted loincloths over what now are the "private parts" of Michelangelo's nudes in the Sistene Chapel. Fortunately, art today is saved from such treatment. Music is not, however. Guigui stands for music as it should be, and his interpretations are refreshing and to the point.

No interpretation would be worth a tinker's dam if the music makers couldn't make good music. But Guigui is confident in his musicians. "Before, the orchestra was almost bankrupt. We concentrated first on improving the quality of the music. Quality attracts more quality, just like money attracts money. Musicians who heard us were very impressed with these recent changes. Good players are attracted to the symphony and are dedicated to its high quality."

"But I am never satisfied," concludes Guigui. "Every concert is a miracle. We rehearse on the same day of the performance, and other symphonies have far more rehearsal hours under their belts before they perform. We survive and do well because our musicians are good."

On Saturday, April 8, the VSO will perform at the Burlington High School Auditorium at 8:00 and among other pieces will perform Brahms' Academic Overture, Bernstein's Chichester Psalms, and Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition. Come and see the country's oldest state symphony and the UVM Choral Union in high gear.

Kurtz and Blasdel

Continued from page 39

sculpture. The viewer gradually becomes aware that - like the Greeks who planned their the plaster. He has been using glass for many years in his work, and points out that glass has been an integral part of drawing and painting also, simply because we look at such work through the glass in the frame.

The artist enjoys transferring one system of values to another. For example, the cast plaster hat is undeniably symbolic of a hat down to the last detail of a feather in the band. But it is not a hat and could never be worn as a hat.

Numbers and measurements are important to Blasdel. He prefers units divisible by four – four steps, four pieces of twelve inch glass, and entering the inner sanctum of his gallery, one is delighted to discover four foot square graphite drawings mounted on the wall facing the temples in modular units – Blasdel's attention to scale and proportion creates a very comfortable space.

The graphite drawings bear little resemblance to Kurtz's more traditional technique across the gallery. Gregg Blasdel's work consists of plexiglass boxes (12" x 12" x 2") containing scrolls upon which he has rubbed loose graphite. The artist points to graphite as one of the first materials used by a child – scribbling with pencil on paper. He has pushed beyond childish expression, of course, to an exhaustive exploration of the medium in all its forms. As in his sculpture, these experiments have been conducted consistently over several years and one has the fruits of sustained investigation encased in those four little square foot boxes.

Congratulations!

Now what?

You can work 9 to 5 for the man, or you can work fulltime for mankind.
The PEACE CORPS and VISTA offer you a real alternative that could be the most rewarding experience of your life.
In the PEACE CORPS you can go where your skills and training are needed. You can live in a new land, speak a new language, and be adopted by a new people.
VISTA offers you the opportunity to help people right here in this country, whether it's in the troubled ghetto, the mountains of Appalachia, or in your own community.
If you want to do something really important, consider the PEACE CORPS or VISTA . . . because you CAN make all the difference in the world.

Interested students are invited to stop by the PEACE CORPS and VISTA information booth in the Billings Center on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 11, 12 and 13th from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. PEACE CORPS and VISTA recruiters will be conducting personal interviews with seniors and grad students on these same days in the placement office.

COME IN AND DISCUSS YOUR FUTURE;
WE'LL SHOW YOU HOW TO USE THAT DIPLOMA

Seniors and grad students should sign up for interviews in the Placement Office

Disco Down Downtown

By Kim Honza

Beneath glowing neon tubes and flashing strobes, a mass of gyrating human flesh is magically transformed by a series of well-rehearsed and choreographed routines, into waves of synchopated rhythm, ebbed on by the gently insistent pulse of a disco beat.

I am among those who throng onto postage stamp sized dance floors, to bathe in a spectrum of continually changing subtle blending colors, reflecting off a cosmicly mirrored globe, rotating mysteriously above the striding, strutting, high-stepping, star-studded and sequined clientele. I too am appropriately attired. Adorning my feet is a pair of four-and-one-half inch stiletto heeled, clear acrylic dancing shoes. I wear patterned stockings of black, my dress too is black; the red glitter on my eyelids is the only diversion from the black color scheme. Many of the men are wearing sport coats with their shirts open at the collar and gold chains hanging from their neck in the resulting hairy v's. The girl on the banquette at my right displays a pair of enviably shapely legs that extend endlessly upward until they end abruptly in a pair of pink satin boxer shorts.

Boogeying at Harold J's Photo by Rob Swanson

The atmosphere on the dance floor is very hot – An excellent sound system spills out the ubiquitous Donna Summer and Bee Gees tunes. The dancing is nonstop; a pulsating excitement emanates everywhere, even from the cloud of smoke just released beneath the constant movement of feet to the beat.

Discomania once, and more recently, Saturday Night Fever. Images of John Travolta come to mind. Clad in second-skin with pants executing complicated and intricate patterns with perfection, his hips are undulating to the incessent bass line that pushes and pulses throughout the programming sequences.

You either feel like dancing, or you don't, although there are varying degrees to which you can acquire the "fever." New York is perhaps the second hottest disco scene in the world, a close second behind Rio de Janiero in popular entertainment for the young clientele.

Even many staid Vermonters have abandoned their usual beer drinking establishments and are flocking to the local discos, which seem to be flourishing where their "live entertainment" predecessors have failed. Some came to glance, some to dance, but more and more the dance floors are becoming crowded with individuals who know something more than the "bump" or the "skate." Touch dancing has gone by the wayside, and in its place idiosyncratic gyration is back.

The tune to which Vermonters enjoy discomania is much less the dress up, glamour and glitter role, than it is the temptation to try something different. However, local dance studios have been offering disco dancing and are booked solid.

One factor that prevents Burlington discos from attaining a totally believable disco flavor is that the music occasionally comes off as a badly programmed jukebox. Endless sets of Beatles hits do not induce uninhibited, flamboyant ambience nor, for that matter, do the Beach Boys. On the other hand, a nice item about the Burlington disco scene, is that it isn't necessary for one to purchase Halloween party goods simply to go dancing on a Saturday night.

Burlington discos are definitely on the upbeat, but like so many other trendy fashions, an easily bored band of followers may soon pass on to more imaginative rivals in the entertainment field or, for that matter, find drinking beer at the local saloons much more entertaining.

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Free Pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza

4-Pepsi's with large pizza

Exp. 5-16-78

658-3333

Harold J's

Lower Church Street

Mixed Drinks Available

$2: All The Beer You Can Drink

SENIOR CLASS PARTY

Friends Invited

Thursday April 13th 8:00 PM

Music Not Necessarily Disco

Papa Dominics

Back By Popular Demand!!!

All The Spaghetti You Can Eat!!!

Monday Thru Thursday Only in Our Dining Rooms.

$3.00

Open Everyday at 4:30 Delivery Available

1164 Williston Rd. 863-2556

Contributing Staff

NEWS: Curtis Haynes, Hamilton W. Sorrell, Robert Cassidy, John Letteri, Susan Heller, Diana Palazzolo, Rich Hyland, Lisa Wolff.

FEATURES: Randy McMullen, Tom Daniels, Leslie Dunn, Leslie Wassmuth, Peter Millard.

SPORTS: Mark Kevorkian, Paul Gardner, Jim Fletcher, Randy Briggs, Melissa Brown, Kim Honza, Amanda Miller, Darcie McCann.

ARTS: Laura Bell, Tricia John, Shana Schwartzburg, Alex Eschenbrenner, Jim Wright, Peter Relick, Tom Nuccio, Jay Collier, Suzy Karkus, Hugh Bush, Jeannie Cooper, Tim Traver, Claire McCrea.

ADVERTISING: Nat Foote, Peter Voll, Doug Lyons, Mary Landon.

GRAPHICS: Amy Lowry, Shirley Reid, Linda Stanley, Liz Hemingway.

PHOTOGRAPHY: John Freeman, Ellen Gray, Mitch Sprung, Mike Simays, Scott Greb Neal Desind, Don Cunningham, Mike Koeniges, Bob Davis.

LAYOUT: Ann Stires, Susan Jo Perkins, Jim Otto, April Heitkamp

TYPISTS: Sarah Wesson, Nicki Krabbendum.

TYPESETTER: Susan Ball.

The Vermont Cynic assumes no responsibility for unsolicited materials. All submissions are subject to the Vermont Cynic's right to edit. All unsolicited material becomes the property of the Vermont Cynic.

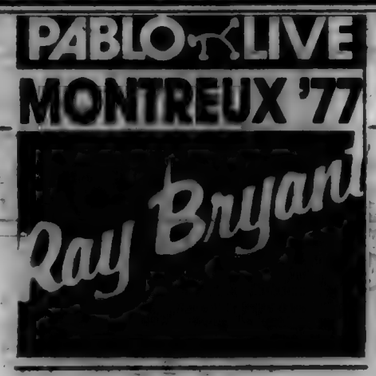
No part of this publication may be reproduced without the expressed written consent of the Vermont Cynic.

Subscription rate is $12 yearly.



Circulation: 8000

Vermont Cynic, Billings Center, Box 20, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

Printed by Upper Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont.

RECENT CUTS

Bryant's Left-Handed Genius

By Tom Nuccio

Pablo Live, Montreux 77, Ray Bryant

Jazz piano has experienced a tremendous renovation in the past decade. Players concern themselves primarily with the highest 44 ivories while disregarding the lower tonal extremeties. These so-called "Contemporary Keyboardists" also neglect pounding the keys in favor of gently caressing them with their delicate fingertips. This new wave has heavily influenced the style of practically every jazz pianist.

Fortunately, it has not affected the glorious style of Ray Bryant. He remains a traditionalist, maintaining a down home blues/boogie manner characteristic of the 20's and 30's. Pounding rhythmical chords across the lower keys, Bryant displays the quickest and most adroit left hand in modern jazz.

This genius stylist recently performed at the Montreux Jazz Festival and the recording was waxed by Pablo Records. His solo display of sheer virtuosity produces a most enjoyable album bearing the lengthy title, Pablo Live Montreux 77, Ray Bryant. Unlike many similar recordings, this is not a jam session. It is the dynamic combination of a capable pianist and a Bosendorfer Concert Grand 275.

Bryant blazes down the keyboard on his opening number, Billy Strayhorn's "Take the 'A' Train." The gifted left hand moves at blinding speed pounding out rhythmic octaves while the right comps and fills with neatly styled blues improvisation. Disregarding the accepted solo pattern familiar to "'A' Train," Bryant creatively transplants a personal version and the result is phenomenal.

The most creative piece of the set is his rendition of John Lewis' "Django." Bryant conducts himself like an orchestra through the thematic introduction, masterfully interpreting the "rubato" feel. He then breaks into a bridge of down home blues playing and ultimately restates the theme. Such excellence in improvisation and control rarely appears in a solo performer.

Despite the new wave, Ray Bryant has not succumbed to contemporary demands. He will always play boogie/blues with uniquely creative improvisations. Norman Granz, the Pablo producer, deserves much applause for this mass exhibition of a keyboard talent previously unknown to the contemporary jazz audience. True virtuosity remains a rarity, thus this album is a must for any serious jazz enthusiast.

Records
Compliments of
Bailey's Music Rooms

Further Pleasantries From Paul

By Russell Flannery

Wings, *London Town

Despite the mid-session departure of the band's lead guitarist, Paul McCartney and Wings' first studio release in two years illustrates a greater imaginative effort than most of their previous ones.

In their seven year history, Wings have been open to suspect by most major American rock critics. Generally, the critics have contended that Wings was simply a band riding on ex-Beatle Paul McCartney's solo aspirations. McCartney, refuting this belief, recorded two albums which gave equal recognition to each member, and engaged in one of 1976's most memorable concert performances. Consequently, the press, for the most part, labeled Wings' musical sound as a distinctive group effort noteworthy of some praise.

London Town, however, finds McCartney and Wings once again 'the band on the run.' Recorded for nearly a year, the band's superior efforts clearly are those recorded prior to the mid-summer departure of Jimmy McClough. And McCartney's typical inconsistency of format doesn't help compensate for the loss of the young guitarist. Yet, despite a few weaker moments, London Town contains the strongest performance to date by the ex-Moody Blues guitarist Denny Laine, and a few magically nostalgic efforts that seem to make the entire project acceptable.

Thus Wings, despite the loss of McClough and an occasional sign of age in McCartney's writing ability, have released a pleasing follow-up to Wings Over America. However, if they can repeat such a feat without McClough, or our equally competent guitarist, I'm sure I'm not the only observer who'll be surprised.

Swing Into Spring With Finast®

Finast has all your favorite snacks waiting...we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruit
- Your favorite cold beverages

825 WILLISTON ST.,
BURLINGTON
VERMONT

Finast

Visit our Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

CLASSIFIED ADS

Rooms & Roomies

1/2 house for rent — Ethan Allen Park area, parking, all utilities, entire lower floor, share large kitchen, bus line, privacy. $100/mo. Call Rick 864-4695 (late).

Roommate wanted — need a place to stay this summer. Have your own room (completely furnished) within 10 minutes from UVM and 5 minutes from downtown for $90 a month in a clean 2 bedroom furnished apartment. Call Scott or Rob at 862-3976.

Apt. to sublet for summer — two bedroom apt. $220/month plus electricity has a beautiful view of the lake right across from Battery Park. Call 862-4896.

Wanted Roommate $60 a month, own room. Call Randy or Aidan at 863-6505.

Roommate wanted — one bedroom available immediately in spacious 3 bedroom apartment, rent $60 plus utilities. 91 Sherman St. Call Michele 863-5273.

Apartment to sublet. 3½ rooms, garage, balcony and all utilities included. $180 a month. June 1st — Sept. 1st. Possibility for next year. Decision must be made by May 1. Location Loomis St. Call 864-4268 after 6 p.m.

Housemate wanted: professional person desired to share rent of $364 plus utilities, located in Shelburne. Call 985-3457 after 6 p.m.

Need money? Couple needs small house or apartment. Country setting preferred $30 reward if your information leads to our occupancy. We have 2 cats and some furniture. Tom 496-2595.

Apartment wanted — 1 or 2 bedroom in Burlington. Pets allowed. Call 862-3654. Ask for Beth.

Looking for a small house or part of one to rent. Beginning May, outside of Burlington, prefers country area. Carpentry skills, will fix or caretake. Responsible people. References available. Please call Caryn 434-3857.

Apt. to sublet for summer, available June 1st. 2 bedrooms, living room, kitchen, completely furnished, for 3 to 4 people. Walking distance from campus. Contact Lauri or Mary Pat at 656-2282.

Wanted — one person to share a nice house in Jericho with 2 men and one woman. Rent $80 + elec. Call Jason, David, or Linda at 899-2043.

Furnished 4 bedroom apartment available to sublet June 1 to end of Aug. N. Willard St. Contact Leslie or Bonnie, 656-3003.

Looking for 3—4 bedroom apt or house (preferably) for summer and next year. Need not be furnished but must have heat. Katherine, 656-3442.

Wanted 4—5 bedroom house or apt. near UVM campus to rent for 78-79 academic year. Furnished or partly furnished if possible. Highest rent paid! Call Bill or John, 302 Davis, 656-2515.

Responsible students seek house to rent near UVM beginning Fall '78. Will handle summer sublet if necessary. Call Daryl, Tom or Frank at 863-3400. Keep trying!

I am a responsible faculty person who is looking for a housesitting position. Have references and will house and yard clean. Friendly with pets. Anywhere in the Burlington — Waterbury — Stowe area. Call 862-8811 and ask for Jill or leave message.

Misc.

1/2 coupon book $22. Call Nancy D. at 3089.

Coupons for sale Full book $47. 1/2 book $24. Call Nancy x2967.

Typing: fast, neat & accurate. Rush jobs accepted. Call Randy at 863-6505. Keep trying.

For sale — kitchen table (very sturdy) & 4 chairs, $15. 2 easy chairs, $15 & $18. Unfinished desk $25 ($40 new). VW bug heater boxes, used 1 summer $40 ($100 new). Full length mirror $5. Set of 3 metal book shelves made to look like wood, $5. Call Joan after 4:30 and on weekends, 862-1052.

A long, old brown muskrat fur coat. Very good condition. Bought for $110, will sell for $70 or best offer. I need the money! Call Linda at 863-3573.

For sale — a grey living room sofa, good condition, asking $35. Call 862-8871 5:30—7:00 p.m. or after 10:00 and ask for Dave.

Potters wheel — electric with variable speed control, 10 inch wheel mounted on small work table. Call Eve at 658-1673.

Care about how your money at UVM is spent? Come to the S.A. Budgetary Assembly, April 19 at Ira Allen Chapel. Voice your opinion on S.A. $175,000 budget.

I am a former Scandinavian Seminar student looking for somebody to speak Danish with once in a while. If interested please call Joanne at 985-2780. Keep trying.

Ride needed to Montreal Wednesday afternoons &/or returning either Wednesday or Thursday night. Will share expenses. Call Hobertha, 862-2446.

Riders needed to Oregon. Leaving in '78 Rabbit May 12th. For more info call Lori 863-3195.

Looking for someone to drive your car out west this summer? Two college students need a car to get out to California. Much driving experience. Call Danny, Davis 313, 656-2516.

Orientation aide positions are open for this summer. The sessions will be June 10-11, 17-18, 19-20 and 24-25. Applications are available at the Counseling and Testing Center, 146 So. Williams St. Any fulltime undergraduate students are eligible.

Students (non-students!) people! Are you considering what you will do with your plants at the end of the semester this summer? I will care for them in my home, they will be waiting for you when you return healthier than before. Experienced Knowledgeable. For more information call Karen. Early mornings 862-0467, evenings 862-2970.

Calculator found near College and S. Williams St. Mike 864-7007.

Lost "Alice" Golden Retriever, 10 month old dark coloring, red collar. Reward. Peter Gobos, 862-0171.

Wanted — part-time worker, three nights a week throughout the summer (June 1 — August 31) in exchange for full board and room. For details please call 864-7467.

Teaching opportunities overseas! English-speaking schools and colleges oversees need teachers and other qualified educational personnel. Some schools overseas require no teaching experience; none require foreign language knowledge. For details contact Friends of World Teaching, P.O. Box 1049, San Diego, CA 92112.

Big brothers & sisters desperately needed in the Winooski area. Please lend a helping hand, call Philip at 655-1050 or 862-5257.

Sights & Sounds

Stereo system for sale. Nikko 5055 receiver, Phillips turntable, Bose 301 speakers, 7 mo. old, in excellent condition, $450. Call Mike at 656-4257 after 6:00 p.m.

Pioneer 8-track home recording deck for sale. Deck has Dolby, recording level controls, time counter, fast forward, and change of program selector, like new condition, $95. John 655-1626.

Vintage AR3 Stereo speakers. New $560. Excellent condition, asking $249 or best offer. Call Rob Huntington at 388-6892 in Middlebury. Or drive down for a sound check.

Marmac cassette tapes. Fine musical reproduction. Never before marketed. Low prices C45, 60, 90 & 120 minutes. Call or stop by Danny, Davis 313, 656-2516.

For sale: one pair of KLH 101 bookshelf speakers. Can handle 70 watts per/channel. Efficient as hell. Must sell $75 or best offer. Call Dave 862-4765.

For sale — 135 mm brand-name lens for Nikon or Nikkormat, with case, only $35. 70-210 zoom lens with Pentax mount, multi-coated lens with built-in hood and case, only $89. Call Roger at 2920, 1-4 only.

Stereo for sale: 4 channel stereo receiver, 4 speakers and a glenburn turntable. Excellent condition. Asking $150. Call Beth at 4081.

Outdoor Equipment

For sale: 1 pr new Kniesel skis 190 cm with warranty $50, 1 Holubar 60-40 excellent condition. Call Peter at 862-1118 after 6.

1 pr. 10½ Puma hardcourt tennis shoes. Worn 1 week. Too big. Were $32, asking $15. Call 425-3091. Ask for Mark.

1 pr. size 5½ Adidas SL-72 running shoes, very good cond., $10. 1 pr. size 8 Asdo hiking boots, used twice, $60 new, asking $40. Call Nancy D at x3089.

Downhill skiing outfit to fit size 11 feet; complete $25; Hifi speaker components; (2)12" coax plus soft dome tweeters all for $20. Call 863-3859 evenings & weekends.

For sale — 100% virgin wool, any ply, natural and dyed colors, $2.00/4 oz. skein (Downtown it's $2.75/4 oz. skein), call Lisa 862-1586.

Dexter sitka hiking boots 7½—8 $35.00. Nordica downhill ski boots, 7—7½ $30.00. Camp 7 down sleeping bag ("High country") 32 oz. 86" x 30" (never used), $80.00. Fiberfill ski jump suit sz. 12, $10.00. Call Lynn, x3085.

1 pr. size 5½ Adidas SL-72 running shoes, very good condition. $10. Also 1 pr. size 8 Asolo hiking boots, used twice, $60 new, asking $40. Call Nancy D. at 3089.

1 pr. never-mounted Rossignol St.-comp's 190 cm. Cost new $210, asking $175, negotiable. Call Doug, 864-5152.

For sale — 1 pr. 190 cm Kneissl blue stars new with warranty $50. Holubar 60/40 parka medium. Call 862-1118.

1 pr. ladies Lowa hiking boots, very sturdy boots, good for rock climbing as well as hiking. Hardly used. Size 6½N New $70. Now $35. Amy 862-0872.

Wheels

For sale: 1972 Volvo 164, 4 speed, AM-FM cassette stereo, radials, driving lights, leather interior, good condition, after 5 p.m. Peter, 656-2289.

For sale: 1 michelin radial tire, like new, size 135x15 (for a Renault 10) $25. Call Peggy x2626 9—1, x2875 2—6.

1973 Saab 99 dependable. Good gas mileage $1500. 1970 VW bug runs well, new brakes and starter. Needs little body work. Asking $800. Call after 6, 434-3176.

1969 Oldsmobile Cutlass 50,000 miles. Good mechanical condition, good body, driven every day. Asking $495. Call Mike, after 6:00, 863-6999.

1969 Scout 304 V8 $350 or best offer. Call 863-9173.

1969 VW bug, fantastic body, runs great, reliable transportation, inspected, radio/clean interior, must see to believe! Call Mary at 862-9475, keep trying.

1974 Vega GT 60,000 miles, good rubber AM-FM $800. Call 863-9198.

1970 VW Sq. back. The body is tragically shot. But the engine is in good shape. (Mechanics take note...) Very cheap price. Call West 863-5829.

DEAR McCEPP

Over the past year, This Department has amassed a number of letters from folks who want McCepp to answer questions ala Dear Abby. Since McCepp is somewhat sagelike, and far more experienced in the ways of the world than most restaurateurs, we felt it would not be altogether inappropriate to at least let him try. Our first letter is from a young woman in Ryegate.

Dear McCepp,

My boyfriend is a Grasshopper Pie Freak. Three times a day we come into your restaurant for Grasshopper Pie. He has it for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. He has also developed a need to crouch in long grass and leap out at people. What should I do?

Ronda Twilly

Dear Ronda,

Our good Grasshopper Pie is available all day long (as is everything on our menu) for people just like your boyfriend. Soon he will become more proficient at crouching in the grass and leaping out at people, and will be able to spit while in mid air. When he begins rubbing his legs together we will slowly switch him over to the Spanish Omelet. Within six weeks he'll be the highest leaping Flamenco Dancer this side of Madrid.

McCepp

You, too, can get your questions answered. Send your query to This Department, Box 875, Burlington, 05401. Or, visit McCepp's anytime for a personal answer to your problem.

P.S. The food is great.

DINNER SERVED TILL MIDNIGHT
McCepp's
Burlington Square
Breakfast, lunch and dinner served all day

CHEESE SPECIALS

| | |
|---|---|
| Muenster | 1.29/lb. |
| Muenster Loaf | 1.15/lb. |
| Swedish Fontina | 1.95/lb. |
| Wisconsin Cheddar | 1.59/lb. |
| French Brie | 2.50/lb. |

Plus many other cheeses, cheesecake "seconds" & homemade quiche

CHEESE OUTLET
398 PINE ST

EUROPE
less than 1/2 economy fare
Call toll free: (800) 325-4867
Guaranteed Reservations — or see your travel agent
Unitravel Charters inc

RESEARCH

Send only two dollars (to cover postage) for your copy of our latest mail-order catalog of over 7,000 research papers.

- Quality Unsurpassed
- Fast, Dependable Service
- Speeches, Reports, etc.

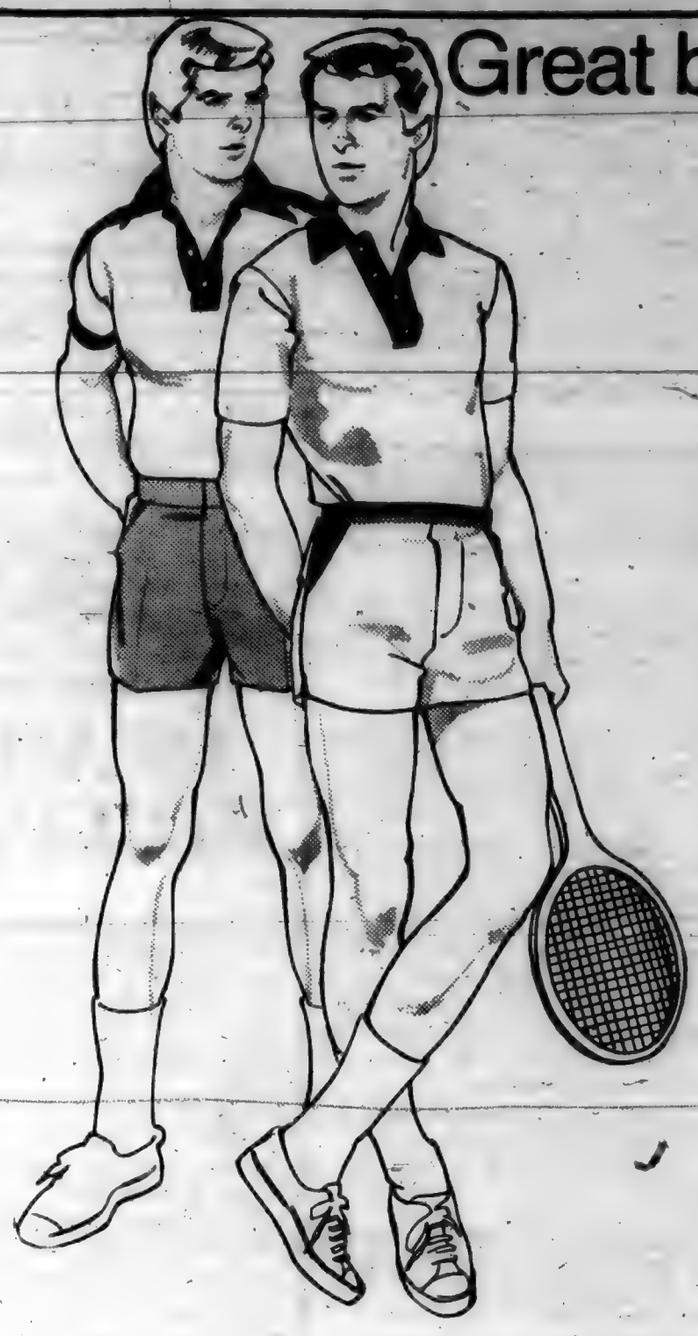
All Materials Sold For Research Assistance Only

AUTHORS' RESEARCH SERVICES INC
407 South Dearborn Street, Suite 600
Chicago, Illinois 60605
312-922-0300

TYPING, etcetera



Professional Typing and Typesetting.
Use of Compugraphic IV 32 Type Faces-
Posters, Brochures, Ads
Business Cards,
Stationery, Professional Reports, etc.
Call 879-7652
Keep Trying!

Summer Positions

Summer camp for boys seeks qualified and dedicated University students for openings as Instructor/Dormitory Counsellor. Openings in fields of tennis, swimming (WSI preferred), riflery, nature conservation and axemanship. Laundry, room and board with salary range of $550 to $850. For application, write: Mowglis, School of the Open, East Hebron, N.H. 03232. Eight week season.

This is our Anniversary Sale.

Great buys. Winning looks.

Sale 8.80
Reg. $11. Men's tennis shirt with color-contrast shoulder stripe. Machine washable.

Sale 6.40
Reg. $8. Men's basic tennis short. European 2 button front tab, slit side, adjustable side tabs.

Sale $8
Reg. $10. Good-looking men's tennis shirt. White body with contrast collar and placket. Machine washable. S,M,L,XL.

Sale 9.60
Reg. $12. Men's polyester knit tennis short. Stretch shirt hugger waist band, contrast trim. Machine washable. Solid white, or with colors.

Sale 3.99 each
Men's fashion gym short. Converse T-shirt. Puma T-shirt.

Sale 2.99 each
All purpose white cotton short. All purpose colored cotton short.

Sale 10.39
Reg. 12.99. Rawlings "Reggie Jackson" autograph fielder's glove.
Vinyl & leather fielder's baseball glove, Reg. 6.99. Sale 5.59
Rawlings "Tom Seaver" baseball glove, Reg. 22.99. Sale 18.39

Sale 12.79
Franklin Reg. 15.99
Franklin suede leather training shoe. Wrap around heel design, padded collar. Sizes 2-11, 12.

Sale 8.88
Wilson
Reg. 15.99 Wilson Stan Smith Slammer tennis racket.

Sale 29.99
Wilson
Reg. 39.99 Wilson Kramer autograph wood tennis racket. Nylon string; leather grip.

Sale 34.99
Dunlop
Reg. 39.99 Maxply® Fort tennis racket. Made of 7 different woods.

Sale 29.99
Wilson
Reg. 39.99 Wilson Chris Evert autograph tennis racket.

Penn Centre Court tennis balls.
Reg. 2.39 Sale 1.99

Louisville Slugger baseball glove, Reg. 29.99. Sale 23.99
Official league baseball, 1.49

Sale 4.99
American
Reg. 6.99. All purpose vinyl athletic shoe. Multi-stud sole.

Save 2.30
Wilson-By-Bata
Reg. 12.99 Sale 10.39 Men's "Super Volley" tennis shoe has canvas uppers and polyurethane sole. Padded tongue and collar. White with blue trim.
Women's "Super Volley" tennis shoe, Reg. 11.99 Sale 9.59

Sale 7.99
Reg. 9.99. Aluminum Little League bat. One piece construction. 2¼" barrel.
Baseball batters glove, 3.99
Glove oil, 99¢

Bus and Parking Garage validation available
tel: 863-6881

This Is JCPenney
Downtown Burlington

Store hours:
Monday-Friday 9:30-9:00
Saturdays 9:30-5:30

FREE

VERMONT CYNIC

FREE

VOLUME XCV NUMBER 22 "Are you a lowlife? Ask Professor Bliss." APRIL 13, 1978

Who Really Holds The Power Tuition D[ecision]?

By Soc[rates]

The $100 in-st[ate tuition] increase and the trimming of pro[posed] salary increases are the result[s] of an appropriation which did not [meet] the university's needs, [UVM] President Coor said Tuesday.

Coor announced the tuition hike his "deepest [regret]" and said the decision to cut [funds] in the fiscal 1979 budget [from] 7 to 6 percent was the "least [worst] choice."

[In-]state tuition will rise by $245 in the [budget] drawn up by the administration. [It is] to be presented to trustees Friday. The out-of-state increase brings the total cost of tuition to $3,735, and the rise represents an increase of 7 percent, the consumer price index figure the university uses as its inflation figure.

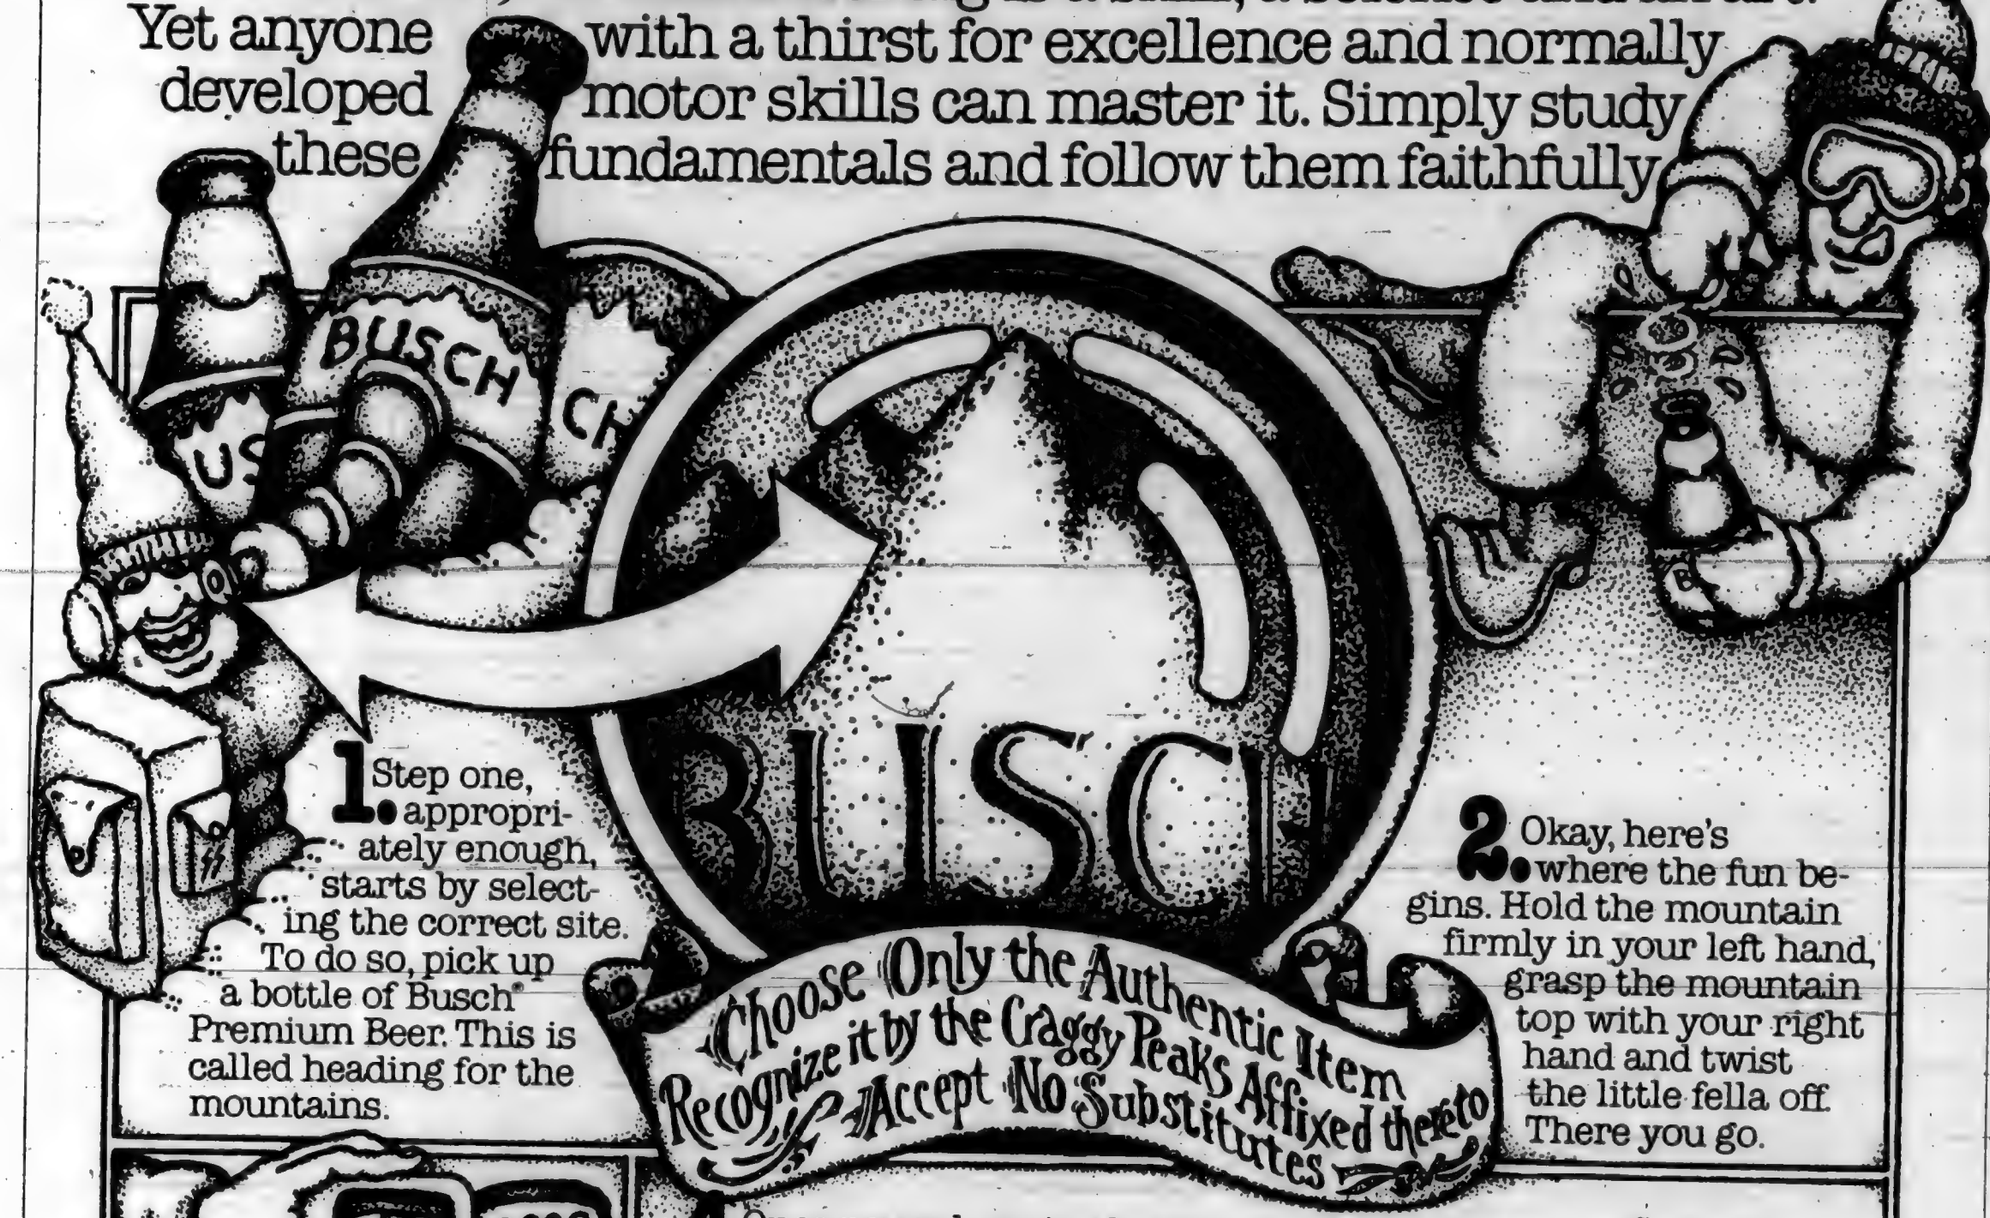
The rise in in-state tuition, including the 3.3 percent hike proposed by the administration, will bring the sum to $1,300.

Projected general fund income for the university during fiscal 1979 is $44.9 million, [an] increase of $3.34 million over the [1978] budget. The deficit that had been accordingly, Coor said that about a half-million dollars worth of cutbacks, or "performance improvements," as he termed them, had to be made. The main victim of those cutbacks was the reduction of faculty salaries, which Coor said was an "agonizing choice."

"Our faculty leadership is not happy" about the pay deferments, Coor said. Since 1972, faculty members have lost about 16 percent in purchasing power because of previous deferments of potential pay raises.

While Coor regretted that the faculty were the ones who were going to have to suffer in the fiscal 1979 budget, along with in-state students, he said that in subsequent years, the cutbacks will be made in a "new, more targeted" manner. He said that this "targeted" approach could not have been used this year because of a new budgeting system that had been employed.

The [state] appropriated for UVM in fiscal 1979 is $19,[xxx,xxx] more [than] last [year].



Snelling, Coor had warned the legislators in February that unless this amount was increased, in-state tuition would most likely rise. UVM's intention had been to hold in-state tuition at a constant level of $1,200.

There has been some speculation as to why the governor recommended the $300,000 figure, seeing as last week, he chastized the legislature for giving the Vermont State Colleges a financial bonus and leaving UVM out of the bonus picture. Coor had initially approached the legislature requesting about $1.2 million extra, but was forced to accept the reduced sum "as the head of any state agency would," as one legislator put it.

Mountaineering #1.

FUNDAMENTALS OF MOUNTAINEERING

What is mountaineering all about? Funny you should ask. Because we just happen to have an answer. (Ah-h, life's little coincidences.) Mountaineering is a skill, a science and an art. Yet anyone with a thirst for excellence and normally developed motor skills can master it. Simply study these fundamentals and follow them faithfully

1. Step one, appropriately enough, starts by selecting the correct site. To do so, pick up a bottle of Busch® Premium Beer. This is called heading for the mountains.

2. Okay, here's where the fun begins. Hold the mountain firmly in your left hand, grasp the mountain top with your right hand and twist the little fella off. There you go.

3. Now for the tricky part. Neophytes, listen up: the proper pour is straight down the center of the glass. Only in this way will the cold, invigorating taste of the mountain come to a head.

4. Once poured, pacing becomes paramount. As any seasoned mountaineer will tell you, the only way to down a mountain is slowly, smoothly and steadily – savoring every swallow of the brew that is Busch. If you're a bit awkward at first, don't be discouraged. Perfection takes practice. Soon enough, having emptied your glass and filled your soul, you too will be a mountaineer.

Fig.1 Before Mountaineering. Fig.2 During Mountaineering. Fig.3 After Mountaineering.

Premium Beer.

Don't just reach for a beer. BUSCH® Head for the mountains.

© 1978 Anheuser-Busch, Inc. St. Louis, Mo.

Faculty Senate Passes Course Withdrawal Proposal; Liggett Criticizes Senate's Attitude Toward Students

By Robert J. Moore

Despite Faculty Senate passage of a course withdrawal proposal with only two possibilities, pass or fail, Student Association President Geoff Liggett said he was "appalled" by the senate's attitude concerning students and their demands.

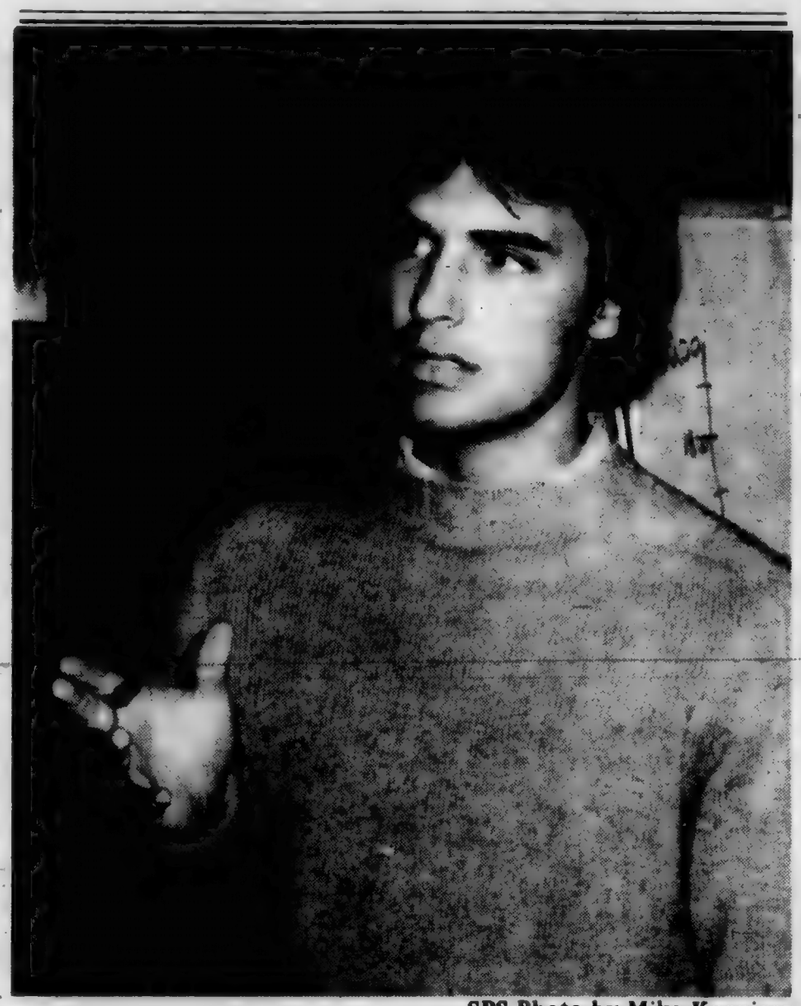
"Students are treated as a joke," said Liggett, who described the Faculty Senate's outlook as an "outrage." Students are "demeaned" and their requests are spoken of in "jest," he said. This is evidenced by the comments made by faculty members during the meetings. Liggett said he had come in contact with this attitude other times when he had attended Faculty Senate meetings.

Liggett, a strong proponent of the add/drop and withdrawal proposals, was "pretty happy" with the overall outcome of the meeting.

The withdrawal provisions passed by the Senate would be university-wide in application and would allow a student to withdraw from a course from the end of the third week of the semester to the end of the ninth. On the student's transcript would be recorded either WP or WF, indicating withdrawal passing or withdrawal failing, as determined by the instructor. The grade of WP would not enter into the grade point average, but WF would still be treated as an F.

Presently, withdrawal is dealt with through the individual colleges, a practice which often results in quite different treatment of students depending upon which college is responsible for the course they are withdrawing from. The withdrawal provision has been hailed as a solution to this problem because it would provide a standard policy for all the colleges in the university.

Chris Allen, Chairman of Academic Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate, and sponsor of the provisions, defended the withdrawal policy against criticism by deans that they were eliminated from the process, by stating that past attempts to get the deans to agree on a common policy had failed and that the "only solution" was to "obviate" the Dean's office.



Criticism of the provisions also came from Francis Bliss of the classics department, who said the new policy allowed "sitting dogs" to remain in a class after the drop period had ended only to withdraw without penalty if they so chose. The other students should not be penalized for these "low lifes," said Bliss.

The Faculty Senate also passed a proposal that would extend the add period to three weeks, the same as the drop period.

Criticism of the proposal centered around teacher's contentions that students adding a course into the third week would cause disharmony in the class and would force the instructor to reorganize the course structure. One faculty member said that a student would not be able to make up the material and do well in a course after missing three weeks. If a student can miss three weeks of lectures and still be able to properly make up the material without his performance being affected, then the course should be examined and evaluated, he said.

"Students are treated as a joke."

—S.A. President Geoff Liggett

SPS Photo by Mike Koeniges

Liggett raised the case of a student who has been sitting in on a class for the three weeks, deciding whether or not to take the course. Liggett saw "no detriment involved" in the proposal.

It was also noted that making the add and drop periods equal would enable students to take more advantage of late drops. Currently, many drops occur after the add period has ended and desirable course enrollments go unfilled.

Earlier, the Senate rejected a proposal to extend the drop period from three to four weeks. The provision met staunch criticism and was soundly defeated. If passed, it would have been followed by a proposal to extend the add period to four weeks also.

Liggett was surprised that the Senate rejected the earlier proposal but then went on to pass most of the other provisions, although often in an amended form. After the first provision was defeated, he expected the other provisions to also be defeated. "I don't think half the faculty knows what they voted on," said Liggett.

Tuition and Fees to Increase

Continued from page one

Other speculation has addressed the possibility that the legislature reacted negatively to Coor's request because (1) it would be a form of backlash to Snelling who has been at odds with some legislators or, (2) because of UVM's handling of the Bishop's house affair. Snelling is in a touchy situation because his wife, Barbara, is UVM's vice president for development and external affairs, and too big a recommendation by Snelling for UVM's additional allocation from the legislature might be construed as representing a conflict of interest.

Whether or not it is either the legislators who bear some form of grudge against UVM, be it either direct or indirect, or whether Snelling has walked softly to avoid a stir, UVM has ended up on the short side of appropriations.

Final approval of the tuition increases will not take place until the trustees meet in June, but the entire budget will be discussed by the board this weekend.

UVM President Lattie F. Coor (above) described the $100 in-state tuition hike as "deepest disappointment."

The tuition hikes are expected to net UVM $1.4 million from the out-of-state increases and $158,000 from the in-state increases, but Coor expressed some dismay at recent enrollment projections for next year concerning Vermonters. He said this shift in enrollment patterns, one which assumes that in-state applications have dropped off, is one "that we don't fully understand." He said these declining enrollment statistics will bring "somewhat fewer full-time Vermonters next year" to the university. Still, he emphasized that UVM will keep its "Vermont dominant policy" which maintains preference for Vermont students in terms of the proportion to the total university population.

In terms of all allocations made by the state, UVM now receives about 7 percent, which Coor said is a slight turn-around from a trend that the university had been subject to. State appropriations to UVM, now 23 years old, grew at first and then plateaued, he said. The appropriation to UVM as compared to the total allocated by the state, had once been about 9.7 percent, but then dropped to 6.7 percent two years ago. And although Coor said this most recent appropriation is one that is "hard to characterize," he indicated that the trend is now one which has apparently become more favorable for the university.

When asked about the possibility of the in-state tuition increases leaving the "middle class" Vermonter unable to afford the cost of attending UVM, Coor could not respond other than to say he was deeply concerned about the possibility. S.A. Vice President Linda Purdy pointed out that because only 40 percent of in-state students at the university receive financial aid from the Vermont Student Assistance Corporation, more than a majority of Vermont students at UVM would have to absorb this tuition hike themselves.

Coor also said he is "puzzled" by the way in which local legislators have consistently voted against allocating money to UVM, most notably surrounding the recent appropriation for the gymnasium. He said that although the university has had an "active program" in meeting and talking with the Chittenden County legislative delegation, "we're obviously going to have to do a better job."

ROOM AND BOARD FEES

The fees for room, board and health have not been exempt from this year's round of increases, either.

The room fee, which will rise $72 under the administration's proposal, represents an increase of 8 percent. Coor said the room increase is split into two parts – that $46 of the increase is to combat inflation and that the remaining $26 is for "capitalizing overall renovation." Coor said the room fee must "pay the true cost" of running the dormitories and planning for future renovation and construction. He cited the upcoming remodeling of Coolidge Hall, which he said will cost about $600,000, and added that as the building presently exists, it is "almost uninhabitable."

The board fee increase of $54 can be mainly attributed to the influence of the recent rise in the minimum wage, Coor said. The board fee represents a 7.6 percent increase and brings the total to $764 per year. The new room fee would come in at a cost of $970.

An increase of $4 to the health fee brings the total boost in student fees, exclusive of tuition, to $130. Thus, an in-stater living on campus will be

(continued on page 9)

Index

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| News | 3 | Sports | 25 |
| Briefs | 10 | Profile | 30 |
| Commentary | 11 | Sports Briefs | 34 |
| Features | 13 | Random Notes | 35 |
| Basic Health | 14 | Calendar | 36 |
| Editorial | 22 | Arts | 37 |
| Op-Ed | 23 | Classified | 46, 47 |

finbars

soup salad sandwiches homemade deserts daily special serving from 12–8
167 main st., burlington

hair Unlimited

Expert in Cutting, Coloring, Permanents and Henna for Men and Women

Mon.-Sat. 8:30-5:00 Tues.&Thurs. Evenings Until 8:00
863-3191
165 Dorset St. next to University Mall on the Bus Line

Tops
Solids, Prints and Strips
Skirts
Solids, Prints and Strips

Fashion ames at...
Fashion Lane
CORNER OF WILLISTON & HINESBURG ROADS

Pulitzer Prize Winner to Keynote Student Forum

Frances Fitzgerald

The Pulitzer Prize-winning author and Vietnam War correspondent Frances Fitzgerald will speak Friday (April 14) at the University of Vermont on "American Power and Our Changing Self-Image."

Her free public lecture at 8 p.m. in Carpenter Auditorium, Given Building, will be the keynote address for a Student Forum on Third World topics presented Friday and Saturday by UVM students as part of the Vermont Seminars at the University, which this semester has included a section on "U.S. Power and the Third World." The Forum has been organized by students enrolled in the Worldwide Program at the Living/Learning Center.

The keynote speaker won the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award for Fire in the Lake, which describes the collision of Eastern and Western values which led to the Vietnam War. The book was based in part on her experience as a free-lance correspondent in Vietnam during the War, an experience which also earned her the 1967 Overseas Press Club Award for best interpretation of foreign affairs. She currently teaches at the University of California, Berkeley.

Following Ms. Fitzgerald's Friday speech, three UVM foreign students enrolled in the Worldwide Program will respond to her presentation. They are Patricia Marshall of Jamaica, Theodore Watler of Honduras, and Roger Cutler of Quebec.

Ms. Fitzgerald will remain on campus Saturday to take part in the day-long Student Forum in 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center, where university students will present papers and other work prepared in connection with the Vermont Seminars. The Forum will include panel discussions on "The Rising Third World," "The Middle East Crisis," and "Multi-national Corporations and Agribusiness."

All events are free.

Anti-Nuke Interests Set Back by U.S. Supreme Court Decision

By Hamilton W. Sorrell

Anti-nuclear environmentalists were dealt a devastating setback last week by the U.S. Supreme Court when they ruled a lower court overstepped its boundaries in saying the government has not made enough effort to protect the public from nuclear waste hazards.

In a unanimous decision, the court's opinion, written by Justice William H. Rehnquist, said, "Time may prove wrong the decision to develop nuclear energy, but it is Congress, or the states within their appropriate agencies, which must eventually make that judgment."

The high court's ruling overturned a decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, which the justices said greatly exceeded its authority to review the decisions and policies of federal agencies. The appeals court had ruled in 1976 that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission violated the National Environmental Policy Act when it permitted the Vermont Yankee Nuclear power plant in Vernon to begin full operation in 1972.

After the appeals court had issued its decision, Vermont Yankee and 15 other nuclear power companies appealed it. The court had stated that the NRC did not consider properly atomic wastes produced by Vermont Yankee when the plant was granted a license to begin full operation. The appeals court also ordered the commission to upgrade its regulations relating to nuclear waste.

The Supreme Court called the decision by the lower court "Monday morning quarterbacking" in that such courts are only allowed to play a limited role in dealing with the actions of federal regulatory agencies.

The decision is considered an important victory for the nuclear power industry because (1) challenges from environmentalists will now have less solid ground on which to stand and, (2) the NRC might have been ordered to find better methods of disposing of nuclear waste.

In Vermont town meetings last year, over 30 towns voted to prevent waste from the Vernon plant (or any other, for that matter) from being trucked through their towns to a storage site. This year, Rutland also voted at its town meeting to prevent such transport.

If the Supreme Court had not overturned a lower court's decision, Vermont Yankee's license might have been revoked and the plant shut down until a solution for the proper disposal of the waste was found.

The Supreme Court did, however, order the appeals court to review the licensing procedures as set forth by the NRC for such power plants. The justices warned the lower court to conduct its review solely on the merits of the rules and not on how they have been adopted.

Anthony Roisman, a lawyer for the New England Coalition on Nuclear Power – the group primarily responsible for bringing the original suit – said the high court "must have felt a little uncomfortable" with current regulations.

In a related matter, Rep. James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., said comprehensive action by the federal government is needed to resolve the problem of nuclear waste disposal. Jeffords was addressing nuclear power executives during their Executive Conference in Buford, Ga.

Jeffords said, "We have always been told this solution is a few years down the road, but that the government is working on it and we shouldn't worry. But it's been over 30 years now, and the solution is still a few years down the road, so people are beginning to worry."

Library Expansion Has Begun

The University of Vermont has issued a letter of intent to contract with the firm of Sweet Associates of Schenectady, N.Y. for construction of the addition to Bailey Library.

Low bidder on the project (which with furnishings, etc. will total $4.3 million), Sweet has already begun work on the site. Substantial completion of the building is anticipated by July 15, 1979, according to UVM Executive Vice President Richard W. Powers, who expressed pleasure at the prompt start of site preparation by the contractor.

Dr. Powers noted that the University's investment banker, Goldman, Sachs and Company, has advised the University that the terms of the bonds for the project can be expected to fall within the limits established at the March meeting of the UVM Board of Trustees. Those limits required that the bonds be sold at terms that would generate an annual library fee increase no greater than $4 per student.

University trustees will meet April 14 and 15 to consider the final form of the bonding indenture and the offer for the sale of bonds to be presented by Goldman and Sachs. Signing of the final contract with Sweet Associates pends acceptance of those documents.

Sweet Associates have broken ground on the $4.3 million library expansion.
SPS Photo by Donald Cunningham

The $4.3 million library expansion project will be paid for from multiple sources. The State of Vermont has appropriated $1 million toward the project, the University will raise $1 million from private sources, and bonds will be issued for the remaining $2.3 million, to be repaid by the student library fee. The current fee of $30 per year is used to repay the bonds issued for the construction of the current Bailey Library. The financing of the library expansion will require a continuation of the library fee in an amount no greater than $34 per year for an additional 18 years.

UVM's Bailey Library was dedicated in 1961 when enrollment was 3,600 students. The building was planned to accommodate the library requirements of a projected student body of 4,400. Today, twice that many students use the facilities: 7,680 undergraduates, 940 graduate students, and 322 medical students. The collection of volumes and documents has also grown commensurately, taking up valuable seating space.

Revision of Copyright Laws Will Cost Lane Series $3,000

Non-profit institutions are no longer exempt from paying royalty fees.

By Robert J. Moore

Due to recent revisions in music copyright laws which no longer allow non-profit establishments to be exempt from paying royalty fees, Lane Series expenses will rise approximately $3000 a year or nine cents per student, spokesmen for the University of Vermont said last week.

The jump in expenses will result in the university being obliged to pay royalties for copyrighted music played at campus events and on WRUV, the campus radio station.

Licensing organizations for composers will receive the royalty fees.

UVM is in the process of obtaining general licenses from three such organizations: the Society of European Stage, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and Broadcast Music Inc.

The Society of European Stage will charge UVM about $180 a year for a license, according to Robert Stanfield, executive assistant in the president's office. Stanfield said the fee for Broadcast Music will run close to $500 a year, while the American Society's fee is expected to be $550 a year. The size of the fees is based on guidelines composed by the Higher Education Association, and assume a full-time student population of 9,700.

There is some uncertainty whether the licenses will permit music broadcast by WRUV because the station can be heard off-campus.

The director of the Lane Series, Terrance Demas, described portions of the revised laws as being "objectionable," and said some of the licensing organizations were "pushy."

In accordance with the new laws, performances for which the artist's fee exceeds $1,000 will merit extra fees. Demas said almost every performance sponsored by the Lane Series would fall into the extra fee category because of the scarcity of artists who will appear for less than $1,000.

Broadcast Music will require the extra fee only when copyrighted music is used, but the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will demand the fee even on uncopyrighted material which is under public juriadiction.

Demas said that because ticket prices are presently quite high, the Lane Series will attempt to find the funds to meet the increased expenses through other means.

Performers are not allowed to pay royalties for the music they play under provisions of the American Federation of Musicians.

THE RATHSKELLER

Steamers Fri. 4-6

Reduced Drink Prices Daily 4-6

Extensive Seafood Menu

We Welcome Reservations

For Fine Dining in a Unique Atmosphere
BEHIND BENNINGTON NORTH ON COLLEGE ST.
Open Daily For Dinner and Luncheon
Brunch Saturday
863-4429
127½ College Burlington

mk

THE ORIGINAL MANCHESTER

Our waterproofed pima cotton jacket is made for us in England. Tartan lined, ventilated yoke, zipper front, knit stand up collar and cuffs. British tan, natural, navy. Even sizes 38-46, Longs 40-46. $50.
Also . . . a wash and wear poly/cotton blend, $35

Michael Kehoe Ltd
GENTLEMENS FURNISHINGS
CHURCH & COLLEGE STREETS • BURLINGTON

Using Classroom Knowledge in 'Real World' Situations

By John Letteri

In an effort to enlighten freshman students about the academic and non-academic opportunities open to them, the Freshman Evaluation Program presented a panel discussion of "UVM and the Community," which stressed "a chance to test the theories you learn in the classroom out in the field."

The panel was composed of Tom Hudspeth of the Environmental Program, Chuck Sheketoff of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) and Kami Oliver, assistant director of the Center for Service Learning.

Hudspeth's environmental program consists of research and communication branches to enhance the learning experience. For example, in co-operation with Vermont Educational Television, the environmental program produced fifteen one hour programs on different aspects of community interest. In addition, the program provides workshops during the school year and the summer that deal specifically with environmental concerns and possible solutions. He contends that one of the most important aspects of the program is that the Extension Service provides an extensive network of contacts in government and private industry to help place students in jobs. The service further provides a liaison between the community and the university that allows the knowledge of the university to be disseminated in the community and vice versa. The Extension Service today, however, "is antiquated and needs to be updated," according to Hudspeth.

Sheketoff spoke of VPIRG's opportunity for direct student involvement with environmental issues. For example, through his efforts in VPIRG, UVM student David White was able to get Dioxin chemicals banned in pesticides. Through student effort, VPIRG will have a "Celebration of the Sun" on May third, which they say will raise energy consciousness through exhibits and films. "Student research skills in environmental advocacy, lobbying techniques, and job opportunities are greatly enhanced" by active student participation in VPIRG, Sheketoff said.

The Center for Service Learning offers students direct involvement with the community through programs such as Big Brother/Big Sister, and volunteer positions in other human service agencies. The degree of student involvement ranges from one to two hours a week to a full-time commitment in the University Year for Action. Ms. Oliver said that "even though the students are providing a much needed service (through Big Brother/Big Sister, Adopt a Grandparent, Correctional Center Visitation, etc.) to the community, they are learning a great deal too."

VPIRG

THE VERMONT PUBLIC INTEREST RESEARCH GROUP

UVM Students March to Promote Solar Energy Day

A group of thirty-five students carrying posters and banners with the words "Solar energy means jobs" and other slogans promoting energy alternatives, formed lines Monday along Main Street in order to publicize Sun Day, a solar energy celebration to take place May 3.

The students are working with the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG).

The week of May 3 through May 9 has been officially proclaimed Sun Week by the Vermont Legislature, and a number of activities will take place across the state.

Activities for Sun Week in the Burlington area are now being planned, and include a variety of panel discussions, workshops, and demonstrations of alternative energy equipment. The main event will be "Sun Fair '78" which will be held on Redstone Green at UVM on Saturday, May 6.

According to Judy Vanderryn, one of the student organizers, "The goal of Sun Day is to let people know that many forms of renewable energy are available now. We don't need to wait 20 or 30 years to begin developing these sources."

VPIRG Sun Day organizer Rob Wilke stated, "It is time we stopped relying on finite resources for our energy needs. Major emphasis must be placed on conservation and renewable energy sources such as the sun, wind, wood, and water to replace our dependence on oil, coal, and uranium. I hope Sun Day will provide the boost we need to shift our energy priorities."

Vermont Sun Day is being organized by a coalition of energy and environmental groups including VPIRG, Solar Association of Vermont (SAVE), Vermont Tomorrow, Northern Design, Vermont Friends of the Earth, and a representative from Congressman Jeffords' office.

Dam Proposal Condemned by VPIRG

The Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has challenged a proposal by a joint American-Canadian study team calling for a dam to relieve flooding problems on the banks of Lake Champlain and the Richelieu River, citing environmental damages to wetlands and wildlife habitat as primary drawbacks to the plans.

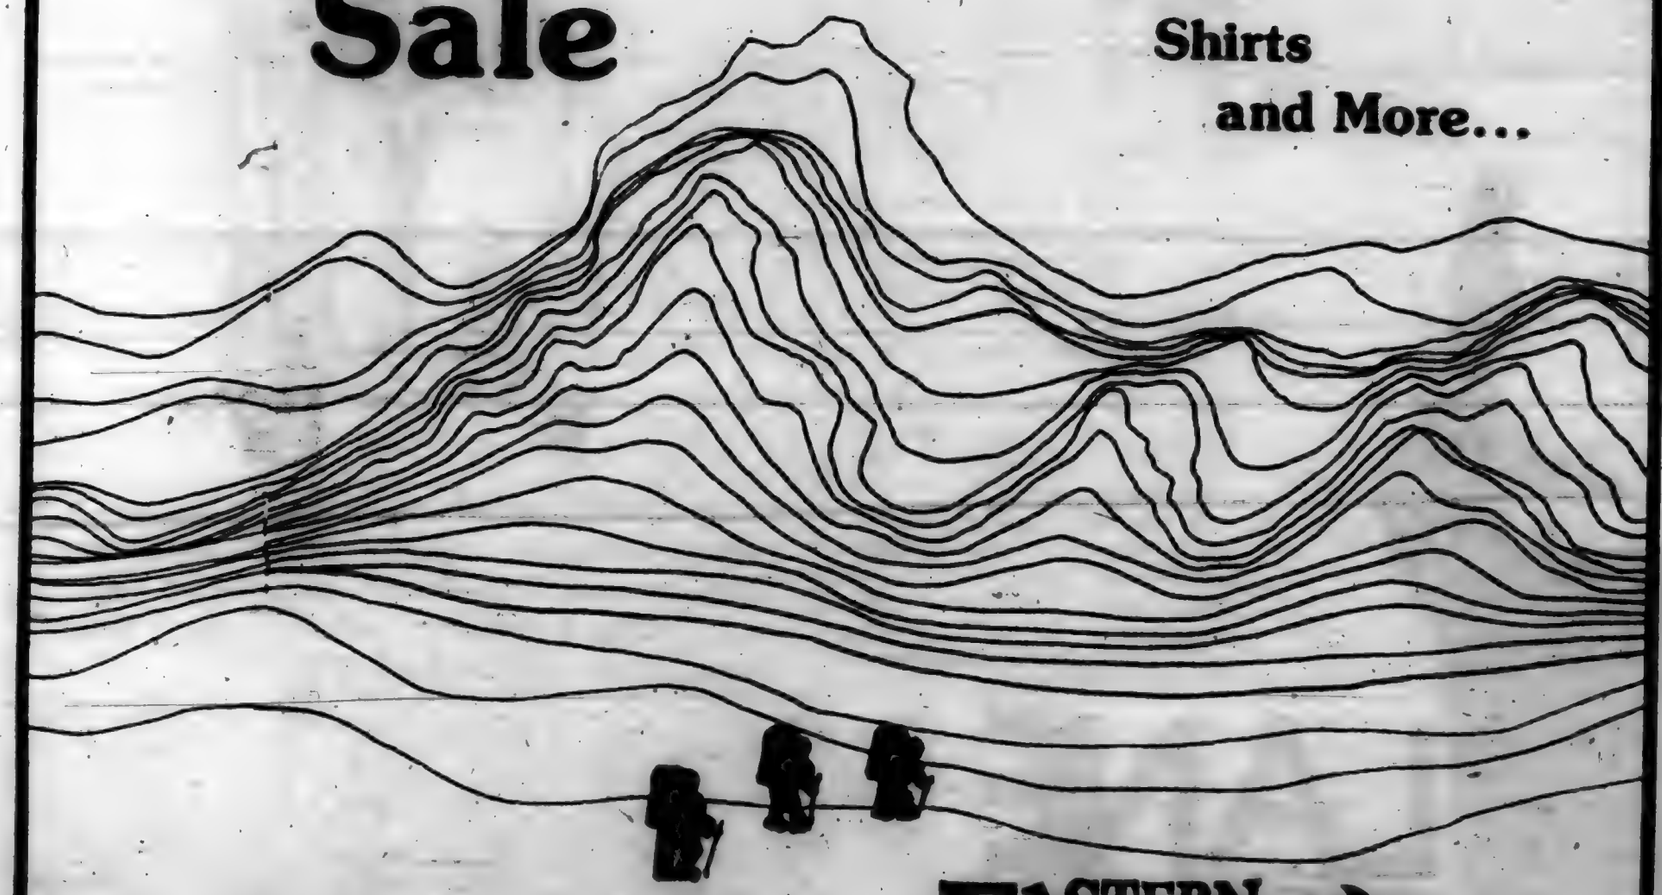
"The report has downplayed dramatically the environmental costs of the proposed dam, and played into the hands of Richelieu River developers," said VPIRG assistant director Leigh Seddon. "Environmental values are often not as immediate and obvious as a flooded home on a river-plain, and the dam proposal shows this inherent bias," he said.

A flood forecasting and warning system and flood plain regulation would be implemented in addition to the structure's construction, if the plan is adopted. The combination, based on 1977 cost figures, will be priced at over $16 million dollars, a price tag to be shared equally by the American and Canadian governments. By selectively lowering lake levels, the dam is promised to reduce flood damages along the upper Richelieu and around Champlain by about 70%.

The recommendations were made in a report released six weeks ago by the International Champlain Richelieu Board, established in 1973 by the International Joint Commission to study recent regional flooding problems.

According to the report, flooding in the Champlain-Richelieu region has been "acute" since 1969. Most often a spring occurrence, floods account for damages of $3,700,000, a figure on the rise. Summer cottages compose the largest percentage of damage stricken buildings. Permanent residences and recreational facilities, along with shoreline erosion and reduced agricultural production, account for other losses.

The report concludes that increased aquatic weed growth has caused the rise in lake levels 1/2 to 1 foot above what they were 40 years ago. Seddon has agreed, but directs attention to Canadian development and canal construction along the Richelieu as other important contributory factors. "The trend is for even more flood plain development and channelization resulting in greater flood damages," Seddon said.



VPIRG accused the Board of downplaying the environmental and social costs of a dam. "A floodgate on the Richelieu River may affect 20% of critical adjacent wetlands. The report neglected to include the true values of these vital areas. Recent research at the University of Vermont estimates the value of wetlands at nearly $1000 an acre, much higher than did the study group."

Two state biologists have

(continued on page 9)

EMS
Spring
Sale

Parkas
Sleeping Bags
Tents
Skis
Packs
Shirts
and More...

Now Going on.
Sale Ends Saturday.

EASTERN MOUNTAIN SPORTS
100 Dorset St.

Peter P. Smith:

Running to Replace Buckley for Lt. Governor

On March 22, Peter P. Smith announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor. So far, Smith is the second candidate to bid for the state's number two post and faces State Senator and UVM trustee, Alfred Beauchamp of Rutland. While Lt. Gov. T. Garry Buckley has yet to release re-election plans, speculation is that he will run. Consequently, a three-way Republican Lt. Gov. primary may shape up as the hottest political race come September. The winner of the three will most likely have to overcome Democrat Madeleine Kunin of Burlington, the present Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Peter Smith has been the President of the Community College of Vermont since its inception in 1970, and will be resigning in June. Smith, a 32 year old native of Burlington, lives in Middlesex with his wife, Sally, and their two children. He comes from a prominent Republican family: his grandfather, Levi P. Smith, served as Lt. Gov. in 1927-28; his father, Frederick P. Smith, was a state senator from Chittenden County; and his brother, Charles, is a representative from Burlington.

Cynic: Why are you running now?

Smith: I think the timing is right. I've had a lot of support from Republicans who want to see young people running for office. I think it's a myth that the Republican party is not open to young people. Friends tell me, "We always knew you were going to do this." I think my campaign is going to be a real surprise.

Cynic: How are you financing your campaign?

Smith: I've raised $4,000 already. I hope I can raise $20,000. I plan to spend between $20 and $25 thousand. Any candidate has to make a considerable financial commitment if he expects others to make a financial commitment. I plan to spend a minimum of $1,000 of my own money. If you're an unknown who's willing to work hard, $25,000 is a reasonable figure; and that's for the primary alone.

Cynic: How do you rate Lt. Gov. Buckley's performance?

Smith: Erratic. He bears some responsibility as a leader for the backlog of bills in the Senate. I give him A+ in getting the attention of the public: he's the Phyllis Diller of Vermont politics!

I give him poor grades for his unwillingness to work with the Governor. I think I would be the strongest opponent to Buckley, and the strongest opponent to Madeleine Kunin in November. I feel I can strengthen the statewide Republican ticket.

Cynic: Lt. Gov. Buckley has charged that you don't have any political experience and that you are running on a family name.

Smith: That's what I call "Buckley's Bluster." He's like a guy who goes hunting with a machine gun and everytime something moves, he fires a burst. Families are important for anybody, and you can't grow up in a family that talks about state government and affairs of state and not have an interest in politics. I don't have a lot of political experience, but I want to learn. Politics is not an elitist concept; it's a democratic one. The issue is whether I can learn fast enough to be helpful.

Cynic: Will Buckley run?

Smith: Common sense has to tell you he will. He doesn't duck a fight.

Cynic: What do you think of Beauchamp added to Buckley?

Smith: They're two peas in a pod. It remains to be seen how votes will be split. But I'll benefit from a three-way race. Buckley told me privately that a three-way race made it more difficult for him. But publicly he said the more the merrier.

I'm going to run a positive campaign based on issues of concern to the people. If Buckley wants to throw mud, let him.

Cynic: How do you rate Senator Beauchamp?

Smith: I give him high marks personally. I like him. But his record as a leader is lackluster. What has Sen. Beauchamp done for Vermont? Your guess is as good as mine.

Cynic: What are your major issues?

Smith: Small business support and development; that means jobs. I think large business already has received attention.

Controlling local property taxes. Young people can't afford homes, fixed income people can't afford to hold on to what they've got.

State education. As goes state aid to education, so goes local education. We have to reassess what strings are attached to state aid. Towns should have discretion on how to spend it.

Cynic: The Lt. Gov. has the job of presiding over the State Senate. Can you handle the Senate?

Smith: I have a great deal of respect for the Senators and I think they'll respond to leadership that listens. I see my role as expediting matters. Last session, 200 House bills never got Senate action. The Lt. Gov. has to work more closely with the House leadership. I do have things to learn. If I move legislation-action as well as deliberation, I think the Senators will like that.

Cynic: How do you perceive the office of Lt. Gov.?

Smith: It's unique because it is executive as well as legislative. It's a pivotal position. I'd make the office my major occupation, 8 or 9 months a year.

Cynic: Senator Beauchamp said he would use the Lt. Gov. office as a springboard for higher office. Will you?

Smith: It's a mistake to use an office as a springboard for another office. Lt. Gov. is an office which can be developed. It's hard to plan a political career. You have to see whether you like it. If you had asked me five years ago if I would be running for Lt. Gov. today, I would have been doubtful.

Cynic: Can you get along with Governor Snelling?

Smith: The Governor has made it clear that he wants to work with the Lt. Gov. I can and will work with the Governor's office. There will be disagreements, I'm sure. But that doesn't mean you don't compromise or keep on working together. I respect him.

Cynic: What do you see as Vermont's future and your role?

Smith: I see the Lt. Gov.'s office as my base of operations: conducting business with the legislature, and keeping lines of communication open and moving. I see an active, problem-solving role. The Lt. Gov. has the time to be a trouble shooter and go out and talk to people.

I see myself as a practical, problem-solving person. From Community College experience, it's a matter of learning. Vermont needs community development, individual and local economic development. We can solve a lot of our problems ourselves. And state government should help people to solve problems, not try for sweeping solutions.

GOOD MOVERS...

Heaven-sent breezy cotton terri for me from Magrams. Hooded zippered jacket $21., Shorts $12.. Snap Front Jacket with short sleeves $19. From Garland. Great Candy Colors. Junior Colony on Main.

It's an experience
MAGRAMS
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

HOW HIGH IS YOUR E.Q.? (Economics Quotient)

Write for a free booklet. "Economics." Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The American Economic System. We should all learn more about it.

A public service message of The Newspaper & The Advertising Council & US Department of Commerce

S.A. Budget Allocations For '78- '79

Where Will the $175,000 Go?

On Monday night, April 10, the Finance Committee of the Student Association completed the final hearings for next year's budget. The total proposal that now comes up in the General Assembly meeting April 19 is $175,503.25. As was the case last year, requests totaling over $220,000.00 had to be cut to meet our total allocation provided by student activities fees.

In determining the final budget figure, many Student Association policies were kept in mind. The S.A. does not fund academic clubs, social functions, (for example, receptions), or transportation. The other major aspect of our decision centered around the utility of the dollar, or the greatest benefit for each dollar spent. This takes into account the number of active members in relation to the club's total request and the number of people at the university who actually benefit from the events planned.

The $175,503.25 figure is only the recommendation of the finance committee as final approval is left up to the General Assembly of all students this coming Wednesday. Because of this, we strongly urge anyone that is interested in a club, or in how their money is spent in general to come. Each allocation will be voted upon separately which allows individual clubs to strengthen their vote with a larger attendance. The budgetary General Assembly will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Ira Allen Chapel and a student I.D. is required to vote.

| ORGANIZATION | 77–78 BUDGET | 78-79 REQUEST | RECOM. ALLOCATION |
|---|---|---|---|
| UVM Band | 520.00 | 2,070.00 | 870.00 |
| The cut in the Band's requested budget is in the form of our policy that does not allow for allocation for transportation expenditures. $1200 was requested by the band for these purposes. The increase over last year's allocation results from necessary increased equipment expenditures. | | | |
| Third World Organization | 2,150.00 | 4,000.00 | 2,175.00 |
| The Third World Organization's request was approved for an amount slightly larger than last year's. The cut to this figure from their budget was made because the committee felt that their initial request was over-ambitious. | | | |
| Environmental Club | 0 | 800.00 | 150.00 |
| A new club, the committee felt that it was best to start them small and then if warranted, let them grow. | | | |
| East Asian Club | 150.00 | 4,082.00 | 250.00 |
| Their proposed budget was somewhat outlandish for a club in the second year of a redevelopment program. The committee did increase their funding somewhat on the basis of good performance this year. | | | |
| Anthropology Club | 820.00 | 950.00 | 0 |
| The allocation to the Anthropology Club was specifically for their White Roots of Peace program. This program was viewed by the Committee as a special event, thus it was funded. The Anthropology Club is an academic club and our policies prohibit our funding them except for special events type programs. Nothing in their presentation was deemed to be of this type. | | | |
| Women's Squash Club | 0 | 375.00 | 0 |
| Women's Squash Club could not be scheduled for a hearing, thus the committee decided not to fund them now, but to urge them to file a supplemental budget in September. | | | |
| Junior Class Council | 0 | 915.00 | 0 |
| The request of the Jr. Class Council was for money to underwrite their fund-raising activities in the fall. This year this function was performed by the Alumni House. The Committee felt that such funding was not the responsibility of the S.A. | | | |
| Sophomore Class Council | 0 | 400.00 | 0 |
| The request of the Soph. Class Council was for money to underwrite their fundraising activities in the fall. This year this function was performed by the Alumni House. The Committee felt that such funding was not the responsibility of S.A. | | | |
| The News and the Weather | 300.00 | 1,200.00 | 0 |
| The News and the Weather withdrew their budget. | | | |
| Sailing Club | 0 | 2,270.00 | 0 |
| The Sailing Club was for reasons of poor performance and an unsuitable climatic situation given no funding last year. This year, under new management, the club has tried to resurrect itself. Presently, the Sailing Club has a rather large consolidated account which can be used to finance their activities. | | | |

| ORGANIZATION | 77-78 BUDGET | 78-79 REQUEST | RECOM. ALLOCATION |
|---|---|---|---|
| Outing Club | 13,555.00 | 10,847.75 | 10,847.75 |
| The Outing Club, as well, services large numbers of students. Reflecting decreased need for new equipment they reduced their request. | | | |
| Wildlife Society | 273.00 | 152.00 | 152.00 |
| Realizing that they didn't need as much money, the Wildlife Society reduced their request. | | | |
| International Club | 200.00 | 600.00 | 180.00 |
| The committee felt that the request by the International Club for a $400 increase was extending their program further than our resources allowed and that $180 would allow them to offer a sufficient program. | | | |
| Student Legal Service | 2,000.00 | 3,780.00 | 3,780.00 |
| A new organization, this is the minimum sum needed to insure effective operation of the SLS. | | | |
| Horse Club | 415.00 | 475.00 | 475.00 |
| The Horse Club is one of our best run clubs. Most of their funding comes from the operation of their stable. We merely supplement their existing revenue. | | | |
| Folk Dance Club | 670.00 | 1,020.00 | 770.00 |
| This sum would allow a workshop each semester and performances at Oktoberfest and Red Square Affair. | | | |
| University Players | 1,250.00 | 1,640.00 | 1,300.00 |
| The increase in Players budget reflects the increase in lumber costs for set construction. The committee felt that they over estimated inflationary effects. | | | |
| Billings Center Governing Board | 1,080.00 | 2,469.00 | 2,369.00 |
| Billings Center Governing Board suffered a substantial cut in their allocation last year, severely limiting their ability to offer variety of activities in Billings Student Center. The committee felt that increasing their budget would result in an increase in events of interest for students in Billings. | | | |
| Gay Student Union | 373.00 | 1,500.00 | 300.00 |
| The GSU provides services to both Gays and non-Gays here at UVM. This allocation will allow them to operate their offices, and provides for some events. Any funding for their Gay Awareness Weekend can be solicited from the Special Events Fund. The decrease in their budget results from the increased competition for available funds. | | | |
| UVM Forestry Club | 0 | 810.00 | 150.00 |
| The Forestry Club puts on demonstrations at Oktoberfest and Red Square Affair. These demonstrations require some equipment, equipment expenditures cover the bulk of their recommended allocation. Another portion of their allocation covers the creation of a Centennial Woods Nature Trail. | | | |
| WRUV | 14,000.00 | 19,440.00 | 13,710.00 |
| The Bulk of the cut in WRUV's requested budget is in the form of a reduction in planned equipment expenditures. This equipment was felt to be non-essential to WRUV's operation. | | | |

| ORGANIZATION | 77–78 BUDGET | 78–79 REQUEST | RECOM. ALLOCATION |
|---|---|---|---|
| Women's Ice Hockey The Women's Ice Hockey Team in order to compete needs equipment, the bulk of the recommended allocation is for equipment. | 400.00 | 675.00 | 675.00 |
| SCIA (Student Community In Action) SCIA services a large number of students through its 14 subsidiary organizations. The bulk of the increase in this budget is represented by the merger of the Women's Caucus and the Women's Referral Center and their addition to the SCIA budget. | 9,014.00 | 10,075.00 | 10,075.00 |
| Vermont Cynic The service of the Cynic to the UVM community is of invaluable benefit. The decrease in their budget reflects their continued effort in the area of ad sales. | 8,900.00 | 7,849.00 | 7,849.00 |
| Rugby Club As is the case with Women's Ice Hockey, the bulk of the Rugby's expenditures fall into approved expenditures that are necessary in order to field a team and compete. | 900.00 | 1,485.00 | 1,185.00 |
| UVM Rescue The increase represents increased costs to UVM Rescue. | 5,500.00 | 6,000.00 | 6,000.00 |
| S.A. Concerts The staging that Concert Bureau requested will be bought out of their surplus for this year. At the same time, the purchase of some necessary new equipment, and the need to comply with the new copyright laws are the cause of the increase. | 8,000.00 | 20,020.00 | 11,020.00 |
| Ariel The reason for this increase of $575.00 is to cover the inflationary aspect of putting out a yearbook. | 8,425.00 | 11,665.00 | 9,000.00 |
| Student Speech and Hearing Fiscal irresponsibility on the part of this organization, combined with their status as an academic club resulted in this decision. | 128.00 | 453.00 | 0 |
| Student Photo Service Last year SPS was cut so drastically that no new acquisitions were made, and no repair fund existed. The fact that many much needed repairs could not be put off led to SPS requesting and getting supplemental funds. As a result the Finance Committee approved this increase. | 1,500.00 | 2,781.00 | 2,561.50 |
| The Albatross The Albatross Committee withdrew its request for funding as a result of two reasons. First, the Albatross Committee will re-evaluate the present form of the Albatross as a student evaluation instrument. Second, in order to gather input from the student body as to what they feel the Albatross should be. After examining these rationales, if the Albatross committee decides to continue the Albatross, they will ask for funds from the financial contingency fund to do so. | 4,500.00 | 0 | 0 |
| Senior Class Council Historically, S.A. has given $1,000 to the Sr. Class to sponsor traditional events. The committee felt that any increase in this amount was unwarranted. | 1,000.00 | 1,800.00 | 1,000.00 |
| Student Home Economics Club This club was felt to be merely duplicating the effort of several community groups. | 0 | 245.90 | 0 |
| Speakers Bureau Due to increased cost of Speakers, the Speakers Bureau requested this increase in order to provide a better service to the UVM community. | 10,500.00 | 14,350.00 | 14,350.00 |
| Films Bureau Films showed a surplus in its operations this year, increased expenditures was deemed unnecessary. | 10,770.00 | 16,000.00 | 10,000.00 |
| Psychology Club of UVM This club was viewed as an Academic Club. | 0 | 310.00 | 0 |
| Mortar Board Funds are recommendation to facilitate their operation as an honorary society at UVM. | 0 | 100.00 | 35.00 |
| Warren Austin Model U.N. This group requested funds for areas we do not fund. The Committee recommends funding for registration fees only for as many as 15 people. | 390.00 | 3,975.00 | 450.00 |
| S.A. Administrative Budget The reason for the increase in this Budget is increases in salaries, phone expenses, and the addition of a provision for a senatorial workshop in the fall. This budget provides for van rental, all fixed phone charges, secretaries and bookkeepers salaries, special events, etc. In essence, it provides the basis for S.A.'s day to day operation. | 37,200.00 | 41,124.00 | 41,124.00 |
| Financial Contingency Fund To provide for new Clubs, cost overruns, unforeseen circumstances, etc. | 15,000.00 | 15,000.00 | 15,000.00 |
| Commitment for Varsity Lacrosse and Gymnastics Our financial commitment to the Athletic Department for these varsity sports. | 15,200.00 | 6,700.00 | 6,700.00 |
| Oktoberfest Our contribution to Oktoberfest, we fund the beer tent. | 1,000.00 | 1,000.00 | 1,000.00 |
| TOTAL | 174,653.00* | 221,404.15 | $175,503.25 |

*This sum is less than the figure that would be arrived at by summing the allocations listed under 1977-78 budget. This occurs as a result of supplemental allocations made from the financial contingency fund. Thus, summing this column would result in some double counting which would make the total arrived at larger than the total listed.

Tuition Increase

Continued from page 3

paying the university $3,186 next year, which is an overall increase of 7.8 percent. The out-of-stater living on campus will be paying a total of $5,621, which is a proportionately lower increase of 7.1 percent.

The total dollar figures for tuition and all fees for the in-stater and out-of-stater represent increases of $230 and $375 respectively.

MED SCHOOL TUITION

Also on the upswing are tuitions for UVM medical students.

In-state medical tuition will increase $200 to $2,400, a 9.1 percent increase. Students attending the UVM medical college from Maine under a special scholarship rate will also pay the extra $200.

Medical students from the two other states which are involved with UVM in a medical school compact, New York and Rhode Island, will be paying 6.9 percent more, an increase from $4,490 to $4,800. Other out-of-state students will pay $4,800 unless they enroll after July 1, in which case they will pay a tuition increase of 67 (sixty-seven) percent or $7,500 per year.

SPIRALING COSTS

The most devastating part of this year's tuition increases is that they are continuations of a trend that does not appear to have an end. The university made a valid attempt to hold in-state tuition level by appealing to the legislature for more money, but because of any number of reasons, and despite a sizeable surplus in the state's budget, these requests went unheard. The prospect of the state appropriation keeping up with inflation is a bleak one, and UVM knows that.

UVM also knows that raising out-of-state tuition 7 percent each year, unless inflation levels off, is absurd because by the year 2000, the cost for an out-of-stater to live on campus will exceed $20,000 should present trends persist.

Interested in writing news stories?

If so, come down to the Cynic office and talk to us.

No experience is necessary

Dam Criticism

Continued from page 6

agreed with this assessment. Jon Anderson, the Department of Fish and Game's district fish biologist for Northwestern Vermont, has said that the report conclusions were "definitely wrong..." "It (the proposed dam) would be disastrous to the fish." State waterfowl biologist Thomas Myers has asserted that in changing the lake's level, the structure would affect the quantity and quality of wetlands, and could "perhaps result in their permanent loss."

Another major VPIRG concern is the political implications of a dam built in Canadian waters that might affect an American lake. "Who will control lake levels, and for what purposes," Seddon questioned.

Outgoing Vermont Environmental Conservation Secretary Martin Johnson voiced his firm opposition to the plan last week. Public hearings on the proposals will be held in June.

World And National News Briefs

CLONES, YOU IDIOT ... I SAID CLONES.

Compiled By Robert Cassidy

Volkswagon Goes Domestic

The first American-made Volkswagen rolled off the assembly line in the recently completed plant of the Volksvagen Manufacturing Corporation of America in East Huntington Township, Pa. The white two door Rabbit model was the forerunner of other cars that are expected to be produced by foreign manufacturers in the United States in future years. "Today, Volkswagen becomes the fifth American automobile producer," said Toni Schumecker, chairman of Volkswagenwerk of West Germany.

Russians Purchase More American Corn

The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 100,000 metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery this year. Counting earlier purchases, the Russians have now bought more than 12 million tons of grain under terms of an agreement. The grain includes about three and one-half million tons of wheat and more than nine million tons of corn for delivery through September 30th, the end of the second year of the agreement.

Carter News Conference in Brief

President Carter dwelt on many topics Tuesday as he replied to questions from the nation's editors following an address to the Washington convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

In addition to discussing progress, or lack of it, in his administration and his future political plans, the President said:

—He thinks the public's image of him, as registered in national opinion polls, could increase as he achieves more success in resolving such difficult issues as energy and inflation.

—He's in no "big hurry" to achieve full diplomatic relations with China, but does hope that eventually better relations with the communist nation can be reached.

—Minority groups in the United States have prospered in the last ten years, "but they still have a long way to go."

—Rising utility bills should provide an incentive to conserve energy.

—He dismissed reports that Agriculture Secretary Bergland might resign because of disputes over farm legislation.

—He said Attorney General Bell made the right decision in deciding to prosecute three top F.B.I. officials who allegedly issued orders for unlawful burglaries by lower-ranking agents.

Gray Indicted With Two Others

L. Patrick Gray 3d, the F.B.I.'s former acting director, and two former executives of the bureau, were indicted on charges of conspiring to deprive American citizens of civil rights by ordering agents to break into and search their homes without warrants.

Soon after the indictment was returned by a Federal Grand Jury in Washington, the Department of Justice dismissed charges of illegal wiretapping and mail-opening lodged in the same case last year against John J. Kearney, a minor F.B.I. official formerly stationed in New York. Attorney General Griffin B. Bell said he had decided to dismiss the charges against Mr. Kearney when new evidence indicated that Mr. Kearney had been acting under orders from superiors.

Panama Opponents Thwarted

U.S. Chief Justice Burger has denied a request by a group of House members who wanted a court injunction to prohibit President Carter from signing treaties which do not have the approval of both Houses of Congress. Burger said he was denying the request without prejudice, leaving the way open for the group to take their request to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, which last week dismissed a lawsuit in the case. The House group is arguing that both Houses of Congress must vote on the Panama Canal Treaties.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd hinted that new language may be added to the treaties to deal with objections from Panama. The objection has been to a provision giving the United States the right to intervene to keep the waterway open in the event of internal disruptions in Panama.

U.N. Soviet Official Defects

An authoritative diplomatic source at United Nation headquarters in New York says Russian U.N. employee Arkady Shevchenko is in the process of seeking political asylum in the United States. But in Washington, the State Department says Shevchenko has not yet asked for asylum. It was first disclosed Monday that the Russian U.N. employee was not at his job and was apparently defecting.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim says the decision by Schevchenko not to return to Russia is "disagreeable" Walkheim made the comment in a radio interview in Ireland. He noted that Shevchenko is the leading Soviet official in the secretariat.

Waldheim says Shevchenko informed the Secretary General's office of his decision a few days ago and indicated he, the Russian, would write a letter giving details.

Tuesday, in Moscow, a woman who said she is Shevchenko's wife claimed he never had any intention of staying in the United States. She said American authorities must be holding him forcibly.

Wage Price Controls Out

President Carter has ruled out wage and price controls to fight inflation, but he calls on labor and industry to keep price and salary increases below the average rate of the past two years. Carter told the American Society of Newspaper Editors there will be administrative action to hold down oil imports if Congress does not take action, without further delay, on his energy legislation.

Carter said the two things which threaten the nation's economic health most seriously are the high level of oil imports and the increasing rate of inflation. He said it is a myth that the government itself can stop inflation. He said success or failure will largely be determined by the actions of the private sector of the economy.

In Carter's words: "Let me be blunt... I am asking American workers to follow the example of federal workers and accept a lower rate of increase."

He proposed limiting federal white collar salary increases to 5.5% this year to set an example for labor and industry.

Anyone For Tuition Tax Credits?

The House Ways and Means committee voted Tuesday to delete tuition credits for elementary and secondary school students from pending legislation. The 20-16 vote leaves the committee still considering whether to provide for credits eventually up to $250 against the cost of college and other post-secondary education.

The bill would have allowed credits up to $100, phased in over three years, for parents of students in private elementary and secondary schools. With the deletion of the credit for education at the lower levels, the House bill departs most significantly from one approved by the Senate Finance committee and awaiting action in the Senate. The Senate bill would provide larger credits and include elementary and secondary along with college tuition.

President Carter opposes the tax credit plan in any form, and has urged Congress instead to enlarge existing student scholarship and loan programs.

The House bill, with amendments adopted Monday, would have provided for income tax credits of 25% tuition paid to colleges, elementary or secondary schools, with limits of $250 for college tuition and $100 for elementary and secondary education. The credits would be built up over three years, beginning with $50 August 1st. Congress would decide by 1981 whether to continue the program.

The measure was expected to cost about $1.4 billion in lost revenues when fully effective, about one-third the cost of a more extensive bill pending in the Senate.

Strauss Appointed Inflation Counselor

In his anti-inflation speech Tuesday, President Carter said he was appointing Robert Strauss as a special counselor on inflation.

Strauss, a 59-year-old Texas lawyer and former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is now Carter's top trade expert. He carries the rank of ambassador. His new appointment makes him a rising star in the Carter Administration. He spent the last week in Geneva negotiating with German and Japanese businessmen to increase trade with the U.S. Strauss currently is vacationing in Europe.

In Washington, Strauss is considered one of the few Carter Administration members with good contacts with the Washington Establishment. His most recent accomplishments include convincing Japanese businessmen to import more American goods. And he intervened in the coal strike to help avoid a last-minute impasse.

Envoy to Rhodesia

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and other transitional government leaders met Tuesday to prepare for talks next week with British and American envoys. Secretary of State Vance and Foreign Secretary Owen will seek the Executive Council's agreement to negotiate with guerrilla leaders.

Informed sources say Vance and Owen will arrive in Salisbury Monday to brief the transitional leaders on a new Anglo-American plan for transition to black majority rule.

More Underground Tests

Back to back nuclear tests rocked the Nevada desert Tuesday. The first was sponsored by the British government, the second was a U.S. test. It brought to 314 the number of announced tests since the treaty which ended atmospheric testing in 1963.

Energy Department spokesman Dave Jackson said of the 5.3 Richter reading from the first test that it was about what was expected from a device of this size. Jackson said the blast was not particularly heavy. He added that a very slight motion was discernible in Las Vegas following the blast. The test had a maximum yield of 150,000 tons. Jackson said that by comparison, there have been tests in the million ton range, the blast being the equivalent of the explosion of one million tons of TNT.

COMMENTARY

Ethics, Personal Freedom, and Job Hunting

By Eric Kilburn

The ritual of job-hunting, at least for those of us not born into wealth, evokes similar themes in both our memories and prospects for the future. The process usually includes the application, the resume (also known as the "ruse of me") and, if you're lucky enough to clear the first hurdles, the job interview. You walk in, smile – even though your new shoes are crushing your big toe – exchange pleasantries while trying to appear confident, intelligent but humble, and hoping that every hair is in place. After formalities, a period of questions follows which gives you your best chance to strut your stuff, assuming of course that you've rehearsed your answers.

For example, "Why do you want to work for McDonald's?"

"I'm looking for a company with a future, with a constant potential for growth. I've been a long-standing admirer of your competent managerial practices, and feel I could make a valuable contribution to your operations."

"If we hire you, do you intend to stay with us just for the summer?"

"Oh no, I hope to work for McDonald's for at least ten years."

The point is, you lie. Not big lies, just a little truth stretched here and there, but lies all the same. The ultimate irony of the situation is that your interviewers know you're lying, because they probably lied to get their jobs too.

Can you imagine what it might be like if you really answered the questions truthfully?

"McDonald's, Burger King, Big Burger – what's the difference. You guys have got the money I need, and the job that'll get it to me. My rent is due in two weeks, I'd like to buy a stereo, and my car needs a new muffler, so don't ask me stupid questions."

"If we hire you, do you intend to stay with us just for the summer?"

"Well, no. I'll stay until I can find a better job, and when I do, I'll quit in a minute."

In almost every case, you wouldn't be hired because you'd probably be considered deviant or subversive, and such characters are generally undesirable in places where uniformity is paramount. (Incidentally, McDonald's employees are required to say "thank you" after every purchase, a gesture about as humanely gratifying as the green light in a highway toll booth).

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the job-seeking process is the questions asked and not asked of our prospective employers. Other than the routine salary and job description queries, we seldom address issues of a broader and less self-centered nature. For example, are the workers of the firm happy with the work, or do they feel robotized by it? Does the company care about the people of the community where they do business, and if so, why did they mechanize the factory, throwing people out of work, and why are they dumping all that stuff into the air and river? What about the firm's activities in developing countries? Are they making excessive profits? How are they treating people there?

To gather the information necessary to ask these questions, it might require quite a bit of research as these items generally do not appear in the glossy pages of an annual report. Yet, if and when the reality of the situation is grasped, the question inevitably arises of what to do about it? For many of us the answer will be nothing, if for no other reason than the stakes are too high. We're not talking about summer, minimum wage drudgery at Colonel Sanders', we may be dealing with a secure position that starts at $12,000. When you apply for a job with IBM, you probably won't ask them what they're doing in South Africa anymore than you'd ask ITT about the atrocities they helped bring to the people of Chile. Assuming you shut up and are hired, you've no longer "got nothin' and nothin' to lose" (apologies to Dylan), and the cooptive process tends to continue. When you're moving up, it's much easier to ride waves than to make them, and in adhering to this philosophy, one becomes part of a larger conspiracy of silence.

If one is really concerned about their employer, their job, and its relationship to the socioeconomic problems of our culture, another more fundamental question surfaces. Can a business that operates on a profit motive, and employs you primarily because you earn them more than they pay you, ever accomplish meaningful changes that will benefit the whole of society? Many people, ever corporate heads, believe the answer is no or rarely, although few have put it as eloquently as EF Schumacher, the late British economist, in Small is Beautiful.

Everything becomes crystal clear after you have reduced reality to one – and only – of its thousand aspects. You know what to do – whatever produces profits; you know what to avoid – whatever reduces them or makes a loss... Let no one be the issue by asking whether a particular action is conducive to the wealth and well-being of society, whether it leads to moral, aesthetic, or cultural enrichment... It is no accident that successful businessmen are often astonishingly primitive; they live in a world made primitive by this process of reduction... when the real world occasionally makes its existence known and attempts to force upon their attention a different one of its facets, one not provided for in their philosophy, they tend to become quite helpless and confused.

By ignoring or remaining silent on societal problems that may be directly or indirectly associated with one's work, one may easily become fiscally wealthy and morally bankrupt. By stating that "businessmen are often astonishingly primitive" Schumacher has touched on the direct relationship of work to personal freedom. When one operates primarily on the inhuman level of what is profitable is best, one is in effect dehumanized. Without question, this does not apply solely to businessmen, because anyone who takes a job and only looks at the salary, with minimal concern for other factors, loses a piece of their humanity in the process. However, the trade-off can be quite lucrative, as anyone who's ever earned $15,000 for turning a screw on an assembly line will tell you.

At the same time, college graduates, being the elite of society, have far more choices to make than most people. Will we make them? After nearly four years in college (one as a pre-med), I am inclined to wonder. I've seen grade competition increase, cut-throating, cheating, and a rise in overall self-centeredness. Is there much difference between a college student who did anything to get good grades, and a business manager who'll do anything to raise profits?

Apart from job-hunting, it could be convincingly argued that people who speak out against the status quo are the most oppressed, and incidentally, the smallest minority in society today. Indeed, an examination of past history as well as recent accounts of the torture (murder of political prisoners, the firing/demoting of government employees who exposed corruption, or the Watergate morass) all provide ample substance to this line of reasoning. Apparently, the older generation has not been quite the upholders of truth, justice, and the American Way that we've been led to believe. Will we be any different? Perhaps there will be a revolution of consciousness, or a revolution in general, but, although I'm optimistic, I'm not taking any bets.

Editor's note: The author, a former assembly line worker, was recently classified by the government as one of the "hard core unemployed."

Old Home Hospitality

By Henry Chamberlain

Summer is a time for entertaining and for being entertained. With the relative affluence which abounds, people have spare time with which they can travel. During these forays, certain principles have got to be followed if the venture is going to be enjoyable.

In the first place, how should the host treat his/her guest. Philip Gilbert Hamerton wrote: "The guest should be left to be happy in his own way, and the business of the host is to arrange things in such a manner that each guest may enjoy as much as possible his own peculiar kind of happiness."

This means the commonplace – "Mange, Mange," should be kept to a minimum. Oft-times the host feels compelled to stuff you as if you are to be the entree of some future meal. Additionally, many hosts and hostesses feel compelled to pickle you with assorted beverages. Moderation in food and drink is a principle near and dear to the hearts of many visitors.

In ancient times, the tribes gathered as many berries, roots, or game as they could to satisfy their needs. Later, human vanity began to assume a role, as man was able to feel proud of feeding others because of his hunting prowess. This was continued in the noblemen of the Middle Ages, who enjoyed seeing the hapless laborers feast because of their superiority. Today, hosts suffer from a compulsion to show off their abilities to hold a feast, often at the expense of the guest. Mutterings of "Brome Seltzer," or "Pepto-Bismol" or "Anacin" have been known to pervade the guest rooms of many summer retreats.

On the other side, what is the place of the guest? Hamerton stated: "The guest is bound to conform to all things to the tastes and customs of his host. He ought to find or feign enjoyment in everything that his host imposes upon him; and if he is unwilling to do this in every particular it is a breach of good manners on his part, and he must be made to suffer for it."

When the acorn squash is brought out of the kitchen, a look of delight should pervade the face of the guest, not horror. The very thought of frollicking through this amazing vegetable should make you feel warm all over. Also, for the over-40 crowd who are not supposed to eat pork, you only live once. And when your host begins preaching the sayings of Ronald Reagan, it is not your place to counter with the wit and wisdom of Morris Udall.

Finally, after you have extended your "drop in anytime" offer into a week, don't be offended when your host states that: "Your bus leaves in one hour and the car is warming up." Or, "the cupboard is bare and I have not a thing to spare!" All in all, whatever the outcome, remember that if you should grace "la belle France" – no wine, no cheese – rather an uneven number of flowers, preferably thirteen for good luck. Bon vacance!

As Seen in Stereo Review Magazine December 1977

Equipment Test Reports
by Hirsch-Houck Laboratories

Akai GXC-725D Cassette Deck

● Laboratory Measurements. The playback frequency response was measured using TDK AC-331 and Nortronics AT200 test tapes for the "standard" 120-microsecond equalization, and Teac 116SP tape for the 70-microsecond equalization used with $CrO_2$ and FeCr tapes. In both cases the response was within ±1 dB over the full range of the tape (31.5 to 10,000 Hz), most of the variation being at the lower frequencies.

The record-playback frequency response was measured for each of the tape-selector positions using the recommended reference tape or a close equivalent. For the LN and LH tapes we used TDK SD and Maxell UD-XL in place of the specified Fuji FL and Maxell UD tapes. We also tried a Scotch Master tape with the LH setting. It is interesting to note that the $CrO_2$ performance of the recorder is specified only with cobalt-treated ferric "chrome equivalents" such as TDK SA and Maxell UD-XL II, and no actual chromium-dioxide tapes are listed in the table. We tested the machine with the recommended TDK SA and also with BASF Chromdioxid Super. Finally, the FeCr position was checked with the recommended Sony Ferrichrome and the alternate Scotch Classic.

Although there were of course differences in frequency response between the tapes, the similarities between them were striking. For example, the overall response of the TDK SD and Maxell UD-XL were virtually identical over most of the audio range. Most of the deviation from flatness was in the low-frequency "ripples" caused by the head geometry. The overall response was within ±2 dB from 36 to 13,000 Hz with SD and from 34 to 15,000 Hz with UD-XL. Scotch Master (LH) had a mild high-frequency rise and a ±2-dB variation from 35 to 15,000 Hz. The TDK SA, used as a $CrO_2$ tape, had a slightly stronger and extended high end, with a ±1.5-dB variation from 37 to 16,500 Hz. The BASF chrome tape had a more pronounced high-frequency rise above 4,000 Hz, giving it a ±2.5-dB variation from 35 to 18,500 Hz. The ferrichrome tapes gave the widest and flattest frequency response. Sony FeCr was within ±1.5 dB from 36 to 19,000 Hz. Scotch Classic had a very smooth, linear response which sloped downward slightly. It was within ±3 dB from 34 to 17,000 Hz. All these figures result from the tape/machine interface and do not necessarily reflect results that would be obtained with the same tapes on other machines.

All measurements were made at a −20-dB recording level. At a 0-dB level there was the expected rolloff of high-frquency response due to tape saturation. However, the loss of highs was much less than we normally measure on cassette decks, and the 0-dB curve remained above the −20-dB curve at all times instead of intersecting it, as usually happens with cassette recorders. This can undoubtedly be credited to the use of separate recording and playback heads whose gaps have been optimized for their particular functions.

The MPX FILTER cut off sharply above 13,000 Hz, reducing the recording response at 19,000 Hz by nearly 20 dB. The "tracking" of the Dolby circuits was excellent, with no more than a 2-dB difference between frequency-response curves run with and without the Dolby system at levels of −20 and −30 dB. The GXC-725D uses a "double-Dolby" system with separate Dolby circuits for recording and playback functions, so that programs can be monitored from the tape as they are made and heard with the correct frequency response and noise levels.

For a 0-dB recording level, the required input was 53 millivolts at the line jacks and 0.18 millivolt at the microphone jacks (the microphone amplifier overloaded at 43 millivolts input). The meters were calibrated so that the Dolby level of 200 nW/m registered +3 VU as marked. Their ballistic characteristics were exactly as specified for VU meters, so that they indicated 100 per cent of steady-state readings when driven with 0.3-second tone bursts once per second. The PEAK LEVEL light began to glow at a +7-dB input.

The 1,000-Hz, 0-VU playback distortion was only 0.25 per cent with TDK SD (LN), about 0.45 per cent with Maxell UD-XL (LH) and TDK SA ($CrO_2$) and 1 per cent with Sony FeCr. All of these are well below the rated distortion levels for the recorder. The reference distortion level of 3 per cent was reached at an input of +9 dB for LN, +10 dB for LH, +7 dB for $CrO_2$, and +6 dB for FeCr.

The signal-to-noise ratio (S/N) was measured for each tape using unweighted measurements, IEC "A" weighting, CCIR weighting, and CCIR with Dolby noise reduction. The differences between tapes were slight, with only about 2 dB separating Maxell UD-XL from TDK SD in a weighted measurement with Dolby. Considering that the worst S/N we measured under those conditions was a very good 64.6 dB, it seems that "noisy" is hardly the proper adjective to use when discussing either the machine or any of the tapes! The noise level increased by 8.5 dB through the microphone inputs at maximum gain, but it was not obtrusive at normal gain settings.

The tape transport worked smoothly and quietly. The unweighted rms flutter was only 0.09 per cent. In fast forward or rewind the machine covered a C-60 cassette in 90 seconds. The PAUSE control started up the tape interstation FM tuner hiss and hear almost no difference between the input and playback signals from the recorder at a −10-dB recording level. Instead of the usual dulling of the highs, the major change in the playback quality was a slightly heavier low end, perhaps from the cyclic response variations below 100 Hz. In this test, the performance of the GXC-725D was closer to that of an open-reel tape deck than to other cassette decks (especially those in its price range).

● Comment. Before making any measurements on the Akai GXC-725D, we connected it to a music system and put it into operation. Its quality was immediately audible, to the extent that the later measurements did not surprise us at all.

We noticed that recording levels can be set up without placing the machine in the record mode (or even loading a cassette). The "headroom" is considerably greater than is common in cassette recorders, so that it was safe to let the meters reach 0 dB regularly (which resulted in an occasional flash from the PEAK LEVEL light) when recording from FM or records. Of course, with live program material having greater dynamic range, one should keep the average levels a bit lower.

It was also apparent that the bias and equalization characteristics had been chosen to make the machine compatible with a variety of tapes, unlike some machines whose proper performance can be realized only with the specific type of tape for which they have been adjusted.

The Akai GXC-725D is a rare combination of an absolutely first-rate recorder (which sounds every bit as good as it measures) with a highly affordable price tag. This caliber of performance is available in a very few other cassette decks, all of which are much more expensive than the GXC-725D. It is also worth mentioning that this machine met or surpassed—usually by a wide margin—every one of the ratings for which we were able to test, and it had not a single idiosyncrasy or "bug" that we could find. This might seem to be no more than one would expect from any well-made product, but it is nonetheless rare, and it contributed to our totally positive feeling about the GXC-725D.

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

157 PEARL ST. ESSEX JCT • BARRE MONTPELIER RD • IN THE MALL BETWEEN K-MART & MARTINS SO. BURLINGTON

By

It's the spring of an election year, when Congressional fancy turns to domestic affairs. Given the undramatic performance by 95th Congress, whose notable activity has included passage of bills raising their salaries, the social security tax, and raising minimum wage (whose consequence may raise inflation); passage of the controversial Panama Canal treaty; and a lack of activity resulting in failure to pass a comprehensive energy bills, it becomes understandable why a tuition tax credit bill has suddenly become a 'hot' issue in the nation's capitol.

An objective assessment of the facts suggests tax relief measure is not only needed, but possibly could be considered the neglect of past presidents and congresses.

Since 1964 the cost of a higher education has risen 119% at private institutions, 99% at four year public institutions, and 138% at public two year institutions. Since 1969, the number of middle income students (those whose families earn less than $15,000) enrolled in colleges dropped 20% according to a study by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. Tuition alone at most Ivy League schools will climb to over $5,000 in 1979, and at the University of Vermont, where in-state tuition is already the highest in the nation, a $100 increase in the fall '78 in-state tuition rate appears inevitable.

Concerning current government sponsored programs, a statement published by Senator Packwood (R–Ore) said "Students with adjusted family incomes of less than $7,500 receive about four-fifths of all Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG), about two-thirds of all College Work Study awards, about one-half of the National Direct Student Loans, and about one-third of all Guaranteed Student Loans." Indeed, lower income students should receive aid, states Packwood, but not at the expense of needy middle income students.

Two dramatically different proposals are currently under consideration before the Congress and President Carter. The recent flurry of activity by both indicates some form of tuition relief may be forthcoming soon.

THE ROTH–PACKWOOD–MOYNIHAN BILL

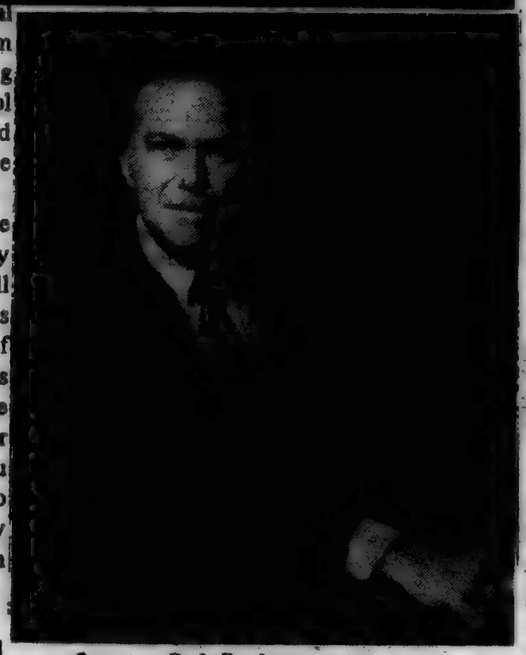
The Roth-Packwood-Moynihan bill would give a tax credit of fifty percent of a student's tuition and fee payments, up to a $500 credit. The credit could be applied toward an individual for himself, his spouse, or dependents who attend an accredited private elementary or secondary school, college or university, full or part-time. Should the credit exceed the actual amount of taxes due, a cash refund would be awarded by the government.



Acceptance of scholarships or fellowship grants accordingly would reduce the amount of tax credit received. "No offset is required for a gift, bequest, devise..." reads the Act, which explains, "...for example, grandparent's gifts to children would not be offsets." The cost of meals, lodging, transportation, books, and supplies will not be declarable under the definition of "fee."

Enactment of the measure would take effect in three stages: initially, 50% of payments up to a credit of $250 per student would be given by the government. Only college undergraduate students would be eligible at this time. Two years hence, the credit would equal 50% of tuition and fees up to a maximum of $500 credit to a group now including private elementary and secondary school students. Three years later, credit would be extended to graduate and part-time students.

85% of the bill's benefits would be received by students whose family income is less than $30,000 and 51% will be distributed to students whose families earn below $20,000 (see insert). 25% of the estimated sixteen million students who would be affected by this measure will attend a private elementary or secondary school. The Office of Bureau Consensus reports 64.2% of children who attend private elementary and secondary schools are of families earning less than $20,000 per year.

CRITICISM OF THE MEASURE

Criticism of the measure has centered around its potential impact on public education, the potential for increased attendance at private institutions, its economic feasibility, and whether the funding of a private institution is constitutional.

Senator Bob Packwood (R - Ore.)

Senator Patrick Moynihan (D - N.Y.)

In a column titled "Help for Schools – or the Start of a Bloodbath?" United Federation of Teachers President Albert Shanker stated, "If the Packwood-Moynihan Bill becomes law, we will see a continuing and massive conflict across the country for decades to come. The bill will engender conflict and bitterness of the kind created by the Civil War. The reason is that granting $500 in tuition credits will satisfy no one and settle nothing. It will merely put two warring factions on the field of battle"

"Those who receive this tax credit will certainly be happy with their partial victory. But they will immediately point out that $500 is not enough for tuition at most private schools. They will seek to have the U.S. government pay for a greater percentage of tuition, eventually paying all of it. Enactment of the Packwood-Moynihan Bill will mean bitter fights year after year for more and more of Uncle Sam's money for private schools," said Shanker.

Exhibiting concern that stronger, private institutions may ultimately lead to the demise of the nation, a recent Washington Post editorial states: "Most Americans understand that it takes a strong sense of national unity to hold this huge and heterogenous country together. That sense of community arises, above all, from the public schools..."

Moynihan, refuting the assumption that a substantial increase in private school enrollment will occur upon enactment of the measure, said, "I for one refuse to accept the proposition that our public schools have fallen on such hard times that they can only attract students and support in the future if they enjoy a monopoly on primary and secondary education."

The Constitutionality of the bill has additionally been questioned. Attorney General Griffin Bell has stated that tax credit for public and secondary school education is unconstitutional. Packwood, testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, concluded however, "...If we had a Supreme Court decision at point, which we don't, we still wouldn't know whether it would be affirmed or rejected by subsequent decisions."

In the April edition of Harper's Magazine, Moynihan in his article "Government and the Ruin of Private Education," following a lengthy argument concludes, "It is time for liberalism to redefine its purpose in the area of education. State monopoly is no more appropriate to liberal belief in this field than in any other."

The Roth-Packwood-Moynihan Bill has fifty-two co-sponsors in the Senate, including Patrick Leahy (D–Vt), George McGovern (D–S.D.), Henry Jackson (D–Wash.), Barry Goldwater (R–Ariz.), Robert Dole (R–Kan), S. Hoyakawa (R–CA.) Since tax legislation cannot be initiated in the Senate, the measure was 'tacked on' to an act "to suspend for a temporary period the rate of duty on wool not finer than 46s"

THE CARTER ADMINISTRATION

The Carter Administration's proposal on increasing financial aid would raise the income limit by which students become eligible for aid from $16,000 to $26,000. An additional 1.5 million students would be eligible for aid should this be approved.

"The Administration's alternative is not a bad plan," conceded Moynihan in the Harper's article. The proposal additionally would expand Work Study and Guaranteed Student Loan programs. Carter, by stating that Congress "must choose" between the tax credit program and his program, has clearly implied the possibility of a veto. As yet however, Carter has not amassed a considerable amount of support on the hill.

EMBARRASSMENT THROUGH H.E.W.

Embarrassment engulfed the Carter Administration last month following the leak of a memo concerning tuition tax credits written by Health, Education, and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano. The memorandum contained numerous disadvantageous political references concerning the tuition tax credit bill, including: "It will, if (it) does stop the tax credit proposals, perform the vital function of keeping education jurisdiction in the Education Committees and away from Senate Finance and House Ways and Means. (It is worth paying a price to avoid giving Senate Finance another piece of Executive Branch policy.)"

"Finally, you should know that we still have a problem with assistance to private elementary and secondary schools. None of the tax credit or student assistance proposals presently on the table addresses that issue – except for Packwood/Moynihan. We will be working in the next week or so to determine if a proposal on that issue is necessary as a matter of politics, feasible as a matter of cost, and constitutional as a matter of law."

PROBABLE PASSAGE

Since on March 19 the House refused to even consider Carter's package due to lack of a reference to any tuition tax credits, it has become obvious to some observers that some form of tax credit will pass through Congress in the near future. Whether it will carry each recommendation of the Roth-Packwood-Moynihan Bill remains to be seen.

Papa Dominics

Back By Popular Demand!!!

All The Spaghetti You Can Eat!!!

Monday Thru Thursday Only in Our Dining Rooms.

$3.00

Open Everyday at 4:30 Delivery Available

1164 Williston Rd. 863-2556

Spring Sneakers

. NIKE, The Name in Quality Athletic Footwear for Men and Women. NIKES Are Built to Give You a Combination of Good Mileage and Great Comfort. Now Available in 10 Styles at the Bass Shoe Factory Outlet.

BASS SHOE FACTORY OUTLET

1305 Williston Road South Burlington

Open Daily 9-9 Sundays 12-5

Basic Health

A National Nutrition Policy?

By Barry Gustin

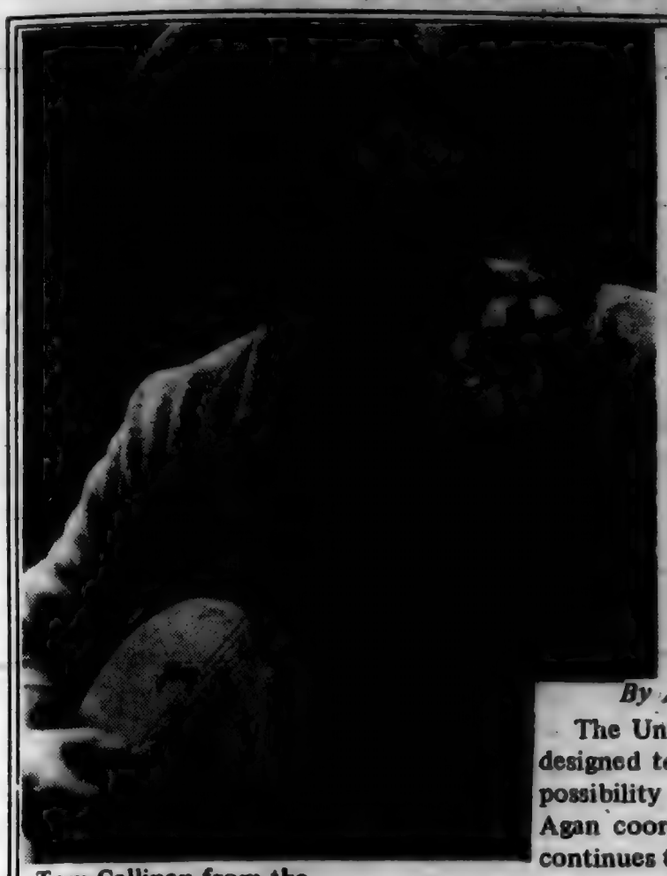
The word is out – and from no less a source than the Senate of the United States: "The American way of eating may be hazardous to your health!" If that sentence makes you think of a line you've heard about smoking, it's no accident. When the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs published its report "Dietary Goals for the United States" last year, committee members hoped it would hit the country smack in the face – like the Surgeon General's report on smoking.

Why? Because the committee after reviewing hordes of evidence thinks the way we eat is as big a health hazard as smoking. The Dietary Goals were intended to make all Americans take a hard look at the way we're eating these days. The goals should be viewed in an ongoing context as part of the evolution of a national nutrition policy. At this time, the Dietary Goals are relatively controversial so the establishment of a national nutrition policy has been slow in the making.

The Dietary Goals provide nutrition knowledge with which "most Americans can begin to take responsibility for maintaining their own health by reducing the risk of nutritionally-related disease."

Senator George McGovern, the committee chairman, summed it up: "The simple fact is that our diets have changed radically within the last fifty years, with great and often very harmful effects on our health. Too much fat, too much sugar or salt, can be and are linked directly to heart disease, cancer, obesity, and stroke, among other killer diseases. Six of the ten leading causes of death in the United States have been linked to our diet... As the cost of health care spirals upward, it is time we turn our sights towards more immediate care, namely a better nutritional diet."

Since 1900, our country has witnessed a dramatic change in eating habits. The amount of fat we consume has gone up about twenty-five percent. We eat two-thirds the amount of fruits, grains, and vegetables we downed in 1909, and get more of our calories from sources that are high in refined white sugar, saturated fat, and cholesterol.



What are these "dietary goals?" In a nutshell, they recommend the increased consumption of complex carbohydrates and naturally occurring sugars to account for half of our daily calorie intake. This is best done by eating more vegetables, whole grains and whole grain breads, beans, and fruit. The overall fat consumption should be reduced from forty-two percent of our caloric intake to thirty percent relying twice as much on polyunsaturate fats found in vegetable oils than on saturated fats formed primarily in animal products. The intake of refined white sugar and the other additive sweeteners (honey, maple syrup, etc.) should be reduced by about forty-five percent so that it would only account for about ten percent of our daily caloric intake. They emphasize that fresh fruits should be eaten more often instead. The committee also feels that cholesterol represents a large enough risk to warrant its moderation in the diet. Consequently, they feel that eggs, meat, and shellfish should be eaten less frequently. Notice that this reduction would also satisfy the recommendation to reduce fat intake. Lastly, a severe reduction in salt is called for, a reduction that would drop its intake from eight to twelve grams per day to fifty grams per day.

"Six of the ten leading causes of death in the United States have been linked to our diet..."

The question of whether dietary changes alone can reduce some of the leading causes of death in the U.S. has been highly researched and documented. The answer is emphatically yes! If one exercises regularly and eats a moderate prudent diet as purported by these dietary goals, it's probable that such things as obesity will never arise. And since obesity is a major factor in the onset of degenerative disease, and at least one fourth of the people in the U.S. are obese, the facts would tend to support the committee's thrust. (One can learn more about these goals by sending $2.30 to the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, stock number 052-070-04376-8 and they will send you the one-hundred page dietary guideline.)

Barry Gustin is a UVM graduate currently doing independent study on nutrition and health.

Tom Callinan from the Connecticut Cetacean Society playing banjo.

'Save the Whales'

A UVM Forum On Whale Appreciation

Margaret MacArthur playing a lap harp. Her music will be presented at a "Traditional Music Workshop" on Wednesday.

By Alex Eschenbrenner with Debbie Comly, Liz Wormer and Candy Hindes

The University of Vermont Whale Appreciation Symposium is a collection of activities designed to educate both students and the general public about whales and the impending possibility of their extinction. As a senior project for Environmental Studies, Martha Agan coordinated all events for the symposium which begins on Sunday, April 16 and continues to the following Thursday.

Beginning with a Children's Workshop on Whales in the Commons of the Living/Learning Center, the symposium kicks off a week-long series of events listed in the calendar below. Movies, art projects, speaking engagements, and music workshops will bring whale culture and concerned people together to celebrate the largest mammel on earth and, with hope, protect them from their fated destiny.

Highlighting the symposium will be Moby Dick, a film based on Herman Melville's novel; A Musical Session to Save the Whales, in which professional and student musicians combine their contemporary piano, guitar, flute, and vocal whale music; and Whale Appreciation, a slide-talk show by Tom Callinan, from the Conn. Cetacean Society, and Martha Agan, Symposium coordinator.

Money generated from the children's workshop and jam session portions of the Whale Symposium will be donated to Greenpeace, a non-profit, non-violent organization dedicated to protecting the environment. Greenpeacers aim to bring about changes by attacking government environmental policies with public opinion.

Greenpeace has worked on such projects as banning nuclear tests and is now concentrating 65% of its budget to save the whales from extinction. Many Greenpeacers have risked their lives by traveling in rubber rafts and putting their bodies between the harpoons and the whales. These endeavors not only interfere with whaling operations, but promote media coverage, which hopefully stimulates public opinion.

Whale History

Whales are mammals once found worldwide with intellectual capacities close if not equal to or beyond those of man. These mighty creatures, written about in the Bible, and revered by early Greek civilizations, have inspired such literary works as Moby Dick. The vast folk tradition in America left behind whaling songs telling the tale of this glorified past. And now as a result of exploitation by man – the whale's only natural enemy – many species are now facing extinction.

Killing whales is not just a recent phenomena, however. Archeological work has unearthed whale bones found among remnants of 1500 BC Alaskan settlements. Norwegians began whaling early in search of food their land could not provide them with. In these early times, whaling was relatively simple as the Biscayan whales were plentiful in the Northern Atlantic.

Civilization moved on and man found other uses for materials provided by whales. Whale oil was optimum for lighting and whale bones made great corset stays.

During the eighteenth century, America joined in this once predominantly European industry by hunting off both coasts, becoming a leading whaling nation. As whaling equipment and technique improved and demand for whale products increased, whalers turned to hunting a variety of species. New products were discovered such as wax and ambergris (a wax-like substance used as a fixative for scents in perfumes) supplied by the whale sperm.

As demands for whale products increased so did whaling. A few species were still able to escape because they were too large to be approached by small boats. These whales' heavy carcasses would sink which made retrieving difficult. However, in the late 1800's, technology caught up. Harpoons with explosive heads were developed and the carcasses were pumped with air through tubes so they

(continued on page 20)

Symposium Calendar

SUNDAY, APRIL 16

CHILDREN'S WORKSHOP ON WHALES

From 9 a.m. – Noon, a movie, songs, art projects, and refreshments will be offered in 216 Commons Living/Learning Center. Invited are students of the Burlington area in grades 1-7. Pre-registration fee of $1.00 is required. Contact Donna Goldbach at 656-2037.

MOBY DICK

At 3 p.m., IRA presents this suspense-filled 2 hour film derived from Herman Melville's famed novel. Starring Gregory Peck, $1.00 admission charged. Southwick Gym, Redstone Campus.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19

TRADITIONAL MUSIC WORKSHOP

At 2 p.m., Margaret MacArthur will play a culcimer and a lap harp, featuring contemporary songs and poems of whales and whale conservation. Sponsored in part by the Vermont Council for the Arts. Redstone Hall, Redstone Campus.

WHAT SCIENTISTS AREN'T TELLING US ABOUT WHALES

At 4 p.m., Phoebe Wray, Executive Director of Endangered Species Production, will discuss this topic. Her work has involved extensive research into alternatives to products derived from whales. 115 Commons Living/Learning.

MOBY DICK

At 8 p.m., a second showing of this struggle between a man and a whale will be shown in 101 Votey.

A MUSICAL SESSION TO SAVE THE WHALES

At 10 p.m., John Cassel, John Hammer, Dick Orleans, Chris Recchia, Jerry Samuels, Ellen Zimmerman, and other musicians will combine their talents to present a session of contemporary piano, guitar, flute, and vocal whale music. All proceeds go to the Greenpeace Foundation. 75 cent admission. 115 Commons

THURSDAY, APRIL 20

MELVILLE'S WHALE

At 9:30 a.m. Professor Alan Shepherd, Dept. of English, will discuss Herman Melville's Moby Dick in Billings North Lounge, Billings Student Center.

HUMPBACK WHALE SOUNDS

At 11 a.m. Beezie Drake will discuss her recent field experience in the Dominican Republic where she helped put together this record. Fireplace Lounge L/LC. Luncheon to follow in the L/LC dining hall.

THE ADVENTURES OF A WHALE PAINTER

At 12:30 p.m. Richard Ellis, an artist whose whale paintings have been featured in Audubon Magazine, will speak on his adventures, in the Fireplace Lounge in L/LC.

THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE ESKIMOS AND BOWHEAD WHALES

At 2 p.m., Horace Beck, Phoebe Wray, and Peter Woolfson will participate in a panel discussion on the Eskimos and Bowhead Whales. The panel will be moderated by professor Ian Worley, Botany Dept. Carpenter Auditorium.

WHALE APPRECIATION

At 8 p.m. Tom Callinan from the Connecticut Cetacean Society and Martha Agan, Symposium coordinator, will present a program of slides, talk, and music on Whale Appreciation. 235 Marsh Life Science.

Bowhead Controversy

In the past few years, the U.S. has been active in the attempt to stop foreign whaling industries from killing endangered whale populations. Some of these nations have now turned to the U.S. citing her hypocrisy in allowing the Alaskan Eskimos to hunt the Bowhead whales, a species endangered mostly because of past industrial whaling.

For hundreds of years, these Eskimos have been hunting the whale as a vital part of their food source and culture. These customs still remain, and in view of the government ban on caribou hunting, villages are more dependent on whale meat than ever.

Conservationists argue that because of the rapidly depleting Bowhead whale herds, even the 30 whales brought in yearly by Eskimos would greatly hurt the present population of about 1500-3000. For every one whale captured, one is shot, wounded and never retrieved due to present whaling techniques.

These conservationists hold that all Eskimos don't whale for subsistence anymore. With the recent development of the Alaskan Pipeline, prosperity has been brought to many of these Eskimo villages so they no longer depend on whales as a primary source of food. Nonetheless, the custom and ritual of whaling remains a vital part of Eskimo culture.

Industrial whaling, including America's, has caused the Bowhead whale populations to be greatly depleted leaving the only remaining stock in Alaska. As a result, these Alaskan whales have become the center of controversy. The Eskimos agree that something must be done to save the Bowheads from being wiped out completely; but they opt more towards limiting whaling at a local level.

Still, the fact remains that the U.S. has taken a strong stand against international whaling while it continues to allow Alaskan natives to hunt whales.

A panel discussion presenting various aspects of this issue will be held as part of the Whale Symposium on Thursday at 2:00 in Carpenter Auditorium.

Car Stereo Special

SANYO

$190 Sanyo's Finast FM Tuner Plus Cassette Player

$89 Sanyo's 3-Way Deluxe Speaker System With 2-Year Warrenty on Parts and Labor

TAFT CORNERS ELECTRONICS

Taft Corner Shopping Center Williston

Mon.-Thurs. 9-6, Fri. 9-8, Sat. 8-5

Mixing Trustees and State Representatives

By Harvey Walter Kidder

In 1791 the University of Vermont was incorporated. In 1864 the Vermont Agricultural College was incorporated. The following year these two corporations were united under the name of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College.

For many de- ades the trustees of this new corporation numbered twenty, a number which is altogether too large, clumsy, unwieldy and relatively inefficient. In 1955 the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Vermont authorized the governor to appoint three trustees, with the advice and consent of the Senate. This action increased the size of the Board to twenty-three, and constituted a step in the wrong direction. Recently, the General Assembly authorized the students of the University of Vermont to elect two of their number to be trustees. This action has now produced a board of twenty-five members, with resulting dilution of prestige, authority, and effectiveness.

"No (state) representative has the legal, moral and ethical right to be a trustee of the University of Vermont...at the same time."

On Friday, the third day of March, in 1978, the Board elected Mrs. Louise R. Swainbank of St. Johnsbury to be the chairwoman of the body. Who is Mrs. Swainbank?

Mrs. Swainbank is an incumbent member of the House of Representatives, at Montpelier. As such, she casts her votes to appropriate public funds to the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, a corporation which she serves as a trustee. This is improper, and constitutes a gross conflict of interests! No representative has the legal, moral and ethical right to be a trustee of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College at the same time!

Mrs. Swainbank at once named Russell F. Niquette of Winooski to be parliamentarian of the Board. Who is Russell F. Niquette?

Russell F. Niquette is an incumbent member of the Senate, at Montpelier. As such, he similarly casts his votes to appropriate public funds to the University of Vermont, a corporation which he also serves as a trustee. This is equally improper, and likewise constitutes a gross conflict of interests!

This serious and unconscionable irregularity is of comparatively recent origin. Prior to the month of September 1941, nine members of the Board of Trustees of the University of Vermont were chosen at joint sessions of the two chambers of the General Assembly at Montpelier. The nine successful candidates came from various walks of life, and were broadly representative of what could properly be called a typical cross section of the Commonwealth of Vermont; legislators were NEVER selected.

All this was changed, however, in the month of September in 1941. The acute financial condition of the University of Vermont precipitated a special session of the General Assembly, which promptly learned all the details of the financial misfortunes of the institution. As a direct result, the lawmakers chose their colleagues as trustees — a decision which gave rise to the conflicts of interest already noted.

Can your freedom and opportunities help you become a man of knowledge?

Perhaps some day you'll be able to see men in another mode and then you'll realize that there's no way to change anything about them.

don Juan

Vermont Land Preservation

The Fate of Our Forests

By Leslie Dunn

The past years have seen a significant change in the character of the State of Vermont. With the combined effects of industry, suburban sprawl and the sacrifice of agricultural lands to increasing commercial and residential development, Vermont has taken a turn towards adopting problems which have haunted more urbanized states for years.

Vermont has begun to fall into the same trap which snagged Mid-Atlantic states — abandoning its former ethic of self-reliance and individualism for the questionable bounties of growth and development.

There remain, however, parcels of land in the state where the effects of this expansion are largely unnoticed. These areas are particularly valuable because they encompass diverse ecosystems of rare plant and animal life, unspoiled waters, and distinctive landforms. These wild and pristine lands also provide laboratories for scientific, educational and recreational pursuits.

In an attempt to include areas such as these in our national wilderness preservation system, the United States Forest Service has undertaken a project entitled the "Roadless Area Review and Evaluation." Known as RARE II, to distinguish it from an earlier counterpart, the program is the last stage in a wilderness review of the National Forests. Six areas with wilderness potential have been identified within the boundaries of the Green Mountain National Forest.

The largest singular area is the proposed Breadloaf wilderness area located near Granville, with 19,850 acres. Other areas include 8590 acre Wilder Mountain, near South Wallingford, 8830 acre Devil's Den, near Weston; 9670 acre Griffith Lake, near Danby; 2260 acre Lye Brook Wilderness Area Addition, near East Arlington; and the 6120 acre Woodford area located near the town of Woodford.

RARE II is an attempt to carefully review the proposed wilderness areas and evaluate them with respect to their wilderness attributes, resource tradeoffs, and social values.

Evaluation of wilderness attributes is based on factors such as "natural integrity," "opportunities for solitude," and "potential for primitive recreation," as tagged by the Sierra Club. The resource tradeoff data considers timber volumes and productivity, mineral availability, and various levels of developed and motorized recreational use. The social values data reflects historic and cultural interests.

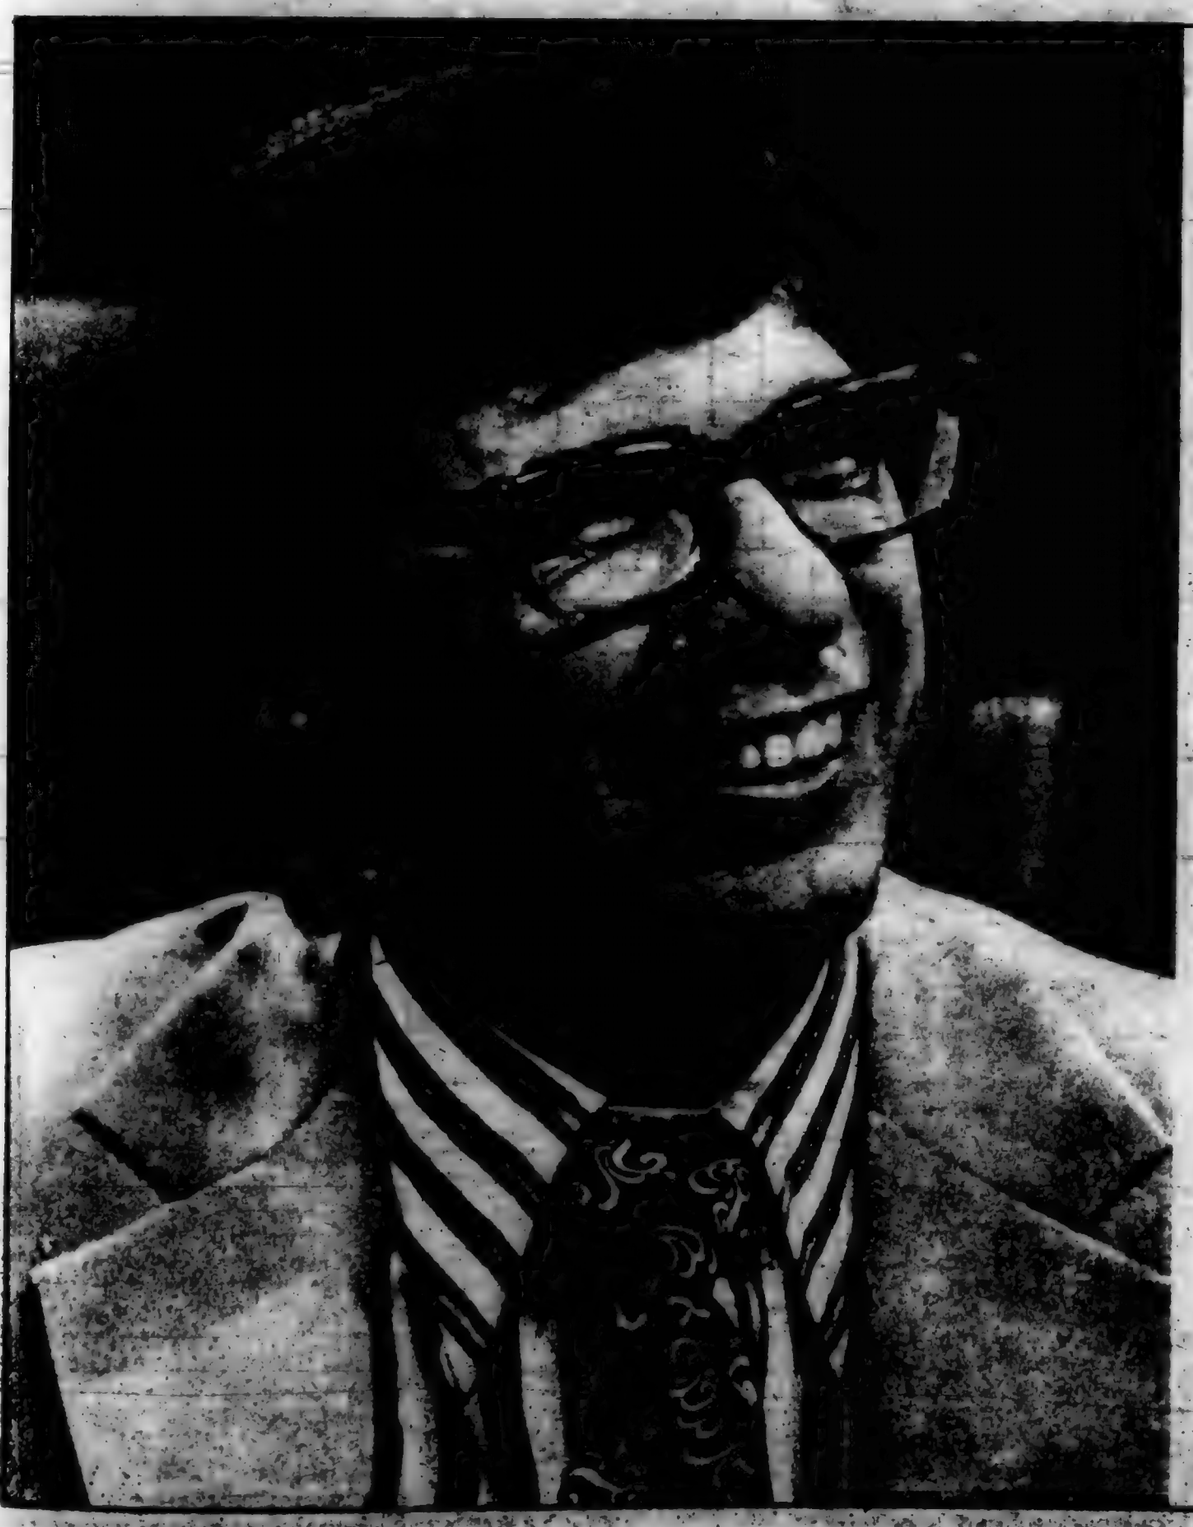
The six areas proposed here in Vermont total 55,720 acres — less than one percent of the land in the entire state. Much of the land lies at higher elevations with severe weather conditions, steep slopes, and thin soils growing less than desirable timber. Difficult access is another drawback to the utilization of these resources.

The timber productivity of the six RARE II areas is only 36% of the state average due to these limiting factors. Actual timber volume in the six areas accounts for only 4% of the state's total.

Wilderness designation would close off these small areas to all commercial enterprise, permanent roads, and off-road vehicles (trail bikes, snowmobiles, etc.) Hunting and fishing could continue as well as hiking, climbing, snowshoeing, and cross country skiing. Wilderness areas are designed as refugee, for both people and wildlife. They are being set aside for the same reasons which inspired authors such as Henry David Thoreau, John Muir, and Aldo Leopold to record their thoughts and experiences forever in the hearts and minds of man.

The future of the Vermont wilderness is presently being determined. The Forest Service has analyzed the proposed areas with respect to their suitability as wilderness and will issue its draft environmental impact statement in June. This statement, along with a more detailed supplement covering the six areas, will provide information and the vehicle for public involvement in the wilderness cause. Early in 1979, the United States Forest Service will make its final recommendations about these six areas in Vermont and the responsibility for wilderness designation will shift to Congress for the final decision.

The cause for wilderness is a valid one, and a timely one as well. Individuals can voice their opinion concerning the issue this summer at a series of public hearings which will be held throughout the state. Letters may be written to Vermont Congressmen or to the editors of local newspppers.



Preserving the land which contributes so much to the character of the State of Vermont is certainly a worthwhile undertaking. As Thoreau wisely said, "In wilderness is the preservation of the world."

Leslie Dunn, a senior with an individual design in Outdoor Education and Environmental Studies is a member of the Vermont Wildlife Coalition and is working on the RARE II project.

Did You Forget?

Photo Contest Entries due next Thursday, April 20th. Two winning prizes plus a special abstract photo prize. Short story deadline has moved to MONDAY, April 17th at 2:00 to give you one more weekend to go for the $25. first prize.

THIS MAN KNOWS YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER

Come prove it to yourself

The

Amazing Kreskin

Mentalist

8 pm
Thursday April 20
Ira Allen Chapel
$1.00 w/UVM ID $2.00 General Admission

WANTED
FOR SPRING
AT BOTH ALPINE SHOPS

CB SPORTS TRAINING SHELL

$30

SIZES XS THRU XL
MANY COLORS

TRETORN, BANCROFT, PUMA, ADIDAS, BATA
TENNIS SHOES

$13.95 to $32.50

SWIMSTAR, ADIDAS, HEAD
RACING
SWIM SUITS

$12 TO $34

WILSON, BANCROFT, DUNLOP, SEAMCO, PENNSYLVANIA
TENNIS
RACKETS
20% OFF
SELECTED GROUP

SKIWEAR
SKI EQUIPMENT UP TO
50% OFF
ALL '77-'78
INVENTORY

ALPINE SHOP
OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. - 9 P.M.
Williston Rd., So. Burlington
and
Corner of Cherry & So. Winooski
Downtown Burlington

Methane Gas:
An Energy Alternative for Rathe

By Cindy Sprague

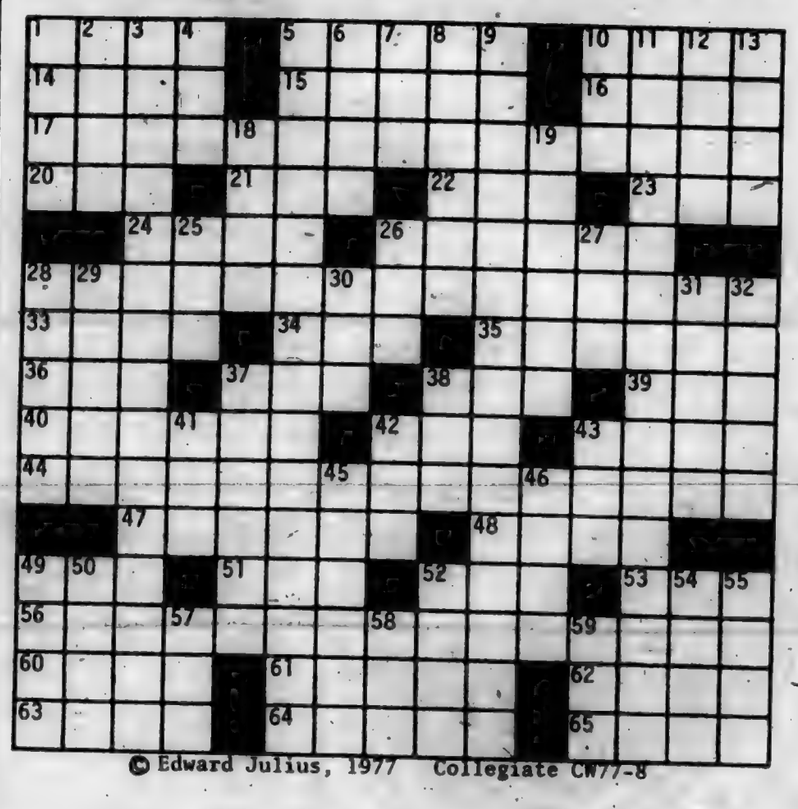
Louis Rathe, along with his brother Lawrence, owns and operates the Colchester Land Fill. For the past two years Rathe has used the land-fill to supply him with the energy needed to heat his home, office trailer, many garages, as well as his stove and hot water.

How does he do it? The idea is quite simple. As the solid waste from the land-fill decomposes, it emits methane gas. When piped to the surface, this gas is highly flammable, and makes it a good potential source of heat.

Rathe got his idea of using this emission as a source of energy when he was in Granby Quebec looking at a trash compactor. The operator of the land-fill in Granby was showing Rathe a hole dug by the government to check for water seepage. He uncapped the hole and lit a match. "It burned like a gas well," Rathe exclaimed.

The owner heated his garage with methane gas, and the whole ride home Rathe was thinking of ways in which he too might utilize the methane gas to heat his buildings.

Soon after he returned Rathe started working on his project. Rathe sought advice from UVM's engineering department and various state departments but was denied help by both. Eventually, after a plea for a university grant was also rejected, Rathe was forced to rely on his own money and ingenuity.



He started by himself by driving an eight foot long, five inch diameter pipe into the fill. Once he had the hole started, he replaced the shorter eight foot pipe with an eighteen foot pipe, which also had a five inch diameter. He removed this, lit a match and sure enough it lit right up. Since it flamed, he was confident he could draw gas. He then placed an eighteen foot, four inch diameter PVC drainage pipe into the hole and capped the top.

An underground two inch diameter plastic pipe connects this well with two others and runs to a compressor. The compressor, which is located in a box car, compresses the methane gas from one half pound per square inch to eighty pounds, and sucks it into a 500 gallon tank for storage. The gas then goes thru underground lines to heat all the buildings.

Rathe had to make an initial investment of 2,000 to 2,500 dollars, but he says he saves at least that much a year in fuel costs. In a normal month, it costs him less than one dollar per day, and even in the coldest month the overall expense was only fifty dollars.

Although a few other people in Vermont use methane gas on a limited basis, no one has utilized it as much as Rathe. In this respect, he is totally self-sufficient. He is comparable to one who cuts down his own trees and uses the wood for all necessary fuel. Perhaps in the future, other people like Rathe will find ways in which they too can do their part for the energy crisis.

collegiate crossword

© Edward Julius, 1977 Collegiate CW77-8

ACROSS

1 Summit
5 Highball ingredient
10 "Look ——!"
14 Blunder
15 —— grudge (show ill will)
16 Mother of the gods
17 Part of Oliver Hardy phrase (3 wds.)
20 Sun Yat-——
21 Part of BPOE (abbr)
22 Vane direction
23 —— station
24 Abbess
26 Ornamental metal works
28 Cecil B. DeMille classic, "The ——"
33 Finishes
34 —— sauce
35 1970 academy-award winning movie
36 Greek letters
37 Tub
38 Grecian ——
39 Greek letter
40 Hit, as a golf ball
42 Rock
43 Sandarac tree
44 1964 movie, "—— Girl"
47 West Point freshmen
48 "If —— I Would Leave You"
49 Street, for short
51 Ending for profit
52 Part of TNT
53 —— Claire, Wisc.
56 The quality of tending to get smaller
60 Playwright Elmer ——
61 Novelist Charles ——
62 Penny ——
63 Biblical place
64 Pigpens
65 Greek letters

DOWN

1 Moslem officials
2 Ice-cream container
3 Maugham tale, "The ——"
4 Newt
5 Two pro football teams (4 wds.)
6 Dutch money
7 Vietcong insurgent group (abbr.)
8 "——'d toddle home safely and —— bed"
9 Food protected from spoilage (2 wds.)
10 Record player part
11 Presidential candidate of song, and family (2 wds.)
12 Costa ——
13 —— chair
18 —— sapiens
19 Side show attraction
25 Game show hosts
26 Negative vote
27 Voided tennis play
28 Shows a propensity
29 Get used to
30 Bon ——
31 Demolish, as a car
32 Catch
37 Thin layer of fine wood
38 Actress Mary ——
41 Miss Harper, for short
42 Shouts of surprise
43 Chemical suffix
45 Three lines of verse
46 Ellington vocalist, —— Anderson
49 "God's Little ——"
50 Something to fill
52 Something to turn
54 Italian wine city
55 Exploits
57 Philadelphia TV channel
58 Siamese (var.)
59 Siesta

Last Issue's Answers

| | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| S | T | R | E | A | M | | | S | C | R | A | M | S | |
| T | H | A | L | I | A | S | | C | O | R | O | N | E | T |
| R | E | T | I | R | E | E | | R | O | U | T | I | N | E |
| A | R | R | A | Y | | C | L | I | | S | O | L | A | R |
| T | O | A | S | | C | R | E | E | D | | R | I | C | E |
| A | B | C | | S | H | E | A | R | E | R | | N | E | O |
| | E | E | L | C | A | T | S | | V | I | B | E | S | |
| | | A | O | N | E | | M | O | T | A | | | | |
| | R | A | M | O | N | | L | A | T | E | R | A | L | |
| H | A | L | | P | E | R | U | S | E | S | | S | I | C |
| I | D | A | S | | L | A | T | H | E | | M | I | K | E |
| R | I | M | E | D | | V | E | E | | P | I | N | E | L |
| A | C | E | T | O | N | E | | R | E | A | L | I | N | E |
| M | A | D | I | S | O | N | | S | K | I | N | N | E | R |
| S | L | A | T | E | R | | | G | R | E | E | D | Y | |

The Road Not Taken

By Ned Andrews

"...Storrow Drive is backed up as far as the Park Street off-ramp; Route 93 is clear, but the traffic on the Mystic River Bridge is at a standstill mainly as a result of the heavy flow of incoming traffic on the Southeast Expressway. If you can avoid the expressway, then do it. This is Roger Watkins for the WBOS Sky-high Patrol."

I turned off the radio and laughed. Stay off the expressway he says... where were you fifteen minutes ago, Goddammit?! I looked out over the swelling hills of billboards and debris pierced by the unbroken line of rear bumpers and red brake lights that encompassed Boston's Southeast Expressway. "That Sky-high Patrol is about as useful as a weatherman who predicts rain after it has started raining," I muttered contentedly but then realized I was the victim of the joke.

"I could not easily forget the girl in the red VW... At least she had the spunk to curse me outright for being an ass-hole."

My foot was growing tired as it vacillated uncertainly between the brake and the accelerator. At one point, a car in front of me decided to change lanes giving me the chance to speed up momentarily to fill his space. As my foot reached for the accelerator, I suddenly discovered that instinct caused my foot to jump back onto the brake. My car came to a quick stop in front of a red Volkswagon Bug that changed lanes and filled the vacant spot ahead of me. Damn Boston driver. Who do you think you are, risking my life on this Goddam highway!

I retaliated by honking the horn several times only to discover that the driver was a woman and her middle finger was aimed directly at me. Bastard – I had a carnal desire for vengeance but then remembered a near-accident I once had when I nearly forced a truck into another car. So we all make mistakes, I reassured myself.

I took a deep breath and tried to forget the incident altogether, but I could not easily forget the girl in the red VW who was still at a standstill in front of me. At least she had the spunk to curse me outright for being an ass-hole. On the back of her car a bumper sticker read "Give Blood... Play Rugby" and at its side another, "Honk if you love God." I figured the girl had a sense of humour and perhaps even an evangelistic mind. Her long, black hair made me think she was my brother's old girl for an instant.

I had no physical attraction to her, but still I wondered about the human (Mass. License 17842) who was trapped on the Southeast Expressway, and had entered my life only as a result of an ill-fated near-accident.

I had never seen her before, and I knew at any moment, I would probably never see her again. A person who lives in the same environment as me and probably has a family and many friends, yet whose entire life and world has always been apart from my life. Perhaps the brief altercation we had in our cars will be the closest our two worlds will ever come to interacting with and affecting each other. It seemed to me a very dramatic moment, this ephemeral union of my world with her world, one which is probably as seemingly vast and complex as mine.

I was curious about the dark haired girl's world. I wanted to know what she was like, how she felt about some of the things that I often wondered about, and whether or not her world was like mine. There was an entire new world that I had at my fingertips, and I wanted to learn something from it, yet I knew that I never really would.

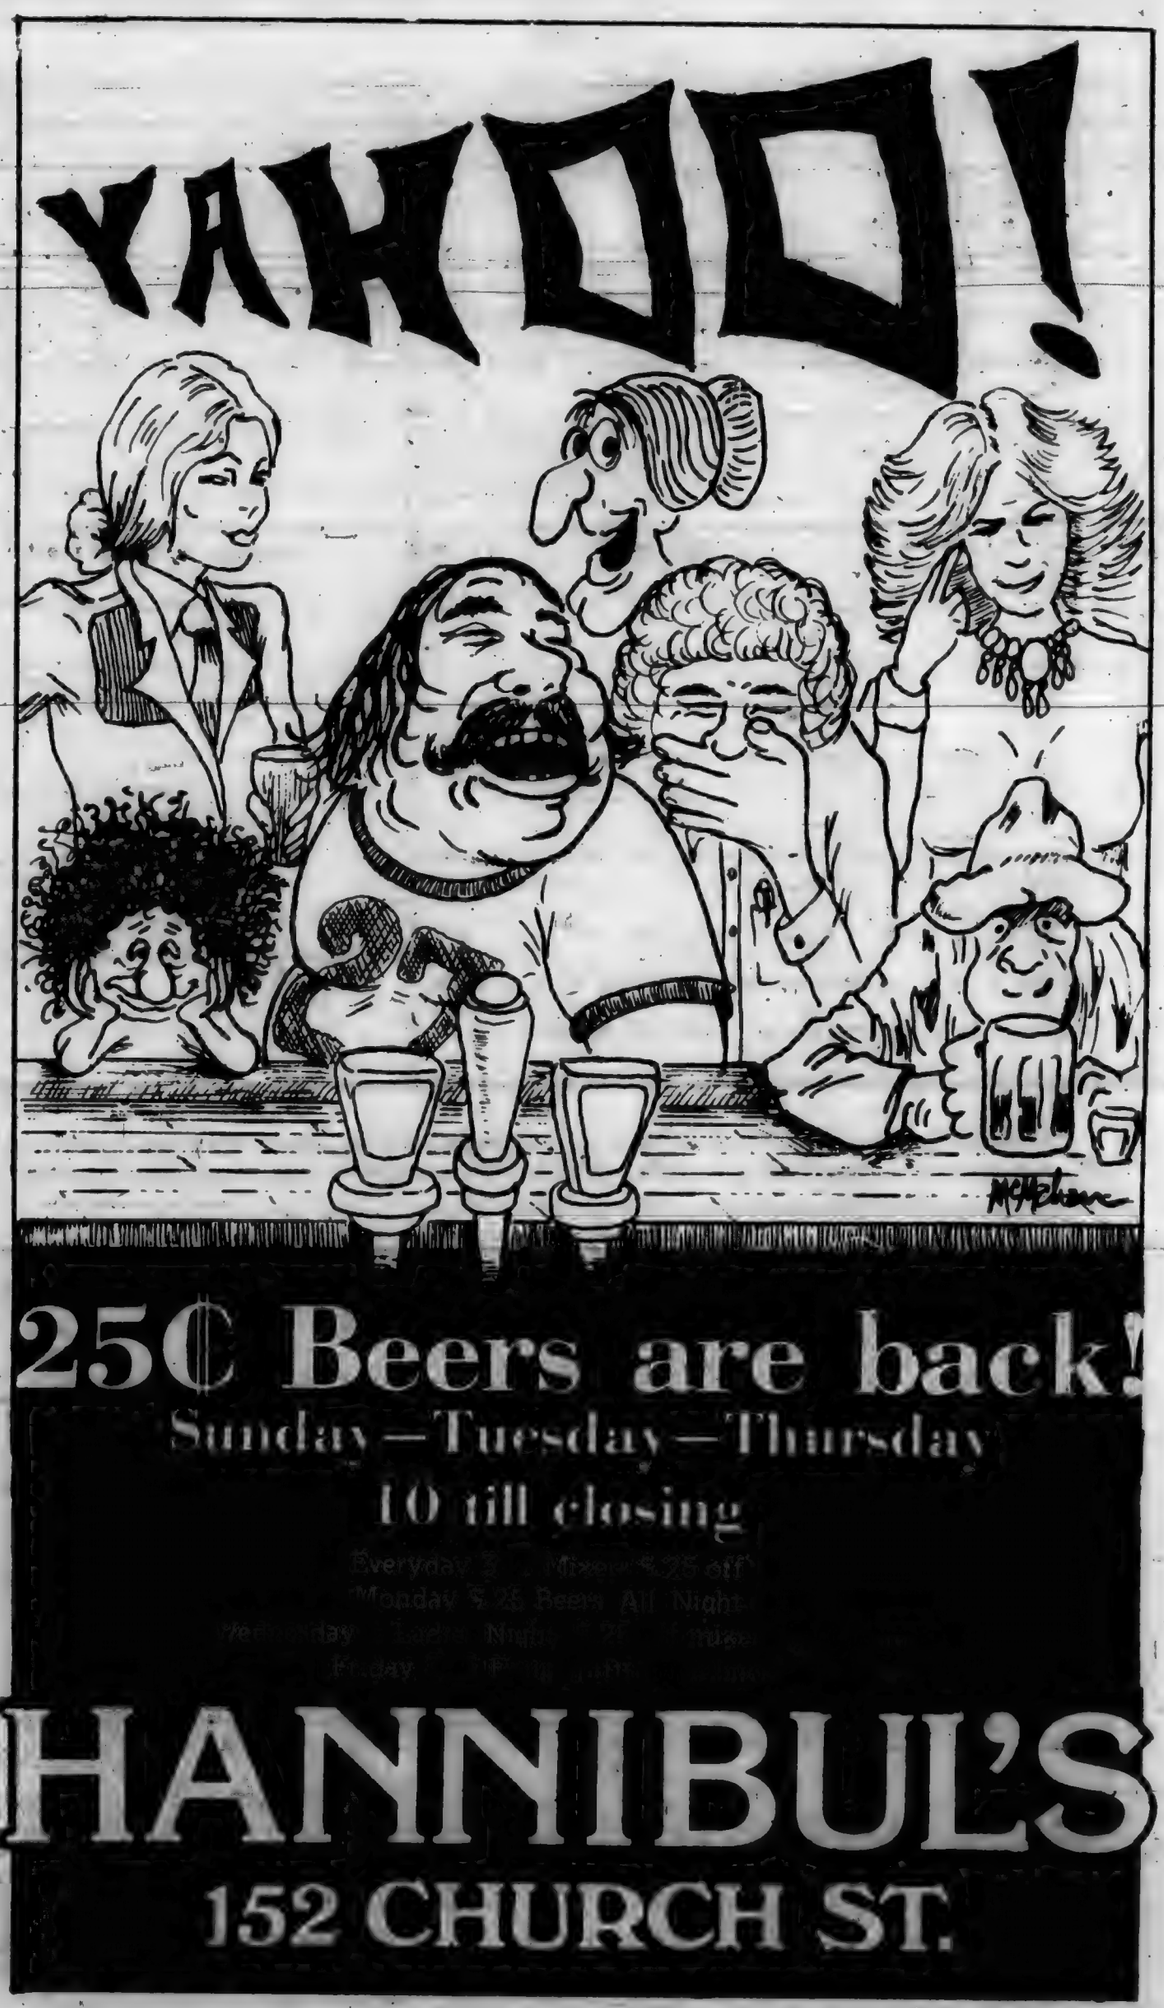
I was still behind the red Volkswagon as our cars edged their way on the Expressway into Boston. It is here that half the traffic forks right out onto the Mystic River Bridge and the rest moves left, northwest out onto Route 93. The Volkswagon signaled its desire to veer right, and the car to my right allowed her to slip in before him. Before I knew it, I was traveling helplessly home at 60 MPH alone, on Route 93. I thought about the dark-haired girl traveling home to her world, in another direction. She will never know me.

The sun had set already, and I looked in the rear-view mirror back toward the receding sky-line of Boston. The buildings were filled with thousands of tiny lights, manifesting life, hundreds of thousands of lives throughout the city. I started wondering about who I knew in Boston as my car sped northwest toward home.

See Our New Face!

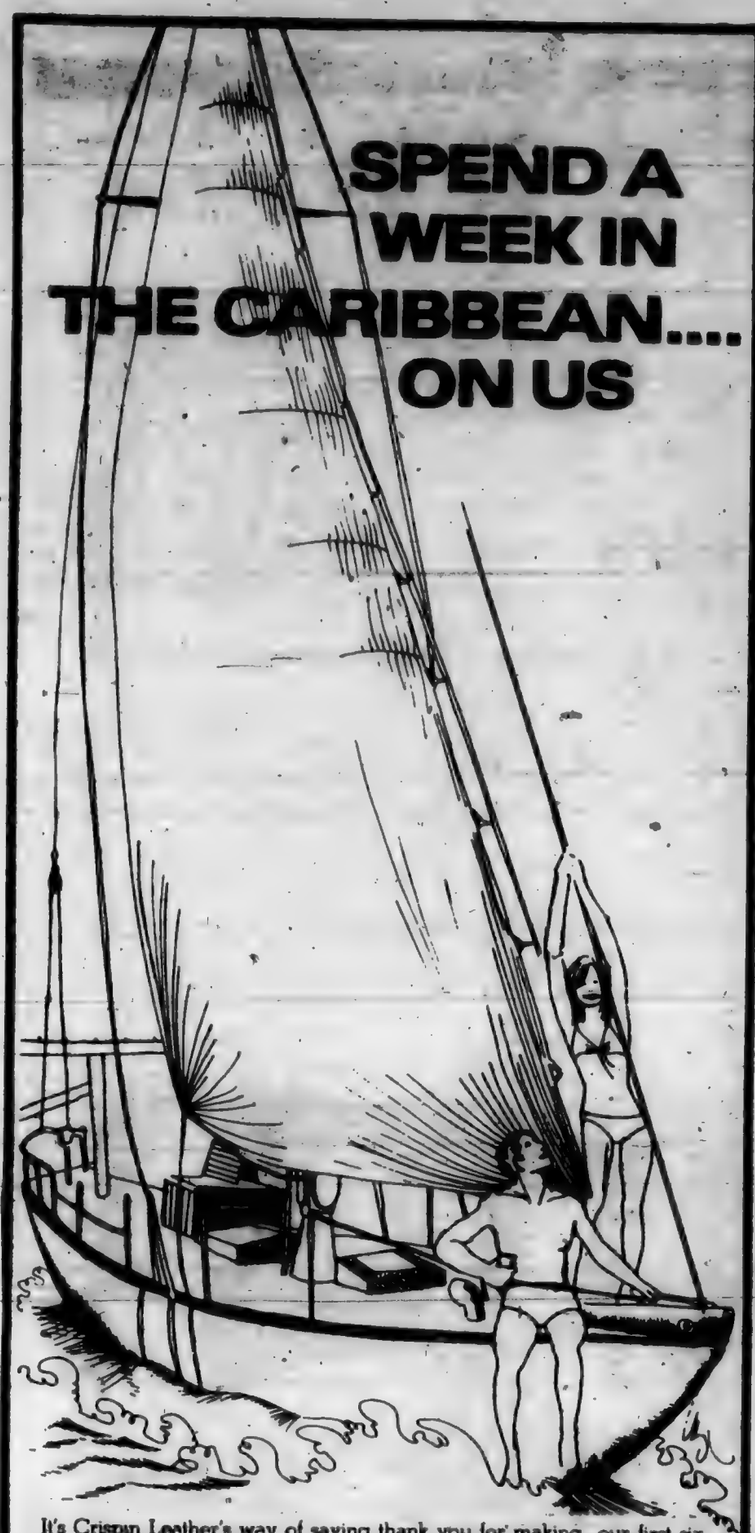
24 Main St. Winooski

$1 Off
Whole Wheat Pizza
With One or More Items Non-Delivered



10¢ Pitchers
with pizza (Winooski store only)

π PI EXPRESS



for free delivery call:
Winooski – 655-3005, 655-0977
Essex Jct. – 879-6333

25¢ Beers are back!
Sunday – Tuesday – Thursday
10 till closing
Everyday 2 Mixed $.25 off
Monday $.25 Beers All Night
Wednesday Ladies Night $.25 Cruise
Friday 4 to 8 pm

HANNIBUL'S
152 CHURCH ST.

SPEND A WEEK IN THE CARIBBEAN.... ON US

It's Crispin Leather's way of saying thank you for making our first six months of business such a smashing success. Break away on an exciting windjammer cruise for a week of sun and fun island hopping through the Caribbean. There's no purchase necessary. Just come down to Crispin Leather and register for paradise.

For The Largest Selection and Latest Styles In

FRYE

CRISPIN LEATHER

160 College St. 863-2216 (Next to Burlington Savings Bank)

The Vermont Cynic needs workers, writers and other orangutans. Come on down. It's more than just a paper!

The Model U.N.

Kicking into the International Scene

By Beth Cohen, Kathy Bucher, Jill Manheimer and Jim Cross

"The United Nations is not for delivering us to heaven but to keep us from hell."
Dag Hammarskjold

With this quote, Sir Brian Urqhart, the under-secretary–general for special political affairs, opened the 1978 Conference of the National Model United Nations in New York last month. Reminding the student delegates that the United Nations is a mirror image of the real world, the stage was set for a challenging six days of an accurate simulation of the United Nations.

The goal of the National Model U.N. is education about international politics through an intensive study of one of its most important components – the United Nations System. Member countries of the United Nations are represented by the participating 148 colleges and universities including Georgetown, Brown, UPenn, University of Virginia, Princeton, M.I.T., and West Point as well as UVM.

The Warren R. Austin Model U.N. Club of UVM had the privilege to represent the Republic of Mexico. Thirty students under the direction of Professor James Pacy of the political science department participated in the six month preparation for the conference. Due to lack of funds, only an eight member delegation was able to attend the meetings in NYC.

With the help of the real Mexican Mission to the U.N., UVM delegates became specialists in their appointed areas, all expressing the Mexican Policy stance as leader of the Third World nations in their respective committees. Within a period of five days, each committee negotiated and produced a final document to be adopted and implemented by the U.N. In these committees, actual United Nations documents were utilized. Caucusing continued into the early hours of the morning among groups such as OPEC, the Socialist Bloc, NATO, and the Common Market countries.

Committee concerns dealt with such varied problems as establishing procedures for arms control and disarmament, implementing a plan for World Food security and distributing the effects of multinational corporations, and a Common Monetary Fund to facilitate economic development. Other proposals concerned problems of population, women's rights, and housing. The General Assembly debate focused on the Middle East problem.

The closing session meetings were held under close security in various United Nations chambers. Security was especially rigid because the real U.N. Security Council was meeting in emergency session on the invasion of Lebanon.

The debate in the Model General Assembly produced a resolution condemning Israel which was so realistic that it was mistaken by an actual Security Council delegate as the real thing. (Fortunately, the Conference ended without provoking an international crisis.)

The U.N. Club did a good job at the Conference, but a larger delegation was needed to adequately provide representation on the 13 committees that Mexico was assigned to cover. Some schools had two or three students in each of the 20 committees. The level of expertise in UVM's delegation could have been greater, if excessive time had not been spent on fund raising.

The Warren R. Austin Club, open to the entire student body, hopes to send an even larger and better prepared delegation next year. The Conference issues discussed at the Model U.N. are indeed pertinent to any academic interest.

Besides learning about relevant academic issues, this year's UVM delegation discovered the difficulties inherent to negotiation, mediation and compromise under pressure. The most valuable concept the group departed with, however, was the understanding that the United Nations can only accomplish that which its member nations allow it to accomplish.

If one is interested in learning about international relations, one must first experience it.

| Student | Class | Major | Committee |
|---|---|---|---|
| Kathy Bucher | Sophomore | Canadian Studies | Commission on Transnationals |
| Beth Cohen | Senior | PoliSci & French | Special Session on Disarmament |
| Jim Cross | Freshman | Undecided | Food & Agriculture Organization |
| Jim DeWolfe | Junior | Economics | Transfer of Technology |
| Ernie Laird | Senior | PoliSci & Econ. | UN Conf. on Trade & Development |
| Jill Manheimer | Freshman | PoliSci | Economic & Social Council |
| Michael Stackpole | Junior | History | General Assembly |
| Maura Sylvester | Senior | History | Comm. on Social Development |

Whales

Cont. From Page 15

would float.

By the turn of the century, the whale stocks in the temperate zones were greatly depleted and the whaling industry turned toward the Antartic. At this time, petroleum products were being developed which replaced much, but not all of the demand for whale products. In view of the rapidly declining whale populations, the whaling nations during this century attempted to save their industry. The establishment of the International Whaling Commission in 1947 had good intentions but the quotas established were, and continue to be, weakly enforced.

Whale products are of great commercial value today, yet a few countries continue to whale simply to make use of their fleets. Eskimo civilizations still whale as a part of their subsistent lifestyle and cultural heritage.

The question, though, is the necessity of commercial whaling. There seems no simple solution as with any problem with opposing interests. A few private organizations have made attempts to save the whales and have made some progress. In spite of these attempts, though, man may soon have to accept that whales and whaling are merely part of his past.

EXPONENTIAL, MY DEAR WATSON

If you have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate education ahead, and you keep getting clues that your money is running short, then a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship may be the solution.

Currently we're seeking young men and women who would like to serve their nation as Air Force Officers. Consequently, if you're majoring in a selected technical/non-technical scientific, nursing, or pre-medical field, or can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, then you may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship pays your tuition, lab fees, (plus incidental fees), books, and $100 per month tax free. And even if you don't qualify for the two-year scholarship, you still receive the $100 a month while enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program.

What do we ask in return? That you serve America at least four years as an Air Force officer. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details and qualification requirements. Check it out. It might even make your education finances seem elementary.

AIR FORCE ROTC

Gateway to a great way of life.

Contact St. Michael's/UVM Air Force ROTC, 655-2000, ext. 2551.

WANT $25.?

The Cynic Short Story deadline is Monday at 2:00!

PROGRAM RECRUITING FAIR

Living/Learning Center
Saturday, April 15, 11 am - 3pm
Fireplace lounge

Programs 1978-79

| NEW PROGRAMS | CONTACT | PHONE |
|---|---|---|
| American Cluster Experience (ACE) | Prof. Marshall Knappen | x3180 |
| Architectural and Environmental Design | Prof. Robert Riddle | x2014 |
| Asian Religions: Text and Teachers | Prof. Ted Brennema | x3081 |
| Bilingual Education | Ann Woolfitt | x4161 |
| Braille | Marie Yannette | x4361 |
| Business Administration | Prof. John Ault | x4015 |
| Cycling | Warren Wheeler | x4249 |
| Early American Crafts | Jane Mitchell | x3446 |
| Emergency Medicine | Thomas Oren | x4242 |
| Environmental Communications | Nancy Moote | x4254 |
| German Houses | Prof. Roy Allen | x3430 |
| Green Mountain Design | Mary Jane Tankard | x4248 |
| Green Thumb | Stephanie Leach | x3447 |
| Hmong Semester | Prof. Karen Edwards | x4050 |
| Horse Sense | Bonnie Turpin | x4246 |
| Integrated Humanities | Prof. Bill Dahms | x3180 |
| International Business | Burkhard Hoene | 3447 |
| Journalism | Marianne Jones | 4263 |
| Joy of Cooking | Jonathan Blitz | x4082 |
| Learning About Learning | Prof. Arnim Gruning | x4050 |
| Mimes | Mark Muscatello | x3301 |
| Modern Dance | Cheryl Symmes | x4255 |
| Natural Foods | Susan Childs | x2694 |
| Nineteenth Century Vermont | Jonathan Richardson | x3874 |
| Noah's ARC (Animal Rescue & Care) | Karen Lubold | x4257 |
| Outdoor Recreation Management | Mark Young | x2608 |
| Panhellenic | Jeanne Wall | x3850 |
| Photography | Steven Laros | x4252 |
| Potters | Dan Rosenfeld | x2614 |
| Resource Awareness Program | John Engroff | x4200 |
| Rocks: Geological Evolution of Burlington Area | Prof. Dion Steward | x3396 |
| Rugby | Paul Heder | x4245 |
| Rural Options for Urban Americans | Prof. Garrison Nelson | x2601 |
| Russian Houses | Prof. Kenneth Nabors | x3436 |
| Scandinavian Suite | Kristin Nelson | x4361 |
| Special Education | Patricia Pierson | x2936 |
| Strummin' and Pickin' | Adam Haut | x2229 |
| Student Academic Planning in the Sciences | Dave Bianchi | x2907 |
| Sunshine on a Cloudy Day (Peer Counseling) | Beth Alter | x4265 |
| Theatre Centre Players | Mary Krause | x4247 |
| Tropical Plant Biology | Prof. David Barrington | x3221 |
| Visual Astronomy | Michael Farnsworth | x3820 |
| Wilderness Sports | Jim LaFontaine | x4250 |
| Worldwide | Prof. David Conrad | x3356 |
| Written Way | Richard Dean | x4242 |

An opportunity to talk to next year's program directors about their programs

VERMONT CYNIC

EDITORIAL BOARD

Editor-in-Chief: David C. Greeff
Managing Editor: Alex D. Walker
Executive Editor: Russell F. Flannery
Layout Editor: Jerome E. Andrews.

News: Robert J. Moore
Features: Alan Marshall
Sports: Rich Chalmers, Steve Larose
Arts: Vaune Davis
Advertising Manager: Brian Evans
Business Manager: Julie Voll

The Vermont Cynic is published weekly during the school year except vacations by students at UVM. Opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or the State of Vermont.

Editorial

The Tuition Hike: Is it Necessary?

On Friday the UVM Board of Trustees will inevitably approve yet another tuition increase; $100 for in-state students and $245 for out-of-staters. For non-residents, the increase is commensurate with the national 7% inflation rate and not cause for excessive concern as UVM still remains competitive with most private universities. For in-state students however, the $100 rise — representing an 8.2% increase — will be a crippling economic hardship. UVM already maintains the highest in-state tuition in the country, and this is in a state with one of the lowest income levels.

Can this be avoided? The answer is both yes and no. Inflation, capitol improvements, and mandatory wage increases for faculty and staff are all compelling realities which prevent tuition stability. Yet, it appears that in a university of this size and complexity, many cuts might also be initiated. Finding out where and how these reductions can be made is indeed a difficult task, and possibly the institution of zero based budgeting techniques — or the systematic annual reevaluation and justification of every program and dollar spent — might help to weed out duplication and excess. Such reviews have been successful in trimming down state budgets, and recently to a limited degree in the federal government.

The fact that areas of excess exist is undeniable. One project under the direction of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) estimated that with the implementation of only "small changes," over $100,000 would be saved in energy costs annually.

While UVM certainly must be harder on itself in eliminating wastage, it must also evaluate its relationship with the state. This year the legislature, at the request of Governor Snelling, appropriated only $300,000 of the over $1.2 million dollar increase requested by President Coor. Simultaneously however, they approved an extra $1.5 million for the Vermont State College System, allowing them to lower their threatened tuition hike. The state colleges received considerably higher funding in both real dollars and per capita terms when UVM educates more students than all of them combined. This is an inherently unfair situation which must be reversed.

The reasons for this are unknown, at least according to President Coor. But regardless of what they are, if this trend of insufficient state allocations to UVM continues, drastic measures will become imperative if the university is to remain a real opportunity for the average Vermonter.

Possibly, a total redefinition of whether UVM, which derives only 15% of its budget from state appropriations, is actually a state or private institution, is in order. Now, this vacillation between the two roles is harmful to the university in both the short and long run.

LETTERS

On the Power of the Press

To the Editor:

Pertaining to the commentary by Dan Adams: "A subtle power of the press" (April 6), I would like to add a few words.

I was a participant in the February 18th March for Jobs in Washington, D.C. sponsored by the jobs or income now (JOIN) coalition. As one of the 2,200 (not 6,000 unfortunately) marchers I know that there are very few in the JOIN march who were not aware of the mass media's subtle power to pick and choose which issues enter into the public forum. As a result, the 200 plus groups of JOIN carried out an extensive advance publicity campaign through fund raising events, leafleting, and so-called "underground newspapers," etc. in every area represented in the march for jobs on February 18th. However, the subtle power of the press is a two-edged sword, and not covering the march will undermine their dubious credibility even further.

Whether the mass media realizes it or not, the February 18th event's effectiveness was undermined less that they (press) would think or hope. And since the JOIN coalition organized for, and by, the mass as opposed to an elitist clique, the exposure was aimed and carried out in the factories, unemployment and welfare lines, and in the tenement complexes in the ghettoes, barrios, and on the college campuses in those areas. The demonstrators are far from frustrated or demoralized because the mass media largely ignored the march. The people who organized and took part in the February 18th March For Jobs in Washington D.C. learned very much from the successes and pitfalls of the 1960's which was indicated in Dan Adam's commentary. One lesson was not relying on the subtle power of mass media for publicity, rather relying on their own grass roots publicity. The movement for jobs or income now is just beginning and will grow much faster and bigger than many people (particularly the ruling elite) realize.

JC Stockwell
An unemployed
Burlingtonian &
ex-UVM employee

To Wait in Line

The usual semester difficulties of the ridiculous PE activity selection process has struck again. When I went to the gym to sign up for the tennis two I was told that it was limited to sixteen students. I was seventeenth in line. But wait, last semester I was told that they accepted twenty-five students in a tennis two class. I purposely went to the gym early this semester to make sure I could get into the course. What a waste of time. It's unbelievable that students have to put up with this every semester.

My basic complaint with the activity selection process is its inconsistency. This university says that students have to have two credits in Physical Education to graduate. I know I have another year of school left, but if I have to put up with these continual road blocks I know the words that will be shoved into my face from the university. "I am sorry but you will not be granted a degree without completion of your PE requirements." The question I ask is how can you complete PE requirements if you cannot get into a PE course?

This constant mad scramble that ensues because freshmen get as much priority as seniors stinks! The previous process was much more logical and much less confusing to many students.

Randy Briggs

More on Parking

To the Editor:

It seems to me that March is a battle between Winter and Spring. The frequent changes of weather, the thin layer of snow and ice covering much of campus make me anxious to see green grass once again.

However, there are some areas on campus, such as in front of Coolidge Hall and behind the Mason-Simpson-Hamilton complex, where the grass will not grow this spring. Though once attractive lawns, these areas will remain muddy throughout April and May. This is because students have used these areas as convenient parking places, not caring about the harm that they are doing. Unless UVM allots funds for the reseeding of these areas, we will have mud rather than lawns.

One of the reasons for students' actions is that UVM security has been lax in enforcing parking regulations. The parking policy is quite clear — posted signs say that parking is restricted. I think the UVM administration must make some decisions. If the overcrowded parking situation necessitates the incorporation of these areas into parking lots, then land should be prepared for that purpose. However, if the administration decides to preserve these areas as lawns, then UVM security should enforce regulations and fine violations.

Lewis Leyman
Robinson Hall

Thanks Guys

Charlie Clark

To the Editor:

I would like to express my thanks to all those who worked and supported me in the recent S.A. election.

I am looking forward to next year. There are many projects and decisions to be made which will directly influence students in the coming years. Anyone who has any questions of me or wants to give me advice, please feel free to put a note in my mailbox in the S.A. office or call me at 205 Wing Hall (864-7213). Thanks again.

Charlie Clark

John Allen

To the Editor:

I would like to publicly express my thanks to all those who supported my effort in the recent IRA election. Most especially I would like to thank Steve Bove, Meg Reale, Tom Hunt and John Cronin for helping out on publicity at the expense of their own time for relaxation.

I hope all those with whom I work next year while in office will be as helpful and enthusiastic.

Sincerely,
John L. Allen

Coop Dorm: "Sloppy Objectivity"

To the Editor:

In response to the news story ("Students Will Be Responsible For Upkeep of Co-op Dorm; Will Save $130 on Room Bill") from last week's Cynic, April 6, I would like to express a few personal feelings concerning the co-op dormitory, to be established in Hamilton Hall this coming fall semester.

It is absolutely necessary that you the students, as potential residents of this cooperative dormitory, understand its full implications and potentials. I am doubtful that this is possible simply from reading the Cynic's article.

Very basically, for those who have not yet encountered any propaganda dealing with the issue, the cooperative dorm program will involve 117 students, all opting for this alternative in room-choosing this spring. It will provide these students with an opportunity to assume direct responsibility for their environment by replacing the present custodial services with student initiative and cooperation. An agreement will be made by the students with each other and the University to sustain clean, comfortable living conditions. Thus, the success or failure of the co-op dorm lies in the hands of only those students involved.

It is understandable, yet often regretable, that reporters are sworn to objectivity. At first glance, the objective observer could not possibly overlook the most tangible constituents of this proposal; that the students must clean up after themselves and that they'll receive $130 discount on their room bills. Yet, I believe, the success of the cooperative dormitory lies in a conscious de-emphasis of these two points. It is not intended specifically to save money.

It is through our every action that our values and feelings are

(continued on page 24)

Letters Cont.

On Page 24

The Politics of Security

By Dan Adams

The mounting struggle by the government to confront the flaws in the ailing Social Security system is bringing out the worst in our political process. Self-interest politics – the fundamental and, this author feels, adequate and legitimate base of the democratic process – combined with an uneducated public (neither adequate nor legitimate) suggests that the government may simply be unable to legislate the much needed reform. For the baby boom crowd, such an observation is grounds for great pessimism.

Simply put, "critical reform" means higher Social Security taxes for employers and employees, lower benefits or fewer beneficiaries, and/or funding from outside the Social Security system. There are numerous factors demanding this reform, the most significant being demographic – in 1947 the worker-beneficiary ratio was 22:1; 1960 was 4:1; and it is projected to be 2:1 in "a few generations." (Agee, William M. New York Times, April 8, 1978, p. 23)

Last December, a step was taken in the right direction with a $227 billion tax hike, demanding from the labor force increased funding to support the increasing number of beneficiaries. Yet a current scanning of political forces at work – one being the 1978 congressional elections – shows a significant political incentive for those legislators interested in reversing the hike.

Other than being tragic, such a reversal would be evidence of the government's vulnerability to the demands of the public, regardless of the base on which those demands are founded. Unfortunately, the issue in much of the public's mind is solely one of increased taxes, with little regard to the consideration that, if the Social Security system is not radically changed, the investments of those employees currently under thirty-five years of age, may, as Agee notes, "guarantee them nothing."

The problem is one of properly educating the public. "Tell the taxpayer, for example, that the actuaries are disputing whether the Social Security Administration possesses unfunded liabilities of $4.1 trillion or $4.7 trillion," notes Agee, "and he'll shrug his shoulders." We shrug our shoulders because such numbers are unfathomable, and because it is difficult to think thirty to forty-five years into the future to when the baby boom will begin to retire. Yet we can feel taxes, and are quick to express our displeasure whenever the burden is increased.

It is this which makes the process of raising taxes a death walk for many politicians. With that fear in the air, numerous alternative proposals have been cropping up which, in relation to the Social Security tax hike, are less radical and, unfortunately, less productive in confronting the nagging deficits.

One such proposal, which would reduce the tax hike by using funds from general tax revenues, would probably aid in getting its authors reelected, yet would also be a dangerous precedent. If the public – employers and employees – are permitted to avoid biting the Social Security bullet now, relying instead on general revenues, there is no reason to expect them to cooperate in the future when the deficits are greater and the labor force contributing is smaller.

Deviating very little from the traditional, near-sighted taxpayers want to have their cake and eat it too, and are forcing vulnerable legislators to legitimize a short term luxury through public law. Individual interests of legislators being what they legitimately might, the legislators are squaring off in stances most advantageous to their reelection concerns. It is critical that, in the next few months, pressure from educated constituents and legislators in the position to be dedicated to the long term public good unite to prevent a cut in the Social Security tax hike. The baby boom crowd won't be young forever.

The Role of Law and Justice

By Eric Pollard

One of the fundaments of social organization is the formulation and codification of certain basic tenets that are commonly agreed upon to govern the behavior of those who associate themselves with the group for which those tenets have been developed. Each participant subjects himself to the restrictive elements of the tenets as well as enjoys the benefits that accrue to the group and to each individual. Agreement with and obedience to the whole body of laws is implicit in any activity within the confines of the social group which the law defines and represents, regardless of knowledge of the minute specifics which the law may include.

The majority of the people in the United States would agree that laws are in fact a necessary element of a democracy, if only to keep the rights which one individual enjoys from impinging on the rights of others. The law, by providing a definition of wrong behavior, is the necessary bond in which a large, naturally ambivalent group of individuals can be held together in what functions as a single unit pursuing the common good.

A major element of the law is a provision that allows for those who deem it necessary to deviate from the common good and violate the tenets by which society is governed. Punishment, usually by deprivation of physical and material rights, serves the dual purpose of removing the deviants from the social group and deterring others from attempting to stray from the path provided for them. This aspect of the law is usually labeled "justice," meaning simply the ascertainment of a given action's legality relative to the specific provisions of the socially accepted law. It is admissable to send a person to jail, to deprive him of his rights, in order to guard the freedoms of the other members of the social group – the entirety of whom the criminal theoretically has injured by his action. He is then interred because of his actions against or potential danger to society as a whole rather than any specific individual within that society who may have suffered from his actions. This in itself is no dangerous problem and is in fact indicative of man's admirable concern for his cohabitants – one that is, in general terms, held by every person who acts in accordance to the law that defines the parameters of his social existence.

While acceptance of and agreement with law and its subsequent forms of justice is nearly universal, it is blatantly obvious that general disregard for the specific provisions of the law is also prevalent. That is not to say that most individuals would consider crime as a viable alternative to the more acceptable means of livelihood, yet there are very few who can claim a strict adherence to each given ordinance of the law. An argument could well be made that some wrong actions are of less consequence than others, but the laws that govern behavior within society bear the same authority in each and every case. The laws establishing the national speed limit at fifty-five mph have the same amount of real authority as the laws defining treasonous activities, as both came out of the United States Congress – the body which statutorily represents the entire American population. A dichotomy exists at all levels and in all areas of human society in which common social tenets are applied; the laws which are agreeable for the general order of society are too tenuous to be held binding at the individual level. Human law is in fact an inadequate method of insuring social order and progress. Man, in the generic sense, is incapable of formulating a codified body of laws by which he will allow himself to be governed.

The impact of this problem is evident. While peace seems always to be at hand, it is never quite within the grasp of the whole international community. Victimless crime is the cause celebre of many political action committees. Even the state troopers travel at speeds in excess of the established speed limit. The disregard of law and the abuse of the justice system is not usually the result of premeditation, but the response to a socially acceptable phenomenon. It seems ridiculous that a society could accept actions which are by principle contrary to that structure which was designed to hold that society, and yet that is certainly the case. The rise of white-collar crime is a testimony to its existence.

"It is painfully obvious that man cannot be a fair judge of his own actions and that by relying on his own faculties can achieve little else than a contradictory ethic by which he hopes to arrive at some 'good'."

It is painfully obvious that man cannot be a fair judge of his own actions and that by relying on his own faculties can achieve little else than a contradictory ethic by which he hopes to arrive at some "good." Justice is no longer meaningful because of its dependence on the social validity of the whole body of law. Society must either enforce and obey its laws to the letter or go beyond itself in search of a basis of common government that is less biased than the one it has developed. The authority of the law must come from a source above the individual and general components of society in order to be binding on them.

The Downhill Edge

THEY'VE JUST ARRIVED...

Running shoes from:

New Balance
Etonic
Tiger
Puma
Nike

plus a

Complete Line of Running Gear including...

frank shorter running gear

Complete Line of Skateboards and Accessories from...

Gordon & Smith
Kryptonic
Bahne
Hobie

Complete Selection of Tennis Shoes by

Puma • Nike • Tread 2 • Beta

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

81–85 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401 (802) 862-2282

LETTERS

Publish Or Perish?

As I come to the end of my four year study at the University of Vermont, the formal purpose of the University becomes more and more evident. Sad as it may sound, the University is not a place for students to learn and expand their intellectual and practical knowledge, but rather a Publishing House for professors. It seems clear to me that the transformation of this institution's role from a university to a publishing house was not by the choice of the students or the professors. Rather, the change was directed by the ominous group known as the Faculty Standards Committee.

A few days ago I learned of a decision made by the aforementioned committee not to grant early tenure to Dr. James Loewen, associate professor of the sociology department. The justification given by the committee for this decision is alone flimsy and narrow-minded. However, in light of Dr. Loewen's enthusiastic dedication to his students and tireless involvement within the University community, this decision is unconscionable.

The Committee asserts that Dr. Loewen needs to "strengthen his recent scholarly record," and that "while he has produced some articles and book reviews in recent past, an independent, substantial piece of scholarly work would give him a much stronger record for tenure." The committee's emphasis on publishing is one that suggests that a professor should spend a majority of his/her time attempting to publish, and less time on other "non-scholarly" activities. Let me briefly outline the "non-scholarly" activities of Dr. Jim Loewen.

Within the sociology department he is the coordinator of introductory courses, the coordinator of advising, and the chairperson of the Department Committee on Undergraduate Policy. He also offers advance courses in Race Relations and Methods of Data Gathering, and within the university he is chairperson of the Equal Opportunities Subcommittee and member of the Service Learning Committee. His outstanding community service includes presentations to sociological and other meetings, testifying and filing complaints with the Vermont Public Service Board etc.

While UVM does not choose to recognize this man, others do. On the same day that Dr. Loewen learned of the committee's decision, he was informed that he had won a national award of $2500 from the American Sociological Association for his "contributions to intergroup relations and to support continuing research and action in intergroup relations." Though the committee insisted that his "last book-length work of scholarship" appeared in 1971, it in fact appeared in 1974. Despite all his activities, Dr. Loewen still has managed to publish and win awards, such as the Lillian Smith Award for the best southern non-fiction of 1973 for his book, Mississippi: Conflict and Change.

In conclusion, in the four years that I have been at UVM I have never met a more supportive, involved, and available professor as Jim Loewen, nor one more deserving of early tenure. It seems that the university is losing sight of its purpose of student/faculty interaction and that the university cannot exist without its students as students and faculty as teachers. It seems more important to the administrators of this university for the professors to be contributors to publishers instead of educators of students and the betterment of the University Community.

Melinda Grey

Co-op Dorm

Cont. From Page 22

manifested. By taking on responsibility for ourselves, others, and our environment, we are communicating a very important feeling; that we care! It does not have to be taboo to say "I care." Now, with a cooperative dormitory, we are given the opportunity to actively speak to our fellow students.

Of course it is questionable that merely changing the structure of the environment is going to do the job, and suddenly — Poof! — an automatic community of people working and feeling together will emerge. In the matter of fact, it probably won't. What is important though are the actual attitudes that are brought into the program.

Attitudes such as that exemplified by "a student" in the large print inset of last week's Cynic news story are at best; misleading as general student sentiment, and injurious to the program itself. Firstly, the "student" whom you quoted is hardly the type of person that might want to live in the co-op dorm anyway. Thus, his/her opinion is merely "chaff on the skin," expendable and unnecessary. Secondly, if the Cynic were to have taken some care to read its own news story more closely, they would have seen that, as indicated in a random-sample survey conducted this February in the dorms, that student sentiment was very much on the contrary. (Out of 160 students polled across campus, 100 responded favorably to the idea of living in a co-op dorm.) These figures certainly point in a different direction than the emphasis of last week's news story indicates. So c'mon Cynic, remove your colored glasses and let's give the student body at UVM something more than sloppy objectivity.

As for the potential residents of Hamilton Hall, when deciding whether or not you want to live in the co-op setting, please, for the sake of all involved, do not choose it simply for the money. Look inside and ask yourself if you really want to share in the responsibility for yourself, others, and your environment with a group of 116 fellow students, and work at it. If you decide "Yes," beautiful! Then please go ahead and speak.

Peter Corbett

SPORTS

Marathon Issue... Pages 27-29

Vermont Rugby Suffers First Loss

By Steven Larose

Slippery field conditions hindered the University of Vermont Rugby team, as the University of Maine pulled off a 10-6 upset on Saturday.

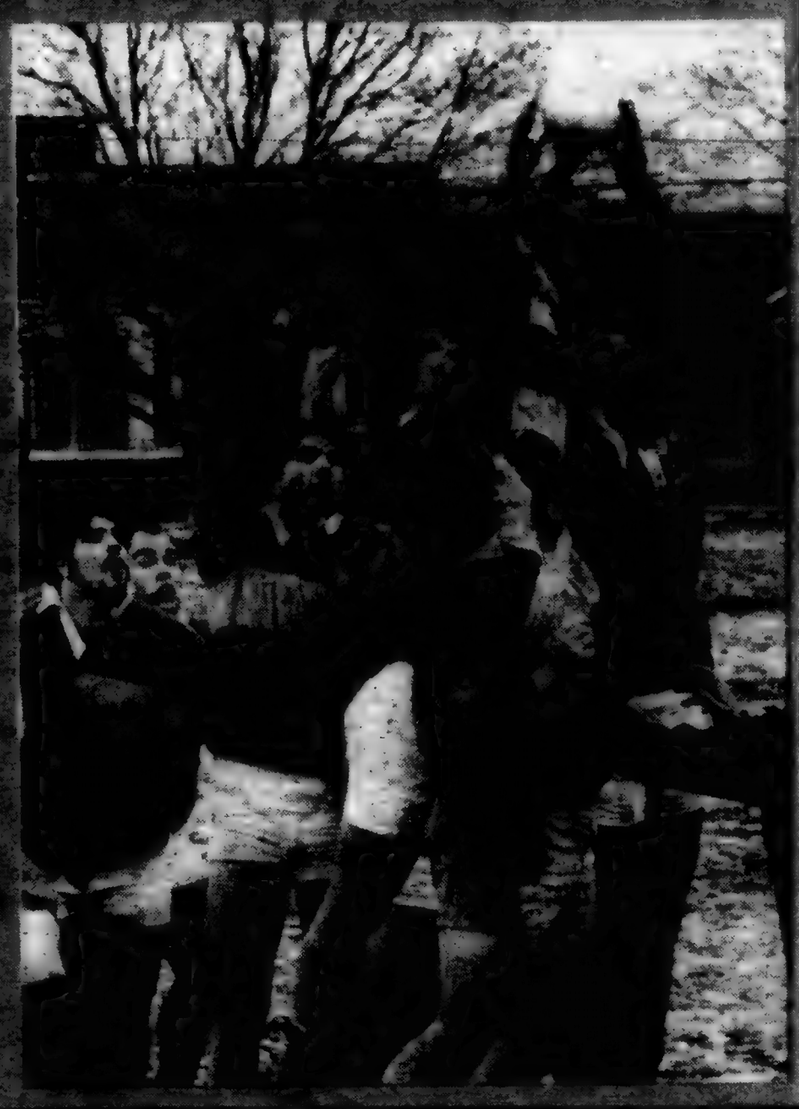
Jeff Small broke out of the scrum to scamper for five yards and score Vermont's only points, making four on the touchdown and two points on the conversion. Vermont was ahead 6-4 late in the second quarter, but the Cats finally succumbed to the weather and the tougher Black Bears were able to score again.

Coach Bob Kaplan later remarked "It was slippery, sloppy and cold. Maine has good precision and I was impressed by them. They were stronger than I thought they would be. If we had better field conditions, however, the outcome might have been different."

Kaplan also remarked that the Vermont squad will have to work on their passing and pursuit this week in preparation for upcoming rival Dartmouth. "We need more emphasis on our major strength, our fast forwards. We lost a lot of the edge because of the slippery footing. Also the defense could be improved. We have to move faster to where the ball is."

The Rugby mentor continued by remarking that the Cats have to tighten up their passing and formation, but that the team spirit continued to hold out. "The men were really up for this game."

Jeff Travaline, club president, commented that the team had cold beer and cold fans on Saturday, but he was optimistic for the Cats' upcoming game with Dartmouth Saturday at 1 p.m. "Steve Lynch, our senior prop, has been consistent and he has a lot of dedication. Against Dartmouth we should have a more open passing game, which should allow us to really rack up some points."



Vermont's B Team defeated Maine 3-0 in the second game on Saturday. Vermont's new Third Team will have its first game against St. Michael's on Wednesday.

UVM Rugby runs scrambled through the muck but fell short against UMaine last Saturday.

Photos by Steve Lincoln

Jenkins' Offensive Attack Boosts Vermont Lacrosse Squad to Victory in Open

OPEN FOR THE SEASON

Bringing You

The Most Complete Selection of Underwater Gear in the Champlain Valley

Parkways—Poseidon—US Divers—Decor—AMF-Voit—SeaQuest

Summer course now being scheduled. Come sign up!

Pre-Season Sale Now Going On

We offer all levels of N.A.U.I. certification

NAUI SAFETY THROUGH EDUCATION

northern divers inc.

Mon.—Sat 10—6
103 Main St.
862-3881

"Vermont's most complete dive shop"

Books For Passover

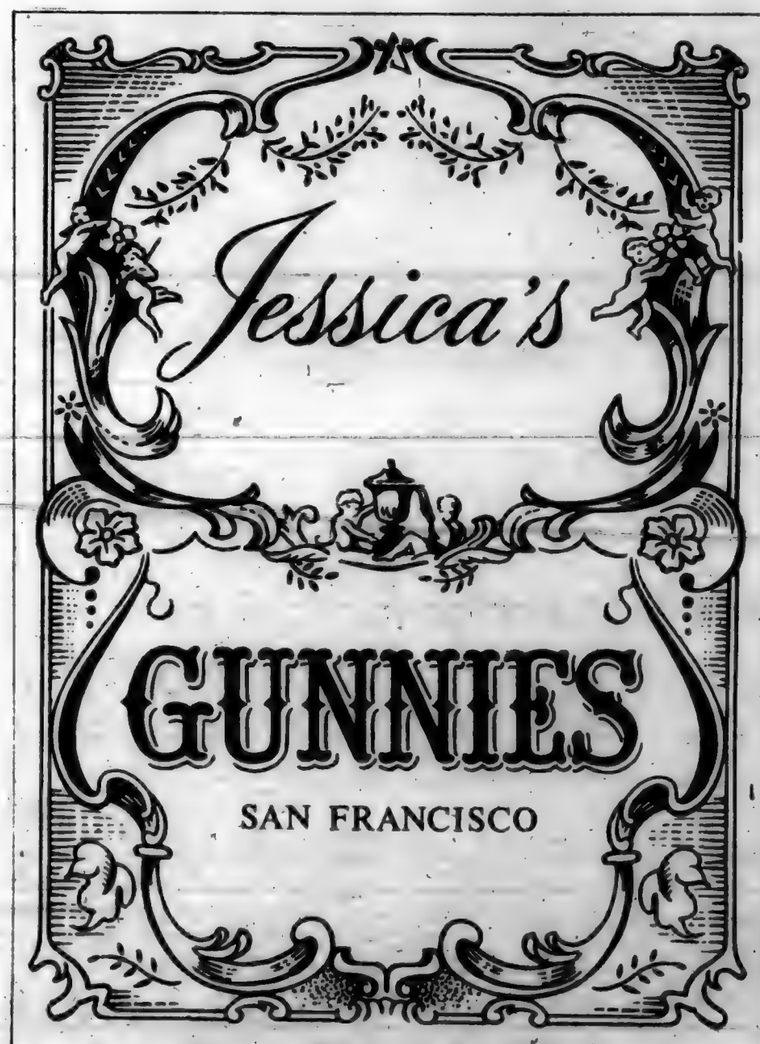
| | |
|---|---|
| Birnbaum Haggadah | $2.95 |
| Passover Haggadah | $1.00 |
| Passover Fun Book | $1.95 |



Many Other Books on Judiasm

Wit & Wisdom Bookshop

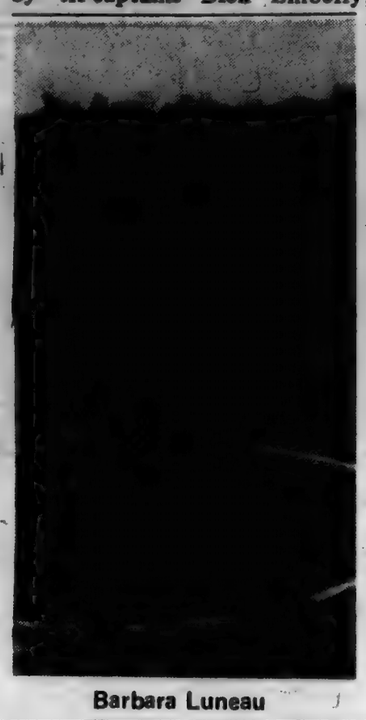
100 Dorset St., South Burlington, Vt

Jessica's

GUNNIES

SAN FRANCISCO

ACT TWO



97 Church St.

Track Individuals Will Provide Outdoor Team's Success

By Melissa Brown

The University of Vermont indoor track strength last winter will be crucial for the Outdoor Track and Field Squad as a large number of returning record holding athletes will provide the punch for both the men's and women's teams this spring.

The Men's teams will be led by tri-captains Dick Emberly,

Barbara Luneau

Bernie Gagnon and Craig Buscerni. Emberly, who owns the UVM indoor records for the sixty yard high hurdles (7.7) and the triple jump (46'2"), will compete in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles. Kusiak terms Emberly "probably the most versatile member of the team."

Gagnon excels at both the 100 and 220 yard dashes and currently holds the Archie Post Field Records in both at 9.9 and 21.7 seconds respectively. Buscerni has competed in several events, his strength being the javelin in which he placed second in the Yankee Conference meet last year with a throw of 208'.

The leading pole vaulter will be Eric Benson who is in the 13' range. The team has three very strong runners in the 880 event; the trio of Ed Nemeth, Larry Cunningham, and Dwight Triblehorn should all be running the event in under two minutes according to Kusiak.

The hurdle events will be rounded out by Jim Kaufmann, strong in the 120 yard high hurdles, and John Looney, who currently shares the UVM indoor record in the forty-five yard high hurdles.

The 4x110 relay team is an already proven strength for the squad. Recently, the team made up of Emberly, Gagnon, Looney and freshman Joe McClallen placed first in the Westfield 4x110 Relay in Massachusetts. Their time of 43.5 shattered the previous UVM record by three tenths of a second and qualified them for the New England Championships to be held in May.

Several outstanding freshmen complete the team's picture. Joe McClallen of Rutland, Vermont is a two time High School New England Champion in the 220 yard dash, has also run the 100 in 9.7. John Cushman of St. Albans will be a stalwart competitor in the long jump having exceeded the 22' distance.

The team has several other former high school champions in Bob Frank and Ryan Rickarby. Frank is the Connecticut Class "B" record holder in the sixty yard hurdles. Rickarby is the Western Massachusetts pole vault champion. And finally, Charles Claudio of Providence, R.I. has been strong in the shotput and currently in the decathalon. His size (6'7",220 pounds) should make him very competitive in the decathalon event this season.

The women's team has an extremely impressive core of competitors, several of whom also hold school records. Captain Janet Lynch and sophomore Janet Terp are proven winners in several events. Both Lynch and Terp excelled during the Eastern Championships last year in which Lynch won and set the record in the pentathalon and long jump. Two years ago Lynch placed sixth in the pentathalon at the national championships. Terp finished second in this year's indoor pentathalon championship and third in the long jump. In addition Terp won numerous school records in the long jump, high jump, hurdles, and dashes. This outdoor season will feature the first head-to-head meeting of Terp and Lynch in the pentathalon (shot, high jump, 800 meter run, 100m. hurdles, long jump).

Other outstanding women include Carolyn Marinelli who competes in the 220 and the 4x440 relay; Marie Dowling in the 220, 440 and the lead-off runner for the record setting 4x440 relays; and Robin Snyder, a two miler who won the unseeded section of the Indoor Eastern championships this year in 11:27.

A solid core of freshmen, many of whom have been competing during the indoor season, will ensure the women's success this spring. Judi St.

(continued on page 32)

The UVM 4x110 relay team made up of Emberly, Gagnon, Looney and McClallen. Photo by Steve Larose

Sports Editorial

Kusiak's Track Guidance

Ed Kusiak is a man with a handicap who always has come out a winner year after year.

Kusiak is the University of Vermont men's and women's track coach, for both the indoor and outdoor teams. He must contend with poor facilities, a full teaching schedule, lack of funds for recruiting and a general disinterest in track by students other than those on the team. However, Kusiak has managed to build up a successful women's team, and the men are struggling to receive New England recognition.

It hasn't been easy for the tracksters and their coach. In light of their handicaps the Vermont program has become concerned with the individuals and their growth, rather than scoring points to knock off other conference powers. Kusiak has taken local girls Janet Lynch and Janet Terp under his wing and turned them into pentathalon champions. A second pair of youngsters is blossoming under Kusiak this year, as Judi St. Hilaire and Lori Dane will continue their successful high school careers at UVM. The list goes on and on. We commend Coach Kusiak on his fine effort of taking what raw in-state talent he can get and developing the athletes to their maximum, both mentally and physically.

Vermont's track program may not be a giant in terms of a win-loss record, but we feel that under Kusiak's guidance along with the enthusiasm and hard work of the individual athletes, they can truly call themselves winners.

Steve Larose
Rich Chalmers
Cynic Sports Editors

Charles Claudio

An Exhausting Easter at the Montreal Marathon

By Tony Bates

I walked out of the sleeting, 25 degree air into the stuffy, crowded gymnasium. The odor of rubbing liniment and Atomic Balm was strong enough to bowl me over. Runners were there in all shapes, sizes and sexes. Some were stretching on the floor, some quietly meditating in the corner, and others were debating whether or not to wear sweat bottoms, longjohns, or other leg wrappings. It was uncharacteristically cold for Easter; great for a ski race, but not for running 26 miles.

My reason for being there was the 6th Annual Marathon of Montreal, held this year on Easter Sunday. Each year this event attracts hundreds of entrants to the smorgasborg of races. Your choice: ¼, ½, ¾, or full marathon (26.2 miles) This offers runners of various abilities, experience, and levels of sanity to test their endurance over a relatively flat 6½ mile loop in the north of the city, near the Riviere des Prairies.

The marathoners run four laps, encountering a disabling headwind on a three mile backstretch each time through. This is what was causing the indecision inside. Leggings would maintain body warmth, but would become unmercifully wet and heavy after 2-3 hours of running. I elected to don my Fruit of the Loom thermies... better safe than sorry.

I signed in and pinned on my number. My name was checked off the list of some 350 entrants, about 150 of whom were marathoners. While in line I met a master runner (over 40) from Massachusetts who had completed sixty-six previous marathons and several hundred shorter races. This energetic 48 year old (he looked a dozen years younger) was like the George Blanda or Gordie Howe of distance running. Not only was he enduring, he was fast too, having run a 2:23 in his prime, a crisp five and a half minutes per mile.

"Any tips?" I inquired. Being a first time marathoner I felt that I could use all the advice I could get. And if anyone knew about the race, this guy did.

"Relax... just run well within yourself for the first half of the race," he said, "don't get sucked into a fast early pace."

I didn't intend to. I had heard of and read about the wall that awaited unwary runners at 20 miles. This is the point at which most folks run out of glycogen, blood sugar, and start wondering why in hell they're running at all. Those who have encountered the wall describe it as a 200 pound behemoth giving you a huge hug and insisting that you carry him the rest of the way. Supposedly, if one is trained well enough and starts conservatively, it can be avoided altogether. I prayed that my 70 miles a week would be enough to see me through it. Suddenly I was haunted by the days when the Vermont winter and my own laziness conspired to cut some of my training runs short. Then I blotted it out of my mind. I reassured myself that I was as ready as I could be.

The crowd assembled at the starting line. They filled an entire street: 20 across and as many deep. The atmosphere among the runners contrasted that of the weather. As the spectators looked on from the sidewalk, rubbing hands and tightening scarves against the bitter cold, the runners placidly jogged in place, exchanging reassuring glances and "Good Luck's."

Those infamous French drivers hurled insults at this "ice encrusted no mind running around in his underwear"

The gun went off and we surged forward. I slowly picked my way in and around the other starters to find room to run normally. Everything went smoothly for the first two laps (to the halfway point.) I was galloping along in a tight bunch of runners who shared the pacing and windbreaking chores at the front. Friendly conversation was tucked between pausing breaths. This was really fun. There were no problems physically, my gait seemed loose and fluid enough. The only thing that irritated me was the fact that my shoes, longjohns, turtleneck, hat and gloves had been soaked since mile one. I was carrying a lot of extra weight and I knew that it would translate into minutes on my finishing time.

Around 14 miles the pack disintegrated and I was trotting along by my lonesome. My biggest incentive was to look up the road, set sights on another runner, and try to catch him. This was easier than it sounds because many overly eager rabbits had started too fast and were feeling the effects of that mistake now. Their labored breathing and ragged, halting strides made me feel better than I had expected.

At 30 Kilometers my arms started to tighten considerably. No pain. But I could tell that they'd been swinging for awhile. At 21 miles I instinctively cringed. This was the longest I had ever gone in training. The veterans say that if you attempt a full marathon in practice you'll be so discouraged that you'd never try it again. It made sense to me.

On the contrary, I experienced no wall at all. In fact, I was so excited about finishing that my pace picked up, much like a horse does that smells water and a stall as he nears home. The only difficulty encountered near the end was the wind. As the afternoon wore on, the sleet became sticky yet still cold. The wind drove it into my face, and my eyelashes insisted on freezing together. Needless to say, my vision was impaired considerably (face it, I couldn't see a thing!) Occasionally, I blindly veered into the middle of the road, only to be honked at and nearly run over by half a dozen of those infamous Quebec drivers. The weather wasn't bad enough, however, to prevent them from rolling down their windows and hurling a few insults, En Francais, at this "ice encrusted no-mind running around in his underwear."

I finished, feeling fresh, in 2 hours and 44 minutes (and 4 seconds, but who's counting?) The old codger was right about the slow start. Mental toughness, fortitude, and resistance to pain are the common denominators among long distance runners.

It was fun however, fun enough to make me want to run another one. However, I'll wait for better conditions next time. Next Easter I'll let the bunny do the running around.

CLOGS
CLOGS
CLOGS!

ALL BY OLOF DAUGHTERS

Many Styles

20% Off

SUNDANCE
A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH ST. • BURLINGTON • OPPOSITE WOOLWORTH'S

LACOSTE
IZOD for her

the SKI shop INC.

388 Shelburne Rd. S. Burlington 862-5488

To Joggers Around The World

Spring Means the Boston Marathon

By Tom Phillips

The rites of spring have all passed – the extra six weeks of winter promised by that prophetic groundhog Punxsatawney Phil have elapsed, the almost forgotten greenness of grass has reappeared, and flocks of birds in northward migration have been seen.

Taking his place in this mundane, commonly expounded on setting is the spring jogger. He (or she, of course) can be seen shuffling or bounding down the road (inspired by the fair weather), shaking off fat accumulated through a sedentary winter existence. For him, spring is the time of year that is highlighted by this gradual rediscovery of his body. But to a few individuals who have survived the slashing snows and penetrating winds of January and February, spring means the Boston Marathon.

"The Boston," as it is often referred to in the marathon sub-culture, is held each year on Partiot's Day (April 17th, this year). This 26.2-mile footrace from Hopkinton to the Hub is an event that attracts runners from every conceivable place on the globe. To do justice to the "Boston," however, one must realize that it is not merely "another one of those running races." It is not a typical sporting event – where crowds sit in bleachers for a certain length of time while watching some free agent, recently-acquired, multi-millionaire athletes perform. It is more appropriately referred to as a happening of both the sportive and cultural varieties; that is, it involves a limitless crowd of spectators interacting with athletes of varying ability. In short, it is the marathon of marathons.

While seeing the Boston Marathon in such a festive light, the marathoner also holds another perspective shared only by other die-hard runners. This full-time running enthusiast regards the Boston as a symbolic meeting place – the site where he may heal his winter wounds by visiting with other hearty souls. It is at this race where competitors may exchange training tales and establish friendships based upon the common accomplishment of having braved the cruelest months.

Undoubtedly, Vermont winters are among the most harsh to be found anywhere. The snow that falls on practically a daily basis is enough to persuade the sensible to recline by the hearth. But, there must exist an inevitable bunch who feel compelled to do battle with the elements. Burlington is no exception in this regard; for it, too, provides the training grounds for such a group.

Several of those having

(continued on page 32)

Hoehn and Selvig Capture Mixed Paddle Tourney Title

By Rich Chalmers

Ted Hoehn and Lakeside Paddle Tennis pro Jean Selvig combined strong lobs and sharp netplay to come away with the mixed doubles trophy 6-3, 6-2 over Ed Allan and Carol McNealus in the Burlington Paddle Tournament held last weekend at Lakeside Tennis Club.

Selvig, presently ranked number one senior women's champion, was pleased with the outcome, adding, "We played very well. I had an excellent partner." Hoehn is scheduled to play as Bjorn Borg's partner in the doubles tennis exhibition slotted for May second.

David Halsey and Stephie Jacob topped Nadea Leadbetter and her son Gig in straight sets for the mixed doubles consolation title.

David Wall and Neal McNealus braved the cold weather and overcast skies and combined skills for a tight but impressive victory in the men's tournament held the day before. They defeated Hoehn and Sel Atherton in the finals 7-5, 7-6. Ed Allan and Mike Crane came back after losing the first set to the team of Dave Robison and David Halsey 4-6, 6-4, 7-5 to win the men's consolation tournament.

The spirited team of Carol McNealus and Stephie Jacob from Manchester, Vermont overcame the strength of Susie Brian and Abby Gregson from Woodstock to capture first place in the women's tournament held Friday. UVM student Kim Nalen and Jean Selvig combined to win the women's consolation over Nadea Leadbetter and Inge Sell.

Mrs. Selvig was pleased with the overall success of the tournament. Teams from all over Vermont joined in the competition and the spectator turnout was heavy.

Middlebury College has invited four UVM men's and women's teams down to Middlebury for a day of competition on Sunday, April 23. On April 30th, UVM will hold its own tournament and all students are eligible for entry. "Most students like competition," Mrs. Selvig explained. "Once they express a desire for more tournaments I will be happy to help organize them."

$175,000—$175,000—$175,000—$175,000—$175,000

THE S.A. '78-'79 BUDGET

WHO GETS IT?

If You Care How YOUR $175,000 Is Going To Be To Be Spent.....

Come To.....

S.A. BUDGETARY ASSEMBLY

APRIL 19 7:30 P.M.

IRA ALLEN CHAPEL

$175,000—$175,000—$175,000—$175,000—$175,000

Doctors, Students and Businessmen

Vermont Runners in "The Boston"

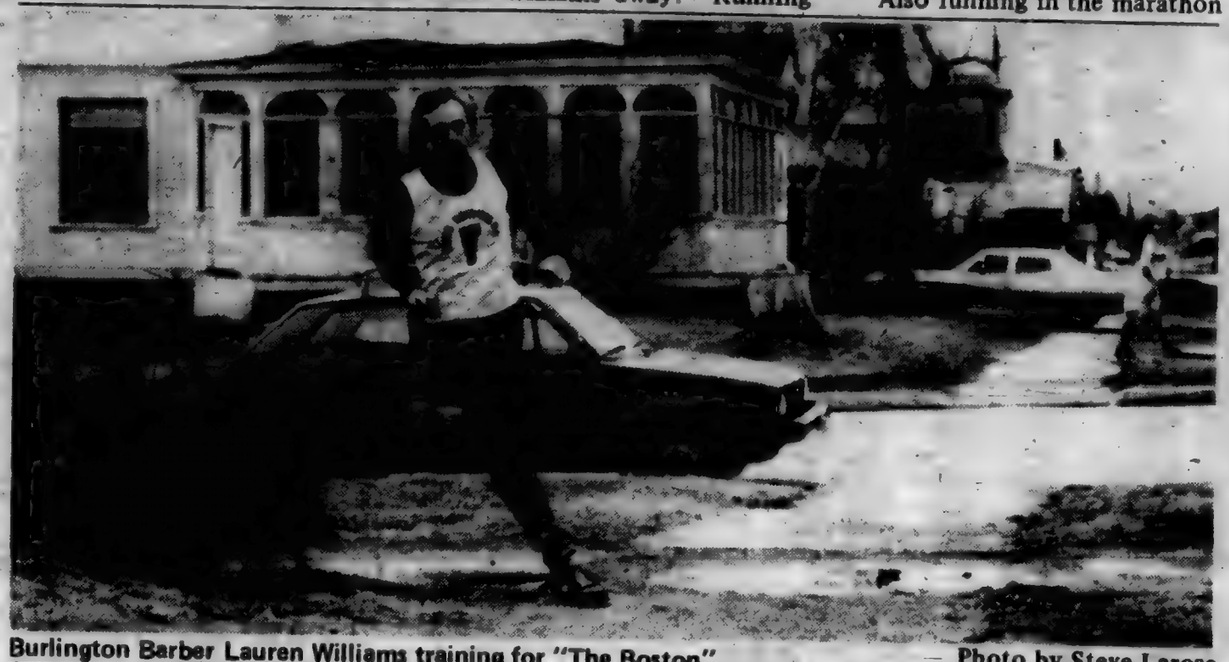
By Debi Ennis



A contingent of Vermont long distance runners will be among the wave of competitors testing their stamina and dedication against the world's foremost runners in the 81st annual Boston Marathon on Monday April 17th.

Begun in 1897, the Boston Marathon is the oldest annual marathon in the country. The early course spanned twenty-five miles of dirt roads and was open to anyone who had the gumption to try it – mostly local farmers and machinists.

The scene of the race isn't quite as casual today. In order to weed out the masses of hopeful participants for this popular event, a qualifying time has been established. Men under 40 must run a marathon within a year of the "Boston" in a time under three hours. The cut-off point for men over 40 and women of all ages is a generous 3.5 hours. Even so, there are more than 4,000 applicants in for this year's race.

Approximately 20 of these contenders are strong and dedicated Chittenden County runners. Their ranks include undergraduate and graduate students, doctors, administrators and business people. They span the years from 16–60 and approach their "hobby" with varying degrees of seriousness and training.

Lauren Williams, known to many as the College Street Barber of downtown, will be among the Vermont contingent. Judging from his trim, firm body it's hard to believe that he is 53 years old. He's been running for twelve years and in the last three years he has competed in six marathons. He likes to run marathons because it is a challenge and provides a goal for his daily running routines. "After a good marathon you're flying high – you feel good." He's been training for Boston since the middle of January. Lately he's been concentrating more on hill work and speed work. He runs outdoors year round, and has plotted a variety of "loops" which he uses depending on his mood and training needs. He talks about the "Jailhouse Loop," the "Shearer" and the "Williston" loops, which are all accurately recorded in his calendar. Most weekdays he can be seen tackling the hills from Church St. to S. Willard on his 3.5 mile "city loop."

Burlington Barber Lauren Williams training for "The Boston" — Photo by Steve Larose

Before the marathon Williams will regulate his diet more closely – alternating between high and low carbohydrate in order to load up his muscle glycogen. Three days before the race he'll take only short warm-up runs lasting about 30 minutes each. "That Boston race can whip you," he says. "It can run you over, it's done it to the best." But these utterances don't scare Williams away. "Running prepares you for everything else," he beams.

Karry Kimball is another one of the featured area marathon runners. He's been running "on and off" for 14 years and this will be his 16th marathon. Running an average of 80 miles a week, he focuses more on the quality (speed) of the workout than on the quantity (distance). Like Williams, four to five days before the marathon he will load up on foods high in carbohydrates, which is no trouble to him since he loves ice cream and spaghetti. He'll be doing shorter distances and lots of speed work during the week before the race. Kimball likes to run cause it gives him a chance to meet people and make friends. "Running with people is satisfying," he says.

Also running in the marathon will be Norman Stebbins, a lean 31 year old teaching assistant in the botany department. He refers to running as "a habit, somewhat of an addiction." He runs because he "likes to do something active" and enjoys it if it's done well. Stebbins is excited by the competitive aspects of running and likes being with lots of people. "One of the problems of working out with other people, though, is the tendency to turn it into a mini-race. If someone picks up speed you don't wanna slack off. The solution is to keep up a conversation to slow the other guy down." It takes him about five miles to warm up and start feeling good during a work-out or a race. To him it's relaxing, he just lets his mind drift.

When I asked these runners how it felt to complete a marathon, their responses varied. Norman said that it felt "damned nice to stop." He said that if he still had his wits about him he'd look for his friends, a beer and a place to lie down. (I'm not sure of the order of priority.) He explained the bond that develops more readily between people who finish a race together. "It's easier to be close and friendly when our defenses are down."

Larry said it is a relief to finish, without much of an immediate exhilaration. It's more common to experience "post marathon blues." One of his running partners, Peter Millard, who will also be heading down for the race this weekend, explained further. After a race the combination of low blood sugar and exhaustion can cause depression. It isn't unusual to cry at the finish.

Art Kunin, a 52 year old doctor at Mary Fletcher who has been in five marathons, put it this way, "Running a marathon is like having a baby. Immediately afterwards you say, 'never again.' But a few days later you're ready to go again."

THURSDAY NIGHT FEVER

DISCO INFERNO!

"FRIENDS"

703 Pine Street

$3.50

All the beer you can drink plus shots of JD

at 7:30

april 20th

a conehead prod.

SOPHOMORES! 3 WAYS TO GET STARTED FOR LIFE AFTER COLLEGE.

Reinforce your college degree and get a better start through Army ROTC. Get management training. Self-discipline. A sense of confidence. Earn the extra credentials that will set you apart as a responsible achiever. You'll also receive $2500 over your last two years in the Advanced ROTC Program. Whether your career plans are civilian or military, Army ROTC provides opportunities for both — active duty with a starting salary of over $11,300, or reserve service while employed in the civilian community. Get started for life after college. Get started in Army ROTC.

THE BASIC START.

Get started in Army ROTC through Basic Camp at Fort Knox, Kentucky, this summer. You'll get $500 for attending a challenging six-week camp. If your performance is exceptional, you just may qualify for a two-year scholarship as you enter the Advanced Program.

THE EARLY START.

If you are a veteran (or a Junior ROTC graduate), then you started early — probably without realizing it. That early start makes you automatically eligible to enter the Advanced Program. Why not add an extra $100.00 a month to your veterans benefits.

THE SUMMER START.

You may consider getting started in the Army ROTC summer program on campus. At the end of the summer you may find yourself eligible for the Advanced Program.

CALL OR VISIT:
UVM MILITARY STUDIES 4TH FLOOR WILLIAMS HALL, TEL. 656-2966

UVM ARMY ROTC. THE TWO-YEAR PROGRAM.

SPORTS PROFILE

Bill McAlduff: Two Sport Athlete

By Randy Briggs

The tremendous academic burden at the University of Vermont and other schools has turned the days of the two sport college athlete into a phenomenon of the past. Many big time college athletes have visions of becoming top flight professional competitors. They often devote their total lives to mastering one sport. The lure of the fat contract has become the prime concern.

Bill McAlduff has not lost touch with the rewarding experiences that athletics can bring. McAlduff has been a starting defenseman on the UVM hockey team for the last four years, and is now starting catcher for the Varsity Baseball squad.

When asked whether playing two top caliber college sports interfered with his academic and social life, McAlduff had some very interesting observations. "There is more pressure on me by playing two sports, but I really don't know what I would do if I wasn't playing. I have put a lot of time into sports in my life and it has been very worthwhile. The experiences that I have had in sports will always be mine. I have learned a lot and I wouldn't trade my experiences for anything."

"I Wouldn't trade my experiences for anything."
Bill McAlduff

Initially, McAlduff was recruited for his hockey talents but baseball has been a game Bill has always loved. "Actually I have been playing baseball longer than hockey," he commented. "I started out in Little League when I was nine years old and didn't begin playing hockey till I was twelve. Eventually hockey became my best sport although I still enjoyed baseball very much."

When McAlduff first came to Vermont he never envisioned baseball coming back to varsity status. "I did want to go to a school that had both hockey and baseball. I was recruited for hockey, and assumed Vermont had varsity baseball," McAlduff recalled. Earlier events might have dictated what eventually occurred. McAlduff broke his hand in his senior year and thus concentrated on playing hockey. He played baseball on the UVM club team his freshman year, but then concentrated full time on hockey. As soon as Coach Jack Leggett arrived as head coach, McAlduff's baseball itch returned. "He had so much zest and enthusiasm about the game of baseball that it made me eager to play again," McAlduff said.

Our conversation then turned to the present season's hopes and dreams. McAlduff was overflowing with confidence about his first year of varsity baseball and the team's chances for success. "There is no question that the potential is there. I realize that we are 0-3 and no one's ever happy when you lose. I never have been one to make excuses, but you must look at the facts of our situation. We went up against three teams that had played anywhere from seven to eleven games. They had been outside for at least a month before we were. Yet we lost two games by only one run. Sure we made mistakes, but we learned a lot about the character of the team. Those three games will make us a better club. I think we will have a good year."

Even in a team game an athlete should also have individual goals that he or she should strive for. McAlduff's individual goals were very direct. "My main goal coming into this season was to become the starting catcher. I also want to remain a starter and play as much as I can in order to help the team. I feel that with my experience I can contribute a lot toward the total team effort."

As a starter McAlduff is aware that there are two other catchers eager to play. "Depth on any team is a very good ingredient to have. Both Chuck Borsavage and Andy Brown are good catchers. I feel my advantage lies in the area of having been exposed to college baseball longer than they have." McAlduff did admit that having two fine catchers behind him has made him work harder.

Bill knows the defensive aspects of catching. He is very sound fundamentally and because of this, he knows when to respond to certain situations.

"The catcher is the quarterback out there," McAlduff said. "I have to motivate and be a leader on the field. That is part of being a good catcher."

A solid catcher also requires having the physical tools to take the constant straining of the knees and the vulnerability of the hands. Most important according to Bill

(continued on page 33)

SPORTS SCENE

Spring Cleaning Sports Changes

By Mark Kevorkian

My spring and summer will be considerably improved if:

–The Boston Red Sox remember that games played in April and May actually do in fact count in the standings.

–The Boston Celtics don't waste any time revamping their line up by keeping only five or six players and declaring the rest of the roster open.

–One of the players the Celts keep is Ernie Degregorio. Ernie D, given the playing time, can create more excitement than Celtic fans saw all season.

–One of the Celts to go is Sidney Wicks.

–Rick Miller bats .300 with 40 RBI's for California the first half of the season and is named to the All-Star team.

–Red Sox manager Don Simmer remembers that pitchers are also part of the team and doesn't waste time worrying about personality conflicts and building dog houses.

–The Phoenix Suns or the San Antonio Spurs beat the Philadelphia seventy-sixers in the NBA finals.

–Cleveland Cavalier Walt Frazier retires or admits he is a phony. Frazier missed the last eight weeks of the NBA season with a sprained little toe.

–Jimmy Connors loses Wimbledon.

–Tracy Austin wins Wimbledon.

–300 people attend the Catamount baseball home opener.

–Red Sox announcer Dick Stockton stops calling pitcher Dennis Eckersley "the Eck."

–Bill Scanlon beats Bjorn Borg at Patrick Gym.

–Leon Spinks gets his feet back on the ground by listening more to himself than to his "management."

–Yankee Reggie Jackson contracts lockjaw.

–CBS announcer Brent Musberger is revealed to be Alvin of "Alvin and the Chipmunks."

–Charlie Finley trades himself to somewhere far, far away.

–Arnold Palmer wins a tournament.

–Howard Cosell becomes a moonie.

–The American League wins the All-Star game on a home run in the 9th by Jim Rice.

–Renee Richards plays tennis against herself on "Challenge of the Sexes."

–Final exams are rained out.

–Mark Fidrich talks the baseball into twenty wins.

–It suddenly occurs to UVM basketball coach Peter Salzberg that a running, shooting, fast-breaking team can win games – and attract more fans to usually empty Patrick Gym.

–Ron Carew bats .400.

–The NY Mets finish somewhere except last.

–Darrell Dawkins misses a dunk and punches himself out.

–It all boils down to the last out of the last game with Jerry Remy on third and Carl Yazstremski at the plate.

–The Boston Bruins make it to the NHL finals.

–Redsox pitcher Bill Lee wins seventeen games.

–Golfer Tom Watson wins the British open.

–Boston's Dwight Evans manages to avoid injury and is finally recognized as the American League's premier right fielder.

–Steve Garvey retires from Gong Show competition.

–Yankee's George Steinbrenner's tax returns are audited.

–Boston's John Havelicek is cloned.

"On Top Of Church Street"

Hawks Point

Never A Cover Charge

68 Church St.

Equinox...Fri. night...Sat. night

BICYCLES

VISTA

Carrera
Sport
• Pacer
• Criterium
Silver Shadow
$115.00–$235.00

WINDSOR

• International
• Carrera
Super Carrera
Competition
Pro
$175.00–$600.00

RALEIGH

Rampar 1027
Rampar R–1
• Grand Prix
Super Course
Competition G–S
$125.00–$365.00

We also carry 3 Speeds by Raleigh & Vista

Inquire about our repair classes that will be starting soon.

the Ski Rack

9-5 Saturday
9:30-9:00 Friday
9:30-6:00 Monday-Thursday

• Ladies Frames Available

81–85 Main St. 658–3313

Wet T-Shirt Contest

$50.00 First Prize
$20.00 Second Prize
$5.00 Third Prize

Wed. April 19th

Super Low Drink Prices
$1.00 Cover

Rock & Roll IZZO Fri.–Sun. 4/14–16

DISCO
Monday
Tuesday
Thursday

TIFFANY PUB
156 St. Paul St.

ZIGGY'S GOING TOPLESS

All Tops Must Go!!

Prices Reduced 50% to 70%

Come in and See it to Believe it!!

ALSO IN STOCK

Jewelry — Wallets
Papers — Handbags
Bongs — Pipes

'The Place Everyone is Talking About.'

101 Church St.

Great Country Bike Race

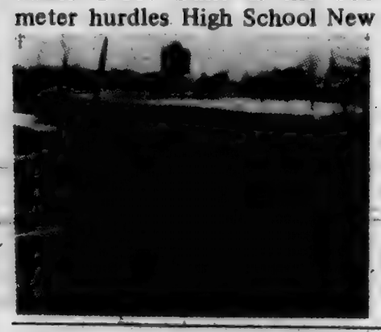
Believe it or not spring is here and the bikers are out and riding already. If you've ever thought of exploring your own cycling potential, here at last is your golden opportunity! On Saturday, April 22 (raindate April 23) the Living and Learning Cycling Suite will be holding the "Great Country Race" – a fun bicycle race. This race is open to all UVM faculty, staff and students.

The course is designed for the novice rider who is yet to enter his first bicycle race. The distance will vary between ten and sixteen miles in length and will travel down some of the "great country" roads of Chittenden County. There will be both a men's and women's class. With refreshments (including a keg) and a wide variety of prizes, this race should prove to be a fun event and really shouldn't be missed.



The "Great Country Race" will start in the lower Patrick Gymnasium parking lot at 1:30 p.m. Registration forms will be available at the Main Desk at Billings, the Outing Club, and the Living Learning Main Desk and Cycling Suite (B270). Early registration (April 14-21) will cost one dollar. Late registration (April 22, 12:00 – 1:30) will cost $1.50. Prizes have been donated by Ski Rack, Downhill Edge, Pagocycle, and other local merchants.

If there are any questions, contact the Cycling Suite, Living Learning B270, 656-4249.

Track Individuals

continued from page 26

Hilaire and Lori Dane are exceptional UVM rookie runners and sprinters, respectively, from Lyndon Institute. St. Hilaire is a high school All-American in the 880 and the mile. Vermont track Coach Ed Kusiak remarked that St. Hilaire has the potential to compete at the national caliber due to her height, strength and ability. She placed fifth in the Indoor easterns with a 4:59.4 clocking. She runs the 880 in under 2:15. Dane is the 100 meter hurdles High School New England champion and record holder. At UVM she was part of the winning 4x220 and 4x440 relay teams during the indoor season.

Amy Bouchard is a top distance runner having finished sixth in the Indoor Easterns with a 11:17.1 time. Kylekaga Thornton finished second in the Vermont High School shot put last year and has improved this past winter with an extensive weight-lifting program. Barbara Luneau is the team's leader in the discus. Another newcomer is sprinter Winsome Jackson of Brooklyn, New York who did not compete during the indoor season. She has run the 100 yard dash in 11.4.

Kusiak indicated that the women's team is unquestionably among the top three in New England with Springfield College and UMass. During the indoor season, Springfield was UVM's main competitor and the Catamounts were without the services of Lynch who competed in gymnastics during the winter. For the spring strategy, Kusiak has noted he prefers to stress individual prowess in order to allow the athlete to attain her highest level of success and hence de-emphasizes team performance to a certain extent.

Both the men and women's team are looking forward to a winning season which gets underway this Saturday with the UMass relays at UMass. The men's team will be strong in the sprints and hurdles but lacks the depth to overtake perennial powers UConn, UMass and URI for team titles. The women's team will be a main contender in most events having the depth to finish consistently a winner.

There will be a Co-ed Foosball tournament. Entries end end April 13. Contact Tim Miller at 863-9198 or come by the I-M office, room 213, Patrick Gym.

Vermont Marathoners

continued from page 28

religiously adhered to a training program throughout the winter can be found here on the UVM campus. Undergraduates Peter Kaplan, Tom Beatini, and John Foster have diligently trained with personal records in mind. Kaplan hopes to better the 2-hour and 41-minutes he posted in last October's N.Y.C. marathon, while Beatini and Foster hope to improve upon their upper 2:40's efforts. Both have shown improved speed in recent races, making it a virtual certainty that their hopes will be realized. In the post-graduate ranks, students Peter Millard and Norm Stebbins head the list. Millard looks to trim some time off his 2:34 record, while Stebbins expects to shatter his best of 2:41. The others from UVM who will be making the trip to Boston are women's ski coach Perry Bland (2:55), Graduate College Administrator Ralph Swenson (2:55), 1 med-school faculty members Dick Heilman and Bela Ratkovits. Kurt Lauenstein, a recent graduate of UVM's medical school, stands a very good chance of running sub-2:35.

It is reasonably doubtful that any of these local runners will dethrone the favored road-racing king Bill Rodgers (Boston Marathon course record holder), but it can be safely assumed that they will be sharing in something equally as important as the coveted first place. Every runner, from the nine minute per mile Walter Mitty's to the foreign Olympians, will be sharing that spirit of community not experienced since last autumn.

Sports This Week

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Tennis – Men | April 13 (Thur) | at Middlebury | Middlebury, VT | 3 p.m. |
| Rugby – Men | April 15 (Sat) | Dartmouth | Burlington | 1 p.m. |
| Outdoor Track – Men | April 15 (Sat) | at Massachusetts Relays | Amherst, MA | 9 a.m. |
| Lacrosse – Men | April 15 (Sat) | Clarkson | Burlington | 1:30 |
| Outdoor Track Women | April 15 (Sat) | at Massachusetts Relays | Amherst, MA | 9 a.m. |
| Rugby – Men | April 16 (Sun) | at Concord RFC | Away | |
| Lacrosse – Women | April 17 (Mon) | at St. Lawrence | Canton, NY | TBA |
| Baseball – Men | April 17 (Mon) | St. Lawrence | Burlington | 1 p.m. |
| Softball | April 18 (Tue) | at St. Michael's | Winooski | 4 p.m. |
| Rugby – Men | April 19 (Wed) | B team vs. Vermont Tech | Burlington | 4 p.m. |
| Outdoor Track Women | April 19 (Wed) | at Dartmouth w/ Fitchburg St. | Hanover, NH | 2 p.m. |

A Two Sport Player

continued from page 30

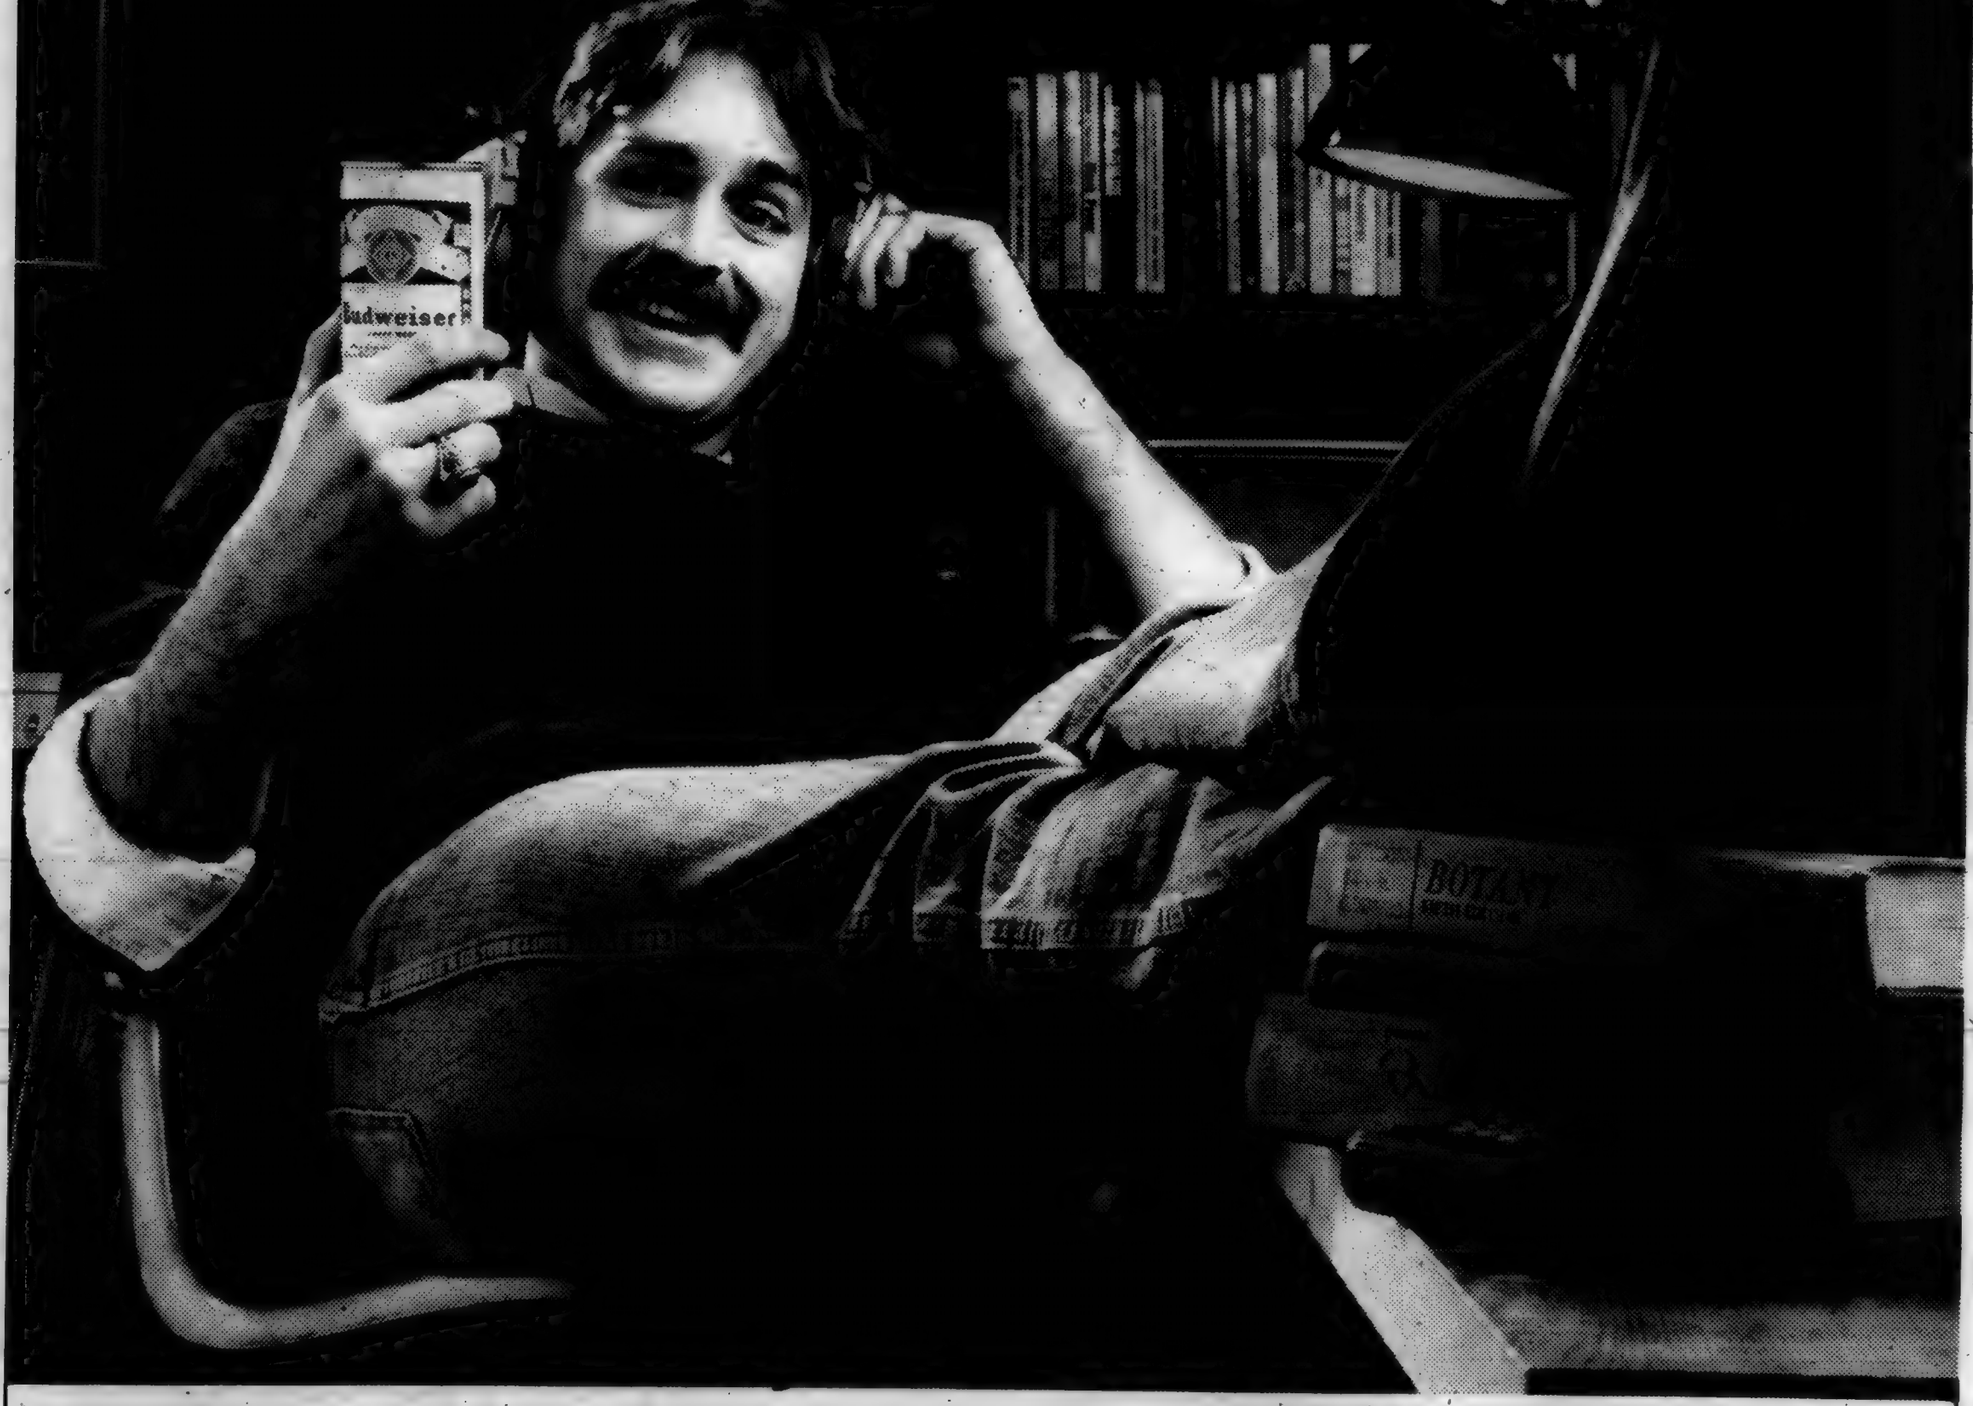
is having a strong accurate throwing arm. "It is a must to have a strong, accurate arm. A good catcher must also be quick in order to block balls in the dirt and he must give a consistent target to the pitcher. The best assets of a good catcher are his defensive skills."

One traditional conflict in baseball is over who calls the game on the field. Is it the pitcher or catcher? In most situations catchers call the ball game. McAlduff added these comments, "For the most part I call the game, but in many cases the coach will call the pitch from the dugout. He knows the game and has had so much more experience than I have. All in all the pitcher, catcher and coach must work together. You have to be flexible according to the situation."

Since the hockey season runs over into pre-season baseball practice McAlduff is very much in shape when the opener rolls around. One thing that McAlduff is working very hard on is his hitting. "You must have good upper body strength as well," said McAlduff. "You must have quick wrist and strong arms. The transition was easier for me this year than last season. I played ball this past summer and it helped my hitting." Having good vision and quick hand-eye coordination is essential for strong hitters. McAlduff feels that the key to good hitting is having quick hands and being able to make solid contact with the ball. "I swing a lead but everyday and as the season progresses, I will get stronger." As a result his hitting should improve.



McAlduff also sees a big difference between high school and college baseball. "Everything is so much faster on the college level. The pitchers throw harder and have better control. The hitters can also hit for power a lot more on the college level. In college ball there is a good player at every position. There is also more strategy involved at the higher level. There is a big difference."

McAlduff sees many good days ahead for Vermont baseball. "The program has the ability to become very competitive in the Yankee Conference and throughout New England. I feel that Coach Leggett will have a lot to do with it. His dedication to the betterment of Vermont baseball will pay off." Vermont baseball could be headed for a disaster if the squad cannot get a southern trip in the near future. Without spring training Vermont will have trouble competing against large schools such as Maine, UConn, and UMass. Getting outside and playing in games as early as possible is a necessity. "Having a good record this year may be very important for Vermont," said McAlduff. "We want to establish a good tradition and to do that we must play hard and earn the respect of other teams."

Unfortunately, this year will mark the end of McAlduff's two sport adventure. "Being very realistic I don't have the talent to pursue any kind of pro baseball career after graduation. I do think I can do a very good job catching on the college level."

Get involved!
Experience writing for a college newspaper. Drop by the CYNIC office or contact Steve Larose or Rich Chalmers and get a piece of the action.

When the bookin's behind you...

Budweiser®

KING OF BEERS® • ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC. • ST. LOUIS

Get the right Foreign Car Part you need the first time

Worse than getting no part at all is getting a part that doesn't fit. That's why your Beck/Arnley expert makes sure he gives you the right foreign car part for your import the first time. So you don't have to come back for the same part a second time.

10% Student Discount

Imported Parts Center

3060 Williston Road

South Burlington, Vermont 05401

658-0707

National Sports Briefs

Ali-Spinks Rematch Set

Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali are scheduled to have a rematch on September fifteenth, after having signed a contract yesterday in New Orleans. Promoters expect to get a $5 million gate from the sale of 85,000 seats at the Superdome. The bidding for television rights has reportedly started at $7 million. Both Ali and Spinks were in jovial moods at the signing of the contract as they traded friendly jabs at each other. Neither Ali nor Spinks, however, made any prophesies as to the outcome of the rematch.

Campbell Still on Disabled List

Red Sox veteran relief pitcher Bill Campbell saw a doctor yesterday about his ailing right elbow. Campbell, taking a cautious route back to recovery, is also planning to look at films from last season to see if there are any kinks in his style this spring. After throwing a little Tuesday in Cleveland, his elbow was still sore.

Red Sox veteran pitcher Louis Tiant is expected to come off the disabled list on April fifteenth. He reportedly pitched five innings in Florida a few days ago for Winston-Salem and gave up one run and a few hits. Manager Don Zimmer is not sure if Tiant will be ready to pitch by the middle of April but is pleased that the injured pitcher is making some progress towards recovery.

Evert Extends Winning Streak

Chris Evert is now attempting to win her twenty-fourth straight clay-court tournament with a present record of 114 consecutive clay-court victories. Miss Evert won her first match of the $125,000 women's tennis tournament at the Sea Pines Plantation, overcoming Beth Norton of Fairfield, Conn. 6-1, 6-0. Tougher opposition lies ahead however, and for Evert to win this tournament for the fifth time in her career she must beat Mima Jausovec, Renee Richards, Tracy Austin and Martina Navratilova without a loss.

Finley Astonished

Oakland A's owner Charles Finley was astonished as 17,283 spectators showed up to watch the A's win their opening game against the Seattle Mariners 1-0, Tuesday night. Finley hasn't given up his tireless efforts to move the team to Denver and although Oakland's mayor Lionel Wilson is optimistic concerning the A's possibilities of continuing on in Oakland, Finley is not warm to the idea. He cited the fact that it was the first half-price baseball season opener ever and said the crowds would probably diminish within the week. The A's attracted only three crowds all last year that outnumbered this season's opener.

Affirmed & Alydar to Meet in Derby

The date of the Kentucky Derby, the first race of the fabled Triple Crown, is approaching quickly and the two major favorites, Alydar and Affirmed, are not the only serious contenders. Alydar and Affirmed are known for their spirited duels as they have met six times, Affirmed capturing four firsts, three of which required photo finishes. Affirmed presently awaits the Hollywood Derby this Sunday and Alydar will race in the Blue Grass Stakes on April twenty-seventh. Both horses are avoiding a confrontation this close to the Derby. Others in the field are unbeaten Sensitive Prince and No Excuses. Both colts show the speed and stamina necessary to have a good shot at outclocking the favorites. All eyes will be on these horses on May sixth as the first of the three greatest races in the sport gets underway and lasts an agonizingly long two minutes.

Swing Into Spring With Finast®

Finast has all your favorite snacks waiting...we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruit
- Your favorite cold beverages

825 WILLISTON ST., BURLINGTON VERMONT

Visit our Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

Finast

Random Notes

Are You Pre-Med?

Are you a premed student thinking about becoming a family practitioner? The Premed Office is sponsoring an informal information session about the specialty of family practice on Wednesday, April 19th, 7:30 – 9:00 p.m., in the Alumni House living room. This will be a good opportunity for you to learn more about what a family practitioner actually does and about the advantages and disadvantages of this kind of practice. Contact the Premed Office for more information.

Voter Registration

On Monday, April 17, VPIRG will launch a voter registration drive on campus allowing students wishing to register to vote in Vermont to do so at any of the VPIRG tables on campus during the last two weeks of April.

All students 18 years of age or older currently living in Vermont are eligible to vote, including those paying out-of-state tuition. The 1978 primary will be on September 12.

VPIRG table schedule: April 17, Billings 10–4, Simpson (Dinner); April 18, Billings 10–4, Harris-Millis (Dinner); April 19, Billings 10–4, L/L (Dinner); April 24, Library 10–4, Wright 6–8; April 25, Library 10–4, Marsh (Dinner); April 26, Library 10–4, Waterman (Dinner).

Look Here!

Vermont's only state institution for juveniles, Weeks school, is scheduled to close down this June. Because confinement alternatives for these and other adolescents in foster-homes are limited, University Foster Care Program, initiated by concerned faculty and students, will offer a novel alternative to confinement for up to ten adolescents in state custody.

Each participating student will become a licensed foster-care parent of the adolescent matched to him/her. Students involved in the program will be eligible for field experience credit to be awarded by the Dept. of Early Childhood and Human Development. However, this is far more than an internship, allowing the student to stay involved in his academic pursuits while developing skills and community interests.

Ideally, five to ten seniors and graduate students are being sought who are willing to assume responsibility and share their living quarters. The state's reimbursement will adequately cover all program expenses, including the adolescent's allowance and medical coverage.

Any students interested in this are encouraged to immediately submit a written response to Peter Comart at 11 Center St. or call 658-6539 for more information. The selection process for this month begins with this month.

AG Barbecue

All Ag students, faculty, and staff are invited to the annual Honors Day ceremony and barbeque on Wednesday, April 19. Festivities are slated to begin at 4 p.m. in the Arena at the Spear Street Farm and will include the traditional ceremony, tug-of-war, and chicken barbeque as well as a livestock exhibition. Tickets, $3.50 for staff and $3.00 or 15 Saga Coupons for students, can be purchased in all Ag department offices and the Dean's Office before April 18; beer and band music are free. This is NOT an event exclusive to those students receiving awards. It is planned for the entire College. Since all classes are cancelled after 3 p.m. on Wednesday, hurry to buy your tickets now!

Camp Winadu

The Office of Career Planning & Placement, 109 S. Prospect St., is hosting a representative from Camp Winadu, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, this Friday, April 14th.

Anyone interested in meeting with the representative should stop into the Office tomorrow.

The position extends from 6/25 – 8/23; looking for people with a background in tennis, basketball, baseball, soccer, WSI, lacrosse, general sports.

If you cannot meet on Friday, but are still interested in this employer, you should contact Mr. Jim Baker, 1009 State Rd., No. Adams, MA 01247. Phone is (413) 663-3666.

S.A. Budget Vote

Care about how your student activity fee paid to UVM will be spent next year? The S.A. Budget for the academic year 1978-1979 will be voted on by the student body April 19 at 7:30 p.m. at Ira Allen Chapel. Show us you give a damn about how the S.A. allocates money – voice your opinion April 19th!!

Jaborwalk

Spring is in the air! The days are getting nicer and there is a strong impetus to be outside, experiencing everything that's happening. There is no better way to enjoy being outside than to walk – between classes, to and from school, to exercise, to watch a sunset – the list could go on. Why not get together with other people who enjoy walking?

Project Jaborwalk, a committee of UVM students interested in getting the community walking more, is having an organizational meeting on Monday, April 17 at 7:00 p.m. at Billings Marsh Lounge. Some projects we would like to discuss are a spring Walk-a-thon, a walking guide to the UVM area, exciting ideas that you might like to suggest.

Walking is good exercise, it helps you to relax and it doesn't pollute. Don't you want to do something positive for a change? Please come to the meeting – your body will love you.

Livestock Show

The UVM Dairy and Horse Clubs are sponsoring a livestock show, Sat. April 15th at the Spear Street Farm. Starting at noon, there will be fitting and showmanship classes, milk chugging and relay races. At 6 p.m., there is a chicken barbeque, reserve tickets required. We'll switch to Southwick at 9 p.m. for the square dance – open to the public. Ticket prices $2.00 dance, $2.50 barbeque, $4.00 for both. For information call Dr. Gilmore, ex. 2070 Carrigan (Dairy Bar) or ex 4246 Horse Sense Suite, L/L.

Joffrey Ballet

On Saturday, April 15, the Lane Series will present the Joffrey II Ballet Company. The performance is scheduled for 8:00 p.m. at the Memorial Auditorium.

Since its first touring season in 1970, this young troupe has dazzled audiences cross-country with a freshness and vitality difficult to match. This energetic and versatile young company has earned universal acclaim from audience and critics alike.

Tickets are available at $7.50 and $4.50. For reservations and information, call the Lane Series Office at 656-3418 or stop in at its new location, 284 East Avenue, Burlington.

Senior Bash!!

Senior Class Party (friends invited) at Harold J's (lower Church St.) Thursday, April 13 at 8 p.m. Two dollars at the door provides all the beer you can drink with mixed drinks available. Music not necessarily disco.

Julian Bond

The second annual Third World Student Organization Parent's Weekend will be April 14–16.

The highlight of this weekend will be a visit from Georgia State Senator Julian Bond. Senator Bond will be speaking on Saturday, April 15, 3–4 p.m. in the Fireplace Lounge, Living/Learning Center. Later that evening, Senator Bond will be the guest speaker for the second annual Third World Student Organization Parent's Dinner Dance Formal at the Marble Island Yacht Club.

In 1968, Senator Julian Bond became the first black man to be nominated for the office of Vice-President, but was disqualified because of his age.

Senator Bond in 1969 was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives where he served four terms and in November of 1974, he was elected to the State Senate, where he is still serving.

This weekend will also include "The Brightest Side of Darkness," a variety show on Friday, April 14, 8:00 p.m. in Commons 115, Living/Learning Center. Everyone is invited to the variety show and admission is free.

Narrative

Gerald J. Prince, Professor of French at the University of Pennsylvania, will give a lecture on Thursday, April 20, 4 p.m., in the Faculty Lounge (Waterman Building, 5th floor), on the subject "Current Topics in the Study of Narrative." Professor Prince is one of the leading specialists in the field of narratology – the analysis of narrative as a specific mode of discourse. He is the author of two books, Metaphysique et technique dans l'oeuvre de Sartre and A Grammar of Stories, as well as of several articles published in journals such as Poetique, PMLA, or Diacritics. The lecture is sponsored by the Department of Romance Languages, the Department of German and Russian, and the Graduate College. Faculty and students from all colleges and departments are welcome to attend.

Linda's Bummed

Linda is not happy with her major. She can't seem to find a major that meets her needs. Linda wants to find out about alternative design majors. Her roommate told her about the Advising Referral Center where she can get general information about alternative design majors and names of resource people in the different colleges. If you think alternative design might meet your needs here at UVM, come to the Advising Referral Center at 337 Waterman Building or call x4174 for an appointment.

Violin Recital

The University of Vermont Department of Music is pleased to announce a senior violin recital by Linda Jones of Burlington, Vermont, on Friday, April 14 at 8:00 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the new Music Building. She will be assisted by Mr. Marc St. Germain, piano and by Mr. David Myers, percussion.

The program will include works by Cowell, Bach, Beethoven, and Grieg.

Miss Jones is a student of Thomas L. Read and Evelyn Read, and will receive a Bachelor of Science degree in Music Education this May. Miss Jones has been a member of the University Orchestra and a participant in the Lyric Theatre productions, Vermont Philharmonic, and the Burlington Oratorio Society. In addition, she has attended the Meadowmount School of Music where she studied with Linda Sharon Cerone. She will be attending the Cleveland Institute of Music as a graduate student in the fall.

The recital is free and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Clamshell Alliance

On Friday, April 28 from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. in Billings North Lounge, there will be a benefit coffeehouse for the Clamshell Alliance. The program will feature local musicians and possibly a film about Seabrook, with all proceeds going to Clamshell, the principle organizing force behind the past and upcoming occupations. People interested in performing, preparing or selling food, or helping with publicity should contact Eric Kilburn at 658-0876.

Harrington to Talk

The Richard R. Warner Memorial Speakers Fund announces a lecture by Michael Harrington – "The Vast Majority: A Journey to the World's Poor." The lecture will be held on Thursday, April 20, 1978 at 8:00 p.m. in the Roy L. Patrick Gymnasium at the University of Vermont. Admission is free and open to the public.

Michael Harrington, Chairman of the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee, is the author of The Other America, Socialism, Fragments of the Century, and The Twilight of Capitalism.

This is the third lecture sponsored by the Speakers Fund which was established in honor of Richard Warner, Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Vermont who died in September, 1974, at the age of 41.

Any questions concerning the lecture or arrangements for Mr. Harrington should be directed to Alan Wertheimer, at the above address, 656-3050.

Volunteers Needed

The Center for Service-Learning at the University of Vermont is recruiting volunteers for a variety of positions. If you are interested in any of the following, or would like to look over our catalogs of other available options, call or drop by The Center for Service-Learning in Mansfield House at 656-2062.

(1) Are you interested in Speech Pathology or Special Education? How about looking into such areas for volunteer work? Available are such options as a young boy needing tutoring and coaching in speech sounds, or contact the Center for Communication Disorders and see what they have to offer and see what you can offer them!

(2) Looking for a friend or companion? The Burlington Convalescent Center has doors open to you, with people inside, waiting for friends too. There are many options in this area for you. Do yourself a favor!

(3) Do you have a variety of good skills that you'd like to put into use? Howard Mental Health Services needs volunteers to implement their skills in an assortment of services or therapeutic activity groups.

(4) The Vermont Association for the Blind needs someone to work with matter not available in Braille, by transcribing it onto reels and/or cassettes. Open your eyes and see what you can offer!

(5) Form a special relationship! The Adopt-a-Grandparent Program provides an excellent opportunity for students to establish a meaningful relationship with an elderly person in the Burlington community. It can mean just being a friend on a continuous basis, to someone who needs attention or is alone.

CALENDAR

friday • 14

8 a.m. – 5 p.m., Board of Trustees Meeting, Memorial Lounge, Waterman, thru 15th.

9 a.m. – 2 p.m., Pi Phi Raffle Ticket Sale, Billings Lobby.

12 p.m., Biochem. Seminar, "Nuclear Bonding of Glucocorticoids in Lymphoid Cells" with John Codlewski, UVM, B403 Given.

3 p.m., Alumni Council Executive Meeting, Alumni House.

3 – 6 p.m., FADC, Lamda Iota Fraternity, Pearl Street.

6 – 10 p.m., Alpha Zeta Regional Meeting, John Dewey Lounge.

7 p.m., Film "Eckankar a Way of Life" will be shown at E107 Living Learning. Public invited.

7:30 p.m. a public talk entitled "The Path of Generosity" by Binny Clark. Room A151 Living Learning Center. Sponsored by Dharmadhatu of Burlington. For information call 658-6795.

7 p.m., SA Film, "The Way We Were," B106 Angell, UVM $1, GP $1.50.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard, x4173.

8 p.m., Vermont Seminar Speaker, Frances Fitzgerald speaking on "American Power and Our Changing Self-Image," Carpenter Aud., Given.

8 p.m., Senior Violin Recital by Linda Jones, Recital Hall, Music Bldg., free.

9:30 p.m., SA Film, see 7 p.m.

GAY AWARENESS WEEKEND

Friday, April 14 is "National Jean's Day" All gay and homophilic people should show support by wearing their blue jeans.

4 p.m., Activities will begin with a local guest speaker. She will speak on "Gay Identity."

8 p.m., "A Very Natural Thing," (Film) will be shown in Billings Marsh Lounge, UVM $1, GP $1.50. A Speaker's Bureau will follow to answer questions to any interested students.

saturday • 15

9 a.m. – 3 p.m., Student Forum, for info. call Worldwide Program, L/L, Ctr. To be held in 115 L/L Commons.

10 a.m., Saturday Group Info. Session, North Lounge, Billings.

10 a.m. – 4 p.m., Alpha Zeta Regional Meeting cont. see 14th.

7 p.m., IRA Film, "Monty Python," Southwick Gym.

8 p.m., Lane Series, "Jeffrey II Ellis," Memorial Auditorium, tickets x3418.

SPORTS

9 a.m. Men's and Women's Track, UMass (A).

1:30 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, Clarkson (H).

GAY AWARENESS WEEKEND

Workshops will begin at 11 a.m. in Billings Marsh Lounge.

11 a.m. – 12:30 p.m., "Gay People and Religion," by Rev. Irv. Cummings

12:30 – 1:45 p.m., Break for Pot-Luck Lunch.

2:00 – 3:15 p.m., "Gays and their Families," by Hank and Ruth Abrahams.

3:30 – 4:30 p.m., "Lesbian Feminists, Heterosexual Feminists and Women Separatists: Is Coalition Possible?"

4:45 – 6 p.m., "Lesbian Mothers and Gay Fathers."

6 – 8 p.m., Break for Dinner (Dinner will not be provided.)

8 p.m., "A Very Natural Thing," (Film) in Billings Marsh Lounge, UVM $1, GP $1.50.

10 p.m., Disco dance and the G.S.U. raffle drawing, $1.

sunday • 16

2 p.m., the new Unitarian-Universalist Group will meet in Terrill Hall, The Vermont Room, Home Economics Bldg. (opposite Bailey Library) to celebrate spring. Being a spring poem, work of art, music, kite – any spring symbol. All are welcome.

7 p.m., SA Film, "A Place in the Sun," B106 Angell, UVM free, GP 50 cents.

7 p.m., GSU Meeting, Marsh Lounge, Billings.

8 p.m., IRA Film, "Monty Python," Southwick, Free.

8 p.m., Worldwide Program presents slide show on Honduras, by Teddy Wasler, L/L Fireplace Lounge.

8 p.m., an evening w/ Prof. Benoit at Slade Hall. Informal lecture on "La chanson folklorique du Comedie francais." Wine and cheese will be offered.

8 – 11 p.m., Hillel presents large television viewing of NBC's "Holocaust" docudrama. Group viewing at the Newman Center.

monday • 17

9 a.m. – 4 p.m., Preregistration, Marsh Lounge, Billings, to 21st.

10 a.m. – 4 p.m., VPIRG Voter Registration, Billings Lobby, thru 19th.

monday con't

1:30 p.m., Richard J. Villamil, Jr., thesis presentation "Studies on the Water Regime of the Vergennes Soil," 19 A Hills Bldg.

5 – 6:30 p.m., VPIRG Meeting, Conference Room C, Billings.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard x4173.

7 p.m., Project Jatiorealis, UVM Walking Committee organizational meeting. Spring Walkathon and other projects will be discussed. Marsh Lounge, Billings.

8 p.m., Beaumont Medical Club Lecture, "Whose Life Is It Anyway," by Janet Blackman, U. of Hull, Eng., Austin Aud., MCHV, Mary Fletcher Unit.

8 – 11 p.m., "Holocaust" cont.

SPORTS

1 p.m., Men's Baseball, St. Lawrence (H).

3:30 p.m., Women's Lacrosse, St. Lawrence (A).

tuesday • 18

9 a.m., Preregistration cont.

10 a.m. – 4 p.m., VPIRG Registration cont.

12 p.m., Staff Council Meeting, Memorial Lnq., Waterman.

3 – 4:30 p.m., Student Activities Committee Meeting, Conference Room C, Billings.

4 – 5:30 p.m., Tertulia, gathering of Spanish speaking individuals, all welcome, Blundell House.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard x4173.

7 p.m., Seminar, "Lake Models: Can They Be Useful in Decision Making?" with Paul Uttormark, B112 Angell.

7:30 p.m., Vt. Seminar Film, "Fidel," B106 Angell, free.

8 p.m., Lane Series, "Concord String Quartet," Recital Hall, Music Bldg., $6.50.

8 – 11 p.m., "Holocaust" cont.

SPORTS

2 p.m., Women's Track, Dartmouth with Fitchburg and Yale (A).

4 p.m., Softball, St. Williams (A).

wednesday • 19

HONORS DAY, NO CLASSES AFTER 3 p.m.

9 a.m., Preregistration cont.

10 – 4, VPIRG Registration cont.

3:30 – 5:30 p.m., Entertainment Council Meeting, Conference Room C, Billings.

4 p.m., Physics Colloquium, "Magnetic Charges and Other Problems in Metallo-enzymes," with Thos. H. Moss, ASB Geol.

7 – 10 p.m., Vt. Children's Magazine Meeting, Conference Room C, Billings.

7 – 9 p.m., Outing Club Meeting, North Lnq., Billings.

7:30 – 8:30 p.m., G.C.C., Marsh Lnq., Billings.

7:30 p.m., S.A. Budgetary Assembly, Ira Allen Chapel, Voice your opinion.

8 p.m., Physics Colloquium, "Energy Policy – Why Is It so Hard to Make?" with Thos. H. Moss, 236 North Life Sci.

8 p.m., Play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," Royall Tyler Theatre. Tickets UVM $2, GP $4.

8 – 11 p.m., "Holocaust" cont.

thursday • 20

9 a.m., Preregistration cont.

4 p.m., Lecture, "Current Topics in the Study of Narrative," by Gerald J. Prince, U. Penn., Faculty Lnq., Waterman.

6:15 – 6:45 p.m., Christian Science Meeting, all welcome, 443 Waterman.

7 p.m., SA Film, "Days and Nights in the Forest," B106 Angell, UVM free, GP 50 cents.

7 – 9 p.m., GSU Switchboard x4173.

8 p.m., Lane Series, Joe Pass jazz guitarist, Ira Allen, tickets x3418.

8 p.m., Women's Film, "Women and Children," Wm. Science, $1.50.

8 p.m., Play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," Royall Tyler, UVM $2, GP $4.

8 p.m., Scottish Country Dancing, Southwick Gym, free.

8 p.m., Lecture, "The Vast Majority: A Journey to the World's Poor," by Michael Harrington, Patrick Gym, free.

8 p.m., the Amazing Grettin, Patrick Gym, UVM $1, GP $2 at door.

8 p.m., The Green Valley Film & Art Center presents "Take the Bull by the Horns" at WMS. $2 w/free child care.

8:30 p.m., Benefit Concert sponsored by the Sierra Club to support Citizens for Responsible Growth featuring Sense, Chet Arthur B, and Mary McGettrick. At Hunt 1, $2.50. Door prize.

SPORTS

2 p.m., Softball, St. Michaels (A).

3:30 p.m., Women's Lacrosse, [illegible] (A).

WRUV

AM/FM Combine Wavelengths

Photos by Rob Swanson

By Suzanne Karkus

At the end of the semester, WRUV-AM will cease broadcasting to the U-VM community. Some of its equipment will be sold to other radio stations, but most of it will be turned into a production studio for its sister station WRUV-FM. The money previously allocated to it by the Student Association (SA) will be channeled into the FM station's budget and as for the station's 25-odd student disk jockeys, only a select few can be absorbed into the FM station if programming schedules are to remain unchanged.

The decision to eliminate the AM station came as a result of a gradual decline in its audience. WRUV-AM sends its broadcasts out through direct lines which the University dormitories then plug into, so it is not heard over regular radio airwaves like the FM station.

WRUV-AM was the first station to be developed at UVM. According to Chief Student Engineer Tom Tompkins, the station began in the mid-1950's as a radio workshop which was an off-branch of a communication and theater course. When students insisted upon greater control over the radio station, it was turned into an SA organization. At this point it ceased to be an educational part of the department, and became essentially a form of entertainment for the students.

The FM station, developed in the '60's, had the advantage of transmitting its broadcasts through the airwaves, enabling it to reach people in the community as well, which gave it far greater potential for expansion. It also transmitted with much higher quality sound.

Initially, however, the FM station used an educational format, which was not nearly so popular with the college audience as the AM station's top-40's music. But when WRUV-FM developed its present-day progressive format, which relies upon album cuts and less intrusion by the broadcaster, FM's audience grew tremendously, and AM slowly dwindled into virtual obscurity.

Many students regret the decision to eliminate WRUV-AM, stressing its value as a good training-ground for those who want to work at the FM station in the future. It also enabled those who didn't want to obtain a third class license to learn about broadcasting on a non-FCC regulated station. Finally, because it didn't go over the air, disk jockeys could relax on the AM station and experiment with their format.

The FM station will now have more money to work with, allowing it to expand its potential to record music, to air live in-station performances and to improve the quality of the broadcasts. However, this move also marks the efforts of the executive board of WRUV-FM to consolidate their energies and resources in the face of growing charges of general lack of professionalism in station management.

These charges come from many sources, including the Department of Communications and the SA, both of whom fund the station, and from those who work within the station as well.

"We used to have much tighter management," said one disk jockey. "Everyone is much too lax now. The FCC could withdraw our license at any time if any one of us ignores certain procedural rules and regulations. But no one is working with the students to teach us and to reinforce good radio habits."

Station Manager Andy Levine stresses the lack of faculty advising as the single most debilitating factor in the station's performance, particularly in his dealings with the Communications Department. The station has been without a legitimate faculty adviser since 1973, but Department Chairman Dr. Woodrow Leake says this will soon change.

"A unique characteristic of student organizations is that they have no consistency, in that the student population is continually changing," explains Leake. "Thus there is no continuity in the philosophy of the program. The radio station currently needs a strong, permanent faculty advisor to help alleviate what I see as severe organizational and leadership problems. I don't think the directors at WRUV recognize their responsibility in diplomatic relations between the station and this department and with the SA, simply in letting us know of their needs, what they are doing, what we require of them, and so forth. The faculty adviser, then, does not need to be a radio expert to be effective."

Students at WRUV disagree. They argue that they need an adviser who is thoroughly familiar with broadcasting procedure, FCC regulations and general recording and production techniques. However, the Department of Communications no longer maintains the formal training structure which encompasses radio broadcasting; it was eliminated due to budget cuts. In other words, they have neither programs nor professors which could be coordinated with the station, or which could use the station as an educational tool directly affiliated with the department.

Last Thursday, Dr. Dharim Yadav, a professor of communications, agreed to be WRUV's adviser. While he has no technical training in the field, he tends to stress his role as setting a philosophical focus for the station.

"I view myself as playing a promotional role, acting as a catalyst in the advancement of the station as a more meaningful outlet for the student community." He suggested the incorporation of panel discussions and student forums on pressing University issues, expanded news and sports coverage, including possible pre- or post-game interviews, and making the station available to student activist groups to inform and involve the students and the community in their cause.

Larry Landry, treasurer of the SA, supplies the station with three-quarters of its budget. He sees no reason to change the current programming on WRUV. "It is not our place to evaluate their programming. And we don't question the service they provide the students," he maintains. "At a general meeting earlier in the year, we asked if people were satisfied with WRUV's performance. Every student in the audience raised his hand. However, what I do question is how well they operate in day-to-day matters." To illustrate their lack of good business relations, Landry pointed to the WRUV mailbox, which was full of dated notices and bills which were not handled properly. "They don't even pick up their mail," he said.

"I didn't even know we had a mailbox over there," Station Manager Levine later admitted. Landry had observed that part of their problem rested in the fact that WRUV is located way over in Pomeroy Hall, rather than in Billings Student Center, like most student organizations. "I'm glad we're not over there in Billings," Levine said. "We'd only end up even more involved in the bureaucratic bullshit that goes on around there."

Levine also rejects Dr. Leake's criticisms. "He wants a lot from us," Levine said. "He wants us more organized, working harder, with more advanced planning in our programming and management. I agree, we should do all those things, but it is extremely difficult. The disk jockeys put in three to four hours per week just by doing their show, and many students are putting in a good deal more than that. And none of us receive academic credit. Dr. Leake can criticize us, but I don't see that he has any real involvement with WRUV. So I see no reason to satisfy him in any respect."

Perhaps Levine will not dismiss complaints from his own staff so categorically. One disk jockey, who prefers to remain unnamed, spoke of the absence of a cohesive, tightly-knit group working together for the station. "There is one small clique or core group which is very involved," she said, "but everyone else just seem to come in once a week to do their show and then leave. I never get the sense that anyone is helping to improve our station's performance. I will be doing something wrong consistently and only find out about it three months later."

She cites the lack of control by the management as a possible cause of an increase in theft of the station's extensive record library. "We don't know who was stealing albums, but we now keep the front door locked at all times, and only the disk jockeys are allowed in the record library. If it's people on the staff, maybe they're doing it because they don't feel they are getting

(continued on page 39)

STUDENT FORUM

TUESDAY, APRIL 11
7:30pm B-106 COOK
FILM: "Memories of Underdevelopment"
Panel: Tony Cutrono
Lori Goodman
Dennis Murphy

FRIDAY, APRIL 14
8pm CARPENTER AUD.
GIVEN BUILDING
FRANCES FITZGERALD*
"American Power and our Changing Self-Image"

SATURDAY, APRIL 15
115 COMMONS
LIVING/LEARNING CTR.
PANELS AND DISCUSSIONS

8:30-9:00 Coffee & Donuts
9:00-10:15 RISING THIRD WORLD
Caryl Englehorn Susan House
Karen Mcknight Meg Walkinshaw
10:15-11:30 MULTINATIONALS AND AGRIBUSINESS
Dana Baron Pam Palston
Eric Kilburn David White
12:00-1:30 WORLD ENVIRONMENT
Dave Gettes Lisa Shullock
Ginger Hinman Rob Wilke
1:30-3:00 MIDDLE EAST CRISIS
Tom Andrea Carl Johnson
James Bentley Phil Kennedy
Jody Davis Michael Merkin

FIREPLACE LOUNGE
3:00-5:00 JULIAN BOND-
"Racial Justice-What Next?"
Third World Student Organization

*Ms. Fitzgerald will be present at Forum on Saturday

Created and Organized by WORLDWIDE Program
Encouraged and Sponsored by Vermont Seminars

Eric Anderson Talks More, Plays Less

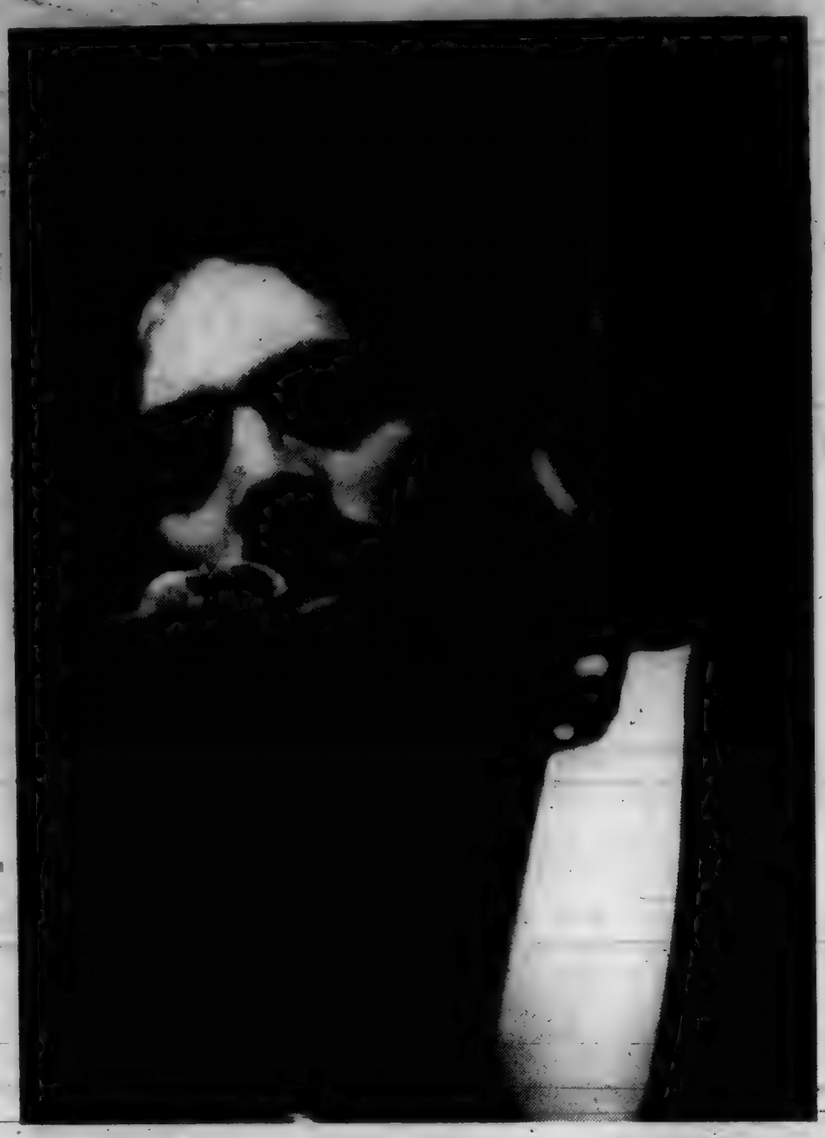
By Diana Greene

There were two problems I had in reviewing Eric Anderson's concert at Hunt's last Monday night. One was trying to stop myself from talking about Peter Smith, the back-up musician, and the other was trying to think of good things to say about Anderson's music, as it lacked both the spirit and energy essential to any good performance.

The night began pleasantly; a tasty dinner, a friendly waitress and a mellow atmosphere. Pete Smith from Johnson, Vermont, started the entertainment, warming us up with his understated charm and free-flowing talent. In addition to plenty of clean picking on his guitar, Smith's instrumental specialties (namely an Appalachian mountain dulcimer) were a real treat. After Smith closed, we waited for Eric Anderson to come in. And we waited, and we waited...

Finally, Anderson strolled on stage, appearing baffled and confused, attempting to "get his act together." After some mumbling and bumbling, he reassured us "I really do play music." This, however, was not necessarily true – he drank and joked more than he sang. In retrospect, maybe that was a blessing in disguise.



Anderson's abilities on acoustic guitar, piano, and chromatic harp were good, but his voice sounded raspy and ragged, as if he had just woken up from a rough Saturday night of Booze and butts to play his next gig. He tried to capture a dramatic, soulful sound but fell short. As one of his songs says, "I may have been weak, I may have been strong, but I just had to go on." This one line expresses the essence and attitude of Anderson's entire performance.

At least Anderson tried to relate with his audience, even if it was in a cynical and sarcastic manner. There was a definite tension in the air that just couldn't be broken, no matter how many jokes he tossed in. He tried though, making a crack about Joan Baez and her transexual goats. Oh yes – another real beauty was when Anderson sat down at the piano, realized that there was a mirror facing him, and said, "Oh my God, I get to look at myself. Now I understand Ray Charles." These remarks were tasteless and uncalled for, but they did bring a few laughs to an otherwise dismal performance.

He then invited his band to accompany him; I became hopeful. But the three piece band was a disappointment also. Desperate, Anderson made a motion to "levy things." The suggestion seemed a good one, but I wondered how. "Killer Joe" on bass guitar and Anderson feebly attempted to pick things up by raising the volume to an unbearable level. Instead of acting as a remedy, as I had hoped it would, this just intensified the band's amateurish sound. The entire audible experience was grating to the ear at the very least.

Eric Anderson did play his most popular tune, "Thirsty Boots," which undoubtedly pleased his fans. He ended his set with an up-beat rocker that reminded me of Elvis Presley, God rest his soul. After an average round of applause, he reappeared for an encore.

I must say this for Anderson's tunes, even if they all sounded alike, the endings had pizzazz. But his final ending pleased me the most. "If you want me, you know where I am." Thanks, Eric. Don't call us, we'll call you.

Eric Anderson — Photo by Rob Swanson

"At least Anderson tried to relate with his audience, even if it was in a sarcastic and cynical manner. There was a definite tension in the air that just couldn't be broken, no matter how many jokes he tossed in. He tried though, making a crack about Joan Baez and her transexual goats."

Special Purchase

Blemished Dual Steel Radials

Steel Belted Radial Whitewalls!

The General Dual-Steel Radial. A great long mileage tire! Built with two steel belts and radial-ply construction for long, economical mileage.

Wide Variety of Tires in Stock

Alignments, Oil-Change, Shock Absorbers

10% Student Discount With I.D.

Sooner or later, you'll own Generals

GENERAL TIRE

Kilgour Tire & Rubber, Inc.

1309 WILLISTON ROAD • SO. BURLINGTON, VT. 05401
(802) 658-6222

The Importance of Being Earnest: A Wilde Farce At Royal Tyler

The Importance of Being Earnest, Oscar Wilde's well-known and delightfully ridiculous farce, will open at the Royall Tyler Theatre on Wednesday, April 19, at 8 p.m.

A presentation of the UVM Theatre Department, the production is under the direction of Edward J. Feidner, Chairman of Theatre, and will run through Saturday, April 22.

John Worthing, J.P. will be played by Greg Patnaude, who was most recently seen as the revolting suitor of Angelique in The Imaginary Invalid. He has also appeared with the Champlain Shakespeare Festival for three seasons and perhaps is best remembered for his portrayal of Antipholus of Ephesus in The Comedy of Errors. Mimi Bader, who appeared as Women with Notebook in Chamber Music last December, will play Lady Bracknell. The Honorable Gwendolen Fairfax will be played by Sally Faye Reit, a veteran of countless Royall Tyler and Champlain Shakespeare Festival productions who was last seen as Jenny Diver in The Threepenny Opera in October. Julie Carmen, who appeared in No Mo' Jim Crow and played Holga in After the Fall, will portray Cecily Cardew. The role of Miss Prism will be played by Muriel A. Stockdale, who was seen here last summer as Mistress Quickly in Henry IV, Pt. 1. Eben Young will premiere as Algernon Moncrieff. Vince Rossano, seen as Mr. Bennett in Pride and Prejudice, will play Rev. Canon Chasuble, D.D.; and Tom Winslow, who was Mack the Knife in The Threepenny Opera, will be Lane. Mary Carry will play the Maid.

W. M. Schenk, whose design work has been a part of theatre at UVM for the past thirteen years, is the scenery designer. Sue Lieppman is the properties master and Rockwell Cleborne is the Technical Director. Liz McGlinchey is the performance pianist.

The Importance of Being Earnest April 19-22. For tickets and information, call (802) 656-2094. A special matinee performance will be held Saturday, April 22, at 2 p.m.

Skeletons Out of the Closet

Dead Concert Confirmed

By Russell Flannery

Following weeks of rumor, the Student Association Concert Bureau confirmed Monday that the Grateful Dead will appear in concert at Patrick Gym on May 6.

$11 tickets, reserved seating, and a 100+ member security force are all unprecedented characteristics of the concert bureau's largest endeavor.

RUMOURS

A series of rumors, initially speculating the date of the concert and then stating the event would be a rock festival at Centennial Field, were attributed to announcements by WRUV.

An outdoor event was apparently never seriously considered by the board, however, and Bureau chairman Pat Butler, speculating on the basis of WRUV's statements, said, "...The "deadheads," or friends of the deadheads, (may have) call(ed) down into the organization out of Jersey – I guess they provide that information or it may have been printed in some magazine as to tentative tours. They found out that the University of Vermont was on the list as doing a (concert) ... Again, I don't know how they found that out because (it was) tentative all along."

In reality, explained Butler, "in January, the offer was put in, and in February, the date was looking like it was going to be good... We didn't get confirmation until (March 24)... Still then, we were working on technical things for the show, and at that time there was still some question as to whether we could do the show or not... We're still working on technical aspects now. But it has been approved, contracts and riders are now in the mail, which seals it right up for us."

TICKETS: WHEN, HOW MUCH AND WHY

A potentially controversial decision by the board is one not to announce the date of ticket sales prior to the actual date itself. Only validated UVM students will be eligible to buy tickets on the first day of sales. Students will be notified of this date by flyers which will be posted at various locations on-campus on the early morning of the scheduled date of sales. The ticket office will "probably" be located at the Patrick Gym, said Butler, who attributed the need for a special form of ticket sales for "safety at the facility." "We're trying to avoid massive line ups," continued Butler. "We feel by advertising to the students on the day of (sales), that students will get the first word and be able to buy the tickets."

Tickets for the performance will cost $11 for either a ground floor or left side bleacher seat, and $8 for obstructed seating. "Tickets have to be that expensive to cover our costs. It's a really expensive show," said Butler. The Bureau's estimated expenses for the show, including the band's $30,000 fee, total $42,310. Two tickets will be allotted per ID, and only cash or money orders will be accepted – no personal checks. 500 tickets will be held for sale to the general public "a couple of days" after the one day sale to UVM students. These individuals will be limited to purchasing two tickets per person.

SEATING AND SECURITY

As one enters the main doors of the Gym, the stage will be located on the far right, directly facing the bleachers on the left end. The less expensive, obstructed seats will be the bleacher seats behind the stage. "Acoustically," Butler said, the seating arrangement "is a lot better (than the usual set up) and there isn't a bad seat in the house." This 'football field' arrangement was used by the board for the George Benson concert last October.

Students will be greeted by twice the normal amount of security officers for a UVM concert. Sixty student Bureau members, twenty-four UVM security officers, and twenty Burlington policemen will be employed by the Bureau at a cost of $3,500.

The Grateful Dead began their spring '78 tour last Saturday in Florida. Their New England vicinity schedule includes concerts at Dartmouth and RPI.

SA CONCERT CONTEST

Two free tickets to the Grateful Dead will be presented to the person who creates the most imaginative logo. The only requirements are that it must contain the words "University of Vermont SA Concert Bureau," must be small enough to use on T-shirts, posters, etc. and that it must not refer to any particular concert as it will be used by SA concerts as a permanent logo. Entries must be submitted to Student Activities office by Friday, April 21, 1978 at 3:00 p.m.

WRUV

Cont. From Page 37

anything out of working for the station. I don't know if it's just me," she continued, "but sometimes I feel like it's a big deal if the station manager even says hello to me." (One side note, of the forty or so disk jockeys who work for WRUV, only six are women.)

Currently, it seems that few people want to take on the responsibilities of positions like that of station manager or program director. At the last election held on March 14, Doug Lang was virtually given the title of station manager by Levine, since no one contested him. Similarly, no one ran against current Program Director Jay Strausser. Some of the positions, such as news director, no one wanted, and Levine was forced to scout around for interested students to apply.

The Student Association has just released the new budget for the upcoming year, and WRUV's allocation is slightly lower than this year's budget. Thus the station cannot expect to grow when its income, even had it remained constant, could not have kept up with inflation anyway. And constant maintenance of some $100 thousand worth of equipment does not come cheap.

Yet, despite its criticisms, the move to eliminate the AM station may prove to have been a very necessary and beneficial action by the station's executive board. For, in view of the lack of sufficient student interest in the two stations, consolidation of energies and ideas can only help to solve whatever organizational problems WRUV has been encountering.

Levi's Womenswear

The real thing. Just like our men's straight leg jeans, except for the fit. And do they fit! Perfectly! Can't cut or bind because they're made for a woman, not a man. In comfortable 100% cotton denim. With five pockets – even a watch pocket for your bus fare. And legs so super straight, they're perfect for boots. Or any other kicking around you'd like to do.

Levi's Womenswear

Quality never goes out of style.

Pants Plus

12 N. Winooski Ave., Burlington

Open Mon.-Sat. 9-6; Fri. 9-9

864-0181

10% OFF WITH UVM ID

DELTA PSI

is having an

ALL CAMPUS PARTY

9 PM

MUSIC, MIXERS & BEER

$1 Donation

Friday April 14

61 Summit St.

Learn To Bartend

$25

Last Two Classes Ever!

April 10,11, & 12 plus May 1,2, & 3

($5 Discount with Advance Payment)

To pre-register,
call Brad Cook at 879-0653.

Tashi Sparkles With Style and Sensitivity

By Tricia John

The gods of music were in Burlington Sunday night. They watched over a near capacity audience who heard music so right, so wonderful, that only another rare musical experience could ever match this rich and thoroughly sensual concert. If we can't call Tashi's performance Burlington's concert of the decade, we can unquestionably call it the concert of the year. It surpassed any musical encounter I've ever had because it firmly re-established a tangible concept of perfection, imagination, beauty and joy through art. If perfection is indeed possible, it sounds just like Tashi's concert on Sunday.

Superlatives are easy to heap onto this concert. Minus the cellist Fred Sherry (he was ill) the group selected music for the unusual but lovely combination of violin (Ida Kavafian), clarinet (Richard Stoltzman), and piano (Peter Serkin). And it all was very special music, evoking deep passion while demanding tremendous virtuosity of all three instruments. In Stravinsky's Suite from "l'Historie du Soldat" virtuosity was only half of the performance. The piece required an exact intertwining of instruments against a constant flow of tempo changes and tricky syncopation. The effect was marvelous, so controlled and yet filling the chapel with enthusiasm and energy. Its ruggedness was balanced; their playing never became abrasive or uninspiring. Each passage to this familiar music was so fresh and imaginative it seemed as though I was hearing the music for the first time.

Then came Mozart's Trio in E-flat for clarinet, viola and piano. Kavafian, who played the violin in the Stravinsky, played the viola in this trio just as beautifully. The first movement was the most lovely, as the clarinet and viola soared magically through their musical dialogues. Balance and restraint were coupled with flawless intonation and color. The entire piece is some of Mozart's most exciting writing and the musicians brought out every ounce of the warmth and depth which many ensembles never fully develop, much less consider important. With Tashi, a feeling of intimacy with the composer, audience and themselves is absolutely essential. And all their selections reflect this as well as their interpretations.

> With Tashi,a feeling of intimacy with the composer,audience,and themselves is absolutely essential.And all their selections reflect this as well as their interpretations.

The memory of hearing Peter Serkin's Chopin is still too vivid and wonderful to describe without being gushy. After intermission he played four of Chopin's most lovely (but not overplayed) piano compositions. His awesome playing was note-perfect, driven by a most obvious love for the music and belief of the music's power over himself and the audience. As the Berceuse and the Barcarolle were played, all else seemed utterly trivial and meaningless, every thought or noise outside the music became a barbarous intrusion of the joy and sublimity of Serkin's performance.

The three Bartok dances (contrasts for clarinet, violin and piano) were somewhat anti-climactic to the overpowering Chopin. This was unfortunate as they were played with as much intelligence and energy as the other trio pieces. Featured in the first dance was a phenomenal clarinet solo. Stoltzman proved himself to be one of the leading if not the leading clarinetist today. Throughout the concert, his playing was smooth, controlled and dynamically balanced with the other instruments.

The concert ended with a sparkling presto finale as fresh and powerful as the first sounds of the concert. The audience, reacting against the commonplace standing ovation, remained seated to avoid being trite and over-emotional. Nevertheless, some of us stood because we realized hearing music performed like this comes rarely in our lifetimes.

SPRING for Your Car

It's Springtime in Vermont and all the snow has melted from the roads. Whether you are reviving your car from a long winter hibernation or simply taking off your snow tires, Spillanes has what you need to make it run smoothly. We're just down the road from campus, conveniently located near I-89 for all car services: tune-ups, oil and filter changes, 24-hour wrecker service or just a fill-up. It's your car — keep it in shape at Spillanes Service Center.

Spillane's Mobil Servicenter

Next to Gaynes on Williston Road

SWING INTO SPRING WITH HAMMOCKS OR SWINGS

FROM Why Knot in Traders Way

Create your own with macrame, or try our Guatemala imports!

18 Al Winooski Ave. Burlington

Phone: 658-6575

Group Therapy

Music With the Right Attitude

By Curtis Haynes

Many bands pride themselves on mystique, gimmicks, and distance from the audience. The Burlington area, however, is blessed with numerous straight-forward, personable musicians. Since October, the four young men of Group Therapy have been gaining a following which they attribute to their catering-to-the-audience style. "If people want to be rowdy, we get rowdy," explains cornet player Peter Riley. "But if people just want to listen, we play listening music. We've spent whole nights playing just jazz, or country, or rock 'n roll."

Bassist John Penoyar describes their sound as "American music," a spectrum of Hank Williams, Thelonius Monk, Woody and Arlo Guthrie, Grateful Dead, The Band, and others. "We do whatever we like, and adapt songs as we please. It's basically folk music you can dance to." Group also performs several original tunes, from Peter's piano composition "Winooski Waltz" to John's "Chariot Ride."

"We play by ear," interjects Brent Sargent on acoustic rhythm guitar. "We're the loosest band there is. We're into music 'cause it's fun, and that's our message. We try to be as far away as possible from hype."

Terry Hayden exemplifies Group's natural sound. Although he has been making music for only four years, Terry plays the Dobro, harmonica, electric lead guitar, and the kalimba (African thumb piano) – each with innate ability. The rest of the band has years of music experience and they all blend in a smooth-flowing sound. Frequently Group adds sit-ins such as guitarist Dan Britten and vocalist Jane Siasienski.

Strange to say, the name Group Therapy was given them one night in Essex Junction by an inebriated devotee who claimed to be The World's Greatest Pervert (probably looking for a good shrink!) Group played the winter season at Little John's Pub in Waitsfield, and occasionally at the Sheik, Sullivan's and the Mill. But full-time work has not been easy. Terry works at IBM and Peter is still a student at their common alma mater, St. Mike's. As a result John and Brent have performed as a duo and individually. Come summer, though, Group should be playing several nights a week.

"Our approach is a little ridiculous," Peter concludes. "We take performing seriously, but it's fun and zany, away from the idea of being cool. It's all music, and we love it all."

So if you're looking to excite your psyche, catch a session of Group Therapy at the Mill in Winooski this Friday night.

(Left to Right) Brent Sargent, Peter Riley, John Penoyar of Group Therapy. Photo by Rob Swanson

IRA Theatre Presents

Monty Python

And Now For Something Completely Different

Southwick Gym

Sat. April 15 7:00 pm

Sun. April 16 3 & 8 pm

Study in Vermont this Summer

At U.V.M. Summer Session.

Four Good Reasons Why:

Lower Tuition.

Just compare. For residents of Vermont it only costs $40 per credit as compared to the regular year $50. For out-of-state students the cost is a mere $55 as compared to $146.

Study While You Work.

You can pick courses to fit into your own job schedule. The summer courses meet at a variety of times to make it convenient for almost anyone to study full-time or part-time.

Visiting Professors.

During the summer, professors from all regions of the country come to UVM to teach their specialties in a mild climate. They often teach courses that are not normally taught at the university during the regular year.

Burlington in the Summer.

You know how nice it is in the Queen City on either side of winter when you don't have to hassle the slush and the snow. In addition to the fine weather, the atmosphere is far more relaxed and low key.

Try U.V.M. This Summer.

For Further Information Contact Continuing Education at Grasse Mount.

BC
BURLINGTON PLAZA
CINEMA 1 & 2
RT. 7 AT I-189 SO BURLINGTON
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

Bjorn Borg Tennis Raffle

Win 2 $50 Tickets to the Borg-Scanlon Match includes tennis clinic with Bjorn Borg

Tickets On Sale Friday
At Billings
Or Contact Pi Beta Phi

Contributing Staff

NEWS: Curtis Haynes, Hamilton W. Sorrell, Robert Cassidy, John Letteri, Susan Heller, Diana Palazzolo, Rich Hyland, Lisa Wolff.

FEATURES: Randy McMullen, Tom Daniels, Leslie Dunn, Leslie Wassmuth, Peter Millard.

SPORTS: Mark Kevorkian, Paul Gardner, Jim Fletcher, Randy Briggs, Melissa Brown, Kim Honza, Amanda Miller, Darcie McCann.

ARTS: Laura Bell, Tricia John, Shana Schwartzburg, Alex Eschenbrenner, Jim Wright, Peter Relick, Tom Nuccio, Jay Collier, Suzy Karkus, Hugh Bush, Jeannie Cooper, Tim Traver, Claire McCrea.

ADVERTISING: Nat Foote, Peter Voll, Doug Lyons, Mary Landon.

GRAPHICS: Amy Lowry, Shirley Reid, Linda Stanley, Liz Hemingway.

PHOTOGRAPHY: John Freeman, Ellen Gray, Mitch Sprung, Mike Simays, Scott Greb Neal Desind, Don Cunningham, Mike Koeniges, Bob Davis.

LAYOUT: Anne Stires, Susan Jo Perkins, Jim Otto, April Heitkamp

TYPISTS: Sarah Wesson, Nicki Krabbendum.

TYPESETTER: Susan Ball.

The Vermont Cynic assumes no responsibility for unsolicited materials. All submissions are subject to the Vermont Cynic's right to edit. All unsolicited material becomes the property of the Vermont Cynic.

No part of this publication may be reproduced without the expressed written consent of the Vermont Cynic.

Subscription rate is $12 yearly.

Circulation: 8000

Vermont Cynic, Billings Center, Box 20, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

Printed by Upper Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont.

Clapton Is Alive And Licking

By Randy McMullen

It's 1978 and Eric Clapton is supposed to be all but finished.

It's 1978 and Eric Clapton — whose ego has suffered through 14 years of Patti Harrison, christianity, heroin addiction, and the advent of Jimi Hendrix — is supposed to be mellowing into the mold of his once-joking surname "Slowhand." Not so. Eric Clapton is alive and licking, and while his mysticism and the banners reading "Clapton is God" are gone, the blues guitarist is still capable of giving a gutsy performance. And he did so at Montreal's Forum last Friday night.

Clapton seems to have reached the peak of his "comeback." It's been a long, evolutionary process that began in 1974 with the album 461 Ocean Boulevard (which answered the musical question "where does one go after Layla?," and whose songs were notably absent from Friday night's concert?) Before that, Clapton had spent three years in obscurity, snarled up in a heroin binge resulting from an infatuation with Patti Harrison (then George Harrison's wife) and a slow forming disenchantment with Christianity.

Today, Clapton is still praying and still playing, although his studio work has been less challenging. Perhaps this is the key to commercial success in the 1970's: simplicity. The commercial success found in Slowhand, Clapton's latest album, seemed to attract as many fans as did his long standing reputation as the great white blues revivalist. Indeed, songs like "Lay down Sally," and J.J. Cale's "Cocaine" drew as favorable a response as the epic "Layla." It was encouraging, however, to see that Clapton put his best into every song, old or new, blues or pop.

His stage mannerisms seem to have remained unchanged. He still hovers like a slinky over his instrument, reaching deeply into himself to pull out his blues magic: the love, the pain, and the humiliation. Clapton revolutionized the blues with his power of self-expression, both with his guitar and with his lyrics. And when he gutted through "Key to the Highway," and "Double Trouble" (an old Elmore James tune), the audience was witnessing a lesson in rock history. Clapton was the first to put flashy guitar licks into the Chicago blues sound, and this direct appeal with rock fans made him the unchallenged master until Jimi Hendrix set things a fire for his career in Monterey.

Clapton's most diversified guitar work came during "Layla" where his extensive use of a wah-wah alternately gave him the slide sound of Duane Allman as well as his own slashing style. It had the same strong impact that the studio "Layla" had.

"Let It Rain," an old Clapton/Bonnie Bramlet favorite, featured the best vocal efforts from the guitarist of the night. His voice seems clearer now, and he has no doubts about using it to its fullest potential. The real vocal extravaganza, however, was Marcia Leddy, the female touch to Clapton's blues band. Her voice had all the strength (and amplification) that the forum could handle. And she was also impressive on the harp during "Key to the Highway" and "Cocaine." The latter of these could very well have been the audience's favorite. Everytime Clapton would break into the refrain, he would raise his hand to the swarming crowd who knew the response only too well. "Cocaine" was shouted out several times on cue, and Clapton smiled coyly when it was all over, adding that "we (the audience and himself) make a good team."

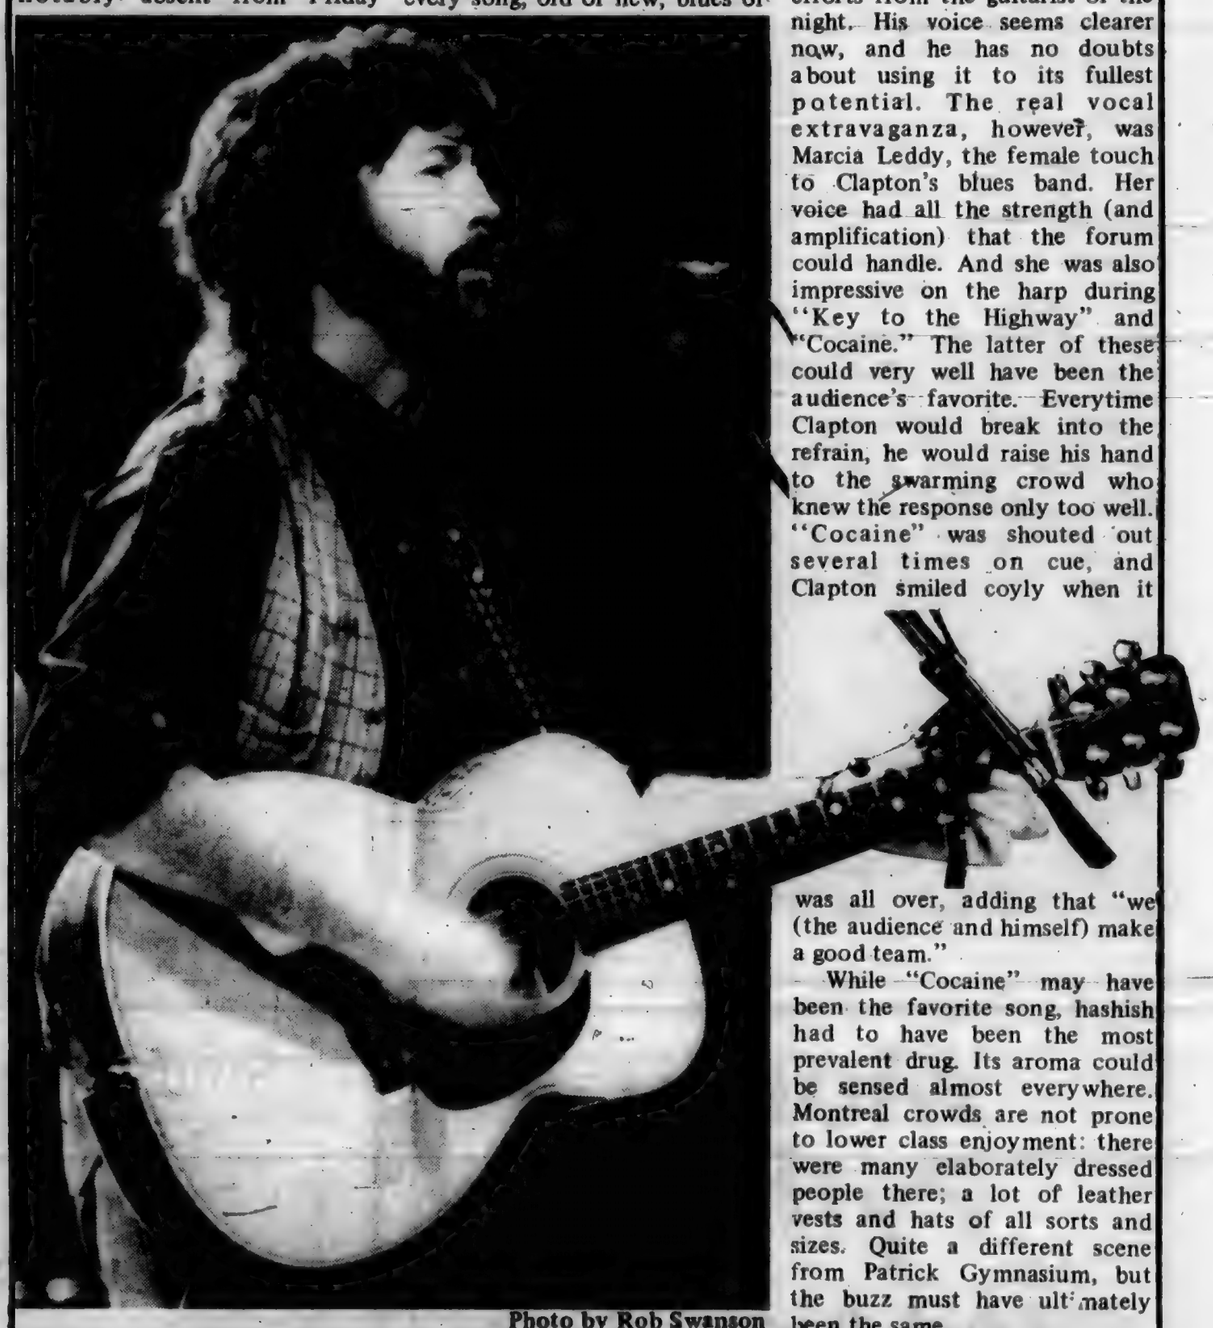

Photo by Rob Swanson

While "Cocaine" may have been the favorite song, hashish had to have been the most prevalent drug. Its aroma could be sensed almost everywhere. Montreal crowds are not prone to lower class enjoyment: there were many elaborately dressed people there; a lot of leather vests and hats of all sorts and sizes. Quite a different scene from Patrick Gymnasium, but the buzz must have ultimately been the same.

Student Photo Service

656-2050

·Passport/Resume Photos Taken

·All kinds of custom photography and darkroom work available

LOWER BILLINGS CENTER
(by the phones)

Vermont Symphony Performance Is Best Ever

By Tricia John

The Vermont Symphony (VSO) has never sounded better. Since the last concert, intonation and accuracy have improved so much that we can't complain anymore of carelessness, sloppiness or a general lack of ability. On Saturday night at Burlington High School the VSO consistently produced a full and disciplined sound. And with the UVM Choral Union, the VSO presented one of the most interesting programs of their history, featuring the Ravel Piano Concerto in G minor (with Carlos Barajas, soloist) and Bernstein's Chichester Psalms.

The concert opened with a surprise piece not listed on the program which apparently couldn't wait to be played as an encore, a Vivaldi concerto for four violins. Errors in performance were overlooked because of its overall superb quality. All entrances were smooth and precise, and the soloists (all from the VSO) played consistently well.

The formal program began with Brahms' Academic Festival Overture, and featured excellent performances of all the wind players. This piece, which was taken at the perfect tempo, was probably the best played. Conductor Guigui stressed uniformity in texture and he got it. The coda was a typically grand Brahmsian finish and received a warm ovation from the full-house audience.

The Ravel was exquisite as well. Pianist Carlos Barajas played beautifully, never betraying the clarity of Ravel's impressionistic style, but nevertheless played with an intensity and delicacy which in some places reminded me of Rachmoninov. During the hypnotic waltz-like second movement he produced a velvety legato which the orchestra supported gracefully and evenly. The excellent clarinet and flute solo in this movement also added to the general loveliness of the piece – some of Ravel's warmest writing to be sure.

The Chichester Psalms contained both good and bad playing. I missed the bongo in the first movement and thought that the snaredrum was an inadequate substitute. Bernstein relies on a great deal of percussion in this movement to give the piece its vibrant, spontaneous color. James Chapman, choral director who conducted this piece, led the choir admirably through the first movement (they sang verse 2 of Psalm 108 and all of Psalm 100), but it nevertheless seemed to lack liveliness and good pitch.

In the second movement, tenor Gary Towne's noble falsetto attempt to sing an alto solo (intended to be sung by a boy) was too noticably strained to be very effective. It was not light or angelic enough as it should have been and because Bernstein specifically did not want a woman to sing this solo (Psalm 23) the lesson to be learned is that unless you have a boy alto (a good boy alto) you really shouldn't attempt the Chichester Psalms.

The men entered the peaceful second movement with a magnificently sung counterpoint to the 23rd Psalm, "Why do the nations rage?" from Psalm 2. Some of the best playing and singing was done in the section, with the women soon joining them to produce a full, explosive sound.

The Choral Union overcame all previous troubles to sing the 131st and 133rd Psalms that finished the composition. The orchestra and singers performed beautifully in this slow and very dramatic ending. Any shortcomings were forgotten.

Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition was played last. The orchestra, though somewhat fatigued, managed well with these 13 short pieces. The horns did not play as smoothly as they have up to this point but the Pictures remained delightful despite the waning orchestra. They were perhaps saving their strength for last exhibition picture – "The Great Gate of Kiev" which contains, complete with gong, one of the loudest, most impressive codas in all of music literature. And the VSO made it as impressive and awesome as any orchestra could.

The Amazing Kreskin to Baffle UVM

The Amazing Kreskin, an internationally known mentalist and authority on extrasensory perception (ESP), will appear at Ira Allen Chapel Thursday April 20 at 8:00 p.m.

Kreskin's mind bending demonstration will be a unique experience for the entire audience. Even NASA is studying his unique method of mental communication – and to prove its effectiveness, Kreskin has invited the Student Association Speakers Bureau to hide his check. If he can't find it, he will forfeit payment!

Parapsychologists, the scientists who study such phenomena, say everyone has extrasensory perception. We all have had experience we dismissed as "coincidence," but were there simply matters of chance?

The dream that comes true, the guess that proves correct, the hunch that pays off are not uncommon – and have you ever answered the telephone to find the caller someone you have just been thinking of? These could be spontaneous ESP experiences. But Kreskin's ESP powers go far beyond the spontaneous stage. He has cultured and refined his mentalist abilities to such a degree that he indeed amazes everyone who has ever seen him.

Kreskin is a frequent guest on The Tonight Show, and the response is always the same – people are totally convinced that this man is for real.

A large part of his performance includes audience participation, so come see for yourself April 20th. Tickets are one dollar with a UVM ID, and a two dollar general admission, and will be sold at the door starting at 7:30 the evening of the performance. Don't miss this chance to see one of the world's foremost ESP authorities.

Maaco AUTO PAINTING & BODYWORKS

FREE PINSTRIPING
with Macco's Presidential Paint Service

which includes

*Clean and Rewax Entire Car
*Machine Sand most Chips and Scratches
*Finish Preparation and Hand Sanding
*Max Windows and Chrome
*Apply Full Coat of Primer Sealer
*Paint Exterior with Acrylic Enamel (Same Color)
*Bake in Temperature-Controlled Oven

$139.95

195 Flynn Ave. 864-0386
Quality Image at a Reasonable Price

Stuft Shirt

PRIME RIBS $5.95 Fri. Nite

Open for Sunday Buffet
11:00-4:00
All You Can Eat for $3.95
Featuring Cape Codder $.75

Open 11-11 Fri.-Sat.
Open 11-10 Mon. thru Thurs.
Stuft Shirt 135 Pearl St. 864-9544

All Animals Are Strictly Dry
—They Sinless Live And Early Die.

weck's
WINE & CHEESE
Burlington Square Mall 658-2070

Ladies Nite
Thursday 9-12

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30

what ale's you
152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

BICYCLE REPAIR SEMINAR

Mon. April 17
7PM

10 Speed Repair
&
Maintenence
(Free of Charge)

pagocycle
227 main st.
burlington
864-6878

RECENT CUTS

Rashaan— The Eternal Vibration

By Tom Nuccio

Rashaan Roland Kirk, The Vibration Continues

December 5, 1977 marked a sad day in the world of jazz. Multi-reedman Rashaan Roland Kirk "physically" died on this day, less than a month after appearing in Burlington. Kirk, blind from birth, played a variety of unconventional woodwinds such as the stritch, manzello, flexaphone, reed trumpet and nose flutes in addition to his main axes of flute and tenor.

Kirk was deeply involved with dreams as he changed his name from Ronald to Rashaan-Roland after a childhood vision told him to do so. Another childhood dream he had was to play trumpet but doctors warned against it. Nevertheless, he fulfilled this aspiration by inventing a trumpaphone (a trumpet possessing a soprano sax mouthpiece). The man was truly a creative, warm performer, determined to communicate his dreams with music. Atlantic Records marks the end of a decade's association with this jazz genius via The Vibration Continues, a retrospective view of Kirk's music from 1968-1976. This album, destined to be a classic, exhibits the many facets of his playing style.

"Volunteered Slavery," the title track from a 1969 album, reveals the avant garde nature of his playing. The Roland Kirk Spirit Choir is featured in the first part adding a strong vocal backing. Trombonist Dick Griffin takes off at this point smearing rips of assorted glissandi followed by a mass ensemble improvisation.

Rasaan pays tribute to his main influence John Coltrane with a three part medley consisting of "Lush Life," "Afro Blue" and "Bessie's Blues." Kirk's manzello solo on "Afro Blue" sounds exactly like a Coltrane soprano flight in that he blows difficult licks around thematic motives at a highly paced tempo.

"Three for the Festival" reveals the innovative quality of Rashaan as he simultaneously plays tenor sax, stritch and manzello. This multi-instrumental capacity is possessed by no other musician. "Intro and Medley," a four part selection, astonishes the listener by mixing reed combinations to actually carry on a simultaneous two part counterpoint. Kirk sounds like a symphony of saxes while combining Dvorak's "Goin' Home" and "Sentimental Journey," flawlessly commanding both manzello and tenor.

The Vibration Continues is the epilogue of a book the world of jazz will always remember. Kirk's life was a novel and now the final page has been read.

Not Magic, But Marketable

By Randy McMullen

Dicky Betts and Great Southern, Atlanta's Burning Down

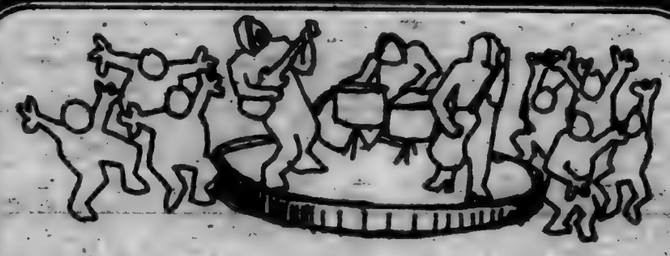
When Dicky Betts was a member of the Betts/Allman team that made the Allman Brothers' band a legend in southern rock history, he was considered one of the finest guitarists around. But Allman ate too many peaches, and the Allman Brothers slowly dismantled, leaving Betts to continue his tradition alone.



Since then he has dropped from rock's limelight. Some critics have claimed that he's lost his drive, his Allman know-how. But in a lot of ways, Betts has remained consistent. He still knows how to wail sullenly on his guitar, making each note melt into each other. And he can still take that slow, wailing sound and chop it into eighth notes, just to keep it interesting.

Atlanta's Burning Down, Betts' latest album, once again provides an impressive mixture of guitar work. It also has some fine blues numbers. And while it certainly is not that sort of landmark achievement that, say, Eat a Peach or Live at the Fillmore was, it does have its moments.

Side one starts off with 4:27 worth of good moments, in a song called "Good Time Feeling." It's full of some very pretty guitar work, that smooth, snappy sound that Betts has mastered. The title of this song reflects the atmosphere accurately. You can just see yourself slurping down shots of Jack Daniels, and jumping through the melody onto some outdoor dance floor in the summer.

"Atlanta's Burning Down," the title track, is interesting. It's a slinky, Civil War blues song, that features Betts' far-off vocal style. He sounds like he's singing into the wind on the wrong side of the street, but it's effective for the type of song he uses it for. "Leaving Me Again," and "Back on the Road" close out the side with probably the two worst songs on the album. Betts' guitar gets riled at times, but the numbers in general are sloppy, and they sound too much alike.

(continued on page 45)

IT'S LIVE EVERY NITE!

Thurs. 13-Sun. 16- HOT FLASH

Mon. 17 only- ROXITY

Tues. 18-Sat. 23- CHANGES

Neutral Grounds
125 PEARL

Pine St.
between
Main & College
Burlington
862-8513

By Jim Wright

Whenever the first full-length novel of a writer who has gained a reputation and won awards for short work is published, it is always a special event. The full-length debut of James Tiptree, Jr. Up The Walls of the World (Berkley-Putnam, $8.95, 319 pp) is no exception. James Tiptree has won both the Hugo and Nebula awards, both of them more than once, for his short stories, the most recent being the 1977 Hugo for the story "Houston, Houston, Do You Read?," perhaps one of the finest short stories I have ever read.

The great expectations usual in an instance such as this have here been colored by the possibility that Tiptree's first novel may also be the last. Indeed there exists the possibility that the author may never write SF again. "James Tiptree," you see, is the nom de plume of Alice Sheldon, a sixty-year-old psychologist, semi-retired, with good private reasons for keeping her identity secret. When, on the death of her mother, she circulated a letter that inadvertantly provided sufficient clues to the observant, the mystery was dispelled and with it, perhaps, her ability to write. For "Tiptree" was more than a name, it seems, to Mrs. Sheldon. In that persona she was able to express what she could not otherwise. Anonymity provided freedom and that was the well-spring of her creative speculation.

All this is fascinating and provides, in itself, much food for thought, especially on SF as a particular art form, as a unique method of communication. Much of Tiptree's writing has been about communication; and it is an important theme in her first novel. Up the Walls of the World is not a simple story by any means. It is exactly the type of novel that we would have expected Tiptree to write, based on her early short stories. It involves the inhabitants of a distant planet whose sun has begun to go nova because of an enormous "icy-black eater of suns," an intelligent entity that drifts through interstellar space, eradicating all in its path. Yet it is not pure malevolence; it has a plan. At the onset of the Destroyer, the inhabitants of that planet send their thoughts outward to the vast creature in a desperate attempt to save their planet and sun. Instead they manage, somehow, to tap the energy of the Destroyer and send themselves into the minds of psychics in a U.S. Department of Defense research project, whose giant computer installation has recently – independently – evolved a sentient program. All of these intelligences ultimately become aware of each other's existence and after much transcendental transformation, existence for all things living in the universe is forever altered. Taking all of these things together would seem like a mighty big subject for any writer to tackle and you certainly wouldn't expect a writer would take up the challenge with his first novel, yet hubris would not appear to be a facet of the Tiptree persona. Tiptree is able to pull all of these various plot lines together and make it look easy while she is doing it.

Robert Silverberg commented in 1975 that "when he (Tiptree) feels ready to write a book, he will write one, and it will amaze us!" Such a book is Up the Walls of the World. Run, don't walk, to wherever you've gotta go to score a copy of this book. I have not enjoyed a book so much in years and I certainly expect it to receive at the very least a Hugo or a Nebula award nomination. It is truly a monumental work, by an excellent writer and I certainly hope that it will not be the last "Tiptree" that I or anyone else will see.

Atlanta's Burning Down

Cont. From Page 44.

Side two, on the whole, is a lot stronger. "Dealin' with the Devil," the leadoff tune, is very spirited. It's got anger in it, and there is a different sound than Betts' fans might be accustomed to. The guitar is tougher and crisper, sounding a little bit like Joe Walsh. "Shady Street," – sounding somewhat akin to the classic "Sweet Melissa" – and "You Can Have Her" – an appealing rhythm/blues tune – add meat to the side which closes strongly with "Mr. Blues Man." Bonnie Bramlett (who has worked before with Eric Clapton) adds a beautiful touch to this number, which is the most melodic of the album.

Just remember, if you're looking for history and the Allman Brothers on this album, you'll be disappointed with Atlanta's Burning Down. If you're looking for the stuff that Betts has been capable of in the past, then you won't. It's a good, solid album, but it's not magic.

The liver of a left-handed person is on the left side of the body.

Eat an Ollieburger...

and put something out of this world into your mouth. Back in 1934 a guy named Ollie Gleichenhaus started to perfect the world's greatest hamburger. Today at LUMS, we call that hamburger "The Ollieburger." And it's so good, it's out of this world. The Ollieburger's made with a special secret blend of 29 herbs and spices. USDA choice beef char-broiled on both sides at once. And it even weighs a big ½ of a pound. Treat your tastebuds to an Ollieburger. Treat yourself to LUMS.

LUMS No one else will give you MORE MORE MORE

WILLISTON ROAD NEAR THE AIRPORT

BOOKSTACKS
open weeknights

Pine St.
between
Main & College
Burlington
862-8513

Traveling, Cruising or Commuting...

It's time for Summer tires.

Bring your tire needs to us.

AMOUR TIRE & BATTERY, INC.
106 MAIN STREET • DIAL 862-9643/862-9644
BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401
WHEEL BALANCING · FRONT-END ALIGNMENT · RETREADING

The Sheik Cafe
PRESENTS

WINDOWS
Jazz Quartet
Fri. & SAT—April 14 & 15

FLAT BROKE
Acoustic Rock
Fri. & Sat.-April 21 & 22

Nitely Drink Specials
Long List of Imported & Domestic
Beers & Wines & Sandwiches

41 King Street 864-5395

McCEPP and his TAXES

McCepp has gone into seclusion. Each year at this time he retires to his mountain bungalow to figure out his income taxes. For him, as for most of us, it is a tedious chore. McCepp must pour through page after page of deductions in order to come up with an acceptable list.

Last year McCepp's deduction of thirty Hawaiian shirts at three dollars apiece was disallowed. McCepp claimed the shirts were indigenous to his restaurant, but the IRS man concluded that not a single thing about the restaurant was Hawaiian except for the (mostly purple) shirts.

The IRS and McCepp also got into a terrific row over This Department. McCepp tried to claim the columns as contributions to the public good in that they provide excellent recommendations on where to eat. The IRS fellow said they were advertising, plain and simple.

McCepp also claimed a deduction based on the price of his Teriyaki Steak and what everyone else is selling them for. This deduction was substantial. McCepp charges just $4.95 for his Teriyaki Steak and because of this he sells lots of them. Come to think of it, he could call the price difference a "gift" – to all you nice customers.

Then there is the parking fee deduction. McCepp provides free parking to those who partake of his munchie goodies or drinkables. Just leave your car in the Burlington Square Parking Garage and come on down. You'll be providing McCepp with one legitimate deduction and yourself with the best meal in Burlington.

DINNER SERVED TILL MIDNIGHT
McCepp's
Burlington Square
Breakfast, lunch and dinner served all day

Biorhythms - "Beats of Life"

Their continual flow to which we link up with at birth regulate our physical, emotional, and intellectual self.

With a Bio (life) rhythm (beats) chart, expressed by 3 lines, red (energy level) green (attitude) blue (judgment), you can watch yourself as you go through your inevitable ups and downs.

It's fun to follow, and the knowledge of where one is biorhythmically is beneficial to an easier life.

For an attractive hand drawn (4 month chart) send $3.00 and $.55 postage and handling in check or money order to: Natural Vibrations, 277 Jackson Street, Lawrence, Mass. 01841. Include your Name, Address, Birth Date.

UPSTAIRS RECORDS

OPPOSITE PENNEY'S DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

These Series 7.98 Records

Now On Sale

For Only $4.95

CLASSIFIED ADS

OUTDOOR EQUIPMENT

For sale: used Wilson tennis rackets. Call Bruce 658-0876.

Bass Hiking boots for sale. Men's size 13, brand new, $35. Call Bill at 878-4675.

Backpack wanted: Large, high quality pack with built-in frame (I'm using it for hitching this summer) Call Bill at 878-4675.

1 pr. size 5½ SL-72 Adidas running shoes, very good condition, $10. Also, 1 pr. size 8 Asolo hiking boots, $60 new, used twice, asking $40. Call Nancy D. at x3089.

Garmont Gara racing boots, size 9 new $100. Dolomite Dinos size 8 used one half season, $50. Rossi ST 203 one season w/Salomon 5555E bindings. $100. Call after 6 p.m. 434-3847.

For sale: goose down mummy sleeping bag and goose down jacket. Best offer. Paul 656-4258.

For sale: Head HRP's 198 cm excellent condition, $30. Call 862-7172.

WHEELS

1970 Saab 99, good condition, AM/FM tape deck. Price negotiable. Duffie, 862-4826.

For sale: Triumph motorcycle 1976 Bonneville. Excellent condition, 5,000 miles. 518-546-8296. Can be seen in Burlington.

For sale: 1964 Austin-Healey Sprite, aqua blue paint, michelins, custom interior. Also for sale "Bugeye" Sprite and MG midget parts. Wanted Austin-Healey 3000 parts (or complete car). Call Rob Moore 656-2515.

1972 Comet, low mileage, good condition, automatic. $600 or best offer. Call evenings 862-5549.

For sale: 1970 Triumph TR 6 wreck, before collision car was in superb condition, 49,000 miles, new clutch, and michelin steel radials. Car was hit on driver's door and is not likely able to be fixed due to chasis damage, but complete front end, engine and transmission, convertible top, rear end and interior are in excellent condition. Best offer. Call 656-3844. Ask for Gary.

Suzuki 1974 GT550 7,000 miles, excellent condition. Call Jay at 864-7697.

For sale: 1969 BMW 2002, sun roof, radials, new charging system, runs, needs minor work. Asking $250 or b.o. 862-0133.

For sale: Honda motorbike 1967. 50 cc not running. Needs work. Best offer. Call Paul, 656-4258.

1974 Yamaha 360 Enduro motorcycle, 7000 miles, on and off the road. Great on corners and climbing trees, call West 863-5829.

1970 VW Sq. back. The body is basically shot. Engine in good shape. Great car for parts. Very cheap price. Call West 863-5829.

Tires for sale, 2 premium belted summer treads G78-14, Cheap. 863-4475.

Fiat parts for sale, 1972 128A parts, engines, transmissions, body parts, lights, radiators, etc. Cheap, 863-4475.

Wanted: to buy a bicycle in good condition. Call Lili x2227.

ROOMS & ROOMMATES

House for rent (in Burlington). Available May 15. 3 bedroom, parking and large yard. $300 a month. Available for summer or full year. Call 862-1334.

Apartment available to sublet from June 1 to September 1, 4 big bedrooms with kitchen & living area. Located on Main St. (Gates Hall) 3 minute walk from campus and downtown. Being on top floor provides you with a sundeck and excellent view of the lake. $400 a month (price negotiable). Call Doug at 864-9015 or Rich, Gregg or Tom at 656-3807.

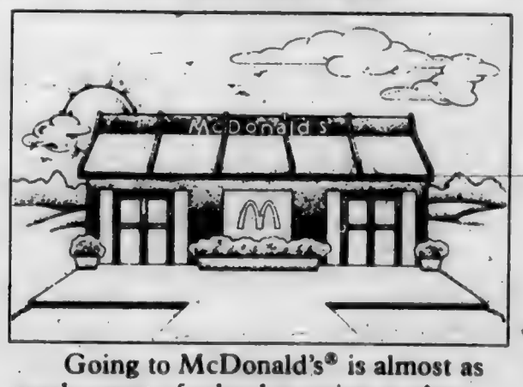
Have an extra corner in your basement that you would like to rent out this summer? I need summer storage for skis, a rug, etc. Call Vaune, 656-2082.

Rooms available for summer. Phi Gamma Delta. 862-7532 or 863-9173. Ask for Paul.

Wanted, 2 bedroom apt. to sublet June 1 thru Sept. 1. Must be close to UVM campus. Call Jody at x4091.

S.A. Films Says

Thanks To
The Student Body
With A
Special
Double Feature
On
Saturday April 15.



Play It Again, Sam
Casablanca

Three Showings
4:00 7:30 11:00
101 Votey

Admission:
50¢ with UVM ID
$1.50 Gen. Adm.

The Student Center.

Going to McDonald's® is almost as much a part of school as going to class. You've made us the place to meet, to talk, to have a good time, to celebrate your victories and help forget defeats.

You've made McDonald's more than just another place to eat. And that's why, at McDonald's, we do it all for you.

McDonald's®

©McDonald's System, Inc., 1977

Roommate wanted – need a place to stay this summer? Have your own room (completely furnished) within 10 minutes from UVM and 5 minutes from downtown for $90 a month in a clean 2 bedroom furnished apartment. Call Scott or Rob at 862-3976.

Apt. to sublet May 15 – Aug. 31, 381 Main St, 2 min. walk from campus, fully furnished 3 bedrooms, kitchen, living room, 2 working fireplaces, off-street parking, 325/month, heat & water included. 864-6352.

Seeking to share house or apt. with 1 or 2 other people in/nearby Burlington area with parking and garden space for summer and next year. Must be under 100 a month. Call Jill 862-8811. Leave message.

Looking for 3 or 4 bedroom apartment or house near UVM campus to rent for 78-79 academic year. Need not be furnished, but must have heat control. Call Vaune, 656-2082 or Jeannie, 656-2667.

Three room apartment available May 15, upper College St. 3 minutes from Waterman. Call Jocelyn, 863-9262.

Students – on campus housing – 3 rooms available to rent May 10th. Parking laundry, $110 a month. No smoking. Laura Howard, 863-4457.

Male student needs bedroom in house or apt. starting May 1 or June 1. For summer only or into next term as well. Call 862-0133.

Immaculate 2 bedroom apartment available mid-May thru Sept. 1 on Loomis St. $250 per month. Includes heat. Call 862-1863 (best time after 7 p.m.)

Beautifully furnished 2 bedroom apt. available June 1 within walking distance of campus. Call 862-7172 after 4 p.m., 656-4399.

SIGHTS & SOUNDS

For sale: used stereo system Marantz amp, big Advent speakers, AR-turntable, and Sony dolby cassette deck, call Malcolm at dinner 658-0876.

Pioneer 8-track home recording deck features Dolby, recording level controls, change of function and more. Excellent shape, $80. John 655-1626.

Tandberg reel to reel 3300X w/ Dolby, maxell tapes, demagnatizer, + Meister take-up reel. Call 863-2181 after 3:00.

For sale: Craig powerplay cassette car player, model T180-20 watts per channel. Exc. condition. New $165, asking $95 or b.o. 862-0133.

For sale: Zenith receiver/built-in tape deck. Excellent condition, 3 yrs. old, $25. Call 862-7172.

Amplifier for sale, Realistic SA500, 45 watts RMS, 6 yrs. old $20.00, 863-4475.

MISCELLANEOUS FOR SALE

For sale: kitchen table & 4 chairs, $15; 2 easy chairs in excellent condition, $15 each; Sears portable fan 2 ft by 2 ft, brand new, $15; 2 plush area carpets 9' x 12' one red, one orange, excellent condition, $20 each; old model hoover vacuum works well, $10; small outside grill, like new, $5. Call Joan at 862-8871 or stop by 295 Maple, 3rd floor rear apartment.

Typing done on IBM electric machine by former secretary who likes to type. Rates vary. Call Marge 862-0614.

Coupons for sale: Full $48 or best offer. Half $23 or best offer. Call Lucie or Sue 2192 or 2193.

For sale: exquisite pine, fir, and cedar loft, is free-standing and will fit in any room. Must be seen! Call or see Peter, 315 Hamilton, x2617.

For sale, dark stained, sturdy loft with 4 big shelves in very good condition at the low price of $50. See Jode or Ami, 308 Harris, 656-3872.

Authentic white earth shoes size 7½ b, worn twice. Must sell. Unreasonably reasonable price. Call mornings 862-0467, evenings 862-2970.

Must sell! 1 antique bed frame, beautiful ornate decor. Fits double size bed mattresses. Call 863-4479.

For sale: Hotpoint 18 cu. ft. refrigerator, good condition, asking $70 or b.o., 862-0133.

Diamond ring ¼ k solitaire, Tiffany setting. White gold. Appraised. Asking $325. Phone 434-3858.

LOST & FOUND

Found 1 ladies watch on Loomis St. on Tuesday, April 4th. If you think it's yours call 862-7516. Nansi.

Lost or stolen: a marroon/purplish leather wallet. Checkbook size. You can keep the wallet, but please return contents. Sentimental value only. Thank you. No questions asked! Lise Armstrong, Box 12 L/L Ctr. x4263.

Reward for light blue CB wind shirt w/hood. Inside pocket: meal coupons, Saab keys and room keys. Contact Allison Barber, 102 Wilks, x3442.

MISCELLANEOUS

Students! Now is the time to consider what you will do with your plants at the end of the semester. I will care for them in my home, they will be waiting for you when you return, healthier. Experienced, knowledgeable. For more information call Karen a.m. 862-0467, evenings 862-2970.

Care about how your money at UVM is spent? Come to the S.A. Budgetary Assembly, April 19 at Ira Allen Chapel, 7:30 p.m. Voice your opinion on the S.A. $175,000 budget.

Contact lens wearers. Save money on your brand name hard and soft lens supplies. Send for free illustrated catalog. Contact Lens Supply Center, 341 E. Camelback, Phoenix, Ariz. 85012.

Experienced sailor to crew on Dufour 34 during summer on Lake Champlain. Good salary. Call 1-215-448-8072.

Wanted: one lonely dog to share eyes for licking purposes. Call Cathy x3269.

JOBS

Looking for a way to spend an exotic month on Martha's vineyard? We have a house and need 1 more person to share expenses during the month of August. Call Leslie 656-2193.

Paid student internships in such fields as Mental Health, Law, Counseling, Media, Health Care, Administration, Research. All positions offer college credit and monthly living allowance. Applications for this program must be completed before May 1, 1978. For details contact The Center for Service Learning, 656-2062.

Counselors wanted – physical education, athletes, WSI, drama, A & C, general, coed overnight camp, N.Y. state. Apply David Ettenberg, 15 Eldorado Place, Weehawken, New Jersey 07087.

Program researcher and design specialist for Champlain Valley O.E.O. to develop innovative programs to meet needs of low income people. This position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit and monthly stipend. For information on this and other internship positions contact the Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Drawing from a live model, 7–10 Thursday nights at South Williams Hall. Call Jill at 862-7672 for more information.

Wanted: roommate $60/month includes heat. Call Randy at 863-6505.

Need some typing done. Call Randy at 863-6505 for fast, neat & accurate work.

Carpenter or woodworker wanted: to build a lumber box outside of Billings Ctr. Please contact David Interman of Billings Ctr Governing Board. x2029. Remuneration contingent upon quality of work done.

Woodstove for sale, handmade 3/16" platesteel, very solid, durable modeled after Jotel 118, $175.00, 863-4475.

Stereo for sale: Marantz amp, AR turntable, Advent speakers, Sony cassette deck dolby. Call Malcolm at dinner time, 658-0876.

Used tennis racquets for sale. Call Malcolm 658-0876.

Rewarding, exhausting summer with special needs children: Lincoln Hill, a residential educational camp in Foxboro, Ma. seeks counselors. Office: 14 Somerset St., rm 106, Boston, Ma (617) 367-3479. Call Mon-Wed-Fri.

Field Aide for Vermont Girl Scout Council to coordinate and evaluate programs for low income areas. Job involves frequent personal contact with adult personnel as well as ability to gather and analyze data. Position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit and monthly stipend. Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Staff researcher for Vermont League of Cities and Towns to investigate and provide information about state and local laws. This position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit, and monthly stipend. For more information on this and other internship opportunities, contact The Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Social Services Counselor and Program Coordinator needed by Counseling Service of Addison County. Job involves a wide range of duties in Big Brother/Sister and Alternate Care programs. This position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit and monthly allowance. Contact the Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Volunteers needed: tutors, athletic teams, administrative, clerical, craft skills. Minimum 5hours/wk. Can get credit. Contact volunteer coordinator at local correctional center. Need help now and for summer too 862-0434.

Publicity-Media Specialist with graphic and design skills needed to develop and implement public health information campaign for Planned Parenthood. Position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit and monthly stipend. For more information on this and other internship opportunities contact the Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Emergency Service Personnel needed to help administer and care for clients of Howard Mental Health's Emergency Alcohol Service. This position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit and monthly stipend. Contact the Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Person needed to teach and evaluate VD information programs for the Vermont Health Department. This position must be integrated with an academic program, offers college credit and monthly stipend. For more information on this and other internship opportunities, contact the Center for Service-Learning, UVM, 656-2062.

Wanted: teachers, social workers, nurses and people from other professions to work in Israel. Interviews concerning these and other employment/living opportunities will be given on Monday, April 24, by Mr. Jonathan Davis of the Aliyah Center, Boston Mass. If interested contact College of Education and Social Services, Career Planning & Placement, x3477 or Liz at 862-1061 after 6 p.m.

FRYE Boot Sale
$39 Ladies' Boots
Reg. $68
CRISPIN LEATHER
161 COLLEGE ST • 863 2216

STEREO CLEARANCE HOUSE HAS LOWEST STEREO PRICES

Pioneer SX980 Receiver $369.
Technics SL1900 Turntable $120.
Akai CS702D Cassette $125.
Our Free Catalog has many more deals on major brands, even lower prices on our monthly specials sheet. Send now and find out how to buy current $7.98 list lp's for $3.69. Stereo Clearance House Dept CH99 1029 Jacoby St., Johnstown, Pa. 15902. Phone Quotes 814-536-1611

CHEESE SPECIALS

New Zealand Cheddar $1.59/lb.
Brie $1.99/lb.
Fontina $1.95/lb.

Plus many other cheeses, cheesecake "seconds" & homemade quiche
CHEESE OUTLET
398 PINE ST.
Mon.-Thurs. 9-5 Fri. til 5:30
Now Saturday 9:30 AM–3:00

RESEARCH

Send only two dollars (to cover postage) for your copy of our latest mail-order catalog of over 7,000 research papers.

- Quality Unsurpassed
- Fast, Dependable Service
- Speeches, Reports, etc.

All Materials Sold For Research Assistance Only
AUTHORS' RESEARCH SERVICES INC
407 South Dearborn Street, Suite 600
Chicago, Illinois 60605
312-922-0300

English-speaking schools and colleges in over 160 foreign countries offer teaching and administrative opportunities to American and Canadian educators. Positions exist in all fields, on all levels, from kindergarten to the university. Many schools overseas do not require previous teaching experience or certification. Graduating seniors may apply. Foreign language knowledge is not required. Vacancies in overseas schools occur and are filled throughout the year. For free details, contact: Co-ordinator for Overseas Teaching, P.O. Box 2748, La Jolla, CA 92038.

EUROPE
less than 1/2 economy fare
Call toll free: Guaranteed Reservations (800) 325-4867 or see your travel agent!
Unitravel Charters Inc

Summer Positions

Summer camp for boys seeks qualified and dedicated University students for openings as Instructor/Dormitory Counsellor. Openings in fields of tennis, swimming (WSI preferred), riflery, nature conservation and axemanship. Laundry, room and board with salary range of $550 to $850. For application, write: Mowglis, School of the Open, East Hebron, N.H. 03232. Eight week season.

Wilderness Workshop

Summer college courses in literature and anthropology conducted in wilderness settings in the Adirondack Mountains on the relations of man with the natural world. June 10 – 25: Man and Nature Seminar (6 credits). July 31 – August 8: Adirondack Workshop (3 credits). August 11 – 20: Adirondack Workshop (3 credits).

Graduate and Undergraduate credit.

For further information write: Wilderness Workshop, Morey Hall, SUNY College at Potsdam, Potsdam, N.Y.

beer wine
THE ONLY
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
Lowest Prices Largest Selection
kegs soda

Save $280 on our 33-watt MCS™ series.

Sale $399

If purchased separately 679.85. MCS™ series 33-watt receiver and two 3-way high efficiency speakers. 33-watts RMS minimum per channel, 2 channels driven at 8 Ohms, 20-20,000 Hz with not more than 0.8% total harmonic distortion.

Modular Component Systems MCS™ Series Warranty
- Full 5 years on speakers
- Full 3 years on receivers, turntables and tape decks

Within 5 years of purchase of speakers, and 3 years of purchase of receivers, turntables and tape decks, we will at our option repair or replace any defective component. Simply return it to JCPenney.

Sale prices effective thru Saturday, April 15th.

12-watt MCS™ components. Your choice $99 ea.

Sale $99

Reg. 129.95. MCS® semi-automatic 2-speed 12" turntable features static balanced tubular line arm, adjustable anti-skate control and magnetic cartridge. Wow and flutter-0.06%. #6401.

Sale $99

Reg. 179.95. 12 watt MCS® receiver. 12 watts RMS minimum per channel, two channels driven at 8 ohms, 40-20,000 Hz. with not more than 1% total harmonic distortion. #3212.

Sale $99

Reg. 159.90. 2-way stereo speaker pair with bass reflex. Each cabinet contains: 1-8" woofer and 1-2" tweeter with removable grille cover. 8 ohm's impedance. #8224.

Bus and Parking Garage validation available tel: 863-6881

This Is JCPenney
Downtown Burlington

Store hours:
Monday-Friday 9:30-9:00
Saturdays 9:30-5:30

FREE

VERMIL CRANE

VOLUME XCV NUMBER 23 "Tis a pleasure to keep reality at a safe distance" APRIL 20, 1978

SPS photo by Neil Desind

Mountaineering #2.

SELECTING THE PROPER GEAR

The Busch® label is where it all begins. Note the snowy, craggy peaks affixed thereto. They are the mountains.

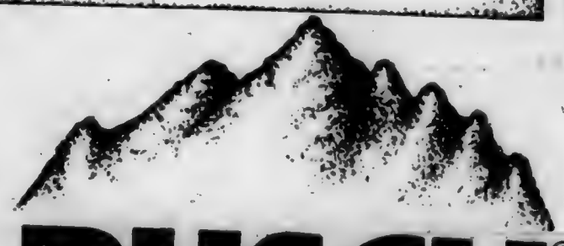
You are the mountaineer. And this is an ad. The subject of which is selecting the proper gear for mountaineering. (It all fits together so nicely, doesn't it?)

First and foremost, you'll need to pop the mountain top. For this task, faithful mountaineers use a church key. Secular mountaineers use a bottle opener. Don't be confused by these antics with semantics. Just remember, the opener is your primary tool. Be true to it and it will be true to you.

Second, choose a glass. Here the options become immense. German steins, hand-blown pilseners, old jelly jars, that cute little Mr. Boffo mug you've had since third grade.

(Church key used by faithful mountaineers.)

Be adventurous. Experiment. Most mountaineers have a personal preference. You'll develop one too.



Food is next. Proper mountaineering, not to mention proper nutrition, requires a smorgasbord selection of snacks. Some mountaineers have suffered from a potato chip deficiency, a pretzel imbalance or other serious dietary defects. Plan ahead.

Comfort is crucial. If you mountaineer in public, pick a padded bar stool, preferably one that spins (to facilitate admiring the scenery). At home, a comfortable chair or sofa will do. Rule of thumb: if it feels good, and the police don't seem to mind, do it.

Then turn on the tube or spin a tune or crack a good book. The choice is strictly between you and the dominant hemisphere of your brain. Of course, some mountaineers say the smooth, refreshing taste of Busch is entertainment enough. And thank goodness they do, because it's an excellent conclusion.

(Comfort is crucial)

Don't just reach for a beer. BUSCH® Head for the mountains.

Trustees Approve Yet Another Tuition Hike

By Robert J. Moore

Despite an amendment introduced by Timothy J. O'Connor Jr. which would have deleted the provision for an in-state tuition rise, a $100 hike in the cost for resident students was passed by UVM's Board of Trustees Saturday.

"I think we're going to foreclose some Vermonters from attending the University," said O'Connor, D-Brattleboro and speaker of the Vermont House, speaking in opposition to the $100 increase from $1,200 to $1,300.

O'Connor, a strong proponent of cutting university spending, said the time had come for "pulling the reins on the purse strings tight." "The tax money (from the Legislature) just isn't there," said O'Connor, who added that if the only way to avoid an in-state tuition hike was to cut programs, then they should be cut.

The amendment to delete the 8.3% increase in in-state tuition was voted down 16-7 and the complete proposal to raise tuition for all students next year was approved by an 18-5 margin. Passage of the proposal authorized a $245 or 7% increase in out-of-state tuition, raising it from $3,490 to $3,735 per year.

The trustees also approved $130 worth of increases in room, board and health fees.

Room rent jumped $72 due to inflation and the cost of overdue maintenance and planned dormitory renovations. Of top priority for next year is the renovation of Coolidge Hall, which carries a $600,000 price tag.

The charge for the Saga food service increased $54, from $710 to $764 per year to compensate for inflation and to meet federal minimum wage standards.

The health fee was also raised, from $64 to $68 per year, a 6.2% increase.

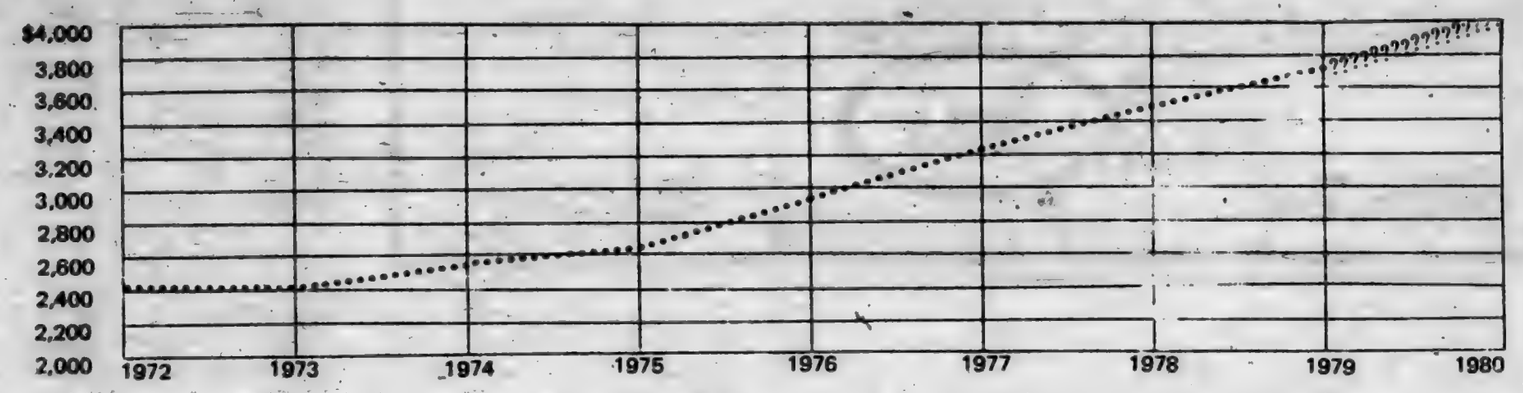
Medical school tuition was not exempt from the across the board increases, with a resident student paying $200 more per year (currently $2,200) for fiscal 1979. Regional Compact Students from Maine, Rhode Island, and New York will pay $310 more per year (currently $4,490) while out-of-area students entering after July 1, 1978 will be burdened with a $7,500 tuition rate, an increase of $3,010.

The increases in tuition and fees will help provide the funds for UVM's $78.2 million proposed budget for fiscal 1979, of which $13.9 million or 17.8% comes from the state.

UVM President Lattie Coor requested an additional allocation of 1.2 million from the legislature in February, citing an in-state tuition hike as the likely alternative if more funds weren't appropriated. As recommended by Governor Richard Snelling, the legislature allocated UVM only an extra $300,000. Last weekend, Coor said that the "partnership" between UVM and the state had to be improved if in-state tuition was to be "stabilized."

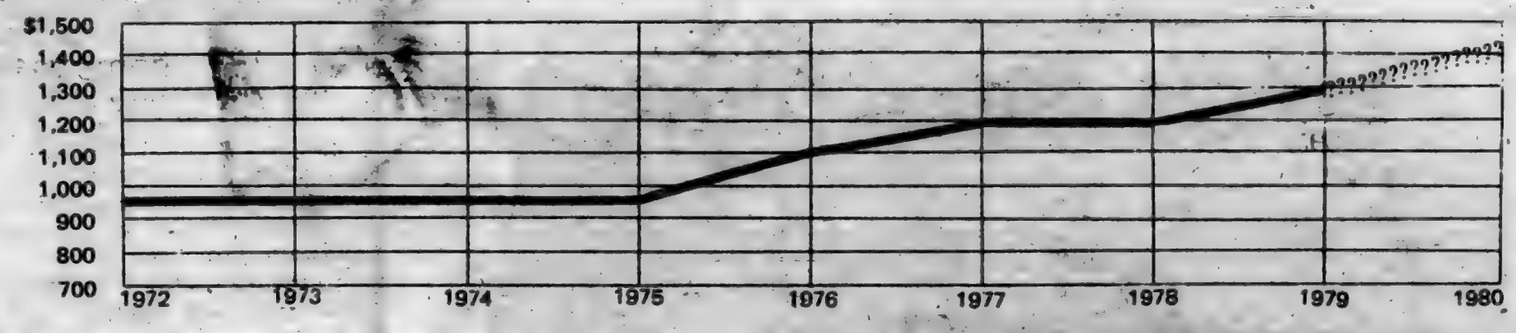
"It is not that our expenses are rising too rapidly. It is that our share of state support is not (rising)," Coor said on Friday, citing the difference in the state's appropriations to UVM and to the Vermont State Colleges(VSC). For fiscal 1979, the legislature appropriated $1,955 per student for UVM and $2,234 per student for VSC. The University should receive a "proportionate share," said Coor.

Coor admitted that the in-state tuition increase could become a "barrier" that would prevent some Vermonters from attending their state university, and said it was important to "provide access that is financially manageable."



The budget also includes about a half-million dollars in cutbacks, particularly the deferment of faculty pay increases and the elimination of some programs.

While student trustee Galen A. Crandall III was firmly against the in-state tuition increase, student trustee Andrea L. Pearl supported the increase every step of the way.



On Friday, Crandall proposed increasing in-state tuition by only $50 instead of $100, and suggested deferring some equipment purchases to

(continued on page 9)

Out-of-State Increases: Will They Ever End?

In-State Increases: Foreclosure on Vermonters

IRA Proposes New Student Governed Judiciary Council

By Russell Flannery

Citing the need for a more flexible disciplinary process and a reduction in the fee assessed to on-campus residents for unpaid dormitory damages, the Inter Residence Association (IRA) Judiciary Committee recently unveiled plans for a student governed judicial council.

If the proposal is approved at next week's meeting of the Residential Life Central Staff, a peer body, with disciplinary powers roughly equivalent to those of a campus area coordinator, will be in operation next semester.

Director of the Office of Residential Life, Steve Peterson said, "I think the effort by IRA to create the student judiciary is a positive one. I think it's a recognition and an acknowledgement that students are willing to be responsible for the kind of environment that exists within residence halls, and to be accountable within themselves and to themselves rather than being accountable to someone who's external to them in administrative office."

UVM'S DISCIPLINARY PROCESS

Under the current system, any Hall Advisor (HA), Resident Advisor (RA), staff member or student may file an incident report, which is a formal accusation of wrongdoing by an individual student. The report is filed with the appropriate campus area coordinator, who has the option of referring the problem back to the reporting authority and suggesting verbal counseling.

Should a violation warranting formal disciplinary action occur, the area coordinator will schedule a hearing between him/herself and the student. Unfavorable judgment following the hearing with the coordinator leaves the student the option for a hearing with the director of the Office of Residential Life.

"Most times" the director will not overturn the decision of the coordinator, unless a flaw in "procedural matters" has occurred, according to Charlie Clark, last year's IRA President and this year's Student Association president. Legally, the student may also appeal to the dean of students, the president of the university, and the Board of Trustees, said Clark.

Charlie Clark explains IRA's new judicial council.

SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

THE PROPOSED JUDICIAL COUNCIL

Under the new system, a student alleged to have committed an act warranting further action would have the option of the administrative process, or a hearing and judgment by a group of his peers, whose decision will carry an impact essentially equal to that of the area coordinator. Verbal reprimands and expulsion from the residence system will be within the jurisdiction of the council. Suspension from the university will not be a power of the council, however, due to the legal ramifications. A student may not appear before both an area coordinator and the judiciary committee.

Nine undergraduate students will be selected from an interview process conducted by the IRA Judiciary Committee. These students, who must maintain a cumulative average of 2.4 — the same required of an R.A. — will prepare for their duties by enrollment in seminars sponsored by Residential Life.

(continued on page 9)

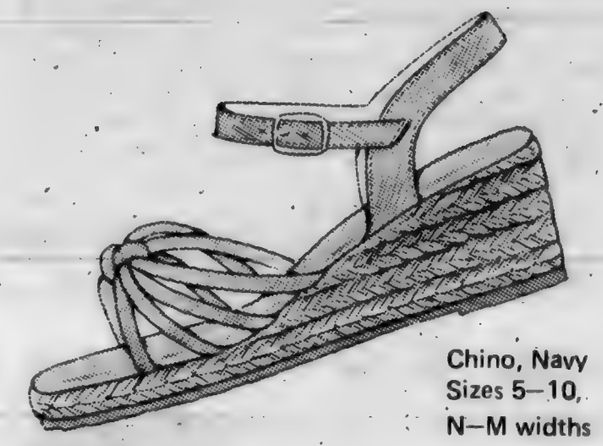
Footworks



Ropes You Into Fashion!

Swing into Spring with exciting Footworks espadrilles. Fabric and rope rev up together to put you in high fashion gear. A with-it look to liven casual and dressy times!

$22.00 Both styles

Navy, Chino, Black

Chino, Navy
Sizes 5–10,
N–M widths

Jan's

30 CHURCH ST.
DOWNTOWN BURL.
864-4735

Vermont's Quality Shoe Store

Mon. & Fri. 'til 9:00
Mastercharge/VISA
Parking & Bus Tokens

O'brien's Beauty Salons, Inc.

Students Complain They Were Required to Work on State Project

By Sue Perkins

Several Recreation Management seniors complained that they were required to do a large amount of unrewarding "busy work" for a state project that brougnt a graduate student a stipend and diverted the instructional attentions of their professor.

The senior seminar class, taught by Associate Prof. John Lindsay, allegedly spent half the semester working on the State Comprehensive Outdoor Recreation Plan (SCORP) in conjunction with a freshman seminar class taught by Assistant Professor Robert E. Manning. The project involved inventorying state lands and tallying results in a report for the Agency of Environmental Conservation (AEC).

According to Ellen Reese of the AEC in Montpelier, the agency budgeted a State Recreational Planning grant of $10,000, $8700 of which went to the UVM School of Natural Resources for Project SCORP.

"If it was simply a project that had to be done, we never would have approached the University in the first place," said Reese. She said they approached UVM with SCORP because it was educationally and professionally beneficial to students.

Reese said Professors Manning's and Lindsay's supervisory time was to have been "5% of their time." The majority of the work had been done by Manning and the students, and the AEC was extremely satisfied with the project. She thought the students were pleased to have participated, saying that "more students than we originally thought participated."

Senior Kathy O'Malley said she resented Project SCORP being a course requirement.

> "In his view (Feder's) Lindsay had not done a fair amount of teaching during the first half of the semester."

Another Recreation Management Senior, Louise Choquette, and O'Malley complained to Assistant Dean Forcier, telling him that students should have had a choice whether or not to participate.

O'Malley said Forcier told them he was "surprised they hadn't been offered a choice... He told us he had instructed the professors that they were supposed to give students a choice (to participate), if SCORP were to be included as a course project. To O'Malley's knowledge, Forcier had not acted on their complaint. Associate Professor Lindsay said Forcier had told him students were to be given an option to work on SCORP. He said he had done so and that at the outset no students had declined to work on the project.

As an alternative to SCORP, students could have participated in a standard type senior seminar course involving research papers, debates, role playing and other instruction, said Lindsay.

Senior students acted as "team leaders," coordinating groups of four or five freshmen to contact and accumulate data from the various agencies in charge of Vermont recreational lands, said Lindsay.

According to O'Malley, the students received course credit, but no money. She did not know the School of Natural Resources had received $8700 from the state and when informed of that fact said, "I didn't know it was that much."

Asked how much legwork Manning and Lindsay did, O'Malley said, "very, very little, if any... You'd have to check with (graduate student) Bob Wanner, but I never saw them do anything."

> "Toomb concurred with other class members that they did not really have a choice to participate at the outset, although he elected to help with the final compilation."

Eric Toomb, a senior still involved in compiling the results for the SCORP report, said that in the past the senior seminar had consisted largely of speakers and discussion. Apparently, the SCORP project was an "experiment." Toomb said, "SCORP ties in closely with our line of work and helps us get to know the agencies better."

Toomb said students get reimbursed for expenses such as mimeographing, phone calls and transportation.

Toomb did not think Manning had participated significantly in the project. Asked why he thought Manning was involved, Toomb said, "He has the funds... He's sort of an interested party." The itemization of the expenses met by the $8700 allocation was not obtainable. Lindsay said he believed graduate student Bob Wanner was receiving a stipend of some $5000–6000. Wanner could not be located for comment.

Lindsay further stated that neither he nor Manning were receiving any money in association with the SCORP project.

"One of the reasons we have not done a project with the University before is because the overhead UVM charges is excessively high," usually 70%, she said.

Reese said the $8700 allocated UVM for the project is a small part of the total expenditures for SCORP.

He said Manning and Lindsay receive no direct compensation for their efforts. However, the University is reimbursed for up to five percent of the professors' salary for the time they invested in the project. "It is not totally unusual for professors to operate that way," noted Reese.

Toomb said the report was being compiled for the Vermont State Environment Conservation Agency of the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, to obtain funds under the Land and Water

(continued on page 9)

Fitzgerald:

Our Foreign Policy Is "Confusing"

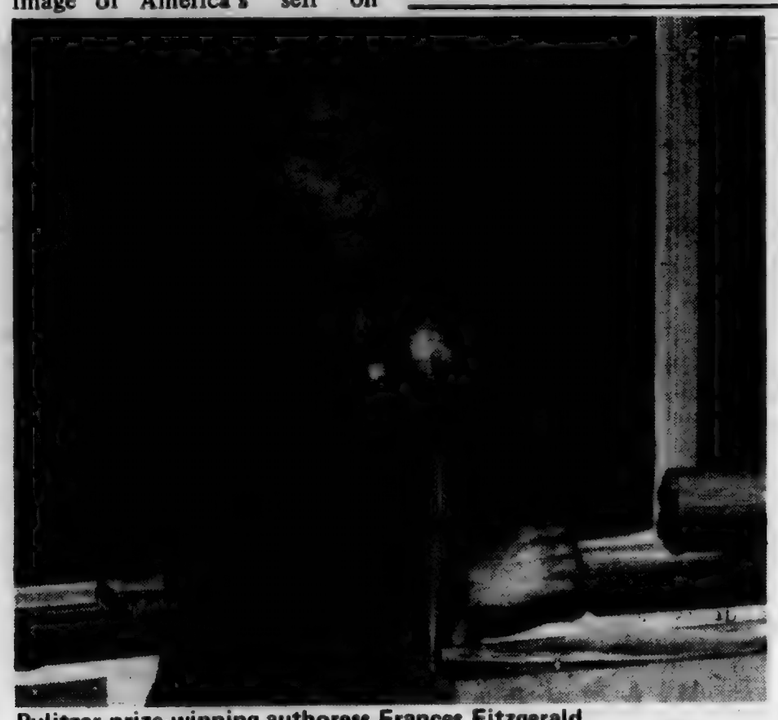
By John Letteri

Current American foreign policy is "confusing," and the Carter Administration "clearly doesn't understand the international economy," according to Pulitzer prize-winning authoress Frances Fitzgerald, who spoke before a capacity crowd in Carpenter Auditorium Friday night.

As a result of this confusion, America's "sense of self" on the international scene is "incoherent," she said. The damages of this to America lie in a possible "conservative, isolationist, protectivist" reaction that America "simply cannot afford" at this time.

What is needed, she said, "is more demand toward rational planning." American foreign policy makers must realize that the United States is not "the only country" in the world and begin to create an international image of America's "self" on that basis.

She called American foreign policy makers a conspiracy of Harvard and Yale graduates who never had much association with domestic life and have very little respect for public opinion. They didn't tell the American people "what they were doing" or "why they went in there" during the Vietnam war.



Public opinion, however, in the form of anti-war protests and media coverage was shown to America's "policy makers." The idea of "exporting the American way of life" to a small, rural Southeast Asian country ten thousand miles from the United States was a "mistake," said Fitzgerald.

Most of the United States, except for the East coast, "is either unaware or unconcerned with foreign policy," she said. Consequently, forming a policy that reflects America's "true sense of self" has been "extremely difficult." Fitzgerald questioned the possibility of ever straightening out these international issues. "Isn't it impossible to understand?" she asked.

She said that prior to World War II, the United States concentrated on becoming strong domestically and becoming industrially and agriculturally great. During and after World War II, the United States took on a larger and larger role in international affairs. America's "sense of self" during this period portrayed a nation that could do no wrong. The Vietnam experience, said Fitzgerald, "led to a real change" of America's world view and sense of self. In her view, the reality of losing a war and the impeachment of Richard Nixon coming so close together accounts for the current confusion of the United States on the international scene.

Fitzgerald conceded, however, that "there was a lot I didn't know when I wrote the book (Fire in the Lake) and there is a lot we still don't know about Vietnam." She said that although foreign policy now is confusing, "I don't believe foreign policy is all that foreign."

"She called American foreign policy makers a conspiracy of Harvard and Yale graduates who never had much association with domestic life and have little respect for public opinion."

Pulitzer prize-winning authoress Frances Fitzgerald.
SPS Photo by Don Cunningham

Gay Student Union Challenges S.A. Funding Decision

By John Letteri

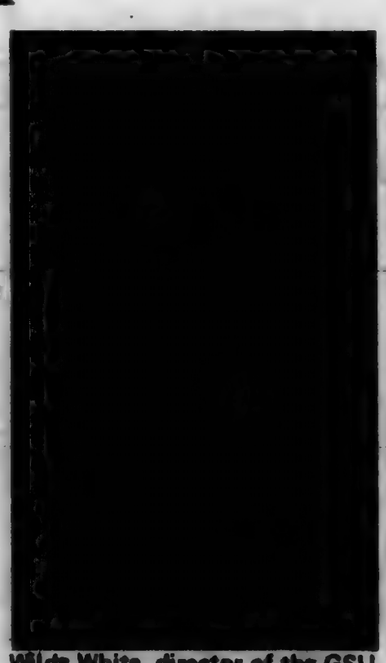
An unprecedented challenge by the Gay Student Union (GSU) to a Student Association (SA) Finance Committee ruling denying the GSU $425 for a special event, electrified the SA Senate meeting Tuesday night.

Wilda White, director of the GSU, said she doesn't think that the criteria for getting special event funds from the SA are "workable for everyone on campus." She added that the $425 the GSU wanted to use to bring a feminist musician to campus was "very little compared to the $1000 you spend on beer" for Oktoberfest.

SA Treasurer Larry Landry said the decision was made according to SA Special Events policy. He contended that the GSU event "would not," as stated in the policy, "appeal to general interests and relevance to a significant number of students."

Several SA Senators countered by saying that the SA "is for everyone's benefit" and should fund "different" types of things rather than always following policy and "maintaining the status quo." Another advocated "putting" money into the GSU so the club "can start to grow."

SA Senator Michael Gilbert, however, argued that all clubs appeal to the SA "under the same policy" and the SA Finance Committee "gauges" each club's request according to this policy. He added that the GSU "was feeling persecuted" by the denial of funds, and if that was the case "they should not."



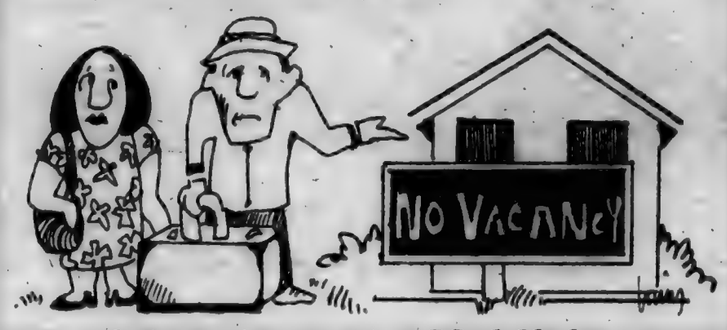
Landry said, "You have to look at the whole thing in perspective." During budget hearings or special events considerations, "there isn't one pleasant decision." One hundred seventy-five thousand dollars "may seem like a lot," Landry concluded, but after taking care of "traditional" requests like SA Films, and Concert Bureau, "it really isn't."

SA President Geoff Liggett said senators should "look" at the policy and "apply" it to the GSU's specific case. If the senators had "any problem" with the policy, it could be "reviewed and revised."

A vote was taken and the Senate re-affirmed the Finance Committee's ruling to deny the funds.

Liggett introduced a topic of debate to provide SA senators with passes to SA sponsored events. He said that senators work very hard and receive little compensation for their work.

Yet, several senators argued that by running for the Senate, "you're not running for extra benefits or additional recognition." Although members of other SA funded groups do receive some reward, senators have not received any in the past and do not intend to.



Wilda White, director of the GSU.
SPS Photo by Don Cunningham

The issue will be presented to the General Assembly Meeting (4/19) for a vote.

Other business included the introduction of the new SA president and vice-president, Charlie Clark and Missy Burke, respectively, and the introduction of Clark's possible treasurer for next fall, Tom Carol.

CAUGHT SHORT FOR GRADUATION?

if you don't have reservations yet, chances are you are why not come to Middlebury 45 minutes from campus

a Colonial Inn offering Vermont hospitality Since 1827

plenty of rooms avaiable

THE MIDDLEBURY INN & MOTEL

Court St. Middlebury 802-388-4961

H.A.S.H. JEANS

I'm Star Status. . . in Fashion Jeans by H.A.S.H... These Jeans are 14 oz. denim, the fit exceptional. If you're looking for the fashionest . . . Get into H.A.S.H. Jeans. They're star kissed. $26. and $28. Way-In Main Level.

It's an experience
MAGRAMS
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

Student Photo Service

656-2050

Passport/Resume Photos Taken

All kinds of custom photography and darkroom work available

LOWER BILLINGS CENTER (by the phones)

Make Your Move To A Very Special Backgammon Sale

10% Discount with this Ad

Ebenezer Allen

Gift Shop

Burlington Square Mall 863-4215

First Time Ever Offered!

SUGARBUSH

Spring Skiing Special

$10 Regularly $15

For UVM Students & Faculty

I.D. Required

Valid 7 Days per Week 9AM-4PM

Pick Up Your Pass at the Mushroom Ticket House

Sugarbush Valley Ski Area Warren, Vt.

Georgia State Senator Supports Reverse Discrimination of Bakke

By Rich Hyland

"While race remains the central factor determining life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness for 13% of the nation, affirmative action programs are not only permissible, they are mandatory," asserted Georgia State Senator Julian Bond in a workshop sponsored by the Third World Organization last Saturday at the Living/Learning Center.

Senator Bond, speaking before a very receptive audience, centered his talk around the controversial Bakke decision in which the California State Supreme Court ruled in favor of Allen Bakke, a white male who claimed he was denied admission to the University of California medical school at Davis because of "reverse discrimination" in the school's admission policy. "The legacy of 300 years of slavery, discrimination and degradation is not ended overnight," stated Senator Bond, who mounted his defense of the "affirmative action programs" favoring minorities in several ways.

Statistically, Bond found it hard to believe that the programs themselves could be held directly accountable for the rejection of Bakke. "Bakke insists that he was first in a long line of candidates arranged by merit and that sixteen minority members were moved in front of him and that when he came to the front of the line again, the door was shut in his face," explained Bond. "If all the minorities were not accepted, he cannot claim that he would've been in."

The senator went on to say that minority applicants are better equipped to medically treat minorities as a result of their past experience. Currently, there is one black doctor for every 14,000 blacks compared to the white ratio of one doctor to about 500 people. "These are comforting statistics only if you believe that white people are sicker than black people," said Bond.

Julian Bond, State Senator from Georgia.

Bond also maintained that little, if any, correlation exists between an applicant's test scores and grade point average (upon which Bakke claimed his superior qualifications), and the applicant's subsequent performance as a medical student. Senator Bond cited the case of Obell Knight who was admitted to the University of California at Davis under its special admissions quota for minorities, and became the senior class award winner for the 1977 graduating class of the medical school. Bond, in concluding his talk, quoted Obell Knight's views on the Bakke situation.

"Allan Bakke says he is more qualified on account of grades and test scores and maybe he is. He is probably more qualified than half the white students in the class. But if medical school admission programs were geared around that, those schools would turn out very good medical computers, but they wouldn't be very good doctors."

Women, Women, Women...

Two Day Workshop Sponsored by Creamery Education Foundation

Two special days for all women, sponsored by the Creamery Educational Foundation, will take place May 5 & 6 in Burlington. A chance for women to share their skills, and knowledge with others.

Friday's events will include a morning talk by author Rita Mae Brown, "The Women's Movement: Where Are We Now?"; a lecture by psychologist Phyllis Chesler on "The Impact of Feminism on Female Psychology"; workshops, concessions, recreation and an art gallery continuing throughout the afternoon; the continous showing of three films, The Stepford Wives, A Woman Under the Influence, and Assault on the Eiffel Tower; and an evening concert by west-coast songwriter and pianist, Margie Adam.

Workshops will be held throughout the day on Saturday, focusing on women in all aspects of their daily lives, becoming, earning, learning, asserting, and well-being. Margie Adam will lead a large discussion group entitled "Women and Culture," and Rita Mae Brown will lead a similar group on the topic of "Success: The Double-Edged Sword." The three films will be shown throughout the day, and display books, recreation, and the art gallery will continue.

Women, women, women will be located on the campus of the University of Vermont. A free day-care service is available for children 6 months to 9 years, but because of limited space, preregistration is necessary. Tickets are $25 for both days or $15 per day in advance, or $15 per day at the door. Reduced price tickets will be available as of May 1, if you cannot afford the full price. Please address your requests to The Creamery. First come, first serve.

For tickets and further information please contact The Creamery Educational Foundation, Box 367, Shelburne, Vt. 05482. 802-985-3316.

This is an educational service sponsored by the non-profit Creamery Education Foundation.

New Agency Now Coordinates All Student Financial Aid Programs

By John Letteri

The creation of the Bureau of Student Financial Aid provides a "greater accessibility" to the funds available for the student according to Ted Jones, Training Officer for the Regional Student Financial Aid Office.

Jones, who spoke before a small crowd in Room 412 of the Burlington Federal Building last Thursday, said that formerly five separate aid programs controlled by the Office of Education, the two grant programs, the two loan programs, and the campus-based work-study program are now available through one bureau.

Students are now more able to get "packages" of aid (monies from more than one aid program). All aid allocations are based on the financial need of the student. Through a "need analysis" of a family's income, assets, and other factors, a student's eligibility for aid is determined.

Ted Jones (left) from the Regional Student-Financial Aid Office and John Robes, Lender Examiner for the Bureau of Student Financial Assistance. SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

The 12% nationwide default rate on student loans, however, makes it increasingly hard for students to get loans through the National Direct Student Loan (NDL) or the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) programs. Currently, lending institutions have a total of $12 billion out in student loans, and of that sum, $600 million are in default. "Banks aren't looking away" from student needs, but if the default rate continues to climb, "they may have to," said John Robes, Lender Examiner for the Bureau of Student Financial Assistance.

If that $600 million was paid back "it'd make all that much more available to other students" said Robes. Rather than default, students should "keep the lines of communication" open between themselves and the bank. If a student cannot pay back a loan, "the banks will be more than understanding in trying to work something out" with the student, continued Robes.

National Direct Student Loans (NDSL) and Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL) are available to students at 3% and 7% interest respectively. Under the NDSL, students may borrow up to 10,000 with repayment beginning nine months after graduation. Students may borrow up to 7500 under the GSL, through private lending institutions. Repayment must begin within nine to twelve months after graduation. The Federal government provides 90% of the money available through the NDSL program and insures the Guaranteed Student Loans.

Each institution applies to the government for funds for the campus based (work study) programs. The funds are allocated on the basis of overall student population and the amount of needy students at the school.

The Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG) and Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG) funds are provided by the federal government to each state based on such information as "the number of high school graduates and families with incomes of less than $3500" according to Jones. Students may apply for up to $1600 a year, and grants are made according to financial need.

Jones concluded "any confusion may be cleared up by going to the financial aid office at your school."

Professor Resigns Under Protest Rather Than Get his Doctorate

By John Letteri

The majority of students show only minimal interest in their courses and consider classroom instruction their "least significant time," said former UVM lecturer Jim Corologos, who recently resigned from the university under protest.

Concerned with "what they need to know" rather than "how to learn" students become "managed" by the university, said Corologos. Students who come to school to really learn are "frustrated" by their peer's "apathy" toward being challenged by their courses in a manner that stimulates creative thought. The question of "what have I learned" goes unanswered by the majority of students.

"Concerned with 'what they need to know' rather than 'how to learn,' students become 'managed' by the university..."

Learning and teaching should be "a constant quest for excellence," he said. If there is a form of excellence that people "really want," then there should be "a place for that to happen."

The American school system, however, "creates managers and not leaders," according to Corologos. As a result of being "managed" at universities, students tend to leave school with the same attitude. He said, "It's very easy to tear things down," but much harder to change them. Leaders "must be the product of the universities" in order to start "building" the foundation for change.

"If you're an effective teacher, you're always pushing people out to fly," said Corologos. Teachers must constantly be "pushing students away" to allow them to become "their own leader." Yes, "we've created an institution" that has "no concern" for the "people who are paying the bills."

" 'we've created an institution' that has 'no concern' for the 'people who are paying the bills.' "

With students as the "least significant" people on campus, a general apathy toward the issues confront students results. Students see being concerned and getting involved with issues as "frivolous," said Corologos.

Ironically, the students are the least significant, yet economically, students "have the power" to create that change. "You're the ones who pay the bills," said Corologos.

Although he left his classes, students, and other responsibilities by resigning, "I am so committed to teaching that I had to do it," he said. University policy stipulates as stated in the faculty handbook that a person who wants to stay on at UVM must obtain the highest degree in his or her field (doctorate). Corologos sees the handbook "as something magic and if you'll touch it, you'll get burnt." Without his doctorate, Corologos was not allowed to stay at UVM. But he said the handbook becomes the excuse for "not changing" as opposed to "a vehicle for change."

Corologos said he had "tremendous support" from former Dean of the College of Education, Corrigan, and current acting Dean Ken Fishel. The chairperson of the department, however, "went on a 180 degree turn about values."

The chairperson of Corologos' department was unavailable for comment.

SENIOR PORTRAITS

Professional Quality at a Special Student Rate

Single Shots or Group Packages

Its not too late to get yours in the yearbook.

PASSPORT PHOTOS

4 for $5.00

Carr Portrait Studios

205 ST. PAUL STREET
BURLINGTON, VT. 05401
864-4411

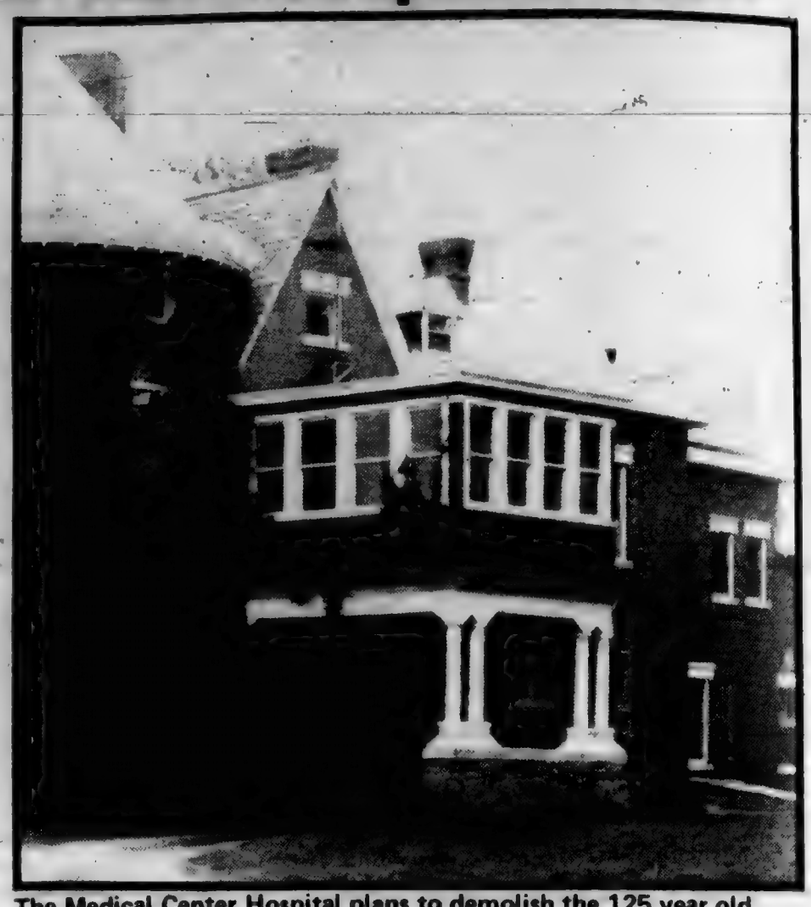
AMOUR TIRE & BATTERY, INC.
106 MAIN STREET • DIAL 862-9643/862-9644
BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401

Vermont Medical Center Hospital Takes Bishop's House Case to Supreme Court

By Robert J. Moore

Destruction of the 125 year old Bishop's House does not require an Act 250 permit, said lawyers for the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont appearing before the State Supreme Court last week.

For nearly a year, the hospital has been attempting to destroy the Bishop's House, which it owns, and asphalt the area into a parking lot.



According to the hospital's lawyer, Spencer Knapp, the lot on which the Bishop's House rests is only 1.4 acres, which exempts it from Vermont's land use law because Act 250 is not applicable to areas of less than 10 acres.

Knapp criticized a decision by the State Environmental Board last Fall, wherein they ruled that the Bishop's House lot should be considered as part of the total land owned by the Hospital in the area, which then makes Act 250 applicable as the total area exceeds 10 acres.

Describing the board's rationale as a "boat strap analysis," Knapp said their decision meant that if the hospital intended to construct a five foot sidewalk it would first have to go to the board for approval.

In defense of the board and in response to Knapp, Assistant Attorney General Benson Scotch said that Act 250 would not be applicable in such a situation unless the proposed changes were to have far-reaching effects.

Knapp also told the court that tearing down the Bishop's House was a separate action from constructing the parking lot. While an Act 250 permit application may be necessary for the lot construction, it has nothing to do with demolishing the house, he said.

The Medical Center Hospital plans to demolish the 125 year old Bishop's House. SPS Photo

The hospital has broached the idea of leaving the lot vacant after demolishing the house, an alternative Knapp termed "conceivable."

When the hospital announced last summer that it planned to destroy the Bishop's House and asphalt the area into 150 parking spaces, the committee to save the Bishop's House was formed by citizens opposed to the plan.

In Chittenden County Surerior Court, the committee was granted an injunction preventing the house's destruction because the hospital did not have an Act 250 permit.

The committee contended last week in court that the house is of historical significance and that the parking lot would mar a historic neighborhood.

free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!

Exp. 5-16-78

658-3333

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Just Arrived!

Beautiful Lambskin Jackets

Blazer, Zipper, Button & Belted Styles

Just Right to Wear Now in Vermont's Chilly Spring Weather!

Light 'OAK' Shades to Brighten Your Wardrobe!

For Men & Women

From $130.

Come in Today

SUNDANCE
A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH ST. • BURLINGTON • OPPOSITE WOOLWORTH'S

VPIRG NEWS
THE VERMONT PUBLIC INTEREST RESEARCH GROUP

Vermont's Bottle Law: Half Empty or Half Full?

By Jonathan Roth

Although Vermont's Container Deposit Law is considered to be a huge success and enjoys widespread support, a spokesman for the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has said the law's intent to encourage the use of only refillable bottles in the state has been circumvented by large brewers.

"Vermont's law has done an excellent job of getting the bottles and cans off the roadsides, but it has repeatedly stumbled over the question of refillable bottles," said VPIRG Assistant Director Leigh Seddon.

According to Seddon, a recent survey of Vermont beverage prices showed consumers save an average of 10% by buying beer and soft drinks in refillable bottles rather than one-way bottles or cans. Studies by the Federal Energy Administration show that refillable bottles use only one quarter of the energy of the one-way glass bottles commonly in use. "In spite of these advantages, large brewers continue to use wasteful one-way bottles that are returned to the store but not reused," said Seddon.

A review of the law's history highlights the difference between what the Container Deposit Law says and how it has been interpreted. In 1973 when the law was passed, Legislators assumed that since bottles and cans would be returned, the industry would quickly move to refilling bottles and recycling cans, Seddon claimed. Instead, millions of containers were returned to stores only to be hauled to the dump.

The soft drink industry and a few small brewers, for economic reasons, began switching to refillables by 1974. The large brewers, however, were less willing to make the switch. For a variety of reasons, including profits from throwaways and an ideological commitment to oppose deposit legislation, they refused to follow suit. For the brewers to use refillables "would be a sign of capitulation," remarked Don Webster, state administrator of the law.

The Vermont Legislature tried to alleviate the problem in 1975 by passing strengthening amendments that required all glass containers be certified "refillable" as of January 1, 1977. The large brewers found a loophole in the law, however, which allowed them to continue to use one-way bottles. To be certified "refillable," a bottle had only to be capable of being refilled, not actually refilled. As one observer remarked, "Even Dixie Cups are capable of being refilled."

With the start of the 1978 legislative session, VPIRG and other environmental groups attempted to clarify the situation by introducing more strengthening amendments. This time the industry defended its stance against using refillables with a new weapon: recycling. According to the brewers, the intent of the 1975 amendments was to stop bottles from going to the landfill, nothing more. Stating that close to 100% of the one-way bottles would soon be recycled, they attempted to undermine the argument for requiring refillables.

The tactic worked, according to Seddon, and the House Natural Resources Committee tabled the new amendments despite objections by environmentalists that recycling bottles wastes energy and money.

"Recycling of aluminum cans saves 95% of the energy needed to make a new can. Recycling glass bottles, however, as a substitute for refilling them, wastes more energy than it saves and is both environmentally and economically unsound," said Seddon.

VERMONT CYNIC

IRA's Judicial Council

continued from page three

"Each sex will be represented, as well as each of the three residential campuses by at least one member," reads the proposal. Five council members must be present for an actual hearing, including one from the dormitory area of the accused student. The board will maintain a non-voting adviser to aide in procedural matters.

A report may be filed for violation of any university or residence halls regulations. "The report may be filed by security, a H.A., an R.A., a student, or any other individual," reads the proposal, which later states, "The Judicial Council shall assure that any person who makes a report shall be informed as to the (outcome) of the hearing while taking into consideration the rights and the privacy of the students being acted against."

Peterson, reflecting on his past experiences with a student judiciary program, said, "...I saw the number of reports submitted by students increase from something less than 5% of the total reports submitted, to somewhere above 60% of the reports submitted, simply because the students felt that the incident would be dealt with by a student judiciary."

Members of the IRA committee spoke with concern about the $81,000 of unassigned dormitory damages, which generally results from vandalism. Last year, each dormitory resident paid $21.00 to defray these costs. "The damage part of our budget here... is so expensive. That's got to be brought down..." said Lynn Morse, the 1978-79 IRA first vice-president.

STUDENT JUDICIARY HISTORY

Several years ago, different judicial processes were set up on a dorm-to-dorm basis, according to Charlie Clark. They failed primarily due to a "lack of cases," said Clark, who added that the first councils did not have a scope equal to that of the new judiciary council.

Tuition Hike

continued from page three

save money. The proposal had little support and was described as "imprudent."

S.A. President Geoff Liggett said he was "unhappy" about the $100 in-state tuition increases but after looking over the information had decided that it was "probably necessary." Liggett did note, however, that in-state tuition should begin to "level off." "This should be the last major hike in a while," he said.

Liggett described proposals to eliminate or lessen the in-state tuition increase as "unwise," and said he had "a lot of faith in President Coor and Dr. Arns."

O'Connor was being "ridiculous" and "just getting votes" said Liggett concerning O'Connor's amendment that would have eliminated the $100 in-state hike. "He was not looking at the best interests of the university."

The seven trustees voting to eliminate the in-state tuition increase were: Sen. Merritt S. Hewitt Jr., R-Bennington; Sen. Russell F. Niquette, D-Chittenden; Representative O'Connor; Rep. Kermit A. Smith, R/D-Derby; Rep. Chester S. Ketcham, R-Middlebury; Student trustee Galen Crandall; and Peter P. Plante of Norwich. Hewitt and Niquette voted for the complete proposal after the amendment was defeated.

Students Complain

continued from page four

Conservation Fund Act. He believed this brought Vermont some $2 million. SCORP, he said, was updated every five years.

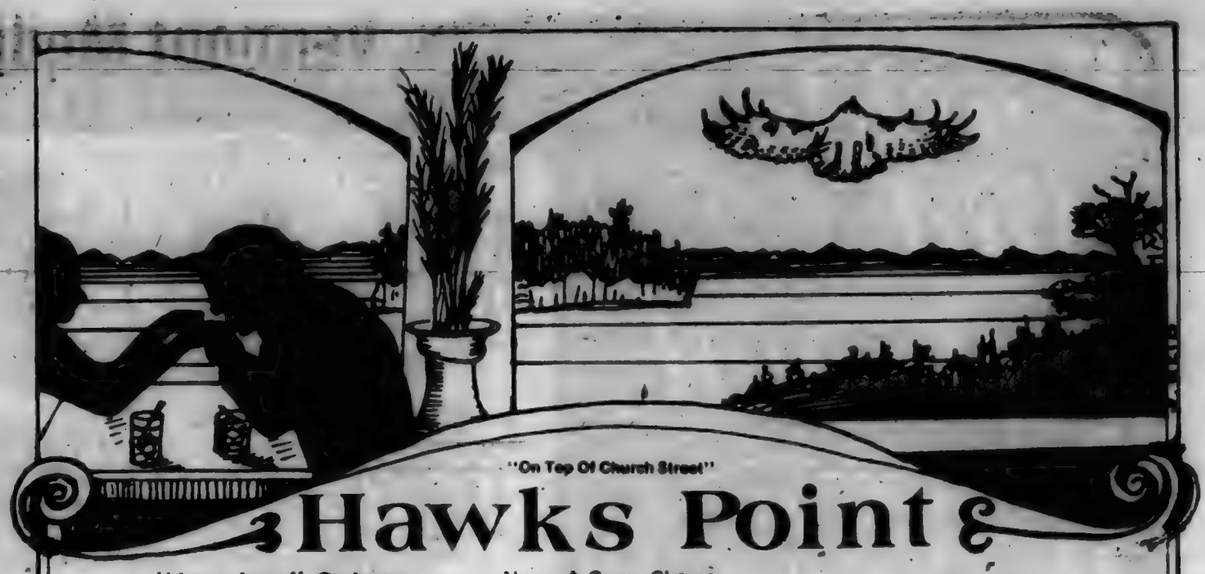
Professor Lindsay said SCORP was a periodically updated report of the base state recreation plan. He said that it identifies plans and the potential for how the state will use Federal funds and supplemental state money.

Lindsay said SCORP had to be updated to continue to be eligible for federal money, which has been increasing yearly to about $4 million this year.

Toomb concurred with other class members that they did not really have a choice to participate at the outset, although he elected to help with the final compilation.

Another student, Steven Feder, felt students should have had an option to work on SCORP.

Feder said that after the first week or so, the class rarely saw Professor Lindsay, and that they had worked largely with graduate student Bob Wanner. In his view, Lindsay had not done a fair amount of teaching during the first half of the semester.



Lindsay rebutted by saying he did not do a lot of teaching during the first half of the semester by prior agreement. He said the seminars were under the direction of Ellen Reese and Bob Wanner.

Asked what he thought of classes doing work on State projects for which the school was receiving funds, Feder said, "I don't like playing goffer, and, to an extent, this is what the class did. There were a lot of other things I'd rather have done... It was free labor."

Professor Lindsay said SCORP was included in the course "based on opportunities in terms of learning experience." "When they look at it in retrospect... I would hope they felt they had an experience not usually available to other recreational management students." He noted the experience introduced students to contacts in agencies useful for future employment and provided insights into government and bureaucracy. He said that "We ought to do it again."

Ellen Reese thought the performance of the Recreational Management seniors was excellent. "Basically, the quality was quite exceptional," she said, "for non-professional..." Reese called their methodology "innovative."

"On Top Of Church Street"
Hawks Point
"Just Jazz" Quintet featuring Larry McCrorey—Sax Bernie Kelley—Trumpet ...Fri.night...Sat.night.
Never A Cover Charge
68 Church St.
On the Big 8ft. T.V. Screen: Stanley Cup Hockey and Major League Baseball

Great Pizza & Subs!
Great Beer Buys!
10¢ Pitchers
with pizza (Winooski store only)

Try Our Whole Wheat Pizza
π PI EXPRESS
for free delivery call:
Winooski – 655-3005, 655-0977
Essex Jct. – 879-6333

1978 Champlain Valley
Lawn, Garden, & Art Festival
Essex Junction Skating Rink • Essex
Educational Center, between Routes 2a & 15
april 21-23
HOURS:
Friday, 6p.m.-10p.m.
Saturday, 10a.m.-9p.m.
Sunday, 10a.m.-6p.m.
Donation - Adults: 50¢,
16 and under: 25¢, Infants: Free
sponsored by
The Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce

World And National News Briefs

Compiled By Robert Cassidy

Uprising in Turkey

Turkish Interior Ministry officials say militia and commando troops have restored order in the Eastern Turkish city of Malatya.

Early Tuesday, dozens of buildings were burned or damaged by angry mobs protesting the bomb killing of the mayor, Hamit Fendoglu, on Monday. Authorities imposed a night curfew on Malatya and closed all schools until further notice. Turkish troops in armored cars barricaded street intersections and surrounded official buildings.

UN's Waldheim in Jerusalem

United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim met in Jerusalem Tuesday with Israeli Prime Minister Begin and Foreign Minister Dayan.

Afterward, Waldheim said the UN is still concerned about delays in a full Israeli withdrawal from southern Lebanon. Still later, Waldheim toured the Lebanese region to check on UN peace-keeping troops. A Beirut newspaper An Nahar said that Palestinian guerilla leader Yasir Arafat has pledged a moratorium on attacks into Israel, in order to speed the Israeli pullout. But a spokesman for Arafat declined comment on the report.

Human Rights Campaign Scores Again

Argentine journalist Jacobo Timerman, whose imprisonment was taken up by President Carter as a human rights issue, was released from jail Tuesday. But Argentine police say he's been ordered into indefinite house arrest.

Reliable sources say the military government probably will allow Timerman and his family to leave Argentina soon, to live in exile.

The 55 year old Timerman is director of the influential newspaper La Opinion. He was arrested April 15, 1977 for alleged dealings with Argentine financier David Graiver, who the government contends was a banker for left-wing guerillas.

Diplomatic sources say Timerman was tortured under questioning about links with Graiver and the insurgents. But a military panel's seven-month investigation failed to find enough evidence to bring formal charges. Nevertheless, the Argentine Government punished Timerman last November 11 by taking away his political rights, placing his property in state custody, and depriving him of the right to work as a professional journalist. His newspaper already had been placed under state control.

Carter Signs Nuclear Plant Pact

President Carter says a national labor pact covering the construction of nuclear power plants will provide significant savings for consumers. The agreement announced Tuesday is between the building and construction trades department and four firms that build 80% of the nation's nuclear power plants. Carter called it a "superb example" of how business and labor can cooperate to the mutual advantage of both sides of the bargaining table and benefit the country as well.

Sadat to Restart Peace Drive

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat sent a message to President Carter Tuesday amid reports that Sadat soon will give impetus to peace moves with Israel. The Sadat letter is a reply to one from Carter which reportedly contained proposals aimed at re-starting Egyptian-Israeli negotiations.

The talks have been stalled over Israel's refusal to withdraw from occupied Arab territories or approve an independent homeland for Palestinians. The Sadat letter is being carried to Carter by the Egyptian ambassador to Washington who said, as he left Cairo, "The ball is now in the American and Israeli camps."

W. Germany May Buy Air Defense System

A top official in Bonn says West Germany may support the purchase by NATO of an American-built airborne warning system, but only if the U.S. buys more West German arms. Defense Minister Hans Apel offered this assessment Tuesday.

NATO has been weighing for several years whether to buy the multi-million dollar U.S. made warning system designed to track military movements deep in eastern Europe. Last year, Britain said it would supply its own aircraft to the alliance's air surveillance program.

Second Canal Treaty Ratified

The second Panama Canal Treaty squeaked through the Senate Tuesday by a one-vote margin, 68-32. The approval came with affirmative votes by three Senators: James Abourezk of South Dakota, California's S. I. Hayakawa and Howard Cannon of Nevada. All three favored the first accord, but had been listed as undecided for Tuesday's vote.

Even veteran political observers had refused to predict which way the vote would go on the second treaty, which gives Panama control of the canal by the year 2000.

A last-minute compromise on American intervention rights was seen as helping treaty supporters. The amendment asserts the U.S. right to keep the waterway open... but it does not allow interference in Panama's internal affairs. That clause emerged from Panamanian unhappiness with the Senate's insistence on the right to keep the canal open with military force, if necessary.

In Panama City, thousands of Panamanians rushed into the streets, cheering over the Senate treaty approval. They had listened to the vote-count huddled around radios. Bands, gathered in a city plaza, broke into Caribbean "salsa" music when the ratification became official.

Nixon Wins Court Ruling

The Supreme Court barred the public from listening to the 30 White House tape recordings played at the Watergate cover-up trial of aides to former President Nixon. The decision was handed down on Tuesday.

The court's 7 to 2 decision reversed a 1976 ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which would have made the tapes available to the three commercial television networks, public television and a recording company planning to sell copies of the tapes for home use.

Justice Lewis Powell wrote the court's majority opinion. He said, "Considering all the circumstances of this concededly singular case, we hold that the common-law right of access to judicial records does not authorize release of the tapes in question."

The Court's ruling is a major legal victory for Nixon, who persistently challenged the tapes' release as an invasion of his privacy.

Joining Powell's opinion were Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Harry Blackmun, William Rehnquist and Potter Stewart. All but Stewart were appointed to the nation's highest court by Nixon. Justices William Brennan and Byron White did not agree with all of Powell's reasoning, but they also voted to bar release of the tapes. Dissenting were Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens.

Carter Tax Proposal Snubbed

The House Ways and Means Committee continued its review of President Carter's tax plan Tuesday, turning thumbs down on another of his proposals. The item tentatively rejected would have imposed strict limits on medical and casualty deductions. In its place, the panel approved a measure containing looser restrictions.

Monday, the committee tentatively approved one Carter proposal by repealing deductions for state and local gasoline taxes. But the panel tentatively rejected two other proposals, which would have repealed deductions for state and local sales taxes and personal property taxes.

Carter Creates Another Position

President Carter announced Tuesday he has named Henry Owen, a veteran diplomat, to be his special representative for international economic summits.

Owen played such a role in preparing for last year's seven nation economic meeting in London and already is making plans for a similar session in Bonn, West Germany in mid-July.

Owen has divided his time in the last year between assignments on the National Security Council staff and a position as director of Foreign Policy studies for the Brookings Institution. White House sources said they now expect Owen to devote full time to his Security Council work.

The Bonn summit will bring together leaders of Britain, France, Italy, West Germany, Japan, Canada and the United States.

Carter also announced he has given Lawrence Weiler the personal rank of ambassador while Weiler serves as coordinator for next month's United Nations General Assembly special session on disarmament.

Rodgers Wins His Second Boston Marathon

America's top marathon runner, Bill Rodgers of Melrose, Massachusetts, has won the Boston Marathon for a second time. The 30-year-old runner, regarded as the hometown favorite, won with an unofficial time of two hours, ten minutes and 13 seconds. That would be about 18 seconds slower than the record he set in his first victory in 1975.

Jeff Wells of Dallas was second, with an official clocking of two hours, eleven minutes and 17 seconds. Finland's Eda Tikannen was third, about eight seconds behind Wells.

Rodgers said that near the finish he didn't know if he would make it. He dropped out of last year's race after 18 miles. He described the pace as a tough one. He added, "I was really hurting. It was almost the hardest marathon of my life." He credits the cheering crowd that lines the route with giving him a boost.

Rodgers looked back several times at Wells in the last 100 yards before the finish. The two-time champion tossed his hands into the air as he crossed the finish line, and was immediately mobbed.

COMMENTARY

Coming Out" on Campus

By June F. McGinnis

Have you noticed the appearance of "Kill a queer for Christ" and other anti-gay slogans on the UVM campus recently? If you have and you are one of the estimated 800+ gay students, faculty and staff, you undoubtedly experienced a combination of anger, hurt and fear. If you are not gay, hopefully you were shocked and disgusted. But, more than likely, at the time, you said or did nothing to express your feelings. Unfortunately, such inaction not only indulges these hateful expressions but it encourages more of the same.

If you doubt the abuse of gays at UVM, I suggest that you wear a gay rights button or tee shirt around campus for one day. As an active member of the Gay Student Union, I recently tried to publicize and sell raffle tickets for the benefit of our annual Gay Awareness Weekend. The hostility which I encountered was the worst I have experienced in my three years of college. While I was still standing there, three men tore down and stomped upon a poster which I had just hung announcing the weekend's events. One man whom I have worked with all semester in my theatre class, asked if a gay raffle meant all the tickets had "odd" numbers. Many others simply acted as if I were selling tickets to the leper's ball.

In my frustration, I considered the alternative: Since homosexuals are not a particular color, nor are we in any way distinguishable from heterosexuals, unless we want to be, it is easy for us to remain invisible and silently tolerate the isolated incidents of abuse which we witness. Or is it?

Staying in the closet does allow protection from gay oppression directed specifically at you and if you are on staff or faculty, it may allow a promotion which might not othewise come. However, the sacrifices of self-oppression are numerous and severe.

You cannot attend any university functions as a couple with the person you love. You cannot hold her/his hand at the movies or walking around campus. You cannot sit on the green in the warm sunshine with your arms around each other as the straight couples do. If your lover is upset, or even dying, you must withhold from expressing your anxiety and pain. You must spend lonely frustrating hours apart on the holidays as you each go to visit your separate families alone. You must fake laughter at the frequent "queer" jokes which you are told while your stomach twists into knots in protest. You must suffer many sleepless nights from guilt for living a lie. You grow to despise people for their insensitivity, and yourself for your cowardice, as you realize that some of these people are simply misinformed and that you could educate them by simply being open about yourself.

Partial responsibility for the apparent increase in anti-gay attitudes must be acknowledged by UVM's gay population. Whatever excuse we might have for our inactivity and lack of support for the Gay Student Union, our apathy has encouraged this rebirth of hatred and oppression which gay people on campus are now experiencing.

As an out-front lesbian at UVM, people have the opportunity to know me as a human being. My visibility helps to dispel many of the vicious myths and stereotypes which have been promoted by the media, schools and churches. By my exposure, people see that I am not some huge ugly man-hating creature who chews nails for breakfast. I am an average student from an average family with the same frustrations and enjoyments as everyone else.

The gay students are tall and short, fat and thin, tough and gentle. We play sports, enjoy music and concerts, and go to church on Sunday. We too worry about failing courses, maintaining relationships, finding jobs, and being accepted by our peers. We do not wish to convert anyone to our lifestyle. We want only to be free to be ourselves with no more restrictions than anyone else.

An important part of being human is the expression and sharing of love. To force gay people to restrict or even to hide their love because the majority of the people do not understand why we love as we do is not only unjust but extremely cruel.

The attitudes of today's college students will be reflected in the social-legal policies of our future. The power to change laws and eliminate gay oppression is in the hands of the "straight majority." Gay people can only attempt to win their support for those changes necessary for our full participation in society, especially the protection of our jobs, homes and use of public facilities. Our worst enemy is a closed mind and our greatest hope is that enough people will listen and care. Is it not time for all human beings to be respected as such?

New Disease Spreading On Campuses

By Eric Kilburn

Scientists have confirmed the widespread occurrence of Armchairus ecologisti, a disease that has reached epidemic proportions at many American colleges, including UVM. While not fatal, experts feel that this highly-contagious malady may result in serious and possibly permanent mental debilitation. Unfortunately, the only known cure is in short supply, and geneticists have expressed ominous predictions on A. ecologisti's consequences for future generations of Americans.

Armchairus ecologisti first made its appearance in the U.S. about fifteen years ago, although it wasn't until the early 1970's that the affliction reached alarming levels of frequency and intensity. Apparently, Armchairus is capable of infecting all human beings, without regard to sex, creed, race, religion or cultural origin. However, the incidence rate among upper middle-class Caucasians has been considerably higher than the national average, and speculation by some of the nation's leading epidemiologists has failed to resolve this particularly insidious trend.

At first it appears difficult to generalize about the symptoms of Armchairus, but after careful scrutiny a few distinguishing characteristics do surface. Contagious females – and males to a lesser extent – exhibit a strong affinity for the latest of fashions from LLBean, EMS, and Alpine Designs, and females tend to wear make-up made only with natural dyes. In addition, both sexes are known for $60 hiking boots on all but the hottest summer days – whereupon they don Earth shoes – and never using sidewalks, a condition which does wonders for the campus Kentucky Bluegrass.

Aside from external complications, victims of Armchairus ecologisti manifest several disturbing psychological features as well. Particularly when discussing environmental topics, it was found that Armchairus afflictees often feign a credible look of serious concern for the issue that vanishes when action is suggested. Phrases such as "Man, the whole world is screwed up" and "They're gonna have to do something pretty soon" are commonly uttered, often several times in a single conversation. As the disease progresses, its symptoms intensify, and at the mention of personal involvement, the person readily descends into a comatose state similar to that of hibernation. Experimental evidence suggests that this peculiar state can persist anywhere from a few seconds to several decades.

Deviant behavior in Armchairus sufferers often goes unnoticed, although periods of stress – especially when writing term papers – tend to expose the condition. Examples of this are the person who polished off a twenty ounce steak and four cheeseburgers in the process of writing a ten-page essay on Global Starvation, or the individual who typed a paper on the Energy Crisis in her dorm room on a winter's day with the windows open. Although they make fascinating reading, case histories of such occurrences have continued to baffle scientists, and research is presently being undertaken.

The only known remedy for Armchairus ecologisti is consistent personal commitment to social and environmental change. As was previously mentioned, this element is currently found in relatively scarce quantities, although stock piles are available from several potential sources throughout Vermont. Contact People Acting for Change Together (PACT) at 658-2800 or visit the VPIRG office in Billings for a steady supply of this powerful curative, which is painless, non-toxic, and hopefully habit-forming.

"It was found that* Armchairus *afflictees often feign a credible look of serious concern for the issue that vanishes when action is suggested."

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON CASSETTES

It's easy. Buy more than one at a time.

Just like beer, soda or apples, you save a lot by buying in quan-tity. We don't mean huge quanti-ties, we mean "6", yes, six at a time.

We call it: "Creative Sound Six Pack"

Simply buy six cassette tapes at a time and we'll give you our case lot discounted price . . . and that means additional savings over our regular low prices.

SONY Six Packs
6 Low Noise C-60
Regular $11.34 (7.89 ea.)
Six-Pack: $5.34 (.89 ea.)

6 HF Series C-90
Regular $22.74 ($3.79 ea.)
Six-Pack: $15.36 ($2.56 ea.)

6 Ferri-Chrome C-90
Regular $33.54 ($5.59 ea.)
Six-Pack $23.40 ($3.90 ea.)

BASF Six-Packs
6 Studio C-90
Regular $29.94 ($4.99)
Six-Pack: $15.00 ($2.50 ea.)

6 New Pro II C-90
Regular $28.74 ($4.79 ea.)
Six-Pack: $19.20 ($3.20 ea.)

6 New Pro III C-90
Regular $29.94 ($4.99 ea.)
Six-Pack: $21.00 ($3.50 ea.)

Maxell Six-Packs
6 UDXL II C-90
Regular $33.00 ($5.50 ea.)
Six-Pack: $23.10 ($3.85 ea.)

TDK Six-Packs
6 SA C-90
Regular $28.74 ($4.79 ea.)
Six-Pack: $20.10 ($3.35 ea.)

Clarion

IN DASH AM-FM CASSETTE PLAYER
MODEL PE-666
Features automatic reverse, front-rear fader, locking fast forward and reverse, dial in door, 4 watts per channel RMS, program indicator lights.
Normally $239.95
NOW JUST $179.90

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

• 157 PEARL ST., ESSEX JCT. • BARRE-MONTPELIER RD., BARRE • "IN THE MALL BETWEEN" KMART & MARTIN'S, SO. BURLINGTON

The Cynic Short Story Contest Winner

Love Is a Warm Delusion

By Jeffrey D. Marshall

Haven, despondent from overwhelming anxieties, seeks help desperately only to be muffled by his own mind.

Haven Ortt cut up the last of the French dressing on the hunk of lettuce he had just rinsed. The orange stuff bled across the green leaves, mixing with the water on the plate.

On the stove, a hamburger sizzled as Haven munched his salad and thought over the possibilities of another Friday night. The subject quickly depressed him, so he turned on the TV, and gazed out the window at the dying afternoon sun. Gomer Pyle time.

Finished with supper, Haven shuffled into the bedroom, the other room of his apartment. It wasn't such a bad place, he'd told his parents. The heat was on constantly, and he had plenty of friends scurrying around when it got dark. Haven collapsed on his mattress, burying his head in the soft bosomy pillow. "Tonight is the night I make the scene at a local well-known bar" he sighed as he rolled over and plucked the wall mirror for half an hour, at the deep dark eyes and the long hairy lines of his body. It had been two months or more, since Mary, since the last time...

"With this ring I do thee wed" she had said in a high, mock-serious voice, gazing loftily into his eyes. Her green eyes sparkled in the drizzly night rain, betraying the innocent desire of her sweet lips. The ring, which she had found in the A&P parking lot, was too big, and the broken ends scratched his finger.

Haven roused himself, considered the black guitar case in the corner, and decided to take a bath. He shared a bathroom with the occupants of the other three apartments on his floor. They were brainless, working people who did nothing at night but watch TV. Sometimes a weird chorus of laughter filled the building when everyone watched the same show.

After the hot, pleasing immersion, Haven left. The night was warm and organic. The melted snow left a layer of gravel on the sidewalk, and fresh wafts arose from rotting lawns freed from winter's burden. Haven felt light.

At the bar, one stool stood empty, and Haven grabbed it. The bartender, a tall man with a blond moustache, greeted him. "What'll it be?"

"I'll have a draught..." He noticed the plaque, made of the same mellow wood as the bar, listing the drinks. "...Heineken." An animated hum of voices from the darkened corners of the restaurant blended with the jazz music on the speakers. The bartender appeared responsible, maybe even compassionate. Bartenders are supposed to be compassionate, Haven thought. "I broke up with my girlfriend" he imagined himself saying. "Well, really she dumped me. Wanted to be free, you know?" "That's tough," Rick said, shaking his head.

The cool golden drink tasted good. Haven sipped from his glass and watched as Rick filled three beer mugs in one hand and rinsed three beneath the counter with the other. Harried waitresses kept pestering him with their table orders, but he worked calmly away, never letting things pile up.

"I'll be graduating this spring," Haven thought to himself. "You learn anything?" Rick answered as he rinsed glasses. "Not much. I think they're trying to reduce all knowledge and experience to a single, all-inclusive generalization. So that people won't have to think anymore." Haven looked up from his beer, and realized that people all around him were talking while he talked to Rick struck up a conversation with a patron two seats down.

A young couple left, and Haven watched as the man steered his companion out with a firm hand on her brown corduroyed buttocks. Togetherness. It made him think of a grassy bank in the pines on a warm spring night. Mary.

"Get you another?" the bartender asked. Haven nodded, and continued the imaginary conversation. "She said I should go with the flow, accept change. Meanwhile, she's sleeping with my best friend." He crushed out a nonexistent cigarette, and Rick emptied the ashtray. "Well, maybe she's right, Haven." He looked up at Rick, startled. "Hey, whose side you on?"

Haven shook his head to clear the fantasty. A woman sat down next to him and ordered a drink. He slowly, carefully turned for a look at her. She had dark hair and a tired face that would look young if it smiled. Her lines were still good, he thought.

She poked at the cherry in her drink with the plastic straw. Haven drummed his fingers on the shiney counter and frowned.

"Still warm outside?" he asked without looking at her face.

"Yeah. More or less." She took a large sip, and Haven went into a head-shaking convulsion. He swallowed a drink and squinted to read the labels on the rows of liquor bottles against the wall. Soon, the woman finished her drink and left.

Haven felt a pair of eyes boring his head to the right. He turned to see the man Rick had been talking to staring at him. The man smiled, almost knowingly. Haven wondered if the man had been reading his thoughts. "Mind-leach" he muttered, resolving never to think private thoughts in public again. He felt the dark, smokey atmosphere starting to pressure him downwards, and he decided to leave.

The air outside was cool and misty, and the orange glare of the streetlights eerified the empty street. Each step jolted Haven's bladder. A few noisy college students passed by, and he suddenly realized it had been a week since he'd said more than a sentence to anyone.

An unmuffled sports car roared down the street, reminding Haven of the silent MG he had seen parked in front of Mary's darkened house late one night. He felt a tightness in his throat that rose to his eyes.

Haven slept soundly in the darkness of his room, until the call of nature awoke him. It was 3 a.m. "The elves are still about" he thought as he stood up and stretched. Haven walked lightly to the door, searching the floor with his toes for cockroaches. Because it was quiet and late, Haven didn't bother to dress. The dimly lit hall reeked of mysterious and unpleasant, but familiar odors.

His eyes tracing the dusty, once-proud woodwork of the gray walls, Haven noticed a dark vertical crack in the wall of the apartment next to his. He stopped and ran his fingers along the crack. It widened. He stood back and closed his eyes, trying to bring his thoughts together. The crack remained. Haven glanced down the hall, then stepped forward and swung the wall panel open.

A man in a white lab coat and big black glasses looked up at Haven from the clipboard he held in his chair. The room was softly lighted from the glow of dials and plastic buttons on a large computer console.

"Who the hell—" Haven started.

"Oh Christ," the man muttered, and he quickly leaned over to the console and pushed a square white button. Haven felt a dull pain in the back of his head. It sent fiery chariots to his eyes and sank slowly through his sinuses, like a bathtub draining. The pain bottled in his neck and pushed down to his shoulders. Haven blacked out.

"I had the strangest dream last night" he told her. It was evening, and the frogs chirped in the gullies, roused by the warm weather. A cool breeze sprung from the woods as the sky darkened. Haven shook inside as he told Linda about the experience, and how he woke up in a cold sweat that morning and rushed out to the hall. "It must have looked pretty funny, me standing there naked in the hall, trying to find a crack in the wall." She laughed, throwing back her blond hair, but he felt a silent franticness growing inside himself.

They had gone to a movie, but the sex had bothered Haven. As the woman on the screen slid out of her clothes, slowly and delicately, Haven felt his lips softly nibbling her ear, the warmth of her neck and the smoothness of her shoulder. In slow moist kisses he descended to her breast and caressed her nipple with his tongue. The soft sweet skin became firm between his lips... Mary...

"There's something I need, Linda." He looked down at the road and kicked away at a pothole.

"What do you need?" She pulled her jackshirt tighter around her shoulders.

"I don't know. Something close."

"I'm not ready to start a sexual relationship with you, Haven." She said it for herself, with no inflections that would offend him. She didn't understand. She was not even on the same planet, Haven realized. They walked in silence down the dark street. Haven pulled his hand from his pocket and found it locked tight. He began snapping his fingers nervously. They stopped walking and faced each other, and Haven looked into Linda's eyes, far away.

"I am lonely" he said. She made no answer, but squeezed his hand, then turned and walked to her door, leaving him beneath one of the eerie orange street lights. Haven felt a giant blue-black wave of sadness approach as she receded. The surge grew upon him, twisting the muscles in his legs, vibrating through his body in waves, like the northern lights.

Haven became aware of the electric hum above his head. He felt the waves

(continued on page 17)

UNIROYAL

Now in Burlington

Lotsa Cat for Just a Little Scratch!

Uniroyal Tiger Paw ★ BELTED ★

Whitewall. Two Fiberglass Belts.
Plus two Polyester cord plies.

$29.95

A78–13 Whitewall tubeless, plus $1.71 F.E.T.
No trade required.

| Size | Price | F.E.T. |
|---|---|---|
| B78-13 | $31.89 | $1.82 |
| D78-14 | $32.66 | $2.07 |
| E78-14 | $33.57 | $2.19 |
| F78-14 | $36.22 | $2.34 |
| G78-14 | $38.24 | $2.47 |
| H78-14 | $41.26 | $2.70 |
| G78-15 | $39.24 | $2.55 |
| H78-15 | $42.46 | $2.77 |
| J78-15 | $44.50 | $2.96 |
| L78-15 | $46.16 | $3.05 |

Whitewall prices shown, ask for our price on blackwalls, plus F.E.T.

UNIROYAL
RADIAL 180

Steel Belted for Imported Cars

| Size | Blackwall Price | F.E.T. |
|---|---|---|
| 155R12 | $37.56 | $1.48 |
| 155R13 | $39.10 | $1.61 |
| 165R13 | $42.37 | $1.75 |
| 165R14 | $43.80 | $1.82 |
| 155R15 | $42.21 | $1.77 |
| 165R15 | $45.10 | $1.98 |
| 185HR13 | $49.96 | $1.91 |

Blackwalls, plue F.E.T. No trade required.

Spring Specials!

Wheel Alignment $10.95
(Add $2.00 for Vehicles with Air Conditioning)

Heavy Duty Shock Absorbers
$13.95 each Installed

Williston Rd. Shell

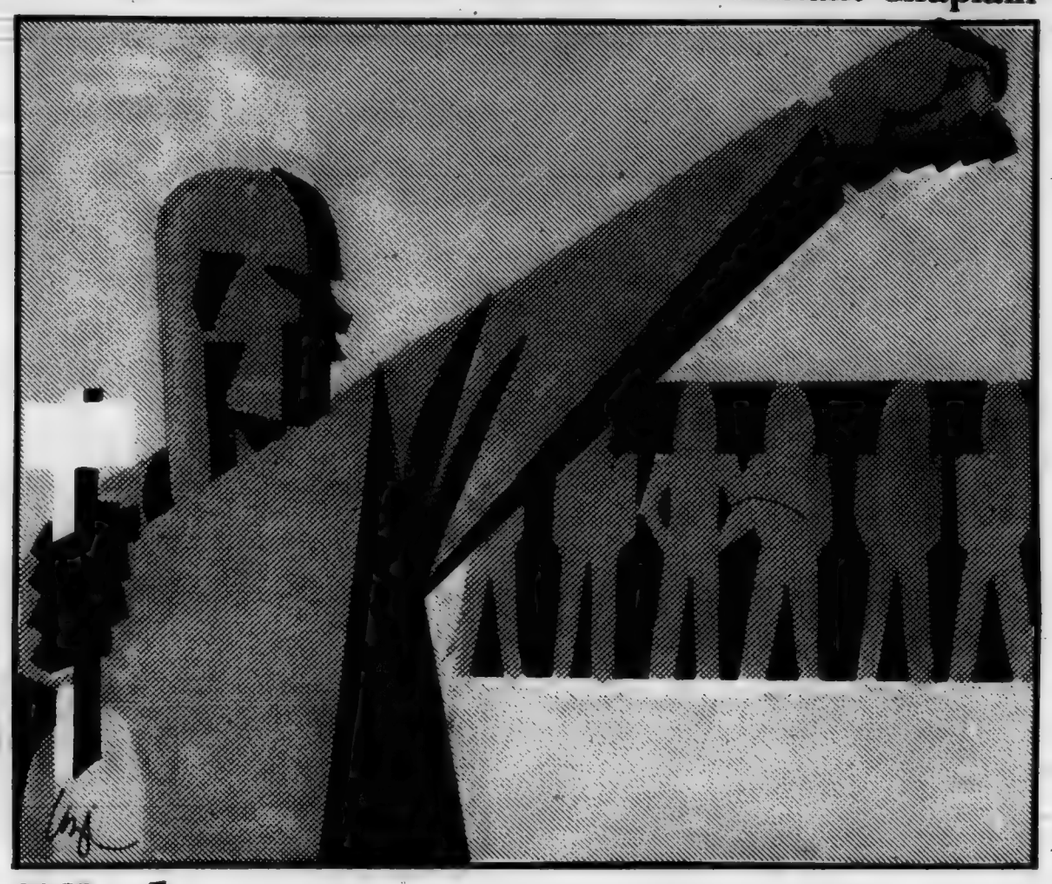
1251 Williston Rd.

Distributed by NORCO AUTO SUPPLY

...aspects of physical and mental health as well. The dietary factors which appear to be involved can be grouped into three general categories: (1) food additives; (2) nutritional excesses; and (3) nutritional deficiencies. Dr. Benjamin Feingold is the primary proponent of the first category. He has suggested that low-molecular food additives, especially artificial colors and flavors, can produce an adverse reaction in certain vulnerable individuals, which leads to hyperkinesis. Many researchers do not agree with his conclusions, and Feingold himself has had only a 48% success rate with his additive-free diet. However, most people agree that there is sufficient evidence to "merit further investigation." We cannot help noticing a correlation between the increase of hyperkinesis and the proliferation of chemical substances in our food.



There is similar reasoning in the second argument concerning nutritional excesses. Specifically, these include sucrose and other sugars, foods to which the person is allergic, and mineral excesses. Excessive sugar intake is a health hazard at any age and for many reasons. Sweets are usually consumed at the expense of more nutritious foods, and sugar toxicity can result in hyperactivity as well as other symptoms.

The final category, nutritional deficiencies, is clearly related to the first two. Vitamin or mineral deficiencies have predictable effects on normal individuals over a period of time. Some people, however, have what is termed "vitamin dependency," which makes them acutely sensitive to even minor deficits. Many hyperkinetic children who are found to have a dependency have reacted favorably to "megavitamin therapy," which most frequently involves massive doses of vitamins $B_3$ and $B_6$.

In summary, there are probably a variety of reasons for the occurrence of hyperkinesis, which implies that no single "cure" may be appropriate for all cases. Both psycho-social and bio-physical factors can be involved, and the first step of any treatment should be to examine each carefully. However, to the extent that incidence of hyperkinesis parallels the rising consumption of junk foods among American children, we may justifiably call it a serious health problem, and one which needs a healthful treatment.

"A correlation exists between the increase of hyperkinesis and the proliferation of chemical substances in our food."

By Irv Cummings
Protestant Chaplain

Holocaust: Gays, Ghettos and God. Are There Connections?

The NBC mini-series "Holocaust" comes to the screen at a particularly poignant time for UVM, both because of this year's emphasis on the Third World and its problems and because of the not much talked about, but much noticed Gay Awareness weekend which has just passed.

It becomes painfully clear, in watching "Holocaust" that the people in the Germany of that time were more or less like ourselves. They were well-off, and not-so-well-off, happy, and not-so-happy, and perhaps, most significantly, they were basically apolitical, as are most of us. Moreover, a fact which the program does not exploit, in particular, is that Germany's pre-war history was one of renowned erudition, wherein even the man on the street had read the great philosophers and theologians. Contrary to the opinion of many Americans today, the German state was not a nation of barbarians, but rather, was a leader among modern nations, which, by unfortunate circumstance, had been reduced to a condition of economic impossibility due to the angry revenge of its neighbors following World War One. In general, the German people were much more highly educated and aware than we give them credit for, and this only compounds the mystery as we witness a nation of such cultural and intellectual promise gradually turn into a nation ruled by superstition and the rantings of a sick and angry man.

There are a few clues, however. Carl Gustav Jung, the famous psychoanalyst, wrote in 1936, that he perceived that the fierce pride of the German people had turned inward, and was manifesting itself in a demonic spirit which he called Wotan, after the ancient Teutonic god of storms and wandering. Jung suggests that it was the face of Wotan which he saw in the angry and aimless young men who then roamed the countryside, looking for work (or was it meaning?) following the crushing defeat of WWI. He identifies Wotan in the national spirit of Germany which he perceived as seething with an almost unfathomable rage which expressed itself in street brawls, general alienation and despair, and a peculiar kind of undefined hatred. Like the god Wotan, for whom this spirit was named, it wandered from city to city, indulging in sporadic violence, and maintained a cold, ominous distance from anything like what we religious people might call compassion, or mercy. The face of Wotan is clearly visible in "Holocaust's" Dorf, the opportunistic officer of the SS, for instance. His relationship with his wife and children at Christmas, following his activities as a logistical expert in the extermination camps is clearly bone-chilling. And it is to Carl Jung's credit that he recognized and prophesied that Germany would be overcome by this kind of man, while everyone else was still saying, "No, it's impossible, humankind simply is not capable of that massive an evil." How right Jung was, is now only a matter of history, but it should give us pause as we try to probe the despair and alienation which characterize our own moment in history.

"Angst," alienation and loneliness seem to be part and parcel of 20th century industrial society. As corporations become larger and larger, and their influence creeps more and more into our private lives, it becomes increasingly clear that human beings are marketable commodities and that virtually no one has the individual power to question the profit motive in a society in which multi-national corporations are the moving force. Many people find this a difficult analysis, and yet almost all of us agree with the American adage, "money talks." It seems not so illogical a step, then, to say that "big money talks big." And when we learn that even criminals can be packaged like toothpaste and sold on TV as political candidates, it only reinforces the conclusion.

In addition, the great thinkers of our time, Sartre, Camus, Solere, Friere, and others have agreed; the primary manifestation of evil at this moment in history is the increasing sense of separation from any ability to control our destinies, whether individual or corporate, an increasing sense that we are manipulated by powers that are greater than we, and the overwhelming loss of any real sense of personhood, or meaning to individual lives.

As I stated in the opening paragraph, we at UVM might do well to think long and hard about these issues this week. For, in addition to the six million Jews that were killed in the holocaust, five million others were killed. Their ranks included anyone whose skin was darker than an aryan's, homosexuals, the retarded, the psychiatrically ill, the lame. In short, anyone who for whatever reason fell short of the Teutonic ideal: blond, blue eyes, home, family and fatherland. As fairly well-to-do, upper middle class Americans, how can we look at the rot in our large urban centers without asking the painfully obvious question, "What went wrong? Why do these people have so little and I have so much?" Or, if we fail to ask the question, what does it reveal about us and our own complicity in this system which has relegated almost anyone who doesn't fit our racial ideal to the Harlems and Roxburys?

And what of the Gays? Why is it that at this institution of higher learning, and, hopefully, increased understanding, the Gay Student Union has suffered enormously from lack of support both from the University at large, and from individual students who tore down posters advertising the Human Rights Awareness day almost as soon as they were put up?

Many people believe that the holocaust could never happen again. I hope and pray that they are right, but I, for one, am not sure. As the world wide economic situation gets worse and the eventuality of a severe energy shortage looms ever closer, the possibility that America could be brought to the brink of disaster, and then fall over it, becomes increasingly real. If that happens, who would pick up the pieces?

The recent history of this country gives us another clue. A new book about a southern evangelist points out that following every major war fought by America there is a so-called religious awakening, and then a major witch-hunt. We have systematically hunted down and destroyed the careers and the personal lives of many whose philosophies have differed from the status-quo. Anarchists, socialists, communists, and, in the post-Vietnam era of Anita Bryant, homosexuals are a few of the groups to which various ills, from the decay of the two-party system, to the decline of economic security have been blamed. The one fortunate part in all this is that never in our nation's history has the situation been as bad as it was in Germany, where a wheelbarrow full of money would barely buy a loaf of bread, or a bank statement of one's life savings might come in the mail, having been borne by a stamp worth more than the bottom line figure. However, the question remains, if it ever should get that bad, who will it be then?

It can happen. I remember bitterly a time in my own life when the flag, our own red, white, and blue, became the almost exclusive property of a group known as "the silent majority" whose loudest spokesman condemned those of us who were calling for peace as "effete snobs," and suggested, not so subtly, that if we didn't love America, we should leave it.

So, if the prognosis is this bad, why do I, a University chaplain, take time out to write about it? Simply because I believe that it does not have to be this way. I believe that there can be "salvation," but not in the conventionally understood religious sense of the term. Once the manifestation of evil implicit in the system itself is recognized, it is possible to do something about it. But, what we must do about it requires an almost "religious" conversion, nonetheless.

The fundamental problem is the problem of human greed. Greed is the basis for the profit motive, and therefore for multi-national corporations and for the economic system which perpetuates the injustices scored by them. John Calvin, who is looked upon by many people today with a jaundiced eye, but whose religious tradition I happened to inherit, was probably the first person to understand what capitalism must do to survive. He emerges out of the medieval period in Europe as one of the first modernist thinkers, and his analysis is simply this: Capitalism is fine. But it will not, and cannot, work without a sense of God in its midst. This was then, and continues to be, a fairly unpopular view, because it suggests, among other things, that compassion and concern should replace the profit motive in business dealings. Perhaps Calvin, in 1532, saw what we are only beginning to see in 1978, and that is for the capitalist world to go on reaping the harvest of profit, without concern for the lives of persons entangled in its spheres of influence, is simply, morally untenable. The difference between that time and this is that this conclusion is coming to us, not simply out of the existential morality of the thing, but out of its economics, too.

What then, can we at UVM do, as we struggle with the difficult and often unanswerable questions all this presents. First of all, we might consider developing courses which would analyze the world-wide scarcity of food, and the hunger problem in general. Such courses should not be afraid of presenting at least some discussion of the ethical questions involved, and should seek to discourage the high level of competitiveness now present with our students, for present as it is at UVM in such proportions, it is only a forerunner of the greed that will encompass our students, after they graduate and enter into any level of the system. It is this same greed that will stay with them when they are heads of corporations. We need not inculcate this motive, however, and a sheer rendition of the statistics on world hunger, and economic power would go a long way toward righting this problem.

In addition, there should be courses exploring the sociological, psychological, and theological ramifications of such horrors as the holocaust. We need to find out what kind of a demon it was which so infected human nature that 11 million people were needlessly killed, only 30 short years ago. We need to know if it does, in fact, bear any connection to our urban ghettos, or, to bring the point closer to home, to the GSU posters, which were ripped off the walls.

Carl Gustav Jung also pointed out that homosexuality "... often creates ties of astonishing tenderness between men, and may even rescue friendship between the sexes from its limbo of the impossible."

I don't know if he was right or not, but given the murder rate of the last 50 years, I think we ought to find out.

A How to:
Breaking into Magazines

By Susan Jo Perkins

Magazines. They embrace every topic under the sun, architecture, flying, mechanics, business, make up, movie stars, high fashion... whatever the inclination, there's a magazine.

Perhaps this is why the magazine industry is so glamorous. It beckons us into its pages, it understands us, it helps us. Can we get beyond those pages? Participate in their creation — obtain a job? The expanding market of magazine personnel attracts many ambitious college grads. But acquiring a job in the world of magazines requires unfolding ambition and perseverance.

Corey Ford, a late humorist for the Reader's Digest, believed an optimistic attitude and outlook quietly influences our subtle behavior and could move us more closely to our goals. In undergraduate parlance, that's translated, get psyched and stay psyched. Much strife and energy has been lost at the first closing of the door in our faces.

BE PROFESSIONAL

The first step of acquiring a magazine position is to act professional. Dress like you mean business. You'd be surprised by the number of people who dress sloppily in the company of a prospective employer.

Learn all you can about the industry. Read and look at magazines with a critical eye. How are the articles written? How is the magazine laid out? How much color is used? Who are they appealing to? Read as many different kinds of magazines as you can: men's, women's, trade journals, family-oriented, etc. Get a feel for the approach each magazine takes.

keep abreast of what concerns young people. You can help them.

Find out how the magazine is printed. International Paper Company's "Poxkwr Pal – A Graphic Arts Production Handbook" is excellent and a must for two or three dollars; it tells you all about the industry: binding, platemaking, paper, typesetting... everything you need to know. (Write them at 220 East 42nd Street, New York, NY, 10017, to request a copy.)

WHAT JOBS ARE AVAILABLE?

Magazines have three main components: circulation, advertising and editorial.

"Editors of consumer publications want to keep abreast of what concerns young people. You can help them."

Write the magazines to learn more about them. Who owns them? Did you know that Hearst publishes Cosmopolitan, House Beautiful, Popular Mechanics, Science Digest, Sports Afield, Harper's Bazaar, and American Druggist Merchandising, among others? Find out how much they cost, how frequently they are published and how many pages are printed.

Never be afraid to write a letter or pick up the phone and call a prospective employer. See if you can slowly develop a rapport with several editors while in college. If they get to know you now, they may be able to help you later. Editors of consumer publications want to

The editorial offices house the editors who rely on the freelance and staff talents of artists, writers, correspondents, researchers and other editors. Freelancing is a rough business. Your income is uncertain in a world where writers are a dime a dozen.

Editors look for good ideas. When you query an editor, write a proposal, never a full-length manuscript. (However, this does not hold for fiction). There's no need to waste time on polished perfection if the editor isn't interested. Present your ideas in a fashion that exhibits your writing style, point-of-view, and

(continued on page 17)

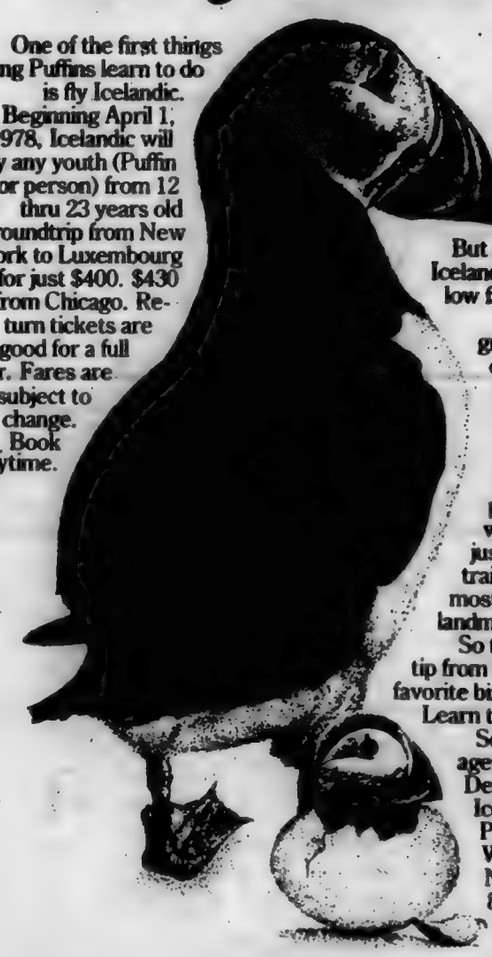
practically on campus

GAYNES SHOPPERS WORLD

open daily til 9 pm

gaynes pharmacy



★★ call us or stop by and check our discount prescription prices

★★ within easy walking distance of the university campus and infirmary

★★ fast, friendly prescription service

phone us: 863-4597

The Puffin fare for youths.

One of the first things young Puffins learn to do is fly Icelandic. Beginning April 1, 1978, Icelandic will fly any youth (Puffin or person) from 12 thru 23 years old roundtrip from New York to Luxembourg for just $400. $430 from Chicago. Return tickets are good for a full year. Fares are subject to change. Book anytime.

But there's more to Icelandic than just low fares.

You'll get a great dinner and excellent service on your trip. And Icelandic will set you down right in the middle of the European Continent, where you'll be just hours away by train from Europe's most famous landmarks.

So take a travel tip from Iceland's favorite bird.

Learn to fly Icelandic. See your travel agent. Or write Dept. #C352, Icelandic Airlines, P.O. Box 105, West Hempstead, N.Y. 11552. Call 800-555-1212 for toll-free number in your area.

$275

Roundtrip 14-45 day APEX fare from N.Y.*

$400

Roundtrip Youth Fare. Good thru age 23.

Icelandic to Europe

*$295 from Chicago. Tickets must be reserved 45 days prior to departure and paid for within 8 days of reservation. Add $15 each way for travel on weekends.

Magazines

Cont. From Page 16

how you intent to angle your article. Rebecca E. Greer, article editor for Woman's Day, wrote an excellent piece called "How To Query an Editor" (Writer's Digest, Oct. 1973). There's a copy on the Cynic bulletin board if you are interested in learning how to query.

HOW CAN I GET MY FOOT IN WHILE STILL IN COLLEGE?

Enter the Mademoiselle College Board contest next November. It's a little bit of work, but if you're serious, that won't bother you. The Cynic usually has information on this in their offices.

Or write Mademoiselle at the Conde Nast Publications, Inc., 350 Madison Avenue, New York, 10017. By the way, Conde Nast also owns Glamour. Try writing an "Opinion" for this column in Glamour. Other Conde Nast publications include Bride's and Vogue.

Send in anecdotes to the Campus Comedy section of the Reader's Digest. Public Affairs Director John Allen says college students often submit prize-winning graffiti.

The Magazine Publishers' Association sponsors an internship. Write Robert Gardner at 575 Lexington Avenue, New York, for an application. This summer internship annually places thirty-five students at national magazines.

McCalls Magazine, at 230 Park Avenue, New York, also sponsors an intern program. Contact local journalists and ask to talk with them about their jobs. The worst they can say is "no."

It should be obvious that holding a position as a writer, investigator or editor on the Cynic is in your best interests.

SHOULD I MAJOR IN MASS COMMUNICATIONS?

Not necessarily. In fact, at UVM, I would suggest you not, particularly as this department is broadcast-oriented. Develop your writing talents on your own or through the classroom and major in something that gives you knowledge of a specific field: history, chemistry, dairy technology. An array of liberal arts can't hurt and by all means get some business and economics courses under your belt.

ARE GRADES IMPORTANT?

While excellent grades are not a pre-requisite, poor grades are frowned upon. People in the magazine industry are looking for people who are clever, unique, show they've been active, and have directed their attainment of an education instead of being spoon-fed a University program. This writer's approach has been to take advantage of the best opportunities as they came along; occasionally this pre-empted a class or paper.

BE YOUR OWN PERSONAL PR AGENCY

Publicize yourself. Keep your contacts alive. Make sure people remember you. Don't shy back because you don't want to bug someone.

In letters, remind them you wrote them once before. Always send a follow-up letter after a call. Or call to make sure a letter was received. Develop an extensive Christmas card or season's greeting list.

You are your own best public relations agency. Get your name and your good reputation circulating.

The task of breaking into magazines is not easy nor impossible. Be persistent and learn all you can. If you are patient, can stand tough in the face of criticism and rejection, you will succeed. Somewhere, some time, the door will open.

Haven Ortz

Cont. From Page 13

passing upwards, and suddenly he realized that the hum was a high-speed coded message. Morse code in pages-per-second.

Walking home, Haven passed a red neon sign glowing, laughing at the joke it spelled in the dark window of Garton's Store — Erot's Snotrag. At the Federal Trust, the time-temperature sign had gone bonkers, flashing a series of numbers and mysterious symbols. Ninety degrees appeared on the sign, and it blinked five times in the darkness of the empty street.

Haven took his sneakers off. The temperature rose to ninety-seven. He removed his shirt and pants.

Outside his apartment house, Haven paused to look at the smooth lawn of the corner lot, framed by the white sidewalk. In the artificial light, the grass seemed to glow a deep green, each blade standing erect with a drop of dew at the end. Haven crouched and ran his hand across the wet grass. He felt the electricity, and it grew into a burning curiosity that ached in his chest.

Haven ran to his room and returned to the corner with a large salad spoon. Uncertainly at first, then with growing confidence, he began digging at the turf where it met the corner of the sidewalk. The ground was tough, but Haven dug furiously, making a small trench. Thrusting deeply into the rooty sod, he hacked away for several sweaty minutes. Finally, the spoon broke through the earthy layer. Haven stopped and put his hand in the hole. With a giant heave, he began to rip the earth. Underneath, he could see a flat gray essence, and he smiled. He stood up and pulled, feeling the fish-hooks of pain in his back. The tear in the earth widened, then split across the sidewalk and into the road. Jubilant now, Haven began rolling up his corner of the world, grass, sidewalk, and all.

Two men stood in the road, watching Haven. He looked up at the dark blue figures, each marked with a glowing metallic chest-plate, and stopped to rest.

"Why don't you come with us?" one of the men said softly.

"It doesn't matter," Haven answered. "See? I found out." He pointed to the grayness beneath the rolled-up turf and sidewalk. The men looked where he pointed without changing expressions. Haven noticed this, and realized that they would never stop trying. But he didn't care. One of the men wrapped a blanket around him and held onto his arm firmly.

"It doesn't matter," Haven said quietly as they led him away.

Editor's Note: This year's Short Story Contest winner was written by Jeffrey D. Marshall, a senior majoring in Anthropology. The full development of the main character, with concise narrative and description, brought together what we considered a very effective story.

Next week's Cynic will feature the runner-up, won by John E. Houghton with his story entitled "Huckleberry Pie." Two Honorable Mentions are awarded to Chris Mercer ("Border Crossing 1970") and Bob Monro ("Joe 'Red' Smith and I").

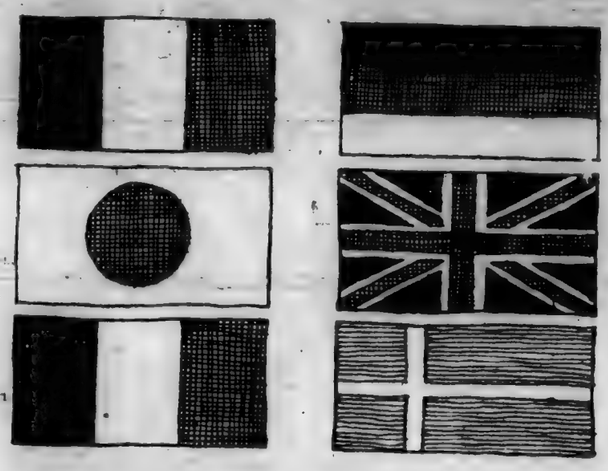
Open for Sunday Buffet
11:00-4:00
All You Can Eat for $3.95
Featuring Cape Codder $.75

Open 11-11 Fri.-Sat.
Open 11-10 Mon. thru Thurs.
Stuft Shirt 135 Pearl St. 864-9544

SPECTACULAR SPRING SAVINGS

COLONIAL distributors, inc.



173 St. Paul St., Burlington

free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Get the right Foreign Car Part you need the first time

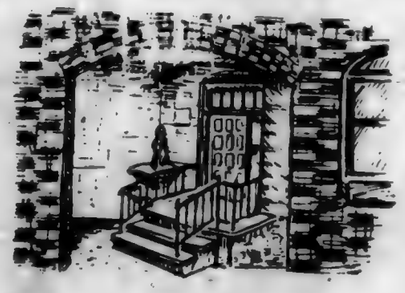
Worse than getting no part at all is getting a part that doesn't fit. That's why your Beck/Arnley expert makes sure he gives you the right foreign car part for your import the first time. So you don't have to come back for the same part a second time.

10% Student Discount



Imported Parts Center

3060 Williston Road

South Burlington, Vermont 05401

658-0707

THE RATHSKELLER

Steamers Fri. 4-6

Reduced Drink Prices Daily 4-6

Extensive Seafood Menu

We Welcome Reservations

For Fine Dining in a Unique Atmosphere

BEHIND BENNINGTON NORTH ON COLLEGE ST.

Open Daily For Dinner and Luncheon

Brunch Saturday

863-4429

127½ College Burlington

Vermont's Political Scene

By Tom Daniels

SPS photo by Ellen Gray

Madeline Kunin
Could She Become Vermont's Second Woman Lt. Govenor?

As no surprise to anyone, Madeleine Kunin will formally announce her candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Lt. Governor on April 28. So far, Mrs. Kunin is the only Democrat to express interest in the state's number two office, and Mrs. Kunin is hoping to become the second female Lt. Gov. in Vermont's history. Consuelo Northrup Bailey held the post in 1955-57.

Three Republicans (Lt. Gov. T. Garry Buckley, State Senator Alfred Beauchamp, and Community College President Peter Smith) are expected to square off in the GOP primary, and the general election in November could be the hottest political contest of the year.

A Representative from Burlington since 1972, Mrs. Kunin is currently the Chairman of the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee. Mrs. Kunin, 44, holds a Master's degree in English from UVM and has published extensively, including The Big Green Book, a Vermont guide co-authored with Marilyn Stout. Mrs. Kunin is married to Dr. Arthur Kunin, who teaches at the UVM Medical School; they have four children.

Cynic: As Appropriations Chairman, how do you react to UVM's getting only $300,000 extra for next year, thus necessitating tuition increases and reductions in faculty salaries?

Kunin: The first thing that should be clarified is that UVM got what Governor Snelling recommended. There was a lack of information on exactly what UVM's needs were. President Coor testified that $1–1.2 million was needed, but said a tuition increase was not definite. Now in hindsight we find that a tuition increase is needed!

Little comparison was made between UVM and the State Colleges; we knew State College tuition would go up. Obviously, it's difficult to know how hard to lobby for an institution, but the State Colleges were in a greater crisis.

UVM's big effort in the legislature was the gym. The discussion of a UVM tuition increase never took place. If tuition was a major concern, UVM should have focused on it. UVM students might be interested to know that student groups from the State Colleges lobbied effectively at the State House.

Cynic: It has been suggested that legislators were angry at UVM for its handling of the Bishop's House affair.

Kunin: There was no mention of the Bishop's House. The question to be asked is why many Chittenden County legislators didn't support the gym.

Cynic: How did you compare UVM and the State Colleges?

Kunin: There was room for a salary increase at the State Colleges because the State Employees and UVM faculty were slated for increases. The State Colleges have no borrowing authority, and the extra $1 million they received was to pay off their deficit; this is a one year, interim solution. In-state tuition increases were reduced from $200 to $50 but out-of-state tuition will go up $200 and room and board will rise by $110. Even so, Mr. Coor has reason to be concerned because tuition at UVM has increased more than at the State Colleges, and the high tuition might discourage Vermonters from attending UVM.

This whole episode has stressed the competition between UVM and the State Colleges. They should look for ways to work together, not a merger but making it easier to move back and forth through the system. They can pool resources without a merger.

Cynic: Back in the political world, who will the Democrats run for Governor and how will your campaign be affected?

Kunin: Bernard O'Shea is the only Democrat to show interest so far. House Speaker Tim O'Connor, I think, would be an excellent candidate and make a strong ticket. Lt. Gov. and Gov. don't normally run as a team; it shouldn't make all that much difference.

Cynic: Why are you running now?

"UVM's big effort in the legislature was the gym. The discussion of a UVM tuition increase never took place."

Kunin: I think I'd be more effective at this time in the Lt. Gov's office. It's a matter of personal timing. This is my first try at statewide office, and Lt. Gov. seems to be an appropriate first step.

Cynic: Do you have plans of running for a higher office?

Kunin: I think anyone who runs for Lt. Gov. thinks of higher office. Which is another question. But I wouldn't see the Lt. Gov. role as a stepping stone. It's a worthwhile position in and of itself. In the past, it's been a rather slippery stepping stone.

Cynic: Could you work with Snelling if he is re-elected as predicted?

Kunin: I think I could work with either a Democrat or Republican Governor. Snelling and Buckley don't get along even though they're of the same party. A lot would depend on the Governor and the amount of responsibility he would be willing to delegate. Lt. Gov. is not a gadfly, bickering role.

Cynic: What are your major issues?

Kunin: There are two types: (1) what the role of the Lt. Gov. should be and (2) any issues that involve state government, such as the question of energy and the re-organization of the Public Service Board. Another is state aid to education; fewer and fewer people are satisfied with the present Miller formula: land rich and income poor towns and urban areas like Burlington with declining school populations. A different plan is needed and probably more money. Related to that are property taxes. If there is a surplus this coming year, and there should be, the surplus should be used to stabilize local property taxes.

Cynic: What has been your experience as a woman in politics?

Kunin: It's a very good time to be a woman in politics. The climate is positive, especially if you can show some experience or knowledge. Chairing the Appropriations Committee has given me a valuable perspective on the state government. I think a woman has to prove she's knowledgeable whereas that's more assumed with a male candidate. You can't be Bella Abzug in Vermont!

Cynic: What have been the effects on your family?

Kunin: It's changed our family life. My husband takes part in car-pooling and in getting dinner on the table. My children have to take on more responsibility. Dinner conversations have become quite lively. On the whole, I think it's been a positive experience. There are conflicts, but I think any woman involved in a career feels that. You learn to cope with it. Women can place too many demands on themselves to be the Superwoman. I've found I just can't do everything.

Cynic: How do you size up the three Republican candidates?

Kunin: I'd rather not size them up. I really don't have an opponent, as yet.

Cynic: Do you expect any primary opposition?

Kunin: I haven't heard of anyone. I think it's an advantage that will help unify the Democratic party. I can be positive, getting around the state and getting to know people without becoming embroiled in confrontation. There's more interest in the Lt. Gov. race this year than most.

The Surgeon General says...

The Hazards of Not Smoking

...are real!

By Sue Harvey Kashanski

"Kissing a smoker is like licking a dirty ashtray." This is just one of the many slogans which have begun to appear on bumper stickers, pins, and signs in response to the growing number of nonsmokers asserting their claim to clean air. Just what are the emotions, facts, and arguments which are behind the timely issue of the rights of the nonsmoker?

Medical studies and reports have, in the past decade, released conclusive evidence on the health hazards of smoking. Lung disease, coronary ailments, allergies, infertility in women, birth defects, and cancer have all been repeatedly connected to smoking in a large number of patients. The Surgeon General, Heart and Lung associations and medical agencies have widely publicized the hazards of smoking.

New attention is being turned to the nonsmoker, who for centuries has either silently or not so silently endured the presence of cigarette smoke in many of the public places shared by both smokers and nonsmokers. Past disputes about smoking in public areas have been based on emotional, aesthetic, and personal preference arguments. Teary eyes, smoke-scented hair and clothes, breathing difficulties, and noses wrinkled in disgust were the only evidence a nonsmoker could present to his/her smoking companions.

But now there are more than emotional arguments against smoking. Scientific evidence indicates that cigarette smoke is, in some instances, just as hazardous to the nonsmoker as it is to the smoker. The Surgeon General, in 1972, reported that nonsmokers have reason for complaint if not alarm.

Serious health hazards exist because of "sidestream smoke." Sidestream smoke is that smoke emitted from the cigarette as it burns inbetween inhalations. When a smoker inhales mainstream smoke, his/her body serves as a filter for many of the harmful gases and particulates from the cigarette. But when a cigarette lies idle, all poisonous gases and substances are released into the air unfiltered.

The most dangerous element of cigarette smoke is the carbon monoxide which is inhaled by both smokers and nonsmokers. Carbon monoxide enters the bloodstream where it attaches to hemoglobin molecules robbing the body of vital oxygen.

The effects of carbon monoxide upon the body vary with different situations and concentrations. In general, carboxyhemoglobin in the blood can cause headaches, dizziness, and lassitude. At higher percentages in the blood, carbon monoxide is responsible for impairing vision, judgment, and attentiveness to sounds. The American Lung Association reports that, "Carbon monoxide may get into the nonsmoker's bloodstream in sufficient quantity to damage his heart and lungs or exacerbate heart-lung disease that he already has."

The combination of high altitudes and carbon monoxide from cigarettes has concerned airline pilots. One group of pilots concluded, "Exposure to carbon monoxide causes substantial impairments to vital brain and nervous system functions."

The threat of carbon monoxide damage to the nonsmoker is a very real one. W.S. Ross of Snell Laboratories writes, "The evidence against CO is now so definitive that last year the Swedish government passed the first law in the world requiring – as of next January ('77) – that every package of cigarettes carry not only the amount of tar and nicotine but also of carbon monoxide in the smoke."

Of course, cigarette smoke is not the sole source of carbon monoxide in the air. Industry and traffic are also prime offenders. But the concern over carbon monoxide released by cigarettes is triggered in part by the fact that cigarette carbon monoxide concentration levels are apt to exceed federal air quality standards because of the nature of the offending situations. Closed rooms, crowded meeting areas, bars, buses, elevators and restaurants rarely offer sufficient ventilation for the carbon monoxide released by smoking.

Industrial occupational standards allow for 50 parts of carbon monoxide to 1,000,000 parts of air. In a room full of smokers, the carbon monoxide level can reach as high as 20 to 80 parts per million. Some rooms measured during smoking studies contained carbon monoxide at a level which the Environmental Protection Agency says, "An individual should only be exposed to for a maximum of one hour not more than once a year." So while cigarette smoke cannot be blamed for all the carbon monoxide one is exposed to daily, the concentration of this noxious gas from cigarettes is cause for serious concern.

Other harmful substances of which a nonsmoker should be aware are tar and nicotine. Thought to be the bane of smokers, this deadly duo can actually pose a more serious threat to nonsmokers inhaling cigarette smoke in the air. The smoke from a burning cigarette releases nearly two times the tar and nicotine of an inhaled cigarette. As the American Lung Association cites, "One test made in Germany showed that smoking of several cigarettes in a closed room makes the concentration of nicotine and dust particles in a short time so high that the nonsmoker inhales as much harmful tobacco as the smoker inhales from four or five cigarettes."

Two other poisonous gases which should be mentioned briefly are hydrogen cyanide and nitrogen oxide. These two gases, along with CO and nicotine are being held responsible for many of the 200,000 cigarette-related premature deaths in the U.S. from heart and coronary diseases, emphysema, and chronic bronchitis.

The list of health hazards for nonsmokers goes on and on including effects such as increased blood pressure, stepped up heart beat, lung damage due to released nitrogen oxides, and serious health impairments to the unborn fetus of a pregnant woman.

Once a nonsmoker is aware of the dangers of "passive" or involuntary smoking, what next? Unfortunately, the issue only becomes more complex. As nonsmokers assert their rights to clean air, smokers simultaneously claim that their rights to smoke must also be considered. In many instances, this conflict of interest has resulted in the isolationist solution. This method of appeasing both parties involves making separate areas available for smokers and nonsmokers.

Unfortunately, not all public places have adopted this policy, but the idea is spreading. More than 30 states and hund. is of communities in the U.S. have passed legislation protecting the nonsmoker in public areas. While enforcement is still a problem in many areas, this legislation at least affords the nonsmoker legislative support for his/her quest for clean air.

Here on the UVM campus I have been unable to find any official policy regarding smoking. In classrooms, individual professors and classes can decide whether or not smoking is allowed. In some of the larger, and less ventilated lecture halls smoking is prohibited. Other classrooms and labs restrict smoking because of fire hazards.

Some common areas on campus, like Billings and some of the dining halls, offer separate areas for smokers and nonsmokers. In general, if a student is bothered by smoking in a common area, s/he should speak to the instructor or person in charge of that area to see if some limit could be placed on smoking. Most faculty members have been very helpful in the past.

Other responses, on a national level, to anti-smoking sentiments and their supportive medical evidence include insurance breaks for non-smokers. In various states across the country, nonsmokers

(continued on page 21)

But Sinfull, Ginfull, Rum Soaked Men,
Survive for Threescore Years & Ten
And Some Of Us, Though Mighty Few Stay Pickled 'til We're Ninety Two.

weck's
WINE & CHEESE
Burlington Square Mall 658-2070

IT'S LIVE EVERY NITE!

CHANGES
Thurs. 20-Sat. 22

PLUM CRAZY
Mon. 24-Sat. 29

Neutral Grounds Inc.
125 PEARL

Contributing Staff

NEWS: Curtis, Haynes, Hamilton W. Sorrell, Robert Cassidy, John Letteri, Susan Heller, Diana Palazzolo, Rich Hyland, Lisa Wolff.

FEATURES: Randy McMullen, Tom Daniels, Leslie Dunn, Leslie Wassmuth, Peter Millard.

SPORTS: Mark Kevorkian, Paul Gardner, Jim Fletcher, Randy Briggs, Melissa Brown, Kim Honza, Amanda Miller, Darcie McCann.

ARTS: Laura Bell, Tricia John, Shana Schwartzburg, Alex Eschenbrenner, Jim Wright, Peter Relick, Tom Nuccio, Jay Collier, Suzy Karkus, Hugh Bush, Jeannie Cooper, Tim Traver, Claire McCrea.

ADVERTISING: Nat Foote, Peter Voll, Doug Lyons, Mary Landon.

GRAPHICS: Amy Lowry, Shirley Reid, Linda Stanley, Liz Hemingway.

PHOTOGRAPHY: John Freeman, Ellen Gray, Mitch Sprung, Mike Simays, Scott Greb Neal Desind, Don Cunningham, Mike Koeniges, Bob Davis.

LAYOUT: Anne Stires, Susan Jo Perkins, Jim Otto, April Heitkamp

TYPISTS: Sarah Wesson, Nicki Krabbendum.

TYPESETTER: Susan Ball.

The Vermont Cynic assumes no responsibility for unsolicited materials. All submissions are subject to the Vermont Cynic's right to edit. All unsolicited material becomes the property of the Vermont Cynic.

No part of this publication may be reproduced without the expressed written consent of the Vermont Cynic.

Subscription rate is $12 yearly.

Circulation: 8000

Vermont Cynic, Billings Center, Box 20, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. 05401.

Printed by Upper Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont.

Throughout Vermont, there are signs of spring's arrival. If you're an outdoor enthusiast, this may be your favorite time of year. And, since the birds are starting to fly north, wildflowers are prepared to bloom, and trees are anxious to leaf out, why not spend some time outdoors yourself and celebrate!

The University of Vermont's natural areas provide a perfect opportunity for an exploration with nature. If you haven't heard about these areas, they are a part of "campus" you shouldn't miss. Ten different sites, all within close range of Burlington, have been designated as natural areas. Because of their unique character, they were preserved by the university for present and future generations.

Mountain peaks, bogs, ponds, quaries, and islands are among a wide range of ecosystems that are preserved. They are available for you and others to enjoy and learn from.

Centennial Woods is the closest natural area to Burlington, found behind the campus infirmary on East Avenue. Now, it's a perfect place to learn about the progression of lands from field to forest.

This 40 acre area is often used by various classes at the university for education and research. Cross country skiers and snowshoe buffs utilize the trails and woods in winter, and many people hike or run through them during all months of the year. A trail into these woods starts at a large pine stand next to an open meadow. At one time, this woodland was farm and pastureland.

Looking out onto Lake Champlain towards Shelburne Point is another preserved area, the Four Brothers Islands. Lying on the New York side of the lake, these islands are a favorite stopover spot or home for a broad range of birds.

Back on shore, and traveling to Colchester, is a delicate bogland which was given to the university by the Nature Conservatory. A walk through the bog will reveal a fragile earthen floor of Spagnum moss. Since the mat is easily damaged, hikes through the bog should be with care. Other plants found there are sedges, blueberries, and bog laurel.

Molly Bog, in the Stowe region, is a characteristic bogland, developing through its early stages. In the same area is the Mt. Mansfield Natural Area. This land, where Artic Plants thrive, covers 400 acres and includes the summit ridge. The hike is energizing, and the view is spectacular!

If your hobby is geology, or if you're curious to see unusual things, the Redstone Quarry may interest you. It is found in Burlington, off Hoover Street. The deep maroon stone used in many buildings in the Burlington area can be found here.

The H. Laurence Achilles Natural Area, bordering Shelburne Pond, is a great place to spend an afternoon. Both woods and bogland are present here, and you can bring your canoe to enjoy the pond.

East Woods in Burlington, Pease Mountain in Charlotte, and Concord Woods in lower Vermont are the three other areas under care of the University.

Currently, the UVM Natural Areas are under the direction of Thomas Hudspedth in the Environmental Program. Educational programs are underway through this department, and hopefully they will expand in the future.

If you are finding you have spring fever, put away your skis and join in a venture with nature. The land of wilderness is there for you to learn from and enjoy!

"Ten different sites, all within close range of Burlington, have been designated as a natural areas."

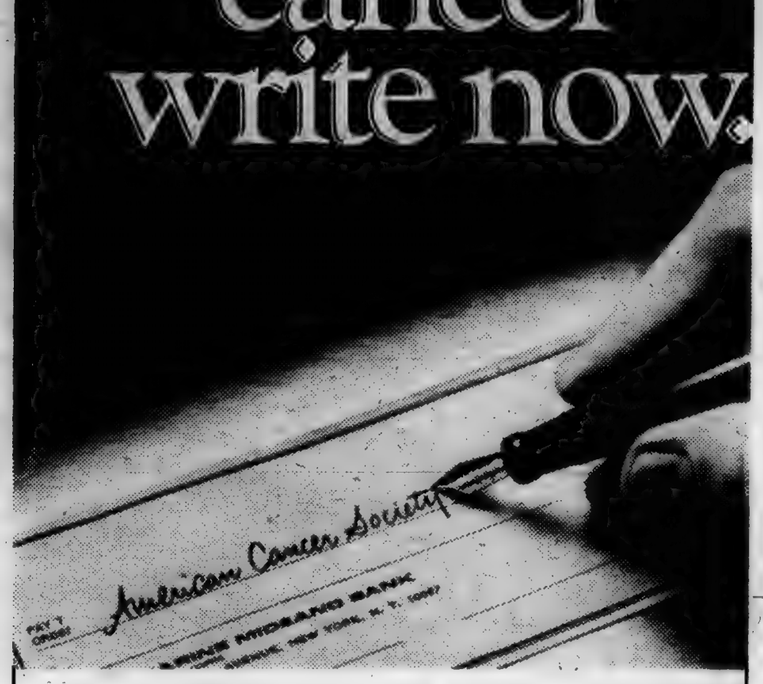
HEADS

You take care of the inside...
We'll take care of the outside!!!



The Brad Shop

hair has no sex

152 Church St.
Burlington, Vt.
862-4045

Custom Haircutters... hair health and more...

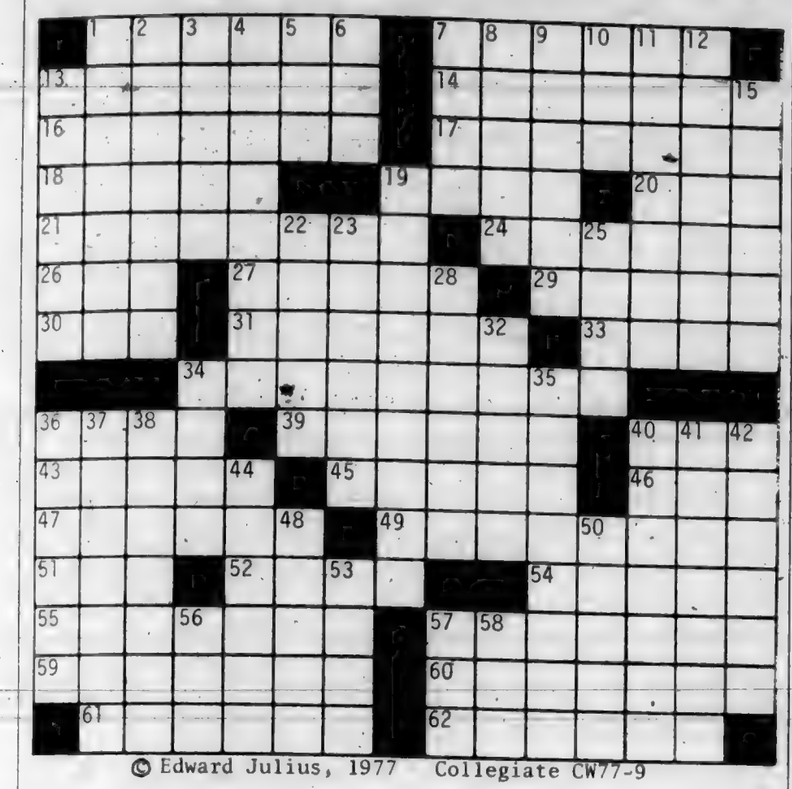
Help cure cancer write now.

American Cancer Society

We want to cure cancer in your lifetime.

Learn To Bartend

$25



LastClassEver!

May 1,2, & 3

($5 Discount with Advance Payment)

To pre-register,
call Brad Cook at 879-0653.

collegiate crossword

© Edward Julius, 1977 Collegiate CW77-9

ACROSS

1 Site for 1980 Olympics
7 Abrupt rejection
13 Pass on to another person
14 Spanish or Portuguese
16 Miss Earhart, et al.
17 High-fashion dealer
18 Composer Ned ——
19 Ward off
20 Workshop item
21 Attractive and cuddly
24 Tarnish, as a reputation
26 Exist
27 Sorrow
29 VP candidate, and family
30 Compass point
31 Habituated
33 Optimum
34 Certifies, as a college
36 French for islands
39 Prefix for sexual
40 Viper
43 Stop
45 Norway's name for itself
46 —— soup
47 —— Abdul-Jabbar
49 Secondhand merchandise (2 wds.)
51 Miss Peach character
52 Mongol tent
54 Buenos ——
55 Surround
57 Component of gasoline
59 Terminates a layoff
60 Moves, as a hairline
61 Hate
62 Pit-removing device

DOWN

1 Autobiography form
2 Supervise
3 Shoe parts
4 Of the weather
5 Eggs
6 Basketball's —— Unseld
7 Hoarfrost
8 Payroll savings item (2 wds.)
9 Deposited in layers
10 Geller of psychic fame
11 Capable of being split
12 Femmes ——
13 As —— night
15 Most up-to-date
19 Uncover shrewdly (2 wds.)
22 Baseball's Johnny ——
23 Miss Bacall
25 Watch chains
28 Passover meals
32 Funeral hymn
34 South African fox
35 Ballet (2 wds.)
36 More disgusting
37 Scholarly
38 Ailment of swimmers
40 Old song, "I Love ——"
41 More placid
42 Tickets
44 Donkey in "Winnie-the-Pooh"
48 Thinks
50 Alluded to
53 Sheet music symbol
56 English course, for short
57 Telephone-dial trio
58 Shoe-width

Last Week's Answers

| | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| A | C | M | E | | T | O | N | I | C | | A | T | M | E |
| G | O | O | F | | H | O | L | D | A | | R | H | E | A |
| A | N | O | T | H | E | R | F | I | N | E | M | E | S | S |
| S | E | N | | O | R | D | | E | N | E | | W | A | Y |
| | | A | M | M | A | | N | I | E | L | L | I | | |
| T | E | N | C | O | M | M | A | N | D | M | E | N | T | S |
| E | N | D | S | | S | O | Y | | P | A | T | T | O | N |
| N | U | S | | V | A | T | | U | R | N | | E | T | A |
| D | R | I | V | E | N | | O | R | E | | A | R | A | R |
| S | E | X | A | N | D | T | H | E | S | I | N | G | L | E |
| | | P | L | E | B | E | S | | E | V | E | R | | |
| A | V | E | | E | E | R | | T | R | I | | E | A | U |
| C | O | N | T | R | A | C | T | I | V | E | N | E | S | S |
| R | I | C | E | | R | E | A | D | E | | A | N | T | E |
| E | D | E | N | | S | T | I | E | S | | P | S | I | S |

Smoking

Cont. From Page 19

can get discounts on automobile, homeowner's and life insurance.

A study by Columbia University showed that if a person smokes while driving s/he is more likely to have an accident. This study was confirmed by a spotcheck of policy holders for Farmers Insurance. As a result of these studies, 22 states, primarily in the west and midwest, have ruled that people over 21 who haven't smoked tobacco for 2 years can get a 20% to 25% reduction in policy rates.

Hanover Insurance Co. reports that 1/5 of the home fires requiring the fire department are due to matches or cigarettes. In recognition of this, Hanover offers a 5% discount to households where no member has smoked for at least one year.

In the area of life insurance, discount criteria are less defined. Some policy discounts are restricted to men, some require that the policy holder be a lifelong nonsmoker while others are only concerned about present smoking habits. Companies offering some sort of discount for nonsmokers include Mutual of New York, National Home Life, and Standard Insurance Company.

As more studies are done and more conclusive evidence is gathered on the hazardous effects of smoking on nonsmokers, more states, towns, and campuses will develop policies dealing with the subject. At the present time, however, it is important to remember that while smoking is a definite health hazard to both smoker and nonsmokers, smokers have certain individual rights which must be considered. The issue should be dealt with assertively but fairly.

For more information on smoking and health, persons should contact the Vermont Lung Association in South Burlington or any one of the following organizations: GASP (Group Against Smoker's Pollution), PO Box 632 College Park, Md; ASH (Action on Smoking and Health), 20 H St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, or ANSR (Association for Non-Smoker's Rights), 1829 Portland Ave., Minneapolis. Minn. 55404.

No republic ever yet stood on a stable foundation without satisfying the common people.

FLASH!

Live Music at Charly's

thurs. April 20th

Jazz with Paul Asbell & Tony Markellis

fri. & sat. April 21 & 22

John's Other Band

Come Have Some Fun

15 Center St. Burlington

VERMONT CYNIC

EDITORIAL BOARD

Editor-in-Chief: David C. Greeff
Managing Editor: Alex D. Walker
Executive Editor: Russell F. Flannery
Layout Editor: Jerome E. Andrews

News: Robert J. Moore
Features: Alan Marshall
Sports: Rich Chalmers, Steve Larose
Arts: Vaune Davis
Advertising Manager: Brian Evans
Business Manager: Julie Voll

The Vermont Cynic is published weekly during the school year except vacations by students at UVM. Opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or the State of Vermont.

Time to Get Out of South Africa

Over the last few years college students have been attacking Apartheid in South Africa by demanding divestiture of American corporations who have investments in that country. There is little question that political and economic policies which perpetuate racism are wholly indefensible on any grounds, and that the efforts of these students attempting to eliminate them have been honorable.

For Americans, the crux of the issue is a moral one, not one of economic pragmatism, since U.S. corporations have less than 10% of their total international investments in South Africa. To divest would certainly not be a crippling blow to our economic well being, and considering the negative consequences of our presence in South Africa, it seems the only acceptable course.

The New York Times put it eloquently when they said: "South Africa is not the only racist nation on earth; certainly not the most oppressive one. But no other contemporary government — and certainly none that stands for the culture of the West — has dared to define itself as the embodiment of White Supremacy."

The University of Vermont presently has investments in seventeen companies with holdings in South Africa. These assets constitute $2,559,000 of our roughly $17,000,000 portfolio. It is curious to note that the university only admits to having stock in five companies: Ford, IBM, Caterpillar, Exxon, and Schlumberger.

President Coor has stated that he favors divestiture for countries which don't adhere to the Sullivan principles — a set of goals designed to promote fair employment practices in South Africa to which fifty corporations are signatory. He is quick to point out that four of the five companies, which he apparently believes are the only UVM ones with South African interests, abide by them. The fifth has issued a statement in support of equal employment opportunity.

Coor does seem genuinely concerned on this issue, but in our view, has made only minimal effort to seek out the whole truth and act upon it. Overwhelming evidence indicates that the Sullivan principles are simply the necessary excuse corporations need to continue their discriminatory policies. The Ford Motor Company, for example, was recently reported to pay their black workers less than one half their white counterparts.

It is the moral and ethical duty of President Coor and other trustees of the University to take immediate action in this area. By maintaining investments in a country which perpetuates racist policies, we are tacitly, if not directly, supporting these policies ourselves.

It should be noted here that divestiture should not significantly harm our investment portfolio. Statistics show that dividend levels of companies which don't invest in South Africa are roughly the same as those that do.

Editorial

LETTERS

Is the S.A. An Efficient Government?

To the Editor:

The S.A.'s decision to disclose its budget requests, allocations and explanations and the Cynic's willingness to print them in a readable manner, albeit out of alphabetical order, is to be complimented.

However, the S.A. Administrative budget of $41,124.00, or 23% of the total allocation, needs an explanation.

The S.A. has been first in leading the fight against the high cost of education. It had also been the target of criticism concerning its alleged unresponsiveness and inaction. It has also been alluded that S.A. mismanages its funds and uses funds indiscriminately.

In light of this criticism, the S.A. should provide an itemized breakdown of its own budget for publication in the Cynic. I recommend a similar breakdown and explanation concerning the contingency fund and its role in the S.A. be published alongside.

Were this done, students could determine if 23% of our aggregate fees is, in fact, an unreasonable cost of running our government.

Sincerely,
Susan Jo Perkins

The Art of Typing

To the Editor:

Three weeks left to go: everyone is starting to write those long, put-off papers. After finishing your drafts, there's only one more step, the typing. For many students, this small part is the longest and most aggravating, but for those who've taken a typing course, it's one of the easiest. I learned this when I took a personal typing course in high school. Even though I could have bought a "teach yourself" book, the teacher made me learn. He gave me the incentive to be the best and the quickest typist in the class. Unlike teaching myself, I couldn't put practicing off and that's the best way to learn to type. That's why I believe UVM should offer a typing course.

This course wouldn't have to cost the school a lot of money. Each student could be required to purchase an instruction book along with paper and a typewriter. The only materials the school would supply are a room, desks, an instructor (possibly a Work-Study Student) and electricity. If the school isn't willing to pay, each student could be charged a minimal fee. The students who really want the course should have no objections to paying.

Once a student knows how to use the keyboard of a typewriter correctly, other things besides typing will become easier. Almost all computer terminals and card-punchers have the basic keyboard with a few new keys. Now, he'll be able to type his instructions in more quickly and save computer time. Why should someone be so concerned about using computers? First, a lot of jobs require you to know how to use them. Second, since the price of computers is falling, they are becoming household items. For six hundred dollars, you'll be able to buy a computer which will balance your checkbook, play games, and even teach your kids math or foreign languages. All these instructions must be keyed in through a terminal that has a typewriter's keyboard.

Soon people won't be able to avoid typing. Everyone should know how to type correctly. A simple beginner's course now would teach the students the fundamentals and prepare them for the future.

Matt Hayes

Privilege With Seniority

To the Editor:

Randy Brigg's recent letter concerning PE sign ups reflects very nicely the feelings of myself and many fellow students especially those in the class of '79.

After we were shut out from most of the gym courses for our freshman and sophomore years by the Seniors First policy, UVM decides to change its policy. We upperclassmen with no credits in PE have no priority over freshmen who have still four years to fight it out.

I personally waited for two hours in the fall and three hours in the spring for a gym course. Because of my courses and commitments, my choices were limited as far as course selection. I was unable to get the course I tried for. I refused to pay $55 to ride a horse and ballet did not interest me.

I have one more year and no gym credits. UVM managed once again to screw many of its students, especially the class of 1979.

Rick Cohen

Give Me Objectivity

To the Editor:

I would personally like to express my regrets on the Vermont Cynic's habit, lately, at allowing Mark Kevorkian, parading as an unbiased sports observer, to stain your pages.

The Cynic is not expressing the opinions of the Boston Globe (thank God), nor is it supposed to express those of the New York Times, New York Daily News, or New York Post. Rather a fairly objective, unbiased, and neutral column would be greatly appreciated and would add credibility to the Cynic's supposedly appointed duty: to respond to the needs of all students, not a small, yet loud majority! If this prejudiced practice must continue, and I see no reason why it should, please allow an opinion to be present in your paper which might steady the already off-the-wall attitude that reporter Kevorkian possesses.

Jeff Beckerman

WRUV

An Unfair Assessment

To the Editor:

I was very disappointed with Suzanne Karkus' article on WRUV in last week's Cynic. The author didn't mention any positive aspects of the station.

But more importantly, I was personally insulted by the author's irresponsible "reporting." I, being the "...disk jockey who preferr(ed) to remain unnamed..." found my words twisted around or invented by the author. First of all, I did not say that the lack of control by WRUV's management was a possible cause of increased record thefts. Secondly, I was misquoted when Ms. Karkus penned "...maybe they (the dj's) are doing it (stealing) because they don't feel they are getting anything out of working for the station." Instead, I did say that thefts may be possibly linked to the fact that the dj's are not paid workers. Thirdly, it was upsetting to read that I "said" that I don't think anybody is helping to improve WRUV's performance. I did, however, mention an internal communication problem in that paragraph but why tack on a misquote — to spice up the story?

Ms. Karkus did quote me correctly when I spoke of an absence of cohesive, tightly knit working group, but in keeping with the spirit of the story, chose not to include anything I told her about efforts being planned by the newly elected station manager to improve internal communication and staff cohesiveness.

I'm still a fan of the Cynic and hope that a responsible and well-researched article will be written about UVM's radio station at some future date.

Joanne B. Feldman
WRUV-FM

Feedback Welcome

To the Editor:

In response to last week's article in the Cynic, the general consensus among the active members of WRUV is that the article was unnecessarily negative. We acknowledge the fact that some problems exist, but we think the UVM community should know that we are working to solve these matters.

Any feedback, written if possible, would be helpful in directing organization for the upcoming year.

Comments should be directed to: WRUV, 489 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401.

WRUV — Hang It In Your Ear!

Jay Strausser
Douglas Lang

Letters Cont. P. 24

INSIGHT:

Media Power

By Eric Pollard

The news media, including television, newspapers, magazines, etc., have come to hold positions of great respect at all levels of American life. The annual U.S. News & World Report survey for the year 1978 to determine "Who Runs America?" showed that television is the fourth most powerful "institution" in America, behind only the Presidency, large business, and the Supreme Court. Walter Cronkite is listed as being the eighth most influential individual in the country. Katharine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post and its subsidiary publications, was ranked twentieth, well ahead of many outstanding political figures. This is not in itself so incredulous, but when one investigates the direction of influence and power which the media wield, one will find something that is not quite so settled.

The news media have long been recognized as a form of "fourth estate." This is simply a reference to the historic position of the media and the press in particular. There is, however, something very misleading about calling the media part of the governmental structure. Unlike the constitutional branches of the American government, the media bear no responsibility for their actions. It is true that there is an unwritten code which informally binds newsmen to protecting the interests of the United States, but it is not a specific rulebook against which questions of dubious activity can be weighed. The media are, in effect, unaccountable for their actions, with the exception of outright slander. There is no restraint put on them to keep them responsible to any authority beyond their own ethics. While this insures the output of uncensored news, it also allows for the possibility of unfettered exercise of the selective reporting of certain events which might have a great deal of impact on the American public.

The results of the U.S. News survey do not indicate where the power of the highly ranked individuals and institutions originates; some are obvious in their authority and others, including the media, are superficially evident. One would assume that the power which the media is felt to exercise derives from the impact of media reporting on the general public. This is not the case. While the media do affect public opinion, the thrust of their impact lies in their influence with the people in Washington who are supposed to be representing the American people. The media are valuable sources of information about issues that the lawmakers are concerned with and are used as reference works by those lawmakers in their efforts to develop a position on a given issue. The media are used because they provide a great deal of expert information that is not always available from government sources. By functioning as an input into the decision-making process, the media have usurped to a certain extent the constitutional role of the constituent district in Congress. While the voters still elect their representatives, the media have become the major influence of the people with their representatives. As the modern media have developed, they have been increasingly directed at Washington and the men who run this country. The public is the indirect benefactor of this trend, getting the same information as the lawmakers, even if they do not understand the information made available to them.

The problem that arises from this movement toward a dichotomy between the responsibility for selection and input is one of major significance. It splits the constitutional form of government at the base, from which that government's legitimacy is derived. The result is in effect a democracy from above, not unlike the system that exists in the People's Republic of China. The public, because of its large size and lack of training and interest, is slowly being pushed aside in favor of a highly trained elite of information gatherers. Whether or not this trend can be reversed is not known, but the homage paid the media by the American people would seem to indicate that it is a trend that meets with the approval of the very people that it is disenfranchising.

OPINION

Fire Prevention & Student Rights

By Dan Adams

In the past few weeks many of UVM's residence halls underwent a fire safety inspection conducted by Security's Safety Department. Those running the inspection, no doubt motivated at least in part by the Providence College tragedy, hoped to both induce an awareness among students concerning potential fire hazards and to examine each room suggesting ways to help safeguard the rooms from fire.

There were numerous benefits from this inspection, not the least of which was a positive and productive interaction between students and Security. Hanging draperies, wires hidden under rugs, and overloading circuits were some of the hazards on the blacklist. Inspectors advised students to do their best to remove some of the potential problem areas, and then left students alone to determine their own destiny.

For all the benefits of this advisory function, the Safety Department found their hands tied where such an inspection could be most productive. What probably is rationalized at least in part as a student right to individual freedom – the right to decorate or arrange individual rooms as one wishes – in fact poses a big threat to the University, the Department of Residential Life, and to individual students living in the halls.

One blatant example is the condition of one of the rooms encountered by the Safety Department this spring. This particular room contained extensive wood structure, flammable wall hangings, and had part of the wall and all of the ceiling covered with burlap bags up to within inches of the overhead light on the ceiling. Inspectors claimed that the room contained about the worst hazards possible, that it presented a large threat to hall and floor members and, in the event of actual fire, would almost definitely be fatal for the room's occupants.

The ensuing conversation with one of those occupants – one which lasted over a half hour – was to no avail. The occupant refused, especially at this late date, to remove the room's decorations. Without the necessary authority to require students to meet the critical safety standards, the inspectors were helpless to do anything other than try to convince. Eventually they had to move on, the room remaining unchanged.

Such limitations placed on Safety Department are both indefensible and in no way in the interests of the students as a whole. The right of students to privacy in their own room simply does not apply here – spreading flame and smoke do not respect legal boundaries. The occupants of a room full of fire hazards are only two of many who would be threatened by a fire, all of whom should have a right to a safe place of residence.

Concerning protection, the present situation suggests that the Department of Residential Life would be highly vulnerable to a suit for damages based on negligence should death, injuries, or significant damage result from a residence hall fire. That such a possibility exists is ironic considering the significant limitations put on inspectors this spring.

In most cases, responsible students have shown concern for their fellow residents and made an effort to avoid any major fire hazards. Yet a few isolated instances have shown that not all students respond appropriately to equitable, rational reasoning. The primary objectives of a fire safety program suggest that the Department should focus its attention on these isolated cases.

In maintaining the rights of students to a safe living environment, specific minimal safety standards should be set for all rooms in the residence halls. Inspection should be made early in the fall before students settle in and commit themselves to a hazardous decor, and inspectors should be authorized to demand that the safety standards be met.

The risk to all residents of the residence halls and the potential legal risk to the Department of Residential Life more than justify the suggestions above. It shouldn't take the death of a friend or the smell of burning flesh to convince us so.

"The occupants of a room full of fire hazards are only two of many who would be threatened by a fire, all of whom should have a right to a safe place of residence."

The Downhill Edge

THEY'VE JUST ARRIVED...

Running shoes from:

New Balance
Etonic
Tiger
Puma
Nike

plus a

Complete Line of Running Gear including...

frank shorter running gear

Complete Line of Skateboards and Accessories from...

Gordon & Smith
Kryptonic
Bahne
Hobie

Complete Line of Tennis Shoes by:

Puma • Nike • Tread 2 • Beta

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

81–85 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401 (802) 862-2282

LETTERS

Congrats to S.A. Concerts

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the Student Association for finally getting the concert system organized. Hopefully, now one can go to a concert without the fear of the last minute shoving, pushing, and getting crunched to near suffocation.

For the upcoming Grateful Dead concert on May 6, the SA Concert Committee has decided to sell all tickets on a Reserved Seat basis. Now, I know that I am assured a seat. At previous concerts, waiting in line for three or four hours was not uncommon and then there was always the possibility that the concert might be over-sold, resulting in a wasted effort.

Tickets went on sale Tuesday, April 18th on very short notice; however I prefer the short notice to the horrible lines before show-time. At past concerts when tickets were sold on a general admission basis, the lines before the concert were incredibly long, and everyone being over-anxious to get inside for a half way decent seat. With only a half-hour before concert time, the rush was usually unbearable. When the doors finally opened, there was a sudden lunge forward and some people have unfortunately passed out or been knocked over and hurt on broken glass. Some concerts even had to be delayed because the line to get in was still backed up to the parking lot.

The organization all round is much better. I had to wait only a half-hour to get a ticket, with security letting only a few students in at a time to get tickets. I may not have the best seat in the house, but it's worth that instead of having to be crunched and wait long hours in the cold for the doors to open.

The new change should take a lot of pressure off the security at the entrance. Students will obviously be more cooperative if they do not have to break their necks to get a seat. Hopefully, SA will have reserved seats for future concerts.

Sincerely,
Louise Choquette

Partners in the Crusade for Christ

To the Editor:

As president of a student organization, Campus Crusade for Christ, I'm writing to express my thanks to and admiration for two fellow officers of our movement, Dave Aune and Eric Pollard.

First, let me tell you about Dave, our secretary. Although his cum – last heard of between 3.5 and 3.8 – seems to indicate bookworming tendencies, Dave actually spends 20 hours (at least) every week in organizational work. He has written regularly for the Cynic, and also sings tenor in the UVM Choir. Last year, Dave's reputation for energy and hard work resulted in his being asked to act as campaign manager for one of the leading S.A. presidential candidates.

Eric, our treasurer, is a key Crusade co-ordinator. He also writes an excellent political column for the Cynic, and was a finalist for a prestigious scholarship for graduate studies in political science. Like Dave, he sings in the choir, and also has performed in madrigal and small ensemble choirs.

Big accomplishments, though, mean little when performed by little people. These two men, however, give of themselves more and more of the time to others as much as any students I've ever met. They are your basic friendly, approachable guys. I'm grateful to have worked with them.

Guy Page

"Some people think Army Nursing is the rifle range and pulling K.P. It's really amazing how little they know."

–Lieutenant Mary Ann Hepner

"Though I'm an Army Nurse, I can also pursue outside interests like dress-designing and sailing.

"One of the pluses of Army Nursing is the nature of the nurse/patient relationship. I don't treat patients like numbers. I follow their progress. I visit them after the acute part of their illness is over. They are so appreciative. It's really part of a nurse's job to help the patient through an illness.

"To me, it's an important job . . . My family is very proud of me. I'm the first person in the family to join the military.

"The Army is a place of self-discovery. It's a total learning experience."

If you'd like to join Mary Ann Hepner in the Army Nurse Corps, here are a few facts you should know. Army Nursing is open to both men and women, under the age 33, with BSN degrees. Every Army Nurse is a commissioned officer.

You are not required to go through the Army's standard basic training: instead you attend a basic orientation course. Your initial tour is three years–just enough to try the job on for size.

For more information about opportunities for Registered Nurses in the Army Nurse Corps, you may write: Army Nurse Opportunities, Northeast Region, U.S. Army Recruiting Command, Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755. Or, you may telephone the nearest Army Nurse Opportunities office. Call collect to . . .

In Boston: 617-542-6000, Ext. 122
In New York: 212-986-7613
In Pittsburgh: 412-644-5881
In Philadelphia: 215-597-9588
In Baltimore-Washington, D.C.: 301-677-5001

Ask for information about . . .

The Army Nurse Corps

SPORTS

Bleck Throws No-hitter

Saints Baptize Cats in Baseball Home Opener

By Steven Larose

St. Lawrence pitcher Herb Bleck's eleven strikeout no-hitter keyed the Saint's double header sweep over the University of Vermont Baseball team, 7-0 and 2-1 at Centennial Field on Monday afternoon.

It was a baptism by fire for the Catamounts, who were making their first home appearance as a varsity team since 1971, when baseball joined football on the dropped program list.

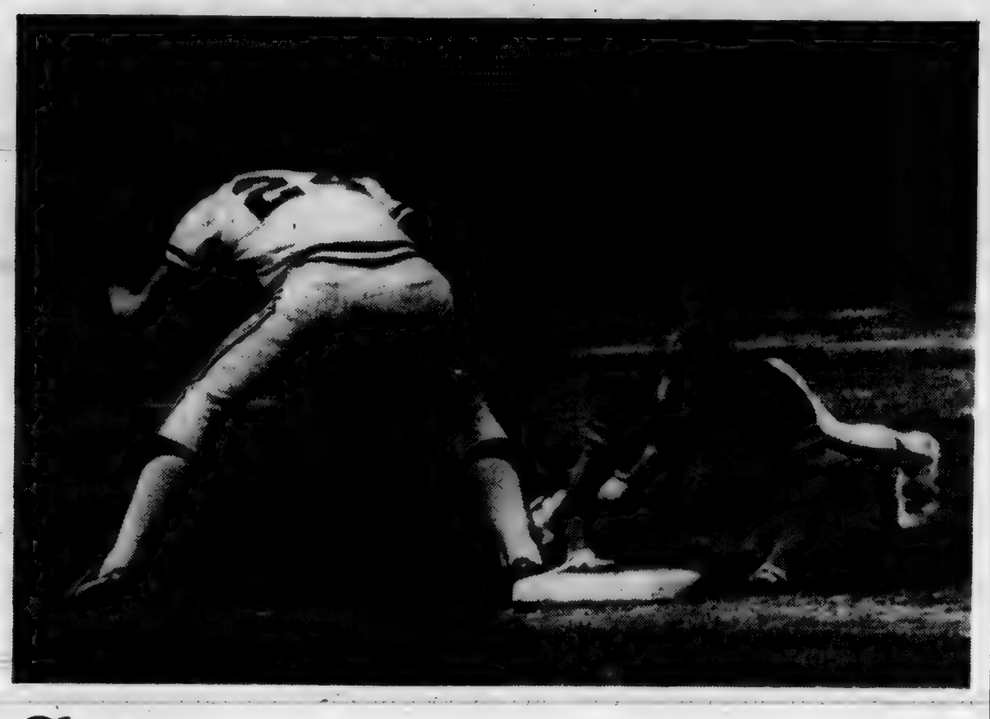
Although Bleck's fastball ripped through the Cat lineup, his performance was blemished by seven walks. His teammates made up for it, however, as the Saints scored five runs in the first inning.

St. Lawrence pounded Vermont starter Tony Segale in the lead-off inning, as he gave up two singles, a triple and a sacrifice, all producing runs. Segale recovered from the first inning jitters and blanked St. Lawrence for five innings. Reliever Peter Mitchell was tagged for the final two runs late in the seventh.

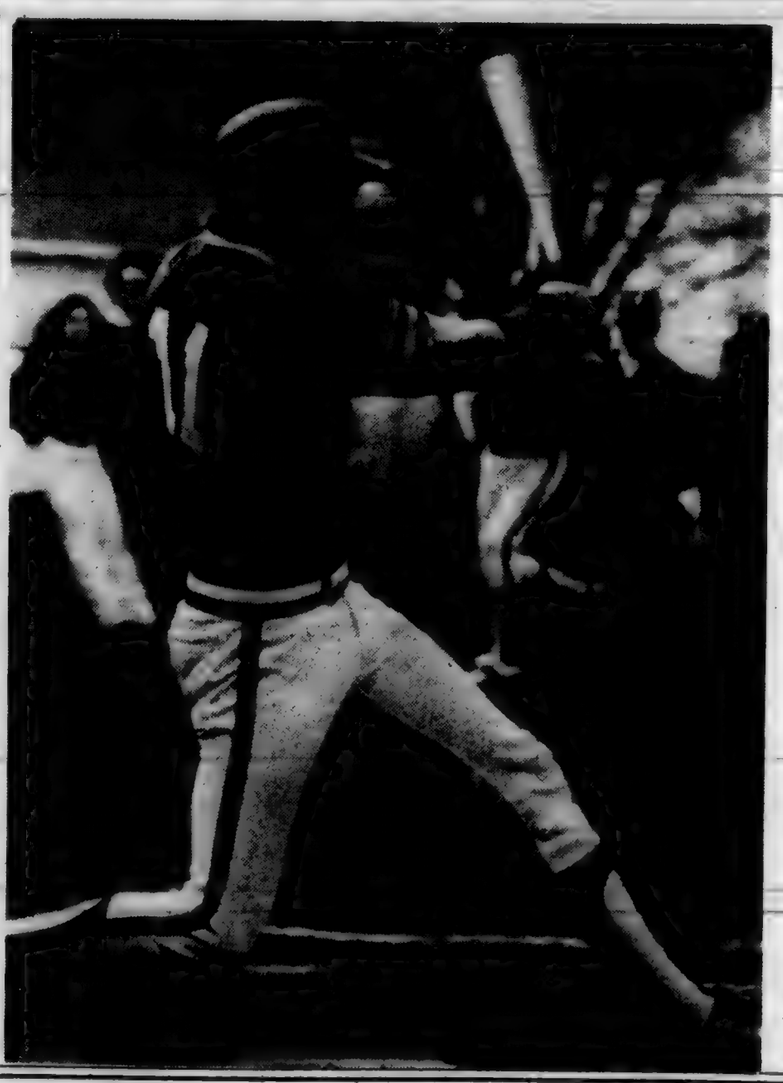
Vermont showed some signs of its inexperience as the Cats were picked off on the bases several times, foolishly relinquishing their precious walks.

The second game pitted Vermont's Brian Meyer against SLU's number two pitcher, Bruce Canty. It was a pitcher's duel right down to the wire, until Bleck, now in centerfield, broke the 1-1 tie with a game winning single in the fifth inning.

Meyer went the distance, striking out eleven and walking two while giving up six hits. SLU pulled a double steal in the fourth inning to score their first run. Vermont's Mal Kimball belted a homerun over the left center fence to tie the game at 1-1.



Bleck followed with a RBI single to right in the fifth, after Meyer had given up an infield hit and Mike Pash made a throwing error. SLU squelched a Vermont comeback effort in the seventh to preserve the scanty 2-1 lead. Chuck Borsavage lined a single to right and pinch hitter Andy Brown punched a base hit to left, putting runners on first and second. But pitcher Canty tagged Bill McAlduff with a called third strike and struck out Craig Ramini to retire the side.



Vermont is now 0-5 on the year, and travels to Connecticut on Friday and Rhode Island on Saturday.

Photos by Steve Larose

Sports Closeup

Baseball Off to a Slow Start

By Randy Briggs

The crackling sounds of a baseball hitting a bat and glove is a sure sign that spring is in the air. The University of Vermont baseball team made its varsity debut last Monday at Centennial Field, returning after a seven year absence.

From the very beginning it looked like it was going to be a long day for the Cats. It all began with the National Anthem being played without a flag on the flagpole. The flag's absence seemed to typify Vermont's hitting which was also non-existent.

There is no question that the odds against a pitcher throwing a no-hitter are high indeed, but that is just what happened to Vermont. Saint left-hander Herb Bleck fired the perfecto, while also recording eleven strikeouts as the Cats were shut out 7-0. Coach Leggett had considerable praise for Bleck, "He was great out there. He kept us off-balance all afternoon."

The Cats were quickly blown out of the first contest as the Larries came up with five runs in the first inning. They were aided by Tony Segale's inability to find the strike zone. "Tony pitched very well except for the first inning," said Leggett. Segale in fact pitched superbly as many of the first inning calls were very close. But even he was no match for Bleck.

In the second game the outcome was the same as the first for Vermont. In this game the Cats scratched tooth and nail down to the wire before bowing 2-1. Brian Meyer pitched a superb contest for Vermont. Unfortunately a strategic mistake cost Vermont the game. Coach Leggett continued by saying, "We're making mistakes, but I am not accepting them. We are inexperienced, so we need to work harder in practice. It was obvious that we have to hit more. We don't have a lot of discipline at the plate."

Although visibly disappointed in the double loss, Leggett saw some good things. "Brian pitched our best game of the season. He looked really sharp out there. He didn't deserve to lose, but that's the way it goes if you don't score runs."

The Cats came very close to getting that first win in the last of the seventh. With one out Chuck Borsavage singled which brought the sparse crowd alive. Pinch hitter Andy Brown also singled giving the Cats the chance to tie. But Bill McAlduff took a tough called third strike for the second out. Then Ed Barry walked to load the bases. But the tying and winning runs died when Craig Ramini struck out.

The players were very discouraged about the course of events that took place. "It felt good to open up at home, but it was very tough to lose two," said centerfield Barry.

Keith Allen was also disappointed with the outcome. "Those were two hard losses to take. We're getting closer to that win. We never gave up though." Andy McDonnell remarked, "I can't buy a hit." It was that kind of day for Vermont.

Coach Leggett concluded by

(continued on page 32)

MAKE

THE OUTFITTERS

YOUR BICYCLING HEADQUARTERS

- Full line of bicycles
- Raleighs, Azuki, Gitane, Nishiki, Panosonic, Paris Sport and Recordman
- Quality 10 speeds from $89.95
- 18 to 28" frames on 27x1¼" wheels
- Friendly courteous service
- Repairs & tuneups on any make
- Many bikes at 1977 prices and below
- Free Kurly Kable, Kickstand and tool kit with 10 speeds over $100 while supply lasts

THE OUTFITTERS

Essex Junction Shopping Center, Essex Junction
North Avenue Shopping Center, Burlington

Penalties Halt Laxmen

By Steve Larose

Excessive penalties by the University of Vermont Lacrosse team allowed Clarkson to break a fourth quarter tie to win 11-10 Saturday afternoon.

Clarkson scored eight out of their eleven goals with Vermont a man down. Assistant Coach Brooks Mohrman explained, "We had trouble picking up the ball. Clarkson was more aggressive even though our defense played well, except with a man down. We had too many penalties because our defense was over-aggressive. Our offense was sluggish but scored readily after the half."

Clarkson opened up their attack with two goals in the final period. Middies Doug McSpadden scored first for UVM on an assist from John Pitts. The remainder of the first period featured several ground balls, due to the cold weather and sloppy field conditions.

Topher Slack moved Vermont ahead 3-2, with two goals in the first five minutes on assists from Pitts and Courtney Jenkins. Jenkins boosted the Vermont lead to 4-2, with an unassisted goal from the right side.

The Vermont lead was short-lived, however, as Clarkson scored three consecutive goals, all on man-up situations to lead at the half, 6-4. The scoring race continued with Vermont scoring four goals. Jenkins scored twice with assists from Peter Drakos.

"Our middies were off and goalie Garry Vreeland got a slow start," Mohrman said. "We had a tough time in the beginning, but started clicking late in the game. I'd say our midfield is where we lost the game. Clarkson was outhitting us on the ground balls, causing us to either drop the ball or get penalties."

John Combias, usually a low profile player, finally broke into the scoring column with a falling quick stick goal. At the end of the third quarter, the score was not led at 8-8.

"At this point I told the players that if we avoided penalties we could win the game," remarked Mohrman. Once again, Clarkson's hustle on the ground balls moved the visitor's into the lead. Ball control flowed back and forth, with UVM finally gaining possession, but the Cats were sluggish in scoring. UVM finally scored when Jenkins went in alone for the score. Within another minute Freshman Andy Ashforth scored to tie it up once again.

Dave Osbourne (top) and Courtney Jenkins hustle against Clarkson.
Photo by Steve Larose

According to Mohrman, penalties proved the Cat's downfall. Late in the fourth quarter an attackman incurred a penalty and Clarkson scored to break the tie and capture the victory.

Mohrman concluded by saying: "John Combias performed well for the first time this year. Jenkins was as sharp as ever. On defense, Mark Stevenson and Mark Brown played excellently. All in all, we were flat and let Clarkson take advantage of us."

Vermont now plays Connecticut on April 22nd and hosts Norwich on April 24th at 4 p.m. The Cat Laxers are currently 1-2 on the season.

Here Comes Spring.

the Ski shop INC.

388 Shelburne Rd. S. Burlington 862-5488

Turban & Stone Win but UVM Tennis Gunned Down

By Steve Larose

Although Scott Turban and Jeff Stone formed a solid one-two punch for the University of Vermont Tennis Team, four Cat losses in the last four matches of the meet enabled Middlebury to pull off a 6-3 win Thursday.

Turban started the ball rolling by defeating Steve Sass 6-3, 6-7 and 6-3. Stone followed with a 6-4, 6-4 whipping of Bruce MacCrellish. At this point UVM turned sour. Bruce Rockowitz, Marc Compagnon, Jamie Friedman and Andy Deary all were handed losses.

Doubles competition was equally disappointing. Stone and Turban were defeated 6-2, 6-3 while Rockowitz and Deary fell to a 6-3, 1-6, 6-2 rout. The only bright spot for UVM was a victory by the team of Homquest and Sheehan, 6-3, 4-6 and 6-2.

Vermont coach Hal Greig registered disappointment with Vermont's showing: "We had a good showing from Turban, who was tough in the clutch. Stone also excelled by taking on Middlebury's top player. However, I was disappointed with the rest of the showing. One factor could be the fact that we haven't been outside yet, whereas Middlebury has had extensive outdoor conditioning."

Greig continued, "Overall our progress has been good, but we need more challenge matches. We need some improvement out of our 4, 5, & 6th slot players. So far there hasn't been much of a change, but I have high hopes since we have scheduled some match work. We definitely need to improve if we are going to have any kind of successful season."

Vermont is now 0-1 on the season and takes on Middlebury at Vermont April 24th.

Relay Quartet Paces Vermont Tracksters at UMass

By Ted Quigley

Hundreds of competitors from a score of schools converged on the University of Massachusetts last Saturday where individual performances from the University of Vermont track team boosted the Cats to a dominant showing. No team scores were kept.

The scene for a Vermont triumph in the final relay was set as anchorman Bernie Gagnon awaited the baton. Leadoff man John Loone stepped high to remove the sleepy winkers from his eyes, and passed the baton to Jim Briand, leaving the Sudbury flash in next to last place. Could Briand sprint another 5 second leg, as he had last year, where he unexpectedly made up three places? Not only did he pass several runners but the third man, Larry Cunningham, handed clutch performer Bernie Gagnon the baton while in third place.

Top – Dick Emberley passing the baton to freshman Joe McClallen. Bottom – Judy St. Hilaire passes the baton to Heather Adams. Photo by Lori Murch

Gagnon quickly caught the Coast Guard runner seven yards ahead at the start. For 150 yards they strode side by side until in the midst of the home stretch, running as if on a treadmill, Gagnon lifted his unwilling legs to a hard-earned 49.6 second lap and a second place for the UVM relay squad in the mile relay.

It was a fitting end to a day full of clutch performances by the UVM men and women. Much was expected of Janet Lynch, but two UVM women records exceeded even Coach Ed Kusiak's hopes. In addition to finishing third in the 100 meter hurdles in 15.7 seconds, Lynch reminded all those leggy long jumpers of her presence, winning that event by over a foot, in 18'6".

Star miler Judi St. Hilaire threatened her opposition into running personal bests but still handed the baton while in first place to Heather Adams, on route to a UVM record in the two mile relay. Amy Bouchard, Robin Snyder, and Adams gallantly tried to keep the lead from the Liberty Athletic Club team, but anchorwoman Charlotte Lettis, one of New England's top women milers, seemed possessed in the last leg. UVM's quartet finished in second place, running a UVM record of 9:53.

Kaja Thornton heaved the shot 37'3" to gain fourth place in that event while Janet Terp ran 15:95 seconds in the 100 meter hurdles to just miss the old UVM record.

Gagnon ran in an unusually fast 220 yard heat and was barely nosed out of making the final. Freshman Joe McClallen won his 220 heat and then ran in a time roughly the same as Gagnon's heat time to nab fourth place in the final.

In a rarely run relay race, the 480 yard shuttle hurdle relay, a quartet of Emberly, Bob Frank, John Rooney, and Jim Kauffman caught first place within the last six inches, running 63.3 seconds.

Emberly and Looney later teamed with McClallen and Gagnon in the 4 x 100 yard relay. In sprinting 43.6 seconds, this relay finished behind only the top relay team in New England, Boston University. Never has a relay at UVM been so specialized. Leggy Dick Emberly, in running the second 110 yards, made use of his awesome top speed and minimized his weakness, his start. Handing off to Joe McClallen in third, he gave the baton to a man who found some way to bribe the law of centrifugal force. Gagnon, as an anchorman, satisfied his need for competition by outrunning people too far ahead for anyone else to try to catch.

The weekend of April 22nd, UVM will be running at the Boston College relays and the following Wednesday will defend their state meet title at Middlebury.

Dartmouth Kicking Game Stalls Vermont Rugby

By Steve Larose

First half injuries to three Vermont Rugby teammates and an inability to get the ball over the goal line stalled the Cats' Rugby express, as they lost to Dartmouth 4-0 Saturday.

Vermont had several scoring opportunities in the scoreless first half, coming within the 1 yard line several times. However, Vermont was turned back each time.

Chuck Koniger, Kyle Davis and Carlos Boraceras all suffered injuries during the half, further hindering Vermont. Dartmouth took advantage of Vermont to score on a sneak play, as their back slid around the scrum and into the end zone.

Club President Jeff Travaline commented "the scrum and the backs worked well in moving the ball out. We started using the forwards more as backs – allowing the forwards to handle the ball more. It also allowed us to use a 15-man attack. In the future we will be more organized, with better plays for the backs."

"The ball wasn't worked out of the scrum and Dartmouth used their strong kicking game to push us back," said Travaline, who added that Pete Cushman, a strong runner, allowed UVM to get into position. Vermont also used the scrummies to overload the backs and give Vermont an advantage.

"Dartmouth won the set scrums and kicked themselves out of trouble," Travaline continued. "It was a wide open game with a lot of movement. Our runners were aggressive and the scrum persued well."

Vermont's "B" Team also lost 4-0 to Dartmouth. The contest featured the running of Mike Evert and Steve Funk's work in the scrum. Vermont simply failed to build up an offensive attack.

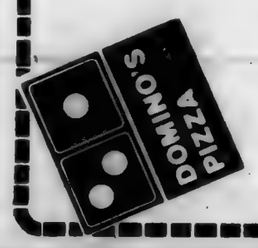
Vermont's "C" Rugby Team lost to St. Michael's "B" Team 10-8 last Wednesday.

Vermont "A" team hosts Westmount, the number two team in Canada, on Saturday, April 22, at Post Field at 1:00 p.m.

It's not whether you win or lose, but how well you eat after the game.

We do it all for you.

McDonald's



free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!

Exp. 5-16-78

658-3333

MasterLoan

Loans you design to fit your way of life.

Rate 9.31% Annual Percentage Rate!

Whether you drive away a new car or sail your boat home, we think you'll agree that Chittenden has loan rates you can live with. And you'll find a payment schedule to fit your lifestyle, too.

Make Chittenden a part of your life.

Member FDIC

Chittenden TRUST COMPANY

Equal Housing Lender

A Month Without Civilization

Outward Bound: A Wilderness Adventure

By Rich Chalmers

Editor's Note: Co-sports Editor Rich Chalmers completed the Minnesota Outward Bound course during the summer of 1976.

"They must be strange people. I mean, who would do a thing like that and pay for it? Yeah, they have to be a little crazy."

I have heard that tune many times. Outward Bound is a wilderness adventure, and for those who don't understand it, I guess it may seem kind of crazy. But it isn't.

Actually, I guess Outward Bounders are a little abnormal. They are willing to try something completely new and different, to test themselves, and to get out into beautiful country for half a summer. Sure, they pay for it and it's hard work, but it's fun and most people never regret having done it.

Outward Bound is for lively, energetic people who are willing to challenge themselves with tasks they always thought were impossible. Most of all, it's a learning experience, a time to grow both mentally and physically, and a time to really experience oneself under ideal conditions.

There are seven Outward Bound schools situated around the country: Colorado, Wyoming, Maine, North Carolina, Minnesota, New Mexico, and Florida. Each one emphasizes a different kind of wilderness survival. What one person experiences in Colorado may be very different from what another does in Maine, but they both learn and grow in similar ways.

My interest in the northern woods and canoeing made me choose the Minnesota school, which deals primarily with canoeing in the Quiet National Park in southern Canada.

I was apprehensive as we arrived at the base camp after a three hour bus ride from Duluth International Airport where we had all gathered to say goodbye to civilization. I was expecting a month of the unexpected and I couldn't have called it better. Within ten minutes of getting off the bus we were wading through five feet of mud-filled swamp, crossing rapids and jogging along narrow wooded trails in a conscious effort to lose all ties with the outside world. Civilization was behind us then, and we wouldn't see it again for 24 days.

The first week was comparatively easy. The days began at 5:30 with a three mile run and then a swim in the Lake. After breakfast we learned first aid and basic survival skills as well as canoeing and rock climbing. Each group, consisting of twelve kids, was headed by two instructors who led us through the various routines that all added up to the Outward Bound experience. It was a fun time of unlimited excellent food and growing friendship between the members of each group and their instructors.

The Outward Bound instructors are a different breed of human being than those that roam the city streets. They laugh in the face of obstacles which make others curse, and they are experienced when it comes to what is and isn't safe. They're a playful bunch who derive pleasure out of personally leading four sets of kids through Outward Bound each summer. The school's strength is in its instructors, and many are well worth commending. There is nothing more reassuring than that calm voice coaxing you up a 300 foot cliff when you "know" you can't make it and that you're going to spend the rest of your life with your fingernails dug into some stupid rock.

Another strength of the course lay in its teaching methods. Verbal teaching was always followed by simulation action, which showed each student exactly what it was like to be in that sort of situation and how to deal with it. One exercise was a midnight emergency search for three missing people in the nearby woods. Our brigade found a woman with a fractured leg who was in a state of shock. It was our job to calm her and transport her by stretcher through the woods for a mile or so while keeping in constant messenger contact with operation headquarters.

The next day, a similar situation actually occurred. A ninety year old man had disappeared after leaving on a walk and had been missing for more than twenty hours. The Minnesota police and rescue authorities had asked Outward Bound to help in the search, and after a two hour car ride we arrived at the scene. The area was swarming with police cars, helicopters and blood hounds. Minutes before we began our search, however, the man was found in the area we were planning to comb. Had he not been found, our simulation experience the day before could have proven invaluable. As it turned out, the man knew exactly what to do when lost in the wilderness and he was in excellent condition after spending the night in a leaf-covered hole.

This ended the first section of the course. For the next seventeen days we would center our attentions on another aspect of the Minnesota/Canadian wilderness – the water.

For most of us, it was the first time we had ever canoed long distance. The upcoming days would include 320 miles of canoeing and over eighteen miles of portage. An average day might include seven to nine hours of paddling split up by a meager lunch of two fig newtons, a piece of cheese and a piece of salami.

Throughout the trip we were surrounded by beautiful countryside. Deer, geese, ducks and beavers were common sights as we descended deeper and deeper into the wilderness. It was a fisherman's paradise as the Walleys and Pickerel grew uninhibited by man.

Six days out on the trip we decided, upon our instructors' suggestions, to take a short cut up a small stream rather than around a long semi-circle of lakes. This, as it turned out, was to be our major test. If we could get through this, we could do anything.

We began by paddling up a small river. It was calm and slow so we had few problems for the first half hour or so. Then the stream became smaller and beaver dams blocked our way. We had to stop at every beaver dam, unload the canoe, carry it over, load it up again and then go on our way. Soon there were beaver dams every thirty yards. It became worse; the water disappeared. The stream bed was dry, all except for one small trickle which greased the rocks and seemed to laugh at us for the absolute idiocy of trying to get canoes up this steep river bed. The thick woods on either side closed us in and we were trapped in the middle of the woods with canoes on our shoulders and a long way to go to get to more water.

We decided that having gone this far, we weren't going to turn back. We slipped, tripped, slided and bounced for the next two hours until we reached a very discouraging sight. Ahead of us, right in our path, was a mud field covered with fallen trees. It would have been hard to get across with no weight on our backs, but with 100 pound packs or a canoe it was a mockery. It took us an hour to go 600 yards. With the mud two feet deep, the trees were an equivalent of three to five feet off the ground and it was an interesting job getting over them with a canoe on one's back.

Four days later we arrived at Lake Kashipiwi, the site of our rock climbing activities. I found rock climbing to be the most challenging and exuberating section of the course. We spent one full day climbing on 300 foot cliffs overlooking a small stream-filled valley. The view was magnificent. It made us want to take off and soar forever.

To be able to climb seemingly 90 degree cliffs with nothing but your hands and feet is what success is all about. We had ropes of course, but they were only to stop our fall, not to help us up. Once on that cliff face, we were on our own. Each person experienced fall after fall, setback after setback, until frustration and exhaustion had almost won; then it all clicked, and we could get to the top. After a while, a good toe-hold would almost scream out at us, whereas when we had just started, we could look for hours and not see a good one. Climbing gave me a strong sense of confidence. Without it, I could never have climbed those cliffs fifty feet above the soaring eagles or even completed the trip.

Within a short time we were back at the base camp again enjoying big meals and good beds for the first time in seventeen days. It felt good to be back again and to know that we had all accomplished something so totally unique.

I will always remember the last day of Outward Bound as one of the hardest. It was then that we said goodbye to the people we had grown close to and others who had done what we had as well.

As the bus pulled out of base camp and Queen's Bohemian Rhapsody blared on the radio, I thought back on what had happened during that last month. I had learned a lot – about myself, other people, the wilderness, camping trips and more. But most of all, I learned to have the self-respect and self-confidence one can only get by pushing oneself to the limit and coming up with a pot of gold. That is Outward Bound.

THE GREAT COUNTRY RACE

men's & women's classes prizes in all classes
refreshments, beer
over $150 in prizes

open to all uvm students, faculty, staff saturday april 22 (raindate - 23)
1:30
lower patrick gym parking lot

register april 14-21, entry fee $1
april 22, 12:00-1:30, $1.50
entries available at uvm outing club cycling c suite, 1/1 B-270 x-4249

a fun bike race

NHL Stanley Cup Playoffs To Be a Toss-up on Ice

By Nat Foote

The National Hockey League playoff season began recently with 12 of its 18 teams qualifying for the chance to take away the Stanley Cup from the Montreal Canadiens for the first time in three years.

Only six teams were allowed to send their players home for an early round on the linx. The remaining teams had to stick around to prove what an 80 game schedule had already made obvious: that there are only a few teams that have a chance to upend the powerful Habs.

The NHL playoff system, developed so that two-thirds of the owners in the league could have a playoff team in their city, proved its futility again this year. While the four divisional winners were spared the boredom of the opening – best of three – preliminary round, the next eight finishers battled each other to prove their respective prowess.

Among the playoff teams this year were the Colorado Rockies with a stellar 19 victories (the worst team only had two less), and three other teams with losing records over the campaign – the Kings, Red Wings and Rangers. When the ice-chips had cleared away, the Sabres, Wings, MapleLeafs and Flyers had joined the Canadians, Islanders, Black Hawks, and Bruins in the quarter-final round. Three of these teams will get a shot at playing the Canadians this year; here is how they size up.

The Detroit Red Wings have won the dubious distinction of being the first team to try to eliminate the awesome Canadiens. But the Wings won't be around for very long and will probably wish that they had gone home even earlier rather than put up with the mental and physical abuse that they will no doubt receive. The other quarter-finalists should be the Islanders, Bruins and Sabres, which would mean that Buffalo would be the second opponent for the Habs.

The Sabres will have had a bruising series against the Flyers and will not be in any shape to face up to the well rested Canadiens. Three factors indicate that the Sabres will put up a good fight: (1) Buffalo is very tough in its home rink, which is smaller than most in the NHL and is well suited to their tight-checking style of play; (2) The highly productive French-Canadiens stars on the Sabres, Gil Perreault, Richard Martin and Rene Robert are always at their best against their childhood idols; (3) The Sabres have always fared well against the Canadiens in regular season play. Even with a solid defense of Gueruemont, Korab, Schoenfeld and rookie Don Edwards in goal, the Buffalo squad will not be able to take Montreal any further than five games in their best of seven series.

In the other semi-final round, the Islanders will put away the Boston Bruins in six games and advance to the finals against the Canadiens. This will be a classic duel which could very possibly go seven games with emotion rather than ability being the deciding factor. The Isles, who took the Habs to six games in last year's semi-final round, are a definitely improved squad over last season. The addition of rookies Stefan Persson on defense, Mike Bossy and Mike Kaszychi up front, helped to make the New Yorkers the second most potent offense in the league. Here's how I see the two teams shaping up against each other.

Offense: These two teams are nearly even in this department. The Isles line of Gillies, Trottier, and Bossy led the NHL with 299 points, despite mid-season injuries to the Isles' most valuable player Brian Trottier. The combination of Gillies' hard-checking, Trottier's smooth-playmaking, and Bossey's sharp-shooting make this a potent line that will be an important factor in the series. The Frenchmen off-set this with their own line of Shutt, Lamaire, and Lafleur, who certainly are one of the most explosive lines in hockey today. Beyond the first line, the Canadiens have a slight edge with both speed and strength. If the Isles' tight-checking of Neystrum, Harris, Merrich, Droeun, Howatt and Henning can hold Montreal's Larouche, Coumoyer, Houle, Lambert, Gainey and Jarvis in check, the Islanders may end up with the over-all edge up front.

Defense: No doubt that the Canadiens have the edge here. There is no better threesome in hockey than Lapoint, Robinson and Savard. The Canadiens gave up a league low 183 goals and always prove to be just as stingy in the playoffs. The Islanders, led by Dennis Potvin, also have a formidable back line of Hart, Marshall and Perrson. If the New York defense will concentrate more on keeping the puck out of their own net rather than trying to put it in the opponent's, they could be very tough to penetrate.

Goal: This is another toss-up. Vezina trophy winners Ken Dryden and Michel Larocque are a solid pair but are not tested as often as most goalies in the NHL. Dryden always rises to the occasion under pressure and will no doubt be up to form in this series. The Isles pair of Chico Reach and Billy Smith can be equally tough though, and they could be the deciding factor if the series is tight.

On paper, the Canadiens have an overall edge over the Islanders. However, Montreal has won the last two years and could be a little too complacent this year. The Islanders have been steadily improving in their six years in the NHL and this could be the year for them. If the Islanders can keep their emotions high and remain injury-free, the Canadiens will be hard pressed to defend the Cup.

SLU Drops Women Laxers in Season Opener

By Rich Chalmers

Although the University of Vermont Women's Lacrosse team was defeated by St. Lawrence University 8-6 in its season opener on Monday, consistent speed and quickness allowed the Cats to unleash 36 shots in an effort Coach Cathy Schiller termed as "satisfying."

The UVM women were hindered by an abnormally short field. "It hurt us a great deal," explained Coach Schiller, "because we hadn't practiced on one that size. St. Lawrence's height and effective use of the zone defense added to our troubles by making it difficult to get in and score."

Sue Dana tallied three goals, while Karen Abrahamson scored two and Hilary Robinson added one. The Green and Gold's strength lay in the speed and quickness the Vermont women showed in beating their opponents to the ground ball. They fired a high number of shots but were unable to pass the SLU goalie more than three times each half. SLU had 22 shots against UVM goalie Keela Burr, who had an excellent game, recording 14 saves. "It was her first varsity game and she did a very good job," Coach Schiller commented. "She stopped some very hard shots, many of them one-on-one's."

Both the offense and defense were strong but SLU's superior passing and shot percentage enabled them to end each half one goal up. Coach Schiller plans to put more emphasis on these aspects of the team in order to strengthen the Cat's weaknesses.

The women now look forward to their home season opener against Dartmouth on Saturday. UVM broke Dartmouth's three year winning streak last year so the Panthers are hungry for a win in Burlington. Coach Schiller is expecting a good showing in the toughest home game UVM will encounter this season.

"Overall, we're starting to gel very well. It was our best season opener ever and we're doing a lot better than last year. This should be a good squad."

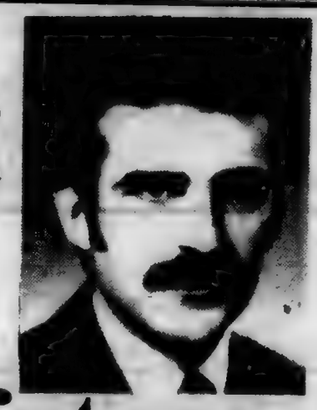
free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

DOMINO'S PIZZA

DON'T GET STUCK!!!



We Still Have Rooms for Graduation Weekend

HO-HUM Motels

Two Convenient Locations

1660 Williston Rd. & 1200 Shelburne Rd.
863-4551 658-1314

Putting this face in your future.

Your Fidelity Union Field Associate can help plan your financial future with CollegeMaster. CollegeMaster is the nation's leader in life insurance for college seniors. Let him tell you why.

Call the Fidelity Union CollegeMaster® Field Associate in your area:

Jack Dixon

863—4546

CollegeMaster®

finbars

soup salad sandwiches homemade desserts daily special
serving from 12–8
167 main st., burlington

Leaves Skin Smooth, Safe, Unblemished

Are YOU Disturbed By:

UNWANTED HAIR

Now It Can Be Removed Permanently With The Fabulous

Laurier IB Probe

Come In For Your Free Consultation Now
Or Think About It During Summer Vacation,
Return In The Fall

Call Mayrce Dunbar, Rn. Electrologist
878-8672
8 Clems Drive
Essex Jct.

4 Years In Successful Business

Permanent Hair Removal Guaranteed

Office Closed Week Of April 17-23
Open April 24

why not?

Lots of knots . . . macrame slide and sandal, high roped wedge. Step into the "Beauty" or "Beacon" in natural, black and navy. $28. Why not . . . Knots for Spring?

Step one

GLADSTONE SHOES

PLATTSBURGH BARRE RUTLAND BENNINGTON WINOOSKI ST. ALBANS NEWPORT BURLINGTON

Garry Vreeland:

Anchoring Lacrosse in the Goal

By Rob McCracken

Goalies are crazy! This opinion, held by most spectators and fellow players of goal keeping sports, is more than exemplified by Lacrosse. However, Vermont goalie Garry Vreeland feels otherwise. "It's really not as bad as it looks and if you know what you're doing, you shouldn't get hurt."

Vreeland first started playing lacrosse as a sophomore at Summit High School in New Jersey. "I started out as a middie but because of a bone disease in my knees, the constant running was very painful. I went to the coach and he suggested trying out the goal-keeper's spot. At first I thought, Oh my God, but he started me out slow and worked with me every day, and after awhile I really began to enjoy it."

Vreeland ended his high school career with All-State honors and then chose to come to UVM in the fall. "I chose Vermont for the academics and location more than the lacrosse, even though I knew they had a very competitive club program. I love the game, but I wasn't willing to make the decision where I wanted to spend my next four years solely

"Garry is the best goalie I've ever played for or against."

— Brooks Mohrman
Assistant Coach

3.0 average, team to one enjoyable. The good, and I ...ying working ...m glad to be ...next three years."

...losing the ...understands the ...was put into a ...but he has a ...putting forth a very fine

Vreeland was a little disappointed over the loss against ..., and expressed his only real complaint about ... at UVM. "It's the weather, it's ridiculous. We've had three games and still have not had one practice outside on a full field. This has been responsible to clear the ball, and in turn has affected our goal scoring potential. Our basic offense is a 'run and gun' which relies on our ability to move the ball from the defensive end to the offensive end before the other team has time to set up. This deficiency has been evident in our past games."

The goalie is responsible for other spirits, has an active role in both the defense and offense. On defense he is the last man between the shooter and the goal, and this is anything but enviable. The ball travels upwards to 90 mph, and the goalie has little protection other than a helmet, gloves, and a thin foam chest protector. He does wear ..., "to take the sting out of the shots," but refrains from other protective devices because "they cut down on my mobility."

The goalie is also responsible for coordinating the defensive movement, which is what's being done when you hear him calling out numbers during the game. "The field is broken up into numbered sections. I call out the section where the ball is, and this allows the defensemen to concentrate on their man while at the same time knowing the location of the ball. If a man should get through, I try to watch the shooter's eyes, the angle of his stick, and to cut down his angle to the goal. In the one on one situation, the shooter has a big advantage because he knows where he is going to shoot. The shooter will score nine out of ten times one on one so I really just hope to stop all the cheap ... and as many of the good ones as possible."

... is also very important. ... will never get a ... for one of the ... the

A Call for Patrick Gym Improvement

By Mark Kevorkian

Ordinarily this column deals with national sports, but today I'd like to address a local sports problem, the UVM athletic facilities and management, or lack of both.

Let's start with Patrick Gym. This handsome structure was built almost twenty years ago, when the enrollment at UVM was considerably smaller, and at that time housed adequate facilities to meet this enrollment. Since then, the enrollment has grown but the gym has not.

In this neck of the woods things happen slowly. This is especially true for the Vermont legislature, which must approve the UVM budget. It has taken the legislature until this semester to allocate money (about one million dollars) to enlarge Patrick Gym. It will be a welcome and long needed improvement if and when it is completed.

Another glaring shortcoming in the athletic facilities is, of course, the tennis courts. Anyone who has ever tried to play tennis knows it is nearly impossible to get a court unless they get there before sunrise or after dark. Indeed, several friends of mine have gone out for the tennis team just so they can get court time.

There are eleven tennis courts on campus. Four are located behind Southwick, four are indoors at the field house and three are on the parking lot between the field house and the gym. To use the latter three courts, you must either have an army of flat-footed ballpersons or be prepared to chase the ball down Spear Street as these courts are not fenced in. Not counting these courts, that makes eight courts for about eight thousand students. And the tennis team uses four of them part of the day and gym classes use them most of what is left of the day. So if you attend UVM and want to play tennis, you had best go elsewhere.

Management and equipment is the most annoying problem. By management I am referring to the student help. I hasten to say the majority of the student employees are helpful and courteous. The security workers are understanding if you neglect to bring your ID and usually let you in without it. At the cage though, it's another story.

Most of the folks down there are also courteous and helpful but a few are downright rude and consider it a personal affrontery if you request equipment and then question why there is none.

Point in case: Last Sunday I went to the gym where there were two people shooting one ball, which had come from the cage. This ball had seen better days as it was worn thin and bounced about as well as a grapefruit. I went down to the cage to get the ball inflated. Once there, the student behind the screen told me "he would if he could" put air in the ball. I then asked for another ball. There were none. I asked where they all were. "What do you think I am – God?" I was asked in return. I stressed to the attendant that I was not interested in his religious affiliations, only in playing basketball. He suggested I transfer to a school which supplied basketballs.

I stressed to the attendant that I was not interested in his religious affiliations, only in playing basketball. He suggested I transfer to a school which supplies basketballs.

True, this is just an individual and an individual problem, but the fact remains there was only one ragged basketball for use at the University of Vermont cage on that Sunday afternoon. That, in a word, is ridiculous.

Forgetting for a moment what a disservice this is to the students already here, what would a perspective student think if he or she were to visit the athletic facilities and equipment room and find there were something as simple and fundamental as a basketball missing from the available equipment? He or she might well think that a school which carries an Ivy League price tag (as UVM does) that doesn't have a basketball for use is screwed up somewhere. No wonder basketball coach Peter Salzberg has so much trouble recruiting high school players. Rude and inane remarks from people who are supposedly there to help only exacerbate the problem.

The "problem" is not with the lack of athletic facilities, and least of all with a shortage of basketballs. As I mentioned earlier, things take time around here. Now the time has come to enlarge the gym. But along with this improvement, there must come corresponding improvements with the little things that make a fine facility a complete facility. This includes many things: more free hours, more equipment and more encouragement to make

(continued on page 32)

Papa Dominics

Pizzas, Hot Oven Grinders, Homemade Lasagna and More.

1160 Williston Rd.

863-2556

Papa Dominics

$1 OFF

on any large pizza

Featuring thick or thin crust

one coupon per pizza

expires

Visit the TENNIS SPECIALTY SHOP

One Day Stringing

Instant Repairs

TENNIS RACKETS by:

Davis, Bancroft, Head, Wilson
Donnay, Yamaha, Dunlop, Prince

TENNIS CLOTHING by:

Bogner, Wilson, Profile, Duofold, Head,
White Stag, The Line, Robert Bruce,
Billie Jean King, Jelenk, Court Casual, Adidas

SKI SALE Up to 50% Off

SKI EQUIPMENT
SKI CLOTHING
RENTAL EQUIPMENT

ALPINE SHOP

Williston Road
So. Burlington

OPEN DAILY
9 A.M. — 9 P.M.

Corner of So. Winooski and Cherry Downtown Burlington

free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!

Exp. 5-16-78

658-3333

DOMINO'S PIZZA

IRA Theatre Presents:

&

Hamlet

Sat. April 22 7pm
Sun. April 23 3 & 8 pm
Southwick Gym
Redstone Campus

Juniors:

LAST DAYS

SENIOR PORTRAITS

Friday 21st
Mon.—Wed. Next Week
Ariel Office Lower Billings

Gym Improvement

Continued from p. 31

use of the gym (like posting the open hours). It seems to me that in a subtle way athletics are discouraged at UVM, or at least not encouraged.

If true, this thinking should be changed immediately. There are enough people here that realize college does not stop at the end of class or when the bars close. Try to count the joggers on any day. You might be surprised.

One million dollars is not an abundance of money (you can't buy an average major league baseball player for that much) considering all that needs to be done. These funds will have to be used wisely if UVM is to get optimum results from the project at hand. And maybe even a couple of new basketballs.

Garry Vreeland

Continued from p. 30

if you make a mistake, there will be someone down at the other end you can rely on to make the save," said team captain Courtney Jenkins. "This enables us to play a little less conservatively, giving us more freedom in our attack." This aspect of a goal tender's job is Vreeland's strongest point, said Jenkins.

Last year Vreeland was ranked tenth in the nation for his save-to-shot percentage, and this year should see an improvement. "He is quick, agile, and very knowledgable about the game," praises Coach Rick Farnham. "His ability alone will keep us in many games." Assistant coach Brooks Mohrman adds, "Garry is the best goalie I've ever played for or against. He is strong in the goal, which is important in our games, but also important in practice where it helps our offense to shoot against a goalie better than they will see in a real game." The general consensus on Vreeland is expressed by high school and college teammate John Combias, "When Garry is on, he is the best goalie around."

Athletic Ticket Books

Applications for ticket books for the 1978-79 hockey and basketball games are available upon request at the Athletic Ticket Office, 206 Patrick Gym. The forms are not being mailed to all returning students this year, so you must let the Ticket Office know if you would like to reserve a book for next year. The telephone number is 656-4410.

The home game schedule lists 13 hockey and 14 basketball contests. In hockey, Harvard, Boston University, Providence, and UNH are among the teams coming in; and in basketball you'll see Niagara, Oregon, Delaware, and UConn, among others. It looks to be an exciting season with more games at home — a total of 27, compared to this year's 22.

The best news is that the price will be the same: $25.00 for the season book. The price per game will be $2.00 for students, so the coupon book represents a huge saving.

This offer is for fulltime students, either graduate or undergraduate, only.

Reserve your book now with a $5.00 deposit or payment in full, and plan to pick it up at Registration in the Fall. Notify the Athletic Ticket Office by calling 656-4410 or send a note to 206 Patrick Gym.

Baseball Slow Start

Continued from page 25

saying things don't get any easier for Vermont. "UConn and Rhode Island will be tough. All in all, I was pleased with the way we came back, but the sign of a good team is winning the one run ball games. We have lost three of them so far. By the end of the year we hope to win a few of those tight ones. I think we will."

The costly mistake that cost Vermont the game was caused by a crucial communication breakdown. St. Lawrence executed a double steal with runners on first and third. Bill McAlduff came up throwing toward second base without having any idea that he could easily tag out the man coming from third. In this case, none of the Vermont infielders indicated to McAlduff that the runner was coming home. Subsequently the run scored. and Vermont was unable to make up the difference.

In the final analysis, it appears that Vermont has a pitching staff equal to that of any team on their schedule. Segale and Meyer appear to be the backbone of the group along with J. B. McCarthy. If the Vermont pitchers continue to perform as solidly as they did vs. St. Lawrence, the Cats will be a contender in every game.

Vermont's hitting is very questionable at this point. Two St. Lawrence hurlers fooled the Cat lineup with a combination of control fastballs and off-speed pitches. But Vermont still has hitting potential. So far the only batsmen that have shown any consistency of offense have been Ed Barry, Jim Smullen and Mike Pash. The rest of the team's hitting performance has been dismal and must turn around if Vermont is to crack into the win column.

Intramural Notes

FOUL SHOOTING CONTEST WINNERS —
Donna Morale 43/50; Valerie Parks 41/50; Barb Douglas 30/50.

MALE FOUL SHOOTING WINNERS
Bruce Donovan 44/50; Ken Lahanas 44/50; Randy Briggs 42/50.

MEN'S TENNIS RESULTS
Streudels over B Pac 10-5, 14-7; A. Busch over Rock Bottom 12-2, 13-4.
A. Busch over Streudels 7-13, 12-10, 15-12.

WOMEN'S TENNIS RESULTS
Hot Chitts over Bandits 15-10, 15-11; Wilder over Chris Critters 15-11, 15-3; Hot Chitts over Wilder 15-13, 12-14, 8-6.

WOMEN'S TENNIS DOUBLES
T. Chung/Wales

MEN'S TENNIS DOUBLES
Berson/Levin

Sports This Week

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Softball | April 21 (Fri) | GREEN MTN. (2 games) | Burlington | 2:00 |
| Outdoor Track — Men | April 21 (Fri) | at Boston College Relays | Chestnut Hill, MA | 9:00 |
| Baseball — Men | April 21 (Fri) | at UConn | Away | 3:00 |
| Softball | April 22 (Sat) | at Lyndon St. (2 games) | Lyndon, Vt. | TBA |
| Baseball — Men | April 22 (Sat) | at URI | Away | 1:00 |
| Lacrosse — Women | April 22 (Sat) | MIDDLEBURY | Burlington | 11:00 |
| Lacrosse — Men | April 22 (Sat) | Connecticut | Away | 2:00 |
| Outdoor Track — Women | April 22 (Sat) | at Boston College Relays | Chestnut Hill, MA | 9:00 |
| Rugby — Men | April 22 (Sat) | A Team vs. Westmount | Burlington | 1:00 |
| Rugby — Men | April 22 (Sat) | B Team vs. Johnson | Away | 10:00 |
| Outdoor Track — Men | April 22 (Sat) | MAINE | Burlington | TBA |
| Golf | April 22 (Sat) | at Plattsburgh St. | Plattsburgh, NY | 1:00 |
| Softball | April 24 (Mon) | NORWICH | Burlington | 3:30 |
| Lacrosse — Men | April 24 (Mon) | NORWICH | Burlington | 4:00 |
| Tennis — Men | April 24 (Mon) | MIDDLEBURY | Burlington | 3:00 |

National Sports Briefs

Forsch Records First No-hitter

Bob Forsch pitched the first no hit game of the major leagues on Sunday as the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0. This was the first no-hitter in a St. Louis ballpark since Jesse Haines left the Boston Braves hitless on July 17, 1924. Forsh, recording his third consecutive victory this season, let on only three base runners on two walks and an error. The Cardinal pitcher struck out three to boost St. Louis' record to 5-4.

Texan Confidence

Despite the Texas Ranger's slow start this season, manager Billy Hunter and owner Brad Corbett are confident their team can end Kansas City's two year reign of the American League West.

Hunter believes the Rangers have the best talent in the league and admits he will have no excuses if the Rangers don't capture the division title. Corbett has not spared a dime this season in collecting a number of skilled athletes. Of the thirteen players who provide the Texas strength, ten have been signed through Corbett's efforts. Doyle Alexander, Bert Campaneris, Richie Zisk and Al Loiver are just a few of the men Corbett has added to the Texas roster. People in the area refer to the Rangers as the second best team money can buy. Boston fans are well aware of who holds first.

Player Repeats

Gary Player did it again. He won the Tournament of Champions at Carlsbad, California this week after coming from seven shots behind first place to end with a total of 281. No one came close to catching him this time as he won the 45,000 dollar first prize purse and walked away the first man in more than a year to win consecutive titles on the American Tour. Player made a last minute surge last week to capture the Masters in Augusta, Georgia. Player's 16 year old son is rumored to be able to drive farther than his father.

Rodgers Wins Boston Marathon

Bill Rodgers won the eighty-second Boston Marathon Monday in a near record time of two hours, ten minutes and thirteen seconds, only two seconds ahead of quickly closing Jeff Wells. Wells moved from sixth place to second in the last few miles of the race. Rodger's time was only 18 seconds slower than the record of 2:09:55 he set in taking this race in 1975. He dropped out after seventeen miles last year suffering from dehydration in the 77 degree weather. The 46 degree forecast conditions this year were ideal for the record field of 4,700. An emergency field hospital was set up to take care of the great number of casualties. Most of the dropouts needing assistance were suffering from foot problems or dehydration.

Golf Sign Up

Students interested in joining the UVM Varsity Golf team for the fall season are asked to sign up at Patrick Gym, Room 202, prior to leaving campus this spring.

All golf team tryouts must be held this fall.

Arrangements for try-outs will be made at the Burlington Country Club. Assigned time will be ready when students return in the fall.

All major collegiate play is scheduled for the fall.

Best tilt of the day!

Good times are great times for the easy taste of

Budweiser®

KING OF BEERS® • ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC • ST LOUIS

Random Notes

Women in Medicine

"I've decided not to apply to medical school because I just cannot imagine being a doctor and also raising a family."

Any premed student might have made this statement, but more usually, it is a woman who struggles with the notion of how to be a physician as well as fulfilling other life roles. Balancing roles is not the only concern of young women who plan to be doctors.

Three physicians from the Burlington area will be discussing some of their perceptions of women in medicine at an informal seminar scheduled for Wednesday, April 26th at 7:30 p.m. in the Alumni House livingroom. The evening program is open to all interested persons and is sponsored by the Premedical/Predental Advising Office.

Undergraduate women who are planning to apply to medical school are encouraged to attend. This will be a good opportunity to learn more about medical education and the profession.

Joe Pass Rescheduled

The Joe Pass concert originally scheduled for Thursday, April 20th has been rescheduled for Friday, May 5. The original tickets will be used for the May 5th performance. The Lane Series regrets any inconvenience this change may cause. For further information, call the Lane Series at 656-3418.

Clamshell Coffeehouse

On Friday, April 28, in Billings North Lounge at 7:00 p.m., there will be a benefit coffeehouse for the Clamshell Alliance, the principle organizers behind the Seabrook nuclear power plant occupation. The program will feature local musicians and possibly a film about Seabrook. People who are interested in performing or helping with publicity or refreshments should call Eric at 658-0876.

Women's Day

Women's Day Sat. April 22 Billings 10 a.m. – 6 p.m.

The UVM Women's Organization and the UVM Women's Referral Center will sponsor a Woman's Day on Saturday, April 22 in Billings Student Center. The activities, including discussions, movies, poetry reading, and an exhibition of art work, will begin at 10:00 a.m. and end at 6:00 p.m. Free child care will be provided.

The Women's Referral Center is a newly-organized resource center for women located on the Third Floor balcony of Billings. It is a center for women, a place where the women students of UVM can come for referral, relaxation, and conversation with other women. Also the Center has literature concerning pertinent women's issues. The Center is open from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. on Friday. So everyone come to the celebration of Womanhood on Saturday, April 22, and visit us at the Center, 3rd floor Billings or give us a call at x4055. See the calendar for a detailed schedule of events.

Presenting an Itinerant Fool

UVM's College of Education Mainstream Project proudly presents Ken Feit, "an itinerant fool," Friday, April 21, 7:30 – 10:00 p.m. at UVM's Living/Learning Center in Commons 115. The topic is "The Fool and his Vision" with use of mime, puppetry, sound poetry, masks, folktales, music and children's stories. The reason is to celebrate life, wonder, differences in people, and hope. It is open to the public, and there is no charge. For more information contact Connie Leean, College of Education and Social Services (UVM), 656-4377.

Fight the Racist Bakke Decision!

The Bakke Decision, claiming reverse discrimination, wipes out the gains of the Civil Rights movement of the 60's in which affirmative action programs ensuring employment, college admissions and financial aid to minorities, women and low income people were won. Nationwide, students are resisting this attack. Come to a rally Friday, April 21, from 11 to 2 on the Green, UVM main campus, in support of National Anti-Bakke Day.

Songs – Talks – Activities. Come learn more about this injustice and join us in standing up against this attack on all of us. Also Friday, April 21 at 7:30 p.m. in 216 L/L will be the showing of the movies Gary Tyler Must Be Free and One Nation, Many People.

English Honors Offered

The English Department, in accordance with a recommendation approved by the Arts College in 1963, is offering its majors a chance to be graduated with Departmental Honors. Those interested in trying for such honors are invited to take a three hour comprehensive exam in English and American literature to be offered at the English Department Seminar Room (319 Old Mill) on Saturday morning, April 22. The questions are designed so that they may be answered with little regard to the particular courses a major has taken.

In approving this option of comprehensive departmental exams the faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences provided a broad route to Honors as an alternative to the narrower year-long specialized study called College Honors, which concentrates on an author or a concept under the guidance of a selected faculty member. UVM pioneered in such studies during the nineteenth century; many other universities now offer such an option to seniors. In addition to Departmental Honors and College Honors, superior performance in all one's courses leads to graduation "with honors" – cum laude, magna cum laude, or summa cum laude. Thus, honors are available to those who do well broadly (Departmental Honors), deeply (College Honors or Special Honors) or in all work (cum laude).

Bluegrass Workshop

There will be a bluegrass workshop with Gordon Stone (formerly of Pine Island), Andy Saccher (of Shady Grove) and Francois Gomot (of Red Clover Bluegrass), Monday, May 1 at 7:30 p.m. in C170 Living/Learning Center. Bring your instruments or just come and listen. It is presented by the Vermont Folk Music Society. For information call Paul 656-4258.

Summer Nature Workshops

Study natural science for teacher re-certification credits, for student college credits, or a good time for adult budding naturalists.

Choose from two sessions, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday, for two weeks: June 19 through 30, or August 14 through 25.

For information and fees, write the Green Mountain Audubon Nature Center, P.O. Box 68, Huntington, Vermont 05462 or call 434-3068.

Plan Ahead

The UVM Outing Club will be doing inventory the week of April 24–29. In order to have all the equipment in for that week, NO equipment will be lent out for the weekend of April 22–23, or for the week of April 24–29.

However, we do need help that week to do our inventory. If you haven't already helped the Outing Club, or if you would like to do some more work, please come down and help out.

Spring Duds Modeled

Want to know what to wear for spring? Come see "Spring Threads," a fashion show sponsored by the Fashion Program to be held in 115 Commons at the Living/Learning Center. At 7:00 – 8:00 on Wednesday, April 26 there will be a social hour with the show starting at 8:00 p.m. Fashions from Michael Kehoe, Wild 'n Wooley, Kado Clothes, Pavillion, Bertha Church, and Mills & Greer will be featured along with Gladstone Shoes and make-up by I cosmetics.

Don't miss seeing your friends modeling some great styles and come enjoy the refreshments, etc.

Come look at us, we'll be looking for you!

Going Our Way?

Come see Lou Borie's beautiful slides of his "Bike Trip through Europe." 8 p.m., Sunday, April 23. Fireplace Lounge L/LC.

SunDay Celebration

As you may know by now, May 3 is going to be a national day of solar energy recognition. The VT Sun Day Committee will be coordinating a photography exhibit for the week of May 6–9. Individuals of the Burlington area are invited to submit any number of photographs showing man's relationship to the sun, shots of the sun, or functional solar installations. (These may include windmills, solar panels or Geodesic domes and so on.) The photographs should be mounted preferably with a finished size of 11 x 14 or 8 x 10. Each photograph should also have the artist's name, address and phone number appearing on the back.

The exhibit will include as many of the entries as possible as judged by the SunDay Art Committee. It will be displayed in downtown Burlington during the SunDay celebration. Entries may be left at the L/LC photolab, 218 Commons by April 28. For further information, contact Celeste Philbrick, 864-4370.

The Messiah is Coming

Handel's Messiah Parts II and III will be performed on Sunday evening, April 16th at eight o'clock in St. Paul's Cathedral by the Burlington Oratorio Society.

Prof. Francis Weinrich, of the Dept. of Music, will direct, and John Henzel, Director of Music of the First Congregational Church of Burlington, will be the organist.

Soloists will be: sopranos, Arlene Jarvis and Dana Mann; altos, Prof. Janet Brown and Mary Yates; tenor, Gary Towne; and Prof. Philip Kitcher, bass.

Admission charge is $2.00; students and senior citizens, $1.00. Tickets may be obtained at Bailey's Music Rooms or at the Cathedral.

Greenthumb Alert

All aspects of spring gardening will be featured on the Wednesday, April 26 edition of Consumer Hotline. University of Vermont Extension Service Specialists will provide helpful hints on the call-in program that is produced in cooperation with Vermont ETV. Among the topics to be explored will be selecting seeds and fertilizers, transplanting, frost caps, and early garden care; buying and planting small fruits such as strawberries, blueberries, and raspberries for the home garden; planting information for apple and pear trees; and information on shrubs and plants to landscape the home. The program guests are Ted Flanagan, Extension Gardening Specialist; Joe Costante, Extension Small Fruit Specialist; and Norm Pellett, Extension Ornamental Horticulturist.

Barbara Mair, Program Coordinator for Business and Industry Educational Services for the Extension Service, will moderate the live one-hour telecast and take viewers' calls that can be dialed direct to the panel at 655-1100. The program can be seen on all Vermont ETV channels at 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday, April 26.

Folk Dance Cancelled

The UVM Folk Dance Club will not meet this Friday, April 21 because many of its members will be at a folk dance festival in Boston.

Symbols, Myths, and Rituals

The UVM Society for Parapsychological Research meets Monday, April 24, 4:30 – 6:00 in 115 Commons, Living/Learning Center. Guest will be Ken Feit. Topic is New Symbols, Myths and Rituals. Open to all.

Home Ec. Honors

Attention all Home Economics majors: Your Honors Day program is 7 p.m. Sunday, April 23 in Billings North Lounge. Family and friends are welcome. Refreshments will be served following the program.

Can We Live With It?

Research associate Justin Brande of the University of Vermont Environmental Program will show the recently produced film Lake Champlain: Can We Live With It? at a special session of a binational symposium on environmental and natural resources scheduled for April 10-12 at the University of New Hampshire in Durham. The special session on transboundary environmental problems is expected to call attention to the Champlain–Richelieu issue in Vermont and Quebec, according to Brande, who will lead a discussion on the Champlain-Richelieu lake level and flooding issue. Both discussion and film (produced by Vermont ETV and the UVM Environmental Program with assistance from the Vermont Council on the Humanities and Public Issues) will take place on Wednesday morning (April 12) from 8 to 10 at the New England Center for Continuing Education on the UNH campus.

The symposium is sponsored by the University of New Hampshire's Institute of Natural and Environmental Resources in cooperation with the New England Center for Continuing Education.

Sedgefield®

With the Built-in Edge.

I used to be a Levi's blue jeans man

You know what it's like. You bought them because it seemed that was what everybody was doing.

But, I never liked the fit. And the way they would shrink! I never knew what size to buy. Always guessing.

Then they would wrinkle and pucker and twist in the leg and take forever to get soft. That was the pits.

Some friends told me about Sedgefield. Crazy name for a jean, I thought.

They said it really fits — lean and clean like a jean should. That it does not shrink out of size or wrinkle or pucker or twist in the leg.

More, it gets softer faster and wears like a tough jean should while it's smooth and easy on my bod. How could I resist?

Now I'm a Sedgefield man. Everything they said is true. Sedgefield says if the jean does not live up to its promises, they give you your money back or replace the jean. That's fair.

So now they say Levi's has a jean that acts almost like my Sedgefield jeans. But it's one third polyester. Who needs that plastic junk? It's fine for picnic cups and baby pants, but any jean that goes on my body has got to be cotton — all cotton. Sedgefield fits the bill just fine.

That's why now, I'm a Sedgefield man. Funny how things change.

Shepard & Hamelle

THE MAN'S STORE

24 Church St., Burlington

Open Mon. & Fri. Evenings

CALENDAR Apr 21-27

Saturday

9 a.m. – 9:30 p.m., Creative Expression Medium, L/L Center, 115 Commons, with Ken Feit. Pre-registration required, $15 (or $5 per three hour time block). Tel. 656-4377.

9 a.m., Women's Outdoor Track, UVM at Boston College Relays.

11 a.m., Women's Lacrosse, Middlebury at UVM.

1 p.m., Baseball, UVM at Rhode Island (two seven-inning games).

1 p.m., Golf, UVM at Plattsburgh State.

2 & 8 p.m., "The Importance of Being Earnest," Royall Tyler Theatre. See April 21 listing.

2 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, UVM at Connecticut.

7 p.m., IRA films double feature, "Hamlet" and "The Sunshine Boys," Southwick Gym, admission one dollar.

8 p.m., Synchro Sampler, Forbush Pool. Children & students $1. Adults $1.50.

WOMEN'S DAY

10:00 – 6:00, FREE Child Care.

10:00, Discussion "Equal Rights Amendment," Mary Ann Brennan, Champlain Valley NOW.

11:00, "Man's Lives" and "Growing Up Female" two movies examining sex stereotyping and the socialization process.

11:30, Women's poetry reading, Vermont women poets.

1:00, Discussion "Sexuality" Kaye Schumacher, UVM Counseling and Testing Center.

2:00, Discussion "Abortion" Abby Hall, Barbara Mayo, & Judy Gilbert, Planned Parenthood Women's Health Center.

3:00, Discussion "Women in the Workplace," Rita Hunt, C.E.T. Employment Advancement, Burlington Public Schools.

Tuesday

1 p.m., Golf, Middlebury at UVM.

3 p.m., Women's Lacrosse, UVM at Dartmouth.

6:30 p.m., Protestant Services at St. Anselm's Chapel.

8 p.m., Lane Series, "[illegible]," Flynn Theatre. Tickets prices are $7.50 and $4.50. Tel. 656-3480.

VPIRG Voter Registration – 10-4 in Library, dinner in McAuley Dining Hall.

Wednesday

12:15 p.m., Lunch bunch film, "The Universe," Church St. Center, admission free.

2 p.m., Men's Outdoor Track, State Meet at Middlebury.

2 p.m., Women's Outdoor Track, State Meet at Middlebury.

3:30 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, Massachusetts Maritime Academy at UVM.

3 p.m., Baseball, Middlebury at UVM.

3:30 p.m., Softball, UVM at Dartmouth (two games).

4:30 p.m., S.A. Film, "The [illegible]," Marsh Life Sciences, [illegible] admission [illegible], UVM ID free.

7:30 p.m., Discussion, "The [illegible] and Gay Civil Liberties," Church St. Center, with Frank Williams, Ted Hoffman, and [illegible], free.

8 p.m., Readers Theatre Program at L/L [illegible] Theatre, 114 Converse Hall, Director, [illegible], admission free.

Graffiti
Everybody Does It... But Who Takes the Credit?

By Diana Green and Randy McMullen

The words of the prophet are written on the subway wall
Simon and Garfunkle

While I was bending over trying to read a piece of graffiti that was hidden under the sink in the ladies room at Finbar's, an inquisitive young lady asked me "What are you doing?" Lifting my head and smiling at the thought of what this must look like, I shrugged my shoulders and told her that I was writing an article on graffiti. She then replied nonchalantly, "Oh yeah. Bathrooms bring out people's sexual frustrations."

Basically we found this to be true; people do write mostly about sex, but there are variations in how they treat this often crude, sometimes romantic obsession our society apparently has for sex. If it was not lascivious slanderings sprawled all over the walls in colors ranging from purple passion to dramatic red, it was something about politics, drugs, truisms, or personal threats.

Social etiquette and legality being what they are, made it impossible for a lady to enter a men's room, or a man to enter a ladies room (just think of all the havoc it would have created...) Thus, graffiti gathering was divided accordingly: a man for the men's rooms, a lady for the ladies rooms. Together we checked out all the major bathrooms in Burlington ranging from gas stations, hotels, restaurants, dormitories, and bars. All were unique in style and had their own personality. The dichotomies in our findings were limitless, in fact they were so different that we had to divide the graffiti into two categories: fittingly named ladies and men.

THE LADIES SCENE

There is a certain element involved with graffiti writing that makes people say the outrageous things they do and that is – privacy. The feeling of anonymity prevails while cooped up in a bathroom that provokes people to jot down weird ideas, political opinions, moral convictions, lover's names, and all kinds of unmentionables that one wouldn't even tell their best friend. This secrecy is the beauty of graffiti that makes it – shocking, corny, crude, clever, strange and completely unpredictable.

Of all the ladies rooms I visited, Finbar's takes the cake. The entire bathroom was covered from wall to wall with the most colorful, diverse, and provocative graffiti anywhere in town. There was a wide range of subject matter spreading from silly sayings like:

Better blatant than latent

Here I sit on the pooper giving birth to a New York state trooper.

How do you spell relief? P-I-S-S.

To sound advice and commentary on women's liberation such as:

Women unite against fascist male machos.

If you are drunk, don't let any male assholes pick you up because you'll be as much of an asshole.

Not all women here were active feminists; there were a few lines on the walls that were sexist too, like the woman who wrote,

Show me a man who likes to fool around and I'll show you the man I love.

Undoubtedly this Mae West type comment rallied the minds of all women libbers, who have read the while relieving themselves on Finbar's facilities.

There were also a fair number of women who expressed an urgent need to get out of Burlington, and soon would not be quick enough. Apparently some people think that the folks here in Burlington are pretty "weird," and after reading all the graffiti around town, I can see how people get this impression. Generally, however, Finbar's had an entertaining bathroom with creativity oozing from all sides. A poetic quote like this demands a chuckle:

Oh Louise, you make me sneeze, I'd like to squeeze your buns.

Bars like B.T. McGuires, Hannibals, Nector's, and Last Chance had very little graffiti which came as a real surprise, though I am convinced this is not accidental. There are many ways in which bars discourage graffiti writing in the stalls, namely, wallpaper, dark colored paint, or a periodic application of paint. These methods are helpful, but nothing will stop the hardcores. Like the lady at Hannibal's who desperately scribbled:

Give me drugs!

and the feminist at Nector's pleading:

Screw men – come on women – there are lots of us – let's get together.

These women deserve credit; it must not have been easy to be alone in the struggle to keep the fine art of graffiti alive amidst growing defensive efforts.

The Fresh Ground Coffeehouse graffiti produced a collage effect placing their graffiti writers in a league all their own. An obvious deduction could be made about the women who have eaten at Fresh Ground (at least the ones who use the bathrooms anyway): they are either witty and off-the-wall, discouraged heterosexuals, or active men-haters. The variety here was by far the best; there was nothing run-of-the-mill about Fresh Ground which made for an odd but amusing reading experience, as illustrated by this excerpt:

Andy Griffith sucks sideways. and

Why are there so many gay men in this town? And this fierce retort

Because they know what's good for them!

The next stop was Neutral Grounds, whose graffiti was nearly the antithesis of that at Fresh Grounds. Neutral Grounds had a lot of graffiti considering it had just been painted a week before our arrival. For the most part the graffiti read like younger girls that were generally jealous and vindictive, and a few girls who were experiencing the tragic "pains of love." All graffiti here had a personal touch to it, especially the snarls that seemed pointed and damned frightening too. Like these:

watch out if you know what's good for you.

This is Queen speaking; I love Guy so watch out!

These threats could be taken as a warning to any of you ladies out there who think you've got your man all for yourself, don't count on it. The cruelest of them all – which should make any women think twice before going to Neutral Grounds with a guy – is this:

S.W. & E.C.... Don't count on it sweetheart!

I know this made me flinch a little. Leaving Neutral Ground was a relief – I was afraid that any minute some chick was going to ask me to step outside.

We then traveled up the road a piece to Sullivan's. After a few jokes with the bartender we descended the stairs and into the stalls. The graffiti here was unequivocally the least imaginative, but nonetheless there were a few good cornballs, you know, soupy and sentimental like:

Remember Yesterday, Enjoy Today, Dream of Tomorrow.

The epitome of Sullivan's cliched style is in this touching poem written by someone named Sandy:

While I am going
Nobody knows
The wind blows
The sea turns
And nobody knows.

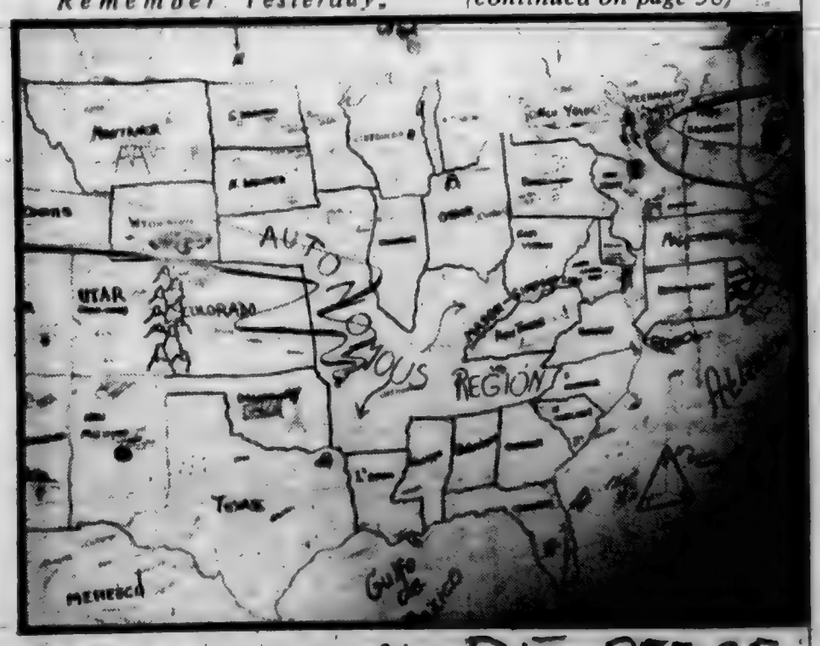
This makes ya just wanna cry, don't it?

I then proceeded on a solo expedition up to UVM's campus in search of zesty, hilarious, and collegiate type graffiti only to find a slim amount of mediocre quality. Much to my dismay, the women, for the most part, painted and decorated their dormitories instead of scrawling graffiti all over the doors, walls, and ceilings like the men did. After walking through numerous unblemished hallways and bathrooms I came up with only a few bits and pieces that did

(continued on page 38)



Give To Mental Health Or I'll Kill You!

Photos by Rob Swanson

I'D Rather have a bottle Labatt In Front of me Than a frontal Lobotomy!

MAN WAS MADE BEFORE WOMAN. God KNEW THE IMPORTANCE OF A ROUGH DRAFT.

Women Women Women

May 5 & 6, 1978
Burlington, Vermont

Catalysts
Psychologist, Phyllis Chesler
Author, Rita Mae Brown
Songwriter, Margie Adam
IN CONCERT

REGISTER NOW
There is limited space. If you are requesting day care you must pre-register.

Friday
8:30 Registration
9:45 Rita Mae Brown lecture: "The Women's Movement: Where Are We Today?"
1:00 Phyllis Chesler lecture: "The Impact of Feminism on Female Psychology."
3:30 Workshops, concessions, gallery and films begin
8:00 Concert by Margie Adam

Saturday
8:30 Registration
Workshops by Vermont facilitators, concessions, gallery and films begin
10:00 Workshop by Rita Mae Brown, "Success: The Double Edged Sword"
2:00 Workshop by Margie Adam, "Women and Culture"

Tickets $25 for both days, $15 per day
Additional information from The Creamery Educational Foundation, Box 367, Shelburne, Vermont, 05482 or at Kado Gifts & The Bookstacks

Name _____
Address _____
_____
_____
Telephone _____

Return coupon and make checks payable to
The Creamery Educational Foundation, Box 367, Shelburne, Vermont, 05482

_____ Enclosed is my check for _____ Fri. _____ Sat
_____ Yes I will need day care for _____ child/children _____ years old. (6 mos.-9 years only)

Graffiti

Continued From Page 37

not amount to much. The best I found were these:

Stalin sucks.

Just one more drink, and

Some times it is an advantage to be disadvantaged.

Even Billings, which I assumed would be the haven for graffiti maniacs, had absolutely nothing. Nada. By now my head was hanging low, and the apathy of UVM's women's efforts in graffiti was a great disappointment to me. I decided to bag it and go home.

As I headed down College Street I felt Waterman beckoning for me to check out the women's bathroom; it was a queer feeling considering that Waterman is an administrative and somewhat sterile building. I would never have imagined in my wildest dreams that Waterman would have a speck of graffiti, yet it had the most. Alas, there was still hope for the women at UVM. The graffiti here was not just a few lightly written lines like,

Biology sucks, or I hate school.

No way. The graffiti here was powerful. Written in light green magic marker was:

Women need men like fish need bicycles.

Following this provocative statement were many demanding and straight-forward questions aimed at women everywhere.

Don't you have any goals or inspirations?

Why are there so few great women?

This approach in graffiti is intended to urge women to unite, get moving, and to be something. A bathroom is an ideal place to politic, advertise, or philosophize. There is no surer way to reach your public than while sitting on the john: a captive audience. Not all of Waterman's graffiti was righteous and demonstrative though. There were some crude remarks too. Women are by no means noble and dignified all the time; on the contrary, very often women are downright vulgar and comments like this are not at all uncommon:

There ain't nothin' like a good fuck.

THE MEN'S SCENE

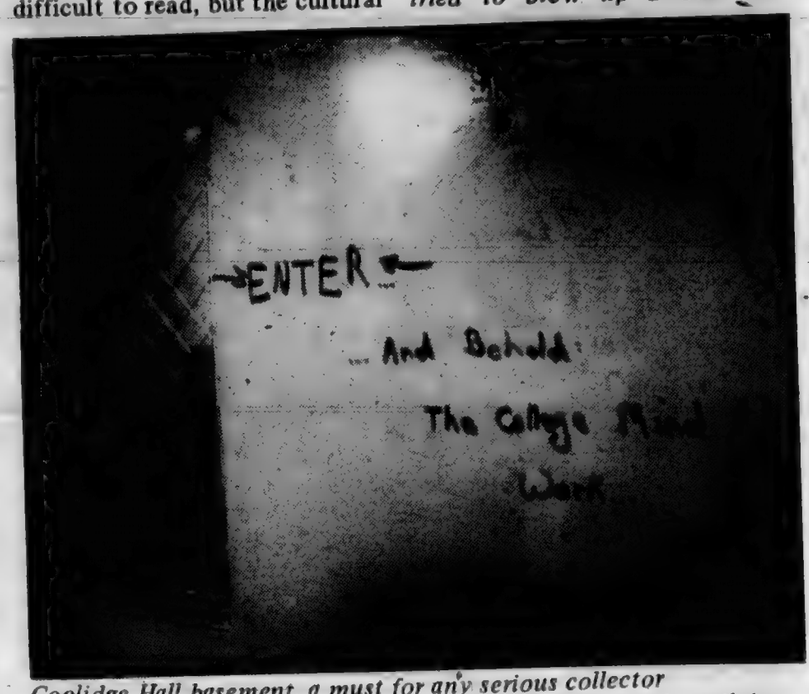
What is most noticeable about male-oriented graffiti – contrasted to that written by their female counterparts – is its lack of sensitivity and concern. Male graffiti is blunt, not particularly compassionate, and is hardly aimed at promoting the unification of the male species.

Yet there is a sense of comradeship buried within the political misgivings, the philosophical lamentations, and the sexual innuendos. The key to that comradeship seems to be humor and cynicism, the joy of sharing those things which one would be too embarrassed to share within a public domain. Within each man there is a little boy, and he still laughs at the things we outwardly consider immature and stupid. But when we are safely hidden behind bathroom stalls or telephone booths, that little boy's emotions become very much alive.



Childishness and simplicity seemed prevalent at the Fresh Ground Coffeehouse, where one of the most noticeable and well-centered pieces of graffiti reads:

Don't forget to wipe your ass, folks!

Other writings at the Coffeehouse are not so helpful. Some rather nasty comments concerning the restaurant's owner are slightly overrun by the musical/rhetorical question:

White boys like the reggae, eh?

All the graffiti at Fresh Ground are written amongst the oriental caricatures of a Chinese newspaper used to cover the walls. It is perhaps a little more difficult to read, but the cultural impact is astounding. The most interesting aspect of the Coffeehouse's graffiti, however, is the fact that more obscenities can be found outside the restroom (at the public telephone, where lesbianism seems to be the hot issue) than inside.

Coolidge Hall basement, a must for any serious collector

Finbars, which holds one of the most well-known and respected graffiti collections in greater Burlington, is certainly not lacking in vulgarities. The bar contains a lot of what I call callgirl graffiti (i.e. "for a good lay, call...") as well as a number of items pertaining to sexual practices and deviances. A couple of the more popular ones include:

Driving a Chevy is like fucking a dog, and Follow my ear and I'll blow you anywhere.

Finbars is unique in that it offers one of the few attempts at serious poetry I have ever seen in the restroom of a drinking establishment. The excerpt cited below demonstrates not only a noble mind, but a courageous spirit, for who knows how many bladder-laden souls stood waiting and threatening while the poem's writer staggered on:

Burlington flows in veins, antibiotic and toxin too as laughs and cries comprise goodbyes; sweet Burlington loves my being, as looking glasses reflect (semi) selves: dragging at lapels, tapping shoulders and wrinkling faces. Time ticks Burlingtime now (forever) more there must be (come) of some each well-defined personnage or moonshine casts eternal shadows, unwittingly afraid to die...

The Finbars restroom also had a receptive atmosphere. Many of those who had entered while I was graffiti-hunting offered to point out their own favorites. One man proudly showed me where he had the letter "A" in red, next to a piece that said "Hester Prynne still fucks," (all of which makes more sense if you have read Nathaniel Hawthorne's Scarlet Letter, a novel concerning adultery in the Puritan times).

Some of the major disappointments included The Windsor Lounge, Hannibuls, What Ales You, and even the Huntington Hotel (it was one in the morning and we were desperate). These places simply didn't have any graffiti. Other areas are scrubbed periodically or have recently been painted, as was the case with Neutral Grounds.

Sullivans, on North Winooski, has a fairly impressive supply of restroom wit. The graffiti there seems, for the most part, to thrive on the art of mockery. One of the lighter pieces there read:

Hear about the Pollak who tried to blow up a bus? He burned his lips on the tailpipe...

On the whole, downtown Burlington had less graffiti than I had hoped, and the same held true for the UVM campus. A good many of the dormitory bathrooms investigated had either colored stalls or tell-tale signs of scrubbing. Coolidge Hall, however, is a proud exception. The students there have produced a mind-boggling array of graffiti in many different forms. The basement alone has study rooms that are saturated with derelicted mathematical formulas (such as "Sex=F(un)," sexual vulgarity, Confucian gibberish, a picture of Mickey Mouse tripping, and a famous sketch of a prefrontally lobotomized pig.

Many of the walls in Coolidge are covered with colorful and carefully-done murals. Every summer, these murals are painted over, only to make way for the new and better ones that will come the following year. There is also the Pukette's list, which loudly announces each "Coolidgan" who has had the unfortunate experience of drinking too much and getting sick as a result.

The bathrooms in Coolidge are less artistic than the walls, but they more than atone for this with their exuberance. A lot of the graffiti is sex and drug oriented in content, and often there are political overtones:

UVM is not unlike a house of red lights; you pay to get fucked... Time is a waste of life, life is a waste of time, so have the time of your life and get wasted.

Coolidge also has a good amount of series graffiti, where one comment leads to another, and then to another, etc. These are often interesting because of the different attitudes and moods that go into the final product. Take this for example:

When we die, we wake up... then What's that supposed to mean, Bimbo?... and then, Well, what's your fuckin' problem today?... and so on.

Buckham Hall (first floor)

(continued on page 39)

Joffrey II: Future Stars

By Tricia John

The Lane Series has given UVM a lot of dance this season. After seeing the performances of the Stars of the American Ballet, the Eliot Feld dancers and, most recently, Joffrey II, it is difficult not to make comparisons among these companies. With Joffrey II (which attracted the largest audience), we saw perhaps the youngest and least polished dancers. Nevertheless, they showed vast potential not evident in Stars. While Stars may be the more polished company, they lacked the spontaneity and enthusiasm that the 16 dancers of Joffrey II exuded Saturday evening in Memorial Auditorium.

Eliot Feld combined maturity, imaginative choreography and a great deal of talent in a show which ranked far above the other two companies. Nevertheless, Joffrey provided an opportunity to see superb young dancers in good form. If there was a disappointment in their performance, it was the uninteresting choreography and unnecessary length, which made some dancers look fatigued as well as bored by the end of some dances.

The problem was most evident in the first two dances, "Scherzo" and "Continuo." In "Scherzo," the scanty bits of humor were constantly repeated. The dancing went nowhere, the beginning being almost identical to the end. The dancers were not well synchronized with each other, which was a typical problem in "Continuo," set to the well-known Canon of Johann Pachelbel. Costumes were flimsy, unimaginative things that should have been made into sprite Renaissance-looking outfits to suit the mood of the music. (Granted, Pachelbel was not a Renaissance composer – still the music carries that sort of courtly aura.) Nobody seemed to have a solid concept of this music; what drama there was was subdued by the lack of daring choreography. These dancers are good – and the spectacular dance feats they have mastered at this time should be exploited and not hidden behind some innocuous choreography that neither shows off the dancers' talent nor makes an aesthetically rich statement.

We then left these two disappointments for something a little more adventurous.

"If there was a disapointment in their performance, it was the uninteresting choreography and length, which made some dancers look fatigued as well as bored by the end of some dances."

"Boomfallera," with music by Carl Orff, at least gave us something to think about. The dancing was excellent, and while some people found the chanting of children's voices and blatant rhythmatic passages annoying and nervewracking, I liked what seemed to be a lovely depiction of the chaotic play of pastoral children. This sort of good-natured, idyllic play is probably more myth than reality in the actual games that modern children play with each other, but the dancers captured the free spirit beautifully and combined dancing and gymnastics to create a full and busy picture. And for the first time in the evening's performance, they didn't seem tired after the first five minutes.

More inspired dancing came with the Tzigane, or fast gypsy dance. The pas de deux featured Camilla Basden and Wesley Robinson – two dancers which I'm sure we'll be seeing more of. The beginning suffered some problems – poor footing and balance, for example. In fact some parts looked as though they had never rehearsed together. The last half was marvelous, however, as both proved to be super soloists, dancing with grace, strength and vitality. They set a warm and intimate mood, dancing in the end with control and confidence that won enthusiastic approval from the audience.

"The Incident at Blackbriar" was the most interesting of all the dances. Its Victorian motif was set against some very provocative music by William Sleator, and the effect was dramatic and well-danced, although a bit too long. The dancers moved carefully, articulately and each role contrasted well with the others.

The mother/daughter relationship was defined early in the dance, so much so that we could really predict the story. This seems to be a good quality in dance – when plots are somewhat obvious and not obfuscated by superfluous movements and symbols. The story of a Victorian mom (she is definitely not "in touch" with her body) losing her young, nubile daughter to a guy who keeps taking his shirt off seems simple and perhaps trite, but the dancers sapped every ounce of potential drama out of the situation to create a very fine scenario.

"Threads from a String of Swing" was not really welcome after "Blackbriar." The music may have pleased the over 50's crowd (Glenn Miller jazz) and the costumes may have pleased the over 30's crowd (1950's grease and bobby socks fare) but I was unimpressed by the eclecticism and enthusiastic but sloppy dancing. Oh well. It was an enjoyable evening at any rate.

Graffiti

Cont. From Page 38

also has an uninhibited graffiti-writing staff. They, however, have incorporated a special jargon known only to themselves and a punk rock band in New Jersey called the Ramones. Some of their key phrases include: "Bird is the word," (the word "bird" signifying a bong, here), "Aaahh... now I want to sniff some glue," and "Shay" (meaning "goodbye"). The graffiti on Buckham-first also occasionally shows some philosophical themes:

Did you ever stop to think that a chicken is only an egg's way of making another egg?

There is at times a sense of pride and discipline in the graffiti there. The words in one bathroom stall demanded:

Who is the disgusting pea-brained pig who keeps wiping his snot all over this stall? How would you like it if I came into your room and shit all over your pillow and wiped it in... I'll bet you pick your nose at the dinner table and wipe it under the tablecloth... This is not Buckham material...

Mason Hall deserves mention for the U.S. map that they have drawn onto the wall on the fifth floor, as well as a statement in a bathroom stall there that states:

Cloning must be considered a definite reality. How else could SAGA serve up the same shit day after day...?

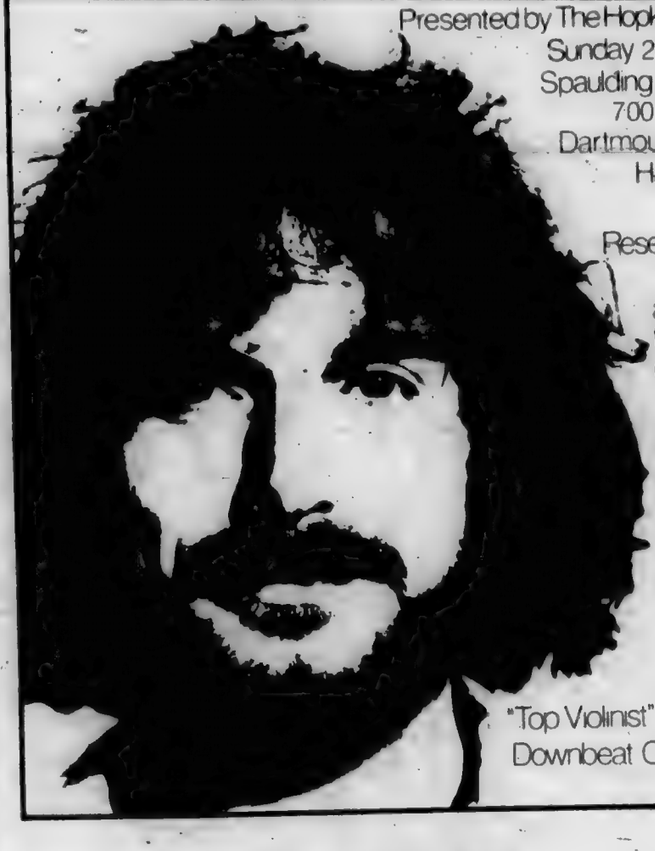
The third floor in Wilks also has a U.S. map, and of course the water tower is a healthy resource of graffiti, although the stuff there is really meant to signify the achievement of climbing the tower (and fooling UVM security). This is why the tower's graffiti consists mostly of initials and the like. It's something comparable to leaving a U.S. flag on the moon.

********



Thus while the graffiti supply on the UVM campus and greater Burlington is limited, there are enough samples to keep a collector busy straight through finals week. There are also some sources that we have obviously overlooked. The bus station, for example, is said to have some fine graffiti. But there, you'll find coin slots; and like every other over-popularized form of artistic expression, you have to pay to enjoy it.

free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333
DOMINO'S PIZZA

JEAN-LUC PONTY
& The Pat Metheny Group

Presented by The Hopkins Center
Sunday 23 April 1978
Spaulding Auditorium
7:00 & 10:00 pm
Dartmouth College
Hanover, NH

Reserved seats
$6.50
available at the Hopkins Center box office (603) 646-2422

"Top Violinist"
Downbeat Critics' Poll

Gambri's

DISCOTEQUE
NIGHTLY

Queen City Park Road
658-2161

TAKE ME OUT TO THE BALLGAME

Lots of people come into McCepp's Restaurant, and except for the Hawaiian shirt, are unable to tell McCepp from one of the customers. This Department is going to help you over that hurdle. McCepp looks like Babe Ruth.

That's right, folks. The Sultan of Swat and good old McCepp are look alikes. The Babe was a brawnier, more powerful individual, but then, he couldn't cook with the same flair and elan of a McCepp. The Babe was also unsuccessful in running a restaurant. He did not believe, for example, that folks should be able to order everything on the menu all day long. McCepp believes they should, and most of his customers agree. You'd be surprised how many omelets we sell for dinner.

But back to the Babe and McCepp. When McCepp was in the Hawaiian Little League, he held the season long record of 60 home runs. In recent years the number of games has been expanded, and McCepp's record broken by a tyke from West Honolulu. The lad looked strikingly like Roger Maris.

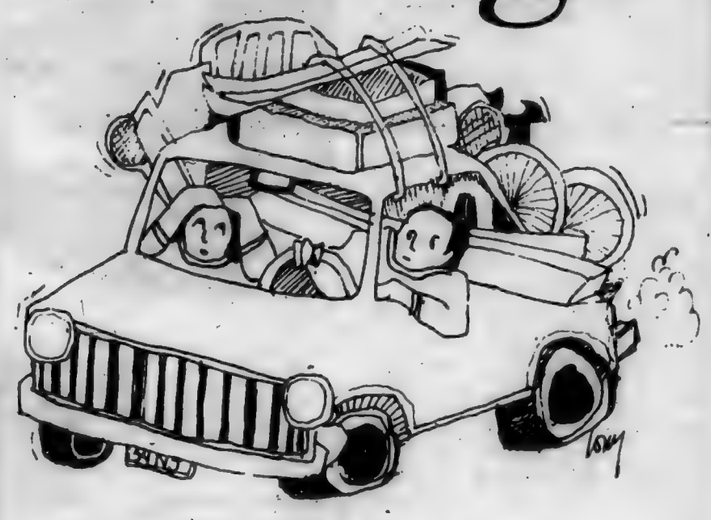
Early in his career McCepp converted from a hurler to the outfield. This gave him an opportunity to relax and think about the delicacies he would one day serve at McCepp's Restaurant (almost out the back door) in Burlington Square. Visions of Broiled Stuffed Pork Chops or Baked Haddock danced in his head. A fly ball fell at his feet. McCepp retired, and moved onto areas of greater aptitude.

Next time you're at the old ballgame, or watching the Sox on television, give a thought to the Babe. Then, after the game stroll on down to McCepp's, meet his double, and treat yourself to the tastiest meal in the whole Burlington restaurant lineup.

DINNER SERVED TILL MIDNIGHT

McCepp's

Burlington Square



Breakfast, lunch and dinner served all day

Student Summer Storage

trunks lofts lumber
bikes
rugs furniture
skis
boxes refrigerators
beds etc.

Free Pickup and Delivery Service

why shlep it home?

24 hour answering service
For more information call
Able Carpet - 864-0779

Confessions of a Dead Head

The Author SPS Photo by Don Cunningham

By Curtis Haynes

No one seems to know who coined the name "Dead Head," but thousands of fans across the U.S. and abroad proudly bear the title. Dead Heads come in all shapes and sizes, and are bound together by a common mania for this ancient (by rock standards) group. Never heard on AM radio, the Dead have retained an underground, grassroots aura which makes their fans all the more fanatic.

I was initiated as a "Head" in 1970, woefully later than the Dead's 1964-67 Haight-Ashbury days. Unlike most Dead Heads, I don't own 30 albums and 50 tapes of Dead music, though I've heard them all. Nor have I travelled 1,000 miles just to see the Dead. Nor do I stubbornly insist that the Dead are the greatest band forever and always. They are damned good musicians, something of a cultural curiosity, and well worth following.

I never truly appreciated the Dead's energy until my first concert in the spring of '73 at the Boston Garden; when the Dead get cooking, they have no equal. The Dead cranked out five hours of their best rocking tunes which kept the audience jumping, gyrating, and joyful. Jerry "Captain Trips" Garcia stood still grinning crazily and ripped licks with speed and precision. Bob "Ace" Weir easily proved himself as the world's supreme rhythm guitarist; and Phil Lesh held the music together with well chosen bass patterns. Small wonder an old roommate used to worship Garcia, Weir, and Lesh as the Holy Trinity!

Drummer Bill Kruetzman has never won great praise, and admittedly he is only adequate to good. The Dead's original drummer, Mickey Hart, left the band after his father, then the Dead's manager, absconded with the group's hard-earned money. But Hart has been back since, and his percussion is an asset; he taught Kruetzman everything he knows. Perhaps the saddest story in Dead annals is Pigpen's (Ron McKiernan). The Pig, renowned for his organ and raunchy vocals, drained too many bottles of Jack Daniel's and joined the ranks of Hendrix and Morrison. To replace Pigpen, the Dead took on Keith Godchaux for piano and his wife, Donna, as vocalist-earth mother.

The Dead's music is diverse, to say the least. Starting out as a premier acid-rock band, ("St. Stephen," "The Other," "Dark Star," etc.) the Dead moved on to a more polished, country-style ("Sugar Magnolia," "Casey Jones," "Uncle John's Band," etc.) and lately seemed to have mellowed into Jazz-Rock ("Unbroken Chain," "Terrapin Station," etc.) Like any group, the Dead go through changes, and necessarily so. Fans shout for "Johnny B. Goode" and "Me and My Uncle" while the Dead present new, less ecstatic compositions. The diversity is often refreshing as too many of the standard Dead songs have been played into the ground. ("Friend of the Devil," "Truckin'," "Goin' Down the Road," etc.).

Some people see the Dead as has-beens, holdovers from the halcyon 60's. I have a hard time defending their latest stuff, but "Europe '72," "Skull and Roses," "Workingman's Dead," and "American Beauty" speak for themselves. The group has not been tight for the last five years — Weir formed his own band "Kingfish," Garcia toured with Merle Saunders, and the Godchauxs cut an LP on their own. Nonetheless, the potential is there; I've seen and heard it.

WHAT TO EXPECT AT A DEAD CONCERT

The Dead's talent is awesome. Their repertoire of outstanding numbers, both original and adapted, can easily cover six hours. The UVM concert, however, is part of their first tour in a while, so they may be a bit rusty. I've seen five Dead concerts and rate two of them excellent, two fair, and one disappointing; my fingers are crossed. The Dead are somewhat unpredictable and, ultimately, it will be up to the audience to cheer the band into rocking tunes (the Dead's specialty). So get psyched and do your head some good! Don't be afraid to dance because you won't be able to stop once the music starts.

I'm expecting a communal

(continued on page 45)

Photos by Rob Swanson

By Susan Hobson

When was the last time you saw a drawing in glass? Chances are it has been a long time. That is, if you haven't seen Edward Owre's current exhibit at the Fleming Museum.

Owre's exhibit consists of many different sizes and shapes of glass. Some are sand blasted, others are color tinted. But they all have one element in common – they reflect the "obvious mystical quality that glass has."

Through his "Drawings in Glass," Owre presents lines as basic elements of drawing and investigates how they relate dependently and interdependently with one another. Examining the drawings, one becomes aware of the variety and richness of line. No line is the same – each is influenced by the type and age of the glass and its relation to the wall or support or position in the room.

In the center of the second room of the exhibit stands a particularly intriguing "drawing." Arranged like a series of dominoes, many sheets of glass lean together, perfectly balanced. Looking closely, one can see that the central sheet of glass lies exactly over the main line running through the museum. Many of the works have unique qualities that would be impossible to capture with any other medium.

If you think that glass is only used for drinking beer or keeping the rain out, stop in at the Fleming Museum. "Drawings in Glass" will be running through Friday, April 21st.

Pat Metheny

A Little April Joy- Live at Hunt's

By Vaune Davis

It is difficult to say what Pat Metheny is better at – playing the guitar or leading a quartet. The twenty-three year old jazz guitarist/composer showed such a clear understanding of both musical mediums last Thursday at Hunt's that it was truly an outstanding performance.

Metheny still has the light, lyrical feel he developed while touring with vibraphonist Gary Burton, yet his style is unlike any of his contemporaries. Using an unusually tuned (all high E strings) twelve-string guitar, he created an intricate sound, almost like chimes, in several tunes. During "San Lorenzo," for example, he brought out all the darkest hues with this technique. And although he plays quickly at times, he never sounded like he was just skittering over the neck of his guitar as fast as he could go. Indeed, one of the most striking characteristics of Metheny's style is the attention and clarity he gives to each individual note – no sound is just in passing.

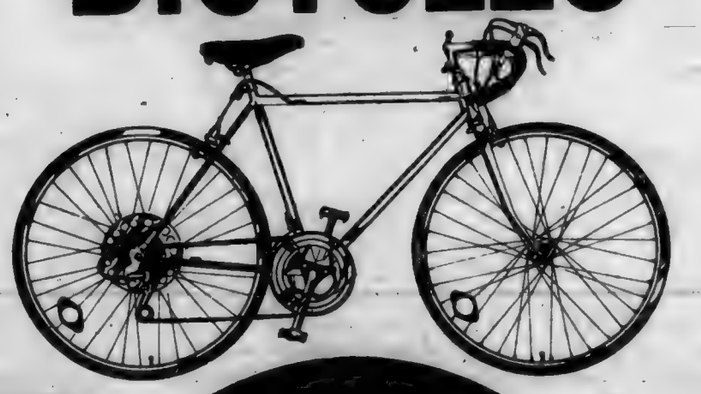
The Pat Metheny Quartet has been together eleven months which was overwhelmingly evident during their last set. Without sounding like they had practiced and memorized each other's solos, they anticipated the directions each musician was taking and built on each idea without playing in each other's way. During "Bright Size Life," Metheny and bassist Mark Egan started playing back and forth to each other, adding to the other's concepts and driving the tune to an incredible height that was never captured on Metheny's first ECM recording. Egan's base lines were among the most interesting I have heard in a long time. While he kept a good, steady rhythm at all times, his lines often sounded more like a melody than anything else. And with Metheny's vibrant sound, the effect was not unlike some kind of futuristic counterpoint.

Dan Gottlieb should not go unmentioned. Although the drummer seemed to remain in the background during most of the performance (he never took a solo), he was certainly a driving force behind the quartet. He works heavily with cymbals, adding to the ethereal quality of the Pat Metheny sound. And, whenever the four were jamming together, he pushed them higher and higher, until the music reached an incredible pitch and intensity. And just when it seemed that the four had reached their limit, they would suddenly cut the sound, leaving Metheny playing a simple guitar line and Gottlieb softly rumbling the cymbals. The overall effect was awesome.

Undoubtedly, Pat Metheny will continue to grow as a positive force in modern jazz. Both his knowledge as a composer and arranger and his sophisticated style are extraordinary for a musician as young as he is.

Nevertheless, flashy adjectives and glittering phrases are not for Metheny. He is not a showman nor will he ever be. He slunk up to the stage for an encore as though he was embarrassed by the applause, thanked the audience quietly, and immediately immersed himself in an upbeat blues tune. But considering his talent, one cannot help but respect his priorities.

Enjoy Spring with the Latest Styles in Dresses.



Fashion Names at...

Fashion Lane

CORNER OF WILLISTON & HINESBURG ROADS

BICYCLES

VISTA
Carrera
Sport
•Pacer
•Criterium
Silver Shadow
$115.00–$235.00

WINDSOR
•International
•Carrera
Super Carrera
Competition
Pro
$175.00–$600.00

RALEIGH
Rampar 1027
Rampar R–1
•Grand Prix
Super Course
Competition G–S
$125.00–$365.00

We also carry 3 Speeds by Raleigh & Vista

Inquire about our repair classes that will be starting soon.

the Ski Rack
9-5 Saturday
9:30-9:00 Friday
9:30-6:00 Monday-Thursday
81–85 Main St. 658–3313

• Ladies Frames Available

NOVELS

A Fairytale With a Moral of Responsibility

By Diana Greene

Rita Mae Brown, Rubyfruit Jungle, Branton Books, $1.95.

A powerful novel written by Rita May Brown, Rubyfruit Jungle deals with the trendy subject of women's liberation and lesbianism. The story is, unquestionably a fantasized autobiography telling the story of Brown's plight to freedom in an idealistically undaunted way. Molly Bolt, the main character, is the vehicle used to voice Brown's vehement convictions about women's role in society.

Molly is first shown as a young girl living in a small town outside of York, Pennsylvania with her adopted parents who are poor and simple-minded. Molly's mother is a crazy woman with a mouth of dynamite. Their "mother-daughter" relationship is one of equal disrespect; neither one can stand the other. As early as the sixth grade Molly knows she is bound for more worldly avenues than York, Pa. She is aware of her talent, brains, and guts that will eventually liberate her from the limited life-style at home.

The first lesbian affair Molly has is in elementary school with a pretty girl in her class named Leota. It is made clear from the very start that women (or girls as the case may be) erotically arouse and attract Molly. And Molly, incredible as it may seem, feels not one bit of guilt or peculiarity about her sexuality.

It is Molly's high school years that bring out all the confidence, righteousness, and ambition that make Molly what she is — a high speed driven young woman that will stop for nothing and never have time to look back. She is like a race car, fast and fearless. On top of all this, Molly is the most athletic and the brightest of all the girls and boys in her high school, which only makes her more daring.

What after high school? But of course... college. Molly is awarded a full scholarship to a small school in Florida. The school itself is not an academic challenge to Molly, as much as it is a wild social and sexual adventure. In Florida Molly is turned onto gay bars, booze, and her roommate. This is where Molly has her initial mature Lesbian relationship that is untouched by the previous problems of neighborhood gossip, inconvenience, or the "fugitive-type" paranoia of being "caught."

Maybe Molly and her roommate are not worried about being caught, but they do get discovered and consequently they are tossed out, but not without an argument from Ms. Justice. In Molly's battle with the administration over her sexual relations she comes off as righteous and recklessly brave, treating the idea of being expelled with an irritatingly indifferent attitude. She apparently believes in herself above all and is willing to forfeit anything, even her full scholarship, to defend her personal beliefs. Leaving school also meant never returning home again, but does this affect Molly's emotions or begin to make her doubt the next move... Hell no. Molly just holds her head high and climbs right on up.

She took off for New York City to find sexual freedom, or so she thought. Molly hitchhikes up from Florida with roughly twenty dollars in her pocket and never has one problem or touch of fright in her; she is even given ten bucks from one ride.

When Molly arrives in New York City, she proceeds to meet a man named Calvin, a sophisticated bum sleeping in a car at night. Calvin is such a fine fellow that he offers Molly the front seat of the car and sneaks her into free breakfasts. Calvin is such a nice bum, and what a gentleman — he never makes one advance toward Molly. Life seems to be working its way out for Molly in the big bad apple. From New York City on Molly is blessed with a wizard's never-ending luck that eventually leads her to be a summa cum laude graduate of New York University. Oh yes, one more thing, Molly is the first woman ever to major in film-making, but doesn't that figure?

It all seems too perfect to see Molly succeed every step of the way with no problems, no doubts, and no tears. Not only is she exceptional for being the only woman to major in film-making; but she also keeps a job, takes care of an apartment, and dates an older, beautiful and submissive woman. All this appears ideal at a glance, but one must realize that Molly has no friends, no commitments, no parents, no ambiguity, which to all mortals is not so much hard to believe as it is impossible to believe.

Molly is too good, too strong, and too competent, and way too lucky to be taken literally. But this novel was not meant to be a true to life journal of a lesbian named Molly Bolt. Just as the name Molly Bolt is ficticious, so is the story. Although this may sound abstract and even sacreligious, Rubyfruit Jungle is more along the lines of a biblical story such as Genesis, a story without the restrictions or the realities of everyday life that would make the morals in these stories impossible to affect or penetrate the mind and soul of the reader with the same poignancy of a parable, fantasy or fairytale.

I would suggest reading this book no matter what your sexual philosophy or preference may be. Rubyfruit Jungle is definitely not a classic nor is it unique in its writing style, but one must understand Rita Mae Brown's intention. She intended this novel to be a fairytale, not Ulysses or Women In Love, that are filled with beautiful imagery, complicated characters, and verbose description. What Brown designed was a fairytale, and like all fairytales, it delivers a moral. The moral here is that people, especially women, should not feel responsible or locked into sexual traditions of society. What she does say is: be responsible to no one but yourself in any pursuit — be it sexual or otherwise.

Improve Your Grades
with
SCHAUM'S OUTLINE SERIES

Each outline includes basic theory, definitions and hundreds of carefully solved problems and supplementary problems with answers.

| | |
|---|---|
| ACCOUNTING, BUSINESS & ECONOMICS | |
| Accounting I | $3.95 |
| Accounting II | $3.95 |
| Business Statistics | $4.95 |
| College Business Law | $4.95 |
| Cost Accounting (March '78) | $4.95 |
| Development Economics | $4.95 |
| Intermediate Accounting I | $4.95 |
| International Economics | $3.95 |
| Introduction to Business | $3.95 |
| Macroeconomic Theory | $4.50 |
| Mathematics of Finance | $3.95 |
| Microeconomic Theory | $4.95 |
| Personal Finance & Consumer Economics | $3.95 |
| Quantitative Methods in Management | $5.95 |
| BIOLOGY | |
| Genetics | $4.95 |
| CHEMISTRY | |
| College Chemistry, 5th Ed. | $9.95 |
| Organic Chemistry | $6.95 |
| Physical Chemistry | $6.95 |
| COMPUTERS | |
| Boolean Algebra | $5.95 |
| Computer Science | $4.95 |
| Discrete Mathematics | $4.95 |
| Programming with Basic | $4.95 |
| Programming with Fortran (March '78) | $4.95 |
| EDUCATION & PSYCHOLOGY | |
| Introduction to Psychology | $4.95 |
| Test Items in Education | $3.95 |
| ELECTRONICS & ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING | |
| Electric Circuits | $4.95 |
| Electronic Circuits | $4.95 |
| Feedback and Control Systems | $5.95 |
| Laplace Transforms | $5.95 |
| Transmission Lines | $5.95 |
| ENGINEERING | |
| Acoustics | $5.95 |
| Advanced Structural Analysis | $6.95 |
| Basic Equations of Engineering | $3.95 |
| Continuum Mechanics | $5.95 |
| Descriptive Geometry | $3.95 |
| Engineering Mechanics, new 3rd Ed. (March '78) | $5.95 |
| Fluid Dynamics | $5.95 |
| Fluid Mechanics & Hydraulics | $5.95 |
| Heat Transfer | $5.95 |
| Lagrangian Dynamics | $5.95 |
| Machine Design | $5.95 |
| Mechanical Vibrations | $5.95 |
| Reinforced Concrete Design | $4.95 |
| State Space & Linear Systems | $6.95 |
| Strength of Materials, 2nd Ed. | $6.95 |
| Structural Analysis | $6.95 |
| Theoretical Mechanics | $5.95 |
| Thermodynamics | $6.95 |
| ENGLISH | |
| English Grammar | $3.50 |
| Punctuation, Capitalization, & Spelling | $3.50 |
| FOREIGN LANGUAGES | |
| French Grammar | $3.95 |
| German Grammar | $3.95 |
| Spanish Grammar | $3.50 |
| MATHEMATICS & STATISTICS | |
| Advanced Calculus | $5.95 |
| Advanced Mathematics | $6.95 |
| Analytic Geometry | $3.50 |
| Basic Mathematics | $4.95 |
| Calculus, 2nd Ed. | $4.95 |
| College Algebra | $4.50 |
| Complex Variables | $5.95 |
| Differential Equations | $4.95 |
| Differential Geometry | $4.95 |
| Elementary Algebra | $3.95 |
| Finite Differences & Difference Equations | $5.95 |
| Finite Mathematics | $4.95 |
| First Year College Mathematics | $5.95 |
| Fourier Analysis | $4.95 |
| General Topology | $4.95 |
| Group Theory | $5.95 |
| Linear Algebra | $4.95 |
| Mathematical Handbook | $4.95 |
| Matrices | $3.95 |
| Modern Algebra | $4.95 |
| Modern Elementary Algebra | $3.95 |
| Modern Introductory Differential Equations | $4.95 |
| Numerical Analysis | $5.95 |
| Plane Geometry | $3.95 |
| Probability | $3.95 |
| Probability & Statistics | $5.95 |
| Projective Geometry | $8.95 |
| Real Variables | $5.95 |
| Review of Elementary Mathematics (Including Arithmetic) | $4.95 |
| Set Theory & Related Topics | $4.50 |
| Statistics | $4.95 |
| Trigonometry | $3.95 |
| Vector Analysis | $4.95 |
| PHYSICS & PHYSICAL SCIENCE | |
| Applied Physics | $4.95 |
| College Physics, 6th Ed. | $3.95 |
| Earth Sciences | $3.50 |
| Optics | $5.95 |
| Physical Science | $3.95 |

SPECIALIZED BOOK SERVICE, INC.
100 North Street • Burlington, VT 05401
802 - 863-2807
NEW ENGLAND'S TECHNICAL BOOK CENTER

IMMEDIATE OPENINGS*

EARN OVER $1,000.00 FOR WORKING 39 DAYS!

After initial training, that is all that is required to earn excellent money in the Vermont Air National Guard.

We have openings in the Medical field as Dental Technicians and Dental Lab Technicians, Clinical Lab, Medical Administration, and as Medics. There are also immediate openings in Civil Engineering Administration, Mechanical and Electronic career fields. Here is an excellent way to learn a skill and at the same time earn money.

By becoming a member of the Vermont Air National Guard, you can get all this training and money just by working 39 days a year.

If you wish more specific information, call Sgt's Jim Littlefield, Jerry Hatin or Dale Lynaugh at their office at 658-0770, ext. 389, Monday through Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

RECENT CUTS

The Right Path to Take?

By Tom Nuccio

Ralph MacDonald, *The Path

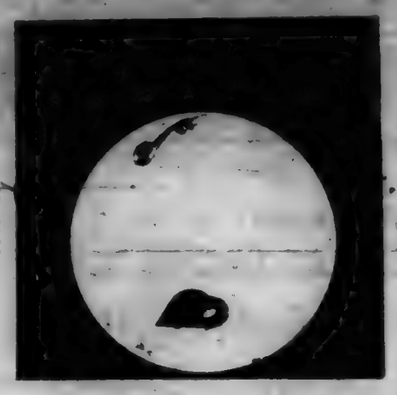
Latin percussion has grown into an omnipresent force in contemporary music. Once used exclusively by steel bands, this intricate percussive influence has spread its wings to be included in rock, soul, country and jazz ensembles. Instruments such as the conga, bongos, cowbell, claves, chica, tambourine and timbales add a special flavoring to many popular songs.

Unfortunately, recording artists specializing in this field remain unknown to many contemporary audiences. Confined to studio work, talents such as Jose Mangual, "Patato", Ralph MacDonald and Tito Puente gained virtually no recognition. Recently, however, one of these men has moved into the ranks of commercial acceptance. Ralph MacDonald, the king of Latin percussion, appears on numerous jazz and rock albums adding an essential Latin flair. From the soundtrack of "Saturday Night Fever" to Volume One of the CBS All-Stars' "Montreux Summit," he can be found either slapping the skins of his congas or striking a variety of cowbells.



This Latin phenomena can be heard playing a spectrum of percussion on his latest album, The Path. This Marlin waxing, adorned with photo album type pictures of Ralph's family, symbolizes man's relationship with all people. He communicates this idea through his title track. The Path begins with a vocal chant by a nine member chorus. MacDonald then supplies a supportive conga rhythm. Part Two introduces a Bamboo Steel Band which pumps out calypso rhythms over an intricate log drum and conga setting (Idris Mohammed and MacDonald). The final part commences with a Bob James' synthesizer solo oscillating in the midst of crisp horn lines. The entire piece is ultimately resolved by the initial vocal chant. The Latin percussion, although not tremendously amplified, is the life – the spark plug that keeps the music flowing. MacDonald's genius of mixing salsa horn licks with different combinations of percussion is unequalled in contemporary music. The blend results in a vintage sound characteristic of musics from South America and the Carribean Isles.

Side Two takes a more commercial outlook in order to sell the album. This commercialism detracts considerably from the quality of music found on side one. "Smoke Rings and Wine" is a sleep-inducing ballad that fails to go anywhere. "Toots" Thielemans' harmonica solo is the only glimpse of light in an otherwise dull tune. "If I'm Still Around" is destined for the top forty. It features vocalist Gwen Guthrie soulfully singing over a discofied rhythm section. The result is, at best, demoralizing.

With this album, Ralph MacDonald has created two paths – side one's creative latin music and side two's commercially oriented disco. He must now decide which road to take. If he should opt for the first choice, he would be making the best decision – a step toward musical creativity. However, should he choose differently, he would be beating the sound of a different drum. Musical excellence would be abandoned in favor of obtaining the almighty dollar. This is his decision and his alone. The results will be published in the form of the next Ralph MacDonald album and could be quite interesting.

"Ralph MacDonald has created two paths– side one's creative latin music and side two's commercially oriented disco."

It's That Time of Year, Heart

By Russell Flannery

Heart; *Heartless

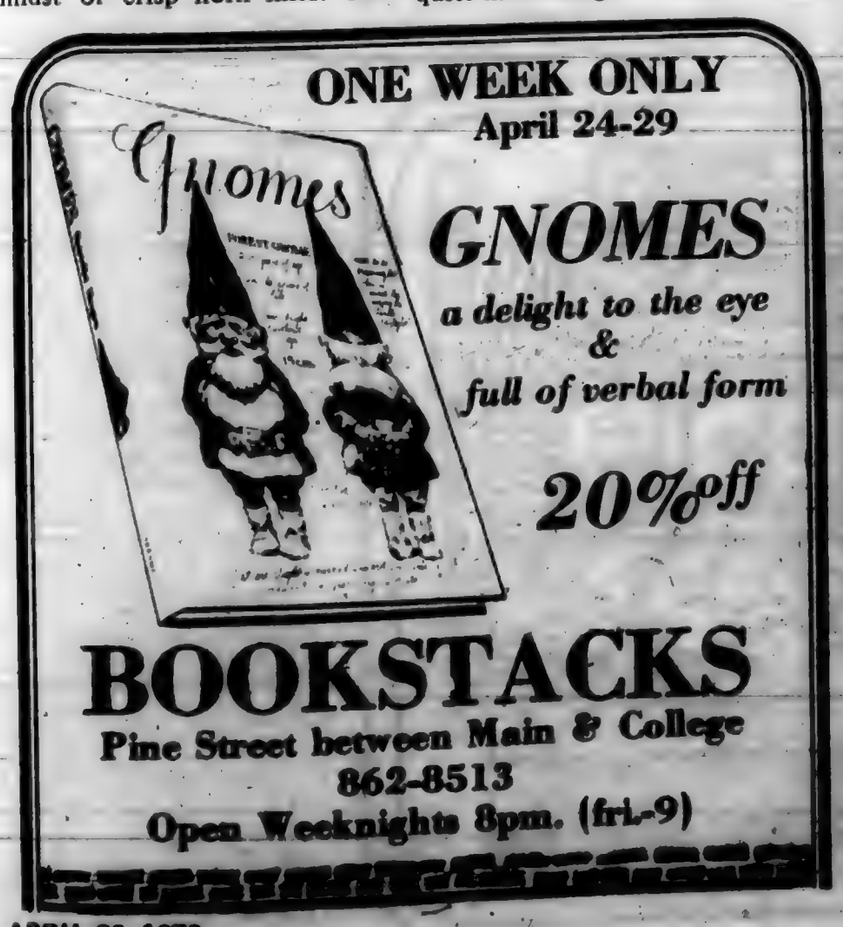
The American music scene currently lacks a 'zoned out' band that doesn't carry the punk image. Led Zepplin hasn't recorded in two years; Aerosmith can't play more than six chords; and Kansas has too much imagination to fill this necessary role. After all, someone has to please the rednecks.

After Heart was mentioned as one of the best new bands of 1976, they went on to record one of the worst albums of 1977. Strangely enough, however, their '77 summer tour was acclaimed by the New York City press, who even created adjectives of praise to describe Ann Wilson's vocals, and suggested that Heart was the female version of Led Zepplin. Thrilling.



Well, Heart's back with a bill of fare that includes raunch rock, reliable remakes, and 'zoned' ballads. Let there be no question about it – Heartless is certainly not gourmet listening. Nevertheless, the release of this album, which is stylishly similar to their debut album, Dreamboat Annie, combined with a summer tour, should make Heart one of the biggest attractions of the coming months.

Heartless' individual cuts can be summarized rather briefly: two top forty hits ("Heartless" – which has rhythm vaguely reminiscent of the Lollies' "Long Cool Women," and "Magazine"); two spacey ballads ("Here Song" and "Just the Wine"); two remakes which couldn't possibly be performed poorly by anyone with any talent (Harry Nilsson's "Without You" and Kiki Dee's "I've got the Music in Me"); and two burn-out delights ("Devil's Delight" and "Mother Earth Blues"). This album will more than please those who were overjoyed by "Baracuda," or "Kick It Out."

Despite the vulgar tone of this album, there's a time and a place for everything. Generally, Heartless is a loud rock album that, if released in October, could have easily been written off as a failure. Yet summer, complete with the beach and afternoons of frisbee and RKO or ABC, or whatever AM station the little kid lying in front of you listens to, is coming soon, and even the worst top forty songs seem to lodge themselves into your memory after vacation is over. Redneck or not, you can bet a memory of Heart will be "hang with you" through next fall. Grin and bear it.

The Sheik Cafe
presents
Thurs. 20-FLAT BROKE
21 & Sat. 22-CABIN FEVER
Nitely Drink Specials
Long List of Imported & Domestic
Beers & Wines
41 King Street 864-5795

THE APPALACHIAN GAP
Clothes for Men & Women

199 College St.

Ladies Nite
Thursday 9-12

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30
Frozen Daiquiri's
what ale's you
152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

Turn the Tube to ETV, UVM's TV Station

By Tom Daniels

Whether you know it or not, the University of Vermont owns and operates a TV station. Situated in a large pre-fab complex amid Winooski's Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont Educational Television has been broadcasting on UHF Channel 33 for ten years.

A member of the Public Broadcasting System (PBS), ETV relays PBS programs from Washington D.C. and its own shows to six stations throughout Vermont (Channels 20 St. Johnsbury, 28 Rutland, 41 Windsor, 74 Manchester, 76 Wilmington, and 79 Bennington). Since its inception in 1970, PBS has been growing steadily and currently has 272 member stations. ETV is one of 54 college-owned stations and the UVM trustees also act as the ETV Board of Directors. Other public stations are owned and operated by non-profit community groups, state authorities, and local school districts.

Public television provides a refreshing alternative to commercial TV programs. Commercial TV must attract advertisers to stay on the air; thus the shows offered must be capable of reaching a sizeable portion of the potential audience at any given time. Public TV, however, screens a diversity of entertainment away from the ordinary situation comedies and sex and violence police-detective shows. Public TV is often the only place a viewer can see programs of cultural and socially redeeming value, such as symphony, opera, dance, original drama (eg. Masterpiece Theater), classic films, documentaries, public affairs and interview shows (eg. Dick Cavett), and "how to" programs on everything from gardening to yoga. (Check the monthly program guide).

During school hours, ETV devotes the majority of its schedule to programs that can be viewed in the classroom. ETV airs adult high school equivalency courses aimed at the 25% of Vermont adults who lack a high school diploma; and a course "Living Married" is offered for credit to UVM students.

Vermont ETV produces several of its own shows of local interest such as the popular talk series "Vermont Forum." The Winooski station houses two studios with a variety of sets and boasts a complete range of color broadcast equipment including special effects. And because it has the only mobile unit in the state, ETV has put on a number of live productions featuring UVM hockey and other sporting events. "These sports programs have a lot of appeal," said ETV Publicity Director Ann Curran. "They show what people couldn't see otherwise."

Peter Hartberg, producer of ETV's Levesque Special

Photo by Rob Swanson

ETV buys most of its programs from PBS. PBS itself has no production facilities, but distributes programs which have been produced or bought by individual public stations. Programs are fed to the local stations via microwave link and telephone long-lines leased from AT&T. By early 1979, the ground-based system will be replaced by a satellite communications system which will enable the distribution of four or more programs simultaneously. Public stations may video tape PBS programs or not show them at all. ETV uses PBS programs to help construct its own schedule, depending on the interests of the Vermont audience.

VERMONT ETV SCORES A BIG FIRST

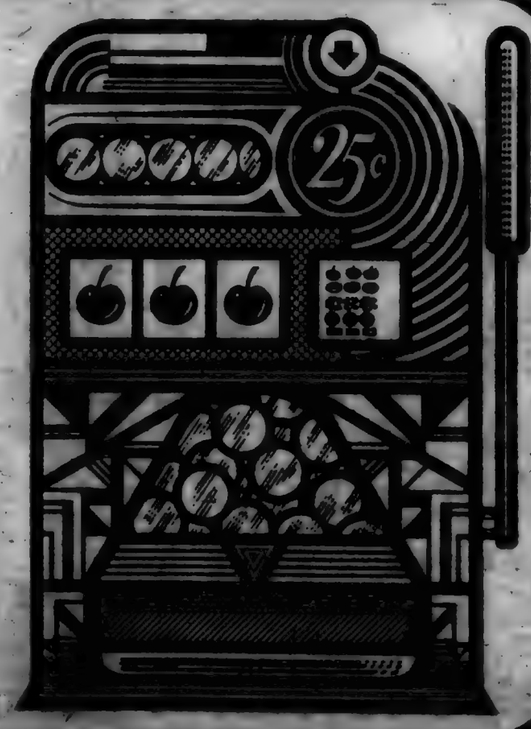
On Friday, April 21, at 9:00 p.m., Vermont ETV will present a one-hour special "Rene Levesque: A Portrait of Independence." ETV interviewer Jack Barry will question the outspoken leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois on the feasibility of an independent Quebec maintaining economic ties with Canada, Quebec's relationship with the U.S., and a variety of other provocative topics. This is the first extended interview Quebec Premier Levesque has granted to American TV, and ETV producer scored "quite a coup" in beating out NBC's "Meet the Press." The Levesque special has been 18 months in the making and represents ETV's largest production to date.

For a non-profit station with 47 employees, money is always scarce. ETV receives money ($600,000) from the state legislature as part of the UVM allotment, dues from members ($230,000), grants from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting ($240,000), foundations and local businesses, and the famous and exhausting ETV auction which just ended with a record $164,000. The auction recruited 2,400 volunteers and sold 2,400 items from a sailboat to wood stoves.



Nationwide, the public television audience has nearly doubled in the past three years. Presently, more than 60% of American households owning a TV set (about 40 million homes) tune to public TV at least once a month, with the average home watching about eight hours a month. It is estimated that some 27 million households see public television each week. Because two out of every three public stations broadcast on UHF channels, many American households cannot receive a strong signal. This UHF handicap makes public TV's audience figures all the more impressive. Perhaps America is catching on to the original purpose of TV: a medium that is both educational and entertaining.

THIS COULD BE YOUR LUCKY DAY

An Air Force ROTC scholarship can mean a lot when you need help with college finances. It pays tuition, books and lab fees . . . and gives you $100 a month for other college costs. This could be just what you need to permit you to fine-tune your concentration on your studies. It could mean the difference between not making it at all, and going out on your own with a good, solid college degree.

The Air Force is a great way to be on your own. As a commissioned officer, you'll have responsibility with your very first job. You'll find an atmosphere of dedication, trust, and reliance, and you'll jump right into managing people and expensive resources. You'll have an excellent starting salary — good financial security.

It can all start with a decision to check out AFROTC. Find out how you can get a scholarship. See what we offer, then show us what you can offer in return. It just might be our lucky day, too!

AIR FORCE ROTC
Gateway to a great way of life.

[illegible] continues several [illegible] from Avon [illegible] has received [illegible]

The significance of Lem's [illegible] in the New York Times Book Review (August 29, 1976) was not so much that he got the front page, or that six of his books were reviewed, or even the length of the reviews, but in the fact that science fiction was mentioned openly in the headline. No one tried to say that Lem is not a SF writer; the fact was proclaimed, albeit with the provision that Lem is also a major figure of letters "and one of the deep spirits of our age." This has not happened in quite this way; not even in the time of Wells; the SF field is not used to such unequivocal praise coming from an outsider like Theodore Solotaroff, the editor of American Review.

The Star Diaries (Avon, $1.75, 321 pp) feature the lone astronaut Ijon Tichy. There have been other stories about Tichy which the translator (Michael Kandel) lists in his notes at the end of the book, but this book comprises the major ones. In the book, Tichy travels around the universe, encountering adventures and problems in the manner of a lone Quixote moving through the continuum of science fictional concepts, and treating them as what they too often are: anthropocentric rather than realistic plays of the human imagination. "The Seventh Voyage," for example, returns to the idea of time travel, becoming the type of paradoxical story pioneered by Heinlein in "All You Zombies." In Lem's hands the idea of meeting yourself in time is grotesquely moving, a nightmare comment on the nature of human identity. Elsewhere Tichy discovers that a robot state run by a villanous computer is a complete fraud; the robots are only men in disguise, the state a result of political corruption. "I was glad of the outcome," Tichy says, "since it restored my faith... in the natural decency of electronic brains. Yes, it's comforting to know, when you think about it, that only man can be a bastard."

The reaction to Lem in Western SF continues with high praise or hostility. Lem is not above criticism. Many of his views in science philosophy and literature lie in problematical areas where a number of opposing views must co-exist. Lem writes according to [illegible] are not [illegible] in his works for their own sake, for the [illegible] about one [illegible] but... [illegible] slow-[illegible] that [illegible] one of [illegible] brings [illegible] of SF [illegible] idea; [illegible]

Confessions

Continued From Page 40

spiritual high (not to mention the usual smell of reefer associated with the Dead), but I advise no tripping. One friend spent an entire concert wandering about asking policemen for pen and paper to record the madness he was witnessing!

Finally, I must confess that a Dead concert is an experience not to be missed, especially this rare East Coast appearance in the Queen City. Surely, during the May 6 concert, the Dead's message will come through:

Don't worry 'bout tomorrow./ Lord you know it when it come./ When the rock 'n rolling music/ Meets the rockin' shinin' sun.

There are a limited number of $8 Grateful Dead tickets left

S.A. Box Office
Waterman
Open 9 to 5

SOPHOMORES!
3
WAYS TO GET STARTED FOR LIFE
AFTER COLLEGE.

Reinforce your college degree and get a better start through Army ROTC. Get management training. Self-discipline. A sense of confidence. Earn the extra credentials that will set you apart as a responsible achiever. You'll also receive $2500 over your last two years in the Advanced ROTC Program. Whether your career plans are civilian or military, Army ROTC provides opportunities for both — active duty with a starting salary of over $11,300, or reserve service while employed in the civilian community. Get started for life after college. Get started in Army ROTC.

THE BASIC START.

Get started in Army ROTC through Basic Camp at Fort Knox, Kentucky, this summer. You'll get $500 for attending a challenging six-week camp. If your performance is exceptional, you just may qualify for a two-year scholarship as you enter the Advanced Program.

THE EARLY START.

If you are a veteran (or a Junior ROTC graduate), then you started early — probably without realizing it. That early start makes you automatically eligible to enter the Advanced Program. Why not add an extra $100.00 a month to your veterans benefits.

THE SUMMER START.

You may consider getting started in the Army ROTC summer program on campus. At the end of the summer you may find yourself eligible for the Advanced Program.

CALL OR VISIT:
UVM MILITARY STUDIES 4TH FLOOR WILLIAMS HALL, TEL. 656-2966

UVM ARMY ROTC. THE TWO-YEAR PROGRAM.

STUDY ABROAD

SPEND FALL 1978
in MADRID or FLORENCE
with
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

★ Variety of courses offered.
★ Financial aid available.
★ No language prerequisites.
★ It's not too late — apply now.

SUMMER PROGRAMS IN EUROPE-ISRAEL-KENYA
For more information and Application contact:

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD
335 Comstock Avenue - Room "N"
Syracuse, New York 13210
Telephone
(315) 423-3471

CLASSIFIED ADS

OUTDOOR EQUIPMENT

Ski Boots — 1977 Nordica GT's men's size 9 excellent condition $140. Call Peter F. at 863-9862 between 5:30 — 6:30 and after 11 p.m.

Wilson pro-staff tennis racquet used 15 times, new sta-tite strings 4 5/8 medium grip. Excellent buy at $35. Call Bob at 862-4765.

For sale — Hanson exhibitions size 8 2 yrs old, good cond. $175 new, asking $85. John 862-4765.

Salomon 555 bindings gold, competition springs, one season, $50. Call Jack 862-4765.

Hang glider, 18 ft. in good flying condition. Sail colors red, blue, white, green and yellow. Seated harness included $275. Waterbury, 244-8192.

Look-Nevada Grand-Prix Bindings, $30. Call Jack, 862-4765.

Head comps — Slalom 200 cm. skiied on twice, excellent condition for racers. $75. Call Jack, 862-4765.

1 pr. size 8 Asolo Hiking boots, $60 new, used twice, asking $40. Also 1 pr. size 5½ SL-72 Adidas running shoes. Call Nancy D. at 3089.

1 pr. brand new Tigress shoes, never worn. Size 6½, $18. Call Sue, x3089.

ROOMS & ROOMMATES

Roommates needed, share nice two bedroom apt. on Essex Jct. on Route 15. No pets, $95 monthly including all utilities. Available May 20th. Call 879-1805, Joe.

Spending the summer on the Cape or Martha's vineyard? If you are and can spare a room in your house, please give a call — Debbie, 864-9310.

Looking for a way to spend the month of August on an exotic island? We need 1 person to share expenses in our house on Martha's vineyard. Please call Leslie, 656-2193.

SUBLETS

2 bedroom, partially furnished apartment to sublet, now to August 31, parking, porch, excellent location, $275 per month (some utilities included) deposit, 862-1334.

2 bedroom apartment available for the summer. 5 min. walk from campus. $240 a month. Call Larry at 656-2910.

3 br. apt. to sublet for summer, furnished. Call 864-5471.

Apartment to sublet, one block from campus, 381 Main St. 2 person/1 bdrm furnished. Price negotiable. Call Jane or Carol, 656-2514.

Apartment to sublet May 15 — Aug. 31, 1978. 2 bedrooms, completely furnished. Price negotiable. 863-2650 Jane or Cindy.

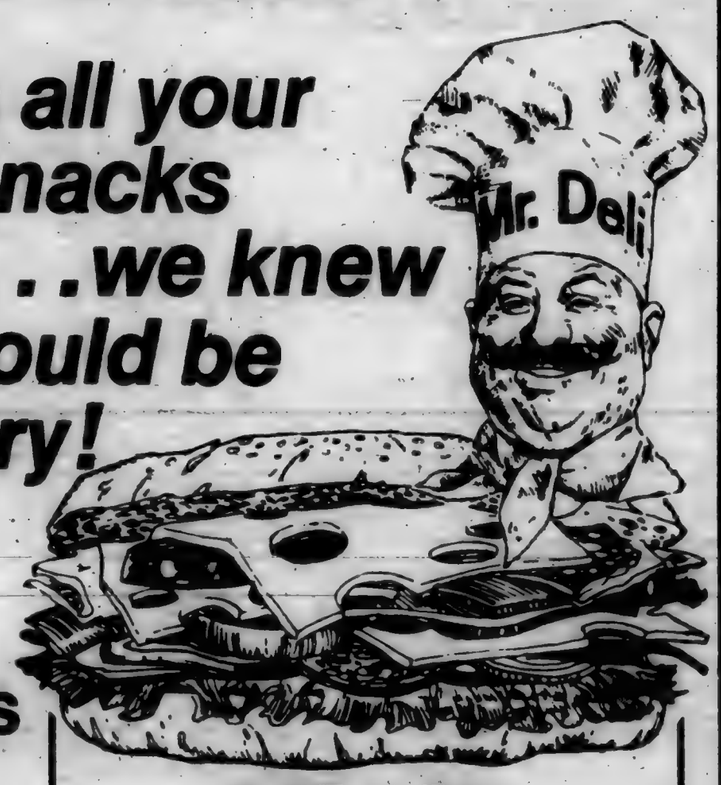
Apartment available, comfortable 3 room apartment available after May 20. Perfect for two people. 5 min. walk from UVM, $175/mo. Stop by 168 N. Prospect St and ask for Chris or Joe.

Need an apartment for this summer? Sublet it from us from June 1st to Sept. 1st, 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, dishwesher, wesher & dryer, carpeted, close to campus, busline, parking, $350 plus utilities, call Lois at 656-2691 or 656-2692.

For rent — 7 room house on campus. Available June 16 — Aug. 15. Walking distance to University and downtown. No more than two occupants. Rent $300 per month plus utilities. Damage deposit required. 864-4881.

Three bedroom apartment on South Union Street for sublet this summer. Available May 15. Furnished. Balcony with a lakeview. Sound good? Call 658-0545.

Apt. for rent, available June 1, 2 bedrooms, $175 utilities not included. 863-6417 around 6:00 p.m.



2 female roommates needed to sublet room June 1 — Aug. 31 at Gates Hall, 381 Main St. Living room w/ fireplace, kitchen, porch. Call Judy 862-3012.

Spacious 2-bedroom apartment to sublet from June 1 (or possibly earlier) until Sept. 1. Furnished. $200/month. 862-8307.

Swing Into Spring With Finast®

Finast has all your favorite snacks waiting...we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruit
- Your favorite cold beverages

Finast

825 WILLISTON ST.,
BURLINGTON
VERMONT

Visit our Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

Apartment available May 20th — Aug. 20th. Beautifully furnished 2 big bedrooms, living room & kitchen. Reasonable price. Call Beth F. or Karen x2193 or 2192.

Apartment to sublet — from the middle of May through Sept. 1. 4 bedrooms, large living room, and kitchen. Only one block from campus, 49 N. Prospect. Call 862-1824.

Apartment to sublet, June 1st — Sept 1st, 2 huge bedrooms, good for 2-4 people, furnished. 207 S. Union Street, excellent location, call Carol or Molly at 656-3006, $300 monthly (includes all utilities except electricity).

Looking for two girls to sublet apartment at 381 Main St. from June 1 to August 31. Good location between UVM campus and downtown Burlington. Call Jode at 656-3872.

Apartment to sublet for summer and possibly available for fall. Furnished two-bedroom with hot water and heat included. Located on S. Union near Maple St. 280 monthly if responsible — call Jill 658-3070.

2 bedroom apt. to sublet beginning May 1st. Heated/hot water furnished, good for 2-3 people, near UVM & downtown. Call Wendy, Laurie, Sarah, 863-6652.

Apt. to sublet — June 1 thru Aug. 31st, 2 bedroom but big enough for 3 people. $285/mo. very close to campus & downtown. Call Cary 863-5065.

Two bedroom apartment available for the summer and next year. Furnished, second-floor North Union St. $250 a month, call immediately, 862-0080, ask for Sue.

Apartment to sublet from mid-May thru Sept. 1st. 2 bedrooms, wall to wall carpet, nice. $250/month, on Loomis St. Call 862-1863 (best after 7 p.m.).

For sale — one full coupon book $43 or best offer. Stephenie, x3447 or x3448.

Apartment sale — everything must go! Dishes, curtains, clothes, shoes, plants, etc... Saturday & Sunday, April 22 & 23 from 9—5. 295 Maple St. third floor rear apartment.

LOST & FOUND

Lost: a bronze ring. Two seperate rings that fit "uniquely" together to make a single ring. One ring is a male nude body — the other is a female nude. They join in a nice sexual position. Not of significant value to anyone but me. Substantial reward offered for its recovery. Call Wendy, room 214, x3010 or x2592.

Lost Saturday 15th, golden retriever, male answers to the name Casey, vicinity of Patrick Gym. Any information, call 864-9446.

OFFERS

Need some typing done. Call Randy for fast, accurate & neat work. Rush jobs accepted. 864-5471.

Drawing from a live model every Thursday at South Williams. Call Jill at 862-7672 for more information.

Billings T-shirts now on sale! $3.00 (pay Ann, Keith or Dave). If you ordered one please pay by Friday, April 21. On Monday, all shirts not claimed go up for sale to general public. Yahoo!

Sunrise climb. If you would like to be on top of Mt. Mansfield for a sunrise celebration on Wed. May 3, "Sun Day," call Matt, 213 Coolidge at 656-3010.

What are you doing after graduation? I'm thinking about heading for California and am looking for suggestions and companionship. Eves. Dave 863-4980.

If you are interested in taking flute or piano lessons, please contact Maya Golomb, 656-4270, reasonable rates.

Ride needed to Cape Cod area the weekend after finals. Have little luggage. Contact Ky x3805.

JOBS

Wanted — person to accompany two children (ages 11 and 9) on plane to and from Miami, FL, during all school vacations. Modest remuneration. Write C. Vogel, M.D., 8360 S.W. 104 St., Miami, FL 33156.

Male camp counselors wanted — one of Vermont's outstanding boys camps. General program with emphasis on trips and camping. Positions available for general counselors plus bicycling, gymnastics, sailing shop, swimming, riflery, tripping. Prefer over 18, must enjoy children. Call 656-2290 and ask for Ted.

Organizing and implementing recreational and educational activities for low-income kids ages 7—18. The Urban Youth Center needs staff for the summer. Work/study or credit available — please call 862-8895. Contact Mary Anne McGrail. Hiking, camping, softball, arts & crafts, nutrition, tutoring etc.

Newcomers club of Shelburne & Charlotte need babysitters for pre-schoolers on April 26, 9:30 — 11:30 a.m. Call 985-3488.

EXTRAS

Wanted — two roommates to share new attractive apartment in Horizon Heights June 1 — Aug. 31. Great opportunity for the summer! Complete with pool, tennis court, and within walking distance to UVM campus. Call Bonnie at 863-6108.

WHEELS

1974 Yamaha 360 Enduro motorcycle, 7000 miles, on and off the road. Great on corners and climbing trees, call West 863-5829.

1970 VW Sq. back. The body is basically shot. Engine in good shape. Great car for parts. Very cheap price. Call West 863-5829.

Woodstove for sale, handmade 3/16" platesteel, very solid, durable modeled after Jotel 118, $175.00, 863-4475.

Fiat parts for sale, 1972 128A parts, engines, transmissions, body parts, lights, radiators, etc. Cheap, 863-4475.

Amplifier for sale, Realistic SA500, 45 watts RMS, 6 yrs. old $20.00, 863-4475.

1973 Ford Pinto, excellent running condition, good body, has only 26,000 miles, new battery, exhaust system, $1000 or best offer. Call 862-7578.

Automobile, 1974 Saab 99 GLE, white 2 door, AM-FM/tape. Air conditioning, Konis shocks, new radials, new exhaust, new clutch, fog lights. Excellent condition, $3000. Call after April 23, 862-4154.

For sale — 1972 Volkswagon squareback in really good condition. Asking $1250, but will negotiate. Call 862-6334 after 6 p.m.

1976 Honda CB550. Fairing, bars, custom seat, padded sissy, well kept. Eves Dave 863-4980.

1972 Chevrolet Impala. 72,500 mi. Many new parts, driven daily. Maintenance records. Very good engine, solid body. Eves. Dave, 863-4980.

For sale — 1976 Kawasaki KZ-400, S2. luggage rack, sissy bar & pad, etc. $550. Call Chris at 863-9198.

1964 Austin-Healey Sprite, aqua blue paint, michelins, custom interior, many new parts. Also for sale "Bugeye" Sprite and MG midget parts. Wanted: Austin-Healey 3000 parts (or complete car). Call Rob Moore 656-2515.

For sale — 1965 Tempest, good summer car, new exhaust, 4 good tires, needs a little work for inspection, $75 or best offer. Dave, 862-4765.

1970 VW bug — runs well, new brakes and starter, good radials, yellow $500. Call 434-3176.

Need a car for the summer? For sale in good condition, 66 Dodge Comet, asking $200. Call 863-4335.

SIGHTS & SOUNDS

For sale — one pair of KLH 101 bookshelf speakers. 2 years old. Come over and listen. 50 bucks, call Dave, 862-4765.

BIC Formula III speakers, 1 year old, asking $200. Call 656-3002. Ask for Steve.

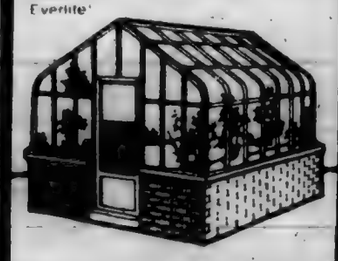
125 watt (RMS) PA system w/Reverb I/Input (high +/o impedence for each channel). $175 or best offer. Call Randy at 864-5471.

For sale — 23 inch GE black & white TV in wood cabinet. Good sharp picture. $50 negotiable. Call 863-3830.

Asahi pentax 35 mm camera for sale. K1000 with 55 mm lens, strap, UV filter & case. Only 7 months old and in excellent condition. $125. Call Celeste 864-4370 or come by to see it, 64 Hungerford Ter.

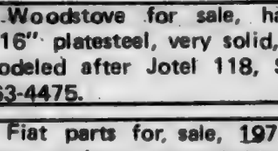
For sale — sturdy double decker loft with walnut shingles plus large area blue rug. Free storage over the summer. Call Jeff or Tom at x2197, x2195.

For sale — walnut stained loft. Any reasonable offer accepted. Call Pam or Karen x3094.



Coupon books for sale, $40 for whole, $20 for half. Call Lisa or Pam at 656-2513.

For sale — Seiko watch, 1 yr. old, excellent running cond. $50, must sell, need the money. John, 862-4765.



beer wine
THE ONLY
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
Lowest Prices Largest Selection
kegs soda

RESEARCH
Send only two dollars (to cover postage) for your copy of our latest mail-order catalog of over 7,000 research papers.
- Quality Unsurpassed
- Fast, Dependable Service
- Speeches, Reports, etc.

All Materials Sold For Research Assistance Only
AUTHORS' RESEARCH SERVICES INC
407 South Dearborn Street, Suite 600
Chicago, Illinois 60605
312-922-0300

Everlite® GREENHOUSES
the 52-Week vacation.
Take time off from the busy world each day of the year in the relaxing natural atmosphere of an Everlite® Home Greenhouse. Over 90 prefabricated easy-to-assemble models. Full line of accessories available. Make every week a vacation with an Everlite®

For more information:
Westplumb Enterprises, Inc.
Townshend, Vt. 05353
(802) 365-4019

EUROPE
less than 1/2 economy fare
Call toll free: (800) 325-4867
Guaranteed Reservations or see your travel agent
Unitravel Charters

CHEESE SPECIALS
Brie 2.50/lb.
Danish Swiss 1.95/lb.
Wisconsin Cheddar 1.59/lb.

Plus many other cheeses, cheesecake "seconds" & homemade quiche
CHEESE OUTLET
398 PINE ST.
Mon.-Thurs. 9-5 Fri. til 5:30
Now Saturday 9:30 AM—3:00

YELLOW BUS
(Queen City Snack Bus)
at
BATTERY PARK
Fresh Fries, Burgers, & Much More

Summer Positions
Summer camp for boys seeks qualified and dedicated University students for openings as Instructor/Dormitory Counsellor. Openings in fields of tennis, swimming (WSI preferred), riflery, nature conservation and axemanship. Laundry, room and board with salary range of $550 to $850. For application, write: Mowglis, School of the Open, East Hebron, N.H. 03232. Eight week season.

free pepsi
2-Pepsi's with small pizza!
4 Pepsi's with large pizza!
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333
DOMINO'S PIZZA

$8 to $26 off El Tigre pairs.

El Tigre 278s feature a construction of two fiberglass belts and two-ply polyester cords. Wide 70 and 78 series profiles. No trade-in required.

2 for $44
Size A78-13. Reg. $29 plus 1.71 fed. tax each tire.

2 for $66
Size C78-14. Reg. $37 plus 1.97 fed. tax each tire.
Size E78-14. Reg. $39 plus 2.19 fed. tax each tire.
Size F78-14. Reg. $41 plus 2.34 fed. tax each tire.
Size G78-14. Reg. $43 plus 2.47 fed. tax each tire.
Size H78-14. Reg. $46 plus 2.70 fed tax each tire.

2 for $77
Size G78-15. Reg. $45 plus 2.55 fed tax each tire.
Size H78-15. Reg. $47 plus 2.77 fed. tax each tire.
Size L78-15. Reg. $50 plus 3.19 fed. tax each tire.

2 for 49.50
Size 165-13. Reg. $31 plus 1.61 fed. tax each tire.
Size 165-15. Reg. $31 plus 1.67 fed. tax each tire.
*Blackwall

2 fiberglass belts:
- help to provide good tire mileage by stabilizing the tread and reducing tread squirm.

2 polyester plies:
- strengthen the tire while helping to insure a smooth ride.

Save $15 on shocks.

Sale 39.88 pr.
Reg. 54.99 pr. Air shocks for the extra heavy load. Lift up to 1,100 lbs. Fill with air just like a tire. Hose and fittings included.
installation extra

Tune-up accessories.

D.C. power timing light.
Reg. 17.99. Sale 13.99
Deluxe engine analyser.
Reg. 49.95. Sale 39.88

Cartridge oil filters,
Reg. 1.79. Sale 89¢

½ price sale. Only 99¢.
Reg. 1.99. Quality oil filters for most Domestic cars.

JCPenney spark plugs.
Regular,
Reg. 75¢. Sale 49¢.
Resistor,
Reg. 95¢, Sale 89¢

Appliance Wheels Sale 19.88
in stock
Reg. 32.99 – 64.99
other wheels available at sale prices

Rustproofing with DacarCote.®

Reg. 79.88
Sale 69.88 compact cars

Reg. 84.88
Sale 74.88 intermediate cars

Reg. 89.88
Sale 79.88 sedans

Reg. 94.88
Sale 84.88 station wagons and light trucks

We will spray seal (not just undercoat) the most vulnerable areas of your car, including door and rocker panels, door posts and the entire underside of your car.

Stop Action® brake overhauls.

92.88 front and rear drums* 76.88 front disc, rear drum*

We will install new brake linings or disc pads, new front grease seals, new return and holddown springs, rebuild all calipers or wheel cylinders, resurface all rotors or drums, repack front wheel bearings, inspect and adjust parking brake, bleed and refill brake system and road test car.
*For most American cars. Imported cars slightly higher.

JCPenney Auto Center
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

All sale prices effective thru Sat. April 22

Bus and parking garage validation available.
Telephone: 863-6881

Auto Center Hours
7:30AM-9PM
Mon. thru Fri.
7:30AM-5:30PM
Saturdays

FREE

VERMIC COMIC

FREE

VOLUME XCV-NUMBER 24 "Is there life after oil?" APRIL 27, 1978

Sun

Our Future Depends on It

May 5 will be recognized nationally as Sun Day, an awareness day to inform the public on the vast potential of solar power as a present and future

20% off men's colorful golf shirts.

Sale 7.20

Reg. $9 Men's short-sleeve shirts of polyester/cotton knit with placket front. In solid colors or stripe combos. Sizes S-M-L-XL. Sale prices thru Sat. April 29.

Special 4.44

Men's baseball jacket.

Play ball in this snap-front nylon jacket. Drawstring waist and front pockets. S,M,L,XL.

Special 2.49

Men's sport short.

Athletic style with trim on side seams and hem. Full elastic waist. Polyester/cotton in XS,S, M,L,XL.

30% to 75% off clothing for men

Jeans — Sale 3.88
Brushed and fashion jeans. 190 only
Orig. $9.99 to $18

Dress Slacks — Sale 11.88
Selected styles
50 only
Orig. $18

Jackets — Sale 12.88 to 22.88
Assorted lightweight poplins, nylons, S-M-L-XL
60 only
Orig. $19 to $35

Dress Shirts — Sale 4 for 10.00
Pastel solids in long and short sleeve. 14½ – 17
240 only
Orig. 3 for $10, 3 for $12

Bus and Parking Garage validation available tel: 863-6881

This is JCPenney
Downtown Burlington

Store hours:
Monday-Friday 9:30-9:00
Saturdays 9:30-5:30

News Analysis:

Residential Life Faces Tough Decisions in the Future

By Dan Adams

(Note: all data and figures supplied by Department of Residential Life Director Steve Peterson except where noted.)

On Saturday, April 15th, the UVM Board of Trustees approved room and board hikes of $72.00 (8.2%) and $54.00 (7.60%) respectively as requested by Department of Residential Life Director Steve Peterson.

These hikes are the results of unavoidable pressures on the budget, the most significant being a 7% inflation rate. The hikes prevented significant cuts in the services offered by Residential Life, and also kept up the basic implementation of the department's ten year plan to recover from inadequate fiscal planning during the expansive years of the 1960's which was started two years ago, thus including an adjustment for the renovation of Coolidge Hall.

While the immediate soundness of the department is ensured, there is concern within the department as to whether some costs anticipated in the next few years can be handled without significantly altering the fundamental philosophies of Residential Life. Specifically, there is the desire of the University to have Residential Life begin to assume responsibility for an estimated $400,000 in services (for example, billing for room and board) that the university now provides essentially for free.

When fiscal pressures grow, Residential Life has two options: (1) raise income sources; or (2) decrease expenses. The mid-year increase in minimum wage this winter resulting from federal legislation is one such pressure: the department responded to the 5.2% increase in labor costs with a minor cutback in dining hall facilities plus increased costs for some food items.

"While the immediate soundness of the department is ensured, there is concern . . . whether some costs anticipated . . . can be handled without significantly altering . . . (their) philosophies"

In general, the bulk of income sources for housing is from room rent (78.2%) and the net contribution from the dining hall system (10.6%). Of the other 11.2%, 6% is flexible, the rest fixed income. Thus for the housing system, an increase in income sources means essentially an increase in room rate.

Considering the costs involved in running the halls, table one lists the basic expenses for FY'78. (A more complete budget can be found in the March 2, 1978 Cynic on page five.) If aggregate expenses are to be decreased, it must be in one of the seven areas listed in Table I.

Group A, except for some minor possibilities in Operating Expenses, is by definition untouchable. Debt Service is the amount the department must pay each year to pay off money borrowed to build all the residence halls. Reserves is money put away in the event of an unexpected cost and also to finance future projects and renovations.

Group B expenses might be reduced only with widespread cooperation and conviction in students to reduce damage in the halls (a projected $80,000 this year) and/or to conserve utilities (fuel, electricity, water and sewage).

Group C might most easily be reduced, but not without some unknown and potentially detrimental effects within the department. Director Peterson can't see a major cut in personnel without having to alter the fundamental philosophy of his department.

Yet, in having to take on an additional $400,000 in the administrative expenses mentioned above, cutting personnel may be the only option permitted Residential Life. In today's dollars, were Residential Life to take on the entire $400,000 burden immediately without cutting expenses, it would cost each resident approximately $110 above base costs and inflation increases (the author's calculation).

Residential Life does not expect to have to take on the full $400,000 burden for several years, but the expense is down the road, and must be dealt with at a time of concern that UVM costs, including room and board, are already exorbitant. Residential Life has long felt pressure from the university to keep room and board costs to a minimum to help offset tuition hikes (the two are budgeted and collected separately), a pressure which has let off no more than the inflation rate increase. Residential Life is thus forced to try and use its other budgetary pressure valve — reduced expenses — and (for reasons discussed above), in the next few years may find it difficult to avoid a cut in personnel.

There are varying opinions as to what a cut in personnel would mean for the residence halls. Before such one-shot revisions are forced upon Residential Life, the university needs to answer the following questions:

(1) Should HA's and RA's be viewed as expenses or as cost-saving investments? (For example, in terms of the damage to the halls which is prevented).

(2) What reduction in force or expenses, if any, can the housekeeper/custodian and maintenance staffs undergo without moving below a basic minimum?

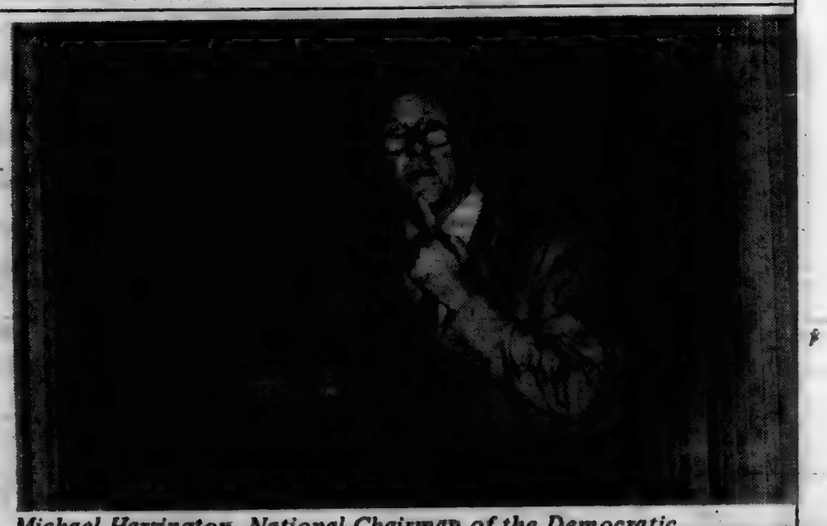
(3) Is it in the university's and the student's interest to allow the development and educational philosophy of Residential Life to be altered (or sacrificed) due to budget pressures?

U.S. Benefits From Third World Oppression Says Harrington

By John Letteri

People in the United States unconsciously benefit from an organized, articulated system of oppression and domination of Third World Countries (TWC's) according to Michael Harrington, National Chairman of the Democratic Socialist Party.

Speaking before two hundred people at Patrick Gym Thursday, Harrington said the present system of industrial, cultural, and economic oppression operated by the United States "perpetuates" the maladies of Third World Countries.



The U.S. is not dependent on this system, however, and could give up its interests in TWC's without suffering serious economic problems. But, it is the United State's "choice" to destroy the coherence of Third World Society to meet U.S. needs at home, he said.

The problems of Third World countries are internal as well as external. The rich people in poor countries want to live as extravagantly as the wealthy in the West. When industries come to the poor countries, they tend to produce high-priced luxury items for the rich, ignoring the development of the poorer peoples.

Externally, since World War II, terms of international trade have been decidedly against TWC's said Harrington. The international market, through high tariffs and import and export taxes for TWC's "has been a mechaniam to keep them oppressed," he said. Harrington cited the example of Zambia, which can export raw copper to the United States and pay small tariff charges. If Zambia sends the United States a finished product, however, the tariff charges increase dramatically and an export tax is added.

The Western industrial revolutions, which led to the current situation of Third World oppression, were based on ideas and concepts such as Arabic numerals, borrowed from the Eastern and African cultures. Combined with the West's industrial drive, this provided them with a "slight edge" over Eastern cultures and was correlated into "four centuries of political, economic, and cultural oppression," said Harrington.

The question of why does this still exist today remains. The Western countries believe that since they had to revolt and fight to get to their present status, why can't the Third World Countries? The Western countries fail to realize, however, that once they "climbed the ladder" to economic and political power, they "took the ladder with them," said Harrington. Furthermore, when a Western industry moves into a Third World country, they use only the segment of the population that they need, destroying the coherence of the society in the process. They do not build a new coherence, and the social structure of that Third World Country is left in a shambles.

Michael Harrington, National Chairman of the Democratic Socialist Party. SPS Photo by Ellen Gray

Harrington asked, can this be changed? One solution lies in accepting all the United Nation's proposals and combine these with world economic planning, he said.

First, the debts of the Third World Countries, owed largely to U.S. banks and the OPEC countries, should be unconditionally cancelled, according to the UN proposal.

Second, a common fund should be created to even out the roller coaster economies of the TWC's, that would buy their products when prices are high and help them sell their products when prices are low. Finally, the Third World Countries should be allowed the 25% of the world manufactured goods market that they desire.

Harrington further advocated simply "giving" the Third World Countries money to industrialize. A mutually beneficial relationship between the Western powers and the Third World countries would ensue; the Western powers would have to produce the technology necessary for Third World development and the Third World countries would have money to buy this technology and implement it for their own benefit.

Harrington concluded by warning that the nation state is becoming "obsolete." Multinational corporations have become truly international, in the name of profit, creating a world economic interdependence that threatens the sovereignty of all nations. "But, we can become internationals, if we want, in the name of individualism, rights, and humanity."

Student Photo Service

656-2050

·Passport/Resume Photos Taken

·All kinds of custom photography and darkroom work available

LOWER BILLINGS CENTER
(by the phones)

Now's your CHANCE!
Learn to make a
MACRAME LAMPSHADE
OR A
MACRAME WEAVING WALLHANGING in an AFTERNOON WORKSHOP
at
Why Knot
18 N. Winooski Ave. in Traders Way
phone for more info: 658-6575

UPSTAIRS RECORDS

OPPOSITE PENNEY'S DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

These Series 7.98 Records
Now On Sale
For Only $4.95

Former Ambassador Describes Her Mission: Represent the People

By Richard Hyland

"An ambassador should not only represent the government of the country but also the people of the country," according to Eugenie Anderson, former U.S. Ambassador to Bulgaria, who spoke on her "mission" to Bulgaria last Thursday in John Dewey Lounge.

Mrs. Anderson, the first woman ambassador from the U.S., was appointed to the post in 1962 in an effort by the Kennedy administration to restore relations between the two countries.

Mrs. Anderson described the challenges she met in the course of her work, many of which she overcame through personal strength and firmness.

The first challenge which Mrs. Anderson had to contend with was the Michael Shipkoff case. Shipkoff, a Bulgarian falsely accused of espionage against his own country, was freed through the efforts of the American ambassador who staunchly defended his innocence. Upon arriving in Bulgaria, Mrs. Anderson said that she told the prime minister that "Michael Shipkoff and other innocent Bulgarians falsely accused must be released before we can proceed to other matters." In light of this firm stand, and the desire of the Bulgarians to resume trade relations with the U.S., Bulgaria released Shipkoff, who was embittered, emaciated, but happy to be free.

Mrs. Anderson also explained her role in the crisis at the Plaudiv trade fair, one of the major trade fairs in Eastern Europe. Brochures which accompanied the American exhibit were condemned by the Bulgarian customs officials despite their approval by the Bulgarian government. To suppress distribution of these brochures, the customs officials used extreme measures such as surrounding the exhibit with secret police, hiring children to snatch the brochures away, and planning a sit down strike for the Bulgarian employees of the exhibit. Mrs. Anderson, refusing to capitulate and surrender the brochures, won the right to distribute them when she threatened an American boycott of the fair. "They may have thought that because I was a woman they could push me around," Mrs. Anderson concluded.

The Ambassador also cited the Cuban Missile crisis as a crucial time in her "mission" as an ambassador. She maintained that the anti-American propaganda and anxiety among the people was rampant, with her own home being surrounded by scores of children shouting anti-American slogans. When the crisis had ended however, Mrs. Anderson believes that "the very firm stand President Kennedy took increased our respect among our allies as well as our enemies." Later that year, Mrs. Anderson reiterated that firm stand when she and the Nato Allies walked out of an anniversary celebration of the Bolshevik revolution, in which anti-American sentiment was widespread.

Eugenie Anderson, former U.S. Ambassador to Bulgaria.

Despite these times of crisis, Mrs. Anderson believes that relations did improve between the two countries. As a point of reference, she referred to her arrangement of the Eugena Stoneman piano concert in which the young American pianist won the respect of the Bulgarian young people. Later, when Stoneman spoke to them in Russian, they replied "Say it in English." "They didn't want to hear Russian," Mrs. Anderson said.

The ambassador also spoke of the full-blown photographs of world events she had placed in the windows of the American embassy. Although these displays were frequently the target of violent demonstration, they were popular with the Bulgarian people and often drew lines of spectators three and four deep.

Mrs. Anderson demonstrated her concern for the Bulgarian people in a speech she had prepared for Independence Day. By comparing the American Revolution to Bulgaria's independence from Turkey, Mrs. Anderson said she hoped "to reach the hearts of the Bulgarian people." After finishing the speech, Mrs. Anderson recalls that her maid, a Bulgarian woman, embraced her saying, "You really do know how we think, you really do know how we feel."

"...the very firm stand President Kennedy took increased our respect among our allies as well as our enemies."

—Eugenie Anderson

According to the ambassador, her confidence in the Bulgarians was strengthened when President Kennedy was assassinated because Bulgarians from all walks of life came to offer their sympathy. "If I had any doubts about the feelings of the Bulgarian people, they were erased at that time," she said.

Shortly thereafter, Mrs. Anderson's mission to Bulgaria was terminated and she was honored with a farewell dinner, wherein the dean of the U.S. Diplomatic corps said in a toast to her, "Mrs. Anderson, I think we have learned something from you. Governments come and go, but the people remain."

Women's Day:

Informative Speakers Spark Debate

By Alan Marshall

Although UVM's Women's Day arrived at Billings Center last Saturday to promote the women's cause and offer education on topics of abortion, sexuality and the Equal Rights Amendment, it left widely unnoticed.

The continuing plight by NOW (National Organization for Women), UVM Women's Organization and Referral Center, and other national and local proponents of women's rights was apparently lost to the bands on Redstone Campus and the springtime sunshine, even though a variety of women speakers sparked the small crowd into debate and conversation all afternoon.

Dr. Kay F. Schmucker of the UVM Counseling and Testing Center, spoke compassionately on women's sexuality. She listed six elements of women's ideas of sexuality that she believed kept women in their place. "The purpose and intent of a male/female relationship is different in each one's mind," she said. This often creates gaps in the relationship that are widened by the other factors. Rigid negative feelings of sex, lack of knowledge about pregnancy, and the anxiety about becoming pregnant along with the social pressures of rape, were Dr. Schmuckers' views of the state women find themselves in.

Dr. Kay F. Schmucker of the UVM Counseling and Testing Center.

SPS Photo by Mitch Sprung

In her talk, Schmucker emphasized the "sex-force conflicts" and sociological oppression of women that persist to keep females in their traditional roles. "It is important to understand your hangups from childhood," she said. "And important to talk to both sexes about your thoughts on sex."

Women in the workforce was another subject addressed during the April 22nd Women's Day. Rita Hunt from General Electric outlined the scope of her company's affirmative action program: "GE is trying to introduce men and women into every aspect of the work force," she said. Order four, a federal statute marking timetables and quotas for hiring women, and the Revised Order four, setting down goals, training programs and job titles, were remarked upon by Hunt to sketch out the laws companies now have to comply with.

Mrs. Hunt also expounded upon five management biases that are often apparent in today's hiring practices. "Women are seen in traditional roles," she said. "They (supposedly) lack logical thinking, are too emotional, take jobs from men, and don't really need to work." This thinking is slowly fading, in her view, and affirmative action beginning to take hold.

Mary Ann Brennan of the Champlain Valley NOW presented her party's interest in extending the deadline for ratifying the ERA. The current controversy of this constitutional amendment has continued to reach high levels as the March 1979 deadline approaches. 'Battered Wives' and 'Lesbianism' were two other issues talked on by Barnee Escott of the Women's House of Transition, and June McGinnis of the Gay Student Union, respectively.

The educational aspect of how women feel and the situation they often face brought many eyebrows to attention as listeners spoke, marking out their views. Many women feel in a very uncomfortable position with their relationship as Dr.

(continued on page 6)

Self-Help Handbook's Aim Is to Help Minority Students Cope With College

Princeton, N.J. — Minority students, often plunged suddenly into a setting that reflects an academic orientation, customs, attitudes and traditions different from their own, may suffer a kind of cultural shock on the nation's campuses.

That most of them are able to succeed is a tribute to their determination to work hard to overcome earlier academic deficiencies and to cope with the stresses of an unfamiliar environment, according to Dr. Luis Nieves, associate director of the Office for Minority Education, Educational Testing Service (ETS).

The publication, sponsored jointly by the ETS Office for Minority Education and the Graduate Record Examinations Board, was prepared after an extensive investigation into the problems and solutions of minority college students. The manual was produced with the assistance of some 60 minority students and a number of faculty advisers, counselors, psychologists, and educators.

"Research shows that positive feelings of self-worth, belief in inner control, realistic aspirations, a high motivation to achieve and confidence in the ability to succeed go hand in hand with academic success," Nieves said. "The will to succeed academically and the belief that it is possible lead students to develop good study habits. Good study habits lead to good grades, which reinforce their motivation."

"...many of the more then 900,000 minority students enrolled in colleges and universities across America have attitudes and behavior patterns that impair their academic performance."

Solutions to the problems of minority students demand a comprehensive system of self-assessment, said Nieves, who has written a guide to help them cope with the challenge of the new college atmosphere. "College Achievement Through Self-Help," the planning and guidance manual for minority students, explains self-control, self-management techniques and how they can be used to handle the most common and crucial problems facing minority – and other – students.

With a counselor, or on their own, students are taken through step-by-step problem-solving processes, with the aid of charts and multiple-choice questionnaires, designed to help them learn skills needed to get the most out of their higher education.

The keys to academic success are the same for minority students as for others, he added. They must learn practical, useful academic skills – how, what and when to study – plus the ability to deal with feelings of powerlessness, inadequacy, inferiority, and fear of failure.

In addition to poor academic preparation, many of the more than 900,000 minority students enrolled in colleges and universities across America have attitudes and behavior patterns that impair their academic performance, Nieves said. These include feelings of loneliness and rejection, lack of career goals and objectives, the belief that they are subject to external controls rather than being able to control situations themselves, and a negative self-image, he said.

Using the procedure for problem analysis set forth in the manual, a student defines a specific problem he has, indicates the change in behavior wanted, decides which actions need to be increased and which must be decreased, and then chooses which change techniques he will use to reach solutions to the problem.

According to Nieves, "College Achievement Through Self-Help" describes this method and teaches students to apply it to common academic problems such as budgeting study time, anxiety, mild depression, interpersonal relations and choosing a career.

The multimodal concept, said Nieves, offers students several significant advantages.

"It permits an integrated, overall view of a problem (poor academic performance, for example), yet it leaves room for more discrete problems (too little study time) and offers a structure for organizing corrective measures. Basically, it relies on the student's own desire for change as a motivating force."

The system contains the potential for comprehensive, lasting modification that can help minority students academically and emotionally while in college and in their later lives.

free pepsi

free pepsi

2-Pepsi's with small pizzal
4 Pepsi's with large pizzal
Exp. 5-16-78
658-3333

DOMINO'S PIZZA

SPEEDO

SPLASH - DOWN '78

Knife the water... You'll love to do it. Whether you're world-class Wendy or Doggie-Paddle Debbie, you belong in a speedo. Splash down and under Speedo-style in the suit that fits like a second skin. Find yourself a spot of sun-flavored water and dip away the day, in a Speedo... the choice of Champions. Shown $28. Sizes 34 to 38.
The Colony Shop on Main.

It's an experience
MAGRAMS
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

MasterLoan

Loans you design to fit your way of life.

Rate 9.31% Annual Percentage Rate!

Whether you drive away a new car or sail your boat home, we think you'll agree that Chittenden has loan rates you can live with. And you'll find a payment schedule to fit your lifestyle, too.

Make Chittenden a part of your life.

Chittenden TRUST COMPANY

Member FDIC

Equal Housing Lender

DANSKIN

"FREE-STYLE" LEOTARD

Gathered front and wide cut tank back. In assorted colors.

ACT TWO

97 Church St.

On the World Scene:

Job Outlook Looks Gloomy

Between now and the year 2000, some 800 million more people will be looking for work, according to the Population Reference Bureau's just released 1978 World Population Data Sheet. Increases in the world's labor force will be most dramatic in the developing countries of Asia, Africa, and Latin America, while only moderate increases are projected for more developed countries and regions.

"While we have reached a critical turning point in the world's 'population explosion,' as a result of the declining world birth rate during the 1970s, humanity must brace itself for yet another explosion – that of its labor force," says PRB research demographer Thomas T. Kane, who prepared the Data Sheet with Paul Myers, former chief of the Foreign Demographic Analysis Division, U.S. Bureau of the Census, and Population Consultant to the PRB.

This rapid growth in the world labor force (which does not mean growth in the number of jobs) is a phenomenon that is primarily due to the annual arrival of millions of young people into the working ages and the changing labor force participation rates for males and females in each age group. As a result, the world labor force will increase from 1.7 billion to 2.5 billion in just 22 years.

With an estimated 300 to 500 million currently unemployed persons throughout the world, the new figures project the need to create a startling total of one billion more jobs than exist today if massive, worldwide unemployment is to be avoided by the year 2000.

The Data Sheet gives an estimated world population, as of mid-1978, of 4,219,000,000, with an annual growth rate of 1.7 percent, a drop from last year's estimated 1.8 percent. Importantly, the world's birth rate is continuing to drop and for the first time in recorded history has fallen below 30 per 1,000 (to 29 per 1,000), with the death rate holding at 12 per 1,000. These figures contrast with those of 1970, when the world birth rate was 32 per 1,000, the death rate was 13, and the world's growth rate stood at 1.9 percent.

Massive family planning efforts in developing countries and the adoption by many nations of policies designed to reduce population growth appear to be having a marked impact on the still-high world growth rate, as are record-low fertility rates in developed countries.

WANTED: 1 BILLION NEW JOBS

By the year 2000 Asia's labor force is expected to grow by 509 million (an increase of 51 percent over 1978), while Africa's will increase by 121 million (74 percent), and Oceania's by 5 million (47 percent). During the same period Latin America's labor force will increase by 96 million (a sharp 87 percent rise).

A number of developing countries will actually more than double their labor forces: Mexico, Colombia, Peru, Venezuela, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Algeria, Morocco, Syria, Jordan, Honduras, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Surinam, and Iraq. All show projected labor force increases of more than 100 percent over the next two decades.

In many developed countries, declining birth rates, trends of delayed entry into the labor force because of such factors as extended education and earlier retirement are off-setting the labor force increase due to the greater participation of women. During the rest of the century North America's labor force is projected to grow by some 30 million (28 percent), while that of the USSR grows by 20 million (15 percent), and Europe adds 30 million for a 14 percent rise. Italy, the Federal Republic of Germany, Luxembourg, Finland, Greece, Bulgaria, and Hungary are projected to increase their labor forces by less than 10 percent by the year 2000.

Increasingly large labor surpluses in countries with already high unemployment and underemployment will undoubtedly cause added strain on the political and social systems of these countries. Without rapid, labor-intensive economic development in these areas the only alternative to relieving high unemployment would be emigration (whether legal or illegal) to countries of greater economic opportunity.

In recent years many of these countries have been able to use emigration as an escape valve for high unemployment, since some developed countries with labor shortages have resorted to importing labor – for example, the foreign laborers in Europe. But since the 1974 world economic recession, even the most economically stable developed nations have been faced with undesirably high unemployment levels and are now trying to encourage foreign workers (with cash payments in some cases) to go home. The presence of foreign national workers has also been a cause of social unrest.

At present, the world's developed and developing nations are unsure how to avoid a dramatic rise in worldwide levels of unemployment. Suggested remedies include the relocation of multinational corporation plants in developing countries, and the rotation of foreign workers into (and out of) jobs in labor-short countries, so as to spread the economic benefits as widely as possible.

Data on the projected increase in the labor force for each country were derived from the labor estimates and projections of the International Labor Office, Geneva, Switzerland. The ILO labor force projections are based on the estimated and projected age-sex specific activity rates for each country and the UN medium variant projections of the total population for each country. Labor force, as defined by the ILO for these projections, comprises all employed and unemployed persons (including those seeking work for the first time), and covers employers, persons working on their own account, salaried employees, wage earners, unpaid family workers, members of producer's cooperatives and members of the armed forces.

"While we have reached a critical turning point in the world's 'population explosion', as a result of the declining world birth rate during the 1970s, humanity must brace itself for yet another explosion — that of its labor force."

—PRB research demographer Thomas T. Kane

CHINESE POPULATION HIGHER

The 1978 Data Sheet lists all UN member nations and all geopolitical entities (whether UN members or not) with populations larger than 200,000 – in all, 162 countries ranging in size from the 62,000 of Seychelles to a new, higher estimate of 930 million for the People's Republic of China.

This new China estimate by PRB takes into account higher-than-expected population totals announced through Chinese radio and newspapers during the 1975-1977 period. Other recent reports of China's successful efforts in family planning and health care led to downward revisions in the Data Sheet's estimated levels of fertility and mortality. These revised estimates of China's population and vital rates have enormous effect on the world totals as the country comprises more than one-fifth of the world's total population.

Women's Day

continued from page five

Schmucker stated. "They stay in a relationship because any relationship is better than none," she said.

As one woman remarked in regard to the sexual attitudes and homosexuality on this campus, "There is the notion that self-stimulation is bad, but sleeping with anybody, absolutely anybody is okay... there is something wrong with that." Sympathy with this notion was symbolic of the liberal, articulate attitude many observers held.

Women's Day here at UVM appeared to be either an organizational flop or a victim of apathy, but for those who attended, the realities of female discrimination and the interest in constitutionalizing women's rights are sharper than ever.

VERMONT CYNIC

Quebec's "Quiet Revolution"

By Tom Daniels

North of the border, a new nation may be emerging out of the 111-year-old Canadian federation. Even before Charles De Gaulle addressed a Montreal crowd with the fateful words "Vive le Quebec libre!" (Long live free Quebec), French speaking Quebecers have been anxious to preserve their language and culture. Since the arrival of explorer Jacques Carier in 1534, Quebec has had a distinct French influence. Despite losing control of Canada to the English in 1763, the French have maintained their own way of life. Over time and in the face of anti-French prejudice, French Canadians came to agree that their future could be guaranteed only by gaining political control.

In 1968, one year after De Gaulle's speech, Rene Levesque founded the Parti Quebecois (PQ). In November 1976, the Parti Quebecois captured 71 out of 110 seats in the Quebec Parliament and Levesque became Quebec's Prime Minister. Armed with the PQ slogan "It's time for a change," the Quebec Parliament last August passed Bill 101 which recognizes French as Quebec's sole official language and effectively outlaws English. Bill 101 was directly aimed at the national "two cultures" policy promoting bilingualism as a way of unifying Canada. Although only one million of the six million Quebecers are English speaking, French Quebecers feared the bilingualism policy would undermine their ethnic character.

Levesque and the PQ are sensitive about Quebec's image and stress "a quiet revolution" by legal means. In a year or so, the PQ intends to present Quebec voters with a referendum on whether Quebec should secede from the rest of Canada. If the referendum passes and Quebec tries to secede, it will be a Canadian first and a unique example of democracy in action. The PQ reasons that "the right of all peoples to choose their own political regime is enshrined in the United Nations charter signed by 130 countries including Canada. Since Quebecers live in a democracy, it is up to them to determine their own destiny. The Quebec government intends to achieve political sovereignty through democratic means, while respecting the rights of its neighbors." Yet to be worked out are the problems of the transfer of powers from Ottawa and the adoption of a Quebec national constitution.

"More and more Vermont land, houses, and businesses are being bought by nervous English Quebecers looking for a 'safety valve' should life in the province become intolerable. . . . But the English are reluctant to leave Quebec, having lived in and around Montreal for generations."

The majority of Quebecers feel they have been relegated to the role of a minority in the Canadian federation. Quebec holds only 74 out of 264 seats in the national Parliament and feels impotent in determining its own cultural, economic, and social development. In recent years, political power has become more consolidated in Ottawa and economic power has moved westward to Toronto, Calgary, Winnipeg, and Vancouver. Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has had enough problems running his country (not to mention his wife), and no love is lost between himself and Mr. Levesque.

Rene Levesque (center) became the Prime Minister of Quebec in 1976.

The PQ victory came as a shock to Canada. Should Quebec attempt to secede, it is uncertain what action the Ottawa government will take to maintain a unified Canada. It is certain, however, that if Quebec secedes, Canada will suffer severely. Other than losing face, Canada would lose its best link to the Atlantic through Montreal and the economically depressed Maritime provinces would be further isolated. Quebec has an abundance of natural resources including a well-developed hydro-power system and the world's largest asbestos deposits. The Ottawa government is painfully aware that should Quebec succeed, other provinces might be tempted to form their own nations.

With an unemployment rate of 11%, Quebec is desperately in need of economic solutions. Although 80% of the province is French speaking, business has traditionally been dominated by English-speaking residents. Montreal is the business heart of Canada; 240 major corporations are centered there, among them the headquarters of U.S. companies operating in Canada. Bill 101 requires all Quebec business and educational institutions to speak only French. To oversee the "Françization" of English-speaking businesses, the Office de la Langue Francais was established. The PQ is hoping that with the French-only law, businesses will hire French Quebecers who make up the bulk of the province's unemployed. Instead, many businesses are leaving Montreal, some staying in Canada, others fleeing the country.

Although Quebec has the material and human resources to achieve political independence, it cannot live in isolation. The PQ has proposed an economic association with Canada that would be "mutually advantageous." Toward the rest of the world, Quebec would pursue a foreign policy of peaceful cooperation.

More and more Vermont land, houses, and businesses are being bought by nervous English Quebecers looking for a "safety valve" should life in the province become intolerable. The relocation of businesses in Vermont would be welcome especially in the economically depressed border county of Franklin. But the English are reluctant to leave Quebec, having lived in and around Montreal for generations. The English may hope for the defeat of the independence referendum and the defeat of the Parti Quebecois at the next election. Still, a nation of French Canadians is more than a possibility; it is a rapidly approaching reality.

THE APPALACHIAN GAP
Clothes for Men & Women

199 College St.

The Sheik Cafe
PRESENTS
CABIN FEVER
Thursday April 27
MELISMA
Friday April 28
KEVIN AGUSTI
Saturday April 30
Nitely Drink Specials
Long List of Imported & Domestic
Beers & Wines & Sandwiches
41 King Street 864-5395

OPEN SEVEN DAYS A WEEK
Bringing You
The Most Complete Selection of Underwater Gear in the Champlain Valley
Parkways—Poseidon—US Divers—Decor—AMF-Voit—SeaQuest

White Water Enthusiasts:
See our complete line of
COLD WATER EXPOSURE GARMENTS
We offer all levels of N.A.U.I. certification... Summer courses now being scheduled. Come sign up!
AIRFILLS/RENTALS/REPAIRS
northern divers inc.
Open 10—6
Seven days a week
100 Main St.
862—3881
"Vermont's Most Complete Dive Shop"

Study in Vermont This Summer.

At U.V.M. Summer Session.

Four Good Reasons Why:

Lower Tuition.

Just compare. For residents of Vermont it only costs $40 per credit as compared to the regular year $50. For out-of-state students the cost is a mere $55 as compared to $146.

Study While You Work.

You can pick courses to fit into your own job schedule. The summer courses meet at a variety of times to make it convenient for almost anyone to study full-time or part-time.

Visiting Professors.

During the summer, professors from all regions of the country come to UVM to teach their specialties in a mild climate. They often teach courses that are not normally taught at the university during the regular year.

Burlington in the Summer.

You know how nice it is in the Queen City on either side of winter when you don't have to hassle the slush and the snow. In addition to the fine weather, the atmosphere is far more relaxed and low key.

Try U.V.M. This Summer.

For Further Information Contact Continuing Education at Grasse Mount.

Energy Saving Proposals Made By Waste Hunt Team

By Jonathan Roth

A set of energy saving proposals, including one asking UVM administrators to schedule night courses in fewer buildings across campus, have been the result of an "Energy Waste Hunt" conducted on the University campus last month under the auspices of the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG).

Under the direction of UVM sophomores Krista Billings and Nicole Noyes, the group will submit to the administration a final report summing up the findings and proposals, at the end of the semester.

Under present policy evening classes are spread out across campus, which results in the need for the heating and cooling of entire buildings where only a couple of classes may be going on, according to the report.

Project co-director Billings said the practice was wasteful and could be altered by putting the scheduled classes in a fewer number of buildings.

"Measures such as this should be carefully considered by the administration, and should be urged by the student body, especially in light of rising tuition prices due in part to high energy costs," Billings said.

"Measures such as this should be carefully considered by the administration..."

—project co-director Billings

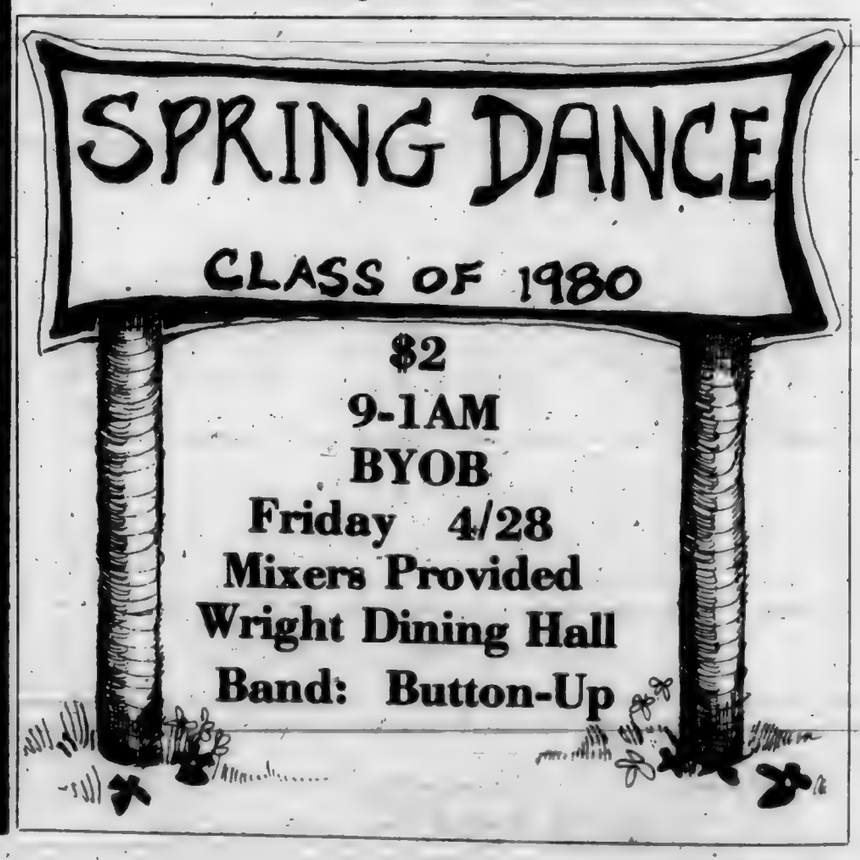
Among other energy conservation methods to be suggested is a call for lowering campus buildings temperatures during the evening hours when they are not in use. Water temperatures were also surveyed and found to be, in many instances, unnecessarily high in relation to standards set in the energy guidebook, How to Save Energy and Cut Costs in Existing Industrial and Commercial Buildings. Measurements taken at the Mansfield House showed that bathroom faucet water was almost 30 degrees F above the standards set for that use in the energy guidebook. The report asked that these temperatures be lowered to save energy.



According to the study, the university already has systems capable of monitoring and controlling energy used for heating and cooling UVM's buildings' water supply. For financial reasons the systems have not been hooked up to the majority of campus structures, however, and therefore cannot be used to their maximum benefit for energy conservation. Although university spokesmen say the process of connecting the newly purchased control systems to campus heating and cooling units is proceeding at a rapid pace, all UVM buildings will probably not be under monitoring for at least five years.

The report advises UVM to switch from the incandescent bulbs it often uses for lighting to flourescent bulbs. Flourescent bulbs are up to five times as efficient as equivalent incandescent bulbs, according to the How to Save Energy guide. The survey found that the Given Building and the Bailey Library already have flourescent lighting.

A total of sixteen campus buildings – only one of them a dormitory – were surveyed. Measurements were taken by the fifteen students in the task force, to determine room and water temperatures, as well as lighting outputs. Similar surveys have been made in Vermont public and private schools and in Massachusetts and New York.

Presently, there are three basic energy conservation methods being utilized at UVM says Wilbur Newton, a university energy spokesman. These are: repair and maintenance of existing energy-related equipment; replacement of outdated equipment; and reduction of energy load during campus off-peak use times.

"The cooperation the students involved with the project received from the University administration, on all levels, was truly inspiring. Both parties have already benefitted from the experience, and UVM will be the main benefactor if our proposals are looked at with care and implemented whenever possible," according to VPIRG President David White.

Work and Skills Will Be Bartered In New Program

By John Letteri

Recognizing the need for a way to maintain parts of the Burlington community without hiring professional help, a bartering program will be instituted through the Burlington Ecumenical Action Ministry (BEAM) in May.

Under the proposed system, people will exchange the skills they have without a monetary cost to either party. For example, an experienced carpenter may need part of his house painted and painter may need some cabinets built. Rather than each of these people paying for others to come in and do work they would work out a deal with each other. The carpenter would get his house painted and the painter would get his cabinets built.

People may also simply give their time under the program. For example, a lawyer may counsel a person who otherwise would be unable to pay his fee. Or a plumber might work for five hours fixing a leaky pipe, for a mechanic, while the mechanic might work only two hours fixing his car.

In th e situations, both the lawyer and the plumber would have "credit" hours. The mechanic and the counselled person would be in "debt" to the program for one and three hours respectively.

At a later time, the lawyer or plumber may need something done and could use these "credit" hours to find a person in the program to do the job. On the other hand, if the need arises for a mechanic or the skill of the counseled person, they would both have to work off their "debt" hours.

The main idea is to create a "skills bank" according to Mike Tessier, executive director of BEAM. People will be able to share their skills in return for the skills of others.

If a person runs up a large "debt," however, a randomly chosen peer group of people within the program will settle the dispute. Steven Lange, co-cordinator of the program, envisions the bartering process as a "credit union." "And credit unions do lose money," he said. The program is promoting "a neighbor to neighbor exchange" where people hopefully won't run up large "debts."

People who want to share their skills will go down to the BEAM offices (located in the Church St. Center) and register with the "Give and Take" program. They will fill out a simple form that describes their name, address, and telephone number, as well as what skills they have to offer and what things they need done.

Lange and co-coordinator Leslie Klein will then get people together according to skills available and tasks needed to be done. From there, it is left to the two people to work out a deal.

These two people will then fill out another form which states the "hours given" and the "hours taken." After the work is completed, and the people must assume responsibility for their work, hours are "credited," "debited," or simply recorded according to the situation.

Lange said that the program may also allow the unemployed to use their skills as well as put them in contact with a potential employer. Klein said that the combining of youths and senior citizens may also be the result of the "Give and Take Program."

Successful bartering programs are functioning in North Carolina and on a national level with the Useful Service Exchange Program. A barter theater has operated in Virginia since 1933 and has gained international recognition.

The targeted opening date for the "Give and Take" program is May 15, with open house registration and information from May 15-20. A Barter Festival and Theatre are also planned for the late summer in City Hall park. The "Give and Take" program located in the BEAM office in the Church Street Center on Church Street in Burlington.

Vermont's Finest ALL NATURAL Ice Cream

ben & jerry's homemade

Incredible Ice Cream

Amazing Crepes

Opening May 6th Special

Buy one cone, get one FREE with this ad till May 12th

St. Paul & College St. Across from City Hall Park

BANDOLINO

Spring Fever...

PIXIE

Can You Feel It?

Why don't you ride with the fever in a new pair of Bandolino Wedges. Bright canvas uppers set atop a sculptured wood wedge, with a soft ribbed rubber sole for comfort. Designed for your latest spring fashions. C'mon, let Bandolino give you your Spring Fever!

Black, Blue, Khaki, Red, Natural

Sizes 5-10, N-M Widths

30 Church St.
Downtown
864-4735

Jan's

Vermont's Quality Shoe Store

Mon. & Fri. til 9:00
Master Charge/Visa
Parking & Bus Tokens

HATS, HATS, HATS...

LARGE and SMALL FOR THE ACTIVE OUTDOOR LIFE

Suede — Hand stained cowhide

Priced from $19 and up

SUNDANCE

A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

Get all the Foreign Car Parts you need from Audi to 240Z

You might find a foreign car muffler at one place. Or a filter somewhere else. But, if you're looking for all the foreign car parts, all in one place, call your Beck/Arnley expert. Because Foreign Car Parts are his only business, he makes it his business to have all the Foreign car parts for just about every foreign make. The next time you need a foreign car part, call the man who's got it. Your expert from Beck/Arnley.

10% Student Discount

Imported Parts Center

3060 Williston Road

South Burlington, Vermont 05401

World And National News Briefs

Compiled by Robert Cassidy and Sue Ward

Proposed Sale of Petroleum Leases Cancelled

The Interior Department Tuesday cancelled a proposed sale next year of petroleum leases off the South Atlantic coast. A department spokesman said the sale was cancelled because of a lack of interest and because drilling may interfere with satellite launchings from Cape Canaveral, Florida.

The Blake Plateau, the proposed lease area, lies offshore of the United States and the Bahamas, but no agreed boundary exists to define the authority of either country.

The announcement said removal of the sale from the schedule will allow time for resolving this and other problems.

Van Gogh Painting Damaged by Assailant

A self-portrait by Vincent Van Gogh, valued at more than one and a half million dollars, was slashed with a knife in an Amsterdam museum Tuesday.

It was the second attack on one of the Dutch master's works within three weeks. The assailant was identified by police as a 32-year-old Dutch artist with a history of mental illness.

The damaged painting, "Self-Portrait with Grey Hat," dates from Van Gogh's Parisan period and was finished in 1877. The spokesman said the attacker slashed the work with two diagonal cuts which ran through the original canvas and covered the whole of the surface.

The defaced work was taken to the museum's restoration department where experts will inspect the damage.

Marshall Defends Labor Department

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Tuesday his department is fully committed to the fight against labor racketeering. Marshall is challenging the Justice department's contention that labor racketeering is on the increase. Marshall told the senate investigating subcommittee today he has not seen evidence that the problem is more pervasive than it was 20 years ago.

In the second day of senate subcommittee hearings, Marshall also defended his department against charges that it hasn't been a full partner in anti-racketeering efforts. At the same time, he said past antagonism between his agency and the justice department has hampered anti-crime efforts. He added that he and Attorney General Griffen Bell now have an understanding on cooperation.

Kennedy Denies Split from Wife

Reports that Joan Kennedy, wife of sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., "has decided to go it alone" in an apartment in Boston were published Tuesday in two New York newspapers.

Kennedy family sources in Washington denied the couple has separated. There has been no comment from Mrs. Kennedy on the reports.

The New York Post quoted unnamed friends as saying Mrs. Kennedy has been living in a two bedroom apartment on Beacon Street for the past two months.

In response to questions as to whether the Kennedys have separated, a Washington spokesman for Kennedy said that the allegations were false.

Arms Sales to Middle East Threatened

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill says Democratic leaders in both houses of congress are urging President Carter to delay his proposal for sales of jet fighter planes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia, as well as to Israel.

O'Neill said Tuesday it is his feeling the president does not have the votes either in committee or on the floor to okay the jet fighter sale. He said if Carter delays submitting the proposed sale, congressional sentiment might become more favorable, especially if conditions improve in the Middle East. O'Neill said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd concurs in that opinion.

The formal proposal on the arms sale was scheduled to go to Capitol Hill Wednesday, unless Carter decided to delay it.

The administration is showing the first signs it might consider changes in its proposal. It is inviting members of Congress to the State Department to discuss it.

Israel's Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan flew to Washington Tuesday to protest the Carter Administration's plan to sell jet fighters to Egypt and Saudi-Arabia.

Nixon Memoirs Boycotted

Two men in Washington, with financial help from a group of friends, have organized a committee to boycott the selling of Richard Nixon's memoirs which are due out next month.

Tom Flanigan and Bill Boleyn are putting out anti-Nixon-book posters and T-shirts; their slogan is "Don't buy books by crooks."

They say it just doesn't strike them as right that the man who refused to give his tapes to the American people should turn around and sell a book for an "outrageous" price. Flanigan says he thinks if the publishers were willing to put the book on the fiction list, they would drop the campaign.

Bus Plunge

A chartered bus carrying "The Four Tops," a Detroit based rock 'n roll band, collided with a truck Tuesday before plunging down an embankment near Athens, Georgia. Fourteen people were hurt, including all four of the group's singers. The injured included six other musicians, the fiancee of one of the band members, two drivers on the bus and the driver of the truck.

Soviets Claim Korean Jet

A Soviet official this week said the Russians made several attempts to contact a Korean airliner before a Soviet jet fired at it in an effort to force it to land.

The Soviet official's account, the first from Moscow since the incident itself was reported, contradicts that of the Korean plane's co-pilot, who said there was no warning before the Soviet jet began firing.

Two passengers were killed in the incident and a number were injured.

Begelman to Stand Trial

A Superior Court judge in Pasedena, California Tuesday ordered former Columbia Pictures president David Begelman to stand trial June 19 on grand theft and forgery charges. Begelman is accused of endorsing bogus checks in the names of actor Cliff Robertson, director Martin Ritt and restauranteur Pierre Groleau. Begelman has pleaded innocent to the charges. Pre-trial motions are scheduled for May 15.

Brezhnev asks Carter to Ban Neutron Bomb

President Carter has rejected Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's offer to ban the neutron bomb if the United States also would agree to do so. While Carter has postponed production of the neutron warheads, he dismissed the Soviet offer as being "of no significance." He also said Brezhnev knew that when he made the offer.

In his nationally broadcast news conference Carter suggested that he might be receptive to a neutron bomb tradeoff involving a partial pullback of massive Russian tank forces from central Europe.

Brezhnev had denounced neutron weapons as "especially inhuman." Carter pointed out that the neutron weapon is designed for use mostly against tanks.

The neutron bomb is a nuclear weapon designed to inflict battlefield casualties with radiation while limiting blast damage. Although it is referred to as a bomb, the weapon is designed for use as a warhead for the 81-mile range Lance missile and for Howitzer shells that can be fired a distance up to 12 miles.

The U.S. military wants the weapon as an "equalizer" against the possibility of a tank attack in central Europe, where the Russians have an estimated three-to-one advantage.

Backers of the weapon say it would kill invading tank crews with radiation while saving civilian lives and property on the periphery of the battlefield. Opponents of the neutron bomb contend it would encourage the use of nuclear weapons if fighting breaks out in Europe.

Rhodesian Settlement Stymied

British-American moves toward an all-party peace conference on Rhodesia suffered a major setback Tuesday. The multi-racial transitional government in Salisbury said new talks would prove no more successful than past efforts.

The Rhodesian move came a few hours after South African Prime Minister John Vorster accepted the West's plan for a settlement in South-West Africa – Namibia.

Without categorically rejecting the so-called Anglo-American peace plan, Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and his three black allies heading the transitional government, called on Britain and the United States to consider "putting to an early test" broad local support for the internal settlement signed last month.

Highlights of President Carter's Press Conference

President Carter vowed Tuesday to stand by his proposal for the sale of U.S. jet fighter planes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia, as well as to Israel. At the news conference, Carter also did the following:

—he called essential his proposed reform of the civil service system to make the government more responsive.

—while repeating his pledge of economic aid for New York City, he said the city must prove it can balance its budget and control expenses before congress will approve federal assistance legislation.

—he declared that he wants the full $25 billion tax cut he proposed to Congress. He insisted that the reduction would not be inflationary, as some have argued. House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman had voiced a belief that Carter would accept a $15 billion tax slash.

COMMENTARY

Vermont Agriculture:

It's Almost Plantin' Time

By Tom Daniels

"One for the worm
One for the crow
One to rot
And one to grow." English Proverb

The future of Vermont is closely linked to the future of its agriculture. Although agriculture is now Vermont's third largest industry behind manufacturing and tourism, it still is the key to preserving Vermont as a viable rural state with a high quality of life. The economic and aesthetic importance of agriculture should not be underestimated. About one-sixth of Vermont's labor force is employed in agriculture or a food-related business; and picturesque open spaces, forests, and farms in no small way benefit the tourist industry.

This season, Vermont farmers are looking to recover from a year of crises. The early summer drought of 1977 stunted crop growth in the prime agricultural counties of Chittenden, Addison, Franklin, and Rutland. Farmers had to feed their livestock next winter's supply of hay until finally in August these four counties were declared disaster areas and farmers received emergency feed grain. Then the ceaseless downpours of late September prevented farmers from harvesting their corn crop and much of it was left to rot. Also, outbreaks of brucellosis, a disease which causes cows to abort and produce less milk, raised nervous, angry questions about how to stop the disease from spreading and providing dairymen fair compensation for cattle destroyed.

The future of Vermont agriculture depends on several ingredients, most immediately land. There are presently 3,500 commercial farms in the state, nearly all of them family owned and operated. Vermont farms average 280 acres and, according to a 1972 study by Benjamin Huffman, have been found to be more efficient than large agricultural firms. Regardless, Vermont farm land has disappeared at an alarming rate to where only 20% of Vermont's land is in farms compared with 43% in 1964. The past fourteen years have seen: (1) the growth of Vermont's urban areas; (2) foreign purchases of farm land; and (3) out-of-state purchases of farm land for recreational and seasonal use. Dr. Alvin Converse of Dartmouth has estimated that if current rates of sale of Vermont farm land continue, there will be no farms left in the state by the year 2000!

With skyrocketing land prices and taxes, all farmers have felt heavy development pressures. Farmers have long complained that they pay more than their fair share of local taxes, and that property taxes should be based on ability to pay (i.e. income) rather than wealth. Bill H. 361, passed by the 1978 Legislature, represents a substantial commitment by the people of Vermont to preserve its farms. H. 361 allows farmers to enter into contracts with the state to have their land taxes on its use value as farm land, not according to the present fair market value. In return for lower property taxes, the farmer agrees not to develop his land. If the land is sold and the use changed, the buyer pays a 10% tax on the market value. To qualify, a farmer must earn at least half of his income from farming. The program begins in 1981 and a $3 million fund will be set up to reimburse towns for tax losses.

Dairy production accounts for 90% of Vermont's $185 million farm income, and is protected from outside competition. If cheaper Wisconsin milk were allowed east of New York City, the Boston milkshed would be flooded, and many Vermont farms would be put out of business. Vermont sells 95% of its milk in the Boston market where the price is federally controlled at 80% of parity (Parity is a price which supposedly covers the cost of production and gives the farmer a fair return on his investment). Consequently, without an act of Congress, Vermont farmers are unable to pass along increased costs to consumers. Vermont must recognize that it does not fit into the nation's major agricultural picture. For example, USDA officials partial to the Mid-West grain lobby, have offered to pay Vermont farmers not to grow grain to keep grain prices high. Instead, Vermont grain production should be encouraged to feed Vermont cows.

With prices fixed and costs rising, a farmer's only choice other than selling out has been to expand production, even though the demand for milk has not grown with increased milk output. Farmers have gone deep into debt to pay higher feed, electricity, fuel, land and machinery prices. Farming requires long-term investment and gives a low return 2% to 4% on total farm worth. The result has been that farmers are rich in land but cash poor. With yearly fluctuations in weather and income, not to mention the long hours, few vacations, and hard work, farmers have been selling off some or all of their farms to increase earnings. More importantly, the average age of the fabled Vermont farmer is over 50, and many are counting on the eventual sale of all or part of their farm to cover debts and establish a retirement fund. The passing on of a farm from a father to his children is becoming increasingly rare, and starting from scratch in farming is almost financially impossible.

Because of over-reliance on dairy farming and the expected increase in the cost of importing food (Vermont now imports roughly 85% of its food) research should be conducted on the possibilities of growing and marketing other crops and animals to help feed Vermont and for export. In addition, energy sources, such as wind solar, methane from manure, and wood might be developed to provide relatively cheap, renewable energy. Small scale and part-time farming should be encouraged through the creative co-ordinated action of the Extension Service, University of Vermont, and the State Department of Agriculture.

The future of Vermont's economy, appearance, and character is tied to how the land is used and the prosperity of the state's farmers.

The Humanization of Education

By Eric Kilburn

For too many of us, the learning process at college (or other traditional forms of education) amounts to little more than what educator-philosopher Paulo Freire calls "Banking Education." You walk into class, and the professor makes a "deposit" in your account, manifested in the often-illegible scribbles of your notebook. Discussion of material is rarely encouraged, or saved for the last minutes of class with a begrudging "Any questions?", by which time almost everyone is so overdrawn that they can't wait to leave. At regular intervals, the student surveys his/her account in preparation for a "withdrawal notice" (test) served up by the professor, and the carefully memorized information is summarily regurgitated. The extent and quality of the regurgitant determines the grade the student receives, since tests are seldom designed to monitor conceptual or reasoning abilities. Within a few years, the cream of the crop will now find themselves behind the lecturn, continuing in the depository tradition of their predecessors, and helping to perpetuate the myth.

Too cynical? An exaggeration? Perhaps, but for many individuals – particularly people in the sciences – the preceding description is simply too familiar, and it hurts. No one likes being dehumanized to the role of data-absorbent sponge, yet we literally buy into it, devoting thousands of dollars and years of our lives to the vogue place; what does "getting ahead" mean, and in relation to whom? Secondly, are we really getting a 'good education' when we tend to judge a professor's teaching qualities by the degree of writer's cramp suffered by his/her students at the conclusion of class?

Too often we accept the dubious and patronizing logic that "you've got to know the facts before you can learn how to think (poor child)." Aside from the "fact" that we've been hearing this line since first grade, it is quite possible to teach any educational discipline in a thought-provoking and pertinent manner. I have known teachers who could make such stereotypically irrelevant offerings as trigonometry, chemistry, and calcus stimulating and meaningful to their students, without detracting from factual content. Yet, students will also attest to existence of 200-level courses where entire lectures consisted of a verbatim recitation from the course's assigned text (perhaps it was assumed that students do not know how to read?).

Despite the previous condemnations, it is clearly unfair to rest the blame for classroom frustrations solely on the professor. In the same sense that policemen are usually only the enforcers, not the makers of laws, educators are often required to operate within an accepted and artificially determined scope that crimps their approach to teaching. Evidence for this assertion can be found in the Vermont public school system's recent return to the pseudo-educational drudgery of the basic competencies, and in the University's long and shameful history of firing or not rehiring professors who in some way deviated from the "norm," especially in their political philosophies. In the latter case, the ostensible reasons for dismissal have been as superficial as they are varied, but the implicit message is clear: conform or dig ditches. In modern society, conformity at the expense of creativity and diversity may be somewhat tolerable in hamburger stands, automobiles, and TV dinners, but education is not a commodity to be mass-packaged and merchandized.

Why then, do a majority of UVM students accept what is handed to them, opting for the easier hard-studying, hard-partying lifestyle, instead of the many potential sources for individual expression and direction. Undoubtedly, the spectre of post-graduate unemployment and the related concern over grades are significant factors, but a problem like this, if you believe it's a problem, cannot be simplified into a few numbers on a piece of paper. Rather, I believe that by design and by circumstance the university assists students in taking the less difficult but mundane "catch-a-fact, catch-a-buzz" approach. Apart from the aforementioned tradition of course instruction, the homogeneity of dorm living is another example. Dormitories allow us the "freedom" of never having to think about our lower needs – the food is standardized and prepared for us, the corridors are swept, the toilets are clean, even the rooms on the hall are the same size. Theoretically, with all this free time, we are now better able to pursue our academic endeavors, right? Maybe, but this sublimation of basic necessities has also caused students to take them for granted or ignore them altogether, forgetting that 99 percent of the rest of the world is not so fortunate.

On the surface, it appears more difficult to follow, an experientially based course of learning (rather than the conventional approach), yet a multitude of opportunities exist. The Center for Service Learning puts out a forty-page guide to educational alternatives at UVM (entitled "Choices"), many of which offer credit and/or stipends, if mere satisfaction isn't enough. Ironically, most of the programs have more positions than there are students to fill them. If this sounds too extreme, leading physicians have recommended taking a two-hour walk through Burlington's North End as an introductory dose of reality. Talking to people who eat on food stamps and wonder where next month's rent is coming from make one's own problems of having to memorize a Shakespearean sonnet or the twelve orders of lower bryophytes seem small by comparison.

Ultimately, an education whose fundamental structure does not enable the student to think, analyze, and knowlegably deal with some of the diverse conditions of society is nothing more than "intellectual masturbation." Conversely, any process that genuinely brings us closer to the problems of humanity is inherestly humanizing, regardless of the subject area. Given that the existing educational system generally steers students toward fitting into rather than acting upon society, the final choice, and eventual responsibility is ours. We do have the choices; it might not finance a summer place on Grand Isle, but that is hopefully not the goal.

As a guide in moving towards the humanization of education, no one said it better than a well-known Chinese philosopher.

> Whoever wants to know a thing has no way of doing so except by coming into contact with it, that is, by living (practicing) in its environment. If you want knowledge, you must take part in the practice of changing reality. If you want to know the taste of a pear, you must change the pear by eating it yourself.

Kinda makes you hungry, don't it?

SUMMER CYNIC

VOLUME IV NUMBER 1 — "News is the opiate of the wise." — JUNE 15, 1978

We'll Be Here For The Summer...

...Will You?

If Not...

First Prize
Lucia Graziano

Best Abstract
Bruce Conklin

FEATURES
Cynic Photo Contest Winners

Honorable Mention
Ernie Richards

Honorable Mention
Lucia Graziano

final day!

the ring sale.

$59.95

save up to $31.00

Men's traditional Siladium® rings and selected women's fashion rings are an unusual buy at $59.95.
Today is your last chance to get really outstanding savings in this sale.

THE ARTCARVED REPRESENTATIVE has a large collection of rings. Ask to see them.

Thurs. & Fri. April 27 & 28
10 AM - 3PM
$15.00 Deposit Please.

UNIVERSITY STORE

CYNIC Short Story Contest Runner-up

Old Henry drifted from his stupor. He lay still for a while with his face buried in his dirty pillow, then rolled clumsily onto his back and squinted at the little room. He thought about getting up, but he felt too sick and sleepy to do anything but lie there trying not to move his throbbing head. He drew the old blanket closer around him and was nearly asleep when he realized what day it was. He lurched up from the bed, but fell back with his head between his knees trying not to be sick. "Stupid s'umbitch," he mumbled.

Henry rose feebly and shuffled around the room. He was still wearing the clothes he had worn for the past week, shoes and all. He kicked an empty pint aside and stood before the cracked mirror over his dresser. The broken reflection of a toothless, filthy old man with sunken eyes and matted gray hair stared back at him. "Can't go see Sammy like this," he muttered, taking out the clean change of clothes he saved each month for this day. After a brief search, he found his towel and soap and groped down the corridor to the bathroom.

It was nearly an hour before Henry returned to his room, clean-shaven but still shaky. The place looked even worse than usual to him this morning. There were porno magazines, empty bottles, and smelly clothes scattered all over the floor. To his left stood a shadeless floor lamp and a decrepit easy chair riddled with cigarette burns and belching puffs of gray stuffing. Tacked on the wall over the chair was a faded photo of five men in glittering cowboy suits standing on a wide, brightly-lit stage. On the yellow lower edge of the photo, Henry had written "The Moonshine Mountain Boys at the Grand Ol' Opry." The shade was drawn on the room's only window, but shafts of bright sunlight filtered in around the edges and formed jagged patterns on the narrow bed that lay directly under it. There were no sheets, just an old army blanket and a stained, dirty pillow. The bed extended along most of the wall, so that the foot of it nearly touched the cluttered dresser that stood to Henry's right. The dresser mirror reflected the backside of several empty pints of cheap whisky, an old portable TV, paper cups, matchbooks, and a framed snapshot of a dark-haired boy who looked about ten. Henry shook himself and tried to feel cheerful. He brushed his hair quickly, pulled on his shabby jacket, and set out on his walk across town to visit Sammy.

The sun was beating down on the hot city pavement as he emerged from the building. People rushed by, bright blurs through his squinting wet eyes. He walked slowly, still feeling a little queasy, and hoped that Sammy would be more cheerful than usual. Sarah would have left him with the babysitter (although he was old enough to stay alone), just so she wouldn't have to see Henry. She hadn't spoken to him for five years or more. "She's prob'ly right," he grumbled as he walked, "But the boy's gotta know t'his ma an' pa's decent folks. She ought t' at least sit an' talk for a bit, jes for the boy."

The apartment house where Sarah and Sammy lived was over a mile away in a better part of town. As he walked up the front steps, Henry felt as jittery and uneasy as he had the first time he had come here. The boy had only been three then, and Henry guessed that he would never remember having lived in the West Virginia coal country with a ma and pa under the same roof. Now his pa was the seedy stranger who stopped by once a month to sit and talk for an hour or so. He cursed because he hadn't brought a little gift this time; a welfare check could buy just barely enough booze to make a man forget about food, the rent, and sometimes his son.

The babysitter let him in, and Henry hurried into the living room where Sammy was slouched on the sofa watching television.

"Hi, Sammy boy!" Henry spurted.

"Oh, hi dad," said the boy, glancing up.

"Hey, it's great to see ya, son; you're lookin' so good n'all. I'd run up an' give y'all a big hug, but I know you're almost a man now, so I'll jes shake hands."

The boy sat up a bit and half-smiled while his beaming father shook his hand. Henry sat down in a chair near the boy, and they both looked at the TV.

"Well, if it ain't Bugs Bunny. Ha! One' my favorites, y'know. That ol' rabbit gets hisself in more scrapes!... Sure is a funny show!"

"Yeah, sure is."

"Y'see, things don't change much, do they, son? I mean, you an' me still like the same stuff, right?"

"Yeah, I guess so."

"Sure we do. You been playin' the guitar, ain't ya? Man can really make a life for hisself playin' the guitar. Have a lotta fun, too."

"I really haven't practiced much. I've been kinda busy with school and trying to play basketball."

"You mean you're on the basketball team?"

"No... just trying to get good enough."

"Oh, you'll make it, Sammy Boy. Hell, you'll be the best damn ball player in the city, I know you will. Used to play a little basketball myself. Bet I could still shoot a goal. We oughta get together and play sometime, don't y'think?"

"Yeah, I guess we could." Sammy shrugged.

There was a long silence while father and son both stared at a cornflakes commercial; and then Henry piped up again.

"Y'know, Sammy, even with school an' basketball n'whatnot, y'all ought not to stop playin' the guitar. Man, when I think o' some o' the times when me and the boys — I told you 'bout me an' the Moonshine Mountain Boys, right? — Oh, hell, sure I did. Anyway, when we all got together an' played, we'd jes have the best ol' time. We'd sing along: 'O-o-o-h, Huckleberry pie, raspberry puddin'; Give it all away, To kiss Sally Goodin...' Ha, your ma'd beat me with a broom if I told you some of the other songs we used to sing. Shoot!... Hey, son, why don't you get out that ol' guitar I brung ya, an' I'll show ya how to play coupl'a the old numbers. You'll like it, I know ya will."

The boy sat staring at the TV for a few seconds, then shifted toward his father with his eyes lowered. "I can't get out the guitar. I sold it."

Henry paused a long moment with a bewildered smile, then almost whispered, "You... you say ya sold it? Well, I mean... How come?"

"I needed the money to buy some leather sneakers. Ma said it was okay. Everyone has them." Sammy avoided the old man's eyes. "They're real expensive."

Henry nodded slowly, dreamily, as if he would understand if only he gave it time to sink in.

"Yeah, I guess you needed those to play, huh?" Another long pause while Henry bit his lip; then he smiled abruptly. "T'hell, it's okay, Sammy boy. I prob'ly couldn't remember how t'play the old thing anyhow."

The boy shook his head, but said nothing.

"Honest, I mean I ain't done none o' that stuff for years, an' it ain't all that great in the first place. I jes sorta wanted to show ya how, well... y'know. But... Oh, damn, is it one-thirty? I'm sorry, Sammy, but I promised to meet a man uptown 'bout two, an' I really gotta get goin'. I'm sorry boy, next time I'll stay a while, an' maybe we can play some basketball, okay?" Henry smiled and tousled the boy's hair.

"Yeah, okay."

"Good," said Henry, still holding his smile. He walked quickly to the door, turning back just as he opened it. "You jes learn to play basketball real good, y'hear?"

"Yeah, I will."

"Bye, Sammy."

"Bye."

Henry closed the door gently and walked quietly down the stairs to the street. He glanced back to see if the boy would wave from the window as he had that time so many years ago. There was no one there. As he wandered slowly across town, he barely noticed the clamor of the city. He just shuffled along, pausing now and then to wipe his face on the sleeve of his shabby old jacket. He finally reached his dingy neighborhood, and headed for a gloomy-looking little bar. Stepping inside, he flopped onto an empty stool apart from all the others. He sat quietly, staring at his trembling fingers.

"Hey, Henry, what'll ya have?" shouted the bartender from across the room.

"Huh?... Oh, uh, whisky, Tom," he mumbled.

"You been at it already, Henry? No trouble tonight, right?"

"No, no, Tom; I ain't had a drop."

The bartender nodded cautiously and poured a shot of whiskey. Henry drank this and several more. He sat quietly a long while, daydreaming, and then gestured eagerly to the bartender.

"Hey, Tom!... Yeah, hey, d'I ever tell ya 'bout my boy? Ha! What a buck. 'A' student, y'know. Plays basketball an' everything..."

The Clamshell Alliance will add a new objective to its previous occupations of the Seabrook nuclear power plant this June by attempting to restore the land ruined by the plant's construction.

Small affinity groups of ten to fifteen people will each bring a restoration project such as a windmill, solar panels, trees, and plants so that an actual 'city' will then replace the power plant on New Hampshire's coast.

The restoration concept adds to the non-violent-direct action approach which the Alliance has followed since 1976. These civil disobedience principles stress non-confrontation during protests.

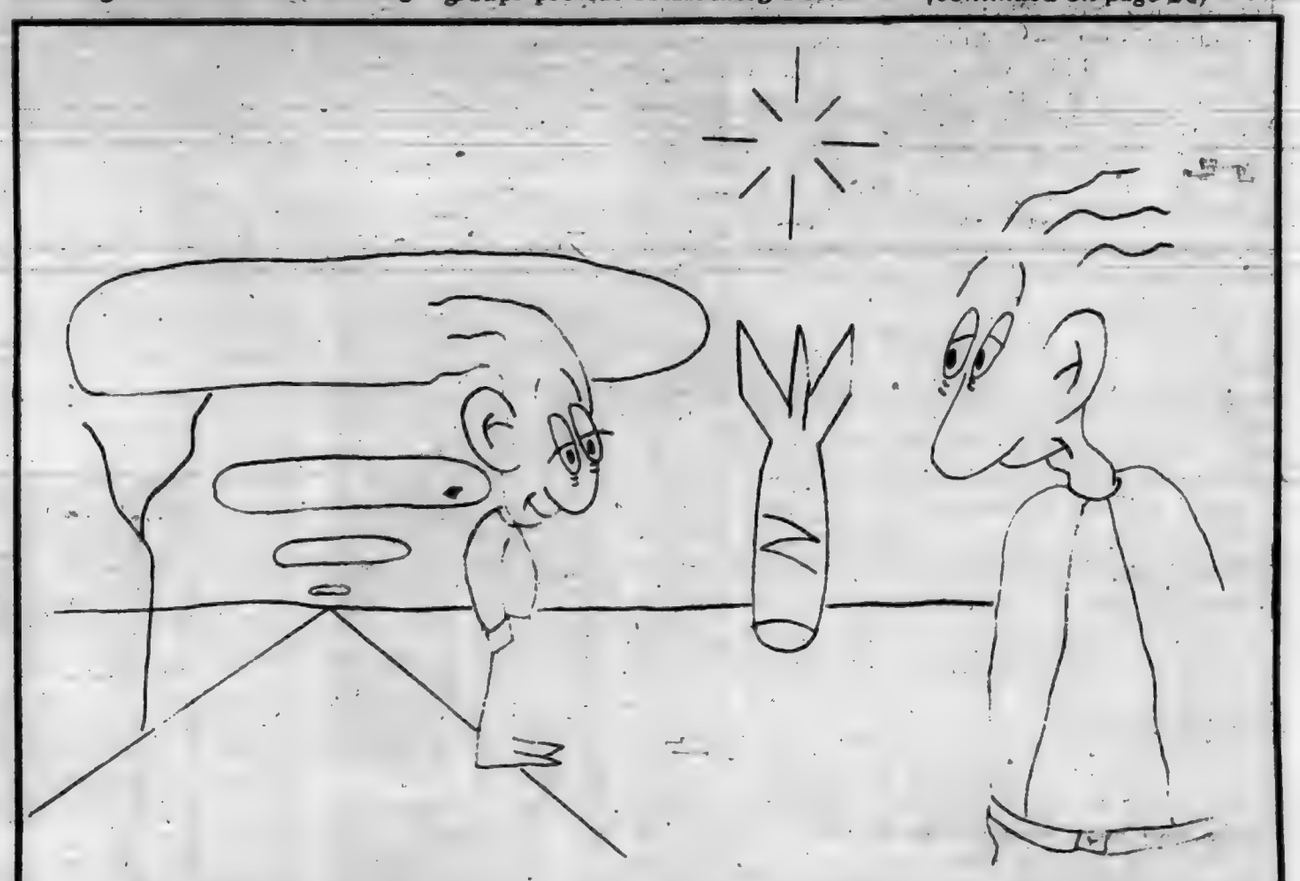
Although officially organized in 1976, the Clamshell is made up of several local groups which have worked together for over eight years before forming the Clamshell. The permit granted to the Public Service Company (PSC) of New Hampshire in June, 1976, acted as the catalyst to bring the groups together. The Clamshell first organized as an action group, but changed their approach to non-violence after meeting with two Quakers.

The Founding Statement of the Clamshell Alliance outlines the reasons for organizing the group, and explains its objectives. Essentially, the statement emphasizes that nuclear power mortally threatens people and the environment, both which depend on the preservation of the natural environment to survive; that non-nuclear energy sources can meet today's energy needs; that energy should not be abused, and that people should not be exploited for private profit. Recognizing such goals, the Alliance was formed to stop the Seabrook plant's construction, to aid similar efforts throughout New England, and to reassert the right of citizens to decide their communities' destiny. To achieve such goals, the Clamshell will engage in direct, non-violent action, such as "one-to-one dialogue, public prayer and fasting, public demonstrations, site occupations, and other means which put life before property."

The Clamshell first planned direct action after the PSC paid no attention to Seabrook's voters, who defeated a referendum approving the plant. On August 1, 1976, three hundred people demonstrated at Seabrook, while eighteen others occupied the site and planted trees. The second occupation/restoration, on August 22, 1976, drew international attention, with over 150 occupiers proving the value of non-violent opposition.

In September 1976, the alliance held the first Clam Congress, which decided on a third occupation for April, 1977, emphasizing training sessions for occupants and community outreach and education for the general public.

Close to 2000 occupiers participated in the third occupation, held on May 1, 1977, the largest non-violent direct action movement ever organized in this country. Besides uniting people in the struggle against nuclear power and again reinforming the value of non-violent opposition, the occupation taught the Alliance the problems in dealing with so many people and keeping those people together once the occupation ended. With such problems in mind, the Alliance held another Congress in November, 1977, setting up standing task forces and deciding on a fourth occupation/restoration for June 24, 1978.



For the third and upcoming fourth occupation/restoration, potential occupiers attend mandatory training sessions in non-violence and civil disobedience. The sessions start by everyone introducing themselves, a first step breaking down the tension and building up the unity in the group. Everyone then exchanges views on non-violence, splitting up into small groups so that everyone has a chance to speak. The large group forms after about fifteen minutes, with a few spokespersons summing up what the smaller groups discussed.

Next, occupiers learn about affinity groups and the uses of group process and consensus decisions. Made up of ten to fifteen people, the affinity groups provide social integration and support among occupiers. Decisions are decentralized because each group, while working with other groups, has the power to take or not take certain action.

The groups also serve tactical purposes. First, instigators set on disturbing the non-violent structure can be easily isolated. Second, affinity groups can train any protestors not ready when the occupation starts.

Finally, each group has its own medic or peacemaker responsible for isolating instigators, spokesmen who act as liaison between the affinity group and the larger decision-making body, and a support person, who does not occupy but relays messages to and from occupiers, provides emotional support as the affinity group's only contact outside the

(continued on page 20)

Maaco AUTO PAINTING & BODYWORKS

FREE PINSTRIPING

Maaco's Presidential Paint Service

which includes

*Clean and Dewax Entire Car
*Machine Sand most Chips and Scratches
*Finish Preparation and Hand Sanding
*Mask Windows and Chrome
*Apply Full Coat of Primer Sealer
*Paint Exterior with Acrylic Enamel (Same Color)
*Bake in Temperature-Controlled Oven

$139.95

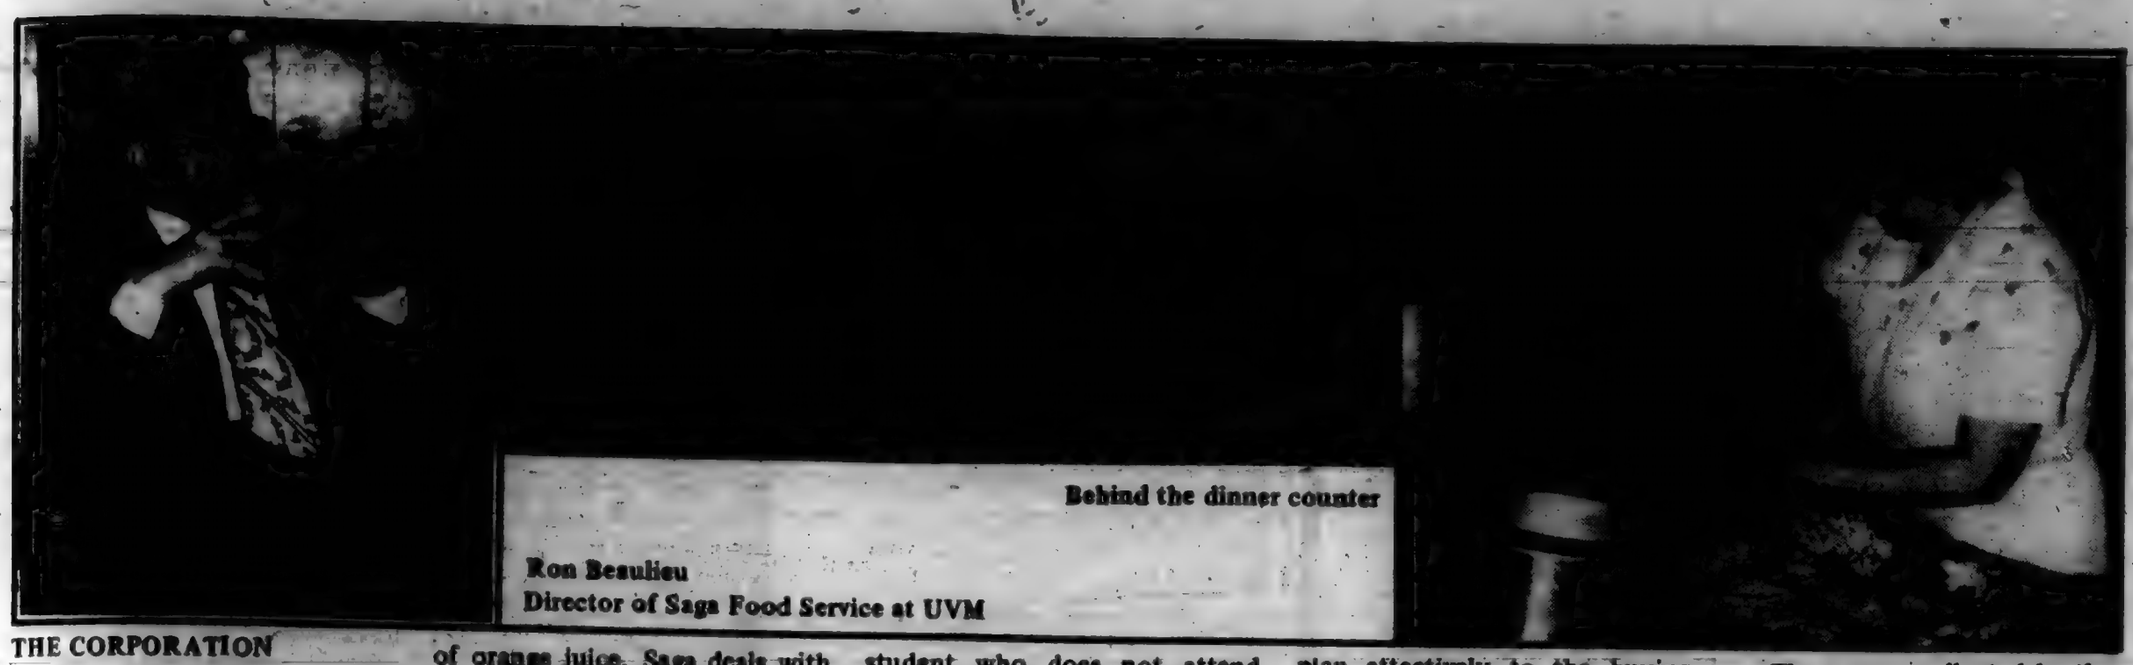
195 Flynn Ave. 864-0386
Quality Image at a Reasonable Price

MOTOBECANE

SUPERMIRAGE

★ BASIC TRANSPORTATION
★ HOURS OF TROUBLE FREE RIDING
★ 30 DAY FREE TUNE-UP
★ LOW MAINTENANCE
★ QUALITY COMPONENTS

$214.95



MOTOBECANE One of the few things in life in a class of its own.

pagocycle

864-6878

HOURS
Mon.-Fri. 9-9
Sat. 9-6

227 Main St., Burlington

Behind the dinner counter

Ron Beaulieu
Director of Saga Food Service at UVM

THE CORPORATION

Saga Corporation embodies the Saga Food Service and Saga Enterprises Incorporated. Operating throughout the United States, Canada, and Puerto Rico, Saga generated net revenues of over $480 million in fiscal '77. The Saga Food Service, with the largest Educational Division in the country, accounted for 73% of that revenue or over $350 million. Saga Enterprises Incorporated, encompassing the Straw Hat Pizza, Velvet Turtle, and Refectory restaurants, produced the remaining $127 million.

Since 1966, Saga's net revenues have increased more than eight times, from $58 million in 1966 to over $480 million in fiscal 1977, with a $7.2 million profit. $1.42 million paid dividends for shareholders and the remaining $5.74 million is being reinvested in the corporation for new restaurants, vending equipment and other growth needs.

Saga's potential per-day guest list is 367,000. The corporation offers 2,490 menu items, and buys 10,000 tons of beef a year, 280,000 gallons of cooking oil, and 100,000 cases of orange juice. Saga deals with approximately 70,000 different suppliers, processing an average of 50,000 invoices a week, and sending out 86,500 paychecks a month.

Saga began in 1948 on the Hobart Campus in Geneva, New York. Three men, currently the directors of Saga, saw the need for a food service that would provide students with good food in the quantities they desired. The idea caught on and the fledgling corporation grew to its present international status. The name Saga is derived from the Indian name for Geneva, which is Connagasaga.

THE VERMONT PLAN

Of the 92 different food plans Saga offers, UVM is one of only twenty schools in the country operating under the "Vermont Plan," which allows students to use their coupons when and where they please.

The basic difference between the coupon system and all others is that all the others depend on an absentee factor. For example, most plans offer a specific number of meals a week for a semesterly fee. If a student does not eat the specified number of meals, he or she still pays for them. In addition, the student who does not attend meals regularly is actually subsidizing those who do.

With the Vermont Plan, however, the books of coupons are worth a specific amount of money. If a student goes to only 40% of the meals, then he or she uses only 40% of the coupons. Under the Vermont Plan, unlimited seconds are offered, which is also unlike many of the other plans. The underlying premise of the coupon system according to Ron Beaulieu, director of the Saga Food Service at UVM, is "you don't have to spend the coupons if you don't want to."

THE DRAWBACKS

The coupon plan is new, and thus still in the experiment and development stage. Consequently, determining its salability becomes a problem for Saga. Since its inception in 1974, the record or "track" of the coupon plan has not been the same for any given semester. Such things as changes in the academic calendar, boarders, and funding account for things "that always muddy the water," said Beaulieu. As a result, determining its salability to other campuses becomes a problem. Communicating the plan effectively to the buying customer (students, parents) also creates problems because of the unavailable background information.

The control of eleven different Saga operations at the University presents a formidable task. A computer system is being designed to deal with the control problem and will be implemented at UVM in the future.

THE FINANCES

Saga is currently in the first year of a three year contract with UVM. Under the terms of that contract, a yearly revision of efficiency of service and financial adjustments for inflation and other cost increases are made. Included in the contract is a stipulation enabling either Saga or UVM to get out of the contract with a 90 day notice.

Saga is allowed to make 6.5% profit on its food service operations at UVM. Any money generated over this amount is split between UVM and Saga with UVM garnering 60%. In addition, of the more than $2.8 million dollars per year produced in board fees UVM receives over $400,000 or $120 per student.

The money collected by the university from board fees and any profits by Saga over 6.5% goes to the department of residential life. It's then dissipated to cover debt service on the dorms and dining halls, maintenance and repair, replacement of equipment, and renovations of dining halls and dorms.

In the 76-77 school year, Saga profit excesses resulted in an additional $39,500 for the department of residential life. This represented a reduction in the increase of room and board fees by approximately $10 per student. Not all of this money is used in any given year, however, and is saved for major projects such as the Coolidge Hall renovation.

In order to make the 6.5% profits, Saga has to "work very hard," according to Stephen Petersen, director of residential life. The base plan fee does not account for the 6.5% profit, and Saga must continually produce "quality" meals in order to get students to come to the dining halls, he said.

THE COMPETITION

The department of residential life scrutinizes Saga's

(continued on page 18)

We at the Stuft Shirt
Would Like to Thank the Entire Cynic Staff.

And a Special Congratulations to all Graduating Seniors

Open 11-11 Fri.-Sat.
Open 11-10 Mon. thru Thurs.
Stuft Shirt 135 Pearl St. 864-9544

BICYCLES

VISTA
Carrera
Sport
•Pacer
•Criterium
Silver Shadow
$115.00–$235.00

WINDSOR
•International
•Carrera
Super Carrera
Competition
Pro
$175.00–$600.00

RALEIGH
Rampar 1027
Rampar R–1
•Grand Prix
Super Course
Competition G–S
$125.00–$365.00

We also carry 3 Speeds by Raleigh & Vista

the Ski Rack
9-5 Saturday
9:30-9:00 Friday
9:30-6:00 Monday-Thursday
81–85 Main St. 658–3313

• Ladies Frames Available

SENIOR PORTRAITS

Professional Quality
at a
Special Student Rate

Single Shots or Group Packages

Its not too late to get yours in the yearbook.

PASSPORT PHOTOS

4 for $5.00

Carr Portrait Studios

205 ST. PAUL STREET
BURLINGTON, VT. 05401
864-4411

A Trip Through Waterman

By John Letteri

Descending the stairs into the lower reaches of Waterman, one comes upon the Saga Food Service office. Here one will find a ten by ten office with two desks, two phones ringing, people coming in and out, and the noise of a kitchen twenty feet down the hall. Here is where Saga employees Weela Abzug and Al McGuire must perform their tasks; two different jobs, and lots of noise.

Where is the Saga director's office? One would think not anywhere near this conglomeration of pots and pans, clanging, and the heat from a kitchen. Oh? It's right down the hall?

Ten more feet down the hall and a scant distance from the workings of a large kitchen is the food service director's office. But where is his secretary? And the rest of the staff? One must walk to an elevator close by, descend another floor, go through the Waterman dining hall service area, through the dishroom, and into a place affectionately called "The Dungeon" by those who work there. Five people work in an office approximately twenty feet by twenty. A small table and chair lean against a wall where interviews take place. The ceiling leaks. Not twenty feet away looms the dishwasher, and when it is running, the noise makes working, much less conducting an interview, difficult at best.

The Kitchen is one floor up, the storage area for food and the dining hall are on a lower floor. The Faculty dining room is five floors up. Hmm. Food has to be taken from the storage area, carted to an ancient freight elevator, brought to the kitchen and prepared. After it is prepared, the food is transported back down another elevator (6x3) to the dining hall to be served. Yeah, but what about the Faculty dining hall upstairs that serves an average of 600 people a day?

The Saga Express: five floors up.

Well, the food goes from the storage area to the freight elevator. Up the elevator to the kitchen. From the kitchen, past the food service director's office, past Weela and Al's office, around the corner and to a dumbwaiter. A three by three dumbwaiter carries food for 600 people a day.

Yeah, but what about the facilities up there? How come they can't cook it all up there? Well, there's absolutely no ventilation in the Faculty dining room kitchen. If one is in the same room when the dishwaster is going, one simply cannot stay. The heat is unbearable. One's question of why that place and the beautiful patio aren't utilized in the summer are fully answered.

Spread over three offices and two floors of Waterman, the business of providing food for 4000 students a day, not to mention catered events on campus, is taken care of. Elevator rides are most common, when one's secretary is on a floor below you. Pots, pans, heat and dishwashers are old friends to those working in "the dungeon." With such pleasant working conditions, could one possibly expect any better service from Saga?

Saga

Cont. From Page 17

competition every three years. Companies first have to be able to operate the coupon plan and take the risks involved with it. Secondly, they have to be able to handle the size of UVM's need. On these two criteria alone, many companies are eliminated.

The three companies considered for UVM last year were Saga, ARA, and Arvomation. According to Petersen, one of these companies did not "measure up." The other, although good, did not "offer substantially more" or a "distinct enough advantage" over Saga to warrant a change... For these reasons, Saga was once again chosen to operate UVM's food service.

THE MENUS

Food provided by Saga to UVM is correlated with a national Saga menu, produced on a five-week cyclical basis, and with the needs of the students. Saga promises to provide students with the food they want. By the nature of the coupon plan, if the menus are inadequate, students won't go to the dining halls, and Saga will lose money.

The food students want is very much determined by the student feedback on the food presented. Through surveys and beef boards, Saga finds out what to serve and where. "Tastes on different campuses" are varied, according to Beaulieu.

Saga runs three entrees. One is the lead and the other two are responses to requests by students. The groups, which comprise the leads are beef, pork, chicken, ham, and turkey. Although these are repeated, it is in response to the feedback from students.

The menus are the same each night in the dining halls which is meant to add some control to the situation. For example, if Simpson offered roast beef and Living Learning, Harris-Millis and Waterman offered hamburger, an obvious problem would ensue. If a popular event is scheduled, one dining hall may be "bombed" or have more diners than usual. In this situation, food is transported to the dining hall in need from the ones that are receiving less business.

THE FOOD

During a tour of the storage areas in Waterman building, high quality was in evidence everywhere. Red-label (the highest quality) vegetables dominated the stock room. USDA choice roasts, turkeys and chicken filled the refrigerators. No poor quality food was in sight and sample tastes disproved any dubious notions.

Waste food or anything that is cooked and is not used becomes sandwiches, pot pies, sloppy joes, and a variety of other items.

THE PROBLEMS

The old age of much of Saga's kitchen equipment presents a persistent problem in the form of breakdowns. Simpson had to be closed for four days earlier this year because the motor on the dishwasher broke down. Marsh dining hall was forced to close because its equipment was needed elsewhere. Most of the equipment in the Waterman kitchen is more than ten years old, with some of it even more than twenty.

Age of equipment produces another serious problem: repairs become next to impossible. For some breakdowns, parts are simply unattainable. A coffee-hot water disperser in Waterman has gone without repair for two months because glass tubes needed for it have simply not been found. The refrigerators in Waterman break down at least once a month.

As with the rest of the University, Saga is in financial trouble. The raising of the minimum wage and rising food costs have caused them problems. "Unless there are some funds that become available in the very near future to meet basic needs, we're probably going to have to close something," said Beaulieu.

Working conditions in some of Saga's facilities, specifically Waterman, the Den, and Walter's, are poor at best. Saga's main offices are spread over two floors, and five staff persons are crowded into a room behind and approximately fifteen feet away from the Waterman dishwashing machine. Employee morale is not high, and a high turnover of workers is the result.

Student Summer Storage

trunks lofts lumber
bikes
rugs furniture
skis
boxes refrigerators
beds etc.

Free Pickup and Delivery Service why shlep it home?

24 hour answering service
For more information call
Able Carpet - 864-0779

SUN-DAY

Sidestepping Atoms and Fossils

By David White

The amount of solar energy falling on the U.S. each day equals the total amount of energy used in our country for the whole year. That energy has some attractive characteristics: it is free, it is clean, and nobody owns it.

Steps are being taken to use solar energy, but are quagmired in bureaucracy and hog-tied by the special interests of the energy cartels. A few myths have served as roadblocks to the full deployment of solar energy.

The most notable is that we will need more energy for more jobs, and the only way to provide this energy is with large scale power plants. A closer look at this tale reveals that increasing energy production does not have any correlation with the abundance of jobs. In fact, increased energy tends to displace jobs. Historically, business has replaced workers with machinery and energy, which are more predictable.

Furthermore, if we need energy to grow, we can begin to conserve and use the energy freed up through conservation. Americans have a gluttonous appetite for energy, and we consume about twice the energy per capita as Swedes, Germans, or the Swiss, who all enjoy a comparable standard of living. It has been estimated that conservation could provide enough energy for growth through the end of the century.

A second myth is that solar energy is so diffuse and so unreliable (because of changing weather), it will never be an economical source of energy. However, according to a conservative Atomic Energy Commission study in 1974, solar energy, at today's level of technology, could provide 30% of the nation's energy needs by the end of the century. Others predict that solar energy could provide up to 80% of the nation's energy by the year 2025.

A number of solar energy devices are already proven effective, including solar collectors for heating homes and hot water which vary from simple window box collectors to entire rooftop arrays. These collect heat even on cloudy days, and the price of photovoltaic cells which convert sunlight directly into electricity has been dropping rapidly in recent years.

Moreover, solar energy is supposedly not cost-competitive with other forms of energy such as coal, oil, or nuclear fuel. This is inconsistent with the Energy Research and Development Administration report which states that it is indeed cost-competitive today. At present energy costs, 100% reliance on the sun for heating and cooling may not be economical, but a majority of this energy can be economically collected from the sun. This applies not only to the sunny South, but to cities like Boston, Madison, Washington D.C. and Burlington.

The oil companies and the government are quick to claim that the current sources of energy are still the cheapest, but are the last to remind us that the federal government has traditionally doled out billions of dollars in research funds and tax credits to develop and subsidize oil, coal, gas, and nuclear power, thereby creating artificially low prices. Meanwhile, the federal budget for solar energy development decreased in 1978! What little the government spends developing solar energy goes towards projects such as large scale centralized steam generators (as in a California project) and air conditioning for resort hotels (Laurence Rockefeller's 'Rock Resorts' in Florida).

What we aren't being told about solar energy is that it could provide thousands of jobs, drastically decrease our dependence on foreign oil, and provide safer, cleaner energy.

Solar and wind plants create from two to four times as many jobs as nuclear plants. These will include expanded roles for carpenters, glaziers, sheet metal workers, plumbers, machinists, electricians and industrial workers. Many of these people will be self-employed, and the economy will benefit from true competition for a change.

If our nation is to become truly independent of foreign energy supplies, it will have to move rapidly into the field of solar energy. Rather than spend billions for overseas oil, we can invest in our own nation, boosting our internal economy, and begin to balance our foreign debts, thus strengthening our dollars abroad.

In 1952, a group called the Paley Commission predicted that 13 million homes could be solar heated by 1975. That date is past, and the government has all but ignored the solar prospect. With hope, Sun Day will help turn Uncle Sam around, and bring about the shift in government policy to encourage solar development.

Sun Day Events

Sun Day in Chittenden County will be celebrated next week in Burlington and on Redstone Green of the UVM campus. Activities will begin at sunrise on Wednesday, May 3 in a ritual near the UVM track, in addition to a celebration atop Mt. Mansfield. (Call Matt x3010 for details about the Mansfield climb).

The primary event for Sun Week will be the Sun Fair on the Redstone Green, across from Southwick, on Saturday, May 6. The fair will contain booths, displays, films, slide shows and discussions related to alternative energy.

Vermont Sun Day is being sponsored by the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG), Vermont Tomorrow, Solar Association of Vermont (SAVE), Vermont Friends of the Earth, and Northern Design.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 3

5:30 a.m., Sunrise ritual, meditation, poetry and music near UVM track (Robinson Hall in case of rain)

12:00 p.m., Church Street Center, Film Solar Frontier, The Tree with Lights, a slide-tape presentation by Susan Carol Morse and Robert W. Caswell.

1:30 p.m., Church St. Center, Neil Pelsue, "Economics of Small Farms"

3:30 p.m., Church St. Center, Sue Kashanski, "Home Energy Conservation."

7:30 p.m., Panel Discussion, 115 Commons L L "Living with Appropriate Technology." Scott Neilson, Robin Ulmer, Dick Farnham.

11 a.m., Parade, meet on UVM Green

THURSDAY, MAY 4

9:00 p.m., Benefit Concert, "Equinox" and "Dealers' Choice." Upstairs Nectors, $1.50.

FRIDAY, MAY 5

7:00 p.m., Dessert with Congressman Jeffords, intro. by Elmer Gaden, Dean of UVM Eng., B106 Cook.

SATURDAY, MAY 6

CHURCH STREET CENTER

10:00 Andy Rudin

11:30 Gerald Koeppl "Wind Prospects for Vermont"

12:30 John Bundy "Passive Solar"

1:30 Film, Toast

2:00 Sue Kashanski, "Home Energy Conservation"

3:00 Film, Brother Francis, Sister Earth

SUN FAIR — REDSTONE GREEN, UVM

11:00 "Energy and Agriculture in Vermont's Farming," Buzz Tenebaur, Win Way

12:00 "Developments in Wood-Heating Technology," Phil Rich, Norm Hudson, Belmont Pitkin, Tom Carr.

1:00 "Solar Power in Wind and Water," Tom Barrup, Charlie Ferreira.

1:00 The Tree with Lights, a slide-tape presentation by Susan Carol Morse, and Robert W. Caswell, Solar Frontier Film.

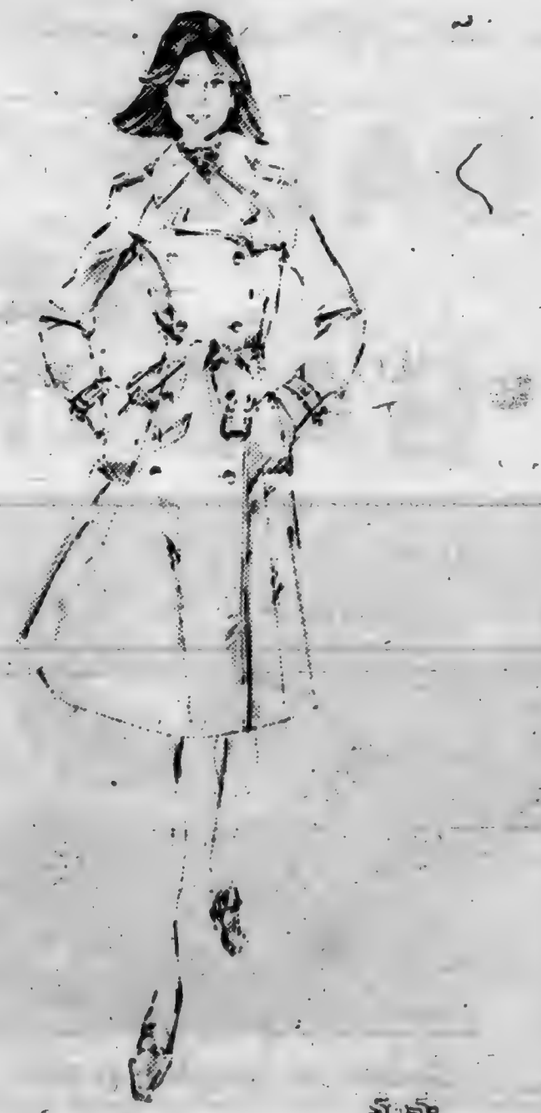
2:00 "Solar Power in Homes," Tom Cabot, Fred Lowen, Bob Wheeler.

3:00 "Design and Retrofit Considerations for New and Older Housing," Andy Rudin, Anthony Adams, Dick Farnham.

4:00 "Engineering and Performance of Selected Solar Heating Units," Al Converse, Doug Taff, Rick Schwolsky.

Displays at fair will be in Southwick in the event of rain. Child care will be provided.

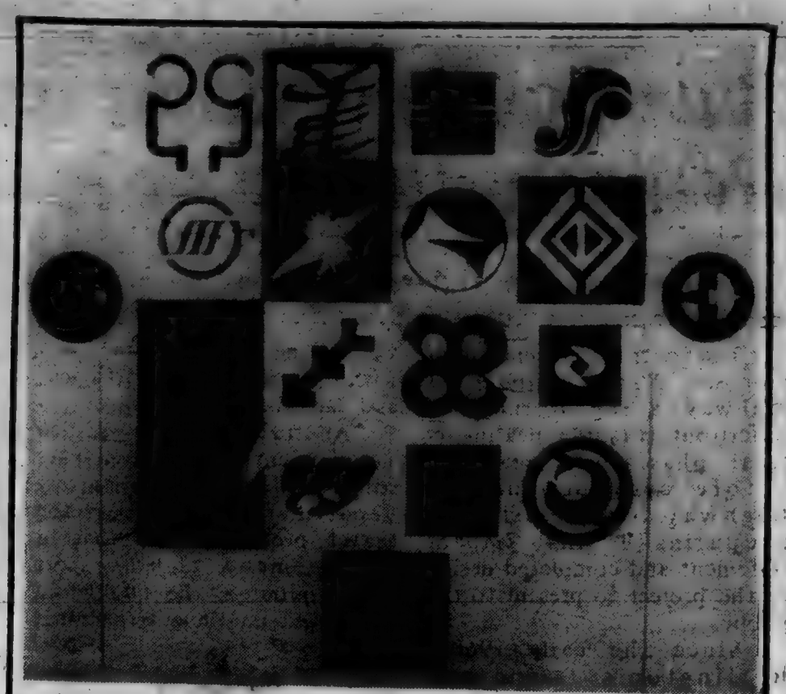


The Pitcher

RUGGED · FUNCTIONAL · HANDSOME
· Our stoneware is made to be used.
All of it is ovenproof, dishwasher-proof and completely non-toxic.

G. SCATCHARD LTD.
IN THE ALLEY JUST OFF COLLEGE ST.
BETWEEN CHURCH ST AND SO. WINOOSKI AVE
Mon-Sat 10-5 658-6558

London Fog
Trench Coat



the SKI shop INC.
Open 9AM-9PM
388 Shelburne Rd. S. Burlington 862-5488

"Just Jazz" Quintet
featuring
Larry McCrorey—Sax
Bernie Kelley—Trumpet
...Fri.night...Sat.night.

Never A Cover Charge
68 Church St.

On the Big 8ft. T.V. Screen:
Stanley Cup Hockey
and
Major League Baseball

Thanks For Your Patronage.
Good Luck on Your Exams!
Home of 10¢ Pitchers.

π PI EXPRESS

for free delivery call:
Winooski – 655-3005, 655-0977
Essex Jct. – 879-6333

$1 Off Any Large Itemed Pizza. Expires 5-31-78 Non-Delivered

$1 Off Any Large Itemed Pizza. Expires 5-31-78 Non-Delivered

BALD TIRES are BAD NEWS

Quality to provide a safe ride combined with the prices to fit the student budget is what makes E & E TIRE special.
Come down and check us out!

Extra Effort Service

E&E TIRE

Extra Effort Service

152 Riverside Ave., 864-7759

'Clams'

Cont. From Page 16

site, and generally assists the group anyway he or she is able from the outside.

After describing affinity groups and their purposes, the facilitators, who guide the occupiers through the session, relate two of the most important Clamshell principles — group process and consensus decision.

Following a lunch break, the facilitators outline Clamshell guidelines, logistics and strategy. The Clamshell sets eleven guidelines all occupiers must ascribe to while participating. These guidelines include: no dogs, weapons, drugs, or alcohol, at least a four day time commitment to the occupation, mandatory training session for all occupiers, no running out anytime, no damage of PSC or Seabrook property, no movement after dark, no breaking through police lines or engaging in any action that may lead to active conflict with officials, setting down in case of confrontation, and not physically resisting arrest. The Clamshell stresses non-violence under all circumstances.

The logistics for this occupation differ from past ones. Instead of all the affinity groups going to one place, clusters will try to occupy eighteen target locations both on and off the site. Ideally, 200 people will make up a cluster, with the number of clusters depending on how many occupiers attend.

Just as the separate affinity groups have autonomous power, so do the clusters. If a cluster decides that it cannot continue with a certain action, it can decide on alternatives without first contacting some central decision-making body. Such independence gives the clusters flexibility during the occupation, while retaining the decentralized decision-making structure the Clamshell strives for.

Besides using clusters, another difference in Clamshell strategy concerns the construction workers. Instead of attempting to block the workers from entering the site immediately, the Clamshell will wait four days. After this initial period, the policy may change, but only by consensus decision.

A third difference involves the use of fallback decisions. If the consensus process breaks down, and a decision must be made, previously made fallback decisions will be used, but again, only in an emergency. Representatives from local anti-nuclear groups have already made some of these decisions. More will be made as the occupation/restoration draws nearer.

Once occupiers understand logistics and strategy, the facilitators discuss options if the police use crowd control tactics, such as gases, dogs, horses, and hoses. Most importantly, everyone should stay calm. For gases, occupiers should stay low, and have occupier with a gas mask lead the others upwind to a clear area. For hoses, everyone should assume a fetal position to prevent whiplash. For dogs or horses, affinity groups should stand in tight circles so that dogs have nothing to grab onto. Most horses will not knock down standing people.

The legal aspects of occupation are also discussed, outlining the arrest procedure and informing these occupiers on the progress of cases for previous occupations. (In fact, the courts have called only four out of 1200 cases so far.)

In the next section of training, everyone speaks of their fears and feelings about occupation. Surprisingly, this section strengthens people's attitudes by bringing these fears and feelings out front, where others can help. If someone has a fear, the next person usually knows how to help him. By relating fears and feelings, everyone can help each other.

The process does not stop with the training sessions, as the affinity groups get together several times before the occupation to assign various responsibilities, learn to live with each other, and understand each other's idiosyncracies. The affinity groups become their own family.

In addition to just training people, the sessions bring everyone together and unite them in the struggle against nuclear power. The sessions uphold the Clamshell principle of full participation by writing the session's agenda for all to see, and having an agenda review so everyone can have their special topic discussed. The occupiers develop a sense of cohesion and similarity of purpose. As one woman said, "the sessions teach people to talk to others in a humane way, to relate to others as human beings."

You say you want to be somebody else. Then apparently you don't want to be yourself.

The [illegible] Which Alternative?

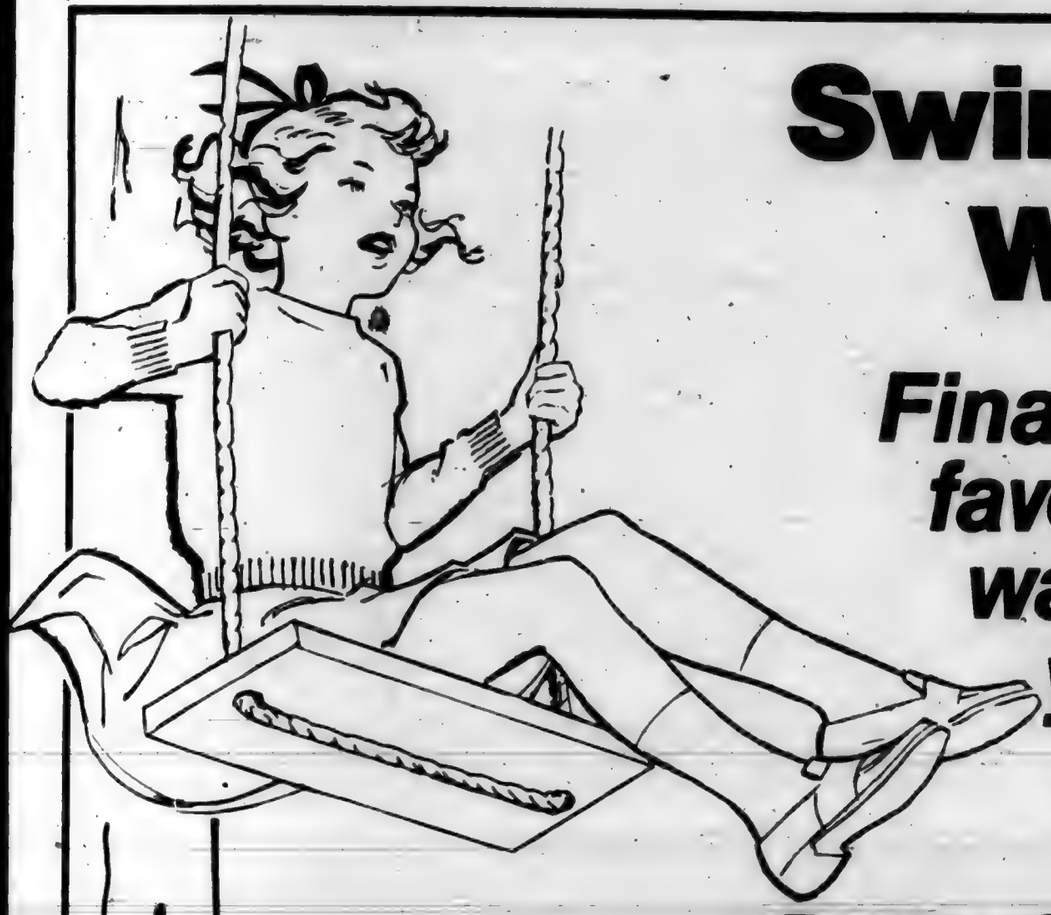
The South End Connector, a proposed 2½ mile stretch of highway along Burlington's waterfront, is rapidly nearing its final phases of negotiation before construction. The Highway Commission is preparing a final impact statement and completed design of the project to present to the public.

Since the early 1960's, Burlington's traffic and transportation plans have recommended improved north-south circulation through the city. Accordingly, the Highway department proposed four major alternatives to confront the traffic problem: (1) No new construction. This would leave the streets in their present state. (2) Alternate travel modes. This proposal would utilize transportation such as railway, ferry, bicycles, public transit, car pools, and para-transit. (3) New location alternate. This would require that a new road be built between Pine Street and the Vermont Railway. (4) Pine Street alternate. This alternate would widen Pine Street to four lane. with traffic lights at six locations and ban on-street parking.

Alternate (1) was rejected because environmental impact studies ordered by the Highway department on the existing travel problem show that if improvements of some sort aren't initiated, the quality of travel will continue to decline, residential desirability will lessen, and business will be reduced.

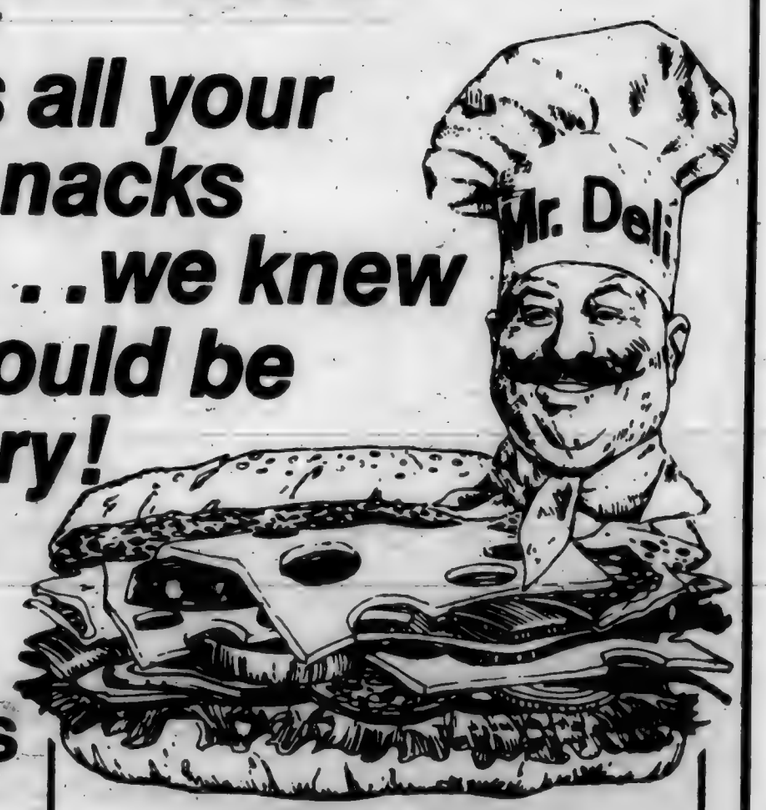
The Highway department's draft impact statement stated, "...mass transit itself cannot be viewed as an independent alternative. It is only in combination with highway or street improvement of some type that a true overall solution to Burlington's South End traffic problems can be reduced." Although the Vermont Public Interest Research Group (VPIRG) has supported alternatives such as improved bus service, fringe parking areas, and incentives for car pools, both Planning and Highway Commissions decided on a choice between Alternates (3) and (4) – both of which would displace 15 families in Burlington's South End.



Despite opposition by the Citizen's Advisory Committee, General Electric, and other private groups, the Board of Alderman recently endorsed Alternative (3), the new location. The proposed 2½ miles of 4-lane highway would begin at the Interchange of I-89 with Shelburne Street (US 7) and would extend northwest to the intersection of Battery and King Streets in the Burlington Central Business District.

Although the highway intends to reduce congestion and improve business, several individual concerns have become apparent. In a letter to the Highway Planning Engineer, Fred C. Benson, Jr., of the Fish and Wildlife Service, stated that – "...the New Location may impact wetlands along Lake Champlain... Because of runoff from the highway and possible impacts on the Lake from construction-related activities, we favor the Pine Street alternative." Water Resources Planner Richard M. Czaplinski expressed concern over the effect of salt and oil runoff from the highway into groundwater and surface water.

Mrs. Oliver Eastman, an observer of birds species in the Old Barge Canal area, is concerned about possible impacts that the highway might have on the area. The barge canal is a migratory "fly-way" for waterfowl around the lakefront. Many birds that feed and rest there could be endangered. Mrs. Eastman's concern centers over any digging or filling that might take place which would disrupt the valuable wetlands. The Environmental Impact Statement says that the New Location would use two acres (16%) of the low-lying area adjacent to the barge terminal. Oil soaked wood fiber material that is now the foundation of the area would be removed and replaced with about 8 to 10 feet of fill. Finding appropriate sites to dispose of the mucky material remains a problem yet to be solved by the Highway Department.



The most recent public concerns have centered around safety. Henry Frankel, editor of the South End News, says that the "big question now deals with grade crossings. On their way to school, the children living in the South End area will have to cross the new highway, which could be very dangerous if extra safety measures aren't taken." Frankel contends that the Highway department isn't planning to include the necessary grade crossings in their plan.

The public now awaits the Highway Department's final impact statement and road design before any further steps are taken.

Swing Into Spring With Finast®

Finast has all your favorite snacks waiting....we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruit
- Your favorite cold beverages

825 WILLISTON ST.,

BURLINGTON VERMONT

Finast

Visit our Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

VERMONT CYNIC

EDITORIAL BOARD

Editor-in-Chief: David C. Greeff
Managing Editor: Alex D. Walker
Executive Editor: Russell F. Flannery
Layout Editor: Jerome E. Andrews
News: Robert J. Moore
Features: Alan Marshall
Sports: Rich Chalmers, Steve Larose
Arts: Vaune Davis
Advertising Manager: Brian Evans
Business Manager: Julie Vofl

The Vermont Cynic is published weekly during the school year except vacations by students at UVM. Opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or the State of Vermont.

The Future Depends on It

As President Carter has consistently said, the most pressing issue confronting the United States — and indeed the entire Western world — is the energy crisis. The somewhat humorous question, is there life after oil? is indeed no longer funny, and one, if not answered, that will lead to inevitable disaster.

May 6 will be recognized nationally as Sun Day, or an energy awareness day set aside to inform the public on the vast potential of solar power as a present and future energy force.

It appears, on the surface at least, that solar power is by far the most attractive energy alternative available today — yet unfortunately the most neglected. It's clean, environmentally sound, and available in virtually unlimited quantities. Estimates indicate that one day of normal sunshine, if properly digested in solar panels, could provide our aggregate energy needs for a full year.

However, given that solar power, at its present stage of development is prohibitively expensive, and in the short term less expedient than say coal or nuclear power, in the long run, it clearly seems to be the answer. Furthermore, the cost of solar equipment and technology are being curtailed as knowledge of the subject grows. Remember what the ten dollar calculator of today cost five years ago.

Even in light of these facts, in his 1978-79 budget, President Carter decided to cut the already insufficient federal allocation for solar energy research and development. Simultaneously, however, powerful oil companies received tax credits and government subsidies for new oil, a non-renewable resource which, at the outside, has a lifespan of only 75 years. Such misdirected priorities will hinder rather than help lead towards the road to a definitive solution on this issue.

Unfortunately, recent polls indicate that the average U.S. citizen is still ignorant of the reality of the energy shortage. Attend Sun Day and find out. Hopefully, if enough interest can be shown by the people, the president will redirect his initiative.

A Stroll Down Memory Lane

Freshman Year. Wake up. Go to Billings. Coffee. Go to class, late. Go back to Christenden, get homework for next class. Go to lab, still hungover. Back to Christenden, lunch, coffee. Back to Christenden, get stoned again. Play soccer for an hour. Dinner. Six-pack. Hop house, drunk. McAuley Hall. Back to Christenden. Pass out.

Sophomore Year. Wake up. Go to Billings. Coffee. Bang out. Go to class. Go to Billings, hang out, lunch, read newspaper, play pool. Go to Billings, coffee. Go to class, late. Go back to Billings, get homework for next class. Go to lab, still hungover. Back to Billings, lunch, coffee. Back to Billings, get stoned again. Play soccer for an hour. Dinner. Six-pack. Hop house, drunk. McAuley Hall. Back to Billings. Pass out.

Junior Year. Wake up. Go to Billings. Coffee. Bang out. Go to class. Go to Billings, hang out, lunch, read newspaper, play pool. Go to Billings, coffee. Go to class, late. Go back to Billings, get homework for next class. Go to lab, still hungover. Back to Billings, lunch, coffee. Back to Billings, get stoned again. Play soccer for an hour. Dinner. Six-pack. Hop house, drunk. McAuley Hall. Back to Billings. Pass out.

Senior Year. Wake up. Go to Billings. Coffee. Bang out. Go to class. Go to Billings, hang out, lunch, read newspaper, play pool. Go to Billings, coffee. Go to class, late. Go back to Billings, get homework for next class. Go to lab, still hungover. Back to Billings, lunch, coffee. Back to Billings, get stoned again. Play soccer for an hour. Dinner. Six-pack. Hop house, drunk. McAuley Hall. Back to Billings. Pass out.

Editorial

LETTERS

From behind the closed door...

Unqualified Expertise

To the Editor:

What justified Diana Greene and Randy McMullen's comments on their article on Graffiti? Can they claim to be experts after a tour of numerous hallowed halls of verbiage. Their analysis was lacking in real meaning and appears to be a superficial attack and listing of another method of expression. The underlying motivations are sure to be more detailed than they have made reference to. Can they answer to the "name calling" such as "feminists," "male species," etc.

Feminists are not women out to "screw" all men. In their statement of the "unification of the male species," it sounds like a particular bug. The men in the community are not uniting like an army of ants. Childishness is stated as a motivating force for some males but who can avoid the youthful side. We have been among a society stressing the youth cult. Many of us still revert back to childhood pranks. As damage rates increase everywhere, why encourage people to continually deface property. We can express our philosophical statements in the Cynic, not in the bathroom.

Shari Silverman

"Sexist Bias"

To the Editor:

A meditation arising from last week's cover story: If graffiti is in fact an accurate reflection of the "mood of the people," it would seem that we are engrossed in a sad, frustrated state of affairs.

I refer in particular to the blatant "sexist" bias implicit in much of the graffiti recorded by your reporters. The quotations of both male and female graffiti-ists expressed an unhealthy degree of sexual jealousy and contempt. I am sure we are all confronted with these attitudes regularly, not only in the medium of restroom entertainment, but in our daily interactions.

In this light I would offer some opinions which, I feel, are actually facts basic to the state of being we share. Human sexuality in practice is important, both as the only known method for proliferation of our kind, and as a valuable tool for heightening awareness of our situation in the realm of the infinite. Realized to its fullest potential, sexual lovemaking can range in intensity from pleasantly healthy sport to a pinnacle of spiritual ecstacy.

In any case, sexuality should not be a source for discord and contention between men and women, whether straight or gay. In the final analysis, can we dispute the fact that the human spirit is without gender? Are we not ultimately a part of one energy that happens to be sexual? Through negative emphasis on a finite distinction that is manifest in our human bodies, we but poison our essential nature.

Sincerely,
Rob Schnelle

What About Us?

To the Editor:

We at the third floor of Buckham are greatly distressed — excuse me relieved. We appreciated your not mentioning our contingent. My brothers and I realize that our sincerity is only surpassed by our vulgarity and we are genuinely pleased for the absence of publicity. But my comrades have implored me to write this comment on your article on graffiti; it seems they feel slighted.

Since you have blatently disregarded the inhabitants of the third floor of Buckham, located in the main campus slums, we want only to reply for four reasons: (1) you have passed by an area of low academic output, thus overpassing a breeding ground for graffiti; (2) because of the proficiency of our custodian engineer, the obnoxious sayings are continually erased; this causes constant creative development by our best authors; (3) due to the diversity involved in the social order in Buckham third, a random sample of the artistic quality has been endowed upon the cultural atmosphere that's present in our state of temporary sanity; (4) if you have continued, for some reason, to read this letter, you may understand the sincerity of this correspondence. However, remember our vulgarity.

Yet we have offered the Cynic reasons, we have given four. Please take your favorites, or for that matter, least favorite points. I am sure you will understand the idiocy of graffiti from this letter.

Fondly,
The friends supporting
Buckham third
Hard Core & pals

The Whole Story, and Nothing but...

To the Editor:

We enjoyed your article on graffiti greatly; however, we here on third floor Buckham feel slighted as we hadn't even the briefest mention in the entire three pages.

It seems as though the author didn't navigate past the first floor in each building to examine graffiti. This is doing us a great injustice. We here on Buckham third (as we so fondly call it) maintain, we believe, the highest standards in graffiti on campus. Although graffiti is washed off every morning by our maid, new graffiti is on the stalls and walls by noontime. And every work is graded by Maharaji Gardy, by appointment of Buckham Hard Core Club Council, according to the Gardy scale: A is bad, F is good. For example: Life is like a drink; when it's soft, you can't beat it; but when it's hard, you get screwed only got a C on the Gardy. In retort, Gardy is like a broken condom, he can't keep anything in his head, got an A+ on the Gardy.

But the most artistic has to be the murals, all with the basic theme: I AM FUCK underlying. This is Buckham third's strong point.

We hope in future issues, your correspondents look into the whole story. Thank you.

In closing (an old Buckham third favorite), we know our sincerity is only surpassed by our vulgarity. Excuse me,

Buckham Hard Core Club

Thankful Celebrities

To the Editor:

To Randy McMullen, last week's cover boy.

Some people will do anything to get themselves on the cover of the Cynic.

Eric Kilburn
Charlie Clark
Jesse Gadsen
John Martin
Peter Riegleman

Note: these last four are fictitious but added for emphasis.

Gross Mismanagement of SA Funds

To the Editor:

Apparently you have the feeling that you can get away with anything. You have paid yourselves in the past for "professional services" and have repeatedly violated your own financial policies. You have been incompetent in your authorizations of duplicate purchases — events, you have been slack and unreliable in the discharge of your duties, and the financial committee apparently has made its recommendations based on biased judgments and inconsistent criteria.

Even after conducting yourselves in this manner, you have the GALL to request special privileges (wasn't the retreat you had this fall which was paid for out of the contingency fund in a manner which violated the policies of proper financing enough for your "need for recognition?")

I fully agree with the request made by Susan Jo Perkins in Cynic of 4-20 for a full audit of the S.A. administrative budget and contingency fund. I further suggest that the University and/or the Office of the Attorney General investigate the financial habits of the Student Association to determine without question the questions of financial mismanagement, and to determine the possible need for legal actions.

Robert H. Gale

Letters are continued on page 24

INSIGHT:

The State of Things

By Eric Pollard

There is not much news of note this week. Aldo Moro is still missing, Marcos is preparing to incarcerate the last of his democratic political opponents, and the Soviet Union shot down a South Korean jetliner. Domestically, the former director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is under indictment, the Congress has finally acted on the Panama Canal treaty, and Secretary of State Vance is having difficulties with the Assistant for National Security Affairs, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Candidates for the 1980 elections are already beginning to campaign. European diplomats are wading through the excessive Washingtonian verbiage to discover whether the Carter administration has really developed a foreign policy beyond the moment. Tuition here at the University is on the increase once again, keeping Vermont in the race for the most expensive land-grant institution in the country, while the legislature in Montpelier has taken a heroic stand against inflation by maintaining the state's contribution to the University budget at well under twenty percent of the total. That is not to say of course that costs at the University of Vermont are of as far-reaching concern as are the escapades of Congress or the latest round of Soviet-American insults. This list of more or less current events is merely to illustrate a simple point: Life is getting out of hand.

This will come as no surprise to those people who have been watching with somewhat jaundiced eye the course of events of the last half century. The growing disharmony within the American government is a shining example of the steady progress of chaos and randomness that the entire international community is experiencing. This chaos is not the anarchy that one might expect, although it is true that anarchy plays a major role in it, but rather a form of leveling that is taking place around the globe. There is not the political and social stratification that once was so pervasive and by which the United States rose to a position of prominence. The realization of the finite nature of this world and the rapid technological expansion that has facilitated the achievement of nearly all the finite limits that exist, have combined to make people in general very apprehensive about the future.

The differences which once separated Americans from other humans are no longer as important as they have traditionally been. The third world is emerging where once it was underdeveloped. Technological capabilities no longer separate the clients from the sponsors, a fact demonstrated by the untidy proliferation of nuclear armaments to India and Brazil.

The world today is not much more chaotic than it has been in the past. The difference is that disturbance and disorder are more visible today because of the telescoping of world vision. More events and activities qualify for general attention than before, having reached a similar level of importance which, until recently, was much more narrow and well-defined. The basic element of all newsworthy information is that it deals with the relationship of one human or group of humans to another. The essential humanity of all mankind is becoming general knowledge. The concept of the individual has experienced a great deal of growth of late, explaining much of the concern for human rights in the Soviet Union and majority rule in sub-Saharan Africa. The notion of diverse heritage and common destiny has been drawn to the fore, as it is an essential element of individuality in a confined space. There is a natural sort of comraderie that, while not extensive in nature, has developed to cope with the problems that are yet to be faced.

There is a negative aspect to this phenomenon: when a person begins to think of himself in terms of his individual relations to others rather than his relations to others as a member of some social group, there is a tendency to lose some of the sense of effectiveness that one gets from association with a group. To bring it back to where we began, as international society levels in its political and economic spheres, the individual becomes isolated from his traditional social ties and loses, to one degree or another, his sense of efficacy. The result of such a loss can be witnessed in Great Britain and to a lesser extent, here in the United States. The general attitude, and one which is growing, is one of discontent with the job the government is doing, but a sense of inability to affect change. The outcome of such a development is difficult to determine; it could either lead to anarchy and the collapse of effective government or the concentration of power in the hands of the government and the decay of public input into the governing system. The extent to which this phenomenon will develop is also hard to determine, but the prospects for it seem to be quite "good."

OPINION

To My Brother...

By Dan Adams

Dear Peter:

It seems not long ago that I embarked – bright-eyed and curious – on a new phase of life: college. How quickly those years have passed! And now, as I prepare for yet another uprooting, it's interesting to think that next fall will find you a freshman at the college of your choice.

I can now relate to the desires of parents to pass their long-developed wisdom on to their children; they find, in the children's acceptance of their well-worn mottos, legitimization and comfort, that indeed there is still some rationality and meaning in this crazy, crazy world. I find myself in the middle – I still receive the word from above, and yet secretly desire that you follow in my footsteps.

If you are anything like me, you will scorn advice, and rightfully so. Half the excitement in life seems to be in personal discovery, in figuring things out for oneself. The fact that you aren't interested in this letter is thus understandable; I write for myself as much as for anyone else.

It seems more and more the case that the values mom and dad helped us learn to respect are simply inappropriate to the real world. Trust, curiosity, honesty, consideration, freedom; these just don't seem to apply to the way things are actually run.

For example, a friend of mine saw a fellow student ripping off the university. As a concerned citizen of the community, my friend turned the guy in, surely the thing to do, right? Apparently not. In the following weeks my friend was greatly harassed by the guilty student who in no equitable way was held responsible for his actions. My friend now knows better.

Socially, the environment has been unexpectedly similar to the game land back home. Vulnerable women, seeking security, get screwed – negatively, literally, and emotionally – by men high on the archaic and inconsiderate Victorian view of male superiority. The men are prohibited by social law to express their real feelings and needs. Social life is a playing off of each other's disguises which requires alcohol to be tolerated, and which rarely speaks to the needs which bring the people together.

I can remember thinking of college as one of the few places where one could feel comfortable speaking as they wish. Not so, I have learned. Non-tenured faculty must hold their tongue; and they are forced, in hoping to increase enrollment, to give the students what they want (for example, a three-part harmony two-step) rather than aiding the students in developing into thinking, aware, and creative individuals. Career conscious students seeking a spotless record have ceased to be active consumers; they refuse to demand that for which they have a right.

A friend of mine once suggested that perhaps times have changed, and that students today are speaking what they feel. If so, then it means the vast majority of us are content about the thousands of dollars of damage in the residence halls; satisfied in knowing of the mistreatment of minorities in America; of the apartheid in Africa; of the housing problems in our own Burlington; of the large dependence of the student body on alcohol. All this, I cannot believe.

It leads me to think, Peter, that many students here are afraid, and that they are because they've been misled and don't know what to do about it. Thus, one who cares about the poor and the hungry of this world is called a "radical;" those with dark skin are called "niggers;" those with different personal lives are called "fags." And many shun reality, for it is difficult to take an honest look at the world and to avoid feeling that things simply must be changed; and change is difficult to handle for a crowd raised to believe in a self-protecting status quo. The result is conformity, to protect that which we've been socialized into feeling is important.

And soon the university will ask me to contribute some of my earnings towards its cause. Yet after four years, I am not sure what that cause is. Can the university be best understood as that institution for students that was described to me four years ago by UVM P-R, an institution designed to help students develop intellectually and creatively, teaching them to proceed acceptance with analysis and scrutiny, in the hopes of developing awareness within the citizenry?

Or is the university best understood in terms of the extensive and usurping demands placed on faculty to do things other than teach; by the widespread conformity in the student body socially and politically; by the critical role of alcohol; the lack of respect for property; the prejudices; the apathy; and the talk of a gym expansion in the midst of a weakening academic atmosphere?

In the end, brother, and contrary to my expectations, my four years through college have represented a struggle to be inquisitive and to avoid conforming; to continue to live my own life in spite of intense peer pressure insisting the contrary; to try and maintain our basic values while living in an unsympathetic environment.

Knowing that you have read this far suggests that you have a curiosity and an open-mindedness that will cause you much confusion and pain in the college years ahead. Perhaps you can fare better than I in your struggle with the above paradoxes; indeed, I am quite stumped.

LETTERS CONTINUED

Insensitivity Toward Gays

To the Editor:

With regard to June McGinnis' article, "Coming Out" on campus, I was disappointed, to say the very least, to read how hostile most UVM students are toward the Gay Student Union and the gay population in general. One question came to mind after reading this emotional and depressing commentary: What makes heterosexuals feel so superior?

It seems like anti-homosexual heterosexuals are inferior if they deserved to be called anything at all. It is deplorable to think anyone could write "Kill a Queer for Christ," with a free conscience. It is clear that the people who write (or think) things like this are not only juvenile but inhuman and insensitive. I am a heterosexual and I was truly embarrassed by the vindictive behavior of most heterosexuals on campus.

This anti-homosexual attitude is comparable to the days of slavery and racism, only now it is sexism. The only effective solution I can think of is to ask all heterosexuals to imagine loving a person deeply but never being allowed to express this love freely; doing this might conjure up compassion for the gay population.

I inculcate everyone to either support the Gay Student Union at UVM or say nothing at all. It is true that not everyone agrees with the rights of homosexuals and that is your prerogative, but please do not ridicule the Gay Population because it is not funny and the results are detrimental.

Sincerely,
Diana S. Greene

Prejudices: No Regional Boundaries

To the Editor:

I'm neither a student nor gay, so maybe readers will treat this letter as something more than subjective outrage. I was surprised when I read June McGinnis' commentary on the harassment she has received as a representative of the Gay Student Union. I came northward from Virginia last summer thinking I'd experience a different type of people for a while. It's beginning to appear that certain prejudices know no regional boundaries.

When I first found out there was an active gay union on campus I was impressed. I spent four years in a southern college where even the suggestion of starting such a union would have horrified a lot of people. I know there were, and are, quite a number of gay students there, but they'd all been shunted into the closet for fear (and I mean FEAR) of the 'southern gentleman'/macho image that predominated. Ms. McGinnis' article gives me the impression that there isn't much more of a liberal attitude up here than down in Dixie; on the other hand, I don't know if the harassment gays have been receiving is indicative of the minority or majority of students, but I hope it's the former.

I admire these people for sticking their necks out and starting such a union, although it's a shame to have to admire people for having to face what is little more than senseless abuse. I'm not going to get on a soapbox and try to convert anti-gays, but I am going to suggest that other people similarly upset by Ms. McGinnis' comments let your reactions be heard — writing a letter to the editor, if you haven't already, is as good a beginning as any. I'm sure the GSU wouldn't mind seeing a few encouraging words.

Sincerely,
Joe Stover

Harrassing the Communist Youth Organization

To the Editor:

Through the last two semesters the Communist Youth Organization (CYO) has experienced constant harassment from the university. The chief form that this harassment has taken has been the denial of access to university rooms and facilities. We were told that in order to use university facilities, an organization had to be SA recognized. So the CYO applied for SA recognition and was turned down immediately without the usual procedures involved in considering recognition. We were told that a member of the group had been contacted — which was an outright lie. No one had been contacted. Finally, we managed to contact the head of the student activities committee of the SA who told us that we were denied because we have non-student members. But there is no rule that says organizations must be all students. Furthermore, several already recognized organizations have non-student members.

The CYO has also been harassed in other ways. Groups who join with us in coalition work have been pressured by the administration not to associate with us. During the recent coordinating for the Bakke Forum held April 21, the administration pressured several organizations to the point of forcing one group to withdraw from the coalition. Other groups found procedural roadblocks in their way that they had never confronted before. One group found that rooms in Living Learning were twice denied because the CYO was involved in the meeting. One student summed it up last Friday night when she saw a room taken away from the Bakke coalition: "The administration put pressure on us to pull out of the Bakke coalition because the CYO were troublemakers. Now I realize that it's the administration who is causing the trouble."

The CYO is an organization that serves the students as well as the community. The forums and activities we have been involved in have been widely accepted by the students. Our purpose is to teach people about an alternative world-view not expressed anywhere else on campus. Supposedly people have a right to freedom of speech and assembly on this campus. We demand that right! We demand an end to the harassment of the CYO.

The Communist
Youth Organization

A Plea For Planning

To the Editor:

In response to Susan Jo Perkins' letter in your last issue regarding the S.A. Administrative Budget. If Ms. Perkins had taken the time to come to the General Assembly on April 19th, she would have found out, as did every person who made the effort to be there, that only $23,824.00 of the $41,124.00 in question is earmarked for the running of the S.A. Office. This represents 13.57% of the $175,503.25 operating budget. The remaining portion of the $41,124.00 goes to phone line rentals, rental of the vans, President's Discretionary, Senatorial workshop, elections, and special events.

As for the contingency fund, it is an unallocated portion set aside for unforeseen emergencies, supplemental funding, and cost overruns. While it was an oversight on my part not to break the Administrative Budget down, I feel that it was a grave mistake for anyone, especially for someone supposedly as informed and active a student as Susan Jo, who questioned this figure not to show up at the G.A.

Respectfully,
Lawrence S. Landry
S.A. Treasurer

Greek Peer Pressure

To the Editor:

When I first came to UVM, I was well aware that there were five sororities affiliated with the University. Though I had no desire to join one, I figured their presence wouldn't bother me, especially with all the latest information claiming interest in sororities was dropping. As long as they went their way, and I went mine, I assumed I could have a "normal college social life."

After two years, sorority participation is booming and I'm ready to transfer. It isn't so much that I do not like sororities; I resent the fact that since I do not belong to one, I am nowhere in terms of social status. A few of my friends from freshman year, who joined sororities this year, have subtly let me know that I don't rank as high on their lists as I used to. The Greek organizations at UVM are like "the crowd" in high school; if you're not part of it, you're a nobody.

Even though I often feel left out, I could have stayed objective towards sororities, if they could have stayed objective towards me. Unfortunately, I've come across too many derogatory comments lately, directed towards those of us not in sororities. One such comment is "she works alone," referring to a woman who does not belong to a sorority, while she is talking to a male. Am I a "worker" just because I do not go with all my sisters to "teas" to meet men?

Of course, not all sorority members feel this way about non-joiners; many are perfectly indifferent to one's sorority status. Yet a sufficient number have conveyed this "you're not one of us" attitude to make me feel that I do not belong at UVM. If I could be taken for who I am, rather than for my sorority standing, I might remain here. But as things currently exist, I get too many negative feelings for my being non-affiliated, to ever be truly comfortable at this school.

Sincerely,
Nancy Weller

Senseless Abuse

To the Editor:

Like Mark Kevorkian in his article on "Patrick Gym Improvements," I also have been a victim of UVM's subtle discouragement of athletes. While the lack of tennis courts and other athletic facilities is a familiar complaint of the student body, more disturbing is the way the existing facilities are made available to the students.

Scheduling problems, I have found, are not only restricted to Patrick Gym, but also Gutterson throughout the winter months. Gutterson is one of three indoor rinks in the area and must share the load of high school hockey practices and figure skating schools. In this scheduling process, however, the students' needs seem to be considered last.

This year the student skating hours were changed from 7-8 weekday nights to 12-1 weekday afternoons. What better time to schedule free skating hours than when everyone is in class.

Whereas building new tennis courts depends on increased funds from the legislature or allotments by the university toward athletics, the scheduling problems could be solved rather easily by better communication and planning with the students. Athletics at UVM will not be greatly enhanced if the only improvement in the program is a monetary one.

Peter Valine

Sorry Mark...but

To the Editor:

Being the student cage attendant on Sunday, April 16th, I'd like to publicly apologize to reporter Mark Kervorkian on my "downright rudeness and personal affrontery." By the way, his "Sports Scene" column of the April 20th issue of the Cynic is slanted, indeed, my attitude that Sunday the Sixteenth was that of an uncouth lout.

But maybe I ought to tell my side of the story.

When I opened the Cage at 12:55 p.m. that Sunday (Note, Mark K., five minutes early), one of the first things that came to my attention was that there was only one basketball in the Cage. Also, there were no student I.D.'s for the missing basketballs. A quick search of the Cage failed to turn up any more basketballs. I was at a loss as to what to do.

At about quarter past one, I had my first hint of what the rest of the afternoon was going to be like: the one ball that we had was exchanged for an I.D., and only a few minutes later, someone asked for a basketball. I explained to that student that we didn't have any, and he pointed out that the courts upstairs were empty, and that there were none about. I then told him what the situation was like when I had come in that afternoon. Obviously, he was quite angry, as he was cussing and slamming doors on his way out. I felt like a victim in a Vonnegut short-story — I was trapped in a situation which was not my doing.

Enter Mark Kevorkian, approximately twenty minutes later. He showed me the ball that he had, obvious low in pressure, and asked if I could pump it up. My reply, "Would if I could," was just that: the pump was in the locked section of the Cage, and I had no possible way of getting to it. There was no personal malice in that line, Mark — were the pump on the side of the Cage that I was working in, I would have gladly pumped up that ball.

Mark, then, in no diplomatic manner, snarled something about no other basketballs, and seemed to find me guilty for that offense. What could I do? My reply, "What do you think I am — God?" was partly glib, partly angry. As you could plainly see, there were no basketballs, and I was certainly not hoarding them merely to antagonize the patrons of the Gym. My reply was an answer to a stupid question — did you think that I could, or did you want me to, create a ball out of thin air?

As to your reply, you did indeed stress to me that you were not interested in my religious affiliations, but only in playing basketball — in such vulgar and base terms that I began to suspect that you were not a college student, but a sailor on leave. Your anger was no less diminished as you continued your childish tirade about the money that you paid to go here, a point which I said that I sympathized with, and, being an out-of-state student, made a point of mentioning this fact.

As you stalked away, hellbent on kicking in a water-cooler or something equally macho to vent your holy, righteous indignation, I tongue-in-cheek suggested another school to you.

I didn't like the situation that Sunday one bit. I did what I could with the supplies on hand. And if I am not courteous to people of obvious refinement and sophistication, students who can calmly and maturely discuss something in good language, then I am indeed quite sorry.

Sincerely,
George Guay

P.S. I have since learned that the reason there were no basketballs on that afternoon was because students who had been in the Gym the night before hadn't returned the basketballs.

VERMONT CYNIC

SPORTS

Sponsored by Living/Learning Cycling Suite

Biking Along in The Great Country Race

By Lisa Terwilliger

A sunny Saturday afternoon provided a positive atmosphere for the first Great Country Race sponsored by the Living/Learning Center Cycling Suite and area businesses. Over the past four weeks the Cycling Suite has been diligently organizing and making preparations for this new spring event. The outcome? It was a physically challenging race with a festive attitude which all participants, organizers, and riders enjoyed.

As the start of the race was announced, the field of novice and experienced riders rolled out of the lower gym parking lot with an enthusiastic, competitive spirit. With two cars (Rabbits) leading the pack, the riders proceeded down a sixteen mile course for men and a ten mile course for women. To make the race still more exciting two primes were located at the top of the dreaded and seemingly insurmountable Spear Street hill. (A prime prize is awarded to the first rider to reach a designated point along the race course.)

With fields of twenty-four riders in the men's race and thirteen in the women's, it was necessary that traffic be controlled along the course. A jolly crew of volunteer marshals stalked at every intersection did a good job of both directing traffic and keeping the racers on course.

While the racers kept a close formation at the start of the race, by the end the pack was quite spread out. As the racers crossed the finish line (some three abreast) they were greeted by a supportive crowd.

While the racers and spectators awaited the awards ceremony everyone whiled away the time sipping on beer and feasting on apples, oranges, fig newtons, and oreos.

The top six riders were awarded with prizes ranging from handlebar tape to twenty-five dollar gift certificates. Special prizes were presented to a few outstanding individuals. A bottle of Geritol Counter clockwise from the upper left: Warren Wheelock shouting instructions; three finishers; the marshal directs traffic; pumping and walking; putting on the starting touches; the Spear Street hill and assembling the bikes.

Photos by Mike Koeniges

Books for All Sports.

Complete Underwater Diving Manual

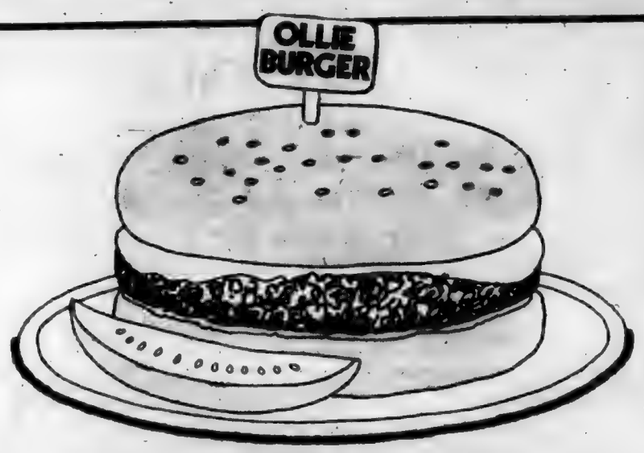
Official Encyclopedia of Baseball

Tennis Love- by Billie Jean King

Guide Book to the Long Trail

New England over the Handlebars

Trout and Salmon Fishing in New England Lakes and Ponds



Many Others...

Wit & Wisdom Bookshop

100 Dorset St., South Burlington, Vt

Eat an Ollieburger...

and put something out of this world into your mouth. Back in 1934 a guy named Ollie Gleichenhaus started to perfect the world's greatest hamburger. Today at LUMS, we call that hamburger "The Ollieburger." And it's so good, it's out of this world. The Ollieburger's made with a special secret blend of 29 herbs and spices. USDA choice beef char-broiled on both sides at once. And it even weighs a big ½ of a pound. Treat your tastebuds to an Ollieburger. Treat yourself to LUMS.

LUMS No one else will give you MORE MORE MORE

WILLISTON ROAD NEAR THE AIRPORT

DON'T GET STUCK!!!

We Still Have Rooms for Graduation Weekend

HO-HUM Motels

Two Convenient Locations

1660 Williston Rd. & 1200 Shelburne Rd.
863-4551 658-1314

First Varsity Victory

Vermont Baseball Shocks UConn

By Randy Briggs

Paced by the offensive exploits of Andy McDonnell, the University of Vermont baseball team won its first game of the 1978 campaign by shocking the University of Connecticut 12-4 last Friday.

McDonnell had three hits, scored two runs, in addition to driving in five Catamount runs.

The UConn victory was a marked contrast to the Vermont performances earlier in the season. Against the Huskies, the Cats broke out of a long team batting slump with a number of timely base hits. "It was the first time all year that we put in a great performance in all areas," said head coach Jack Leggett. "Our hitting, defense and pitching were all functioning together. We were very intense against Connecticut and played very hard. We were the better team on the field that day," continued Leggett.

Vermont got a strong pitching performance against UConn from Tony Segale. Segale pitched four hitless innings before the Huskies registered their first hit. He finished the contest by allowing only six hits and four runs in his eight inning stint. Segale had excellent control in the contest as ability to find the strike zone on the first pitch proved crucial. "Tony pitched very well," remarked Leggett. "If he keeps pitching like he did against UConn, we're going to win some more ball games."

Freshman second baseman Mike Pash continues to excel for the Cats. He is a fine hitter who always makes contact. However, Pash needs improvement in the fielding department, but he will grow stronger with additional experience. Coach Leggett was very happy with Pash's performance in the three weekend games. "Mike made some really good plays in the field and went five for ten at the plate. He is going to be a fine player in the future for Vermont," Leggett commented. Pash went three for five and scored three runs in the UConn game.

"The defending Yankee conference champion Huskies apparently felt that Vermont would be a pushover. They were looking past us," commented Andy McDonnell. "Their school newspaper wrote us off. They had us as probable 8-0 losers. We put the article up in the locker room before the game and it really psyched us up. Then to go out there and win was really satisfying," McDonnell concluded.

In the final analysis of the UConn game, it was the offense that was the key to the victory. From the top of the batting order to the bottom everyone contributed. It was a solid team effort that proved one thing. In order to beat a better team you must have a solid contribution from everyone on the ball club. Vermont received that against UConn.

After Friday's victory, the Vermont players were naturally very happy and exuberant. The Cats had beaten an excellent 10-4 UConn team. Suddenly the weekend looked like it was going to be a great success. Unfortunately, the Rhode Island Rams could have cared less about the Cats' victory against the Huskies.

Led by the fine mound performances of Phil Dupont and Rick Mundy, the Rams held the Cats to a very meek total of one run in the Saturday double header. The double loss was a shocking blow to the Cats' hopes of climbing back to the .500 mark.

In the first contest Vermont again received a fine performance by pitcher Brian Meyer. He has pitched with meager run support all season and the first game was no exception. He allowed only two hits and two runs. However, Meyer did give up a seventh inning walk which led to the winning run in Rhody's 2-1 first game victory.

Again, the crucial lack of hitting wasted a great pitching effort. Meyer may be the best 0-3 pitcher in New England. He's hurling with tremendous amount of poise, for a sophomore. Meyer mixes up his pitches skillfully which makes him doubly effective.

The only offense that Vermont exhibited in the opener was T. J. Valley's one for three at the plate and one run scored. Bill McAlduff had the only run batted in.

In the night cap, Rhode Island's 6-0 victory was brought about by the Vermont's first defensive collapse of the season, indicated by four errors in the field. This collapse quickly took Vermont out of the game. The Rams were paced by Brett Menza's two run homer in the second game. Vermont could do nothing with Ram hurler Mundy. Mundy effectively scattered five hits and was in no

(continued on page 33)

Scooting back to first against St. Lawrence Photo by Steve Larose

Home Runs Boost Vermont Softballers

By Rich Chalmers

Three home runs and a double spurred the University of Vermont women's softball team to an 11-2 crush over Norwich in the first game of a doubleheader held Monday, but the bats failed in the second contest as Norwich walked away with a 5-4 turnaround.

It was UVM's first loss of the season which put the Cats' record at 3-1. Norwich led the first game 2-1 at the end of three innings when the Green and Gold let loose a barage of hits, tallying a total of ten runs in the next three innings to put the game away.

Rachel Liff was the starting pitcher, allowing only one hit and striking out three in 2⅓ innings. Jenny Lowell then took over the mound for Vermont and held Norwich hitless for the remainder of the game, recording eight strikeouts.

Belinda Emerson, Pat Spicer and Linda Shiffler each blasted crisp home runs for the Cats as they added to a total of nine Vermont hits. Pam Packard went two for two, Linda Emerson went two for four and starting pitcher Liff blasted a double in an impressive Catamount showing.

The second game of the series lacked the hard hitting of the first as Norwich took an early lead and subdued a late comeback surge by Vermont to secure the victory 5-4. Liff pitched the entire game giving up four hits and four walks while recording five strikeouts for Vermont. Norwich opened with two runs in the first inning and two in the second to grab a 4-0 lead. Norwich then went on to make it 5-0 in the top of the fifth as the Cats struggled to put together a comeback effort. Emerson slammed her second homerun of the day to spur Vermont to four runs, one short of a tie. The game had been shortened due to darkness and coach Sally Guerette stressed the importance of such an act. "We couldn't get our bats going until the last inning, when we really started to put it all together. The shortened time really hurt us. We are a come-from-behind team and I'm confident our experience would have pulled us through if we had had those extra two innings." The lack of lighting was due to the fact that the women were forced to play Tatches Field in South Burlington rather than UVM's home field which has been under water all season.

Vermont opened its season last Friday with an overpowering victory over Green Mountain College 26-6. Packard led the offensive attack, batting six for six backed by strong showings from Linda Shiffler (5 for 5) and Nancy Condit (4 for 4). Lowell and Liff combined on the mound and held Green Mountain to only three hits, striking out a total of eight batters.

Shiffler pulled through for the Green and Gold in the bottom of the seventh inning against Lyndon State College on Saturday, slamming a two-out, bases loaded single and scoring two runs to win the game 4-3. Lowell recorded the win on the mound.

The Catamounts are now looking ahead to their toughest contest on May sixth against UMass, as well as the upcoming regional tournament.

Laxers Bomb Norwich, Dumped by UConn

By Steve Larose

Courtenay Jenkins racked up a two game total of eight goals, but the University of Vermont lacrosse team dropped an 11-8 decision to the University of Connecticut Saturday and later bombed the Norwich Cadets 14-8 Monday afternoon.

Jenkins scored four goals and had an assist against UConn, and was helped by George Varga who had a goal and an assist. UVM was trailing all the way but cut the Huskies lead to 9-8 at 8:15 of the final period, before UConn put the game out of reach with a late game goal.

Connecticut outshot the Cats 30-27 with Vermont goalie Gary Vreeland getting 17 saves.

John Pitts tied up the Norwich contest on Monday when he quick-sticked a goal on a pass from Jenkins. Vermont grabbed the lead for good early in the second period, when Jenkins poked in a shot on an assist from middle Andy Ashforth.

Dave Osbourne was the surprise power in the Vermont field day, with a hand in six goals, along with Jenkins. Osbourne scored five goals and an assist. Jenkins pumped in four goals and had two assists.

Coach Richard Farnham later said, "At Connecticut we played well but had a lapse in the third inning. UConn scored four goals with a man down and we couldn't come back. We made the same mistakes as we have in the last few games, and a lot of foolish penalties. Overall though, I felt we played better on man down defense and got some scoring out of the offense. I was pleased with the play of Dave Osbourne and Mark Brown. We had a makeshift play at midfield, but it all came together."

Vermont and Norwich grapple for position Photo by Mike Simays

Farnham attributed the excessive Vermont penalties to Vermont's carelessness and the other team's abilities. "When the other team can break out of our man to man, we have to chase from behind and be aggressive, usually resorting to reaching in and fouling. To avoid this, we have to work on our man to man containment and not get beat on the one to one. To do this we need better knowledge, anticipation and footwork. Our players need to get their bodies in front of the attackers and cut them off. They have to be disciplined not to reach, however. We are working on this aspect in practice, especially with the ground balls."

In conclusion, Farnham said, "To win against top teams we can't do foolish things like attracting too many penalties. We have to eliminate mental errors. The players are capable of low error Lacrosse, but right now we have to work on our one on one defense, which I feel was the reason for our UConn loss."

Vermont travels to St. Lawrence on April 29th and wraps up the season by hosting Middlebury on May 1st at 4 p.m.

Champagne & Clams
$3.00 Fri. & Sat. Nite

It is the Best!
Try it Before You Leave Town.

DISCOTEQUE
NIGHTLY

Queen City Park Road
658-2161

Middlebury Stymies Vermont Racketmen Again

By Rich Chalmers

Mediocre play and fired up opposition spelled disaster for the University of Vermont tennis team as Middlebury routed the Catamounts 7-2 in a home match held last Monday.

"Middlebury had a big psychological edge in this match," explained coach Hal Greig. "They beat us 6-3 earlier in the season and they felt they could do it again. Half of tennis is played in the head and our players weren't as ready for this match as Middlebury was."

Jeff Stone managed a three set win over Bruce MacCrellish 7-5, 6-7, 6-3 in the number two spot but that was the only win registered by Vermont in the singles matches. Steve Sass defeated number one Scott Turban in straight sets while Bruce Rockowitz, Chris Holmquest, Jamie Friedman and Andy Deary were also handed losses by the Panthers.

"Turban never got it together," explained coach Greig. "Stone won, but he wasn't at the top of his game. Rockowitz was playing better than he has in the past, but his opponent was very tough. I felt we should have won at least one more match in the singles. If it had been 4-2 going into the doubles, we might have been able to sweep them and win 5-4."

The number one doubles team of Turban and Stone played one of their best matches, defeating Sass and MacCrellish 6-3, 6-4. The number two doubles team of Rochowitz and Deary lost 5-4 in the tie breaker of the last set 3-6, 6-3, 7-6. The third doubles team also fell short as Middlebury's Bill Willis and Dave Buzby defeated Bill Shean and Holmquest 6-1, 6-3.

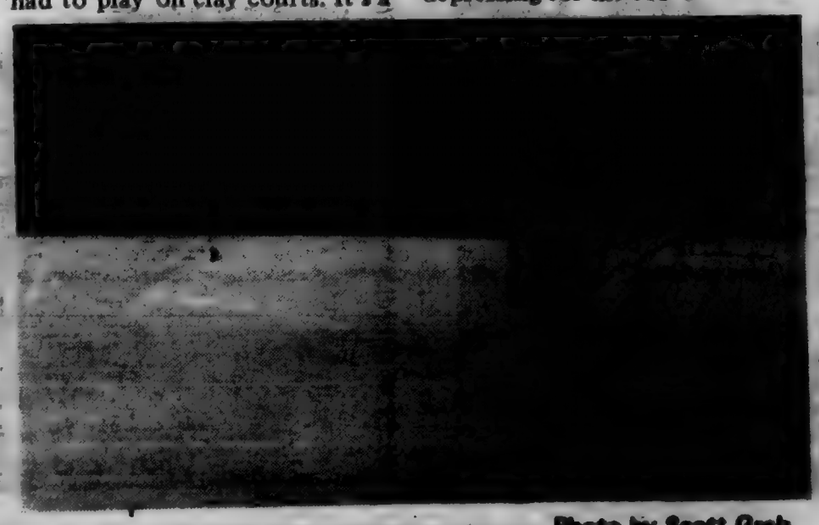
MIT defeated UVM on Saturday 5-4 in a match that could have gone either way. Turban was beaten in the number one singles spot by Neil Rockowitz 6-3, 6-2, followed by Catamount losses by Bruce Rochowitz in third and Mark Compagnon in fourth. Stone, Friedman and Deary all connected for wins to end the singles competition at 3-3.

The UVM number one doubles team of Turban and Stone lost to MIT 1-6, 7-5, 6-4, while Holmquest and Sheehan won for the Cats in the number three spot. Rochowitz and Deery were leading 5-4 in the second set of their match but were unnerved by a questionable call, and fell prey to MIT 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 to end the match.

"The fact that we haven't been able to really practice outside has seriously hurt us. It was our third day out and we had to play on clay courts. It's a different game on clay," explained Greig, "and we weren't prepared for it. We had to win two doubles matches, but we couldn't do it. Actually, it was a carbon copy of last year's match against MIT."

"Overall, I'm disappointed," Greig remarked, concerning the season so far. "I thought we should be getting better by now, but we aren't. I can't put my finger on it, and I'm not pleased with the way it's going. We aren't really playing smart tennis. You don't mind losing when you're playing well, but it's frustrating when you aren't."

Coach Greig put heavy emphasis on the problem of facilities. "We haven't had a big recruiting year in the last three years, and it's beginning to hurt us. We just can't attract the really good "Blue Chip" players that other schools can. Frankly, the kids are discouraged by the poor facilities. It's hard to produce a really good team against those problems. It all carries over into their games. It's depressing for me too."



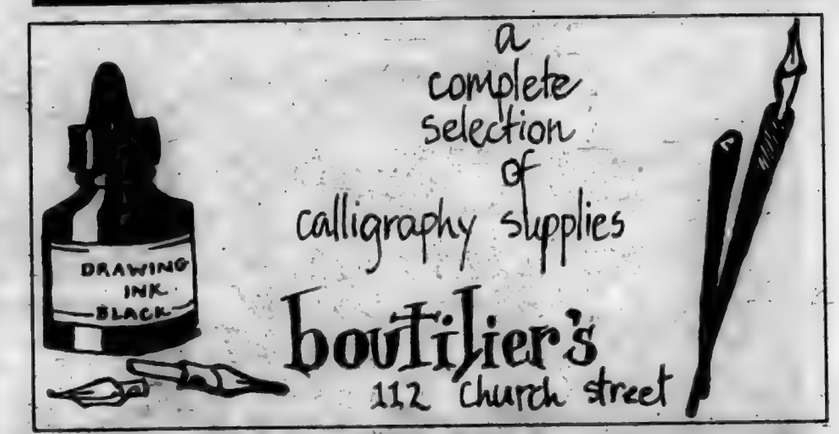


Photo by Scott Greb

a complete selection of calligraphy supplies

boutilier's
112 Church street

Thornton and Luneau Win Shot-put

UVM Tracksters Shine in Boston College Relays

By Ted Quigley

Kaja Thornton and Barbara Luneau captured the shot put competition with record throws as the University of Vermont track team finished in a tie for 12th at the Boston College Relays held last weekend in Newton, Mass.

Freshman Charlie Claudio competing in the high jump

UVM beat the University of New Hampshire, and nearly defeated the University of Maine. UVM women would have finished second to the University of Massachusetts had point scores been kept in women's events.

The Vermont men's team captured 2 fourth places in the 4 x 120 shuttle hurdle relay and the 4 x 220 relay, sixth in the 4 x 110 relay and ninth in the 4 x 440 relay. In the 4 x 110 yrd. and 4 x 440 yd. relay, school records of 43.3 seconds and 3.25.9 minutes respectively were set. Strangely, not until the last call of the 4 x 440 relay did the team of Jim Briand, Larry Cunningham, Dick Emberley, and Bernie Gagnon know where the starting line was.

To add to the confusion it wasn't until Briand was bearing down on Cunningham and Emberley that he was able to determine the location of the passing zones on this unmarked track. Running in a delirium the last 50 yards, former Sudbury star Briand tried to hand off to Emberley instead of second man Cunningham. Once Cunningham had received the baton, he gained a distant third place and handed Emberley the baton twenty yards behind the leader. In his fifth race of the day Emberley whipped the two lead runners and gained twenty yards of space before handing it to Gagnon. Following Emberley's 49.2 second leg, Gagnon hummed a 50.2 second last leg to gain first place in that event, and ninth overall.

In the 4 x 220 yard relay, Emberley again erased a deficit and gave third man Joe McClallen the lead baton. McClallen then pawed his way through the turn and Gagnon finished it up, handing one of Boston University's vaunted sprint teams a sound defeat.

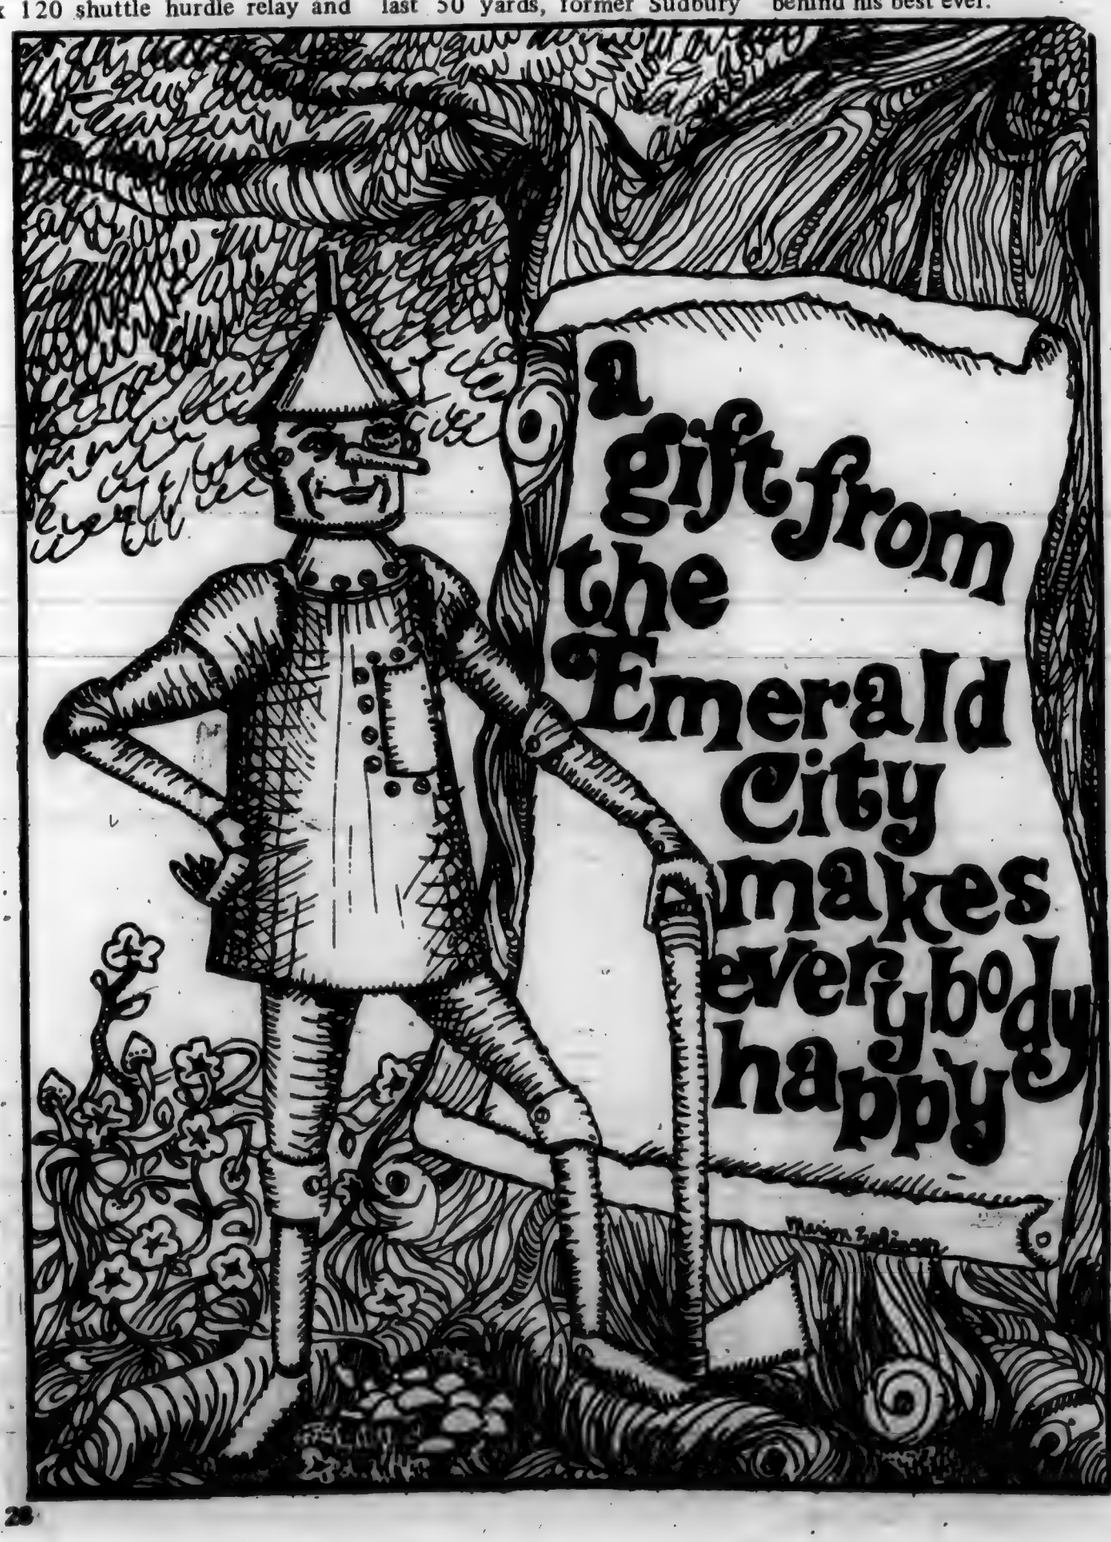
By setting a school record of 43.3 seconds, John Looney led throughout the first leg of the 440 yard relay, allowing Emberley, McClallen, and Gagnon to win this section also. Recording a record time of 43.3 seconds, they qualified for the ICA meet in late May.

The UVM contingent, Bob Frank, Looney, Emberley, and Jim Kauffman ran 63.8 seconds in the 4 x 120 shuttle hurdle relay to gain fourth place.

Craig Buscemi with a loose cartilage in his knee, speculated beforehand that he would not be able to put enough pressure on the tender joint to even place in the javelin. But his toss of 202'9" placed him fifth in the event, and only a few feet behind his best ever.

University of Massachusetts shirts seemed to be everywhere because they usually place two women in every running event. The shot put, however, belonged to Vermont. Kaja Thornton heaved the ball 39'11" to win, Barb Luneau threw 36'8½" to place second, and Janet Lynch grabbed fourth with a throw of 31'8¼".

In addition, Lynch also high jumped 5'2" to place second in that event, and led off with a 220 yard leg of the sprint medley relay. Lynch burned the first 220 and gave a share of the lead to Winsome Jackson. Lori Dane and Jackson held the lead through their 110 yard legs until judges' calls indicated they be disqualified for running out of their lanes.



Judi St. Hilaire valiantly held on to quick starting Cindy Martin of UMass in the final 440 leg, but the UMass speedster held her off in the final straight. The UVM quartet also ran a school record 1:51.6 seconds for second place overall. St. Hilaire ran an excellent 5:02.5 to move up through the pair and gain second place to American record holder Jan Merrill. Amy Bouchard ran close to her personal best to take seventh in 5:16.9, while Heather Adams ran a good 5:33.

The two mile relay team of Ed Nemeth, Dwight Triblehorn, Cunningham and Peter Castrichini took second in their section with a time of 8:09.

Following the state meet, the UVM squad meets St. Lawrence University at home on Tuesday and hosts the Yankee Conference Championship, beginning on Saturday, May 6th at 10:00.

Kaja Thornton putting the shot Photos by Lori Murch

if you liked 'em at the other place, you'll love 'em at our lower prices

H.A.S.H. JEANS

Buckle back, Star & Canadian Star Styles

Jogging & Walking Shorts
Sweatshirts T-Shirts Golf Shirts
Girls short sleeve Tops

Campus nylon warm-up
LIGHTWEIGHT JACKETS great colors - boy's sizes, too

JUST IN - CONVERSE
RUNNING SHOES & SNEAKERS

Basketball Shoes.....$12.75
Ladies Canvas Tennis Shoes.....$13.50
Starfire Training Shoes, nylon & split suede.$17.00

BURLINGTON'S CONVERSE SHOE HEADQUARTERS

ARMY & NAVY
SKELTON'S
864-5011
Church St., Downtown Burlington
Open Monday & Friday Nights

A First Hand Account

Running in the Boston Marathon

By John Foster

A voice over the intercom shouted "Will all runners please stay out of the starting area till 11:30!" Like a grammar school principle telling children to be quiet in a cafeteria, the request hit thousands of deaf ears, as runners crowded together for the start of the Boston Marathon.

In order to facilitate over 4,700 runners starting, the officials arranged us all by our qualifying marathon time. At 11:40 the wheelchair competitors took off while the runners lined up in their appropriate area. When the ropes separating the groups dropped, everyone walked forward compressing us all into a tight pack as long as I could see.

All along the course people were lined up drinking beer, playing music, passing out water and oranges, and giving us the greatest encouragement. At about four miles, I saw Norm Stebbins, a UVM grad student, and we ran together until Wellesly. Respecting his experience, I conformed to his pace and we talked about what we saw and felt. At Wellesly, the college crowd defended their reputation by shouting the loudest. Quickly, I learned what the crowd loved best was for you to react to their cheers by smiling or yelling for more. Their response was great and it seemed that both spectators and runners were truly entertained. I was half way there.

As we passed over route 128, Norm and I quickened our pace and began passing some of the same people that I saw in the start. When we passed UVM runner Tom Beatini, Norm and I split up while Tom nursed stomach trouble. My fatigue increased as the course drifted uphill from Newton to Heartbreak Hill at 21 miles. At about 2:05 I crested the infamous knoll and was truly broken-hearted when I realized how short and easy it was! Five miles to go and it was either flat or downhill.

A mile later I fell apart. My legs hurt going downhill and my mind began to play games. Paul Simon's line "the nearer your destination the more you slip sliding away" became all too real. The more I thought of my remaining mileage, the longer it seemed to take. At this point fatigue and road shock made my teeth and hands numb. My god have I hit the notorious wall?

Ironically, when I saw the "one mile to go" sign, I picked my head up and moved faster. I had it sewn up. I took a corner and decorating the Prudential building were thousands of people shouting the happiness I felt inside.

As soon as I stopped, my legs cramped up a little and I became very, very cold within minutes. Disposable blankets were handed out and recovery facilities were provided underneath the Prudential building. Down in this converted parking garage I saw Peter Kaplan looking incredibly fresh. Too cold to sit down, Peter and I retrieved our travel bags and tried to keep warm. The showers and hot beef stew ended my shivering and besides my legs not working, I felt fine.

Overhearing people talking it seemed that Bill Rodgers won by two seconds and Vermont's John Dimick was thirteenth. In fact Vermont runners ran exceptionally well. The following are the results of the local runners:

9.4th – Bob Maurer, 2:26.41; 117th – Peter Millard, 2:28.09; 289th – Kurt Lavenstein, 2:34.45; 348th – Peter Kaplan, 2:36.45; 363rd – Dave Jones, 2:37.00; 416th – Andy Voorhis, 2:38.45; 520th – John Foster, 2:40.55; 561st – Norm Stebbins, 2:41.45. Also Larry Kimball, 2:50.00, Tom Beatini, 2:53.00 and Lauren Williams, 3:07.00 were listed.

Rugby Cats Drub Westmount

By Steve Larose

Peter Christman scored once, kicked two conversions and a penalty kick to power the University of Vermont rugby team to its first victory of the season, 15-4 over Westmount last Saturday.

Christman started the ball rolling with a three point penalty kick from 20 yards out, followed by a touchdown on a pass from Gary Schillhammer from the 15 yard line. Christman singlehandedly put the Cats out front, 10-0 with the ensuing conversion kick.

Steve Lynch bulled in from the five yard line to add another try and Christman wrapped up the scoring with another two point conversion.

Coach Bob Kaplan reflected on the Westmount win by stating "It was our best game in a long time. We had a lot of pressure, good movement and forced them to make a lot of mistakes that we were able to capitalize on. Our passing was good, a factor of the game in which we have been weak. Our forwards were in good pursuit of the ball too. We dominated in both the scrum and lineouts and got more than our share of the ball even though Westmount was bigger than us."

THE
LAST CHANCE
SALOON

The Chance would like to wish all of our friends the best of luck during the coming exam period. Study hard and remember ... when you're done... we'll be ready

THE
LAST CHANCE
SALOON
147 Main St.

Spring Clearance Sale

Selected Spring Fashions Are Reduced Up to...

50%

Fashion Names at...

Fashion Lane

CORNER OF WILLISTON & HINESBURG ROADS

UNIROYAL

Now in Burlington

Lotsa Cat for Just a Little Scratch!

Uniroyal Tiger Paw

★ BELTED ★

Whitewall. Two Fiberglass Belts.
Plus two Polyester cord plies.

$29.95

A78–13
Whitewall
tubeless,
plus $1.71 F.E.T.
No trade required.

| Size | Price | F.E.T. |
|---|---|---|
| B78-13 | $31.89 | $1.82 |
| D78-14 | $32.66 | $2.07 |
| E78-14 | $33.57 | $2.19 |
| F78-14 | $36.22 | $2.34 |
| G78-14 | $38.24 | $2.47 |
| H78-14 | $41.26 | $2.70 |
| G78-15 | $39.24 | $2.55 |
| H78-15 | $42.46 | $2.77 |
| J78-15 | $44.50 | $2.96 |
| L78-15 | $46.16 | $3.05 |

Whitewall prices shown, ask for our price on blackwalls, plus F.E.T.

UNIROYAL

UNIROYAL RADIAL 180

Steel Belted for Imported Cars

Blackwall

| Size | Price | F.E.T. |
|---|---|---|
| 155R12 | $37.56 | $1.48 |
| 155R13 | $39.10 | $1.61 |
| 165R13 | $42.37 | $1.75 |
| 165R14 | $43.80 | $1.82 |
| 155R15 | $42.21 | $1.77 |
| 165R15 | $45.10 | $1.98 |
| 185HR13 | $49.96 | $1.91 |

Blackwalls, plus F.E.T. No trade required.

Spring Specials!

Wheel Alignment $10.95
(Add $2.00 for Vehicles with Air Conditioning)

Heavy Duty Shock Absorbers
$13.95 each Installed

Williston Rd. Shell
1251 Williston Rd.

Distributed by NORCO AUTO SUPPLY

SPORTS PROFILE

...mpion
...r

...r is that one of ...world is a UVM ...chology major, ...world freestyle ...

...ned professional ...ol her high school ...country, slalom ...

Freestyle, a relatively new form of ski competition, is quite different from the traditional alpine events. While racing relies solely on speed, freestyle offers more versatility by combining this element with the grace and coordination of ballet. Freestyle consists of three separate competitions: moguls, ariels and ballet.

But even though Engisch won the April World Championship Mogul event she does not retain the title of world freestyle champion. The number one spot is decided by averaging the six best scores out of eight races. Since final exams prevented Engisch from competing in the qualifications, she had to miss six races until the next

Her ability is unquestionable

...

...enough courage ... however, as she ...

...-five and was ... was just sixteen. ... affectionately ...

Unlike many other modern-day athletes, Engisch doesn't confine herself to only one sport. Apart from skiing, she is both an accomplished soccer player and brown belt in Judo. Her prowess in the difficult martial art earned her second place in the 1975 New England competition for women. Commenting on UVM soccer, Engisch said, "I love it, we have a really great team here!" Amazingly enough, Engisch also maintained a respectable 3.0 GPA while starting on the soccer team this fall.

While Sanggler's and K2 sponsored Engisch this season, she has had numerous offers from other ski companies, including options for a trip to Japan, and for filming a ski movie.

While Engisch has enjoyed much glory this year, the road to the top was filled with obstacles. At her first race in Mt. Saint Anne, Quebec, Engisch's skis were stolen and she had to borrow a pair for the final competition. A more serious barrier which Engisch had to surpass was a rash of discriminations against the women competitors. She said, "There is money for the women. The way they justify it is that they say there's nothing for women if they beat the men. They say there is one purse and men and women are going for this one purse. They run the same race, yet there are separate trophies and separate standings for the men and women." With the [illegible] differences of men and women, this is [illegible] women would have to place within the top six of [illegible] to receive any money. The chances for this [illegible] are stronger. This is not to say [illegible] as well, but their speed and [illegible] Engisch, a mere 4 foot 10 and a half, has yet to win any money this [illegible]

Last year [illegible] competition, [illegible] purses – one for [illegible] of the danger [illegible] court cases, ABC [illegible] large advertisers [illegible]. First, only [illegible] it was feared [illegible] it to [illegible] only

A Year End Sports Analysis

By Mark Kevorkian

I wish I had some witty and perceptive bit of prose to end my year of sports commentary, something someone will read and say "that kid knows his shit." But for the last hour or so I've tried to project my mind into a witty frame and have gotten no results, so I will dispense with creativity and review the sporting year.

Our arrival at UVM last fall came in the heat of late August and in the midst of the pennant race. The window graffiti at Redstone Campus and Harris-Millis served as a daily reminder that Red Sox and Yankee fans were large – and equal – in number. Both teams were nearly equal too – until the Yankees nosed out the Sox by two and a half games. The Yankee victory in the World Series was an anti-climax for Sox fans and sweet victory for Yankee rooters. In 1977, money did indeed buy happiness for George Steinbrenner and all of Yankeedom.

**********

About the time I started writing this column sometime last fall, the NBA season was just starting. The school year has come and gone, but the NBA season still goes on.

The first game of the season started on a violent note when Kareen Abdul-Jabbar punched Kent Benson, breaking his hand and giving him a concussion. The violent trend continued and climaxed when Kermit Washington rearranged Rudy Tomjanovich's face – and career – with one punch.

But the grace and finesse of such players as George Gervin, Bob McAdoo, Bill Walton, David Thompson, the amazing Dr. J and others overshadowed the violent side of the sport. One would prefer to forget the fights, but will always remember a Dr. J. slam.

The NBA playoffs are into the second round now and it looks as though we will have our fourth new champion in four years. The defending champion Portland Trailblazers have been depleted by injuries, most notably to Bill Walton. The Philadelphia 76'ers, however, are in peak form and are likely to unseat the Blazers as champs.

**********

The highlight of the year was the ambush in Las Vegas last February. Muhammed Ali, the once omnipotent champ, was mugged by Leon Spinks, an upstart with only seven pro-fights behind him. Ali allowed Spinks to pound away at his 36-year-old body for the first few rounds, hoping the challenger would punch himself out, as so many had before against Ali. But Spinks never ran out of steam and Ali's attempt at another miracle comeback was stifled by a Spinks right to the jaw which nearly felled the exhausted champ.

It's been a long season. Now only final exams separate us from summer. Have a good one.

Now Ali says he wants to win the heavyweight crown an unprecedented third time and is scheduled to fight Spinks in September. But the heavyweight championship is only half a crown now. Ken Norton holds the other half now because Leon Spinks wouldn't fight him first. Ah, sports in the courts.

**********

These were just some of the highlights and disappointments of the last eight months of sports. At UVM there were, regretably, more disappointments than highlights, as only the soccer team was successful, while basketball and hockey were not. Perhaps a few changes would be in order.

First, the soccer team does not do itself any favors by playing such weak teams as Norwich and St. Michaels. Both these teams are several notches below the Cats calibre of play and do not belong on the schedule. Perhaps it is tradition to play these teams (cross-town rivals and all that). But tradition is one thing and progress is another. Aside from their tough Yankee conference opponents, the Cats did not play a top flight team except for Keene State, which beat UVM 3-1. The Cats could schedule some tougher non-league teams such as Brown and Hartwick. If successful against these teams, the Cats could end all doubt about just how good they are.

There are some basketball players at UVM, have no doubts. These players can stay with any team, too – the Ohio State game is proof of that. Just why did they fare so poorly this season?

The Cats' big problem this season was their sudden and often fatal mid-game lapses. They would play well for awhile then go into an on-court coma. I suspect this was due to a lack of intensity. The Catamount style of play was just not conducive to keeping up enough intensity to carry the Cats through their cold spells. When the Cats turned state they continued to play in their slow, lethargic pass-the-ball-around-until-the-cows-come-home style. The players couldn't get excited about their play much of the time and neither could the fans – most of whom stayed

(continued on page 33)

The Downhill Edge

THEY'VE JUST ARRIVED...

Running shoes from:

New Balance
Etonic
Tiger
Puma
Nike

plus a

Complete Line of Running Gear including...

frank shorter running gear

Complete Line of Skateboards and Accessories from...

Gordon & Smith
Kryptonic
Bahne
Hobie

Complete Line of Tennis Shoes by:

Puma • Nike • Tread 2 • Bata

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

Mountaineering #3.

METHODOLOGY

Heading for the mountains
Fig. 1

Mountaineering, as all but the chronically misinformed know, is the skill, the science and the art of drinking Busch Beer. It begins by heading for the mountains (i.e., a quick jaunt to your favorite package emporium or wateringhole) and ends by downming the mountains (i.e., slow slaking swallows of the brew that is Busch).

¶ However, between those two points lies a vast area of personal peccadilloes sometimes called technique and sometimes called methodology (depending on your major). Hence, this ad. ¶ Sipping vs. chugging. Both have their merits, of course. But generally speaking, except for cases of extreme thirst or a leaking glass, sipping is the more prudent practice for serious, sustained mountaineering. ¶ Next, the proper position. Some swear by sitting; others by standing. Suffice it to say that the most successful mountaineers are flexible, so you'll find both sitters and standers. (Except on New Year's Eve, when it's almost impossible to find a sitter.) ¶ Which brings us to additives. Occasionally a neophyte will sprinkle salt in his Busch; others mix in tomato juice; and a few on the radical fringe will even add egg. While these manipulations can't be prohibited (this is, after all, a free country), they are frowned upon. Please be advised that purity is a virtue, and the natural refreshment of Busch is best uncompromised.

Sipping vs. chugging
Fig. 2

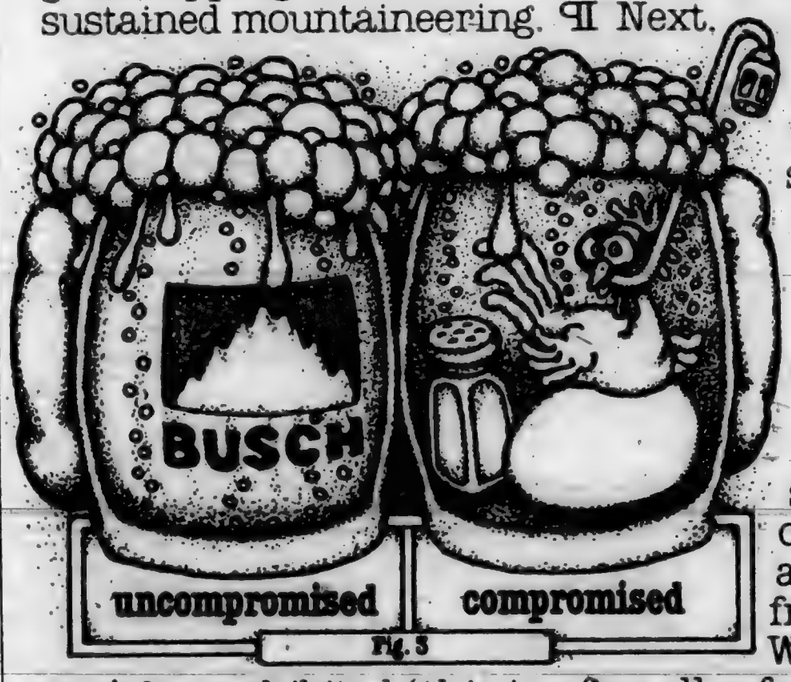

Fig. 3

Standing vs. sitting
Fig. 4

¶ Finally, there's the issue of containers. Good taste dictates a glass be used. But bad planning sometimes prevents that. If you find yourself forced to drink from the can, you should minimize this breach of etiquette. Be formal. Simply let your little finger stick out stiffly (see Fig. 4). Happy Mountaineering!

Don't just reach for a beer. BUSCH® Head for the mountains.

©Anheuser-Busch, Inc. St. Louis, Mo.

National Sports Briefs

Player Wins Third in a Row

Gary Player rallied from a five shot deficit and won his third straight American golf tour victory in the same style he captured the Masters and The Tournament of Champions, his two previous wins. Player edged Andy Bean by one stroke to register a 72 hole total of 270. He is the first man to win three consecutive tournaments in two years. The winner's purse was $40,000, increasing Player's winnings to $150,000 in the last three weeks, more than he has earned in any of his 22 previous years on the American tour.

Johncock Captures USAC 200

After a period of intense confusion, Gordon Johncock was recognized as the winner of the United States Auto Club 200-mile race held on Sunday. Until seven laps from the end, scorers were under the impression that Danny Ongais was in the lead, but the confusion was cleared up and Ongais placed fourth. A.J. Foyt, the only four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500, finished second followed by Tom Sneva in third. Johncock completed the 134 laps in 1 hour and 32 minutes 4.18 seconds to register average speed of 129.003 miles per hour.

Yankee Pitching Questionable

Although the New York Yankees have spent millions of dollars on their pitching staff, they are encountering problems in the first two weeks of the season. Ron Guidrey, Ed Figueroa and Sparky Lyle are the most dependable members of the staff and can be expected to come through for the Yanks but many of the rest are questionable. Catfish Hunter has had a very discouraging season so far and has not been able to live up to people's expectations as of yet. Andy Messersmith suffered a separated shoulder and Don Gullet cannot throw without strong shoulder pain. So far, George Steinbrenner's famous comment, "You never have enough pitching" seems to be coming true in the Yankee camp.

Gabriel and Allen to Join Again

Free agent quarterback Roman Gabriel will join his former coach George Allen on the 1978 Los Angeles Rams football squad. Gabriel last played for the Allen-coached Rams in 1962 as L.A.'s top draft choice out of North Carolina. Allen is moving to the Rams after being head coach of the Washington Redskins.

Yastrzemski May Retire

Carl Yastrzemski has announced that 1979 will probably be his last season as an active player in the major leagues. Although he stated that he hadn't yet made his final decision, his hope is to end his career before he is forced to play only part-time. That would give Yastrzemski 19 seasons with the Red Sox, equaling the record set by Ted Williams. At present Yastzemski has 2738 hits, 262 short of his life time goal of 3000. If he continues his average of 150 hits per season, he should reach the 3000 mark some time in 1979. He will be forty years old on August 22, 1979.

Shape Up Your Front End

AMOUR TIRE & BATTERY, INC.
106 MAIN STREET • DIAL 862-9643/862-9644
BURLINGTON, VERMONT 05401

Baseball Victory

Continued from page 26

danger of losing the shut out.

"We did not play with any intensity against Rhode Island," said Leggett. "We can not win games by just walking on the field. We have to play hard all of the time. Our outfield made mistakes in the second Rhode Island game and it cost us. The Rhode Island pitchers were not as good as the St. Lawrence pitchers we had faced. We should have hit them."

J. B. McCarthy pitched the second game for Vermont but did not benefit from the shoddy defense or the nonexistent offense. The Connecticut game proved that Vermont has to score a lot of runs in order to win.

Leggett concluded by stating, "We proved we can play with the good teams. Before the end of the season this will be a good team. We began to show some offense punch against UConn and that was a good sign. I'm looking forward to the rest of the season."

As the Cats look ahead to a double header with St. Michael's on Saturday and a twinbill with Clarkson at home on Sunday, Vermont will only go as far as its hitting will take it. So far, Vermont has produced a weak offensive attempt, the major factor behind its 1-7 record.

Bill McAlduff had this to say about the weekend, "We were not mentally ready for Rhody, but the win against UConn was really needed." Bill is still not pleased with his batting consistency, but he is showing signs of coming alive at the plate. His single drove in two runs against UConn.

T. J. Valley also had a fine day against the Huskies; he scored two runs and had two runs batted in.

All of Us at WECK'S
Would Like To Wish You a Happy Summer.
And a Special Congratulations to Graduating Seniors.

weck's
WINE & CHEESE
Burlington Square Mall 658-2070

Sportswriters Wanted
Contact
Steve Larose (X4252) or
Rich Chalmers (2281)

Year End Analysis

Continued from page 31

home.

To put it simply, they got to start running and shooting. Not a run and gun, Las Vegas-Nevada style of play, just a game plan that would allow the Cats to take the ball to their opponents and run them until they drop. The Cats have the players to do this too. Dane Correll is a good ball handler who will create a few thrills before his career is over. Greg Davis' speed was largely kept under wraps this season. Jim Nocera, as mentioned before, is big and strong and isn't afraid to shoot, or take the ball to the hoop.

It boils down to strategy, and this season the strategy clearly failed. The man who made this strategy – coach Peter Salzberg – would be wise to reassess the style of play he advocates or the Cats are likely to play another season in front of mostly empty seats.

It's been a long season. Now only final exams separate us from Summer. Have a good one.

Hilary Engisch

Continued from page 30

traveling from all over the world to these meets and they're not going for money, but for themselves, and then they can't televise us, but pretend we don't exist."

Engisch has had to face all these inhibiting factors by herself. Without a coach or manager, Engisch must train alone and analyze her performance objectively. She even travels by herself. "I miss not having a coach. I miss not traveling with a team. It's lonely, it really is. It's over-glorified, it's exciting, but yet it's very hard when by yourself."

Athletic Ticket Book Applications

Applications for ticket books for the 1978-79 hockey and basketball games are available upon request at the Athletic Ticket Office, 206 Patrick Gym. The forms are not being mailed to all returning students this year, so you must let the Ticket Office know if you would like to reserve a book for next year. The telephone number is 656-4410.

The best news is that the price will be the same: $25.00 for the season book. The price per game will be $2.00 for students, so the coupon book represents a huge saving.

This offer is for fulltime students, either graduate or undergraduate, only.

Reserve your book now with a $5.00 deposit or payment in full, and plan to pick it up at Registration in the Fall. Notify the Athletic Ticket Office by calling 656-4410 or send a note to 206 Patrick Gym.

THE RATHSKELLER

Steamers Fri. 4-6

Reduced Drink Prices Daily 4-6

Extensive Seafood Menu

We Welcome Reservations

For Fine Dining in a Unique Atmosphere
BEHIND BENNINGTON NORTH ON COLLEGE ST.
Open Daily For Dinner and Luncheon
Brunch Saturday

863-4429

127½ College Burlington

CALENDAR

Friday•28

Saturday•29

9 a.m., Vermont Geological Society, annual spring meeting, Perkins Geology Bldg. Presentation of papers on Vermont geology by undergraduate and graduate students.

9:30 – Noon, Vermont Archeological Society Seminar "Beyond Traditional Archeology," with Chester Liebs, director, graduate program in historic preservation, University of Vermont, 455 Waterman Bldg.

9:30 a.m. – 5:30 p.m., Workshop: "Basics for Psychotherapists, Counselors and Other Helpers" (Psychopathology and Theories of Personality) Leader: Ed Gurowitz. At the Vermont Institute for Transactional Analysis, 362 Main Street, Burlington. Pre-registration required. Call 862-6589. Fee $50.00.

9:30 a.m. – 5:30 p.m., Workshop: "Owning Your Sexuality – A Workshop for Women" Leader: Nan Gurowitz. At the Vermont Institute for Transactional Analysis, 362 Main Street, Burlington. Pre-registration required. Call 862-6589. Fee $25.00.

10 a.m. – 6 p.m., Car Wash, Spillane's Mobil, Williston Rd. near Finast. Benefit of UVM Cunningham Newman Center.

10 a.m., Softball, UVM at Herkimer Community College (two games).

1 – 4 p.m., Musical Modes & the Dulcimer, Church St. Center, with Jerry Rockwell and Mary Ann Samuels. Pre-registration at the Center; $6. Tel 656-4221.

1 p.m., Baseball, UVM at St. Michael's (two seven-inning games).

1 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, UVM at St. Lawrence.

1:30 p.m., Women's Lacrosse, UVM at Plymouth State.

3 p.m., Women's Outdoor Track, Massachusetts at UVM.

7 p.m., IRA Film, "Marathon Man," Southwick Gym, admission one dollar.

7 p.m., UVM Music Dept. Senior Recital, David Raymond, horn & Michael Mario, guitar. Recital Hall, Music Bldg. Free, reception following.

8 p.m., Middlebury College presents the 4th Annual Bluegrass & Folk Festival. Mead Chapel. $3. For more information call 388-2663.

Sunday•30

8 a.m., Dressage for UVM Spring Horse Trials at UVM Spear Street Farm.

10 a.m., X-country jumping and stadium jumping, UVM Spring Horse Trials.

1 p.m., Baseball, Clarkson at UVM (two seven-inning games).

7 p.m., S.A. Film, "The Country Girl," B106 Angell Lecture Center, general admission 50 cents; with UVM ID free.

7:30 p.m., UVM Student Films, free screening, 103 Rowell.

8 p.m., IRA, "Marathon Man," Southwick Gym.

Monday•1

Tuesday•2

9:25 a.m., Critique of Solzhenitsyn's work, sponsored by the Program of Russian and East European Studies, 206 Lafayette.

10:50 a.m., Chemistry Colloquium, "A Mechanism of General Acid-Base Catalysis of Carbonyl Addition Reactions," with William P. Jencks, Brandeis University, B112 Angell Lecture Center.

Noon, Staff Council, Memorial Lounge.

1 p.m., Baseball, Norwich at UVM (two seven-inning games).

1 p.m., Men's Outdoor Track, St. Lawrence at UVM.

1 p.m., Softball, UVM at Plymouth State (two games).

7:30 p.m., Lecture, "The Lessons of Solzhenitsyn's 'The Gulag Archipelago'," by Patricia Blake, Columbia University and Time Magazine, 108 Terrill Hall. Admission free. Sponsored by the program of Russian and East European Studies.

7:30 p.m., Film, Vidas Secas (Barren Lives) (Brazil, 1963, directed by Nelson Pereira dos Santos) Set in the early 1940's, depicts the struggles of an itinerant cowhand's family in drought-ravaged, landowner-dominated Brazil. B106 Angell Lecture Center. Admission free.

7:30 – 10 p.m., Lecture, "The Palestinian and the Middle East," by Steve Korab, Church St. Center. Pre-registration at the Center; admission free.

7:30 p.m., Seminar, "The Cobbossee Watershed Program," with Thomas Gordon, director, Cobbosse Watershed District, Winthrop, ME, 107 Science Hall, St. Michael's College.

Wednesday•3

9:25 a.m., Seminar, "Critique of Solzhenitsyn's work," with Patricia Blake, Columbia University and Time Magazine, 206 Lafayette Bldg., sponsored by the program of Russian and East European Studies.

10 a.m. – noon, Consumer Assertiveness, Adult Basic Ed. Center, 110 E. Spring St., Winooski, in cooperation with the Consumer Education Access Project. Admission free.

Noon, "Sun Day" Activities, Church St. Center. Activities presented in conjunction with the national day of recognition for solar energy. Admission free.

3 p.m., Men's Tennis, St. Lawrence at UVM.

3:30 p.m., Women's Lacrosse, UVM at Middlebury.

4 p.m., Men's Lacrosse, St. Michael's at UVM.

8 p.m., Fleming Museum Lecture, "The Bungalow in Vermont: A Study in Innovative Architecture," by John Axtell, graduate student in the historic preservation program, University of Vermont, Fleming Museum, Wilbur Room. Admission free.

Thursday•4

12 p.m., Baseball, UVM at Middlebury.

3:30 p.m., Softball, Castleton State at UVM (two games).

6:15 p.m., Christian Science College Organization, 443 Waterman Bldg.

7:30 – 9:30 p.m., Forum, "What Meaning Do Quebec's History and Policies Have for Vermonters?" with Frank Bryan, member of La Societe des Deux Mondes, Church St. Center. Admission free.

8 p.m., Women and Madness: "Tit for Tat," Moma, 4 min; "Make Out," 10 min.; "Beauty Knows No Pain," Benchmark Films, 29 min.; "China Moon," Barbara Linkevitch, 15 min.; "Eggs and Elevators," 3 min.; "Folly," Freude; "Rape," Joanne Elan, 35 min.; "What I Want," Sharon Hennessay, 10 min. William Science Hall. Sponsored by the Green Valley Film and Arts Center.

Remaining Spring Sports Schedules

Varsity Golf (Men)
April 28 – J.W. Goss. Invitational (Midd) – 1:00 A
Varsity Tennis (Men)
April 27-30 – New Englands (Amherst, MA) – 5:00 A
May 3 – St. Lawrence – 3:00 H
May 5 – Middlebury "B" – 3:00 A
May 6 – Albany – 1:00 H
Varsity Baseball (Men)
April 29 – St. Michael's College (2) – 1:00 A
April 30 – Clarkson University (2) – 1:00 H
May 2 – Norwich University (2) – 1:00 H
May 4 – Middlebury College – 12:00 A
May 6 – University of Maine (2) – 12:00 A
Varsity Lacrosse (Men)
April 29 – St. Lawrence – 1:00 A
May 1 – Middlebury – 4:00 H
Varsity Outdoor Track (Men)
May 2 – St. Lawrence – 1:00 H
May 6 – Yankee Conference – 10:00 H
May 13-14 – New Englands (UMass) – 10:00 A
Varsity Lacrosse (Women)
April 27 – Lyndon – 4:00 H
April 29 – Plymouth – 1:30 A
May 1 – Lyndon – 4:00 A
May 3 – Middlebury – 3:30 A
May 5 – Castleton – 3:30 H
Varsity Outdoor Track (Women)
April 28 – UMass w/ Harvard – 3:00 A
May 5-6 – EAIAW Championships (Slippery Rock) – 10:00 A
May 13 – Albany Invitational – 10:00 A
May 25-27 – AIAW Nationals (Knoxville, TN) – 10:00 A
Varsity Softball (Women)
April 28 – Oswego (2) – 3:00 A
April 29 – Herkimer (2) – 10:00 A
May 2 – Plymouth (2) – 3:00 A
May 4 – Castleton (2) – 3:30 H
May 6 – Massachusetts (2) – 1:30 H
May 7 – Springfield (2) – 1:00 A

Race

Cont. from page 25

was given to the winners of the Last But Not Least Award. Dressed to Impress winners received the latest in polarized shades and unconventional sun hats.

RACE RESULTS
Women's Race
(1) Nancy Dixon; (2) Ginny Scott; (3) Kristin Nelson; (4) Lizabeth Jones; (5) Cindy Sprague; (6) Kate Stuff.
Prime: Ginny Scott. Last but not least: Robin Doulin. Dressed to Impress: Kristin Nelson.
Men's Race
(1) David Walker; (2) Chuck des Jardin; (3) Rich Zita; (4) George Terwilliger; (5) Calvin Erdman; (6) John Whitaker.
Prime: David Walker. Last but not least: David Krisheff. Dressed to Impress: Calvin Erdman.

ATTENTION COLLEGE STUDENTS

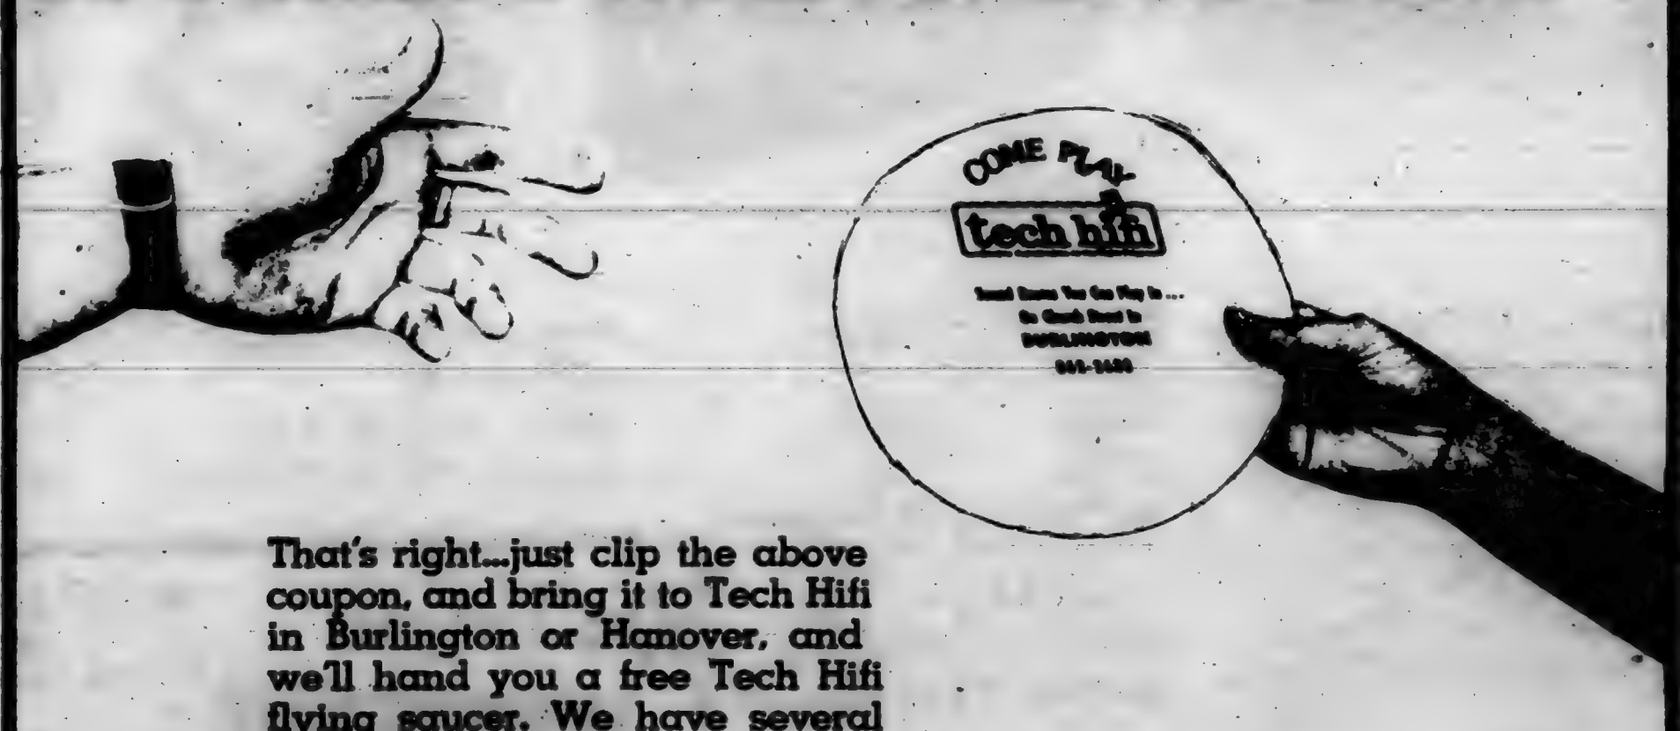
You may be eligible for a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship. The scholarship includes full tuition, lab expenses, incidental fees, a reimbursement for textbooks, and $100 a month tax free. How do you qualify? You must have at least two years of graduate or undergraduate work remaining, and be willing to serve your nation at least four years as an Air Force officer. Scholarships are available to students who can qualify for pilot, navigator, or missile training, and to those who are majoring in selected technical and nontechnical academic disciplines, in certain scientific areas, in undergraduate nursing, or selected premedical degree areas. Non-scholarship students enrolled in the Air Force ROTC two-year program also receive the $100 monthly tax-free allowance just like the scholarship students. Find out today about a two-year Air Force ROTC scholarship and about the Air Force way of life. Your Air Force ROTC counselor has the details.



AIR FORCE ROTC
Gateway to a great way of life.

Contact St. Michael's/UVM Air Force ROTC, 655-2000, ext. 2551.

BRING US THIS COUPON...

AND WE'LL GIVE YOU A FREE FLYING SAUCER.

That's right...just clip the above coupon, and bring it to Tech Hifi in Burlington or Hanover, and we'll hand you a free Tech Hifi flying saucer. We have several hundred of these, but when they're gone, they're gone, so don't delay.

tech hifi
Soundrooms you can play in.

150 CHURCH ST. • BURLINGTON, VT. • 862-2638
38 SO. MAIN ST. • HANOVER, N.H. • 643-4312

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON CASSETTES

It's easy. Buy more than one at a time.

Just like beer, soda or apples, you save a lot by buying in quan-tity. We don't mean huge quanti-ties, we mean "6", yes, six at a time.

We call it: "Creative Sound Six Pack"

Simply buy six cassette tapes at a time and we'll give you our case lot discounted price . . . and that means additional savings over our regular low prices.

SONY Six Packs
6 Low Noise C-60
Regular $11.34 ($1.89 ea.)
Six-Pack: $5.34 ($.89 ea.)

6 HF Series C-90
Regular $22.74 ($3.79 ea.)
Six-Pack: $15.36 ($2.56 ea.)

6 Ferri-Chrome C-90
Regular $33.54 ($5.59 ea.)
Six-Pack $23.40 ($3.90 ea.)

BASF Six-Packs
6 Studio C-90
Regular $29.94 ($4.99)
Six-Pack: $15.00 ($2.50 ea.)

6 New Pro II C-90
Regular $28.74 ($4.79 ea.)
Six-Pack: $19.20 ($3.20 ea.)

6 New Pro III C-90
Regular $29.94 ($4.99 ea.)
Six-Pack: $21.00 ($3.50 ea.)

Maxell Six-Packs
6 UDXL II C-90
Regular $33.00 ($5.50 ea.)
Six-Pack: $23.10 ($3.85 ea.)

TDK Six-Packs
6 SA C-90
Regular $28.74 ($4.79 ea.)
Six-Pack: $20.10 ($3.35 ea.)

IN DASH AM-FM CASSETTE PLAYER
MODEL PE-666
Features automatic reverse, front-rear fader, locking fast forward and reverse, dial in door, 4 watts per channel RMS, program indicator lights.
Normally $239.95
NOW JUST $179.90

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

• 157 PEARL ST., ESSEX JCT. • BARRE-MONTPELIER RD., BARRE • "IN THE MALL BETWEEN" KMART & MARTIN'S, SO. BURLINGTON

ARTS/ENTERTAINMENT

Wilde Comedy In Earnest

By Suzy Karkus

With spring fever in the air, and the thoughts of every warm-blooded animal turning lightly towards love, UVM's drama department made a timely contribution to the prevailing mood last week with a highly successful production of Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest."

In this light-hearted comedy, Wilde takes a satiric look into the gay, frivolous world of the Victorian elite. The romantic entanglements of a host of riotous characters are the subject of some of his wittiest comments about love, marriage and high society.

Speaking in language which is as eloquent as it is absurd, each player tops the next with puns which are alternately simple-minded nonsense and biting cynicism. The interludes are delivered with ability and vigor by a cast in full command of the material, under the direction of Edward Feidner.

All the commotion stems from the desire of two young ladies, Gwendolyn, played by Sally Faye Reit, and Cecily, played by Julie Carmen, to marry a man named Earnest. Amid a whirl of mishaps and mistaken identities, the girls learn their fiances are named otherwise, and trouble ensues. Yet, as Gwendolyn says, "in matters of grave importance, style, not sincerity, is the vital thing," which pretty much sums up the state of affairs here.

Greg Patnaude, playing one eligible bachelor named Jack, is particularly adept in this area. His performance is charged with style and affectation of the most outrageous sort.

Eben Young, who plays Jack's friend Algernon, lacks this intensity of affectation and is thus a good complement to Jack. But it is the energy which Patnaude maintains, coupled with equally strong performances by Reit, and Mimi Bader's wonderful Lady Bracknell, which sustains the show's vitality.

Concurrent with the development of the engagements of the two young couples, we are treated to the hilarious, absolutely proper governess Miss Prism (Muriel Stockdale) as she tries to ensnare the ever elusive Rev. Canon Chanuble, played by Vincent Rossano.

The show's energy grows steadily as it progresses, with the exception of a few momentary lapses when audience attention may have been lost. However, it was usually retrieved by Wilde's consistently fresh humor, which survives throughout. Energy reaches a frenzied climax in the third act, when all misunderstandings are sorted out through a series of the most improbable coincidences, and the lovers are united.

Also enjoyable was the inclusion of the maids and butlers in changing the set. Ever present to highlight the absurdity of the pretenses of the 'elite set,' the servants effectively tie all the scenes together, and never fail out of character for a moment. An added treat was their performance as singers in the lobby during intermission.

Playing the Circuit

So You Want to be a Rock Star?

By Michael O'Neil

"A lot of people have the attitude that you're rich right away and that you've 'got the life,' not realizing what they went through..."

Joe Conti, Baby Blue

Rock and Roll Music: applause, superstardome, bucks, big bucks, magazines, mail, parties, and glory.

While the number of established 'big acts' can be ticked off by anyone who listens to the radio, what of the thousands who dream of stardome and fail? Perhaps rock 'n roll stardom is a life of leisure once it's attained. But one forethought – it ain't easy getting there!

THE ROAD OR "HOME AWAY FROM HOME"

Scott Mathews, a member of Plum Crazy, a regional band, said, "The road is very tedious; driving on your pocket, on your brain, everything. If you're not made comfortable and can't afford to do things that you'd like to do – it's a drag." Plum Crazy is breaking up on Sunday morning.

Eventually, even the simplest comforts of home become vacations in themselves. For example, the management of one club wanted us to sleep upstairs from the club in a room with no windows, no heat, and mattresses on the floor with probably any kind of stain on them you can imagine," said Bob DiMinno, a member of a popular Vermont and New Jersey band, Baby Blue. "There were no blankets, no sheets, no anything..."

"We took the agent to where he wanted us to stay," continued DiMinno, "and explained the things we didn't like – the heat, the windows, etc. He said, 'there's heat; just open up this vent.' There wasn't a heat pipe or anything like that. It was a vent that led from downstairs. His whole theory was that the heat from downstairs would rise upstairs, and you could open this little vent and that would be your heat."

"You wind up drinking to go to sleep," said Sam Spear, a member of Plum Crazy. "You can't put up with it, so half the band ends up smashed every night so you can put up with your surroundings."

THE NEXT STEP

Agents and booking agencies – you can't live with them and you can't live without them. They promise you more and give you less. Booking agents generally enjoy a lack of popularity with musicians.

Concerning agents, Conti warned, "You get a lot of big talk when you meet these agents. They can do this for you, they can do that for you. You're going to be their top band... and they'll throw the bull at you a real lot and make you feel that this guy knows what he's talking about. They want to give you that confidence. Then, as you work for them, you find out they're really not all they say they're going to be. All they do is book you into a club. Whatever club they have, they'll book you in. They don't make you into a superstar, they don't have the recording contract for you... They make you think that they have that for you." Nevertheless, added Conti, "you need someone like that!"

Thirty year old Ed Malhoit is the major booking agent in Northern New England (including Burlington), as well as a former agent of Baby Blue. "Dreamers of stardom should be realistic," said Malhoit. "A lot of these bands jump into the situation because they read all

(continued on page 44)

finbars

soup salad sandwiches homemade desserts daily special
serving from 12–8
167 main st., burlington

Searching the Subconcious

By Richard Hyland

At intermission, I caught myself staring at the chairs being set up for the second half of Kreskin's show which involved volunteers from the audience. Already, I felt the control that Kreskin can maintain over people. He had just successfully joined three rings, read the personal thoughts of some in the crowd, and found his hidden paycheck, when he informed us that "we ain't seen nothin yet."

Kreskin, as usual, was right. I was one of many who stormed the stage in response to a request for volunteers, but I managed to sneak up the stairs and shoulder my way into the crowd. Later, after reflecting on the experience, I discovered that at no time was I truly aware of the capacity crowd in front of me. My eyes were focused on Kreskin as he explained exactly what he was going to do. He then performed several demonstrations in which we, the volunteers, responded to his power of suggestion.

It is very hard to express in words such an experience without sounding like a textbook. Simply, participation in the demonstrations for me was quite an introduction into the workings of the subconscious mind. This was unique in that we were conscious of the subconscious experience while it was taking place.

This meeting of the subconscious and conscious, Kreskin explains, could result in that phenomenon known as the deception of the conscious. This was when one would rationalize his automatic response to a subconscious suggestion as "not really trying" to break the spell. In reality though, you were. The suggestion was just like something blocking the brain between its moment of decision and execution to break the spell.

Among the feats Kreskin used with his power of suggestion was causing another to get his hand stuck in a pocket. At one time, he made the entire group immobile; as stiff and rigid as statues after reading directions off a card... During this time, he suggested to the person next to me that he would shout "extra, extra, extra" at the sound of a whistle. Minutes later, he responded without hesitation.

Kreskin's last demonstration was by far his most convincing of his power of suggestion. Without any verbal communication, Kreskin "thought" a suggestion that we would get our feet stuck walking off stage. Then, without any idea of what to expect, we all began to walk off and immediately lurched forward when our feet stuck. After jokingly pretending to be leaving, he released us, thanked us, and exited the same way he came in – to a standing ovation. But Kreskin did not instantly disappear, nor did he ascend to the heavens, for as he said, he is not God and he does not wish to start any new cults.

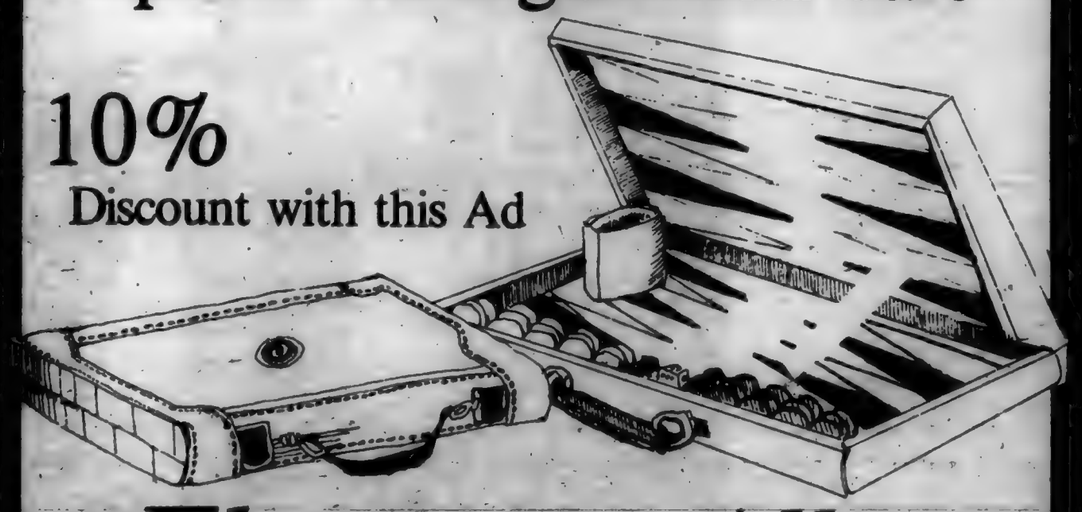
Kreskin has often been called the world's greatest showman today, and it is pretty obvious why. His telepathic mind is at work captivating the audience's attention making even the hardest skeptics sit up and take notice. One might even say that because of this, he is working at an unfair advantage.

Kreskin's wit and sincerity as a person, however, hardly make him seem like the type of man who would take advantage of anyone. In acknowledging the ovation of the crowd, Kreskin said that he enjoyed his work as a performer because he enjoyed the people. It occurred to me then that we were the advantaged ones, having had the opportunity to see this man's talents applied for entertainment purposes. I don't think I would like to witness it otherwise.

"But Kreskin did not instantly disappear, nor did he ascend to the heavens, for as he said, he is not God and he does not wish to start any new cults."

UVM Spring Horse Trials

Sunday, April 30
at the
UVM Spear Street Farm



Sponsored By
The UVM Horse Club

Dressage: 8AM
X-C Jumping 10AM
Stadium Jumping

For Info Call X. 4246 Horse Sense Suite

Make Your Move To A Very Special Backgammon Sale

10%
Discount with this Ad

Ebenezer Allen
Gift Shop
Burlington Square Mall 863-4215

Would you like to become involved with the Summer Cynic? Leave your name/number at our lower Billings office, and we'll be in touch.

"Lear" Transcends Mere Acting

By Tricia John

The Acting Company's production of King Lear Monday night was first rate, probably the best production many of us in the audience have ever seen. John Houseman directed the play and the show carried the wisdom and maturity not generally encountered when brave directors undertake Shakespeare's most brilliant statement of man's inhumanity to man, of man gaining wisdom in a world largely opposed to his happiness and sense of justice. Either they don't understand it or they just can't control the action. Houseman did both — and chose the magnificent David Schramm to play King Lear.

Schramm is devastating — his presence on stage is as uplifting as emotionally exhausting. I've never seen a sadder, more intense Lear, and have therefore never imagined a performance of Lear could be so powerful. I wonder where David Schramm can go from here, having mastered one of the most difficult roles in theatre.

While Schramm certainly carried the play, the rest of the cast contributed to its smooth excellence. Players seemed so thoroughly absorbed in their characters — a concentration that sometimes transcended the fact that they were indeed "acting."

The Earl of Kent (James Harper) emerged as a strong, noble character, his diction (as well as everyone else's) was superb — Shakespeare's iambic pentameter flowing as smoothly and naturally as our own speech. Kent's scene with the effeminate Oswald, servant to Goneril (Brooks Baldwin) was marvellous — both men in perfect form. Kent seemed to influence the direction of King Lear's journey in the first three acts more than I've usually been aware of — perhaps his strong voice and countenance created this illusion.

The stark, simple costumes by Nancy Potts also contributed subtly to the characterizations of some of the actors. The sleek, bird-like costumes of Goneril and Regan complimented all the avian imagery Lear associates with them (vultures, pelicans, etc.) Other costumes were just as clever, usually left uncluttered with very simple lines. Lear's costume in Act IV as he wanders about mad was very effective — we could make out remnants of what was once a very noble outfit, now as tattered and worn as Lear himself.

Ming Cho Lee's set also bore the stamp of bleak simplicity. The stage slightly sloped down from all sides into the center, pulling the audience's eyes to the center as naturally as the dramatic action which gravitated there. Several bare wooden posts were placed upstage — usually indicating a hallway or entrance way in a castle. When Lear journeys into the storm, one lone pole stands over to the left — brilliant stage which, like the costumes, added to the desperate, harsh atmosphere of the drama. Lee's sets were also as important in Tuesday night's Mother Courage, more depressing, actually than the script itself.

So much can be said about this production. It reaffirmed for me that a good King Lear is possible after all, and that Shakespeare did allow for substantial character development for almost everyone in the play. Houseman fully exploited the content of the play, and created rich, important characters that either played distinctively with or against Lear. Gloucester (Gregg Almquist) was more introspective than we usually see him, and I was grateful he was not that stock "foolish old man" that many directors believe they cleverly read into the drama. Gloucester has a lot to learn, and he learns it. He isn't made to look like an idiot, though. After Cornwall pulls Gloucester's eyes out (an effective scene to be sure!), Gloucester transforms into a fatalistic, calm man with full knowledge of his mistakes. The scenes with his son Edgar leading him to Dover were beautifully done. Edgar (Kevin Conroy) was superb throughout, especially in "Tom's a-cold" scene in Act III.

I can't fault the performance. Those pagen gods really did seem to control the events of the drama; humanity was created and sustained before our eyes, evil was seen as ruthless, deceitful and self-destructive as it's ever been. Lear's physical nature was essential to his character: fondly holding his frail fool through the storm, Gloucester on the bench, Cordelia as she lay dead. His love for these people dominated the course of the play, not his selfish desperation in being alone, wandering in the wilderness.

A fitting final review for a critic who's seen better days, too. You won't have Tricia John to write nasty letters to anymore. I suppose what we've all learned over these last three years of Cynic reviewing is that a small town is no place for an honest critic.

---

(The Cynic staff would like to thank Tricia John for three years of dedicated and sincere service.)

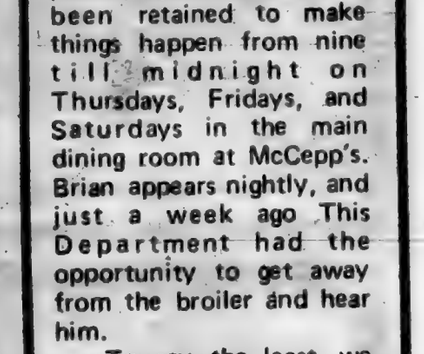
ANOTHER YEAR GONE BY...

It has been a Pleasure Doing Business with YOU!!



Congratulations to all Graduating Seniors..

The Whole Gang at ZIGGY'S Wishes You the Best of Luck!!!

ZIGGY'S
101 Church St.

McCepp and Entertainment

It is no secret that McCepp's taste in music leans toward Hawaiian Love Songs. If there were any possible way to arrange it, Don Ho himself would make music every night at McCepp's. Don Ho is otherwise engaged.

• Despite this, McCepp has come to the conclusion that many of his customers would like to have some entertainment at night rather than listening to their ice cubes melt. For this reason, talented songster and piano player Brian Bull has been retained to make things happen from nine till midnight on Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays in the main dining room at McCepp's. Brian appears nightly, and just a week ago This Department had the opportunity to get away from the broiler and hear him.

To say the least, we were surprised. Brian Bull is a contemporary talent who does wonders with a piano. Occasionally he does a number or two on the guitar. It's all first rate. The nicest thing of all is that when McCepp stands up and requests something like "You and Me and Blue Hawaii," Brian Bull gives him such a look you would not believe. Better yet, McCepp is even developing a taste for the kind of music Brian Bull produces. This is not to suggest that anytime soon you can expect him to appear in denim or gabardine, but at least progress is being made.

No matter how good Brian Bull is, however, he is not sufficient reason unto himself for you to visit McCepp's. The reason you should visit McCepp's is as it always has been. You can't find a better meal in all of Burlington, and you can eat anything on the menu all day long. Now those are two pretty good reasons right there. Brian Bull is an extra added attraction.

DINNER SERVED TILL MIDNIGHT

McCepp's
Burlington Square

5th ANNIVERSARY SPECIAL

Soup of the Day Swiss Mixed Salad
Rosti, Rice or French Fries
Roast Beef, Au Jus or Cafe De Paris
only $4.95

Do Not Forget
We Still Are Serving
the
Greatest Brunch in Town.

Our Patio is Open
Now
for the Season
(Weather Permitting)

RESTAURANT SWISSPOT

1242 Shelburne Rd.

Gigi Enthusiastic But Not Lyric's Best

By Alexandra Eschenbrenner

A light but flawed production on a grand scale with the enthusiasm characteristic of most high school shows opened last Wednesday at the Flynn with Lyric Theatre's presentation of the musical Gigi. Complete with song, dance and drama, the lengthy three hour performance combined the varied talents of over 200 people to create a potentially professional show which unfortunately fell below par of Lyric's past endeavors.

Setting the stage for a humorous farce on French Victorian customs, the story, adapted from a novel by Collette, begins with the transformation of the young questioning Gigi into a lady fit for high Parisian society. Along the way, the rich, cynical and philandering Gaston, an old friend of the family's played by Michael Ashton, becomes bored with his glamorous life and numerous girlfriends, finding it intolerably superficial. Seeking gaiety and a fresh release from boredom with life in general, he discovers the youthful zeal of Gigi. Soon afterwards he falls in love with her, and after some hesitation on the part of Gigi, Gaston manages to convince her his intentions are true. The typical "happy ever after" ending follows and the audience leaves a bit entertained but hardly enlightened.

The performances by the actors varied considerably in quality. Beyond a doubt, one of the best was Honore, Gaston's uncle and narrator of the show, played by David La Marche, who exhibited an exquisite voice despite the fuzziness from the amplification. As far as dramatics goes, Aunt Alicia, played by Brigid Landler, was the most notable, offering an excellent portrayal of haughty, high class snobbishness which particularly shined during her frequent and humerous snide remarks.

The lead character Gigi, played by Jo Anne Clark, while filling the stage with needed enthusiasm during slow spots, seemed to be overcome by opening night nervousness during her solo at the end when she was noticably off key. A main problem with the remaining performers was their inability to speak clearly over their supposed French accents. A lack of ease with which these characters played their parts presented another problem for the production.

Gigi (Jo Anne Clark) and Gaston (Michael Ashton)

The numerous songs during the play, usually during scene changes, though continuing the plot, had a tendency to drag due to a lack of any action. The orchestration accompanying these songs was good and for the most part managed to keep the singers on key. Conversely, the few dance routines were very lively and well choreographed. The can-can girls in particular, though not a necessary part of the show, managed to add considerable vivaciousness to the production.

The sets and costumes which were vital to the show deserve above all else recognition for their superior quality. They were simple, tasteful and adequate, all three being qualities found rarely in amateur productions of musicals on the grandious scale of Gigi. Set changes were numerous and for the most part ran smoothly without interferring with the action of the play.

Overall, Lyric did not outdo themselves in their final performance of the season. The light and often slow moving production, though filled with enthusiasm and a bit of talent, hardly ranks among Burlington's best shows of the year.

Gigi learns about the ways of high society from Aunt Alicia (Brigid Landler).

Photos by Rob Swanson

WHAT'S NEW AT:

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP

Swimsuits

arena

NATIONAL AAU SUPPLIER TO:
Competitive Swimming
Diving
Water Polo
Synchronized Swimming

Lowe Alpine Packs
3 Models
For The: Traveler, Hiker Mountaineer

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP

863-5581

Hours
Mon.-Fri. 9-9
Sat. 9-6

227 Main St. Burlington

Between The Roars

By Marcia Andrews

Bob Barker and Elin Zimmerman, two UVM students, have compiled a number of songs, written between 1927 and 1940, into an hour's worth of musical entertainment which they call Between the Roars.

The revue will include old-time favorites written by Cole Porter, Jerome Kern, Lorenz Hart and others. Barker and Zimmerman, familiar faces to UVM theatre goers, both appeared in Royall Tyler's productions of Man of La Mancha last spring and The Three Penny Opera this past fall. More recently, Bob directed the Living Learning Center Players production of Charley's Aunt, while Elin was also seen in Moliere's An Imaginary Invalid. Both are in the UVM concert choir, of which Bob is a soloist.

Matt McDonald, who has written the script and will also narrate the show, is a senior theatre student who often exercises his writing and directing talents in Living Learning Center skits and talent shows. He directed Story Theatre last semester and just last month starred in Charley's Aunt, both presented at the Living Learning Center. Matt also directed a one act play, The Sand Castle at Royall Tyler Theatre last spring.

Elin Zimmerman and Bob Barker rehearse for "Between the Roars."

Carl Recchia, musical director and rehearsal pianist and accompanist, is a senior and a piano performance major, who is also busily rehearsing for his senior recital to be presented on the 28th of April Also, many will recognize Carl as the musical entertainer of Redstone Station.

Between the Roars will be presented at Royall Tyler Theatre and is open free to the public on Wednesday, May 3rd and on Sunday, May 7th at 4:00 p.m. Come listen to some "oldies but goodies."

Charly B. Good:

Dining Off the Beaten Track

By Diana Greene

Charly B. Good
15 Center Street
Open 12:00 – 10:00 p.m.
864-9704

Charly B. Good's has probably caught your eye many times but you have never stopped in to check it out. Am I right? If I am, I suggest that this quaint mystery go uninvestigated no longer. Charly's is a reasonably priced soup, salad, and sandwich joint that has more class than Burlington has rain.

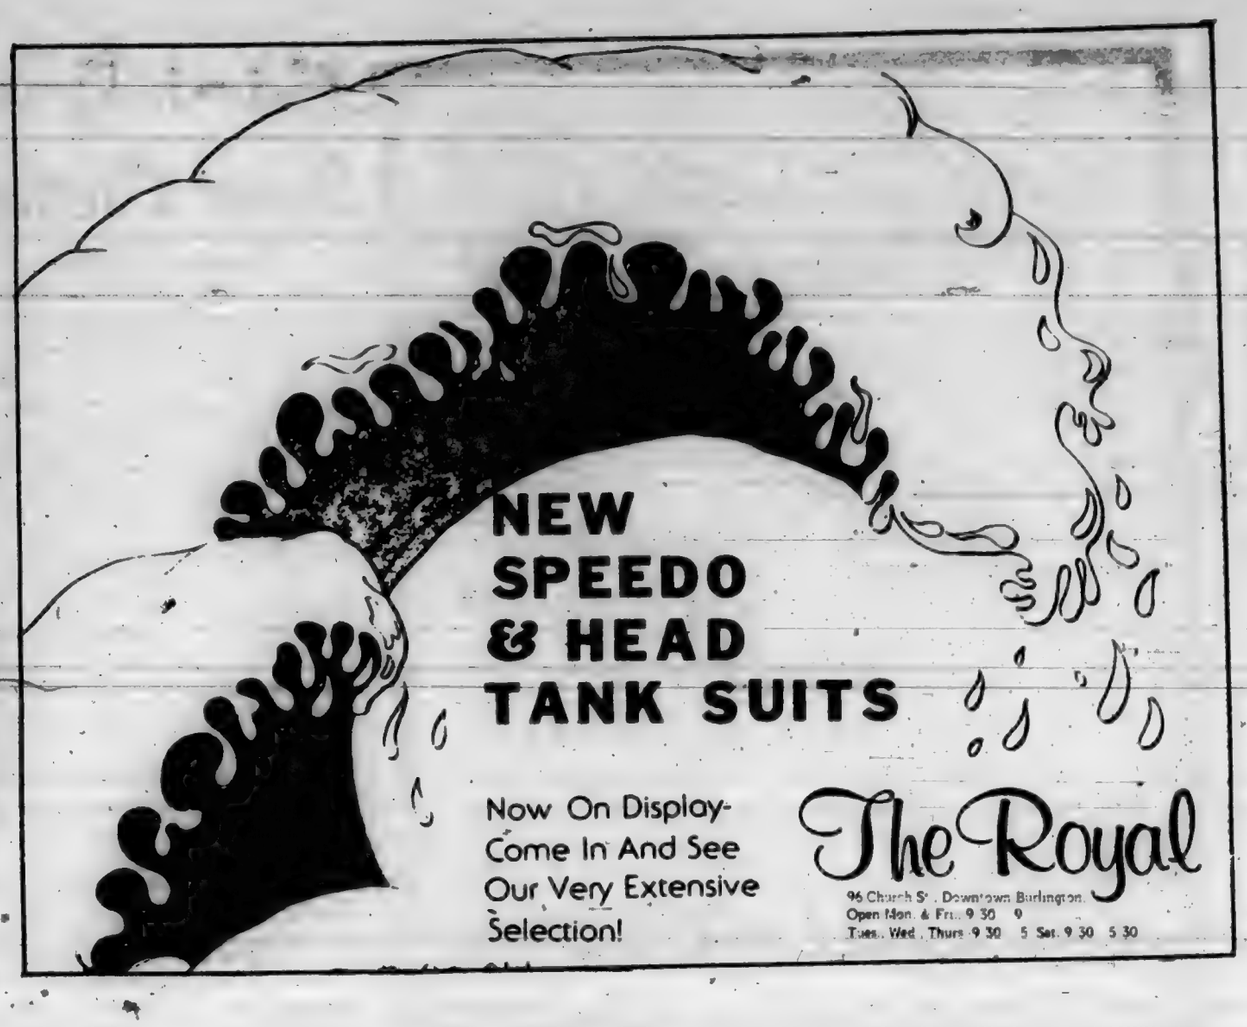
The menu is small, but in order to keep the quality high and the food fresh this is a necessity (plus it makes it easier to decide as compared to those ridiculously lengthy menus that take an hour to read and three to decide!) Everyday there is a new menu written on a blackboard adding to the personal touch that pervades Charly's. All food is homemade from the salad dressings right down to the desserts.

Entering Charly's, the mood is relaxed and the aura melodious. Although the waiter is extremely busy, he was sincerely courteous (not merely tip hunting), which began and ended the meal fittingly. The dinner began with a large glass of wine served in a beautiful crystal glass that sparkled in the flickering flames of the burgundy candle. The chef's salad was proudly recommended and rightly so. The salad was enormous, filled with tasty treats like olives, eggs, mushrooms, bib and iceburg lettuce, and various meats. Though I myself am not an avid fan of meat, I have to say it was the highlight of the salad. My dinner colleague, an acclaimed expert on the subject of fine foods, ordered, the special: a grilled cheese, tomato, and mushroom sandwich on pumpernickel bread. This was served on a futuristic looking glass plate and garnished with pickles, olives, and a pile of potato chips. The sandwich was divine; the kind that melts in your mouth. After regaling ourselves on this delicious dinner, there was absolutely no room for dessert, unfortunately, but coffee was called for. The coffee was fresh, hot, and aromatic the perfect ending to a delightful meal.

It was impossible to decide which was more tasteful – the food or the interior decor. Charly's reeks of charm from the moment you walk through the gate leading to an art-decoish looking cafe into the eclectic restaurant, all the way through to the antiquated bathrooms. No matter where I looked there was something eye-catching, whether it was the crafty macrame hung on the walls or the sugar packets that had a Poindexter looking professor asking "Who was Little Lulu's boyfriend?" (Answer: Tubby). The ornamentation of Charly's was highly creative and limitless. Aside from these wonderful odds and ends, Charly's comfortable atmosphere can be attributed to the wooden floors and furniture (the chairs are on wheels!) thriving plants, and good tunes.

Attached to Charly's is the B. Bad Lounge, a relatively new bar that used to be the hair saloon, Your So Vain. The bar, too, is stylish decorated with mirrors, tiffany lamps, and lace, a cozy place. After talking with a copious young man, who feels a personal affection for the bar, I learned a lot. Apparently B. Bad's has earned the inaccurate reputation of being a gay bar. The B. Bad Lounge is a congenial bar that is not gay, not rowdy and not collegiate, a pleasant change. As my new-found friend told me: "Everyone should feel free to come here," adding that "the pool table is wonderful."

Both Charly B. Good and B. Bad Lounge are charming, convenient, and a lot of fun besides attracting the avant-garde people of Burlington. I highly recommend both just for a change of pace if nothing else. Charly's is a particularly good place to keep in mind for the summer days ahead because of its outdoor cafe. Charly B. Good is a restaurant that lives up to its name – it is good, and B. Bad Lounge does too, it is bad... real bad.



The one and only Charley B. Good

The B. Bad Lounge

Photos by Rob Swanson

IT'S LIVE EVERY NITE!

PLUM CRAZY
Thurs.- Thurs. 27-Sat. 29

FATE
Mon. May 1-Sun. 7

Neutral Grounds Inc.
125 PEARL

Moving in the Best Circles

By Lewis Heyman

Friday night, I imagined myself participating in a grand ball at a medieval castle, dancing to the music of a forty-piece orchestra. Actually I was in the Southwick ballroom dancing with the UVM folk dance club. Even though we wore t-shirts, jeans, or long cotton skirts and danced to recorded music, I could easily envision us in another time and place.

When the evening began, I realized that I didn't understand the meaning of folk dancing. When I quered other dancers, I discovered that many of them encountered difficulty defining folk dancing. Clearly, experiencing the art is the key to understanding it.

Certainly dissimilar to the familiar do-se-do of square dancing, international folk dancing involves many different steps and movements characteristic of varied cultures. The styles range from the orderly and patterned English country dances, to a much more active and spirited Israeli style, to the subtle and challenging Serbo-Croation techniques.

Ben Bergstein, the group's instructor, describes folk dancing as traditional dances of the people. Bergstein offers a brief description of each dance and often describes its native setting. He stresses the importance of viewing these dances as social ones and recognizing that in their own indigenous atmosphere they compare to American free form. Similar to American dances, folk dance allows individual and personal interpretation. During the evening Bergstein often demonstrated the beauty and grace of improvised dance, although one learns rather quickly the fruitlessness of attempting to imitate him.

Opportunities for imitation abound, however, since the first two hours of each Friday night session are devoted to instruction. For many, beginners like myself, the dances were foreign and challenging. Although I was embarrassed and intimidated at first, about making mistakes, I gained confidence after realizing that others faced the same difficulties. After feeling as if I had mastered a few basic steps, proud of my accomplishment, I wisely protected my reputation by observing for the rest of the evening. For at ten o'clock the accomplished dancers requested their favorites and displayed their skill and enthusiasm. I knew I was outclassed.

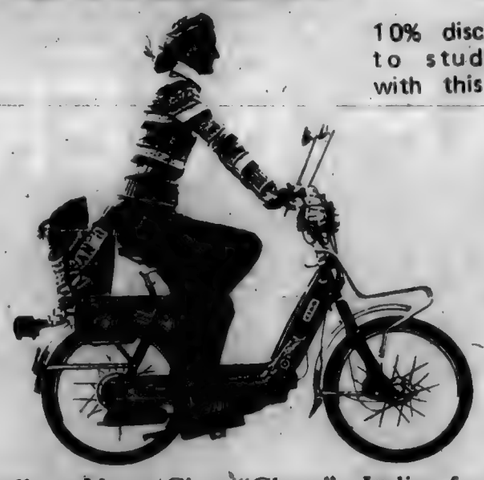
In addition to their participation on regular Friday nights, many of the dancers are members of the folk dance club's performing group, Kaval, which rehearses every Sunday evening. Their schedule this spring includes a performance at Red Square Affair and a workshop afterwards. The performances and the Friday night dances are not the only activities of the club. The club also sponsors professional demonstrations and workshops. And if adequate funds are appropriated by the Student Association, the club plans to host four workshops, including workshops from Russia, the Mideast, French Canada, and the British Isles.

The folk dance club exhibits a very warm and welcoming personality and from my positive experience I would encourage everyone to step out and try it. For, as they say, "folk dancers move in all the best circles."

Bosch Castrol

Parts For Most Foreign Cars

Super Sprint Exhaust
(With Lifetime Warrenty)



Lucas NGK

IMPORTED CAR PARTS OF VERMONT
75 North St. Burlington, Vt. 864-0238

The 160 mpg shiftless wonder.

10% discount to students with this ad.

Say hello to Vespa Ciao ("Chow"—Italian for "hi"). About as easy to ride as a bicycle, but a lot less work. Up to 160 miles of fun per gallon, hardly any maintenance. Takes you anywhere in town with no parking problems when you get there. Take a Ciao for a ride.

DOES NOT REQUIRE MOTORCYCLE LICENSE OR HELMET

LAKE CHAMPLAIN MOTORS
Shelburne Rd So Burlington Vt
658-2277

give your life a little vespa

Mileage quoted is based on CUNA Standards. Yours may vary.

1977 Vespa of America

CINEMA

Julia

By Bill Caple

Julia is a classic story of two people who share love. And unlike most love stories, "I love you, Julia" is spoken by a woman, not a man. The love that Lillian (Jane Fonda) expresses for Julia (Vanessa Redgrave) stems from a long friendship. The freshness of a film portraying the friendship and adventures of the two women succeeds as a stirring relief from the male "buddy" escapades of many recent films.

Lillian Hellman's autobiographical memoir "Pentimento" is the basis for the story. Jane Fonda portrays the original Lillian as an aspiring playwright while Redgrave portrays Julia, Lillian's childhood companion who becomes a member of the anti-Facist underground. No two actresses could be more appropriate to play these roles as both are outstanding performers who have played controversial roles in left-wing politics.

Throughout the picture, reality fuses with dreams in Lillian's continual flashbacks. Her childhood memories of living with Julia explain the base of their strong ties and the personality of each woman unfolds. Other scenes Lillian recalls show her struggling with her first play under the guidance of Dashiell Hammett. Played by Jason Robards, Hammett is Lillian's lover for thirty years.

Julia shows the maturing of one person under the influence of others. Hammett gives Lillian professional advice with her writing and stands as the rock she can cling to in times of need. Julia, the highborn idealist, gives up her career as a psychiatrist to fight fascism, becomes the final maturing influence in Lillian's life. While in Europe, Lillian receives word from Julia asking her to smuggle money into Berlin to help the anit-Fascist cause. An unexpected but successful bit of espionage, this mission gives depth to the plot.

The film has its faults, some of which are undoubtedly due to the Hellman original. Julia's visibility to the audience, her actual screen time, falls a bit short of what it could be. Much of the movie moves without seeing Vanessa Redgrave, the star, for long periods of time. Other roles, such as those of Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell, who play Lillian's rather silly friends, see much screen time when the film could be just as well without them.

---

Despite its few flaws Julia is an exceptionally moving film which draws many of the viewer's emotions — sadness, happiness, anxiety, anger, and sorrow. The climax of the movie is Lillian's last visit with Julia after she has smuggled the money into Germany. They meet in a smoky restaurant in Berlin where Fonda and Redgrave have a heartbreaking dialogue. Neither one can express their full feelings due to the untrusting air of Nazi Germany in 1937. Julia remains strong and smiling while Lillian holds back angry tears as their friendship is sacrificed because of the Nazis.

---

Julia has to be one of the most moving and stimulating movies of the war. The troubled world during the time of the Nazis becomes much more vivid during this film than in most war movies. Without a doubt Julia is a must.

> "The freshness of a film portraying the friendship and adventures of the two women succeeds as a stirring relief from the male 'buddy' escapades of many recent films."

RECENT CUTS

... Too Fast?

By Tom Nuccio

Al DiMeola, *Casino

A Gibson Les Paul Guitar and a man possessing the fastest fingers on earth, highlight a truly outstanding new Columbia album. Casino, Al DiMeola's third solo outing, explores new directions in Latin fusion and displays a technical wizardry achieved by no other contemporary guitarist.

DiMeola bears impressive credentials: Record World proclaimed him Best New Artist of 1977, and Guitar Player, after voting him best guitarist, gave his second Columbia album, Elegant Gypsy, the top rank in their annual poll. At 23, DiMeola has already played with the likes of Chick Corea (Return to Forever) and Larry Coryell. However, for the past year and a half, he has been playing with his own group (Mingo Lewis – percussion, Barry Miles – keyboards, Anthony Jackson – bass & Steve Gadd – drums).

DiMeola calls Casino "an extension of Elegant Gypsy with more Latin music." "Chasin' the Voodoo" exemplified this Latin fusion approach. The tune begins with a conga flight by Mingo Lewis which soon leads to DiMeola's melody. DiMeola handles amazingly fast riffs with relative ease as he solos. This song has a rich texture – with DiMeola's Les Paul soaring above shadings of marimba, electric piano and percussion.

Each of DiMeola'a albums features an acoustic medley. On side two of Casino on the cut "Fantasia Suite For Two Guitars," he plays acoustic guitar, mandolin, castanets and supplies sound effects such as hand claps, foot stomps, muted congas and bongas. His technical genius is shown more vividly in this four part suite as he plays classical guitars and mandolin at extraordinarily high speeds. DiMeola compliments this music perfectly, blending rhythms behind overdubbed leads.

Words fall slightly short of describing Al DiMeola effectively. His music must be experienced to be fully appreciated. Thus, Casino, like his previous two albums, is a masterful collection of fine Latin compositions and an exhibition of an extremely talented guitarist.

Carly Mellows Out

By Russell Flannery

Carly Simon, *Boys on the Streets

The music of the "folksier artists of the early seventies has taken a turn for the worse:"

–James Taylor, Paul Simon, and Art Garfunkel recently united to musically proclaim "What a Wonderful World It Could Be." Art, God bless him, trapsed around the country all winter long spreading the good word.

–Joni Mitchell hopefully has learned that endurance doesn't necessarily mean anything when applied to records, as her last album was as exciting as death by torture.

–If the title of America's next album begins with the letter "H", and contains lyrics such as "I couldn't fake my love at the high school dance, and my eyes begged for just a chance," they should immediately be deported.

Carly Simon was never a political activist, but in 1971 and 1972, she was a pleasant alternative to those of the era. Admittedly, she's older and more mellow now, and sings of "mak(ing) love for old times sake" as opposed to lurking in "anticipation." Yet, Boys in the Streets, her seventh album, proves that Simon's music is still a pleasant alternative to the music of the day.

Boys in the Street is a pleasing album. The performance of the band is tight, and the lyrics reflect the contentment in Carly Simon's later life. For example, in a nearly disco song featuring the guitarists of The Average White Band, Simon uses a nursery rhyme, a story about getting some guy into bed: "Rock a bye baby on the tree top, When the wind blows, the cradle will rock."

It's not surprising that she lyrically resorts to a fairy tale. After nearly five years of marriage, your memory of dragging a stranger into bed wouldn't be rather vivid, either. Simon is now incapable of writing songs in the vein of "That's the way I've always heard it should be." It's happened.

While an outright statement of "she's gotten older but she's better" is possibly too strong an endorsement, Boys of the Streets is worth looking into, even if it's just for old times sake.

Records Compliments of Bailey's Music Rooms

THE VANTAGE PRES$
AND
INSTA-PRINT
COMPLETE
OFFSET PRINTING
BOOKLETS A SPECIALITY
115 North St.
Burlington
863-4998 or 862-2125

END of the SEMESTER BASH!!

Friday May 5
Happy Hour Prices all Night
Opening 2:00PM

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30
Frozen Daiquiri's

Ladies Nite
Thursday 9-12

what ale's you
152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

CHEESE
SPECIALS
Brie 2.50/lb.
Danish Swiss or Austrian Swiss 1.99/lb.
Wisconsin Cheddar 1.59/lb.
Dana White 1.89/lb.

Plus many other cheeses, cheesecake "seconds" &
homemade quiche

CHEESE
OUTLET
398 Pine St.
Mon.-Thurs. 9-5 Fri. 'til 5:30
Now Saturday 9:30-3:00

BOOKSTACKS
open weeknights

Pine St.
between
Main & College
Burlington
862-8513

Papa Dominics

Pizzas, Hot Oven Grinders,
Homemade Lasagna and More.

1160 Williston Rd.

863-2556

Papa Dominics

$1 OFF

on any large pizza

Featuring thick or thin crust

one coupon per pizza

Expires 5-11-78

Visit the TENNIS
SPECIALTY
SHOP

- One Day Stringing
- Instant Repairs

TENNIS RACKETS by:

Davis, Bancroft, Head, Wilson, Donnay, Yamaha, Dunlop, Prince.

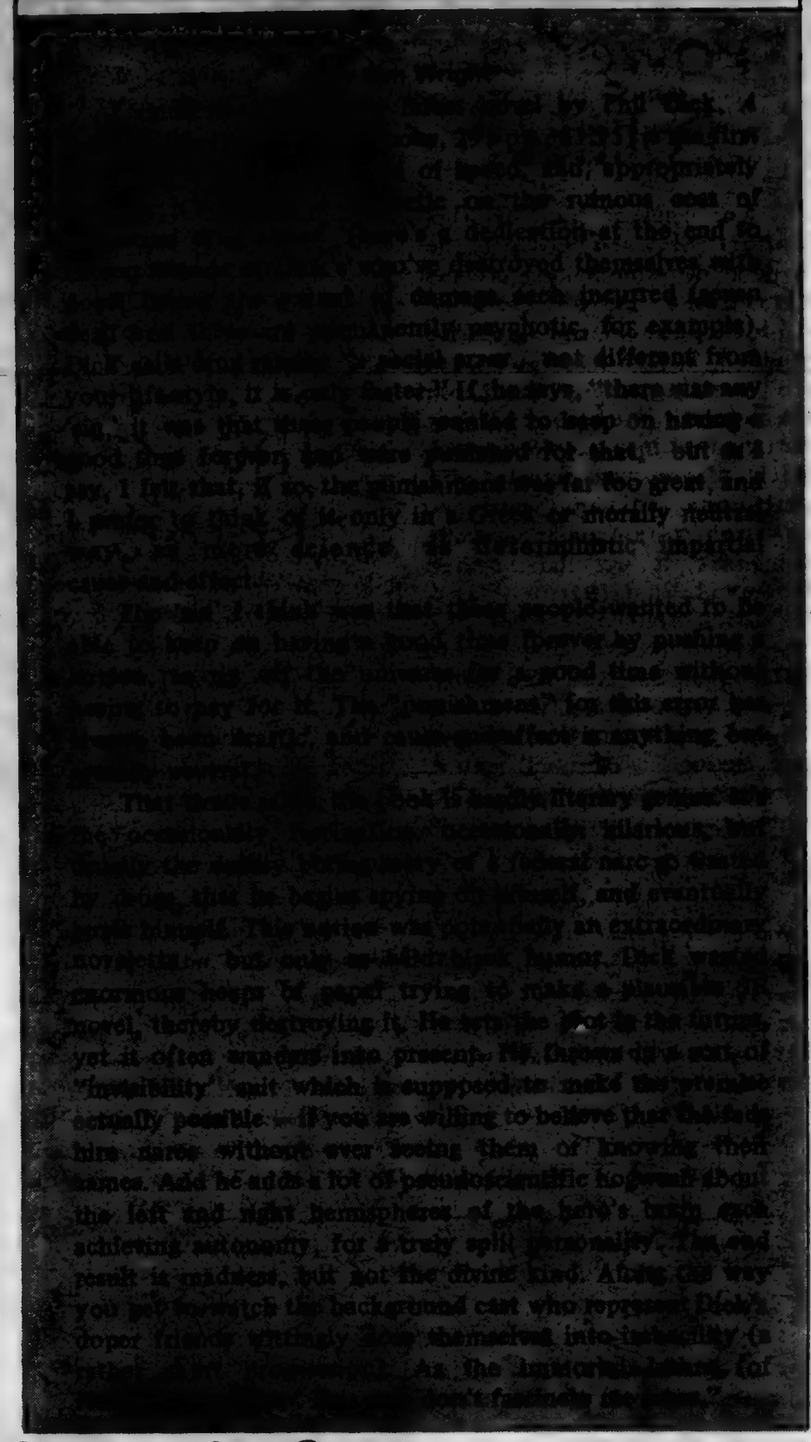
TENNIS CLOTHING by:

Bogner, Wilson, Profile, Duofold, Head, White Stag, The Line, Billie Jean King, Jelenk, Robert Bruce, Court Casuals, Adidas.

SKI SALE

UP TO 50% OFF

SKI EQUIPMENT
SKIWEAR
RENTAL EQUIPMENT



ALPINE SHOP

WILLISTON RD., SO. BURLINGTON

OPEN DAILY 9 AM-9 PM

COR. OF CHERRY & SO. WINOOSKI
DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

Playing the Circuit

Continued From Page 37

the magazines — Hit Parade, Rolling Stone, and it looks like a glorious life. And it is if you do your homework. Like any other job, if you're going to open up a company, you start someplace and you work hard every day. You don't stay out every night and get popped, and enjoy all the finer things that the stars in the magazines are doing."

THE CIRCUIT

Words of joy for an idealist teenage musician; words of pain for the latter twenties failure. The circuit is a series of bars or clubs in which a particular agent is guaranteed primary negotiating or 'booking' status. Accordingly, if a band is represented by a particular agent, it gains exposure at the clubs or bars on a particular agent's 'circuit.'

Club performances are not necessarily pleasant, Conti said. "This guy was in a club – he was gay. He was dancing all night and having a good time, (when) somebody wanted to start a fight with the guy – the gay guy. They start fighting it out. I saw the guy pull out a hunting knife.. I grabbed his arm and tried to twist the knife out of him, not realizing he still had his other hand. All he did was put his hand behind my back and grab the knife. Then he turned around and came at me. Don't ask me what happened then – I just remember seeing crowds of people jumping on the guy..."

"Those are the types of clubs you play when you don't know where you're going, or just coming into an area," said DiMinno. "You're new. You know you want to be in the music world, but you really don't know how to do anything. You get in touch with an agent, and that's how some agents try to put the screws to you. When you start working with an agent, he more or less maneuvers you around his needs. Once you can stand on your own feet, it's pretty much a different story. Until that time, you're definitely a pawn."

DISSOLVE THE BAND

Plum Crazy member Mathews said, "The road took its toll on this band. When I say road, I mean agencies, club owners, eighteen days in a row of traveling, singing – can't even talk, seeing double, losing weight. That's the road, but it's to be expected."

PERSEVERE

Baby Blue is now planning to record in New Jersey. "It's like being dedicated to something," said DiMinno. "I guess you can associate it with going to law school or med school because it's something that involves that much of your time. You can't have any outside interests at all. If you devote more time to it, you're taking away from what you should be doing."

In terms of rewards, "it definitely hasn't weighed out yet," said Conti. "We're still on the losing end, there's still a lot you have to go through. A lot of people have the attitude that you're rich right away and that you've got the life, not realizing what you went through.."

Random Notes

Power & Politics

An unusual and exciting opportunity to observe the Federal decision-making process firsthand is offered to undergraduate and graduate students by the Federal Forum in Washington, D.C. Three two-week sessions bring participants into active contact with those who create and influence national policy, through question-and-answer seminars, visits to various Federal institutions, and discussion groups.

Ample time is allowed for each student to individually explore Washington's framework of power and politics. Special discussion groups provide participants with the opportunity to discuss in detail the issues raised in seminars. Undergraduates and educators from throughout the country form a unique student body resulting in dynamic personal interaction.

Three semester hours of undergraduate or graduate credit are offered by the University of Virginia's School of Continuing Education for satisfactory completion of course requirements.

Class dates for the 1978 Federal Forum are: Class I, June 18 – July 1; Class II, July 2 – 15; and Class III, July 16 – 29. Tuition for these two weeks (including accommodations in a leading Washington area hotel) is $400, plus a $90 fee should the option for course credit be taken.

Open Auditions

Last summer at Bolton Valley, in the atrium of the Mall and at the Essex Playhouse M&M Players gave us The Fantastiks, and You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown. This year M&M will return for a run of three weeks, in repertory, with I Do, I Do and A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum.

The latter has many parts for men and women, old and young. Auditions for actors, actresses, and musicians will be held Tuesday, April 25, and Thursday, April 27, at the Essex Junction High School at 7:30 p.m. Production dates are July 12–30.

Chinese Health

The U.S. China People's Friendship Association will show two films about medicine in the People's Republic of China. The first, Away with all Pests, by Dr. Joshua Horn offers many insights into life in China. Dr. Horn worked in China from 1954-1969 as a surgeon and organizing medical recourses. The second, Medicine, by Felix Greene is a general introduction to the revolutionary health system in China which offers inexpensive, complete health care to the millions of Chinese workers and peasants.

The films, followed by a general discussion about health care in China will be shown on May 3 at the Church St. Center and May 4 at E-210 Given Building, UVM. Both will start at 7:30 p.m. There will be a $1.00 donation to benefit the scholarship program.

"The Last Resort"

"The Last Resort," a film about nuclear power and the Seabrook occupation will be shown at 7:00 p.m. Friday night in Billings North Lounge. The film is part of a benefit for the Clamshell Alliance, the principle organizers behind the past and upcoming Seabrook occupations. Following the film, local musicians Chris Randall, Sue Spies, Eric Kilburn, Bunky and others will perform. Refreshments and additional information on nuclear power will be available. Donation for the event is one dollar.

Gay Logo Contest

The Gay Student Union is offering twenty-five dollars for design of a logo. The words "Gay Student Union" must appear in the design and the design must be in black and white. All entries must be submitted by May 5 at the information desk in Billings Center and names and phone numbers should be included. All entries will become the property of the Gay Student Union. Winners will be announced May 8.

"Images"

On Monday, May 1st, "Images," a women's drawing collective will present an instructive show (with refreshments) at the Vermont Women's Health Center from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

Members of "Images" will speak about their collective and how to start a similar one.

Their work will be on display at the Vermont Women's Health Center throughout the month of May. The public is welcome. Free admission.

Engineers

The Federal Government has openings for entrance level Engineers in the following fields: Electrical, Electronic, Mechanical, Nuclear, Civil (temporary only) and Naval Architects.

The starting salaries are $12,947 and $13,980 and the requirements are a B.S. degree from an accredited engineering school.

All vacancies in New England are filled through the Boston Area Office, U.S. Civil Service Commission, 3 Center Plaza, Boston, Massachusetts 02108 under Announcement 424. In addition, there are three agencies authorized to hire directly in the following fields: Electronics Engineers (Computer Systems) – Naval Underwater Systems Center; Electrical, Mechanical, Nuclear and Naval Architects – Portsmouth Naval Shipyard and Civil Engineers – Federal Highway Administration. Persons interested in these particular positions should contact the agencies directly at the following addresses:

Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, Attn: 170:132, Portsmouth, NH 03801.

Naval Underwater Systems Center, Personnel Department (Code 8823), Building 65, Newport, RI 02840.

Federal Highway Administration, Special Examining Unit, 400 7th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20590, Attn: Room 4326 HPT-21.

Horse Trials

Spring is here, and the UVM Horse Club is sponsoring its annual Spring Horse Trials, Sunday, April 30 at the Spear Street Farm. The public is invited. Competition will be in 3 phases, dressage beginning at 8 a.m., X-country jumping at 10 a.m., stadium jumping early afternoon. Contact ex 4246, Horse Sense Suite, L/L for more information.

Summer on Tolstoy

A close reading of Tolstoy's Anna Karenina and three short representative works: Childhood, The Cossacks, and "Death of Ivan Ilich." The main emphasis will be on a thorough study of Anna Karenina, with some reference to the recent serialization of the novel on Educational television. Lectures and discussion will focus on Tolstoy's art, philosophy, and aesthetics and on the literary trends and movements of 19th century Russia and Western Europe.

The course will be conducted entirely in English. 201 Torrey Hall – July 3–July 21 – 9:30-12:15.

$5 Credit

If you will soon be leaving the Burlington area and wish to obtain a $5 refund from New England Telephone, bring your phone set to Billings Center, May 8th from 9:00 – 4:00. A representative from the phone company will be there at this time to take your phone and process your credit. Avoid the hassle of bringing your phone to the phone company and come drop it off at Billings May 8th.

Madrigals

The UVM Madrigal Singers will sing a program of English Madrigals and Balletts of the 16th and 17th centuries at the Music Building Recital Hall on Wednesday, May 3rd at 8:00 p.m.

Between two groups of selections by Thomas Morley, John Hilton, John Wilbye, Thomas Weelkes and Purcell Mansfield, Susan Lance will sing a group of Lute Songs accompanied by Susan Sager on the Harpsichord.

The program is free and all are welcome.

Grads!

The Commencement ceremonies planned for Friday, May 19 and Saturday, May 20, include changes and additions intended to make the year's most important weekend more convenient and pleasant for the graduating students, their families and friends.

Doctors and masters degrees will be awarded at the Commencement ceremony of the college or school in which the recipient studied, rather than in a separate Graduate College ceremony as in the past. Graduate students who are unsure which academic division will award their degrees should contact the Graduate College, ext. 3160.

The decision to confer graduate degrees within the College or School which accepted the student will enable the University to reduce the number of Commencement ceremonies, and this year the weekend's events will be confined to two days, rather than the three-day Commencement of past years.

This year, each college and school will also honor its graduating students at a breakfast, brunch, luncheon or reception to which family and friends are also invited.

This has been the practice in past years at some of the University's academic divisions, the home economics event, for example, and has been so well-received that all divisions have adopted the practice. Each division has sent invitations to both the graduating students and to their parents. In each case, graduating students will be guests of their division. In some divisions, especially where large numbers of people are involved, guests of the graduating students will be charged a nominal fee to defray costs of the event.

The Commencement luncheons and similar events have been planned as an opportunity for graduating students to introduce their families and friends to the faculty and staff members with whom the students have associated during their years at UVM.

Honorary degree recipients and retiring faculty will be honored at a Friday reception to which all those attending Commencement are invited. President and Mrs. Lattie F. Coor, and the UVM Family Associates will host the reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, May 19 at the Fleming Museum.

A schedule of events with additional Commencement information, such as the price of caps, gowns, and hoods, has been mailed to every UVM student at his or her local address and to parents at their home addresses. Additional copies of the schedule, and other information, may be obtained from Deans' and Directors' offices or from the Public Relations Office, 109 So. Prospect St., ext. 2005.

Crafts Fair

Spring Crafts Fair in the South Burlington High School gym on Saturday April 29 from 10 until 4. More than 30 Vermont craftspeople will be selling homemade products such as jewelry, quilts, candles, and much more!

Admission is free, and there will be refreshments available.

Green Up Day

Green Up Day is Saturday, April 29. This day is set aside annually to help people become more aware about putting their trash in the proper place and picking up litter that the less thoughtful have left behind. Do your part on Saturday and help clean up Vermont!

Female Psychology

"The Impact of Feminism on Female Psychology;" workshops, concessions, recreation and an art gallery continuing throughout the afternoon; the continuous showing of three films The Stepford Wives, A Woman Under the Influence, and Assault on the Eiffel Tower; and an evening concert by west-coast songwriter and pianist, Margie Adam.

Workshops will be held throughout the day on Saturday, focusing on women in all aspects of their daily lives, becoming, earning, learning, asserting, and well-being. Margie Adam will lead a large discussion group entitled "Women and Culture," and Rita Mae Brown will lead a similar group on the topic of "Success: The Double-Edged Sword." The three films will be shown throughout the day, and display books, recreation, and the art gallery will continue.

Women, women, women will be located on the campus of the University of Vermont. A free day-care service is available for children 6 months to 9 years, but because of limited space, pre-registration is necessary. Tickets are $25 for both days or $15 per day in advance, or $15 per day at the door. Reduced price tickets will be available as of May 1, if you cannot afford the full price. Please address your requests to The Creamery. First come, first serve.

For tickets and further information please contact The Creamery Educational Foundation, Box 367, Shelburne, Vt. 05482. 802-985-3316.

This is an educational service sponsored by the non-profit Creamery Educational Foundation.

Classifieds Free

Jobs

Position: Counselor Aide for handicapped students, 3 positions (women). Job involves providing supportive services to handicapped students who are attending summer school — pushing wheelchairs, helping with meals, reading for the blind, laundry, personal care, library work, etc. Also some evenings providing aid with bedtime personal care. Work study aides work closely with the counselor to co-ordinate services. Hours flexible.

Male and female models needed. Call Jill at 862-7672 for more information.

Drawing from a live model every Thursday at Williams Hall. Call Jill at 862-7672 for more information.

Rooms & Roomates

For rent — 3 bedroom apt. 72 Monroe St. $250/mo, not a sublet. Washer, and dryer, large basement, one space available May 1 and the whole apt. available June 1. Call 862-3627.

Three bedrooms in four bedroom house for rent, one bedroom for summer and next year; two bedrooms for summer sublet (beginning June 1st but negotiable) on Pine Street convenient to UVM and DT... nice house, call Peter or Leslie at 862-6530 or Staige at 658-2699 (evenings at 656-2060).

Female roommate wanted to share a new apartment. Central location, $92/month includes heat and electricity. Call 862-5019 after 5.

Summer sublet. Two bedroom apartment, located right between campus & downtown, on corner of College & Willard. $220/month. Call Ken or Bruce 656-2697.

Spacious 4 room apartment available June 1 (maybe earlier) to August 31. 2 large bedrooms, living room & kitchen completely furnished. Ideal location 250 S. Union. Pets & parking. Contact Mary or Margaret 656-3876.

3 rooms & kitchen & bath & porch (great view), fully furnished, available June — August, 1 block from campus (corner of Williams & Pearl St.) 2 or 3 people, $190/month, call 862-1586, Lisa.

Female roommate wanted to share new two bedroom apartment with 2 other females. Close to campus and downtown $95 a month each including utilities. Call Paula 862-2803 or Krista 656-4040.

2 bedroom apartment to sublet through August 31. Partly furnished, wall to wall carpeting, private porch, parking available. Excellent condition and good location on upper Pearl St. Call 862-1334.

Apartment available end of May, 2 minutes from campus, 5 minutes from downtown, furnished, living room/kitchen, one bedroom, bath, porch and parking. Debbie, 862-5393.

Apartment semi-furnished, available June — August, 2 bedrooms close to campus, excellent condition, small porch, parking lot, $220/month. 863-3274.

Roommate wanted for the summer (May 15 — Sept. 1) near lake. 863-3784 (ask for Lisa or leave name & number) $82.50 a month and/or negotiable.

Roommate needed to share 2 bedroom apt. 49 N. Prospect St. $80/month, June 1 — August 20. Call 863-6687. Ask for Dave.

Wanted — house in Burlington area with 3-4 bedrooms for 3-4 UVM females. Call Indie Howell, 863-5670.

Corner of N. Willard & Pearl, 5 min. to Waterman, 7 to Church St. 1 room apt, sunny, large, clean, newly painted kitchenette, full size frige, private phone, share bath, $100/month plus phone mid-May — early June to early September. Woman preferred, no pets. Elizabeth, 862-6588.

1 bedroom — summer sublet, fall option. Close to campus. Spacious, fully furnished. $250 incl. heat and water, 862-4575.

Apt. to sublet May 20 — August 31, 3 bedrooms, furnished, modern $325/month includes utilities, Bayview St., 10 min walk to campus, call Deb at 3805 or Nancy at 4361.

Apartment to rent for 1978 school year. 2 large bedrooms for 3-4 people. Completely furnished. So. Union St. $300/month. Call Lauri or Mary Pat at 656-2282.

Two roommates needed for July and August. North Ave, 5 bedroom house, acre of land, excellent view of lake, garden, swimming pool Call Pam or Tere 863-5020.

Apartment to sublet for summer June 1 — August 31. So. Union St. close to campus, close to downtown. Furnished, price negotiable. Call Steve V or Walt at 656-2613.

Apartment to sublet, the "white house" on 231 So. Prospect Street. Two large bedrooms upstairs, big living room, open dining room and kitchen downstairs. Prime location, 2 minutes from campus and 10 minutes from downtown. Price negotiable. Call Melanie at 656-3872 or Sue at 656-4248.

Gates Hall apartment to sublet, May 15 — Aug. 31, 3 bedrooms, kitchen, living room, fully furnished, located on upper Main St. 2 min. walk from campus. Rent negotiable. 864-6352.

Room to sublet for summer. May 13 — Sept. 1 in spacious two bedroom apt. for either 1 or 2 people. Convenient location, beautiful place. 33 So. Willard St, 862-7430.

Sublet apt May 15 — Sept. 1, 3 bedrooms, 90 North Winooski Ave, price negotiable, Call Lewis 656-3086, Paul 656-2195, Judy, Mary, Nancy 864-7362.

Wanted — male roommate to share five room apt. Rent for summer, available May 9. Own bedroom, centrally located, prefer quiet non-smoker. Call 862-7481 home, 862-6491 office. Ask for Alec.

Wanted — apt. for summer and next school year. Betw. UVM and DT. 2-3 bedroom. Call Sue, Michelle or Kath at 656-2695. Leave message.

Needed a place to live for the 78-79 academic year. Would like to share house or apartment near UVM with one or two other people. Call Karen 656-2950.

2 bedrooms please furnished or unfurnished within walking distance of campus, needed June 1 for summer and next year. Please call Wendy 863-6652 or Janet 656-2288.

The Perfect sublet!
Two bedrooms.
Pete 656-2198.

Living in Boston this summer? I'd like to get in touch with people who need another roommate. If interested, please call Carol M. at 656-4260. Please leave message.

Apartment available end of May 2 minutes from campus, 5 minutes from Downtown. One bedroom, livingroom, kitchen. Call Debbie, 862-5393 after 7:30.

Apt. to sublet from May 12 to Sept. 3. 3 bedrooms, furnished, at 151 Loomis St. $300. Contact Betsy or Janice at 656-4259 or Maryanne at 862-9500. No pets.

5 desperate men looking for a good time. Call 3438. Ask for Craig, Terry, Paul, Allen or Jim.

4 bedroom apt. available for summer (May 15 or June 1 — Sept. 1) 1½ baths, large kitchen and living room, off-street parking, fully furnished, heated. $290/mo. Call 863-4744 afternoons and evenings.

Apt. to sublet — furnished 4 bedroom apt. with spacious living room and kitchen; also has a porch & 2nd floor apt. Located on North Willard St. 15 min. from campus. If interested, call 656-9251, Al or Greg. Price negotiable.

Spending summer in Burlington? Roommate needed, share apartment on Brooks Avenue one block away from campus. $80 monthly. Call x2667, Ruth or Jeanie.

Roommate wanted $100 month or two roommates $66 a month. Includes utilities. Call Randy at 863-6505.

1 or 2 roommates needed to share a large 2-bedroom apt. on No. Union June — August. Own bathroom, parking. Close to campus & downtown. Call Sue 862-5984.

Conscientious UVM graduate available for house-sitting this summer on a weekly or monthly basis. Contact Elizabeth at 656-4165 daytime.

Apartment to sublet May 28 — September 2. 3 bedrooms, wall to wall carpeting, $235.00 a month. 10 min. walk to main campus or downtown Burlington. Call 656-3447, ask for Judy or Lisa.

Wanted: a female to share a four room apartment. Only 7 minutes walk to campus. Available May 15th, non-smokers preferred. Call Linda, 862-3025.

Sublet anytime from May 15 to end of August. 6 bedroom house, 2 porches, kitchens, bathrooms, a large living room, separate dining room. Price negotiable. Call 864-9619. Ask for Andy or mention interest in house.

Summer sublet for 2 people (preferably female) 656-2612, Casey.

Roommates needed (2 or 4) in 5 bedroom furnished duplex. Five minute walk to campus (59 University Terrace) Rent negotiable. Call Matt at 862-7628.

Three bedroom apartment, June 1 — August 31. 316 S. Willard St. 10 min. walk to campus. Furnished, carpeted, kitchen, living, full bath, yard, garage for 3 cars. Pets possible. $325/month including water. Optional beer keg system available. 656-6425, Tony or Mike.

Wanted — two roommates to share new attractive apartment in Horizon Heights June 1 — Aug. 31. Great opportunity for the summer! Complete with pool, tennis court, and within walking distance to UVM campus. Call Bonnie at 863-6108.

Free FreeFree

Wheels

For sale — Yamaha XS-500 cc motorcycle. New last June, 4,500 miles. Double overhead cams, header, low bars and some carb work done. $1250 takes it. Call Mark 863-2634 late or 658-2461 from 5—6 p.m.

1976 Honda 550-4F. 12,000 miles (mostly highway). Fairing, saddlebags, quartz light, soni shocks. Mechanically perfect. Cosmetically immaculate. Call Alex 828-4675.

1973 Capri 2600 V-6 70,000 well cared for miles. New clutch, exhaust, and battery. Koni, talbot, and semperit snows. Very tight. Price negotiable. Call Alex, 878-4675.

1976 Kawasaki KZ-400 S2 with luggage rack, sissybar w/pad etc. Call Chris 863-9198.

70 Chevy Nova 70,000 miles, good running condition, some rust, $325.00. Call 864-7084, ask for Mark.

For sale — 1975 Pontiac Firebird, 29,000 miles, navy blue. Call Debbie, 862-7492.

For sale — 1974 TS 185 Suzuki, new in spring of '75. 3000 miles. Set up for dirt but can be used for street. Many extras. Price $350, call Pat after 5:00 p.m., 878-5035.

1972 Plymouth Fury 4 door, 8 cylinder, power steering, radio, heater, snow tires, only 63,000 miles. See at Williston Road Shell, phone 985-2670.

71 Super Beetle, $400.00 or trade for street/dirt bike. 655-0866.

For sale — 1972 Renault R-10. Runs great, call 863-4475.

1973 Ford Pinto, excellent running condition, has only 26,000 miles, books around $1300.00, will sell for $950.00. Call 864-9287 anytime.

12' x 50' Schult mobile home, 2 bedroom, porch, woodstove, part. furnished, 10' x 16' storage shed, good condition, 8 mi. to Burlington, 879-0008.

1973 Kawasaki 500 needs some work, 5000 original miles, 879-0008.

1969 BMW 2002 — sunroof, radials, new charging system, thermostat, runs, needs minor work. Asking $250 or b.o. 862-0133. Assorted Fiat 124 parts also.

Motorcycle — 1974 Ossa 250 Enduro, fast off road bike, low mileage. Must sell, $450 or best offer. Call Danno at 878-8881.

Car — 1965 Dodge Coronet, runs and is inspected. What more do you want? $150 or best offer. Call Danno at 878-8881.

1964 Austin-Healey Sprite, aqua blue paint, michelins, custom interior, many new parts. Also for sale "Bugeye" Sprite and MG midget parts. Wanted: Austin-Healey 3000 parts (or complete car). Call Rob Moore 656-2515.

1974 Yamaha 360 Enduro motorcycle, 7000 miles, on and off the road. Great on corners and climbing trees, call West 863-5829.

1970 VW Sq. back. The body is basically shot. Engine in good shape. Great car for parts. Very cheap price. Call West 863-5829.

For sale — 1967 Honda 50 motorbike. Needs work. Best offer. Paul, 656-4258.

Wanted

Wanted — audience to come see "Between the Roars" at Royall Tyler Theatre May 3 and 7 at 4 p.m. Free!

Wanted — backpack with compartments & a steel frame. If you have one to sell, please call Elin x4247.

Wanted — baby carriage or pram, in excellent condition for spring use. Call 878-5035 anytime.

Senior nursing students! I am looking for someone interested in selling their size 9 uniforms (preferably a pantsuit) Contact J. Guptil, 213 Davis, x2513.

People wanted to share a U-Haul with me down to New Jersey. I would like to leave after graduation but would consider leaving after classes end. Call Jon at 862-5336.

Ride needed to So. Carolina anytime after finals week. Willing to share driving and expenses. Lite luggage. Call Deb x2517. Leave name and number.

Seniors — have an electric typewriter? Want to sell it? Call Barb 656-2593 or 656-3011.

Do you need final papers typed? Call Sarah at 862-7534.

Here's your chance to "Go West!" I need riders to Portland, Oregon or any destination along the way. Departing from Burlington 5/13. Call Lori at 863-3195.

Wanted — woman carpenter for finishing work at shelter for battered women and children. For info. call 863-4815 or 864-7958 after 5 p.m.

Outdoor Equipment

Bata tennis sneakers boys size 4½, worn only 3 times. $12. Call Martha x3443 or 3444.

1 pr. size 8 Asolo Hiking boots, $60 new, used twice, asking $40. Also 1 pr. size 5½ SL-72 Adides running shoes, very good condition, $10. Call Nancy D. at 3089.

Almost new pair of Nike LV 1000 running shoes. Excellent condition, $25. Call 862-5871.

For sale — 185 cm Kastle skis with Look Nevada bindings and Munari boots (size 10½—11) Good condition, call 863-4475.

Bicycle for sale. St. Etienne 10 speed. Reynolds 531 frame. All excellent equipment. Used only a few times. $150 or best offer. Call Alex 878-4675.

Goosedown sleeping bag. Mummy goosedown jacket. Best offer. Paul, 656-4258.

Woodstove for sale, handmade 3/16" platesteel, very solid, durable modeled after Jotel 118, $175.00, 863-4475.

Fiat parts for sale, 1972 128A parts, engines, transmissions, body parts, lights, radiators, etc. Cheap, 863-4475.

Amplifier for sale, Realistic SA500, 45 watts RMS, 6 yrs. old $20.00, 863-4475.

Ski boots — 1977 Nordica GT's $120. Used only once. Men's size 9. Call Peter F. at 863-9862 between 5:30 — 6:30 and after 11 p.m.

AYH bicycle panniers for sale, $20. Call Lewis 656-3086.

For sale — Dorm loft, natural finish, easy movement assembled with bolts. See at 108 Wing, phone 864-5888 if interested. Asking $75, must see!

Go parachuting! Complete set of tickets for parachuting, including training, at Orange, Mass. $75 (at cost), price has since gone up. Evan 864-7130, leave message.

In search of a used mo-ped in good condition. Contact Elizabeth at 656-4165 daytime.

Editing and rewriting. Professional, reasonable. 862-4863.

Typing done, fast and accurate. Call Louise before 10 p.m. at 862-1407.

Need some typing done? Call Nancy for fast, accurate and neat work at 863-6505. Rush jobs accepted.

For sale — refrigerator 5' x 4' x 2½', $45. Call Ken, x2697.

For sale — a very sturdy loft, $35. Call Ken or Kirk, x2697.

For sale — walnut stained loft. Any reasonable offer accepted. Call Pam or Karen x3094.

For sale — authentic Maine lobster trap, excellent condition, $15 or best offer. Large oval rug about 8' x 10' border design with floral pattern, good condition, $10.00. Also FREE two fantail goldfish and one Algie eater to good home only. Call 862-2302 or if phone is disconnected, stop by 56 North Ave upstairs. Leave message if not home & we'll get back to you.

UVM Spring Horse Trials, Sunday April 30. Dressage at 8 a.m., x-country jumping at 10 a.m., stadium jumping early afternoon, sponsored by the UVM Horse Club. Public invited.

Lost & Found

Lost: 1 green North Face down coat April 11 in parking lot behind Gutterson Field House. If found please call Sue x4259.

Lost: Blue denim jeans jacket at Wright Dining Hall on Feb. 24 (Davis Brothers Dance) Contained room keys! Reward given if returned. Contact Janet Guptil, 213 Davis, x2513.

RESEARCH

Send only two dollars (to cover postage) for your copy of our latest mail-order catalog of over 7,000 research papers.

- Quality Unsurpassed
- Fast, Dependable Service
- Speeches, Reports, etc.

All Materials Sold For Research Assistance Only

AUTHORS' RESEARCH SERVICES INC
407 South Dearborn Street, Suite 600
Chicago, Illinois 60605
312-922-0300

The City Company
will present
A THOUSAND CLOWNS
by Herb Gardner
on May 5-7,
&
May 12-14
at 8PM in
Mann Auditorium
on
Trinity Campus
Tickets are $3
Advance-Bailey's
or at the door
the night of the show

BOOKSTACKS
open weeknights

Pine St.
between
Main & College
Burlington
862-8513

GALLERY 410
214 COLLEGE ST.
BURLINGTON, VT.
802-863-3695
4 DAYS- FRI, SAT., MON., TUE.
½ OFF
UP TO 2 AND MORE!
SALE!
+ART PRINTS, POSTERS & CARDS
+PICTURE FRAMES +PRECUT MATS
+MATBOARD +FRAMED PICTURES
+GEORGE KOVACS LAMPS +CLOCKS
+JAMES DAVID LIFESTYLE FURNITURE
+RATTAN FURNITURE +FIBRE RUGS
+SCULPTURE +WICKER BASKETS

Everlite® GREENHOUSES
the 52-week vacation.
Take time off from the busy world each day of the year in the relaxing natural atmosphere of an Everlite® Home Greenhouse. Over 90 prefabricated easy-to-assemble models. Full line of accessories available. Make every week a vacation with an Everlite®

For more information:
Westplumb Enterprises, Inc.
Townshend, VT. 05353
(802) 365-4019

EUROPE
less than ½ economy fare
Call toll free: (800) 325-4867
Guaranteed Reservations
or see your travel agent!
Unitravel Charters Inc.

Bailey's
Music Rooms, Inc.
ONE OF VERMONT'S LARGEST SELECTIONS OF RECORDS AND TAPES
PERSONALIZED SERVICE
88 CHURCH ST.
BURLINGTON

beer wine
THE ONLY
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
Lowest Prices Largest Selection
kegs soda

MYSTERIOUS TRAVELERS FROM ANOTHER WORLD...

NEW from WALT DISNEY Productions
RETURN FROM WITCH MOUNTAIN
G
Bette Davis, Christopher Lee TECHNICOLOR®
1:30 & 7:00 & 8:50

NEIL SIMON'S
the GOODBYE GIRL
1:30 & 7:20 & 9:30
PG
BURLINGTON PLAZA CINEMA 1 & 2
RT 7 AT 189 SO. BURLINGTON
PHONE 862-5070 ANYTIME

Men's and Women's Reg. $76 Now $59

Introductory Lightfoot Sandal Special

From Santa Barbara to Burlington

Now $20-$24 $1 off with student I.D.

and thank you from all of us at Crispin Leather

CRISPIN LEATHER

160 COLLEGE ST 863-2216

Arts
Section Two

SUMMERTIME

VOLUME IV NUMBER 1 "What you see isn't what you get." JUNE 15, 1978

Are Bu... Schools Virtu...

Orientatio... By Randy ...

Talkin' ... By Russe...

The ... (Spring ... By ...

We're the Vermont Summer Cynic

Welcome to the Vermont Summer Cynic! Over the next two months, our writers, artists, and photographers will be spanning Vermont and the globe to bring you an entertaining collection of news, sports, arts and amusements. The Summer Cynic will appear twice monthly, with a surprise planned for the end of the summer.

Summertime in Vermont can't be beat. From sailing to music festivals, to softball and night life, there's a lot happening. The Summer Cynic will keep you posted on UVM Summer School events, cultural attractions of the Burlington area, and weekend vacations.

We hope you find the Summer Cynic a fun, useful, and thought-provoking publication. Your comments and criticisms are appreciated to provide for public debate.

Have a good summer!

Update

UVM Celebrates 69th Summer Session

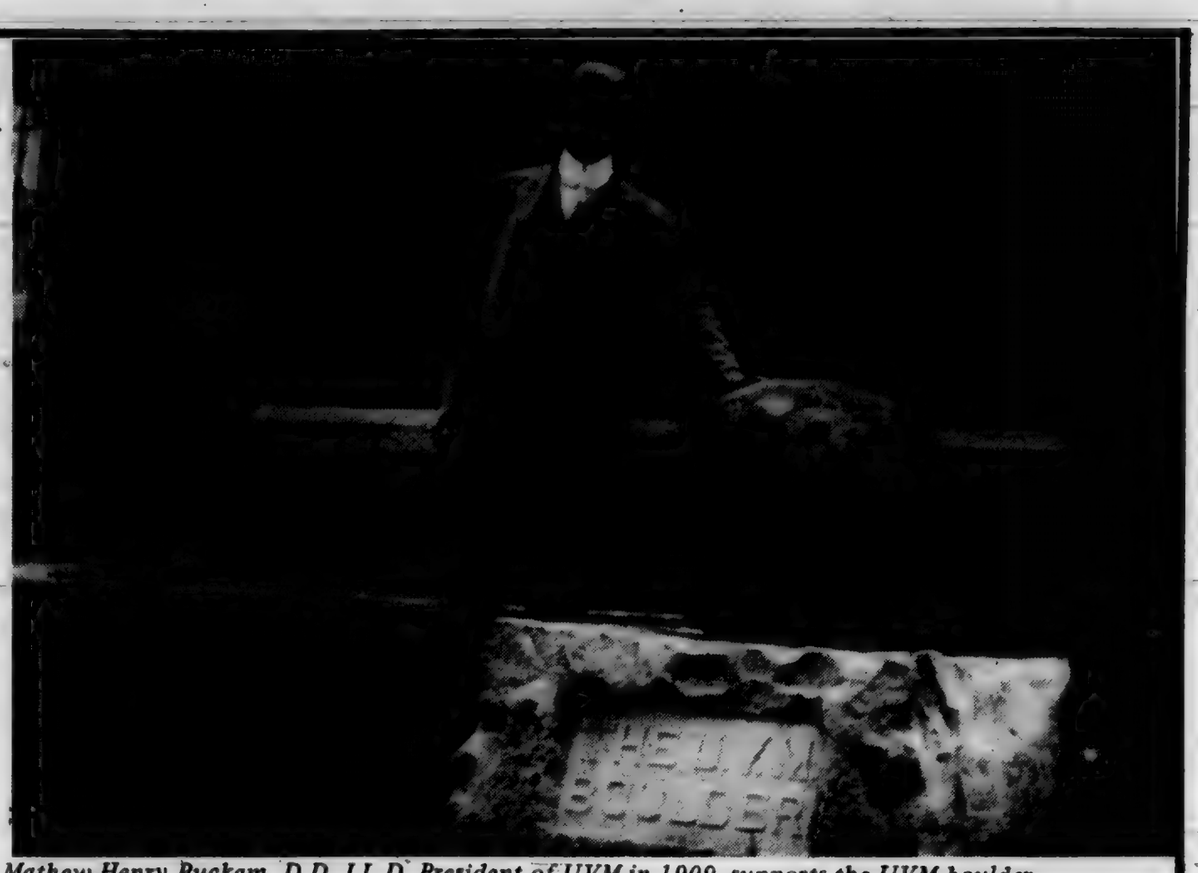
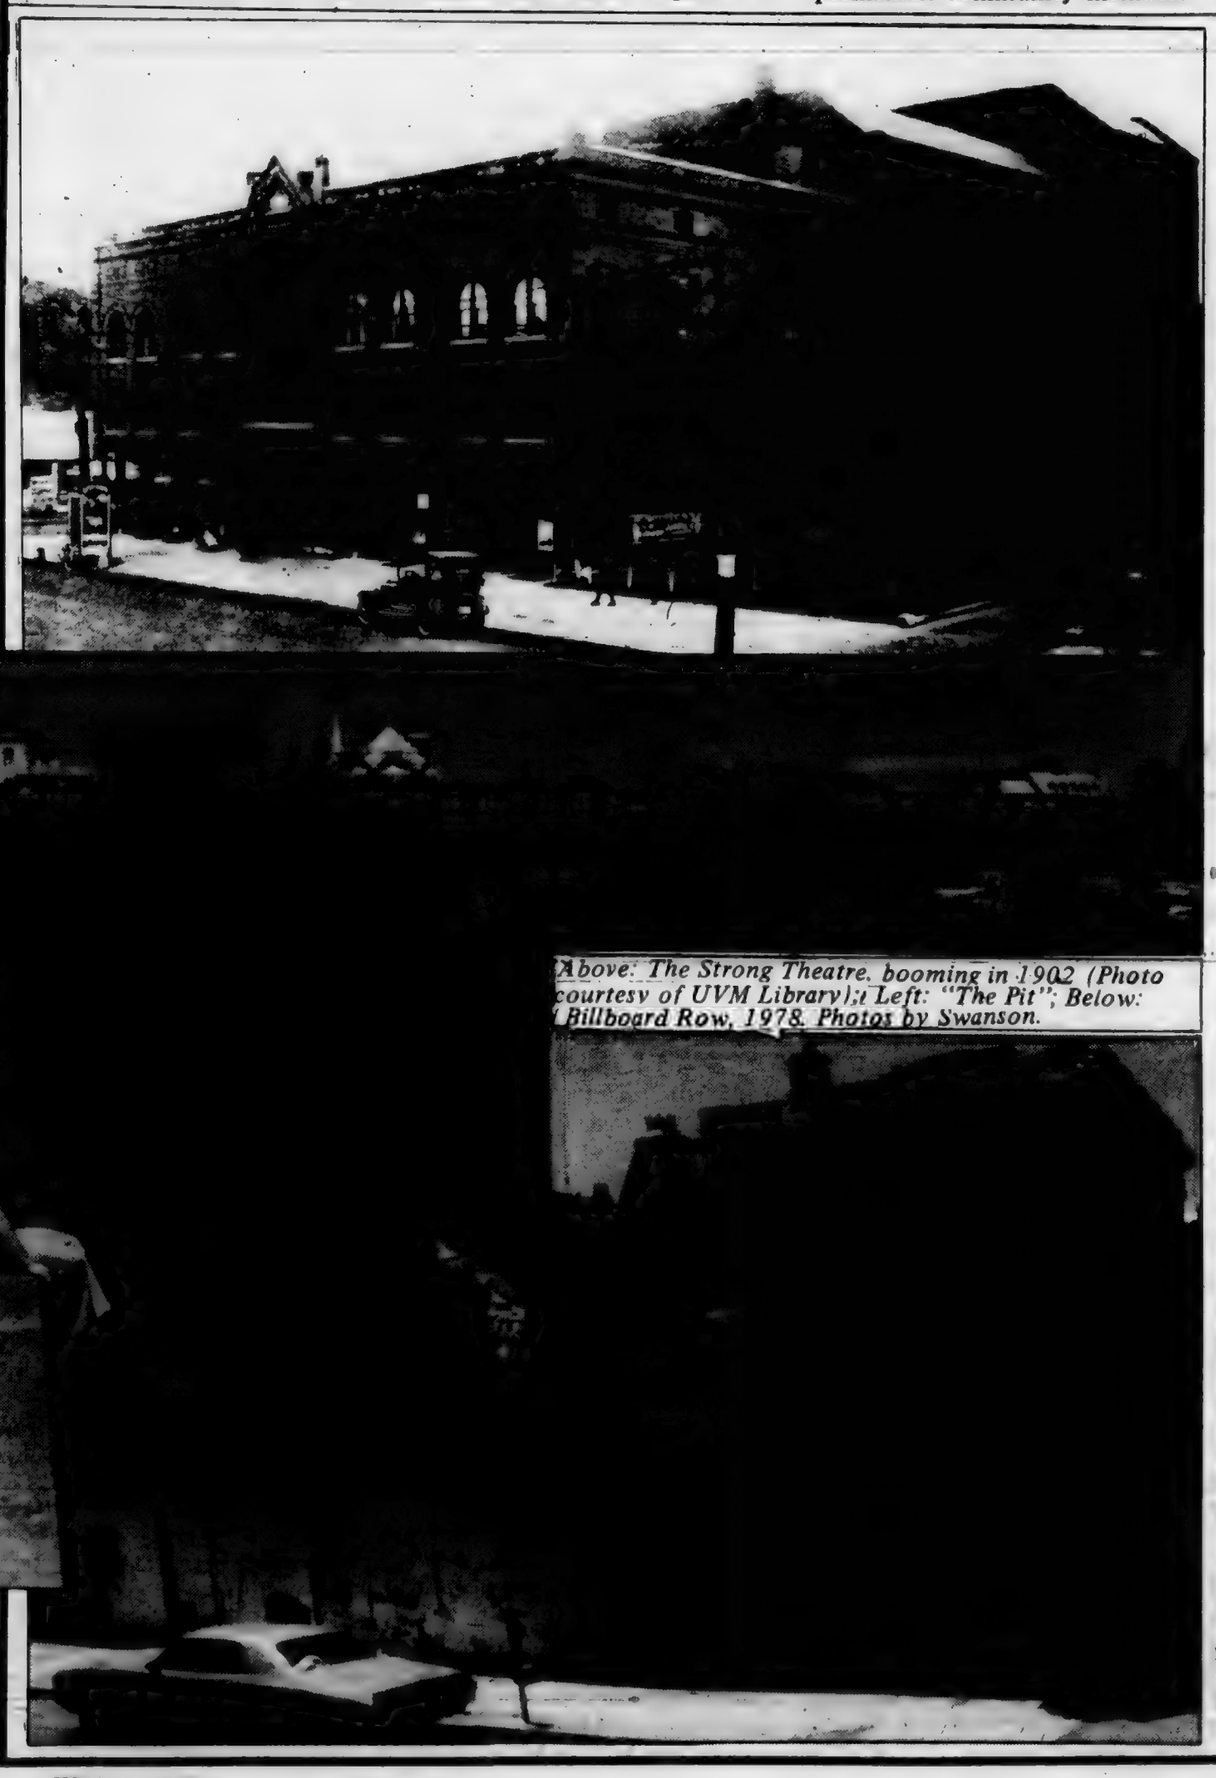
The UVM campus is alive again following the official opening of the 69th Summer Session on June 5. An estimated 3450 students are expected to enroll for a curriculum including courses in every major discipline and a number of special programs and workshops.

Since 1909, the Summer Session at UVM has been held annually. Originating as a program for teachers and school administrators, it was coordinated by the College of Education. The session originally ran from July 10 through August 7 and the tuition per course was $10. The course listings included Latin, English, Greek, French, Elementary Algebra, Teaching Manual Training, Home Economics, and Mathematics. The following year, however, the session was one week longer and tuition rose to $15 per course.



This year, with registration ahead over previous years, 3,450 students are expected to enroll in 260 courses and a variety of workshops including those in music, languages and environmental studies. Education courses have remained important with many teachers returning for summer courses. Accordingly, more Continuing Education students attend Summer Session than do degree students although the Office of Continuing Education, the Summer Session administrative office, says they are "trying to change that."

A recent survey on summer school randomly distributed by the Office of Continuing Education among the UVM student population found the most common reasons cited to attend a Summer Session were to gain credits necessary to graduate, to lighten a regular semester's load, to take courses offered only in summer, and to learn in a better atmosphere. The survey further states that the three most important factors influencing a decision to attend summer courses are considered to be the freedom to spend extra time on a course, the option to graduate early, and the opportunity to retake a course. The results of the survey also indicated that the most popular courses are those required to complete a major and those catering to special interests.



Given these facts, future summer sessions may be adapted to meet the changing needs and preferences of the student population. Already, the Office of Continuing Education plans to expand evening course offerings so that students and permanent community members who work during the day will also have the opportunity to attend a Summer Session.

In addition to the courses offered during the Summer Session, there are also many activities scheduled, both on and off campus. For instance, "Campus-at-Noon" will offer a variety of local acts free of charge. Sponsored by Summer Session Recreation, these activities will take place in front of Royall Tyler Theatre from noon to 1 p.m. every weekday. A popular annual event, the Champlain Shakespeare Festival, will be taking place through the summer. Also, campus movies will again be shown. The UVM campus will reawaken, indeed!

—Mary Ann Schlegel

Mathew Henry Buckam, D.D. LL.D, President of UVM in 1909, supports the UVM boulder.

Above: The Strong Theatre, booming in 1902 (Photo courtesy of UVM Library); Left: "The Pit"; Below: Billboard Row, 1978. Photos by Swanson.

What's Happening at the Strong Building Site?

Since fire demolished the Strong Building in October 1971, the corner of Main and South Winooski Avenue has sat untouched save for brightly colored signs. Is there any hope for this curious example of urban blight?

Herman Lash Associates of South Burlington are now handling the property, and some action may be on the horizon. For the past two months, Lash has been involved with the possible sale or lease of the location. Lash said he has had a few potential buyers, and called the land a "good piece" in a prime spot. The property also includes two homes toward the back of the lot, and the market price for the entire site is $325,000.

The site comes under R-75 zoning (75 residential units per acre), which allows for the construction of apartment complexes, parking facilities, and various commercial uses. But according to a spokeswoman for the Burlington Planning Commission "the property isn't as big as it looks."

Currently, Burlington Planning Commission "has no interest in the property." The city once considered the site for a parking garage, but that was "years ago." The city has no responsibility for the upkeep of the privately owned site. Consequently, the "Pit" has reverted to an urban jungle.

The present owners, Cody Chevrolet, Inc. of Montpelier, said they have no plans for the property at this time. In 1971, however, they examined the possibility of building a modern motor inn on the South Winooski side and a two-story commercial structure with a cinema and several stores on Main Street.

For 69 years, the Strong Building was constructed in 1902 by James and John Whalen as a theatre and hardware store with a basement warehouse. At the time it was destroyed, the Strong Building housed the Strong Theatre, Strong Hardware, Serendipity Gift Shop, Merola's barbershop, Carr's portrait studio, and thirteen apartments. The estimated replacement cost in 1971 was put at more than one million dollars. Vaudeville and drama thrived at the Strong Theatre with the likes of Houdini appearing there as well as then former President Theodore Roosevelt. The Strong, noted for its ornate balconies and sky-painted ceiling, was at one point condemned and then renovated to allow it to continue as a theatre. The Strong Hardware store was famous for its old-fashioned pneumatic tube change system and a wide array of supplies. One Burlington resident recalled the Strong even had "stuff that was out of style." He added that if "they didn't sell it, they kept it."

At the time of the Strong fire, Burlington had been plagued by five arson fires in one week. Although several witnesses claimed they saw two young men running away from the Strong shortly before the blaze erupted, the arsonists were never caught.

An estimated two hundred firemen from Burlington and outlying towns fought the blaze with bystanders helping to unroll hoses and erect ladders. The fire caused no loss of life, and although the building was a total loss, businesses within the Strong Building recovered much of their stock in salvage operations.

Kids and Drugs: A Neglected Problem in Burlington

By Randy Jansen

A half-hour before the start of another school day, a group of young students congregate in the nearby woods for their morning ritual. Neither scholastic nor innocent, this ritual is viewed by most of its participants as a necessary prerequisite for the day's activities. Some of the kids are hardened veterans of this morning exercise; others are neophytes who have come to taste of the forbidden fruit. Nonetheless, they are young, very young, the oldest being a 9th grader, the youngest a mere 5th grader. They are seated now, quickly and efficiently making preparations, anxious in anticipation. An 8th grader is the first to finish. He lights up, inhales deeply and passes the joint on to the blond girl beside him. She follows his example, and passes it in turn to the girl next to her. Soon, the odor of marijuana mingles with the earthy smells of nature. It is a rare and beautiful day for Burlington, filled with sunshine and warmth, as the students talk, laugh, joke and get stoned. They are now prepared to meet the day.

The above scene is not an atypical dramatization, but a common occurrence in and around Burlington's middle and elementary schools. In playgrounds, bathrooms, classrooms, and on city streets, drugs are sold, bought, and consumed by a young generation who sees an altered state of consciousness as a normal, everyday occurrence. Drug abuse has reached epidemic proportions among school children and the situation is worsening all the time. Chronic drug abuse has been with us since the 1960's, but the youthfulness of today's users adds a particularly dangerous element to the drug scene. Although most school and public officials are aware of drug use among 7th and 8th graders, few realize that it extends (admittedly on a decreasing limited scale) even down to 3rd graders. Perhaps more frightening is that drugs consumed are not limited to marijuana, but includes cocaine, barbituates, amphetamines, acid (LSD), hashish, angel dust (PCP), and of course alcohol. Marijuana, however, remains the favorite of young users because of its easy accessibility and relatively low cost.

'Chronic drug abuse has been with us since the 1960's, but the youthfulness of today's offenders adds a particularly dangerous element to the drug scene ...'

Procurring drugs in Burlington is not difficult; they are available anywhere kids hang out. Bathrooms, playgrounds, and parking lots are the preferred spots for obtaining and using drugs in the school area. Nearby buildings and alleys are also used. Leading the list is City Hall Park where, according to one 7th grader, "You can get anything you want there from any bum in the park." Drugs are also available on back streets, the municipal parking garage, the YMCA and basically anywhere a deal or usage can occur away from the eyes of the public or authorities.

Dealers apparently have few, if any, scruples about the selling of drugs to children. Most dealers are small-time operators who are local people selling dope for extra cash or to pay for their own drug use. Some drugs come from falsified doctor prescriptions or even from kids selling their own medicine (such as Valium). Several students pointed out that at UVM and other local centers of higher education drugs can be purchased from college students with relative ease.

Drugs are more easily purchased in Burlington than most communities of similar size for several reasons. The high percentage of college students in the area are perhaps the greatest factor to the availability of drugs in Burlington. Drugs are similar to any consumer product or service where a market exists. High demand for drugs as in Burlington leads to a high volume of use and sales.

Money for drugs comes from a variety of sources. Allowances provide some money, but a great number of students support their use of drugs through fencing goods from breaking and entering. Detective Timothy Rollins of the Burlington Police Department estimates that 90% of burglaries and theft are committed by youths wanting money to buy drugs.

Young student drug users are not easily distinguishable from their peers by their behavior, social or economic class, or academic achievement. All schools have a drug abuse problem differing only in the intensity and extent. Parochial and public schools are equally prone to the problem. Drug users can come from a wealthy, intellectual family or from a low-income, one-parent, low IQ family. Discipline on a parental or scholastic level also has no effect on young drug users.

Teacher reaction to drug users ranges from the concerned to the ignorant. Many teachers cannot recognize a kid under the influence. They may think the student is a day-dreamer or on the other side of the spectrum, hyperactive. Shocking as it may seem, some teachers think drugs are beneficial because they often make students subdued and thus more easily handled.

Why do kids consume drugs? This question has been extensively researched, documented, and surveyed, and yet no clear cut answer is forthcoming. Reasons for taking drugs are as unique as the individual users. Widespread trends are noticeable which can account for the bulk of middle and elementary age drug users. The Burlington area has a high percentage of children under 18, especially in the North End where an estimated 50% of the population is under 18. Most students surveyed listed boredom as the main reason for using drugs. They have a considerable amount of spare time and little to do with it. Burlington lacks facilities, especially for low-income kids, to keep kids active and entertained. Recreational facilities are few, sometimes expensive, and often inadequate to handle the large numbers of children. Youth Centers are few and poorly financed. The closing of the Urban Youth Center for lack of funds indicates the low priority of children in the city of Burlington. Children looking for jobs are restricted by high unemployment, child-labor laws, low wages. Drugs are used as a release valve and a form of entertainment to combat boredom. "It's the only thing to do around here," complained a young teen-age girl. An eighth grade boy says, "I take it when I'm upset... to keep my problems out of my mind."

Peer pressure cannot be discounted for contributing to drug use among children, especially among junior high school students. Older students initiate younger ones and the trend continues downward. As one 7th grader commented, "The higher the grade the more they coach you into it." Of course many students take it "for kicks" or as an affront to established authority.

Drug abuse by younger students is not a high priority issue for the community, school or parents. Without a scientific survey, it is virtually impossible to determine the actual number of students who use drugs. Percentages vary widely from source to source. One junior high school student estimated that 30% of 7th graders are drug users to some extent, 50% of 8th graders and 70% of 9th graders. Certain conservative and religious parental groups exaggerate the drug situation to point out the decline in societal morals, while school and police officials underestimate the problem for self-serving needs.

No school administration likes to advertise the extent of drug abuse in their schools, because it tarnishes the school's image, puts pressure on the administration and teachers, and may hurt school bond issues. School authorities are cautious in talking about drugs because of the volatility of the issue and bad publicity. Consequently, a lack of candor is evident in school officials when discussing drugs. Schools with minimal use of drugs will say no problem exists, while schools who cannot hide drug abuse in their schools say it isn't as bad as it seems. This understatement of the problem of drug users helps to hide it from the public, but doesn't aid in finding solutions.

No one is willing to take responsibility in combating drug abuse by school children. When the subject is brought up accusations fly back and forth, but no one is willing to accept responsibility for the situation. School officials and teachers blame the parents, the parents blame the schools, the police say they are helpless, and everyone blames the morality of the times. This fragmentation works against the cooperative spirit of responsibility and support needed to tackle drug abuse.

School officials handle the problem on an individual basis depending on the school's philosophy. However, a trend is easily discernable where a low profile is maintained in any situation dealing with drugs. Nothing is done to go to the heart of the matter, but is designed to be punitive (in the eyes of school officials). A kid is caught with a small amount of pot on his person and is sent to the principal, who most likely will call the student's parents and then suspend the kid. Is this action designed to facilitate the operation of the school or to deal with the student's behavior and/or drug problem? As John Sonnick of the Burlington Police Department Juvenile division states, "that's what they want (suspension)." Suspension places the kid right on the street with nothing to do and the potential for further trouble increases.

Police can enter a school only if assistance is requested which happens when violence or major drug dealing is involved; but the majority of drug cases are handled by the school. Burlington police have a difficult time in dealing with drugs in middle and elementary schools. Undercover agents by the age factor cannot be planted successfully, and as one official pointed out, "you cannot let a 13 year old do undercover work." Also most Burlington police officers are recognized by dealers.

Parental reaction to their children being caught with drugs can aggravate the entire matter. Parents sometimes have no concern, react in an indignant manner or use one of many excuses to avoid dealing effectively with their children and their involvement with drugs.

Refusal to deal with drug abuse can cause serious complications in the future as a recent 10-year study reveals what can happen to young indulgers by the time they reach high school. Personality traits of a regular user include: "emotional instability, rebelliousness, a need for independence more than achievement, alienation and a tolerance for deviance, and a tendency to be less influenced by family than by friends." These traits are not conducive to producing clear-headed mature adults.

More can certainly be done in the realm of drug education. When asked what was done in this area, school officials and the police pointed to the "Officer Friendly Program" where police travel to elementary schools to familiarize the students with the police and their operations. It was somehow thought this would help drug abuse among young school children. This program does not, however, deal with drugs. Studies have shown that "films, former addicts as speakers, police lectures, scare tactics, exposure to pills and various drug apparatus fail to curb drug abuse among teenagers," primarily because these education programs come too late. Prevention, rather than curative programs, are desperately needed, and commenced at a young age before students become exposed to drugs.

Much more would need to be done as a community-wide effort is required to curb drug abuse. Recreational facilities and youth centers must be expanded. Jobs must be provided for kids who need and want them. Law enforcement and the judicial system should concentrate and crack down on dealers who sell to children. Parents who refuse to discipline their children when confronted with evidence of drug abuse should be made responsible for any vandalism committed by that child. Finally, an atmosphere of constructive discipline should exist in the home and schools where a student who demonstrates responsibility should be allowed more freedom and not before. A concern and respect for students' feelings and concerns are important for authority figures and respect and concern should be demanded in return.

The problem of drug abuse has no easy or simple solution, but evading and deemphasing the issue accomplishes nothing in the process of finding an answer. A problem cannot be rectified until it is acknowledged and recognized as such. The citizens of Burlington seem to be content to pass the buck, and to avoid responsibility, and yet they wonder why students are apathetic, destructive, abusive and have many of the anti-social traits attributed to them. So much attention and time is devoted to a Civic Center, a pedestrian mall on Church Street, and the problem of parking downtown. When was the last time a voice was raised concerning young school children abusing drugs? Perhaps we are going in the wrong directions when we try to see ways to better the community of Burlington.

Randy Jansen, a former editor of the Vermont Cynic, is now a Burlington freelance writer.

'The problem of drug abuse has no easy or simple solution, but evading and de-emphasizing the issue accomplishes nothing ...'

CARBUR'S OUTDOOR SURVIVAL KIT TO GO

Carbur's 'Grandwich,'
With a Jumbo Cold Drink,
Pickle & Chips, and a
Juicy Red Apple

CALL AHEAD AND PICK IT UP
Burl. 864-9631
Plattsburg 561-3663

Give someone a sundae to remember.

Monday through Sunday, a McDonald's® Sundae makes any day a fun day! Delicious vanilla swirls covered with your favorite topping! Strawberry! Hot Caramel! And everybody's favorite, Hot Fudge!

So, come on in and treat yourself, and a friend, to a real sundae special. It's the perfect way to top off anything.

We do it all for you.

McDonald's

Pearl St. Essex Jct.
Williston Rd. So. Burlington

© McDonald's System, Inc., 1977.

-EXPAND YOUR HORIZONS-
MAGAZINES
JOURNALS REVIEWS
WEEKLY PAPERS

BOOKSTACKS
Pine Street between Main & College
862-8513
Open Weeknights 8pm. (fri.-9)

GIVE DAD...

Levi's for men Levi's

For Father's Day
June 18th

Levi's JEANSWEAR

Clean and Classy!

Nothing detracts from the comfortable fit of these Levi's® For Men. The reason? They were designed with a man's body foremost in mind. High-lighted with fashion details men prefer: a trendy watch pocket; button-through back patch pockets; and snappy contrast stitching. See these Levi's® For Men soon, in a variety of fabrics and colors.

The Connection

Vermont's Largest
Men's Clothiers
Burlington
St. Albans—Montpelier—St. Johnsbury

On-Campus

.....Orientation

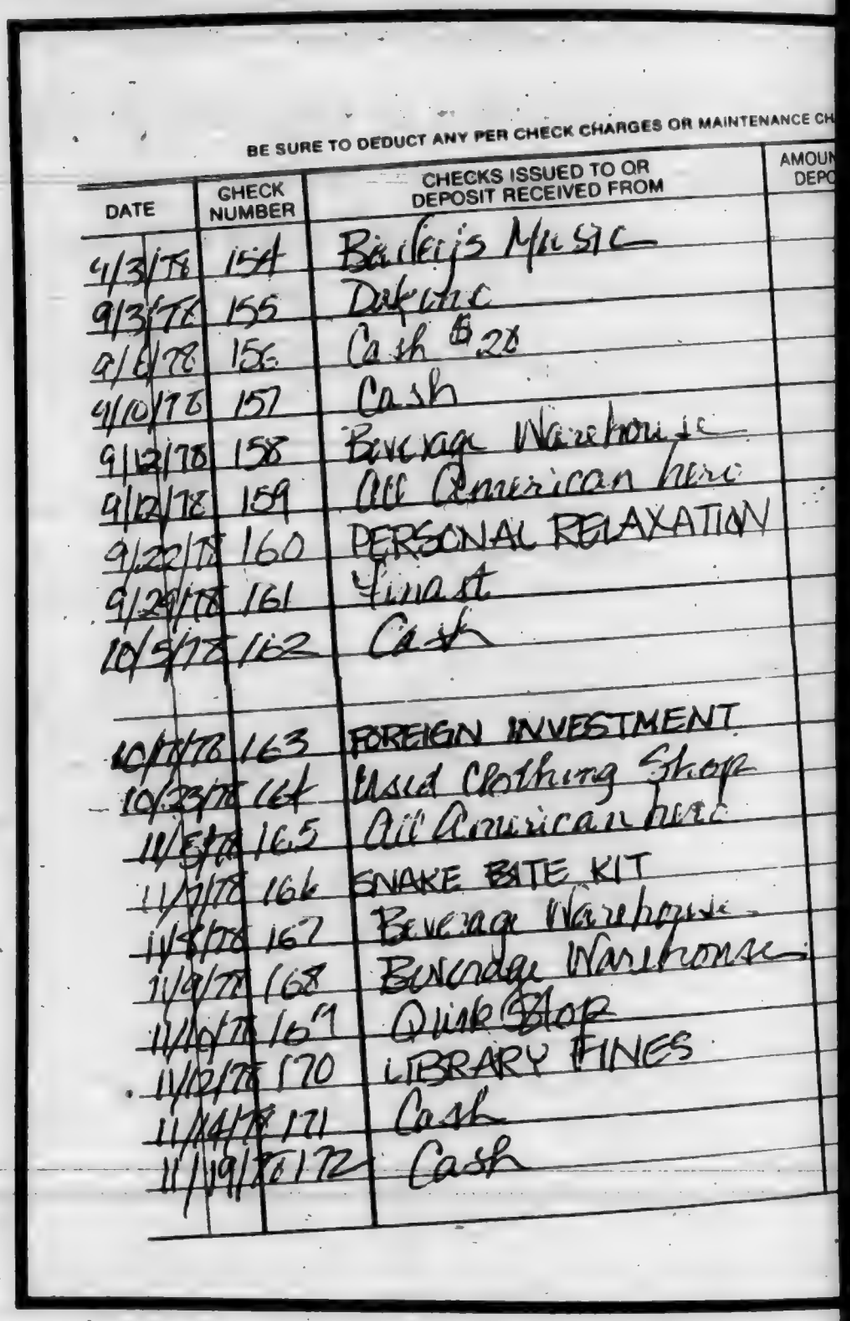
A student should experience orientation like an expert card player would handle a game of seven-card stud. Don't mistake anything you see for the entire UVM/Burlington picture. There are cards that will remain hidden from you until after you have thrown in your last nickel.

Also consider the fact that UVM has dealt itself an ace-in-the-hole by holding orientation ceremonies during June. Quiet June; summertime in Burlington: when UVM has fondly flushed out its 10,000 crazed inhabitants, and gratefully recuperates to the tune of poetry workshops and ceramic pottery seminars, and when the closest thing to insanity in the Queen City is a Volvo with Quebec license plates driving the wrong way on Church Street. You won't find anyone hanging from the lampposts downtown, and the lines at the dairy bar are almost worth it. What you see on the UVM campus and in downtown Burlington is not what you'll see come September. But don't let that bother you; some people go through four years of this place seeing little more than a mug of beer, a broken bong, and an economics text going blurry at five in the morning.

Of course the very idea of college orientation is absurd. Orientation to what? How does one orient oneself toward a period of life in which they will encounter a nearly overwhelming barrage of attitudes and experiences? How does one prepare for four years of sunrise parties, sexual awakenings (possibly deflowerings), all-night-binges of chemistry or calculus, and pseudo-intellectual discussions on thermo-dynamics or Nietsche over a midnight joint? There is such a wide variety of lifestyles possible at a school like UVM that trying to grasp it all in two days is as futile as attempting an amorous conquest while listening to Frank Zappa. Don't put too much faith into orientation, and don't expect it to teach you anything totally worthwhile. Take it as a vacation: catch a cone at the dairy bar or a strawberry daiquiri at Finbar's, take a good long look at Lake Champlain, share a quiet moment with a new friend while gazing at Mount Mansfield that bulges like a rocky bicept in the horizon beyond Patrick Gymnasium... But whatever you do, don't treat orientation too seriously. Like any other administrative function, it has all the dynamic interplay of a novice backgammon game.

There are, however, certain things common to all forms of college living that should be learned by every student. Unfortunately, most of these things are not brought out at all during orientation. For instance, what does one do to cure insomnia during an exam week? The answer is really quite simple: feign a cold and go to the infirmary, where you will promptly be showered with a host of tabular remedies, one of which is bound to make you sleepy.

But rarely are such crucial issues ever mentioned during orientation. You go to movies and mixers, and encouraged to open up to the opposite sex as well as your advisor: ("Well now, Rudy... Oh, Randy?... Fine Randy. I understand that you're interested in environmentalism. Well as your advisor, I can't say that I have a very strong background in that particular field, but I was involved with an air pollution seminar once when I was in the sixth grade. Real interesting stuff. Yes sir, Rudy, it's a strong field. A good field.")



What it all boils down to is that orientation will prepare you for school about as well as one of those Barron's guides, which categorize everything that a college has into its campus location, selectivity, and mean SAT scores. Whatever reasons people have for choosing UVM (The Upper Valley Motel) as their place of secondary education will probably have been forgotten by the time they graduate.

So what does it take to complete a successful stint at UVM? Hard work? Nerves of steel? An iron stomach? A paraquat testing kit? Maybe, but it really depends on the individual. People can graduate from this school without any of the aforementioned qualities (boring though they may be). Set your own goals: reach for the stars, reach for another Molson, reach for an economics text at five in the morning. All one can suggest is to reach reasonably.

But what about the necessary facets of college living not brought out during orientation? I would feel guilty if I didn't mention at least a few of them.

Financial planning, for example. Whether you are getting financial aid from the university, your parents, or none at all, it can be reasonably assured that at least one hour of every month you attend UVM will be spent worrying about money. Bank accounts are mystifying things: they seem to suck themselves dry and write checks that aren't covered. Despite the irrationality that appears frequently concerning monetary situations, there is a reasonable explanation: a formula, a corollary from Murphy's Law, stating the amount of money at hand is directly proportional to the amount of money that will be spent within any given period of time. No matter how much money is brought to school with you, it will be mostly gone by the end of the year.

There's an easy test to see if you are living by this formula:

BE SURE TO DEDUCT ANY PER CHECK CHARGES OR MAINTENANCE CH

| DATE | CHECK NUMBER | CHECKS ISSUED TO OR DEPOSIT RECEIVED FROM | AMOUN DEPO |
|---|---|---|---|
| 4/3/78 | 154 | Bailey's Music | |
| 9/3/78 | 155 | Deposit | |
| 9/6/78 | 156 | Cash $20 | |
| 9/10/78 | 157 | Cash | |
| 9/12/78 | 158 | Beverage Warehouse | |
| 9/12/78 | 159 | All American here | |
| 9/22/78 | 160 | PERSONAL RELAXATION | |
| 9/28/78 | 161 | Finast | |
| 10/5/78 | 162 | Cash | |
| 10/10/78 | 163 | FOREIGN INVESTMENT | |
| 10/23/78 | 164 | Used Clothing Shop | |
| 11/5/78 | 165 | All American here | |
| 11/7/78 | 166 | SNAKE BITE KIT | |
| 11/8/78 | 167 | Beverage Warehouse | |
| 11/9/78 | 168 | Burlodge Warehouse | |
| 11/10/78 | 169 | Quik Stop | |
| 11/12/78 | 170 | LIBRARY FINES | |
| 11/14/78 | 171 | Cash | |
| 11/19/78 | 172 | Cash | |

There is such a wide variety of possible at a school like UVM that to grasp it all in two days is as futile attempting an amorous conquest listening to Frank Zappa.

to What?

look at your bank book's ten most recent withdrawals; if you can't determine what at least seven of them were for, then you're doing fine. In fact, you're doing so fine that you've probably reached the stage where you realize that money, like sex, is only worthwhile when you're putting out 100%. Now you can begin to manage your cash with a little pizzazz, a little creativity. Next time you make a withdrawal, write it down as if it were for a noble cause. Let's say that you just wrote a check at a local store for a six of Molson Golden Ale, try something like: "Personal Relaxation... $2.75," a fifth of Jack Daniels: "Snake Bite Kit... you've got a real tear-jerking investment. This, by the way, is also a very sound practice for future income tax deductions.

**********

Although often overlooked by a majority of UVM students, the ability to say no is a crucial aspect of college life. Granted, there are some things that will always seem too attractive to pass up, but if we all lived according to our temptations, things like neutron bombs and nuclear reactors would have never been developed.

The difficulties in saying no are twofold. It is one thing to convince your peers that you really don't want to go to the Last Chance for the eleventh night in a row, but quite another to convince yourself. This is the first and most excrutiating step. Say to yourself: "I cannot smoke pot, I cannot drink beer, I cannot (gulp) have sex... I must finish my history paper." Pretend that you are Ivan Denisovich; that it's actually a privilege to do a history paper. The word 'bullshit' will come screeching to your mind several times during this process, but that only means that you're almost there. Finally, you will reach a state referred to by scholars as academic nirvana. You accept the fact that life was meant to be suffered through, and that completing your term paper will at least provide you with new panels of information (for about a week).

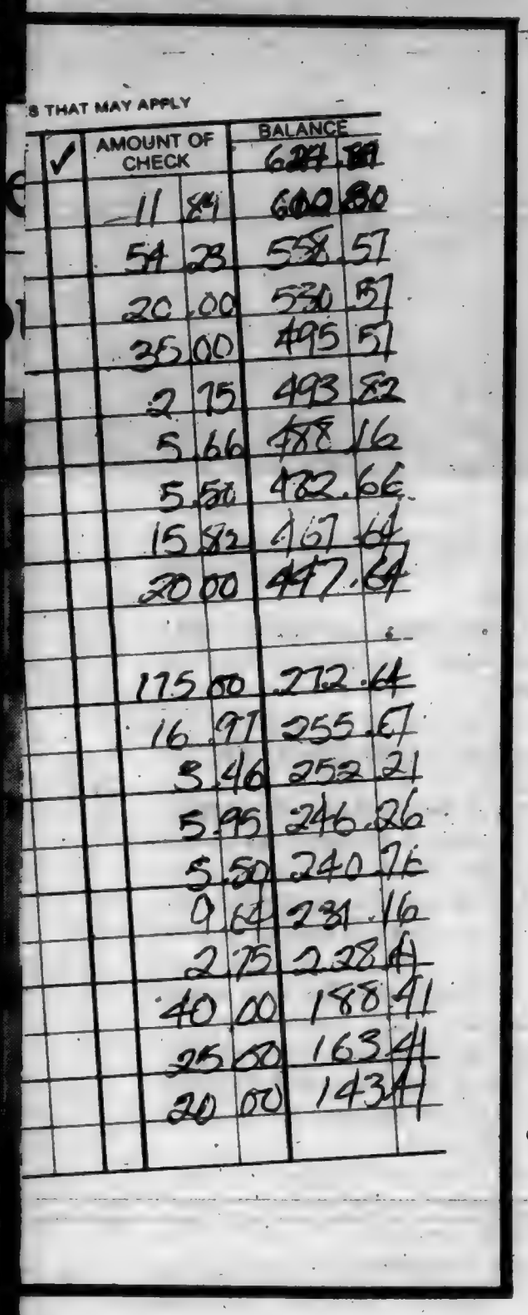
Now comes the final test: actually refusing a well-intentioned buddy. The trick is to rationalize soundly for your inexcusable ambition. It's not all that easy, but consider the possibilities:

(1) Do you want to smoke some marijuana? No, my canary has diphtheria. WRONG: It's important to make your response a coherent one, so as not to make it sound too artificial.

(2) Do you want to go drinking downtown? No, I have work to do. WRONG: Nobody wants to see you actually achieve academic nirvana; it's like being an English major and acing a cell biology class. You'd be asking for trouble.

(3) How about a bong? No thanks, I'm too stoned already. OK: At least you're on their side, and besides, nobody is going to force you to be wasteful. If you're stoned, you're stoned; there's no sense in overdoing it.

(4) Do you want to make love? ????? (I'm not going to mess with this one, priorities are one thing, complete idiocy is another.)



**********

From these tips, you have endless possibilities. You can write an outlandishly noble check for a six of Molsons and a pack of Easy Widers, or you can say no to the partying, and spend your money on the statistics textbook that would help you prepare for the midterm next week.

As for orientation, say "yes," "yes," and "yes." Gawk at the simplicity of a hibernating college town, and level with some of the rosy-cheeked administration. You probably won't see either of these again for another four years.

Randy McMullen

Randy McMullen ('79) is a former features editor for the Vermont Cynic.

ty of lifestyles VM that trying is as futile as onquest while appa.

$5.95," an ounce of that fine Columbian that's been crawling around in Burlington: "Library Fines... $40.00" (no use getting cute with this one, folks, if you're going to get snarled up in an illegal vice, you might as well keep it concealed). How about a weekend in Montreal? Try: "Foreign investment... $175.00." You can discover a socially charasmatic euphemism for most anything. The trick is to distort the hell out of the issue at hand, add a few Samaritan-like idioms, and

The Downhill Edge

WE ARE SERIOUS ABOUT RUNNING & TENNIS

To prove it, we stock:

- Cronus liquid-crystal stop-watches
- ERG Drinking Supplement

frank shorter running gear

- Complete line of runner's books for men & women
- Runner's World Magazine
- Marathon Magazine

And MORE . . .

Complete Line of Running & Tennis Shoes by :

NIKE
PUMA
TIGER
ETONIC
NEW BALANCE

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

81—85 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401 (802) 862-2282

FENWAY NOTES

(INCLUDING AN INTERVIEW WITH BILL LEE.)

PHOTOS BY ROB SWANSON

STORY BY RUSSELL FLANNERY

Ed. Note – The Red Sox were playing .694 ball and riding an eight game winning streak into the last game of their most successful month in the history of the team. Bill Lee, one of baseball's premier natural wonders, was scheduled to face the last place Toronto Blue Jays on a Fenway Family Night. After calling ahead for tickets and a pass, Cynic Photo Editor Rob Swanson and I made the four hour haul to B'town on Memorial Day.

5:03 Arrive at Fenway... No trouble with prearranged tickets or my field pass. I begin my search to interview Bill Lee. Swanson's already taking pictures.

5:08 On the playing field, I discuss player accessibility with a local CBS reporter and a couple of guys from a suburban paper who were "trying to get up the courage" to walk up to one of the Sox, who're taking batting practice. Everyone also looking for Lee, who was nowhere to be found.

5:20 Following a Toronto player's comment regarding his bright green tennis shoes, George Scott dispells all rumours of his alledged off-season speech therapy practice by saying "Iahreaehsach runnin' you gotcha oomorahhh."

5:40 Suburban reporters haven't moved one foot. Flannery now walking in circles.

5:45 Still no Bill Lee. Starting Bosox now individually reading cue cards and taping Public Service Ads for a local child center. Jim Rice proves he's fallible by needing four takes to read three cue cards. Swanson, now on the field – without a pass – is lookin' like a pro.

6:00 Main gates open.

6:05 Freaky looking, long haired photographer saying he works for the Vermont Summer Cynic is escorted off the field for failure to produce a pass.

6:10 Flannery claims Swanson.

6:12 The Public Relations secretary says that I can change my pass to include two people simply by crossing out the 'one' and writing 'two.' Oh.

6:15 Still no Lee, who apparently was not stuck waiting in line at the main gate. Gametime is in 75 minutes.

6:18 Carlton Fisk gives the same kids the same Fonzie-like "Aye" for the third time, without giving them an autograph.

6:30 Flannery finds Bill Lee asleep on the training room table. Game time's in 60 minutes.

6:50 Lee arises. Tells me (in the clubhouse) that he usually "doesn't sleep before games." After running his hands through his hair and yawning, he adds, "it slows you down, you know." Bill says he has a good friend at UVM, and he'll talk to me after the game. Relief.

7:10 Large sodas (actually small) are now 75 cents at Fenway Park. Anyone who pays less than 50 cents for a hot dog should check it for fur. Beer is a luxury.

7:22 "Yes in three styles, Yankee hater tee shirts..." on sale down the street from the park. Sales didn't seem to be booming on the religious garb, however.

7:30 Back in the park – "Pitching, number 37, Bill Lee." Bill still looks sleepy.

7:34 – 7:44 Toronto scores three runs on three hits (two doubles) and two walks, and has only one out. Lee's not throwing well.

7:44 Red Sox pitching coach is on the mound. One younger fan observes, "Don't worry Daddy. Our Jim Rice will hit 'em."

7:56 Toronto 6, Boston 0. Lee yanked after walking in the run that made it 4-0. Bob Stanley came in and gave up a bloop single for another two tallies. Lee pitched two-thirds of an inning, was responsible for six runs, and walked four batters. It's going to be a great interview.

7:56 – 9:10 Out of the dozen or so Red Sox games I've seen, this is unquestionably the most boring.

9:15 Flannery verbally ejected from the Red Sox clubhouse by a rather large man for trying to speak with a player (namely Lee) during a game. You can't win 'em all...

10:05 The Red Sox don't win 'em all either, and lose, 6-2. Cynic reporters gallantly strut to the clubhouse, toward a supposedly good interview.

10:10 'Something funny is happening on the way to this interview.' Flannery, with Swanson, walks in clubh

Bosto
'come
Swans (came hours for R finall conve
Lee: "
ten in
one. W cocky you w time w tenden
a very with k
Is that
Lee: N
turnpi
A q
Lee: "
a star inning

clubhouse and is immediately awed by the number of Boston press who have already surrounded Bill Lee. I 'come to' sound of Carl Yastremski screaming at Swanson: "You fucking asshole. Get that thing (camera) out of here. I'm out on the field for five hours..." My big buddy from 9:15 immediately heads for Rob, who is without a press pass. I claim him, and finally get close enough to Lee to tape his conversation with the Boston press.

Lee: "...A club that wins 25 in a row is due to lose ten in a row, so we're only going to win eight and lose one. Win eight and lose one – that way we don't get cocky, and stay at a nice keel... The trouble is – if you win all the games at home, when there comes a time when you lose, (and) the fans in Boston have a tendency to jump off the roof and things like that – a very precarious breed, so you have to handle them with kid gloves...

Is that something it took you a while to find out?

Lee: No, I learned that the first day I came down the turnpike and asked directions.

A question about the game drew this reply:

Lee: "My arm says, 'Bill, it's tired. You haven't missed a start since spring training, you've thrown more innings than you ever have before (at this point in a season).' It says, 'You know, give yourself a break. Go to California, take a couple of weeks off...'"

How does your arm tell you when it wants to throw again?

Lee: "It doesn't speak English. It speaks ancient Greek."

Despite the pace this team has set so early in the season, you haven't put much distance between you and the Yankees...

Lee: "Doesn't matter."

...Are you surprised?

Lee: "No, we never expected to. They – are – 'the World Champions, you – know. They'll play good. They're a good ball club. They've got a lot of horses, names that go way into the night – even the guys they reactivate, guys like Messersmith."

Will this team have to win more than 100 games this year (in order to win their division)?

Lee: "Not necessarily. Can't tell."

Why not?

Lee: "I hated statistics. Hated it, it was boring. Saw no point in it.

Well, this isn't statistics. This is winning and losing.

Lee: "Well, it's statistics. I just – all you gotta do is play good ball, play the Yankees .500 over the course of the season, and continue to play just the way we're doing – nice, steady, not to get up too high, not to get down too low. Just play it the way you feel. Enjoy yourself. Go out and have a good time. Guys don't put too much pressure on themselves. Everyone picks each other up. That's how things go. That's a good year. That's a good team.

"The Bill Lee Prescription?"

Lee: "Well, yea. That's it – just enjoy yourself. Go out and have fun. That's the way I've always played it." Reflecting on that evening's game, he continues, "I didn't have much fun today. My stomach hurt because my arm hurt. I wouldn't listen to my arm, but I've gotta listen to my stomach. I've eaten a lot of halipenioes before eating some bad food. That's the way it goes."

Is there a direct connection between the stomach and the arm?

Lee: Huh? (Lee is now eating watermelon, two pieces

(Continued on page 14)

Top, left to right: Bill Lee in serious remorse after losing to Toronto, 6 - 2; Kids reach for the stars; Lee heads for the shower; A Yankee fan.

Vermont's Finest ALL NATURAL Ice Cream

ben & jerry's homemade

Incredible Ice Cream

Amazing Crêpes

Lunch, Light Dinner and Snacks

Corner of St. Paul and College St.
Mon-Thurs 11:30-10PM Fri&Sat 11:30-12 Sun 2-10PM

BICYCLES

VISTA

Carrera
Sport
•Pacer
•Criterium
Silver Shadow
$115.00–$235.00

WINDSOR

•International
•Carrera
Super Carrera
Competition
Pro
$175.00–$600.00

RALEIGH

Rampar 1027
Rampar R–1
•Grand Prix
Super Course
Competition G–S
$125.00–$365.00

• Ladies Frames Available

We also carry 3 Speeds by Raleigh & Vista

SUMMER CLOTHING

SHORTS
Stretch and corduroy shorts from Sportif.
comfortable & functional , men's & ladies sizes.

BATHING SUITS
By Arena & Head.

SHELLS & RAINWEAR Core-Tex Breathable Rainwear,
60-40 and 65-35 Shells, Waterproof Nylon Jackets & Pants

TEE SHIRTS and SANDALS

RIDING CLOTHING
Shorts, Shoes, Jerseys, Rain Ponchos, Helmets, Gloves.

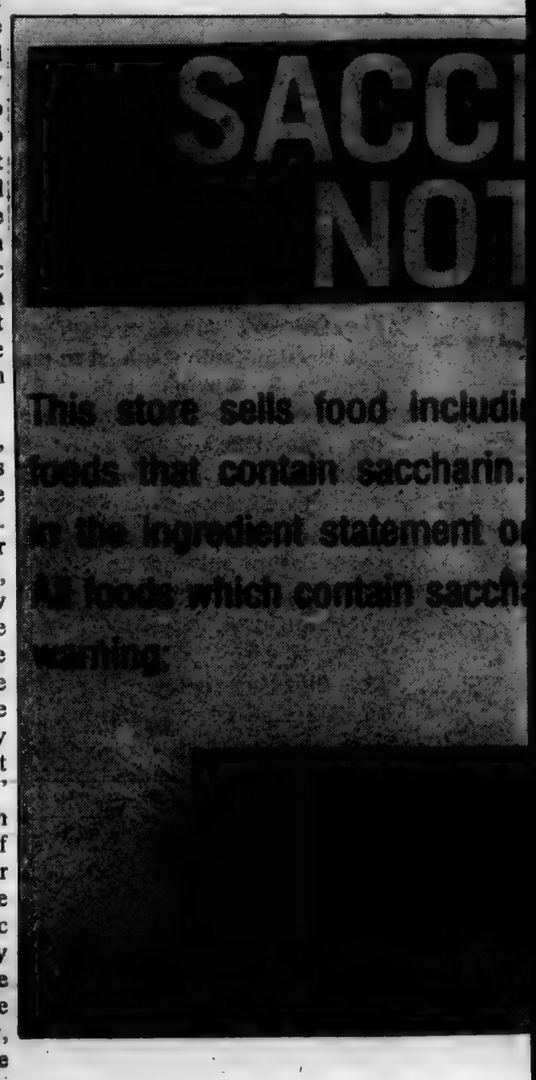
the Ski Rack



9-5 Saturday
9:30-9:00 Friday
9:30-6:00 Monday-Thursday

85 Main St. 658—3313

Summer Health

Artificial Sweeten

Guard Yo

As summer approaches, we're enthusiastically awaiting those days of sunbathing at the beaches or in the parks. Out come the shorts and swimsuits. But for many of us who've added a few pounds here and there over the winter, this may be a discouraging beginning. So with strong resolution, we try to lose some of this weight and get back into shape. Joggers and tennis players abound. Those after meal desserts become a thing of the past and periodic fasts are common. Along with this, many people substitute diet soft drinks for the more common sugar-laden counterparts.

As an alternative to sugar, whose value as a nutrient has been hotly contested, many have turned to artificial sweeteners. Originally used as sugar substitutes for diabetics, artificial sweeteners are now being consumed in large quantities by dieters and the general populace, who ignore labeling stating that the sweetener "should be used only by persons who must restrict their intake of ordinary sweets." Concern has frequently been expressed regarding the safety of the widespread use of sugar substitutes. Presently, saccharine is one of the few synthetic sweeteners allowed for use by the FDA but according to the Federal Register even saccharine may soon be banned. Already, products containing saccharine are required to show the following warning: "use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharine which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

What is the evidence against these artificial sweeteners? Cyclamates, an additive 100 times sweeter than table sugar, had been used regularly in foods since 1944. In 1968, however, experiments were done that showed that rats fed cyclamates developed bladder tumors and testicular degeneration. Meanwhile, the FDA found that cyclamates were of little value in weight control. They therefore had no choice but to remove the chemical from the GRAS list. (Generally Regarded as Safe). In 1970 after a year of debate, cyclamates were banned. The ban on cyclamates prompted a search for safe alternatives. The most controversial, and now one of the most popular, is saccarine. Discovered in 1879, it is derived from coaltar and was used as a sweetener for diabetics. Recently, saccharine has found its way into all types of "low-cal" food and beverage. It is about 400 times sweeter than table sugar. Popular diet soft drinks containing saccharine may be equivalent in level of sweeteness to nine teaspoons of sugar. It cannot be used in cooked products because of an undesirable aftertaste. Also, since saccharine lacks the ability to impart density or "mouthfeel" to soft drinks which sugar can do, gums must

Rockport

California Squash

Rockport Oilskin for softness and longer wear, molds to the shape of your foot for great "personal fit."

Men's from $38
Ladies'
from $32.50

SUNDANCE
A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

s Come Under Fire

r Health

ARIN
CE
st beverages will find st foods
ll soon

be added to beverages to avoid a watery taste. These additives may present potential hazards to our health. Saccharine's removal from the GRAS list and the action taken to ban it are based on studies showing the development of tumors in rats fed saccharine.

A substitute which has the approval of the FDA is xylitol, a sweet tasting alcohol. A popular chewing gum additive, it has roughly the same number of calories and the same taste as table sugar. Consequently, it offers little value to dieters. Yet xylitol's benefits may include aid in the prevention of cavities. The additive has proved helpful to diabetics as well.

Two other additives are under less favorable consideration by the FDA:

– If used like sugar, aspartame's maximum daily caloric intake would equal about four calories a day. Although it is acceptable for use in dry form, it can not be used at a high temperature in baked goods. Also, it can not be used in beverages and canned goods, as it undergoes decomposition over time. Our bodies generally seem to accept the substance, but lately attention has been drawn to its potential dangers. On the whole, then, aspartame doesn't seem like a good alternative.

– A natural sweetener extract from serendipity trees in Africa could prove to be an alternative sweetener. Monellin is 2,000 times sweeter than sugar, and is therefore ideal for dieting. It's sensitivity to high temperature and certain environments limits its potential use, however. Additionally, the Monellin's safety has not yet been confirmed.

A statistical study by Canada's National Cancer Institute supports the relationship between bladder cancer in men and the intake of artificial sweeteners. It seems that on the whole, artificial sweeteners may not be a wise way to lose those couple of pounds. As a matter of fact, Dr. Jean Mayer, formerly a nutritionist at Harvard, has said that the use of saccharine "has no long-term demonstrable effect on weight reduction." But why do we need sweeteners at all when between sugar and artificial sweeteners, the consumer risks numerous dangers to his/her health. Wouldn't it be more prudent to enjoy nature's natural sweet flavor, as found in her fruits. We would all be better off if we curtailed our dependence on sweetened foods in any form, "natural" or "artificial." As far as weight control is concerned, following a modest well-balanced diet while exercising daily is the best method.

—Barry Gustin

Editor's Note: References are available by written request.

To keep you rollin' through the summer. . .

E&E TIRE

with extra effort service

Quality to provide a safe ride combined with prices that are easy to live with is what makes E & E TIRE special.

Come down and check us out!
152 Riverside Ave. 864-7759

Slip into Something Comfortable... With Sandals from Bass.

Bass Wedge
Closeouts

Save $6
Only $14.95

Bass Raft
Factory Rejects

Save $6
Only $14.95

Many Other Savings and Styles Available.

BASS SHOE
FACTORY OUTLET

1305 Williston Road South Burlington
Open Daily 9-9 Sundays 12-5

Downtown Peddlers Get Reprieve

Peddlers get a second chance.

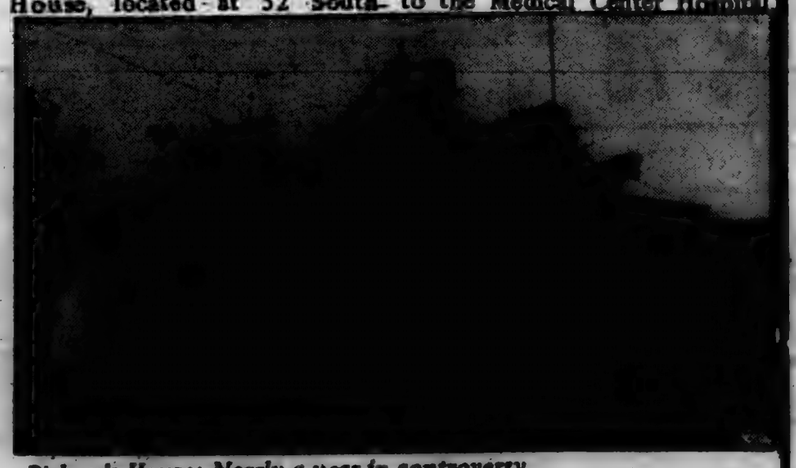
Burlington voters, in a light turn out, overwhelmingly voiced their approval of peddlers plying their wares in the downtown Queen City and specifically on Church Street. By a margin of 1,401 to 840, voters overturned the Board of Aldermen's February decree refusing to renew or grant new licenses to peddlers in the central business area.

The June 7 special referendum was called when peddlers collected thousands of signatures on petitions challenging the Aldermen's action. Despite the outcome, aldermen will be able to rewrite the old peddlers' ordinance, but a satisfactory compromise is more than likely. Peddlers' fees will probably be raised, goods sold restricted to handicrafts and food, and the number of peddlers allowed in an area reduced.

Last February, the aldermen moved to limit peddlers' activities in response to complaints that: (1) there were too many peddlers; (2) peddlers took up too much space on sidewalks and parking spaces; (3) peddlers competed directly with downtown merchants who were paying taxes, rent, and salaries; (4) stands were left on streets overnight; (5) dogs were tied to meters and light posts.

Even so, voters indicated that the peddlers add a folksy, friendly touch to shopping downtown.



On June 8, after their victory, peddlers seeking licenses under the old ordinance were turned away by City Clerk Frank Wagner. Peddlers, Wagner said, would be allowed to sell without licenses on Church Street until a new ordinance is drafted. Alderman William Blanchard, head of the Ordinance Committee, said a new ordinance will be written soon.

Desmond Fitzgerald

Bishop's House: Back to Square One

Months of legal battling wound up in a temporary stalemate when the Vermont Supreme Court "remanded for further proceedings" the fate of the Bishop's House back to Chittenden County Superior Court. For technical reasons, the high court voided an injunction against the Medical Center Hospital's planned demolition of the house to build a 150-space parking lot. At the same time, the court threw out an Environmental Board ruling requiring the hospital to seek an Act 250 development permit. The Supreme Court claimed that Superior Court Judge Wynn Underwood should have determined himself whether an Act 250 permit was needed. The Environmental Board, the verdict read, violated its own rules in neglecting to send written notice to all interested parties when the Board heard testimony on the Act 250 question last October in Manchester Center. The Burlington Planning Commission and the Chittenden County Regional Planning Commission were phoned and both expressed no intention of attending the hearing.

Judge Underwood had issued a temporary injunction against the hospital last September, and asked the Environmental Board to rule if an Act 250 permit was required for demolition. The Board voted 4 to 1 that a permit was needed because: (1) the hospital owns more than ten affected acres within a five-mile radius; (2) potential traffic congestion; and (3) for aesthetic and historic reasons. Judge Underwood then ordered the hospital to apply for an Act 250 permit, but the hospital appealed the injunction and the House, located at 52 South Williams St., is adjacent to the DeGoesbriand Unit which the hospital sold to UVM for $3.1 million last November. The University is using the DeGoesbriand to house the University Health Center, a group of doctors from the Medical College. In addition, some space is being leased back to the Medical Center Hospital.

Bishop's House: Nearly a year in controversy

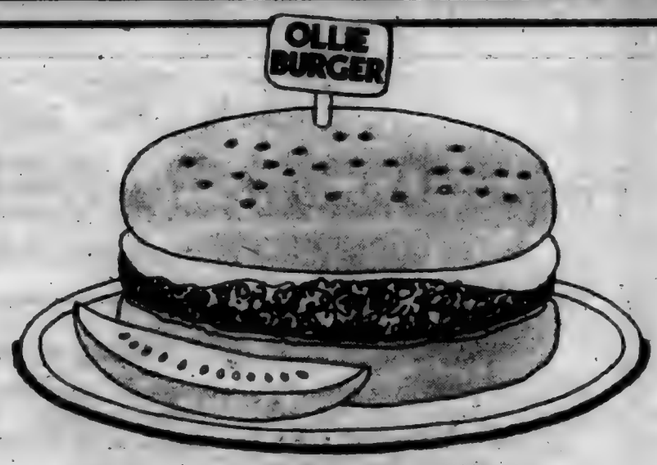
Act 250 decree to the Vermont Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court decision will not take effect until June 27, when the hospital will be technically free to raze the house. But the Committee to Save the Bishop's House will return to Superior Court to seek a new injunction against demolition, according to committee H. Thomas Andersen. And the case could once again land before the Supreme Court.

The 124-year-old Bishop's House was purchased by the University of Vermont (MCHV).

The MCHV purchased the Bishop's House a year and a half ago for $800,000 along with parking space beside the DeGoesbriand. With plans to pave the Bishop's House, the MCHV is in effect a tenant building a parking lot for its landlord (UVM). As a state agency, UVM could not have demolished the house without an extensive review – possibly including Act 250 hearings.

Desmond Fitzgerald

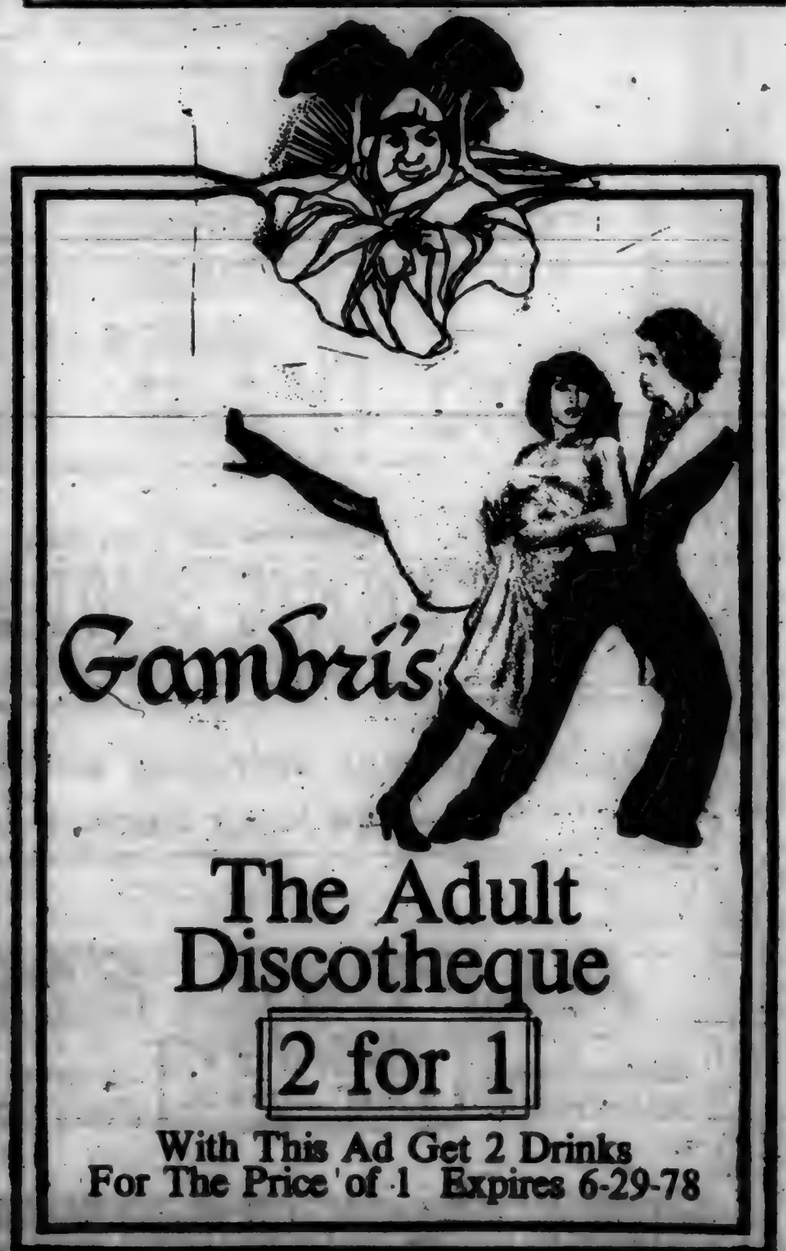


Summer Reading?

The Best Choice Is...

Wit & Wisdom Bookshop

100 Dorset St., South Burlington, Vt



Eat an Ollieburger...

and put something out of this world into your mouth. Back in 1934 a guy named Ollie Gleichenhaus started to perfect the world's greatest hamburger. Today at LUMS, we call that hamburger "The Ollieburger." And it's so good, it's out of this world. The Ollieburger's made with a special secret blend of 29 herbs and spices. USDA choice beef char-broiled on both sides at once. And it even weighs a big ½ of a pound. Treat your tastebuds to an Ollieburger. Treat yourself to LUMS.

LUMS No one else will give you MORE MORE MORE MORE

WILLISTON ROAD NEAR THE AIRPORT

Gambrii's

The Adult Discotheque

2 for 1

With This Ad Get 2 Drinks For The Price of 1 Expires 6-29-78

Your
One Stop

TENNIS HEADQUARTERS

Try Before You Buy!
DEMO RACKETS
available in all major lines

Super Selection of
TENNIS RACKETS by
Head, Davis, Dunlop, Wilson, Prince, Donnay, Yamaha, Bancroft

| TENNIS TRAINERS | TENNIS PRESSES | TENNIS BAGS |
|---|---|---|
| $12.00 | $1.80 | $12 up |

New Selection Just Arrived
TENNIS CLOTHING by
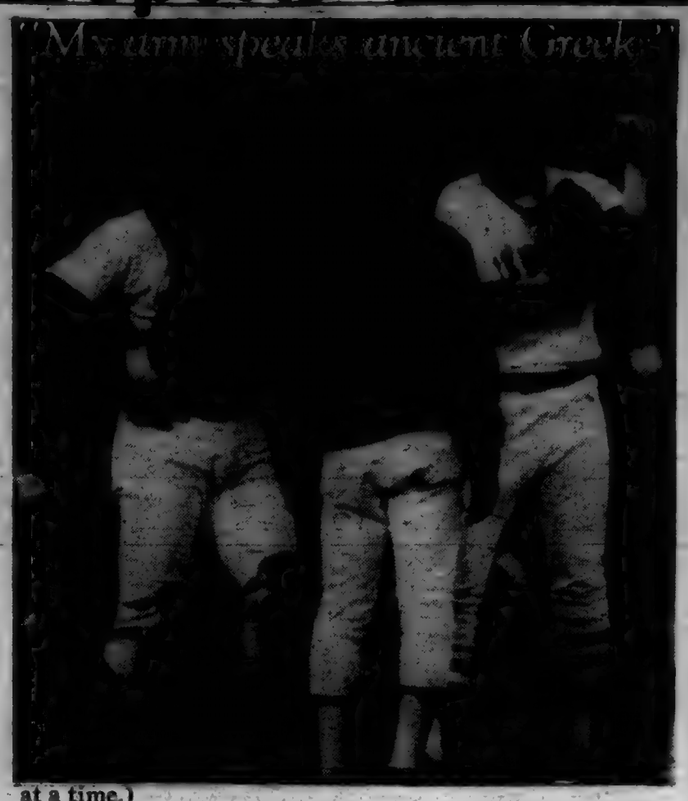
Bogner, Wilson, Profile, Duofold, Head, White Stag, The Line, Jelenk, Billie Jean King, Robert Bruce, Adidas, Court Casuals, Trackwise, Court I

| TENNIS BALLS | TENNIS HEAD BANDS | TENNIS WRIST BANDS |
|---|---|---|
| $2.70 | $.90 | $.75 |



Comfort for Your Feet
TENNIS SHOES by
Adidas, Puma, Tretorn, Bata

Custom Racket Stringing and Racket Repair
— 24 Hour Service —

ALPINE SHOP

Williston Road So. Burlington | OPEN DAILY 9 A.M. — 9 P.M. | Corner of So. Winooski and Cherry Downtown Burlington at a time.)

Is there a direct connection between the stomach and the arm?

Lee: Yea, I think so.

Why don't you eat something we can spell?

Lee: "What? Hallipenioes? That's easy to spell. I can't spell English words, like shrimp, chance. Anything (with) double consonant sounds I have a hard time with!" Lee looks bored. "I'm terrible in phonetics. I pronounce words wrong all my life. I spelled them the way they sounded, but I was saying them wrong. I'm getting better though."

Again, the conversation returned to the evening's game:

What exactly was your problem tonight?

Lee: It's called fatigue. Lactic acid build up. If you have lactic acid build up, you don't get rid of your waste products in time, you don't recover in five days, you develop inflamation. Inflamation is a combination of two day old lactic acid mixing with co-enzyme A, which is at the synapse of your motor nervous reflex..."

Jesus Christ...

Lee: "...and that causes inflamation or tendonities, or whatever you want to call it."

10:20 Lee, looking very satisfied, leaves the clubhouse. 'At least I have an article,' says I.

10:21 Lee walks back in the doorway and says, "they'd never understand me if I said 'my fucking shoulder hurt!" after which he turns to me and Swanson and says "I never answered your questions, did I?" Bill Lee is a damn good man.

Your contract expires after this season, right?

Lee: "After this season."

Are you considering the free agent draft?

Lee: "No, I would never go that route, I don't – I believe in it for certain people who are in the economics of American situations like that. But I'm not in that kind of economics. I'm more into a steady organic type of thing. I'd like to get a nice farm out in the Seattle area, or even in this area if I can handle the winters. But, I have a difficult time handling the winters here because I'm too much of a hyperactive, want to be outside type of person. But I don't want to be outside in the cold."

Should you be selected for a position on the All-Star team, a team which will be managed by a man you've criticized in the past, Billy Martin, would you accept?

Lee: It's not a matter of accepting or anything like that. You have a job to do and the All Star game is part of the game. It pays for our pension, and it's an honor, and if not anything else, a duty.

10:25 Bill's looking itchy.

What has happened to the spacemen image? Are you just tired of being called a 'Spaceman'?

Lee: "It's like anything else. If it happens more than three times, it becomes boring. You want change in your life. You want changes but you want things to progress and go on – like evolution...

10:30 We all shake hands and say thanks for everything. I was impressed.

11:00 The subway to Leachmere stops in the middle of the tracks between two stations. The guy sitting in front of us says if he had his magnum, he'd "blow the driver's head off." Not unusual, except the man had a patch on his denim jacket bearing two guns, a flag, and the instription "It's a right." Oh, Boston...

Afterthoughts: Swanson now has a favoride baseball player: Captain Yaz. I was more amazed by the youth of the Red Sox and of major league players at large, half of whom look like college students. Also, the attitude of some of the players prompted memories of my Little League team. "Yep," agreed Swanson, "they're just big guys playing a little kid's game, but they're too wrapped up in it to notice." I couldn't have phrased it better myself.

SILENCE IS DEADLY.

When someone drinks too much and then drives, it's the silence that kills. Your silence.

It kills your friends, your relatives, and people you don't even know. But they're all people you could save.

If you knew what to say, maybe you'd be less quiet. Maybe fewer people would die.

What you should say is, "I'll drive you home." Or, "Let me call a cab." Or, "Sleep on my couch tonight."

Don't hesitate because your friend may have been drinking only beer. Beer and wine can be just as intoxicating as mixed drinks.

And don't think that black coffee will make him sober. Black coffee never made anyone sober. Maybe it would keep him awake long enough to have an accident. But that's about all.

The best way to prevent a drunk from becoming a dead drunk is to stop him from driving.

Speak up. Don't let silence be the last sound he hears.

DRUNK DRIVER, DEPT. Y A-1
BOX 2345
ROCKVILLE, MARYLAND 20852

I don't want to remain silent.
Tell me what else I can do.

My name is:_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip____

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION • NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

CASH

24 hours everyday

Burlington Savings Bank

Use the PRIMETIME 24 hour automatic teller machines with your Vermont Heritage account at every location of the Burlington Savings Bank. Come in for a demonstration.

open your Student Account now and be ready for next Fall

- ☐ UNLIMITED PERSONALIZED CHECKING
- ☐ STATEMENT SAVINGS EARN 5¼% annual interest, compounded daily, credited monthly on savings
- ☐ PRIMETIME 24 HOUR AUTOMATIC TELLER MACHINES FOR BANKING SERVICE ANYTIME, DAY OR NIGHT...WEEKENDS AND HOLIDAYS.

no minimum balance required!

Branches in Downtown Burlington – North Burlington
South Burlington - Essex Junction - Winooski
Brattleboro - Middlebury - Insured by FDIC - 658-1810

To keep you rollin' through the summer...

Summertime and the livin' is easy, tunes are jumpin' and the culture is high and mighty in Vermont. From church suppers and state fairs to theatre and music festivals there is always something happening to keep both the light-hearted and the aesthete well entertained.

With warm green days and cool refreshing nights, the emphasis is definitely on the out-of-doors. The atmosphere is relaxed, aided by thousands of "summer people" who flock to the "Beckoning Country." Usually when someone or something big comes to Vermont, hungry culture vultures swarm to fill gyms, auditoriums, and theatres. But this summer, the hits will just keep on coming, and residents and tourists alike will face the enviable dilemma of having to choose from several worthy events each day (check the Summer Arts and Amusements Calendar page 28-29)

After the cultural doldrums of May and early June, the summer season gets under way beneath the 300-seat yellow and white striped tent above Burlington Square Mall. Beginning June 22, Top of the Square, Inc., will feature ten weeks of acts ranging from improvisational theatre to musical comedy, bluegrass music, children's shows, and dance companies. Top of the Square, a non-profit group, is the brainchild of former UVM hockey All-American Tim O'Connell and his wife, Kathy. The Top has found widespread enthusiasm in Burlington, including the blessing of Mayor Gordon Paquette. "With the support of the business and arts communities," the Mayor said, "Top of the Square will make the Church Street area a more pleasant place to be, and will keep downtown Burlington bustling with excitement."

VERMONT SYMPHONY

Imagine the discordant strains of pre-concert warm-up, the buzzing of the audience. The concertmaster strikes an A on the Steinway concert grand and all sounds from flute to bass merge to one. The conductor proudly strides on stage; his hands are raised, all is silent; then with a downward motion, he releases the orchestra into an energy of sound!

Led by Argentine-born director Efrain Guigui, the Vermont Symphony Orchestra has performed a diverse selection of outstanding classical works. Continuing in this tradition, the VSO is offering 15 full orchestra and seven ensemble summer concerts throughout the state.

The VSO is hardly the stereotype of a "stiff" group of professional musicians. Maestro Guigui's informal style and willingness to inform the public about the VSO are evidence of the love he holds for his music. Approximately 70% of the VSO members are from Vermont, with the rest hailing from New England. Currently, auditions are held to add new talent, although Vermonters have always been given preference. Guigui hopes to see a time when the orchestra consists entirely of Vermonters, with members coaching prospects from the state's student population.

Founded by the late Alan Carter in 1933, the early VSO was comprised of storekeepers, junkmen, and a variety of other working class dedicated to the production of fine music. Since then, despite perennial financial difficulties, the VSO has expanded to form a Chamber Orchestra of the symphony's elite, a string quarter, and a Festival Orchestra for Opera and Ballet.

Financing a 62 member orchestra is no simple task. Ticket sales cover about half of the symphony's $185,000 budget; grants from the Vermont Council on the Arts, the National Endownment for the Arts, and the state legislature fund roughly 30%. The difference is made up by donations from private citizens, who become either $50 patrons or $30 sponsors.

After a financial crisis in the early 70's, executive director Joel Gratwick, music director Guigui and numerous volunteers have turned things around to where growth is now a real possibility. While complaints remain that rehearsal time is limited due to travelling time and

(Continued next page)

R.W. Hunt's Presents
Mary McCaslin & Jim Ringer
One Night Only
Wednesday
June 21 · $3
At 8 & 11
Leading innovator in vibes playing today.
Gary Burton Quartet
Tuesday & Wednesday · June 27 & 28 · $5
All tickets on sale now.
HUNT'S
101 Main 863·9850

THE VANTAGE PRESS
AND INSTA-PRINT
COMPLETE
OFFSET PRINTING
BOOKLETS A SPECIALITY
115 North St.
Burlington
863-4998 or 862-2125

Ladies Nite
Thursday
9 'till closing!

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30

Monday night
shot & draft
for only $1.25
Backgammon and Cribbage Sets
what ale's you
152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

Summer Arts

musicians expenses, there is talk of a new series which could mean up to five or six different concert programs a year. The Symphony's recent move to Burlington should provide an enlarged financial base necessary for numerous high quality performances.

The VSO will present a "Celebrate the 4th" Pops Concert on July 2 at Shelburne Farms. Featuring vocalist Betty Allen, the program includes selections from Bizet, Borodin, Aaron Copeland, Scott Joplin, Stephen Foster, and others. The concert will be held picnic-style on the spacious lawn in front of splendid 70-room Tudor Shelburne House overlooking the lake. An acoustical shell will be set up to enhance listening quality. Gates open at five p.m. and the concert begins at eight o'clock. In case of rain, the concert will be held in the nearby Coach Barn. Tickets are $6 for adults, $3 for children.

For a list of concerts and ticket info, call 864-5741 or stop by the Symphony Office at 163 South Willard St.

ST. MICHAEL'S PLAYHOUSE

St. Michael's Playhouse opens its 27th season on June 20 with Neil Simon's comedy The Sunshine Boys. The Playhouse, inhabited by the Professional Actor's Equity Company, is located in the air conditioned McCarthy Arts Center of St. Michael's College in Winooski. This is a comfortable, acoustically balanced theatre which can only add to the entertaining line-up of modern comedies, which include: Play It Again, Sam, Story Theatre, Odd Man In, and Absurd Person Singular by the British Playwright Alan Ayckburn. All seats are reserved. Tickets are $5 or $20 for 5 shows. Subscription deadline is July 1. For info call 655-2000 ext. 2507.

SUGARBUSH SERIES

On Saturday afternoons throughout the summer, the Sugarbush Ski Area in Warren will host the Green Mountain Music Series. Performers include: Tom Rush and Taj Mahal, July 1; Leo Kottke and Richie Havens, July 2; Maynard Ferguson, July 16; Harry Chapin, July 22; Phoebe Snow and Gato Barbieri, July 29; Chuck Mangione, August 6; Pete Seeger and Arlo Guthrie, August 12; Chet Atkins, August 19; and Twelfth Night is a wise choice and should provide numerous laughs and fine entertainment.

Othello stands with Hamlet, King Lear, and Macbeth as one of Shakespeare's great tragedies. From its brilliant opening to its tragic close, this tightly knit play emits a high concentration of emotion and action. The three main characters, Iago (the villain), Othello, and Desdemona constantly hold the stage to heighten the destruction of Othello and Desdemona through the evil scheming of Iago. Othello and Iago are two of the most powerful personalities in Shakespeare and should make for a moving performance. Tickets are $5 for evening shows; $4 on Mondays; and $2 for matinees. For tickets call 656-2094 or stop by the Royall Tyler Box Office open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

A memory from last year's Two Gents:
Neave Rake, Michael Kluger, Deborah

SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Hear ye Bards of Burlington! The Royall Tyler Theatre of the University of Vermont will host the 20th season of the Champlain Shakespeare Festival. Under the direction of Edward J. Feidner, chairman of the UVM Theatre Department, the Festival is staging the comedy Twelfth Night and the renowned tragedy Othello. Due to a financial pinch, the Festival is producing only two instead of the customary three plays. Still, the Festival manages to present a diversity of styles and interpretations which keep Shakespeare as fresh and universal of message as all English teachers claim he is. The Festival commences July 6 and runs through August 12.

Twelfth Night along with As You Like It and Much Ado About Nothing is one of the "Joyous Comedies." The theme is love – in its folly, conventions, curiosities – mixed in with mistaken identities, trickery, and perhaps the best Fool in all of Shakespeare.

Kenny Rogers, September 3. Shows start at 4 p.m.; seating capacity is 5,000. Ticket prices and musicians for remaining dates will be announced later.

BLUEGRASS FESTIVAL

Ever popular around Burlington, bluegrass music will be played by the best at the 8th Annual Green Mountain Country Banjo Festival at the Champlain Valley Fairgrounds in Essex Junction on July 2, 3, and 4.

Heading the cast is the legendary Bill Monroe, the acknowledged "Father of Bluegrass." In 1939, Monroe, along with Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs, created this uniquely American sound which has since gained a wide and enthusiastic following. A star of Nashville's Grand Old Opry for 38 years, Monroe was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1970.

Right behind Monroe is Vassar Clements universally recognized as the leading bluegrass fiddler. Clements has shared his talents with everyone from Mother Maybelle Carter to the Boston Pops and the Grateful Dead.

Also appearing are Peter Rowan and the Star-Spangled Washboard Band, and Joe Val and the New England Bluegrass Boys.

Local talent alone would make for a good festival. On hand will be: Pine Island, Dealer's Choice, Banjo Dan and the Midnite Plowboys, Red Clover Bluegrass, and others. Shows will be held in the afternoon and evening. Tickets are $20 in advance with camping, $12 for all three days without camping, and $6 per day. For more info call 863-4701.

VERMONT JAZZ FESTIVAL

Traditionally plagued with wet weather, the Third Annual Vermont Jazz Festival is moving from Glen Ellen to Killington Ski Area. The promoters, Dalar, Inc., are planning a two day event on July 29 and 30 as part of the summer long Festival of the Arts at Killington. If the prospective performers show up, this should be a get together to remember. Heavies include Ray Charles, Herbie Mann, Chuck Mangione, Sarah Vaughn, and others.

Tickets are $13 a day $22.50 for both days. Overnight camping will be available for two day ticket holders, with additional camping off the mountain. An estimated 8,000 jazz enthusiasts are expected to attend each day.

The Vermont Symphony Orchestra: Efrain Guigui, Conductor.

CRAFTSBURY COMMON FIDDLER'S CONTEST

Used to be a nice old time sitting on the Green, sipping a cold beer and listening to the tunes. Then the New York Times featured the Contest in its Sunday Travel Section and the Contest hasn't been the same since. Recent crowds have ranged from 8-12,000 and the Contest is no longer held on the Green. Still, Craftsbury is a pretty, white clapboard village, and if you get there early enough to get a good seat, the music is well worth the journey. This year's contest falls on July 29, the same day as the Jazz Festival – a difficult choice to make.

(Continued on page 29)

LEVI'S

LEVI'S® TERRY . . .

Terry play things. For you to zip into. And zip around town in. Or the country. Or the beach.

Terry is your style, babe. Pop your shorts on. And a tube or Tee. For lots of cool. The jacket covers it all — all by Levi. And you thought Levi meant jeans . . . now it means terry, too.

Just for you. Jump into play things. You're gonna love 'em. Shown: jac $33.00, shorts $13. Pants (not shown) $22.00. In white & navy. Way In Shop on Main.

It's an experience
MAGRAM'S
• DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON •

Downtown's New Downhome Taste

Crates of fresh cantaloupe and strawberries – in this day and age of freeze-dried and frozen convenience foods, what does fresh fruit have to do with ice cream? Everything at Ben and Jerry's, Burlington's newest eating establishment, located in the old filling station on the corner of St. Paul and College Streets.

Proprietors Ben Cohen and Jerry Greenfield opened Ben and Jerry's May 6 and things have been churning ever since. Committed to quality and natural, homemade products, Ben and Jerry use only fresh fruit (fresh frozen fruit for their yogurt) to make all of their ice cream on the premises. Using an old fashioned method of ice cream freezing, they make a finished product which contains considerably less air than most commercial ice creams, resulting in an improved texture.

A visit to Ben and Jerry's can easily involve a major decision: their entire bill of fare includes your basic sugar cone (actually it's made with honey), regular sundaes, assorted ice cream delights, an impressive list of dessert and lunch/dinner crêpes, soup and salad, in addition to frozen yogurt and fresh fruit. Hand-packed pints and quarts of ice cream are available, as well as custom-made ice cream cakes. Their hot fudge is homemade, their whipped cream real, and their lemonade and orange juice freshly squeezed.

The atmosphere at Ben and Jerry's serves only to enhance their products – lots of light and air and subtle artistic touches. While inside seating is available, weather permitting, there is plenty of space to mill around outside, with chairs and tables to sit at or more casual seating in the form of old railroad ties.

Currently, their total stock consists of approximately twenty rotating flavors; on any given day, one may be faced with the prospect of ten or so choices. It's definitely difficult to decide; Ben and Jerry's infectious "let's give it a try" spirit quickly descends upon one, forcing you to make never-before considerations. In addition to the good old stand-bys of vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, and coffee, their flavors range from a scrumptuous honey almond mist and delicate honey sweet cream to a very subtle mocha and fruit-flavorful honey banana. Even if you aren't particularly fond of a flavor such as banana, you have to be impressed by the quality of the product before you – it's the "real thing," from its 100% fresh Vermont cream, milks and eggs, down to the plentiful pieces of fresh banana.

Ben and Jerry, having opened their establishment in the spirit of experimentation, continue to invent new flavors, make necessary operational changes, and give thought to the direction their menu will take when fall comes. For the time being, Jerry is primarily responsible for the ice cream, while Ben creates the crêpes. They are anticipating an autumnal transition into more crêpe-making plus some hearty soup stocks and sandwiches.

As first time restauranteurs, Ben and Jerry are in the process of discovering exactly what being in the food business involves. If some things are uncertain, one thing is definite: they are enthusiastic, hard-working, and committed to offering their customers truly fresh and homemade products. If the line at Ben and Jerry's seems a little long and slow, it's only because as a fast-developing group of "regulars" line up and people are making difficult ice cream and crepes decisions, Ben and Jerry are discovering first-hand how to better organize and service their customers, and they do it all with genuine smiles.

(Ben and Jerry's is open seven days a week; weeknights until 10 p.m. and weekends until midnight.)

–Julie Davis

When you work up an appetite . . . Come to Finast!

Finast has all your favorite snacks ready . . . we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruits
- Your favorite cold beverages

and just about everything you can think of!

Visit

Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

Finast SUPERMARKETS

825 WILLISTON ST. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

Book Babble

Vermont-Read All About It

"Is this your first visit to Vermont?"

"My very first. I must say it's as beautiful as everybody says."

"Well yes, we like it."

John Gardner
October Light

Nowadays, everyone seems curious to find out about this special place called Vermont. To out-of-staters, Vermont is a place to vacation, ski, own a second home in case urban society crumbles, and admire the quaint scenery. Even Vermonters can't precisely explain what holds them among the hills and mountains. But all agree that Vermont is different from the "outside world;" still, how great the differences are is not always easy to measure.

Much of what you read about Vermont today is a myth, a dream, or nostalgia for a by-gone era. But ask any writer from John Gardner to Kurt Vonnegut and you will discover that Vermont makes excellent subject matter.

The mystique of this Yankee Kingdom was first popularized by Robert Frost, a sometime resident of Ripton. Frost, however, rarely referred to the state by name; his poems describe what Vermont contained: the land, people, sights, and seasons. Frost's Vermont hasn't passed completely. Traces of the slow, rural way of life can still be found, but the times have changed. Less than one-third of Vermonters are native born, farming has declined, and the automobile has replaced the horse. Recent bestsellers use and abuse the changing Vermont character and environment so that the "real" Vermont becomes a confusion of hippies and farmers living in outhouses!

Part of Vonnegut's latest novel, Slapstick, a whimsical tale of the future, takes place in an old mansion in Galen, Vermont (wherever that is). The hero, Dr. Wilbur Daffodil-11 Swain, grows up in the mansion with his sister while their multi-millionaire parents visit them occasionally. The two children are raised by a nurse, Oveta Cooper, "a bleak Yankee dumpling." To add to the dullness, the townsfolk of Galen "were simple country people who had never been outside Vermont. They had rarely ventured more than ten miles from Galen – and they were necessarily all related to one another, as inbred as Eskimoes." Sounds far-fetched perhaps, but ever so possible.

Dr. Swain opens his own hospital in Galen with "twenty horses. and wagons. and carts, and carriages, and sleighs." Ah, living in the past. Even Laurence Rockefeller in his Galen called Woodstock isn't that romantic.

Then Dr. Swain is elected to the US Senate from Vermont, an honor he takes lightly, for in his eyes Vermonters are unambitious "people of no distinction." Obviously, Vonnegut's Vermont would never grace the pages of Vermont Life; otherwise, what would the tourists think?

In contrast, John Gardner's novel, October Light, the 1977 National Book Award Winner, takes Vermont seriously. With Bennington as a backdrop, Gardner sensitively explores the mind, history, and image of the legendary tight-mouthed, tight-fisted Vermont farmer. James Page, age 70, has shot out his 80-year-old sister's TV and has chased her upstairs to her room. Fearing for her life, Sally refuses to come out and the war is on!

The older generation, in the autumn of their years, is nostalgic. Modern life disgusts James who is wrapped in the lore of Ethan Allen and the Green Mountain Boys. The old farmer has been embittered by the loss of both sons – one fell off a barn roof, the other hung himself (Vermont does have one of the highest suicide rates in the U.S.). James Page is loveless and stubborn, but very real. He speaks in the Yankee vernacular (suppah for supper) and steadfastly adheres to his life-long occupation: farming.

For Sally Page, Vermont alone does not satisfy her curiosity. She realizes there is more to the world, for better or worse, and passes her exile by reading a racy, pulp novel.

Gardner knows Vermont well, having taught at Bennington College for years. He successfully animates his characters amid the splendor of autumn, his insights are valuable, if somewhat sentimental. Gardner's Vermont is not a cultureless backwash of hill farmers. The people are friendly and willing to help; and some of them have worked in professions – doctors, teachers – and have travelled abroad. Even these lesser characters are real and add to the novel's authenticity. Gardner strives to be as objective as a scientist and fair as an umpire, but he can't hide his affection for his players.

October Light shows how love must see us through the transitions in Vermont and within ourselves. James and Sally are at last reconciled; life must go on, and better in peace than in war. Gardner has produced a portrait of humanity – both universal and particular – that sets October Light above most bestsellers and into the realm of literature.

********

Lisa Alther's Kinflicks lays open some of Vermont's unpleasantries and explodes many a Green Mountain myth. Part of the novel occurs in Stark's Bog, Vermont – hardly an inviting name. But Alther includes enough funny moments to make her story into a Vermont satire (something a native would never do).

Ginny, the heroine, first lives with a group of radical lesbians in a secluded white farm house, the basic back to nature, organic, communal trip. However, as might be expected, the urban refugee lesbians and the narrow-minded Stark's Boggers do not get along. The Boggers are a male-dominated clan of snowmobile fanatics: cloddish and tasteless. Of their 1800-vintage houses, Alther writes, "the Stark's Boggers has done their best to tear them down or cover them over with fluorescent plastic and neon tubing." Sadly, "it indicated a willingness to participate in modern American society." Unabashed, the lesbians open a birth control center because they see "women our own age, grossly overweight with no teeth and greasy hair, being dragged in four directions at once by as many small children." Not exactly rosy-cheeked farmer's daughters and ski bunnies.

By fate of plot, Ginny marries Ira Bliss IV, scion of the town's oldest family and a UVM grad. Ira is content with his life of selling insurance, dealing snowmobiles, and sex by calendar. As for Ira's family, "upon retirement, he (Mr. Bliss) and Ira's mother had sold half their acreage to buy a luxury condominium in Boca Ratan. The developers of the Bliss farm, Pots o' Gold, Inc., were building an Authentic Vermont Village, complete with pre-fab covered bridges and sugar shacks." Where did the loyalty to the land and Yankee pride go?

Life in Stark's Bog is as exciting as the name implies. Female topics of conversation progress from "(1) the weather; (2) one's children; (3) cooking; (4) the weather." Small wonder Ginny finally commits adultery and is kicked out of her house. Once she leaves Vermont, she has no intentions of returning.

Whether Vermont is as grim and unenlightened as Alther makes out is a moot point. As a sometime resident of Hinesburg, however, she may know from experience. Alther's female perspective on Vermont is wise and witty, and she does speak several truths of a state no longer totally removed from the mainstream of American materialism.

What Vermont needs next is a factory novel, a hotel novel, a small business novel, or a bureaucrat's confession to depict what life is like here for most. But, on second thought, it's more appealing to let the myths persist. After all, no one would deny that Vermont is a special place: its diversity is its mystique.

Curtis Haynes

A Gift Shop for Adults ...And Other Children

Toys
Decoratives
Gifts

Geppetto's

19 Church Street
(Next To Prestons)

beer THE ONLY wine
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
lowest prices largest selection
kegs soda

WE'RE WHERE YOU'RE AT!

ON WILLISTON ROAD
Monday-Thursday 8:30-5:00
Fridays til 6:00

Chittenden TRUST COMPANY
Member FDIC

Cyn Flicks

Brolin as Captain Brubaker: As convincing as an used car salesman

Deja Vu Schmaltz

IF I EVER SEE YOU AGAIN

Even in sap country like Vermont, If Ever I See You Again certainly pushes the limits. It can be dismissed in about the same manner one avoids a dreaded classmate during reunion weekend; curiosity compels one to take a quick look, but no more.

The movie is a saccharin and glossy package, suspiciously similar to the Madison Avenue world Bob Morrison (Joe Brooks) deals with everyday; this, if anything, is probably the essence of the movie. At times, the film is so hokey that it is in fact highly entertaining.

Pretty faces do not make good actresses, and in the true fashion of the Cybil Shepards of the modeling and movie industries, Shelley Hack (as Jennifer Corly) is nice to look at, but entirely lacking as a serious actress. She is Cinderella in Columbia Pictures' latest adult version of this childhood story. Like all good laxatives, this movie acts gently and effectively; if, for a change, you'd like to see something end happily, this could very well be your picture.

Jingle-writer Bob Morrison's quest for Jennifer Corly, the college sweetheart he has always loved and never forgotten is hardly of "mythic dimensions." There are, however, some classic flashbacks to New England collegiate life in the winter of 1966 — camel hair coats, Shetland sweaters, ivy-covered brick buildings, "announced visitors," and all. And for an interesting twist, it is she who had long ago indicated to him that she had no intentions of becoming involved in a serious relationship.

So they meet, awkwardly twelve years later. She is still the very essence of a slim, attractive college girl, only more polished and cinnamon-cool, looking better and more mysterious than ever. New York meets California on the beach and the waves pound and the hearts beat.

He wins and loses and wins her again, but not without scoring a Hollywood picture, the title song of which is "If Ever I See You Again." You guessed it! It just happened to be the song written twelve years ago by an incurably romantic and heart-throbbing Bob Morrison for his forever love Jennifer Corly. And she had never known.

Life is wonderful and beautiful on television ads, many of which song-writer Bob Morrison has created. If his ads are glamorous, why can't his life be? Whoever his fairy godmother is, she finally manages to send him off to the ball, bedecked with his enchanting princess and all.

—Julie Davis

CAPRICORN ONE

If you read the New York Daily News, you're going to love Capricorn One.

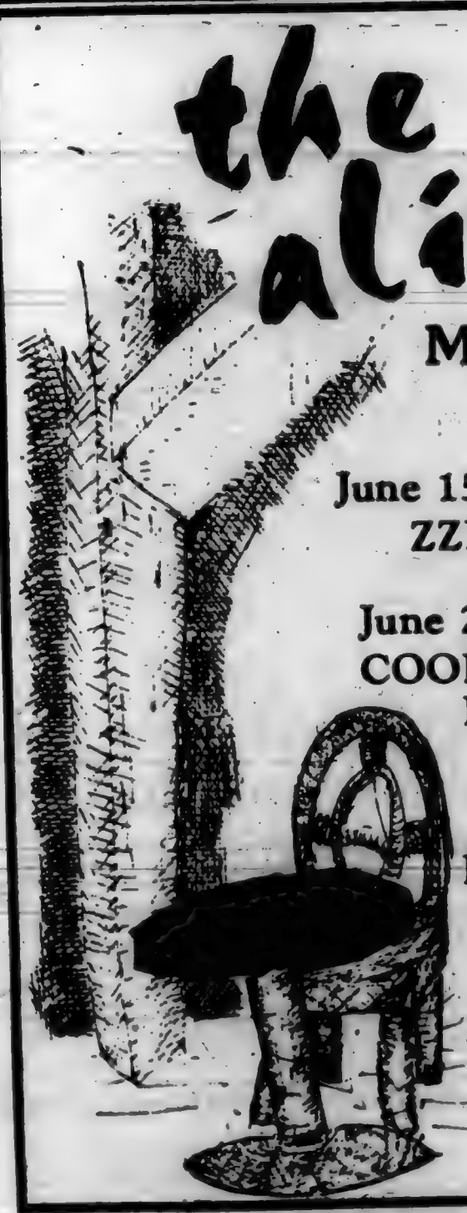
This film not only has car chases, federal corruption, air chases, science fiction undertones, death, and comedy, but some actual cliff hanging scenes as well. If it didn't lack a motorcycle chase scene, it could be a redneck's dream in living color.

With a script as meaty as an undernourished Biafran, and a cast slightly better off, Capricorn One, quickly evolves into the basic good guys vs. bad guys story. Three Mars bound astronauts are told five minutes before their flight is scheduled to lift off that their mission is going on, but without them, due to a faulty life support system in the craft which would have resulted in their deaths three weeks later. The astronauts are taken to an abandoned army base in northern Texas, where they are coerced into acting out a Martian landing and speaking to their wives, as if they were in space. The real fun doesn't begin, however, until the empty craft, which did fly to Mars, burns up during reentry in earth's atmosphere and our boys can't be placed back inside to meet their families and the crowds...



Elliot Gould as the typical grubby reporter shines throughout this "unique production." Hopefully, O.J. Simpson will stick to a career in football for a few more years. His acting is here slightly above terrible. Our real hero, James Brolin, seems dislocated, possibly due to the lack of motorcycle scenes. Hal Holbrook is adequate as the head of NASA, because anyone who takes this movie for more than a summertime laughter is under age ten, or whose IQ is about that high.

While it technically may be the worst show in town. Capricorn One will certainly please those who flocked to Smokey and the Bandit, and who are constantly checking the papers for the arrival of Burt's new classic, Hooper. It may be worth your money just to see Telly Savalas reduced to a stock actor. (Just like it may be worth buying a Daily News). If you are not interested in either, you might think twice before seeing this.

—R.F.

Coming Home Hits Home

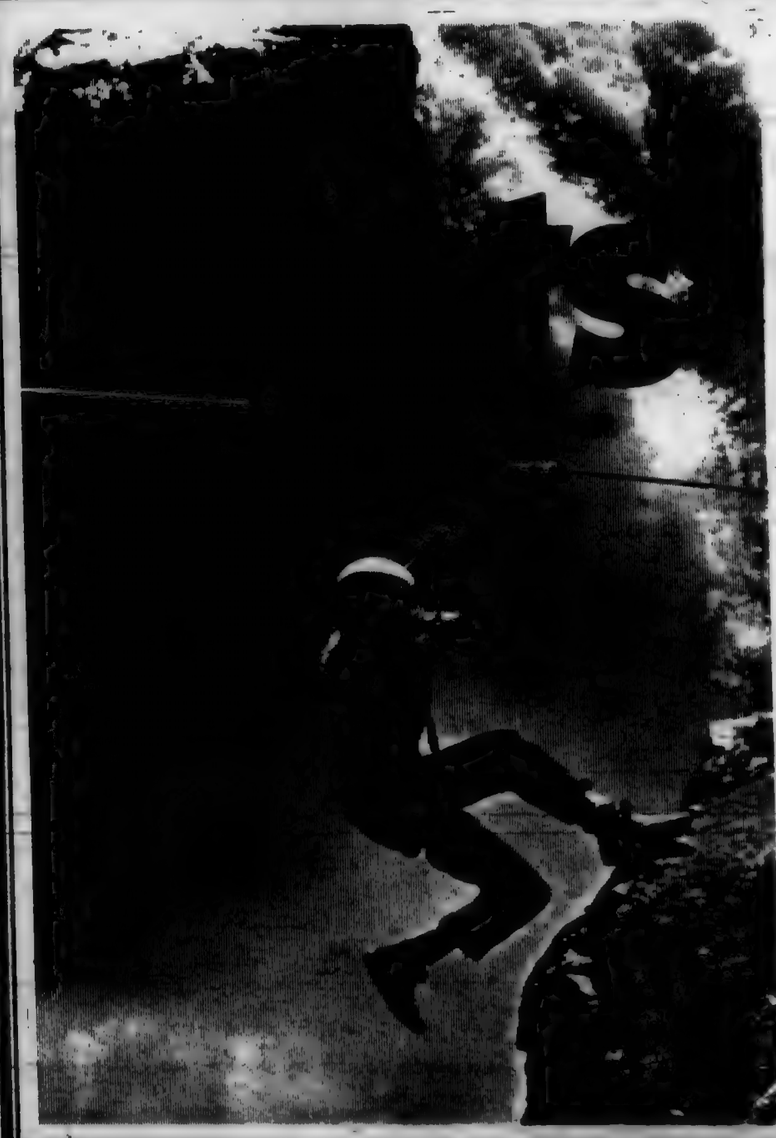
Coming Home is a Viet Nam War movie that came out too late. It would have been powerful propaganda for the anti-war movement. Still, Coming Home was a good movie to see on Memorial Day, lest we forget what happened to mentally and physically

the alibi



Middlebury's Night Spot

June 15-17
ZZEBRA

June 23&24
COOPER DARROW BLUES BAND

June 28-30 & July 1
BONGO MOON

FROG ALLEY
MIDDLEBURY,
VERMONT

Outward Bound is a shot of high adventure in the wilderness.

And a lot more.

It's a trip that'll show you what you're made of.

You can discover you can do almost anything you want—if you try.

Our 3-week experience in self-confidence sure isn't easy. But it might just last you the rest of your life.

Your first challenge: send for full information.

Name

Street

City State Zip

School

Phone

Check the courses that interest you

Canoeing — Desert expeditions —
White water rafting — Wilderness backpacking —
Sailing — Mountaineering —

Outward Bound, Dept. CG.
165 W. Putnam Ave.,
Greenwich, CT 06830.
Phone toll free (800) 243-8520.

No experience necessary. Outward Bound admits students of any sex, race, color and national or ethnic origin. We are a nonprofit organization. Scholarships available.

Outward Bound®
The course that never ends handicapped veterans attempting to re-adjust to American society. Coming Home is gripping — a rare movie that compels the audience to ponder and feel: it demands to be seen both for its message and acting impact.

Set in 1968, the film portrays the changes of Sally Hyde (Jane Fonda) from repressed wife of a Marine Captain to a beautiful, sensitive woman. After her gung-ho husband is sent to Viet Nam, Sally does volunteer work in a veteran's hospital and meets paraplegic Louke Martin (Jon Voight) who is in a fury of frustration. Voight and Fonda fall in love though hubby's return is imminent.

Fonda is convincing and appealing as a woman developing her own identity: she becomes the kind of woman any man would want. Voight gives a moving performance as the crippled "Ice Man" who proves himself to be a tender and worthy lover. Appropriately, Voight's fine acting recently won him the Best Actor Award at the Cannes Film Festival.

Perennial bad guy Bruce Dern plays Captain Hyde, a self-centered, uptight tin soldier. He is sympathetic only in having been duped into fighting an unpopular war. The hell of Viet Nam combined with his wife's adultery sends him over the brink: he has been betrayed by both his country and his woman. Dern is a flat character, a foil to Voight who is obviously the better man. Dern and Voight are too easily identified as evil and good. And it is difficult to understand why Sally Hyde would choose her dry husband over the sexually and emotionally fulfilling Voight.

Coming Home is a serious movie with few light moments. The hospital scenes evoke comparison with Cuckoo's Nest for craziness, not humor. The VA hospital is depressingly real and the tone is bitter. Veterans are neglected "like thrown away Kleenex."

Unfortunately, Director Hal Ashby (Shampoo, Bound for Glory) uses too much melodrama in the tense climax confrontation among Fonda, Voight and Dern. Then Ashby lets the end dangle in cross cuts of Dern's suicide, Fonda shopping, and Voight revealing to high school students his soul-felt hatred of the war.

Still Coming Home captures the anxiety of the times in a personal, apolitical way. The sound track, a collection of 60's hits ("Sympathy for the Devil," "White Rabbit," "Strawberry Fields," etc.) intensifies the emotions and predicaments of the era.

Better than any film to date, Coming Home shows that the war didn't end when the vets returned. The wounds might heal, but the scars of guilt and confusion would always remain.

By Thatcher Bailey

DEMAND MORE FROM YOURSELF

ARMY ROTC

FOR INFORMATION, CALL OR STOP BY:
UVM ROTC DEPARTMENT
4TH FLOOR, WILLIAMS HALL
656-2966.

CYNIC SUMMER CALENDAR

| Sunday | Monday | Tuesday | Wednesday | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | 20 JuneThe Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's PlayhouseFull Moon | 21The Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's PlayhouseThe Longest DayThe First Day of Summer | 22Top ofVermop.m.The NaThe Su |
| 25Top of the SquareCeltih Music, , 2:00 p.m. | 26Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 27Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeThe Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's Playhouse | 28Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeThe Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's Playhouse | 29Top of tCommunUVM BaThe Sun |
| 2Green Mt. Country Banjo Festival, Essex JunctionVermont Symphony Orchestra Pops Concert at Shelburne FarmsTop of the SquareThe Green Mountain Volunteers, 2:00 p.m.Do's, 9 p.m. | 3Green Mt. Country Banjo FestivalTop of the SquareFyre and Lightning Consort, 2:00 p.m.Impulse Dance, 9:00 p.m. | 4Green Mt. Country Banjo FestivalStory Theatre, St. Michael's PlayhouseTop of the SquareImpulse Dance, 2:00 p.m.Michael Pedicin Jazz Quintet, 9:00 p.m. | 5Story Theatre, St. Michael's Playhouse | 6ChamplaTyler ThTop of tPam GuiStory ThFrom He |
| 9Top of the SquareFrench Play, 2:00 p.m.German Cabaret, 8:00 p.m. | 10Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 11Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeVermont Symphony Woodwind Quintet, 8:30 p.m.Story Theatre, St. Michael's PlayhouseBeyond a Reasonable Doubt, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 12Story Theatre, St. Michael's Playhouse | 13ShakespeVermontUVM RecStory TheBus Stop, |
| 16Vermont Mozart Festival Dressage, 6:30 p.m., Grand Opening Concert, 8:00 p.m., UVM Show BarnTop of the SquareAs You Like It, 2:00 p.m. | 17Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 18Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseMozart — pianist Menahem Pressler, UVM Recital HallShakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Stalag 17, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 19Top of the SquareA Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, 8:30 p.m.Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.Mozart — Lake Cruise, SOLD OUT | 20Play It ATop of tI Do, I DShakespe3:10 to Y |
| 23Mozart-Mendelssohn Octet, Burlington Square Mall, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 24Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m. | 25Mozart — The Virtuoso Flute, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8:00 p.m.Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseTop of the SquareCommunity Day — freeOcean's Eleven, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 26Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseShakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareA Funny Thing, 8:30 p.m.Mozart — Lake Cruise SOLD OUT | 27Top of thI Do, I DoPlay It AgShakespeShakespe |
| 30Vermont Jazz Festival, KillingtonMozart — All Bach, Shelburne Farms, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 31Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 1 AugustMozart — Airs and Horns, UVM Recital Hall, 8:00 p.m.Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.Mickey One, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 2Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sTop of the SquareMarlene Pennison and Dancers, 8:30 p.m.Shakespeare, Othello 8:00 p.m.Mozart — Lake Cruise SOLD OUT | 3Absurd PTop of thMarlene PShakespeThe Wild |
| 6Top of the SquareCommunity Day — free | 7Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m. | 8Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeMarlowe, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 9Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m. | 10Top ofCommunUVM BaShakespeAbsurd |
| 13 | 14 | 15Odd Man In, St. Mike's | 16Odd Man In, St. Mike's | 17Odd Man |

CYNIC SUMMER CALENDAR

| ...ay | Thursday | Friday | Saturday |
|---|---|---|---|
| ...Playhouse | 22Top of the SquareVermont Symphony Brass Quintet 8:15 p.m.The Next Move Revue, 9:00 p.m.The Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's Playhouse | 23The Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's PlayhouseTop of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.Vermont Symphony Brass, 8:15 p.m.The Next Move Revue, 9:00 p.m. | 24Vermont Symphony Brass Quintet, 8:15 p.m.Lake Champlain Cruise, 8:00 p.m.The Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's PlayhouseTop of the SquareTwo Penny Circus, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m.Anti Nuclear Demonstration, Seabrook N.H. |
| ...'s Playhouse | 29Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeUVM Baroque Ensemble, 8:30 p.m.The Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's Playhouse | 30The Sunshine Boys, St. Michael's PlayhouseTop of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.Captain Marbles, 8:00 p.m. | 1 JulyTop of the SquareCaptain Marbles, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m.Seals and Crofts Concert, Dartmouth College, 8:00 p.m. |
| ...yhouse | 6Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Twelfth Night, Royall Tyler TheatreTop of the SquarePam Guidetti, flutist; Karen Fuller, harpist, 8:30 p.m.Story Theatre, St. Michael's PlayhouseFrom Here to Eternity, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 7Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.The Pocket Mime Theatre, 8:00 p.m.Story Theatre, St. Michael's Playhouse | 8Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareEl Schepo, 10 a.m.The Pocket Mime Theatre, 8:00 p.m.Story Theatre, St. Michael's PlayhouseOkemo Mt. Folk and Bluegrass Festival, Ludlow, Vt. noon |
| ...house | 13Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Vermont Symphony Orchestra Recital by Betty Allen, UVM Recital HallStory Theatre, St. Michael's PlayhouseBus Stop, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 14Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareClassical Music Concert and Buffet DinnerUVM String Quartet, 8:30 p.m.Vermont Symphony Brass Quintet, 8:00 p.m.Story Theatre, St. Michael's Playhouse | 15Top of the SquareFrank Wakefield and the Good Old Boys, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m.Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Story Theatre, St. Michael's Playhouse |
| ...e Way to the...'s Playhouse...0 p.m....UT | 20Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseTop of the SquareI Do, I Do! 8:30 p.m.Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.3:10 to Yuma, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 21Mozart — Chapman at the Organ, UVM Recital Hall, 8:00 p.m.Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, 8:30 p.m. | 22Mozart — All Handel, Shelburne Farms, 8:00 p.m.Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseShakespeare, Othello, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareTwo Penny Circus, 2:00 p.m.Low London, 8:30 p.m. |
| ...'s Playhouse...T | 27Top of the SquareI Do, I Do! 8:30 p.m.Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's Playhouse~~Shakespeare, Othello~~Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m. | 28Mozart — Brahms Love Songs, St. Paul's, 8:00 p.m.Play It Again, Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseShakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.A Funny Thing, 8:30 p.m. | 29Vermont Jazz Festival — KillingtonCraftsbury Common Fiddler's Contest, CraftsburyMozart — Haydn on the Porch, Shelburne Farms, 8:00 p.m.Top of the SquareDave Van Ronk 9:00 p.m.Play It Again Sam, St. Michael's PlayhouseShakespeare, Twelfth Night, 2:00 and 8:00 p.m. |
| ...'s...:30 p.m....T | 3Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sTop of the SquareMarlene Pennison and Dancers, 8:30 p.m.Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:00 p.m.The Wild Bunch, B106 Cook, $1.25 | 4Mozart — Emerson String Quartet, Shelburne Farms, 8:00 p.m.Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sTop of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.Mattress — drama, 9:00 p.m.Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m. | 5Mozart — Coronation Mass, St. Joseph's, 8:30 p.m.Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike'sTop of the SquareMattress, 9:00 p.m.Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 2:00 p.m.Shakespeare, Othello, 8:00 p.m. |
| ...0 and 8:00 | 10Top of the SquareCommunity Day — freeUVM String Quartet, 8:30 p.m.Shakespeare Othello, 8:00 p.m.Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike's | 11Top of the SquareInternational Folk Dancing, 8:30 p.m.Vermont Jazz Ensemble, 8:30 p.m.Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, 8:30 p.m.Absurd Person Singular, St. Mike's | 12Shakespeare, Othello, 2:00 p.m.Shakespeare, Twelfth NightTop of the SquareRegular Theatre, 2:00 p.m. |
| | 17Odd Man In, St. Mike's | 18Odd Man In, St. Mike'sNew England Folk Festival, Mt. Snow | 19Odd Man In, St. Mike'sNew England Folk Festival, Mt. Snow |

AIR FORCE ROTC — HERE ARE THE FACTS

When you're discussing something as important as your future, it's urgent that you get the straight facts . . . and that you understand them. Air Force ROTC can be an important part of your future. We would like to outline some of the facts and invite you to look into gathering more.

It's a fact: the Air Force needs highly-qualified, dedicated officers . . . men and women. It's a fact: we need people in all kinds of educational disciplines. It's a fact: we're prepared to offer financial help to those who can qualify for an Air Force ROTC scholarship.

Get together with an AFROTC representative and discuss the program. We'll give you all the facts. It could be one of the most important talks you've ever had with anyone about your educational plans.

AIR FORCE ROTC
Gateway to a great way of life.

Contact St. Michael's/UVM Air Force ROTC, 655-2000, ext. 2551.

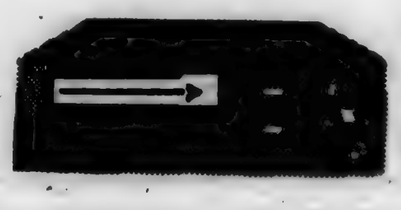
This is the best $500 stereo system that money can buy.



$500
JUST $52.00 DOWN AND $23.15 A MONTH*

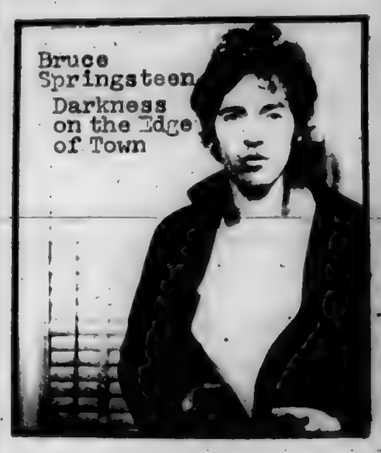
Have you ever been in a store, any store, and immediately liked the most expensive item in the store, but alas, you noticed the price was way beyond what you could afford. If that has happened to you, we know you are going to love our system $500. Not only is it truely affordable (just $23.15 per month with 10% down*) but it's one of the best sounding stereo systems we sell at any price.

A stereo system is a chain of equipment. The total sound that is reproduced is only as good as the weakest link. Lets tune onto a good clean FM station. We live in an area of valleys and hills and the type of music we may wish to hear may be broadcast miles away. So our first requirement, is a receiver that is sensitive enough to pull in that station clearly, and be selective enough to reduce interference from adjacent stations, and also capable of isolating noise from the actual signal so that we may listen to clean sounding stereo FM. That's why we chose the Technics SA 5170 AM/FM Stereo Receiver for system $500. If we are listening to a record, we want to be able to hear everything that was recorded and nothing more. We chose the Audio Technica AT-11E Stereo Cartridge because it can track the most complex record grooves & still maintain high separation of left & right channels. We also chose the cartridge for compatability to the turntable. The turntable must also be capable of following the record grooves, turn the record at exactly 33⅓ R.P.M. (or 45 R.P.M.) without interference. It must also isolate the record information from external vibrations. The JVC JLA20 turntable does these things extremely well, since it is belt drive and has a servo controled motor. It also rejects at the end of a record, smoothly & quietly, and may be cued manually (damped in up & down directions). Lastly and perhaps the most important part of any stereo system, the speakers, loudspeakers characterize what a stereo system sounds like. If speakers do ultimately make the greatest difference of how the system sounds; then, the most important requirement is not hearing what the speakers sound like, but how they don't sound at all. You don't want the speakers to add or detract from the source, but, rather to pass it on just as it was recorded. We've included the new Advent/1 speakers, for system $500 for those exact reasons. (They are matched for power output of the Technics AM/FM receiver.)

Since 1969 Advent has been making loudspeakers that are accurate, putting the latest loudspeaker technology to work, to create a value oriented product. The Advent One's make this system the best that you can buy for $500. The Advent One Loudspeaker is a two way design, using the same components as the most copied speaker in the speaker industry, the large Advents. Since the Advent One contains the same components as the large Advent and sells for $100 (the large Advent sell for $150 each) something must be different . . . the cabinet is smaller, the sacrifice musically then is not in the bass, middle, or high frequencies, but in the very deep bass. Advent says that the last 3rd octave of music will not have the volume that is apparent on the large Advents. (Basically, you'll miss a 30 cycle organ pedal.) when you consider cost versus performance, you'll be astounded.

CLARION PE826A UNDERDASH CAR CASSETTE PLAYER, features fast/forward, and auto. eject.

$68



*For qualified customers, based on 24 monthly installments, with 10% down payment, at an annual interest rate of 18.11% (includes sales tax).

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

• 157 PEARL ST., ESSEX JCT. • BARRE-MONTPELIER RD., BARRE • "IN THE MALL BETWEEN" KMART & MARTIN'S, SO. BURLINGTON

Recent Cut

The BOSS Is Back!

Darkness on the Edge of Town
Bruce Springsteen
Columbia 35318

By Larry Seiden

Bruce Springsteen has resurrected himself to a mythic hero rocking above human tears, foibles and anonymity. He has moved into a realm where only his mother would dare call him by his real name. To the rest he is the Boss.

And THE BOSS is back!

His unique vision of the street being eternal, universal and the only place to be, is still alive. After spending a year mired in court with lawsuits against his former manager, Mike Appel, the Boss has comeback beyond expectations. As fans, we knew whatever would follow Born to Run would be the killer to disprove those skeptics who saw him as a product of corporate hype.

But who knew that it would be an album of such epic magnitude in theme and vision that it would leave not the slightest doubt as to who will follow the King.

Bruce has so much talent and energy that he had to, reportedly, pare 50 songs down into the 10 that finalize Darkness on the Edge of Town as the best Springsteen to date. Within the space of 10 songs Bruce furthered the case of machismo as the only way to survive.

Springsteen's musical signature, as eclectic as it is, remains pure and beautiful. Unlike Dylan's characteristic haziness, which lends itself to many interpretations, Springsteen's music possesses such clarity and distinction that no artist dares to try to cover a Springsteen ditty. (Manfred Mann's slaughter of "Spirit in the Night," being the exception.)

And yet with all its ebullience and sparsely-produced power, Darkness is the story of tragedy. Every song is a story of a man rising above the turmoil of a blank, depressing setting. In almost every song Bruce is a winner. In "Racing in the Street," his 396 Chevy built from scratch is faster than anything on the strip; he is a momentary Valentino in the squalid life of a whore in "Candy's Room."

His machismo raises him above the minimum wage

Larry Seiden, Editor of UVM's This Week, wrote this review with his official Bruce Springsteen pen.

"Tearing into the heart of something in the night."

worker. His destiny is bright; it surges through his veins (and fuel line) in "The Promised Land":

Working all day in my daddy's garage/ Driving all night, chasing some mirage/ Pretty soon little girl I'm gonna take charge."

The album scores big. All 10 cuts are killers. "Badlands," the album's opener, succeeds "Thunder Road" from Born to Run as the answer. This time it is not "under this dusty hood," but rather in one's own love, hope and faith that can raise him "above these badlands." The Dylanesque beginning takes this fire snorting stance: I wanna spit in the face of these badlands.

Before you can scarcely catch your breath, the Boss demonstrates that he's been working on his chops during his absentia. "Adam Raised A Cain" with its wanna-know-why-they-call-it-an-ax guitar intro forces you to the inner sleeve for credits and for the first time Bruce lists himself as lead guitar. Sure Miami Steve is still here but Bruce makes that Fender Esquire spark. And myths are not born in obstetric wards, they come from less sanitary places:

Lost but not forgotten, from the dark heart of a dream, Adam raised a Cain.

"Something in the Night" introduces the path that powers Bruce into the night — the street.

I take her to the floor/ looking for a moment when the world seems right/ And I tear into the guts/ of something in the night.

"Racing in the Street," ten years after the Grateful Dead sang to San Francisco that love is the only way and dancing is freedom, is Bruce's way of rephrasing Vince Lombardi's "Winning is the only thing," philosophy. But winners must pay the price.

I met her on the strip three years ago/ In a Camaro with this dude from L.A./ I blew that Camero off my back,/ And drove that little girl away,/ But now there's wrinkles around my baby's eyes/ And she cries herself to sleep at night/ When I come the house is dark/ She sighs, "Baby did you make it all right."

Side two furthers the James Dean image of the good die young. There is a spirit that drives a man deeper than a nine-to-five vocation. The promise of regeneration lives in "The Promised Land":

Sometimes I feel so weak I just want to explode/ Explode and tear this town apart/ Take a knife and cut this pain from my heart.

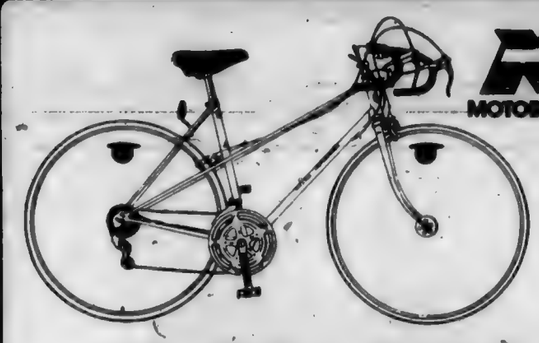
"Factory," depending on how you see it is either the weakest cut on the album, because it lacks the autobiographical insight of the other nine cuts, or it is the embers of death in the factory worker's eyes, the eyes that have been left uncharted since John Lennon's "Working Class Hero."

"Streets of Fire," with its mournful wail of an intro is a haunting dirge of isolation. Isolation without salvation. The romantic poet does not walk this street, at least, after dark.

The hunger that we can't resist and the yearning to make everything right fuels "Prove It All Night," the album's single. Most have made the choice, without staring fate in the face. We can survive without knowing "what it's like to live and die. You want it, you take it, you pay the price." And it paid over and over again, all night.



The title cut tells the story of secrets and the weight they carry. Shadows of darkness hide answers from the eye but answers mean the end. And the end has a cost that must be paid.

To taste the price look at the cover. Bruce, looking like a scuffed up Pacino is captured though only momentarily, mortal. The chessy background, devoid of color tone, sets off his wasted image shrouded in black. His is face that can't seem to adjust to light, he looks like he moves better in the cover of night.

There is no softness in this album, no attempt to get everyone hip to Bruce.

Because I've failed to mention the music, you may think I'm deaf and can only read lyric sheets. Well let me put it to you this way — musically, this is the best E Street Band album yet. The band is still the same, Clarence, Mighty Max, Garry Tallant, Roy Bittan, Danny Federici and Miami Steve. This, brothers and sisters, ain't no punk band from N.J. The music possesses the most unique sophistication of basic rock I've heard — multiple bridges and changing tempos. The band pulls out all the stops. The best part is the production by Bruce and Jon Landau. Far from the overkill of Born to Run, Darkness' power is in its sparse sound. Sometimes all there is, is Bruce's voice, the bass and a drum. It is devastating.

But the album is not for everyone. There is no softness in this album, no attempt to get everyone hip to Bruce. It never looks back and is much too intimate to front tough bravado that hides a fleshy underbelly like punk rock There is no song like "Sand" on this album. John Travolta will not be striding down Flatbush Ave to the beat of "Adam Raised A Cain." But then again not every one likes to dance in discos. Some of us like to push the red line that guards "the edge," not parallel park next to the curb.

NOMADE

- Basic Transportation
- Hours of Trouble Free Riding
- Motobecane quality at an affordable price
- Quality Components
- 30 Day Free Tune-Up
- Available in Men's & Ladies' Frames

$164.95

JUST IN

Team Champion from Motobecane
The finest racing machine made. On display at Pagocycle.

pagocycle 864-6878

HOURS
MON.-FRI.
9-9
SAT.
9-6

227 MAIN ST., BURLINGTON

DAKIN MOUNTAIN SHOP
PRESENTS THE COMPLETE HIKER

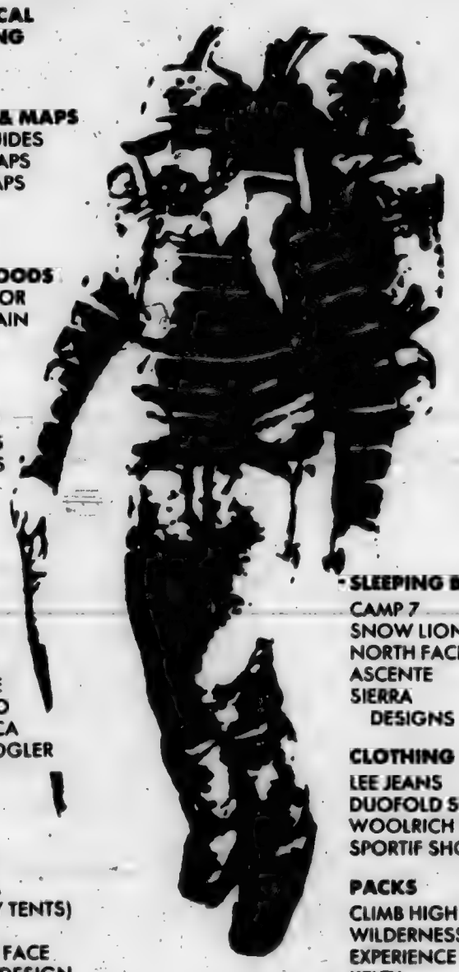
TECHNICAL CLIMBING GEAR



BOOKS & MAPS
TRAIL GUIDES
TOPO MAPS
TRAIL MAPS

TRAIL FOODS
RICHMOOR
MOUNTAIN HOUSE

STOVES
OPTIMUS
PHOEBUS

BOOTS
VASQUE
FABIANO
TECHNICA
STEINKOGLER

TENTS
EUREKA
(FAMILY TENTS)
ALSO
NORTH FACE
SIERRA DESIGN
JAN SPORTS

SLEEPING BAGS
CAMP 7
SNOW LION
NORTH FACE
ASCENTE
SIERRA DESIGNS

CLOTHING
LEE JEANS
DUOFOLD SHIRTS
WOOLRICH SHORTS
SPORTIF SHORTS

PACKS
CLIMB HIGH WILDERNESS EXPERIENCE
KELTY
CAMP TRAILS

NEW ARRIVALS!

- EUREKA FAMILY TENTS
- ARENA SWIMWEAR
- NIKE RUNNING SHOES

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP 863-5581

Summer Hours
Mon.-Fri.
9-9
Sat. 9-6

227 MAIN ST., BURLINGTON

THE
LAST CHANCE
SALOON

Remember, whether your looking for:
A cozy comfortable atmosphere
The best selection of draft beer in burlington;
a date for Saturday night;
foos-ball;
a great charcoal broiled hamburger;
the most reasonably priced
mixed drinks in town;
pin ball;
some fine stereo sounds,
chess,
checkers,
or just the night out
You should be heading for;

THE
LAST CHANCE
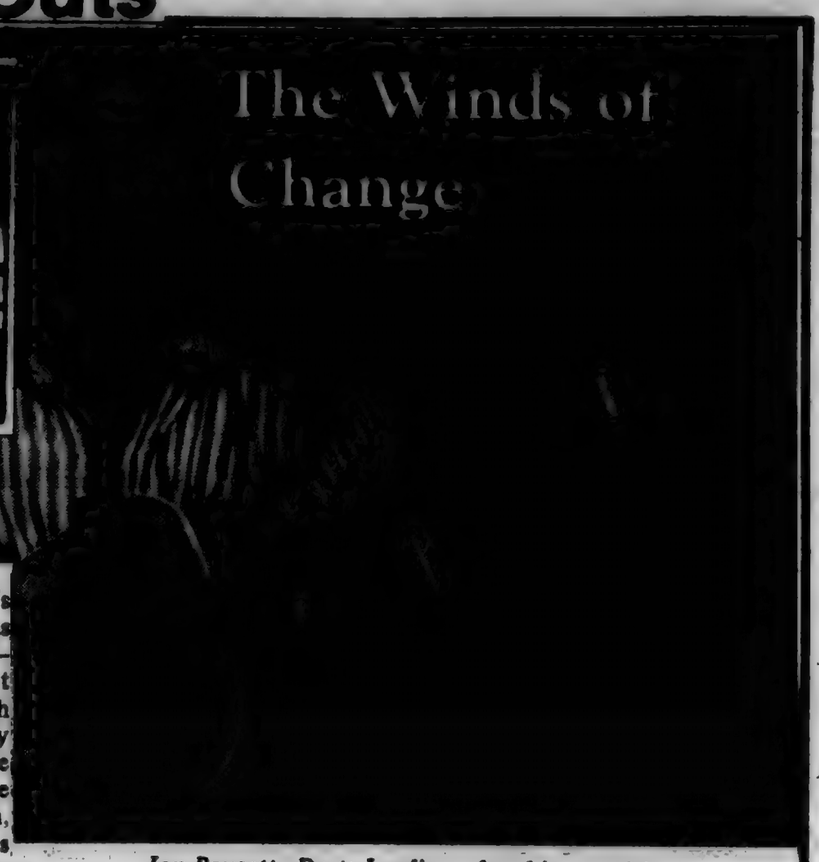
SALOON
147 Main St.



beer wine
THE ONLY BEVERAGE
WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
lowest prices largest selection
kegs soda

Recent Cuts

Pousette Dart Band 3
~~The Pousette-Dart Band~~
Capitol SW–11781

Jon Pousette-Dart: Leading a band in transition.

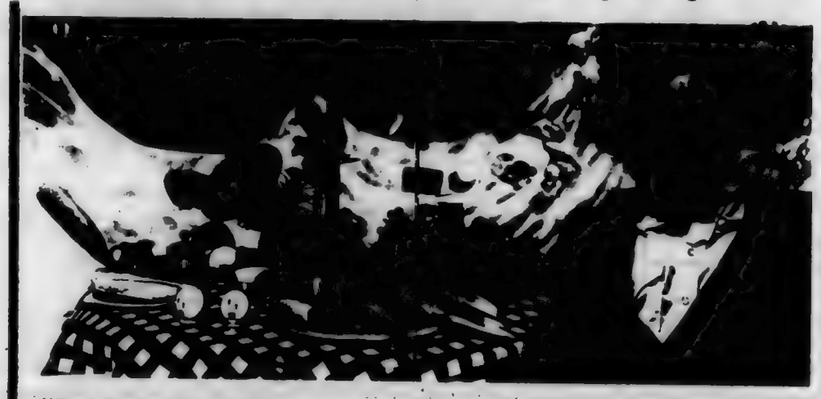
By Neil Elliot



Certainly one of Burlington's more odd concerts last year was the David Bromberg/Pousette-Dart Band outing last September. Bromberg, a stylish country rocker, was said by some to be prefessionally above sharing the stage with the musical simpletons of Beantown, the Pousette-Dart Band. As expected, most concert goers found the opening act (Pousette-Dart) barely tolerable, and the latter band (Bromberg) exceptionally pleasing, or exactly visa-versa.

Pousette-Dart 3 fronts dramatic changes which may startle those who get emotional during discussions of Pousette-Dart's failure to become popular Top 40 artists, or the same people who were dissatisfied with Bromberg. Despite the album's inconsistency – in all phases of recording and production, a consistent sense of self-satisfaction and confidence makes this album one of the season's most intriguing releases.

In some respects, even those who are only Pousette-Dart Band record buyers and not trade magazine readers should have sensed the coming of change. Pousette-Dart Band nor Amnesia sold well, and, although the band developed a Top 40 tone on Amnesia, it disappointed fans more appreciative of their unrefined, folksier tunes. Furthermore, Jon Pousette-Dart himself did warn last September that the band's next album definitely would be one that they could "perform by themselves."

Mathematically, five of nine cuts are good, two are palatable, and two – "Mr. Saturday Night," which bears a directly negative corrolation to "Saturday Night Special," and "Where Are You Going," a song in which I still haven't figured out where has begun – are both basically beat. Pousette-Dart Band 3 is a sound investment for early Pousette-Dart Band fans, as well as 'heavier' folk rockers. Otherwise, bag it.

" But Seriously, Joe "

"But Seriously, Folks..."
Joe Walsh
Asylum 6E-141

By Larry Seiden

My credentials to review this album are in order: I know all the words to "Walk Away," the James Gang's gem from their third album. With that band Joe Walsh was a solid third of America's most creative trio since the three crewcuts called the Kingston Trio. I've always admired Joe Walsh as a tasteful guitarist, songwriter, arranger and synthesizer operator. Certainly his addition has helped the Eagles. Hotel California is the best they've done and his signature on that vinyl is obvious.

I will also argue that So What is the classic misunderstood album of all time. Now Joe is not a great individual artist in the sense of Randy Newman or Bob Seger, but he has a remarkably controlled voice that is a pleasure to listen to in spite of its limitations.

If you're still reading this, then you've probably been anticipating its arrival for the past two years like I have. Then you're probably a bit disappointed too.

"But Seriously, Folks..." has its great moments that we have come to expect of JW but overall it jabs and jives without getting excited. That is, except for "Life's Been Good" which is bound to replace "Rocky Mountain Way" as the cream of Joe Walsh's material. It comes out of the same bag as RMW, catchy without being cute. It is the best of the I'm the greatest, I'm a rock-star, here-look-at-my-ego (tongue in cheek) I have not changed, songs that justify the extravagance of the rich life.

My Maserati does 185,/ I lost my license now I don't drive,/ I have a limo,/ I ride in the back/ I lock the doors,/ In case I'm attacked./ But as a young boy he's cool.

Now are those not great lyrics? Put them to a medium rock/reggae beat and add some tight instrumentation and you have the only reason besides the cover to buy the album.

Joe always brings a mock aloofness to his albums. Although he will spend years putting the album together, he titles them as though they are just contractural obligations, (So What; Barnstorm; The Smoker You Drink, The Player You Get) even though they are well crafted statements. On "But Seriously, Folks..." Joe carries the joke further into the cover photos and album design. And it is pure enjoyment – no message, no garbage, no tickee, no wahsee. Only JW would have a cover with him sitting down to dine on a lobster dinner while the whole meal is floating to the surface because, very straightfaced, Joe is sitting at the bottom of a pool.

While the rest of the album's eight cuts refuse to rise enough above the usual riffraff to become memorable, "Life's Been Good" makes the band work for their session money. Joe Vitale (who also drummed on RMW) is especially strong on percussion. Willie Weeks, a very hot studio bass player, helps to drive the song through all its rapid tempo changes. Bill Szymczyk, who has been Joe's producer since the James Gang, works ex-Spirit and good friend, Jay Ferguson's keyboard talents around the spirited elevating sound of Joe's acoustic and electric riffs. The beat is so compelling that Joe is sly enough to know the overkill that RMW was, so he constantly shifts the tempo, which makes the hook even catchier. With a finishing time of 8:04 the song refuses to die under its own length. Some fancy cutting from the producer would make it a rocket single.

Maybe because in So What I thought JW was putting more thought into his songs than on any previous solo album that I waited with such great expectations for this one. Probably in the same way I hope Joe doesn't persuade the Eagles to title their forthcoming album That's All Folks because based on this waste, I'll never be able to take the shrink wrap off it.

Tape Art

Panasonic
RS-462S

RS-462S
AC/Battery Stereo portable cassette recorder with FM/AM stereo radio features two 5" PM dynamic speakers. Two built-in condenser mikes. Super Alloy head. $CrO_2$/normal tape selector. Level/battery/tuning meter. Cue and review. Lockable pause control. Tape counter. Auto-Stop/Aut leep. Separate tone, volume and balance controls. AFC on FM. With AC cord and 6 Panasonic "D" size batteries.

$189.95

ALL SALES BACKED BY OUR FAMOUS SERVICE

BAILEY'S

MUSIC ROOMS - Church St. - Burl., Vt. 863-3210

Summer Arts

MOZART FESTIVAL

Determined to become established as an annual event, the Vermont Mozart Festival is returning to the Burlington area for its fifth consecutive season, July 16 to August 5. The Festival combines a diversity of fine settings with distinguished artists and ensembles performing the major works of the world's great composers. This season, the Mozart Festival is offering 15 concerts in the Burlington-Shelburne area, as well as concerts in Barre, Middlebury, and Stratton, and workshops with soloists at Shelburne Farms.

The name Mozart Festival is somewhat misleading. In the first years of the Festival, Mozart was played exclusively. Although Mozart is still the featured composer, the Festival additionally presents All-Handel, All-Haydn, and All-Bach performances and the music of Beethoven, Vivaldi, Brahms, among others.

The Festival begins on July 16 with a Special Dressage Exhibition before the grand opening concert at the UVM Show Barn. Other concert locations include UVM's acoustically superb Recital Hall, the Royall Tyler Theatre, area churches, and Burlington Square Mall. The popular ferry boat concerts on the lake have been sold out in advance. But perhaps the finest concerts will be held amid the elegance of Shelburne Farms. Three performances will take place on the South Porch of the Big House. Overlooking formal gardens, the lake, and the distant Adirondacks, the massive 70-room Tudor mansion creates a regal European setting well-suited to classical music, and assures pleasant, dreamlike atmosphere. In case of rain, the architecturally splendid Coach Barn can be used.

Several artists are returning to the Festival under the direction of noted oboist Melvin Kaplan. Appearing will be: the New York Chamber Soloists, the Emerson String Quartet, the Festival Winds, and the University of Vermont Choral Union directed by Dr. James Chapman. Soloists include: famed pianist Menahem Pressler of the Beaux Atrs Trio, pianist Harriet Wingreen, flutist John Solum, and Tenor Charles Bressler. For information and tickets write Vermont Mozart Festival, Box 512, Burlington; or call 862-7352. (Note: The Festival needs ushers, parking attendants, etc. Volunteers are given free admission to the performances.)

FOLK AND BLUEGRASS PERFORMERS SOUGHT

Prizes worth over $1000 are being offered by Okemo Mountain Ski Area and Green Mountain Records to attract folk and bluegrass performers to the Okemo Mountain Folk and Bluegrass Festival. The event will be held at Okemo Mountain in Ludlow, Vermont, on Saturday, July 8, with a rain date of July 9.

The contest will begin at noon with each performer having twenty minutes to play. The contest is open to both groups and individuals, and performances may be either vocal or instrumental. The contestants will be judged by a panel of professional performers. The preliminaries will run into the early evening.

The evening concert will feature the top three prize-winners along with three special guest acts: Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys, Dick McCormack, and Jon Gailmor.

Because the number of openings is limited, folk and bluegrass groups are encouraged to register in advance. For further information, write Green Mountain Records, Northfield,

SEALS AND CROFTS CONCERT

Jim Seals and Dash Crofts, veterans of popular music, will perform on Saturday, July 1, at 8 p.m. in Dartmouth College's 4,000 seat Thompson Arena. Among the pair's many gold and platinum recordings are their 1971 big seller Summer Breeze, the platinum Diamond Girl the following year, and 1975's platinum Greatest Hits. Friends since the 50's, Seals and Crofts developed their intricate harmonies and blends of guitar and mandolin in the mid 60's. A tremendous underground following grew from their strength as concert performers, and with their three-million seller album Summer Breeze, they became established as one of the nation's top recording duos. Reserved seat tickets will be on sale at the Hopkins Center Box Office, Hanover, N.H. 03755, tel: (603) 646-2422. The first day of sales, June 22, will be for Dartmouth students only. Tickets will be available to the public, cash and carry, with no limit, from June 23, and reservations will be accepted from June 24.

TPI EXPRESS
24 MAIN ST. WINOOSKI
655-3005 655-0977

...FAST DELIVERY!
also 23 Park St. Essex Jct. 879-6333

Whole Wheat and Regular Pizza
Thin Crust or Thick

10 Cent Pitchers
(With Pizza Winooski Shop Only)

$1.00 Off
Any Large One or More Itemed Pizza With This Coupon
Expires June 28, 1978

Rumors Behind the News

The Level Z Report

I had always looked younger than my age. Even at 22, I was adorned with some of the stubbornest acne ever to blotch a face. Perhaps that's why I'd decided to join the police department; if I didn't look old, the uniform would at least bring me respect. After months of pounding pavement under the bright lights of downtown, I was unexpectedly summoned into the Captain's office. The Chief was a real fire-eater: he demanded results!

Quickly, he praised my record, and then moved to the reason for my presence. "Boy, there's times when crime doesn't come to the police, that's when we go to the crime!", the Captain exclaimed pounding his desk. "The youth of America are being undermined, infiltrated, and subverted by Communist sympathizers — you know — long haired bearded weirdos who model themselves after Castro or that Zappa creature."

"I may look like just an ordinary cop, but I know what goes on out there. Drug abuse among teen-agers is reaching epidemic proportions. Kids are growing up to be lazy welfare cheaters. Something has to be done! From now on your code name is Z-Man and your mission is The Level Z Report."

The Chief's philosophy was heavy, but his plan was simple: I was to pose as a senior at the local high school, get in with the drug ring, and blow the whistle on the degenerates.

In preparation, the Captain put me on a chocolate diet for two weeks. Finally, I arrived at the High School, my face resembling a pepperoni pizza. There was no hope I would de-pom any cheerleaders.

My first class was history with Miss Needle. Nervously, I glanced about the room for signs of drug abuse. The students' eyes were wide open, fixed on Miss Needle. No crime here! Relieved, I sat back to enjoy the lecture on "The Psychedelic Story." Miss Needle kept using big words like psilocybin, lysergic acid diethylalmide, and peyote — I could barely pronounce 'em much less spell 'em!

On my way to the next class, a short red-haired girl asked me if I wanted some Coke. I figured my acne was as bad as it was going to get so I said, "Sure." Besides, I was supposed to act normal. Out of her purse she took a plastic bag of white powder. Powdered Coke? What will American industry think of next?

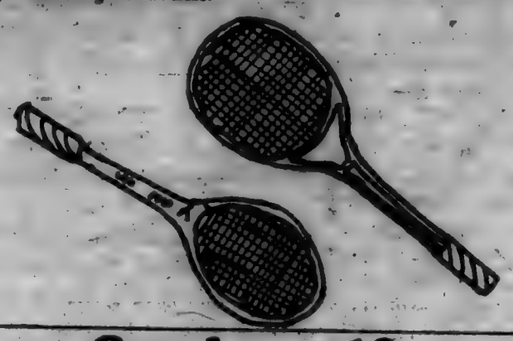
Politely, I found two glasses of water and, with a giggle saying she'd never had Coke this way before, she mixed the powder and water. There was no color change, no instant carbonation, and not much taste: another product failure. But in keeping with my cover I remarked, "Tastes great!," to which she replied, "What are you doing this weekend, baby?"

I hurriedly excused myself and slipped off to my next class, chemistry with Mr. Roach. Beakers, tubing, and stoppers were strewn everywhere. But at the count of three, the students set about assembling the debris into a one-hour project: bong building. This was obviously an exercise in constructing a mechanical lung. To test the bong's efficiency, Mr. Roach burned a chunk of brown goo on one opening and drew in smoke at the other. If he coughed, the student received an A, if not, the student failed. No grade inflation here!

Lunch in the cafeteria consisted entirely of pills — red, green, black, yellow. Thank God there wasn't any junk food: my face couldn't take it.

Afternoon — the time seemed to fly and so did I. English class with Mrs. Trip. She talked about a book called A Separate Reality and another entitled Confessions of an English Opium Eater. The students ate her up. None of this sex and violence stuff!

One class to go, everyone's favorite: math. Just my luck the teacher was giving a one question test: "How high will a 16-year old get on four uppers, five downers, and seven aspirins?" I never did understand the new math.



After the final bell I lit out for headquarters. I was proud to tell the Chief that the Level Z Report was as empty as the High School was of drugs. Those kids sure were wholesome, and they were getting the best education money could buy.

I could only wonder what those kids would someday learn in college.

Cynic Calendar

Thursday • 15

Reception for artists in Work in Progress exhibit, 8 p.m., Fleming Museum.

Friday • 16

Walking Tour, "History of Burlington," 10 a.m. – 12 noon. Church Street Center, $4. Telephone 656-4221.

Union Vote for all service hour employees 7:30 – 9:00 a.m., 11 a.m. – 1 p.m., 4 – 5 p.m. Royall Tyler Theatre.

Thrifty Consumer, 1:10 p.m., "Across the Fence," Channel 3.

An Evening Ceilidh. Stories, Folklore and songs inspired by the Fleming Museum's current exhibit "War." Admission $1.50. For information, contact Sara Keller at 864-7018.

Saturday • 18

Orientation for the class of '82 through June 18.

Archeology Seminar, "The relationships between archeological sites and the natural environments in which they are located," with Dr. Dena Dincauze of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, at the Public Library in Brattleboro, 9:30 a.m.

First Vermont Conference of the National Organization for Women, Goddard College, Plainfield, Vermont. Registration begins at 9 a.m. with activities starting at 10 a.m. For more information, contact Valerie Eckart, 223-5819

Organ recital with Ms. Mary Milkey on the Fisk organ, 8 p.m., UVM Recital Hall, free.

Sunday • 19

Congressman James Jeffords speaks on energy, "Where do we go from here," 8 p.m., Living Learning Center, Commons 115, no charge.

"The Catscanner – 1 Year Later," part 2 with Albert Ring, M.D. (repeat broadcast), 7:15 a.m., Prognosis WJOY & WQCR.

America's First Victory – Fort Ticonderoga, 5:30 p.m., ETV.

Film showing, "The Forty Day Experience." A feature film on Oscar Ichazo's Africa theory and method in action, 7:30 p.m., Church St. Center, admission $1.

Monday • 20

Workshop, "Assertiveness on the Job," 7 – 10 p.m. Church Street Center, with Kay Frances Schmucker. Pre-registration required; $6. Telephone 656-4221.

Film showing, "The Forty Day Experience," 7:30 p.m., Church Street Center. Admission $1.

Scottish Country Dancing, 7:30 p.m., Southwick Ballroom, free.

Orientation for Class of '82 through June 20.

Tuesday • 21

Staff Council Meeting, 12 p.m., Memorial Lounge.

Children's film, "Dr. Doolittle," 101 Votey Building, 1:30 p.m., admission 50 cents.

Chelsea Health Center, 1:10 p.m., "Across the Fence," Channel 3.

Wednesday • 21

Children's film, "Dr. Doolittle," 101 Votey Building, 1:30 p.m., admission 50 cents.

Psychology Conference, the 4th Annual Vermont Conference on the Primary Prevention of Psychopathology: "Promoting Competence and Coping During Adulthood," through June 24; for information, call Barbara York at 658-2680.

Food for Youth: Spreads for Bread and Crackers, 1:10 p.m., "Across the Fence," Channel 3.

Gardening, 8 p.m., Consumer Hotline, ETV.

Thursday • 22

THURSDAY, JUNE 22

Children's film, "Dr. Doolittle," 101 Votey Building, 1:30 p.m., admission 50 cents.

Vermont Livestock Day: Goats, Sheep & Beef Cattle, 1:10 p.m. "Across the Fence," Channel 3.

Friday • 23

Walking Tour, "History of Burlington," 10 a.m. – 12 noon, Church Street Center, with Lillian Baker Carlisle. Pre-registration required: $4. Telephone 656-4221.

Poetry reading, 8 p.m., Church Street Center, with Mike Jewel and Shep Ogden, donations welcome.

Saturday • 24

Orientation for Class of '82 through June 25.

Sunday • 25

No calendar events listed.

Monday • 26

Workshop, "Asserting Yourself in Your Relationships," 7 – 10 p.m., Church Street Center, with Kay Frances Schmucker. Pre-registration required, $6. Telephone 656-4221.

Scottish Country Dancing, 7:30 p.m., Southwick Ballroom, free.

Tuesday • 27

Children's film, "Zebra in the Kitchen" 101 Votey Building, 1:30 p.m., admission 50 cents.

Workshop, The Step Family: Making It Work, 7 – 10 p.m., Church Street Center, with June and William Noble. Pre-registration required: $6. Telephone 656-4221.

Wednesday • 28

Lecture series, Horses and Horsemanship: Horse Care and Stable Management, 10 a.m., Morgan Horse Farm, with Dr. Donald Bach. Fee $1.

Children's film, "Zebra in the Kitchen," 101 Votey Building, 1:30 p.m., admission 50 cents.

Workshop, Vermont Owner/Builder Series: Climatic Site Planning, 6:30 – 9 p.m. Church Street Center, with Paul Hanka. Pre-registration required, $5. Telephone 656-4221.

David M. Warshaw, physiology and biophysics, 9 a.m. in room C-219, Given Building, presenting "Direct Correlation Between Structure and Arterial Resistance Vessels in Young and Old Spontaneously Hypertensive Rats" for the Doctor of Philosophy Degree. Open to the University Community.

| WANTED | UNWANTED | VEHICLES | APARTMENTS | ANYTHING |
|---|---|---|---|---|

Free Classifieds

Starting Next Issue

Call 656-4412 or 656-4413

Write to the Summer Cynic,
Billings Center U.V.M.

The Next Issue of The Summer Cynic...

Burlington's Big Three Landlords

The Demonstration at Seabrook

U.S. Customs at Highgate

Gambling in Atlantic City

Until Then Enjoy the Summer.

Editor: Russell Flannery
Associate Editor: Tom Daniels
Photography Editor: Rob Swanson
Assistant to the Editor: John Letteri
Editorial Staff: Mary Ann Schlegal, Randy Janson, Barry Gustin (news); Julie Davis, Larry Seiden, Thatcher Bailey, Curtis Haynes, Neil Elliot (arts).
Correspondents: Randy McMullen, Diana Green
Art: Toby Dayman, Lizi Hemmingway
Photography: Bob Gale, Don Cunningham
Production: April Heitkamp
Calendar: Freddy Krinsky
Advertising Manager: Nathaniel Foote
Advertising Representatives: Peter Voll, Mary Landon
Business Manager: Julie Voll
Circulation: Dave Lord

No material contained herein may be reproduced without the written consent of the Editor of the Vermont Summer Cynic. Opinions expressed do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or the State of Vermont.

University of Vermont
Billings Center
Burlington, Vermont 05401
(802) 656-4412

YAHOO!

25¢ Beers are back!

Sunday—Tuesday—Thursday

10 till closing

Everyday 3 - 7 Mixers $.25 off
Monday $.25 Beers All Night
Wednesday is Ladies Night $.25 off mixers 8 Closing
Friday 3 - 7 Four drafts for a buck

HANNIBUL'S

152 CHURCH ST.

INSIDE: Shakespeare, Sharks, Stones

SUMMERTIME

VOLUME IV NUMBER 2 JUNE 29, 1978

The Rent Control Battle: Who Should Win, If Anybody?

just ask!

$1.00 off any large
2 or more item pizza.

$.50 off any small
2 or more item pizza.

no coupon necessary.
just ask when you place
your order!

fast,free delivery
10 North Winooski
Phone. 658.3333

1130 North Avenue
Phone. 863.1108

help us célebrate the opening of our third Domino's Pizza
location at:
1160 Williston Road
Phone. 863.2556

offer expires. 7.6.78

DOMINO'S PIZZA

©copyright 1978.

"All the news that fits we print."

HIGHLIGHTS

ON-CAMPUS: Vermont's Congressman James Jeffords recently spoke at the Living/Learning Center on the need for America to harness solar energy. Tom Daniels spoke to Jeffords prior to his lecture ..... 4

NEW ENGLAND: Why the Clamshell 'went legit' and a report from the rally at Seabrook..... 5

COVER STORY: John Letteri examines one of the elements resulting from Burlington's growth ..... 6

SUMMER TRAVEL: Former Cynic cover boy Randy McMullen (see picture) recently pulled up his drawers to report on the East Coast's new gambler's haven.....

RECENT CUTS: Improved Stones, great Kinks, and a pruned Prine .....17,19

CYN FLICKS: A toothless Jaws II and a 'hot' Grease . . .22

SUMMER CYNIC

University of Vermont
Billings Center
Burlington, Vermont 05401

(802) 656-4412
(802) 656-4413

Editor:
Russell Flannery

Associate Editor:
Tom Daniels

Photography Editor:
Rob Swanson

Ass't to the Editor:
John Letteri

Editorial Staff:
Mary Ann Schlegal, Randy Jansen, Desmond Fitzgerald, Peter MacAusland, Barry Gustin, Sarah Wesson (news); Julie Davis, Curtis Haynes, Larry Seiden, Neil Elliot, Vaune Davis (arts)

Correspondents:
Randy McMullen, Diana Greene

Artists:
Liz Hemmingway, Joan Burdette

Photography:
Bob Gale

Production:
April Heitkamp, Toby Dayman, Janice Montagne

Advertising Manager:
Nathaniel Foote

Account Executive:
Mr. Peter Voll

Business Manager:
Julie Voll

Distribution:
Dave Lord, Joe Tripini

Special Thanks to UVM security

No material contained herein may be reproduced without the written consent of the Editor of the Vermont Summer Cynic. Opinions expressed do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty staff of the State of Vermont.

Circulation: 9,000

The Vermont Summer Cynic is printed at the Upper Valley Press Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont 05033.

The Downhill Edge

WE ARE SERIOUS ABOUT RUNNING & TENNIS

To prove it, we stock:

- Cronus liquid-crystal stop-watches
- ERG Drinking Supplement

frank shorter running gear

- Complete line of runner's books for men & women
- Runner's World Magazine
- Marathon Magazine

And MORE . . .

Complete Line of Running & Tennis Shoes by :

NIKE
PUMA
TIGER
ETONIC
NEW BALANCE

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

81–85 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401 (802) 862-2282

Where Finer Styles Meet

Ladies' Sandals and Clogs
All Sizes, Shapes and Colors
Fireworks Sale—July 1&3
All Sandals and Clogs 10% OFF

Crispin Leather
160 COLLEGE ST
FRYE

Ladies Nite Thursday
9'til closing!

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30

Monday night
shot & draft
for only $1.25

★ Backgammon and Cribbage Sets

★ Shrimp Cocktail for only $1.25

what ale's you

152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

BECK ARNLEY

National Discount Club

Save Up to 15% Off

on Selected Items.

Special!
All Oil-Filters $2.95

Sign Up Now at...
Imported Parts Center
3060 Williston Road
South Burlington, Vermont 05401

On-Campus

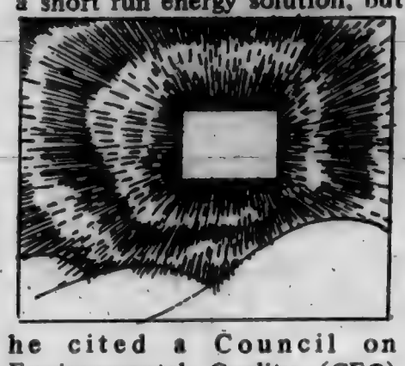
Jeffords: Among the Sun Kings of Congress

Faced with the possibility of coal strikes, the threat of oil embargoes and price hikes, natural gas shortages, and doubts about nuclear power, America is looking for safe, decentralized systems to meet its growing energy demands. It seems ironic that Vermont, with the most cloudy days in the U.S., has produced one of the leading advocates of solar power. From climbing Maine's Cadillac Mountain on Sun Day to catch the nation's earliest sun rise, to pushing for a Burlington solar plant, Rep. James Jeffords has been at the forefront of the struggle to convert America to renewable solar energy.



In a recent interview, Jeffords was optimistic about the widespread interest in solar energy and outlined plans for implementing solar power nationally and internationally. But some of Jeffords' concerns were back home. "In New England, we are at the end of the fossil fuel pipeline. It's important that we find energy systems not dependent on fossil fuels, and technological answers are best for us. The only other solution is nuclear which has safety and waste disposal problems. We must look for energy sources we can build at home."

The popular philosophy behind solar power comes from the late E. F. Schumacher's concept of "appropriate technology" which is "simpler, cheaper, and freer – a technology to which everyone can gain admittance." Schumacher called for a self-sufficient technology "with a human face," and his classic Small is Beautiful is aptly subtitled Economics as if People Mattered.

Today, solar power provides less than 1% of America's energy needs: mostly because solar is more expensive than non-renewable sources (oil, coal, gas, and nuclear). But enormous subsidies have yet to be granted to encourage the mass production of solar collectors. During the past four years, less than one billion federal dollars were spent on solar research and development. Jeffords was critical of the government's weak committment, and called for the dismissal of Department of Energy chief James Schlesinger. "He's so biased in favor of nuclear; even when he tries not to be biased against solar, it shows through. He's convinced we're a bunch of freaks spreading propaganda. The present request for solar research and marketing is $560 million. The Carter Administration is asking for $370 million which is below last year's funding."

Jeffords added, "Anyone would be an idiot not to find out if solar advocates are right or not. They are reliable people who have done a lot of study."

The two-term Congressman conceded that solar may not be a short run energy solution, but he cited a Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) study estimating that 25% of America's energy will come from the sun by 2025; and by 1985, solar energy costs will be competitive with 40% of current energy sources. But solar is not a far-off dream; already in Tokyo, nearly every house has a solar hot water heating system; and in the U.S. solar can reduce home heating fuel needs by up to 75%. Jeffords concluded, "In the next century, solar will be the primary answer."

Jim Jeffords: One of the House's leading advocates of solar energy

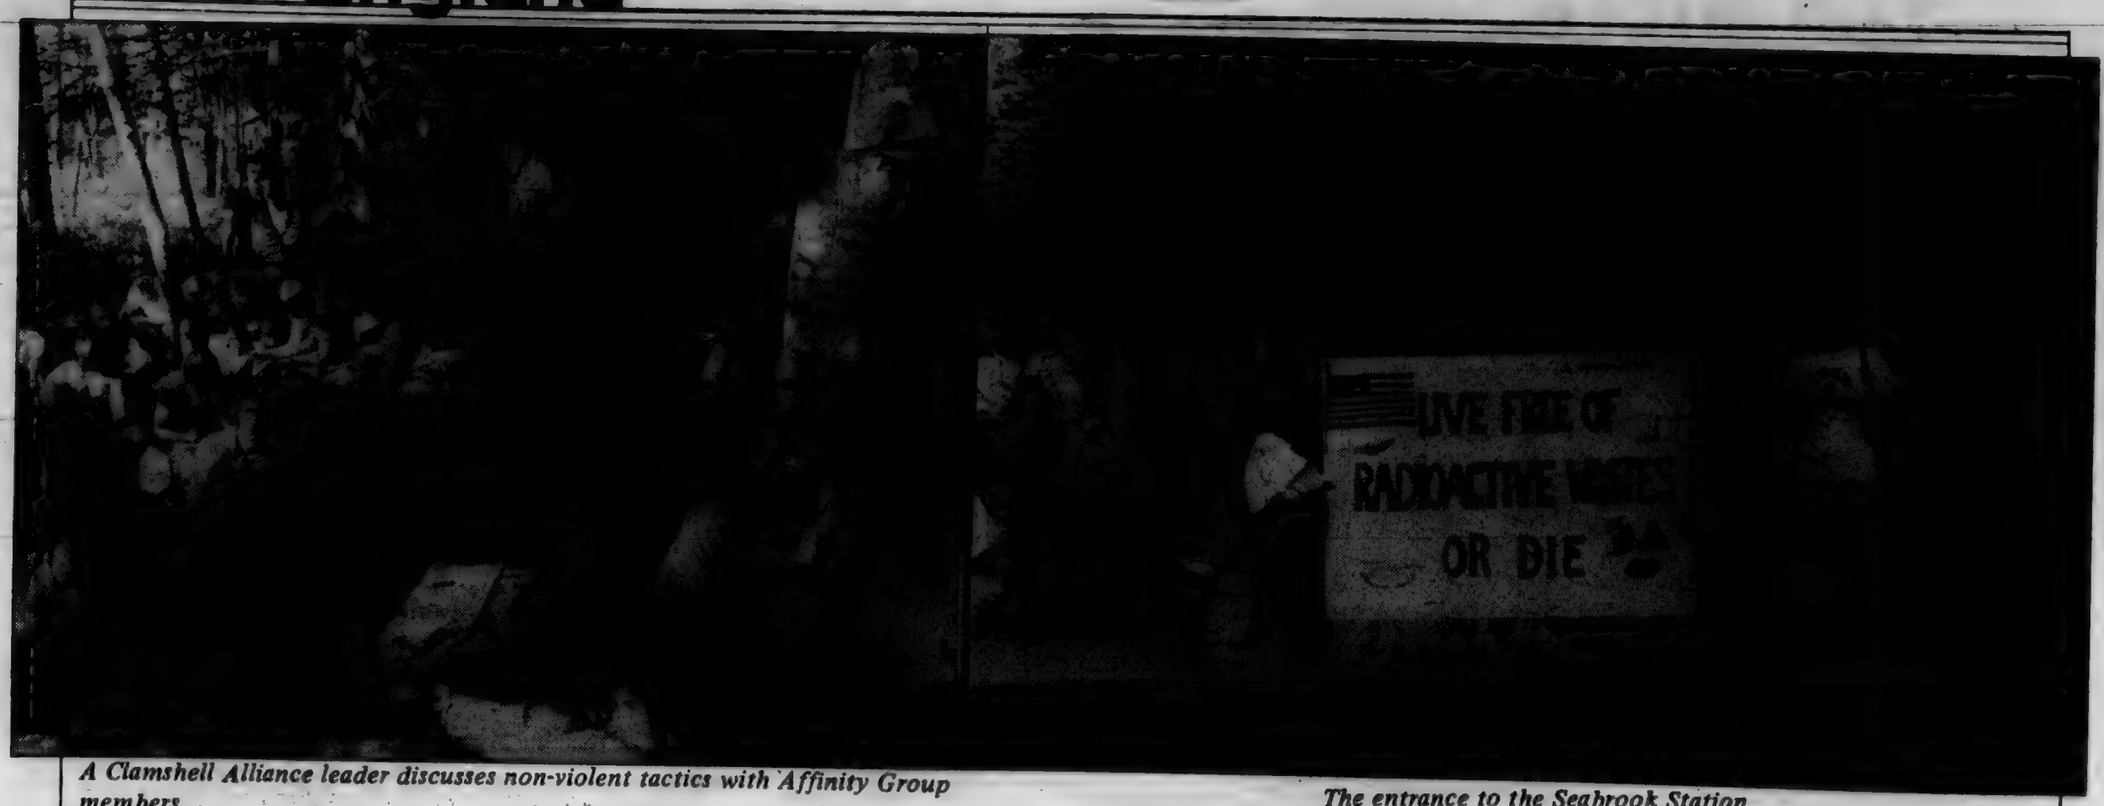
The massive switch to solar won't be easy. In a highly organized, aging society, ingrained practices, rigid institutions and habits are an impressive wall of resistance to change. In particular, the large corporations which contro non-renewable energy have been fearfully skeptical of a solar revolution.

Although the National Energy Act is still stalled in Congress, sentiment for solar is growing on Capitol Hill. "What happened on Sun Day was enough to strike fear in the fear of any politician. I hope it did in the President's heart," said Jeffords, a founding member of the Congressional Solar Coalition.

Created in December 1976, the coalition is a loose group of about 80 senators and congressmen and wide range of outside interests, who are committed to developing solar technologies as soon as possible through aggressive federal leadership. The solar strategy is to build up commercial markets to reduce the per unit cost of solar equipment. The transition to renewable energy sources will require large incentives and subsidies, including tax credits for home-owners and businesses, a Solar Bank for low-interest loans, converting government buildings to solar, and introducing solar to less developed countries.



The international market presents the most immediate hope. In the Third World countries, energy costs are so high that solar is cost competitive now. According to Jeffords the world-wide promotion of solar power offers an alternative to the problems of supplying nuclear facilities to relatively unstable countries; and by exporting solar technology, the U.S. would improve its balance of payments and world image. The development of foreign markets would also make solar more competitive sooner in the U.S. The Department of Commerce is planning a global survey of potential solar markets; and the United Nations is moving to form a solar and appropriate technologies task force.

Jeffords is modest about his solar leadership: "If I were on one of the energy committees, I would be more of a leader. We're trying to work outside the committee structure by amending bills on the House floor." Still, Jeffords deserves credit for doubling last year's solar budget. This year, he added amendments to the CETA bill to train people how to install solar equipment. And two years ago, Jeffords worked hard for a Burlington solar power plant using photvoltaic cells which operate even on sunless days. Jeffords reasoned that if solar worked in cloudy Burlington, it would work anywhere!

However gung-ho, Jeffords pointed out several problems with solar. Solar power plants providing cities with electricity would be mostly peak load plants. Especially at night, anyone relying on solar would need a back up system. Poor people may bear high electricity rates if they can't afford solar. And people who build solar units must be protected from neighbors blocking the sun.

All is not easy in promoting the advantages of using the sun's rays. Jeffords related his most difficult Sun Day experience was following Jackson Browne's act and trying to talk seriously about solar to 10,000 people looped on beer without getting thrown off the stage!

—Tom Daniels

A Clamshell Alliance leader discusses non-violent tactics with Affinity Group members.

The entrance to the Seabrook Station.

Photos by Rob Swanson

Seabrook '78

'An Alternative Energy Fair?'

Story by Clamshell Alliance member Peter MacAusland

Construction continues at the twin unit nuclear power plant site at Seabrook, New Hampshire. The Public Service Company of New Hampshire (PSC), the state's largest electric utility which is funding the construction of the plant, estimates that the first reactor is 15% complete and is scheduled to be in operation sometime in 1984.

The Clamshell Alliance, a broad-based group which has been actively opposing construction of the plant for several years now, targeted the site last weekend as they staged a three-day demonstration with the permission and cooperation of the PSC and the state of New Hampshire. The demonstration, which actually resembled an alternative energy fair, was held on an eighteen acre parcel of land, formerly Seabrook's town dump, but now part of the 715 acre zone where the nuclear plant complex will sprawl. Woodchips had been spread on parts of the demo site by the PSC to spruce up the otherwise barren area.

Solar ovens, windmills, methane toilets, tee pees and vegetarian food stands were among the exhibits which lined open spaces at the demo site. Dozens of organizations passed out literature and conducted applications of alternative energy sources. Included among the organizations were the Mobilization for Survival, an international group dedicated to the disarmament of nuclear weapons; the Rocky Flats Truth Force, which is working towards the shut down of the federally-owned Rocky Flats weapons production plant outside Denver, Colorado where plutonium triggers are produced for nuclear weapons; and the University of Vermont Extension Service, who provided solar-baked cookies, popcorn, and other food.

Estimates of the event's attendance figure, including both Clamshell members and the general public, varied from a low of 4,000 to a high of 20,000. Most estimates fell in the range of 6,000 to 12,000. Several thousand 'clams,' or members of the Clamshell Alliance, camped in the woods of the demo site for two nights, while the general public was allowed on the site during day time hours only.

The current cost estimate for Seabrook Station, as it is named at the front gate, is 2.3 billion dollars. The construction of the first of two nuclear reactors is taking place in an eighty acre zone; it is enclosed by two eight foot high chain link fences with five strands of barbed wire on top. At times, the work force at Seabrook Station reaches 2,000 workers. Work is done twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. At nighttime, the construction area resembles a scene out of the movie 2001. Floodlights illuminate the ten story tall concrete making factory and the half dozen cranes which break up the skyline. It is a sight to see.

Last weekend's action had been originally planned as an occupation. The Clamshell Alliance had organized three previous occupations at the site. At the first, on August 1, 1976, eighteen Clamshell members marched onto the site, via railroad tracks, and were arrested for criminal trespassing. The second occupation happened less than three weeks later, on August 18, and one hundred-eighty arrests resulted. Last year, the third occupation began on May 1, with several thousand clams, all who had received non-violent training, occupying the parking lot located adjacent to the construction area. The following day, 1414 arrests were made and the event received world-wide attention.

In the fall of 1977, the Clamshell Alliance announced plans for a fourth occupation, to take place June 24, 1978. Meanwhile, the state of New Hampshire prepared for a potential confrontation. New Hampshire Governor Meldrim Thompson and Attorney General Thomas Rath repeatedly stated that 'law and order' would be maintained at Seabrook Station through whatever means were necessary. Religious organizations requested permission to act as observors. One month before the fourth occupation, Rath proposed that a legal demonstration take place rather than an occupation. Although they initially rejected the proposal, the coordinating committee of the Clamshell, composed of twenty-five regional representatives from throughout New England states, New York and other areas, decided on June 10 that the occupation be 'cancelled' and that the Clamshell would accept the Rath proposal. The switch from an occupation to a demonstration was justified by the threat of a hardline approach by state authorities should Clamshell attempt to occupy the site. Also, while local citizenry apparently oppose the plant, they were going to withdraw support of the Clamshell for fear of violence.

The demonstration was successful in ways, however. No arrests were made and because of the peaceful and lawful nature of the event, attendance increased. It was a weekend where nuclear education was plentiful and free; where veteran occupiers were reunited; and where discussion of the Clams' future abounded.

Construction continues at Seabrook Station while the Clamshell will continue to research methods to permanently stop nuclear power from being generated in Seabrook, New Hampshire.

alternative energy systems

Jackson Browne and Pete Seeger jam for 5,000 Clams.

Cover Story

City Hall vs. the BTOC:

The Rhetorical Battle For Rent Control

Mayor Gordon Paquette

David Watts
lawyer, Vermont Legal Aid

Burlington Tenants
Organizing Committee

Swanson Photos

Between the charges and countercharges about the feasability of a rent control program in Burlington lies a real and pressing housing shortage. According to Burlington Planning Director Randall Kamerbeek, "three thousand units of new housing are needed to alleviate Burlington's housing problem. Barry Levine, spokesman for the Burlington Tenants Organizing Committee (BTOC), claims "between five and seven thousand units are needed to correct the present shortage of available housing. As a result the demand for housing in Burlington far outweighs the supply. In a free market system, when the suppliers are in control of the market, prices will be high. Coupled with this are skyrocketing property values, speculation within the real estate field, and a large number of students able to pay a disproportionately high part of their income for rent. Consequently, rents throughout the city have soared.

As a possible solution to the problem of increasing rents in Burlington, the BTOC has proposed the Base Year Market Value Formula for Rent Control. Under this program, landlords would be held to an 8% profit on the 1976 fair market value of their property over and above legitimate operating expenses (sewage and water tax, maintenance, garbage removal, heat and/or utility costs, fire and liability insurance, and capital improvements).

As an apparent incentive to long-term ownership and maintenance of a building, the program includes a profit increase allowance for every four years a person owns a building. After a renter has owned his house for four years, an 8½% profit would be allowed, after eight years, an 8¾% profit, and after twelve years of ownership, a 9% profit could be realized. UVM Economics professor Tim Bates, who proposed the idea of graduated rate of return says profits allowed under this program are "generous."

The program also includes provisions for eviction control. A tenant could be evicted for damaging property, continually creating a nuisance, not attempting to pay, or being two or more months behind on his rent, or if the landlord chooses to move back into his house. Presently, a tenant can be evicted for any reason the landlord deems suitable.

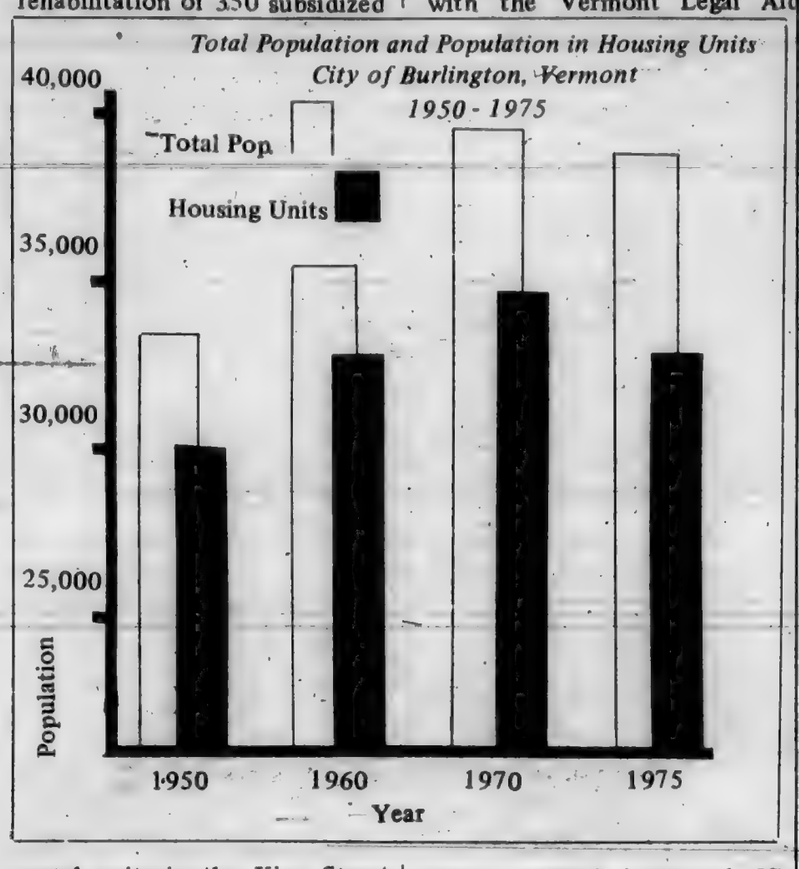
Rent Control would be a city-run program, with a Rent Control Administrator to handle complaints and make basic decisions. A landlord or tenant who disagrees will go to a Rent Control Board made up of tenants and city officials. Their decisions will be final. The cost of such an office in Boston costs about $5.60 per unit per year in 1972. Barry Levine, spokesman for the BTOC, said the cost of such an office in Burlington will be close to the Boston figure. The fee would be shared equally by landlord and tenant.

The legal questions surrounding the implementation of such a proposal have yet to be answered. Presently, no state laws or any notice in the Burlington city charter gives Burlington the authority to establish rent control. According to David Watts, an attorney with the Vermont Legal Aid Office, Burlington could either enact a rent control ordinance or go to the state legislature and have the city charter amended to give them the power to enact rent control. Watts added, however, even though the city may be right in wanting to enact rent control, there is still a "significant" legal question as to whether they could win in court.

Mayor Gordon Paquette contends the BTOC plan for rent control would be "unconstitutional." The plan calls for no rent control on new construction, and an 8% profit ceiling for only landlords owning existing rental property. Restricting one man's profits and not another's, said the mayor, is not "constitutionally right." He further charges that rent control "hasn't worked" and leads to abandonment and deterioration of buildings, and reduces the number of available rental units.

By controlling rent in one section of town and not on newly constructed units, new investment would be discouraged according to Planning Director Randall Kamerbeek. He said new investors buying existing property would be trying to pay off a 12-14% mortgage, and clearing only an 8% profit. In addition, without controls on new units, low and moderate income people would not be able to afford the rent; and if the BTOC is advocating low and moderate rents, why are they not asking for controls on new construction?

Yet, the BTOC contends the exemption of newly built multi-family units from controls may even serve as an incentive to build. They point out that in New Jersey, new construction in rent controlled cities between 1970-1976 was greater than in non-controlled cities.



Countering the argument that rent control leads to abandonment and deterioration, the BTOC claims the system through tax shelters, capital gains, accelerated depreciation allowances, and soft, uncontrolled upkeep regulations encourage landowners not to improve their property. Levine said slums become worth more now because of inflated land values, therefore why should owners maintain buildings?

The BTOC also questions Burlington's monetary priorities.

John Letteri serves an intern at the Burlington Free Press, as well as the Ass't to the Editor of the Cynic.

If the city can afford $50,000 defending their stance against Pyramid Mall and between five and seven million dollars for its own mall, why can't they build some low and moderate rent housing?

Paquette said Burlington is spending this money to expand its tax base so it can afford to take the burden off the middle class taxpayer. Through the easing of zoning regulations, the rehabilitation of 350 subsidized rental units in the King Street area, and the building of 500 more rental units under the Burlington Housing Authority, the city is making efforts to provide low rent housing and encourage investment, said Paquette. He added that commercial expansion strengthens the city's tax base, keeps personal taxes lower and rent increases to a minimum.

The city of Burlington is simply not the booming, prosperous neighborhood many believe it to be. According to Kamerbeek, Burlington's tax base is growing at half the rate of the rest of Chittenden County's, and the rate of the city's tax rate growth is not keeping up with inflation. In addition, the city has seen its dependence on federal and state funds grow from $360,000 in 1950 to over $6,000,000 in 1977. Burlington has experienced a net decline in population from 1970-1975 of -5%. Complicating this is an "unhealthy" population graph showing the largest percentage of Burlington's population to be under 25 and over 54. Kamerbeek said these two groups are the most heavily dependent on governmental services and assistance. They are less likely to make large consumer purchases than the group from 25-54, who have simply "moved out" he said. Finally, Burlington and Winooski house 98% of the people in Chittenden County who receive governmental assistance. The city has some "real" financial problems, Kamerbeek said.

********

Thus, the Burlington housing shortage is left unresolved amidst rhetoric about rent control. Although rent control might keep rents at a level that low and moderate income people can afford, the fact that the program will not include any new housing creates a contradiction in terms. Both parties agree that in the area of three to five thousand units is needed to relieve Burlington's housing shortage. If however these new units are not under rent control, would low and moderate income people be able to afford them?

The vacancy rate in Burlington, according to BTOC spokesman Barry Levine, is .5% A BTOC pamphlet claims it is 6%, and David Watts, attorney with the Vermont Legal Aid Office, claims it is around .2%. Who is correct?

Levine contends the problem of the housing shortage is the result of "the free market system losing its ability to house their people." UVM Economics Professor Timothy Bates says the free market system "does not claim" to promote meeting people's needs, but rather "to supply according to the ability to pay." Levine represents a tenant's advocacy group, and inaccurate statements do not help solve Burlington's housing shortage.

Representatives of the BTOC waited three hours in a 'hot and stifling room' before the Burlington Board of Alderman permitted them into their meeting for a presentation on the need for rent control. The BTOC had collected 2600 signatures in favor of rent control and the mayor's own Housing and Development Task Force recommended a study of Rent Control for Burlington. Yet, the aldermen see their legislators.

A quote from a BTOC pamphlet says, "There are many untruths about rent control, being spread by those who profit from high units. 'It doesn't work' claims the landlords, speculators, and their friends in media and government."

Action and rhetoric by both parties suggests that neither has outgrown the style of the 1960's with the "establishment" on one side and "the radicals" on the other. Claims and counterclaims, sometimes inaccurate, accomplish nothing but a clogging of any possible path to a solution to the housing shortage. It is time that both sides should carefully study what the effects of rent control in Burlington would be, determine its feasibility or not, and act on it. Realistic thinking, careful study, and constructive ideas, are necessary if Burlington's housing crisis is to be relieved.

John Letteri

Swanson Photos

R.W. Hunt's Presents
Zzebra Wed & Thurs July 5 & 6
Arm & Hammer String Band Fri & Sat July 7 & 8
Michael Hurley July 9 Sun
HUNT'S
101 Main 863·9850

E&E TIRE
with extra effort service

152 Riverside Ave. 864-7759

Visit the TENNIS SPECIALTY SHOP
• One Day Stringing
• Instant Repairs

TENNIS RACKETS by:
Davis, Bancroft, Head, Wilson, Donnay, Yamaha, Dunlop, Prince.
TENNIS CLOTHING by:
Bogner, Wilson, Profile, Duofold, Head, White Stag, The Line, Billie Jean King, Jelenk, Robert Bruce, Court Casuals, Adidas.
TENNIS SHOES by:
Tretorn, Bancroft, Puma, Adidas, Bata
ALPINE SHOP
WILLISTON RD., SO. BURLINGTON
OPEN DAILY 9 AM-9 PM
COR. OF CHERRY & SO. WINOOSKI DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

finbars

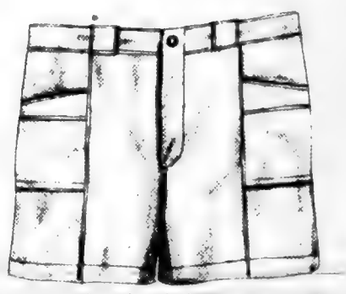
onion soup, salads, sandwiches, homemade desserts, daily specials

serving from 12 – 9

167 main st., burlington

★ Prompt Delivery ★ 10c Pitchers

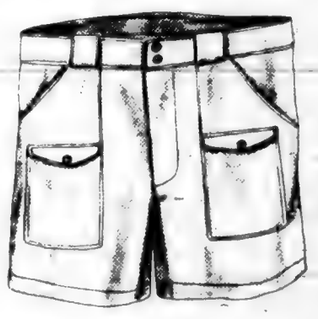
★ Whole Wheat Pizza ★ Thick or Thin Crust



π PI EXPRESS

Winooski 655-3005, 655-0977

Essex Jct 879-6333



The SKI RACK

SHORTS by SPORTIF

Sportif's finest blend of cotton, polyester and spandex for men and women, offers 30% stretchability for comfort and freedom.

$20.00

SHORTS by SPORTIF

Sportif shorts combine styling, unique fabrics and functional design.

Cotton and polyester $15.00

Corduroy $13.50

Also Draw Cord Shorts $16.25

Also available Core-Tex Rainwear
Head & Arena Bathing Suits $14.00
Tee-Shirts, from $3.00
Sandals from $7.75
Swiss Army Knives from $9.20
Shells by Sunbuster
Bicycling gear including Puma Shoes, Bata-Biker Sneakers, Jerseys, Shorts, Gloves, Ponchos and Bell Helmets.

FLASHPACK

Strong, 100% Waterproof Nylon with Waist Strap

$11.50

Children's Sizes available

M, T, W, TH 9:30-6
F 9:30-9
S 9-5
85 Main St.
658-3313

SKI RACK

Summer Travel

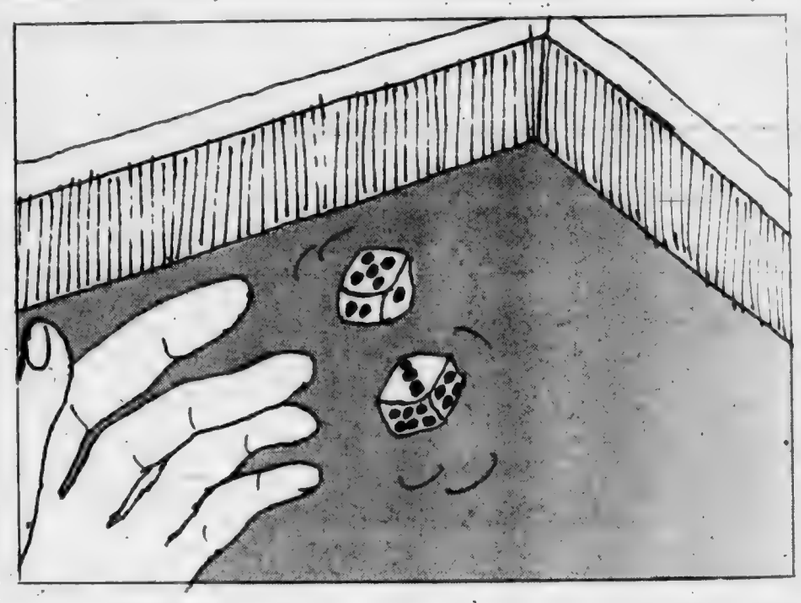
Atlantic City: Still Waiting for the New Era

An advertisement in a recent New Jersey magazine reads: "Funny, nobody's laughing at Atlantic City anymore."



And indeed, the atmosphere there seems to be one of expectancy, rather than ridicule. The dapper executives sporting Sears' sportsjackets and convention stickers are back on the boardwalk again, with smiles on their faces and dollar signs in their eyes. Black and Puerto Rican kids from the low income districts are roaming their familiar territory; gawking in bewilderment and wondering when their childhood hangouts will be replaced with casinos or ritzy novelty shops. There's a lot more activity on the Atlantic City boardwalk nowadays; and like the advertisement says, nobody's laughing.

It wasn't until recently that Atlantic City had anything to laugh about. What had been the resort capitol of the East in the 1920's had plummeted to the status of a sleezy tourist trap by the 1950's. The advent of long ranging transportation had made far-away places more accessible, and more appealing. Florida and the Carribean became the places to go; Atlantic City became a dive. Teenagers and middle-class locals were left as the mainstay of the tourist trade, and the once-famous resort deteriorated. The only forms of renovation were foreclosures and arson.

In 1974, a referendum proposing legalized gambling was voted on, but with Northern New Jersey, the church, and the senior citizens all opposed, it failed. Anti-gambling campaigners promised that Atlantic City could be saved without vice. Two years later, with the city still on the brink of an economic collapse, the vice looked a little nicer. A referendum was again brought to the voters. This time, however, a tax rebate was offered to the elderly, and a set of regulations were imposed on the size of would-be gambling houses, indicating that at least the vice would be a governed one.

In November of the bicentennial year, gambling officially became legal in Atlantic City. This past May, the first casino there – Resorts International – was opened to the public. It was celebrated as the start of a new era for Atlantic City: the casino era; the beginning of economic recovery and social rehabilitation.

Resorts International is still the only casino running in Atlantic City, and it hasn't as yet made much of a difference. But it has brought jobs to a city that in September of last year had an 11% unemployment rate. A security manager at Resorts International reported that some 1700 people are employed at the 1001-room hotel/casino; all of them coming from Atlantic City or nearby. By 1990, it has been estimated, there will be twenty casinos in Atlantic City, providing approximately 100,000 jobs.

But gambling may bring more to this town than employment. It may bring a whole new clientele that – unlike Atlantic City's present tourist trade – can support the gambling industry. One man avidly supporting this trend is Reese Palley, a native of Atlantic City, and a millionaire known internationally for his zany extravagance. It is reported that he once flew 750 of his closest friends to Paris for the weekend to celebrate his 50th birthday. He also likes sailing in the Bermuda Triangle.

Palley makes most of his income from a small but exquisite novelty shop he owns inside of Resorts International. It caters, as he puts it, "to the very rich." Palley loves wealth, and he would like to see more of it in Atlantic City. And so would the rest of the gambling industry, because a customer that can afford Palley's exuberantly priced collection of Edward Boem's porcelain artistry can probably afford a round or two at the $25 minimum black-jack table.

Palley's isn't the only expensive place on the boardwalk. There are other art and novelty shops, as well as clothing and jewelry stores intended for the upper class. As Casinos buy into land (Resorts International, for example, owns about two blocks on the boardwalk), many merchants believe the rents will become inflated.

Photo by Greg Kohl

"They're (the gambling industry) a big business, so naturally they're going to want higher rents," said one shop-owner that predicted that she would be forced out of the boardwalk by Labor Day. "They want to attract rich people and expensive stores." But she also maintained that it was Atlantic City's only alternative and conceded that without gambling she would probably be out of business soon anyway.

One issue that plagues Atlantic City is crime, organized and unorganized. Police Chief William Brink estimates that criminal acts could increase by as much as 50% with the onset of gambling casinos, and that many of them (white collar offenses, in particular) will be new to his men. Brink further complains that he is understaffed and unable to support a worthy police force on his "nickel and dime budget."

That the mafia might want to move in on legalized gambling would come as no surprise to state and local officials. Some evidence suggests that they have already tried:

—Two restaurants, Cassanova's and Le Bristo, have been under surveillance for possible connections with underworld families. One of them, Le Bristo, has been denied a state liquor licence although the reasons for this are unknown.

—A member of the Gambino crime family has attempted to purchase a casino. His offer was $12 million, but he could not explain how he intended to raise the amount.

—The Bally Corp., which is in the process of designing a casino, recently had to fire an employee because of his alleged connections with the underground in New Jersey.

—Caesar's World Inc., which is also planning a casino, has been investigated because of reputed negotiations with a mafia lawyer in Miami.

—Angelo Bruno, a known mafiaso from Philadelphia, is now settled and employed in Atlantic City. His business John's Wholesale Distributors, has tripled its profits since the gambling referendum was passed.

But even if the mafia stays out, and the rich people move in – which is what Atlantic City is hoping for – there will still be a housing problem, because much of the city is run down. The blacks on the south side, and the Puerto Ricans on the north side both claim that there is a housing shortage. They made their feelings known this May by picketing in front of the Resorts International on opening day.

One suggestion has been to fill in Atlantic City's 4800 acres of wetlands. Contracting unions applaud this idea, for they see the wetlands as an unused potential. The State Department of Environmental Protection, however, says no. Their opinion is that the wetlands are a valuable wildlife asset.

Whether the wetlands survive, and whether the poor are going to be "renovated" out of their homes depends ultimately upon the extent that gambling and its desired clientele settle into the city. It's difficult to tell at this time, whether Atlantic City has attracted a lot of serious gamblers. The crowd I saw there seemed primarily concerned with fun and relaxation, and most of those I talked to had never gambled before.

One elderly man from New Jersey told me that he had lost about $80 at the same slot machine he was playing at the moment. He seemed rather undisturbed by it all, and I asked him if he had ever lost that much money before.

"Haw, but what the hell? I'm old." he said, "besides, I can lose my money any way I want, and it's fun."

Just then, the machine rattled and a prize of several dollars spilt onto the gully below. "Correction!" he announced, "I am now down only 65 dollars..."

I saw quite a few jackpot winners on the one-armed bandits, but none of them were my doing. My own efforts were spent meagerly on fifteen silver dollars which I managed to hold onto for not quite half an hour. My first two plays won me twenty dollars, but like the extremist I am, I continued (stick a carrot in front of my nose and I'll walk for miles). It wasn't long before I was extremely broke.

The Resorts International casino room is at a constant din sparkled simultaneously with elation and disappointment. Its decor is actually in its people, for they seem to cover every inch of the place. The slot machines columnize the crowds into straight and steady lines, while the black-jack, baccarat, and craps tables resemble swells of disturbance within the smooth circulation of normally meandering people. Waitresses with skin-tight mini-skirts force their way through the crowd with restrained hostility. Security guards stroll around with walkie-talkies looking for prostitutes and what one of them referred to as "anyone just standing around and watching for big winners to hit later."

The novelty of a casino in Atlantic City has not worn off yet; and the townspeople – who shun the dress code – are always being stopped at the door. "But I just want to look!" they say. And who can blame them; it's the first time that big money has gone around in their town in years.

—Randy McMullen

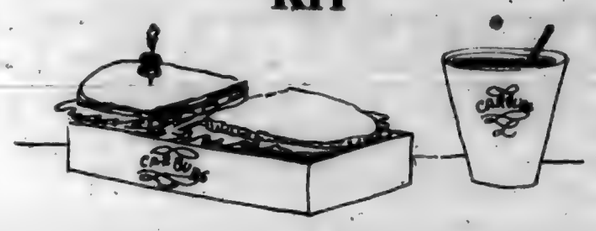
JULY 3-8 ONLY/ 20% OFF
(CLOSED TUESDAY JULY 4)
all seven books in the
BROWN PAPER BAG SERIES
a learning series for kids & grownups together
I HATE MATHEMATICS Book; THE NIGHT SKY BOOK;
MY BACKYARD HISTORY Book; BLOOD AND GUTS;
I AM NOT A SHORT ADULT; EVERYBODY'S A WINNER
REASONS FOR SEASONS

BOOKSTACKS
Pine Street between Main & College
862-8513
Open Weeknights 8pm. (fri-9)

A Gift Shop For Adults... and Other Children
Gifts
Decoratives
Toys

Geppetto's
19 Church Street
(Next To Prestons)

the alibi
Middlebury's Night Spot



This Weekend;
Bongo Moon
FROG ALLEY
MIDDLEBURY,
VERMONT

CARBUR'S

CARBUR'S

OUTDOOR SURVIVAL KIT

CARBUR'S "GRANDWICH"

Roast Beef, Turkey, Tuna,
Ham 'n Cheese, or Corned Beef

JUMBO COLD DRINKS

Coke, Tab, Sprite
Gingerale, Root Beer, or Iced Tea

PICKLE & CHIPS

JUICY, RED APPLE

$2.35 CHEAP!

Call ahead & Pick it up!

119 St. Paul Street
Burlington 864-9631
Plattsburgh 561-3663

Tape Art

Panasonic RS-462S

RS-462S
AC/Battery Stereo portable cassette recorder with FM/AM stereo radio features two 5" PM dynamic speakers. Two built-in condenser mikes. Super Alloy head. $CrO_2$/normal tape selector. Level/battery/tuning meter. Cue and review. Lockable pause control. Tape counter. Auto-Stop/Aut leep. Separate tone, volume and balance controls. AFC on FM. With AC cord and 6 Panasonic "D" size batteries.

$189.95

ALL SALES BACKED BY OUR FAMOUS SERVICE
BAILEY'S
MUSIC ROOMS - Church St. - Burl., Vt. 863-3210

Summer Health

SELF - CARE :

RUN FOR YOUR LIFE !

Medical expenses are increasing annually in the United States. An estimated $200 billion or 20% of the gross national product will be spent this year on drugs, x-rays, surgery, physicians' fees, lab tests, etc.

Clearly, the medical establishment has become a threat to the average American's budget, yet it is ironic, since most laymen cooperate so freely. That is why "self-care" has become medicine's fastest-rolling new bandwagon: the idea of self-care is that health care should, to some degree, be taken out of the hands of physicians and put back into the hands of consumers; the stress being placed on more self-reliance. People should start taking greater responsibility for the prevention and treatment of at least some illnesses.

About 50% to 80% of the people who see a physician have a self-limiting condition, or some problem that can't be treated or doesn't exist, such as simple colds, agree most doctors. Additionally, a large number of people that are justified in visiting a doctor have illnesses that are partially or completely preventable illnesses including the emphesema and lung cancer associated with heavy smoking; liver disease associated with heavy drinking; breast cancer, resulting from irresponsible judgment by women who are either incapable of spotting the symptoms or who deliberately choose to ignore them; the anemia and nutrition-related diseases resulting from improper diet; peptic ulcers, caused by emotional difficulties or an overconsumption of rich irritants as aspirin or coffee; and many others. The National Cancer Institute recently suggested that close to 90% of all cancers are related to environmental factors and are thus, hypothetically, preventable.

One of the problems of orthodox medicine is that it produces physicians who are only capable of diagnosing and treating "disease." "Health care" is really only "illness care." This, in effect, leaves people to fend for themselves if they are interested in preventing illness. Admittedly, there is some attempt by physicians to prevent illness such as the campaign to reduce overeating and increase exercise; yet their approach is generally curative. As an example of the merit of prevention, medical self-care is definitely not an effort to do away with doctors. Indeed, much of the present support for self-care comes from within the health professions. Government health officials, health insurance companies, and leaders of the medical profession seem to agree with the prediction that "one of the most exciting things that's going to happen in the next ten years will be the increasing involvement of patients in their own health care."

Self-care enables the doctor to play a greater role as an educator. Also, self-care means that doctors won't have to spend the majority of their time seeing colds and nosebleeds. Instead, they can devote more time to patients having serious illness.

To what extent should patients become involved in their own health and illness care? When is a visit to the doctor truly warranted?

To what extent should patients become involved in their own health and illness care? When is a visit to the doctor truly warranted? With regard to prevention, the sky's the limit. Lifestyle is a personal thing and can be easily adapted. To increase your chances of attaining and maintaining good physical and mental health a few suggestions are to:

—Eat nutritiously and modestly — eat less fatty foods such as meat, whole dairy, and fried foods. Eat less refined and processed foods such as white bread and highly sugared and salted products which provide little nutritional value. Be wary of chemical additives, especially artificial colorings. Eat more fresh fruits, vegetables, whole grains and their breads. Keep within a few pounds of your ideal weight.

—Exercise frequently without over-exerting.

—Drink alcohol moderately or not at all.

—Don't smoke.

—Balance work with play. Learn to relax.

—Learn to spot the body's warning signals. For women, this may include being familiar with the technique of breast examination and learning how to use blood pressure apparatus.

These suggestions won't necessarily guarantee a longer life. With the nation's recent reduction in cigarette smoking, the change in dietary pattern, and the increase in exercise, we have witnessed a decrease in heart-disease related deaths and a three to four year increase in life expectancy. What it will do is increase your well-being on a day-to-day basis.

Through self-care classes taught by health professionals and through the advice of your physician, the preparation for self-illness care can be done through authoritative books and manuals that use simple charts giving steps to take for certain symptoms. Some possible uses of self-illness care are dealing with the common cold, and even carrying out elementary surgical procedures. The potential for reduced health costs is mind boggling, not only on an individual level but on a national level. It seems as if medical self-care is just what the doctor ordered.

—Barry Gustin

Barry Gustin is the Summer Cynic summer health columnist.

Classifieds

MISCELLANEOUS

Wanted Dead at UVM tape. Quality recording, will trade for other quality Dead tapes. If you can help call Keith or Connie 655-1306.

Magnavox Stereo, portable w/ attached speakers & drop-down turntable area, diamond needle, 8 years old, $150 new, asking $60. Very good sound for low price. Only reason for selling, was given component system for Xmas. 864-7657.

Upholstered swivel rocking chair, orange stretch cover included, structurally excellent, green fabric with stain on cushion so needs cover (included), $60 new, asking $25. 864-7657.

Graves GS fiberglass skis — 185 cm. NEW — never even drilled, no bindings, navy blue, $87 newly bought, asking $40. Only reason for selling — they're too long for me. 864-7657.

Brookfield Ice Skates, white leather, size 8B (ladies), asking $6. Very good condition, hardly used. Blade guards included. Also light brown/blonde short

SERVICES RENDERED

Editorial Services — Editing, rewriting, indexing. Professional, reasonable. 862-4863.

Babysitting — evenings and weekends for a good 2 year old boy. Prefer someone with a car, but not necessary. Within walking distance of UVM. Call 658-4041 weekdays after 6 p.m.

Photography instruction. All ages and levels. Basic darkroom technique, advanced B&W technique, color printing, basic camera, 10 years teaching experience. 864-9267, Mark.

Folk guitar lessons. Patient teacher, 10 years teaching experience, all ages & levels. Also mandolin, harmonica, tin whistle, autoharp, theory & notation. Call Bob Shaw, 862-0543.

Saxophone, clarinet, recorder. Private instruction in your home or common place. 434-3957.

Cynic Classified Ads Are FREE.
Why not use them?
Vice Billings Center
Burlington, VT 05401

HELP WANTED

A year in the Big Apple! Couple with two children in a great neighborhood seeking a college-age girl interested in living in New York City, caring for children and housekeeping. $85/week plus room & board & airfare. Send a letter describing yourself and your qualifications to Thomas Viertel, 47 East 88th Street, New York, NY 10028.

AUDIO/VIDEO

For sale — 19 in Sears B&W TV, 2 years old. Perfect condition with wig used about 6 times, $40 new, asking $5.00, includes stand & storage case. 864-7657.

Olympia typewriter, large portable, new ribbon, 8 yrs. old, $148 new, asking $79. Manual, very good condition. Only reason for selling — desire electric typewriter. 864-7657.

rollabout stand. $100. Call Connie or Keith at 655-1306.

For sale — Craig Powerplay model T180 car cassette player with slide 20 watts RMS — used 1 week. New $160, asking $90. 864-9267 Mark.

AUTOMOTIVE

1970 Saab 95 station wagon, rebuilt engine, in excellent running condition, with radial tires. Asking $500. Call 863-3515.

VW squareback 1971, light blue; standard shift; 8,000 miles on rebuilt engine (77,000 total); 1974 "brain" recently installed; studded snows; AM radio; runs well; inspected til October; minor rust; maintained at Ron's Mobil — engine rebuilt by Chuck Rollins (Ron's brother). Asking $900. Must sell - bought new car. Call Bonnie (864-7657) noon — 1 and after 4:30 p.m. weekdays or anytime weekends.

1971 Capri 2000 — looks rough but runs well. New alternator, water pump, and wiper motor, radial tires, 8-track stereo, 71,000 miles, vinyl top, $400 takes it away. Call Hugh at 862-3942 evenings and weekends, 862-7888 weekdays.

APARTMENT WANTED

3 or 4 bedroom apartment wanted for this coming school year. Call Tad at 863-6857 after 7 p.m.

When you work up an appetite . . . Come to Finast!

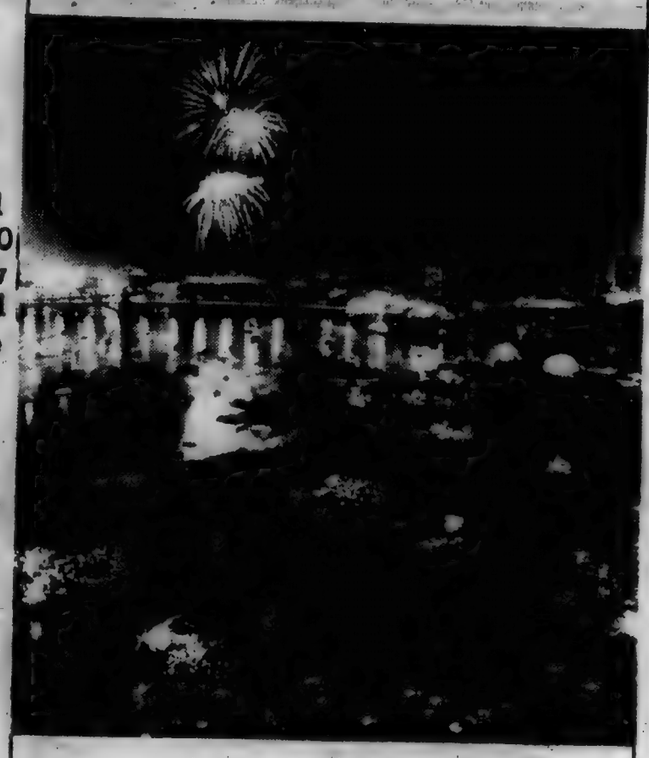
Finast has all your favorite snacks ready . . . we knew you would be hungry!

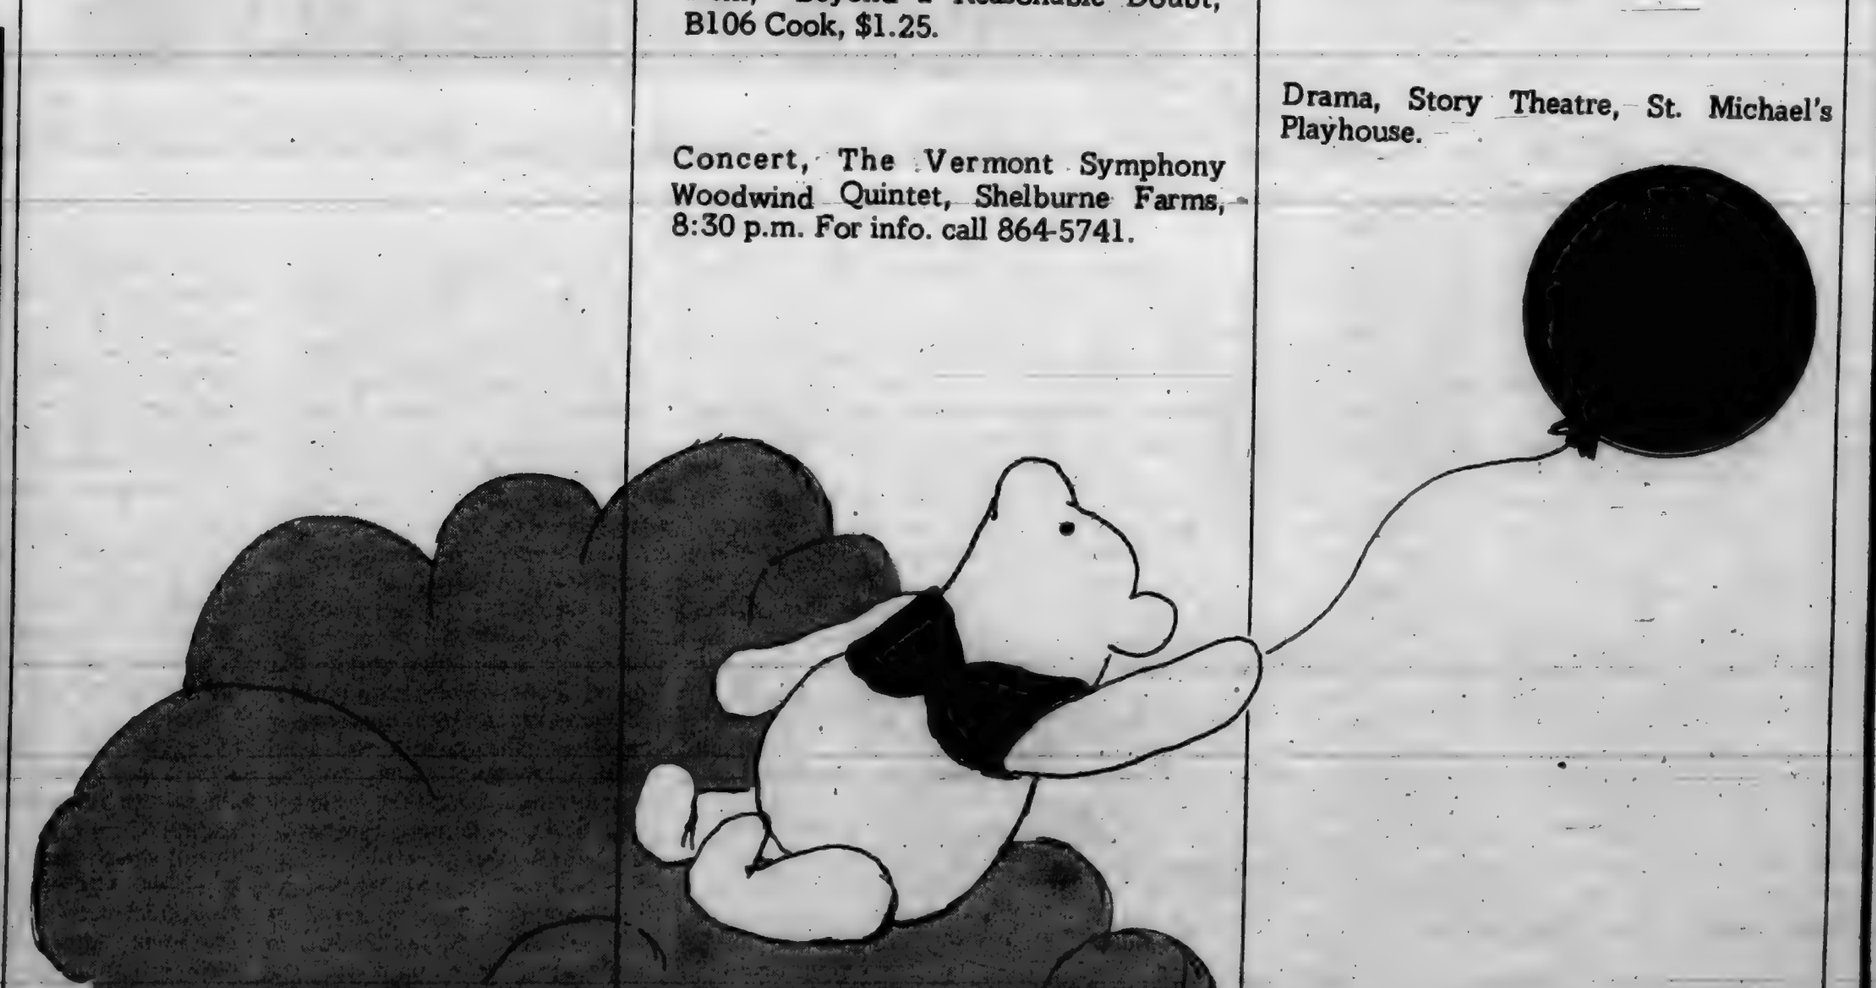
- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruits
- Your favorite cold beverages

and just about everything you can think of!

Visit Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.





Finast SUPERMARKETS

825 WILLISTON ST. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

calendar

| THURSDAY | FRIDAY | SATURDAY | SUNDAY |
|---|---|---|---|
| 29 Drama, "The Sunshine Boys," St. Michael's Playhouse, 8:30, $5.Children's Film, "Zebra in the Kitchen," 101 Votey Bldg., 1:30 p.m., 50 cents.  Music, The UVM Baroque Ensemble, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m. | 30 Lake Champlain Cruise and Concert; Appearing: Pine Island. Ferry leaves King St. dock at 8:00; tickets $6 at Oz or Bailey's, or $6.50 at gate. For info. call 862-4298.Drama, "The Sunshine Boys," St. Michael's Playhouse, 8:30, $5. | 1 Films, "The Impressionists," "World in a Marsh," "Christmas Cracker," "Fiddle Dee-Dee," and "Bip at a Society Party" (Marcel Marceau); Four Winds Gallery, Ferrisburg, 5:00 p.m.; $2.50 adults, $1.50 students. For info., call 125-2101.Taj Mahal and Tom Rush, 4 p.m.; Sugarbush Ski Area, Warren, Vt., tickets $7.75 in advance, $8.75 day of the concert. Available at Upstairs Records.  Concert, Seals and Crofts; Thompson Arena, Dartmouth College, 8 p.m.; for ticket info. call 603-646-2422. | 2 Concert, The V Symphony Or Shelburne F Shelburne, Vt; 7 p.m., ticke Bailey's, Merchant's Bank, Symphony Box Office (86 Fireworks, bring a blanket.Green Mountain Country Banjo Essex Junction.John Sebastian and Richie H p.m. Sugarbush Ski Area, War tickets $7.75 in advance and $ of the concert. Available at Records. |
| 6 Reception for UVM Summer Session staff and students, 3:30 – 5:00 p.m. W.D.W. Lounge, free punch.Film, "From Here to Eternity," B106 Cook Bldg., 8 p.m., $1.25.International Folk Dancing, 8 p.m., Southwick Ballroom, UVM campus, $1.00.Opening performance, Champlain Shakespeare Festival. "Twelfth Night" Royall Tyler Theatre 8 p.m., call 656-2095 for info.TV, Educational TV; In Search of the Real America, "Black Progress," 8:30 p.m., Roots author Alex Haley and Georgia State Senator Julian Bond join Ben Wattenberg.Drama, Stowe Summer Theatre; "Gigi," 8:30 p.m., call 253-9022 for info.Children's Film, "The Little Prince," 101 Votey Bldg., 1:30 p.m., 50 cents. | 7 Lake Champlain Cruise and concert; Appearing: John Cassel and band; Ferry leaves King St. dock at 8; Tickets $6 at Oz or Bailey's or $6.50 at gate. For info. call 862-4298.Drama, Stowe Summer Theatre, "Gigi," 8:30 p.m., call 253-9022 for info.Champlain Shakespeare Festival, "Twelfth Night," Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m. For ticket info. call 656-2095.  | 8 Champlain Shakespeare Festival, "Twelfth Night," Royall Tyler Theatre 8 p.m. call 656-2095 for ticket info.Bluegrass and Folk Festival, featuring Jon Gilmor. Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys; Dick McCormick; Okemo Ski Area, Ludlow, Vt. Basically a rerun of Monday's (3) Vermont Music Festival with some amateur talent on the side. Call Green Mountain Records for more info (485 2594).Earl Scruggs Revue; 4 p.m. Sugarbush Ski Area. Tickets $7.75 in advance, $8.75 day of the concert. Available at Upstairs Records.Sailing HOBIE CAT DAY! The Hobie Cat Sailing Fleet of Lake Champlain will give free rides and demonstrations to the public at the Ferry Dock at the foot of King Street. (Rain Date is Sunday, July 9)TV, Educational TV; Bonnie Raitt and Mose Allison in concert on "In Performance at Wolf Trap." 10 p.m. | 9 Concert, Michael H Hunts, 101 Main St. ticket and times, 863-9850.  |

june 29 - july 12

| NDAY | MONDAY | TUESDAY | WEDNESDAY |
|---|---|---|---|
| Concert, The Vermont Symphony Orchestra, Shelburne Farms, Vt; 7 p.m., tickets $6 at Merchant's Bank, or Vt. y Box Office (864-5741). bring a blanket.ntain Country Banjo Festival, ion.stian and Richie Havens; 4 bush Ski Area, Warren, Vt., 75 in advance and $8.75 day ncert. Available at Upstairs | 3 Vermont Music Festival, featuring Jon Gilmor, Banjo Dan and the Midnight Plowboys, Coco and the Lonesome Road Band, Dick McCormick and more; Bonnie Oaks Resort, Fairlee Vt., 2 p.m.; tickets $3.00 there, call 485-8594 for info.TV, Educational TV; Quebec and the Third Option; 7:30 p.m. Features interview with Province Liberal Party leader, Claude Ryan. | 4 TV, Educational TV; Evening at the Pops Special: on the Esplanade, 8 p.m.  Drama, Stowe Summer Theatre, "Gigi," 8:30 p.m., call 253-9022 for info.ETV, Rene Levesque: A Portrait of Independence, Jack Barry's interview with the Quebec premier is repeated. | 5 Lane Series, "The Romeros," St. Joseph's Parish, 8 p.m., tickets $6 at Bailey's or the Lane Series Box Office at 284 East Avenue.Films "In Praise of Hands," 'La Chapelle de Ronchamp," "Wild Fowl in Slow Motion," "Lamentation," "Air on the G String," "Waltz in A," etc. Four Winds Gallery Ferrisburg; $2.50 adults, $1.50 students. For info call 425-2101.Drama, Stowe Summer Theatre, "Gigi" 8:30 p.m. Call 253-9022 for info. |
| oncert, Michael Hurley, lunts, 101 Main St. For icket and times, call 63-9850.  | 10 Scottish Country Dancing, 7:30 p.m., Southwick Ball Room, free. | 11 Children's Films, "Winnie the Pooh," 101 Votey Bldg., 1:30 p.m., 50 cents. Film, "Beyond a Reasonable Doubt," B106 Cook, $1.25.Concert, The Vermont Symphony Woodwind Quintet, Shelburne Farms, 8:30 p.m. For info. call 864-5741. | 12 Children's Film, "Winnie the Pooh," 101 Votey Bldg., 1:30 p.m., 50 cents.Drama, Story Theatre, St. Michael's Playhouse.  |

Cynic Arts & Amusements

Champlain Shakespeare Festival Opens 20th Season July 6

Twelfth Night with comics Julia Brothers, Nancy Siddons-Daniels and Clown Robert Putnam.

Since 1958, the Champlain Shakespeare Festival has been treating both Vermonter and visitor, young and old, to fine productions which prove Shakespeare to be as timeless and universal as English teachers claim. Many people feel intimidated by the Bard of Avon or fear long-winded and boring shows. Not so! The emphasis of the Festival is definitely on fun and entertainment. From pre-show English country dances to ribald comedies and dramatic tragedies, the Festival has become an irresistible event of the Vermont summer.

Starting a Shakespeare Festival was the idea of Greg Falls, then Chairman of the UVM Drama Department. Falls overcame skeptics and tight finances to open the Festival in the 250-seat Arena Theatre in the basement of UVM's Fleming Museum. Ironically, one of the early doubters was Edward J. Feidner who has been connected with the Festival from the beginning. Currently UVM's Drama Chairman, Feidner has served the Festival as producer, director and occasional actor (he gave a moving performance as King Lear two years ago).

This season, due to budget constraints, the Festival will stage only two plays (Othello and Twelfth Night) instead of the usual three. Opening July 6, Twelfth Night is considered by many to be Shakespeare's most hilarious comedy. This parody of courtly romance features mistaken identities, intrigue, and the folly and wonder of young love.

Othello stands with Hamlet, King Lear, and MacBeth as one of Shakespeare's great tragedies. From its brilliant opening to its tragic close, this tightly knit play combines a high concentration of emotion and action. Othello, a middle-aged general in the service of Venice, becomes so incensed with jealousy through the trickery of the sinister Iago, that he kills his young and innocent wife, Desdemona.

Having tackled all but four of Shakespeare's plays (Pericles, Coriolanus, Henry VI, Pts. II and III), the Festival has offered many productions that otherwise would not be seen by most theatregoers. One of the Festival's more memorable productions is Titus Andronicus, very seldom produced and described by many as Shakespeare's bloodiest work. The styles of the productions over the twenty seasons range from rehearsal clothes in Julius Caesar to turn of the century dress in Two Gentlemen of Verona to Elizabethan in Much Ado About Nothing to Medieval this season in Twelfth Night.

The members of the Festival company this season come from all corners of the USA. Scenery designer Robert Little is a MFA candidate at Brandeis University. He is in his third year there and turned down a position at Cape Cod's Monomoy Theatre, which incidently is where he came to the attention of Ed Feidner, who happened to be there directing a production of The Merry Wives of Windsor in 1975. A rather quiet, unassuming designer, his talents are seen both in his spectacularly detailed renderings and the scenery which he is helping to create. English-born Muriel A. Stockdale is the Costume Designer for Twelfth Night. A student at UVM, her designs in costuming were used for the productions of Man of La Mancha in 1977 and the Moliere productions last spring. A meticulous seamstress herself, much of her detail work as hems, lace, and trim are sewn by hand in the costume shop. Othello costumes are designed by Mary Brownlow who recently received her MFA from New York University. Her experience and talents give the opportunity for the costumes crew to learn techniques from a professional, as well as having the chance to work with two designers.

Moving from the shops to the theatre, one passes various actor-types rehearsing lines and characters in the halls. Inside the theatre, stage manager Bob Lovell sits in the back following a script. His assistant, Brenda McMullan, sits in the front row prompting those on stage who have either missed a line or a cue. Seated in the middle of the theatre, Ed Feidner intently watches the movement on stage. He occasionally lets out a roar of infectious laughter and those sitting in the theatre are forced to smile, if not laugh along with him. He obviously enjoys directing, at times jumping up onto the stage to give a direction or cue or act out a scene.

Much of the success of the Festival is due to the enthusiasm of its producer. Having worked as a scenery and costume designer in the Festival's earlier days, Feidner surely understands the necessity for competence and responsibility in these areas. A familiar face around the area's antique shops and flea markets, the man is always on the make for props, furniture, paraphernalia not constructable in the scene shop.

On stage this summer is Nancy Siddons-Daniels from El Paso, Texas. Siddons? Any relation to the Sarah Siddons? Distantly related to the great actress, the actress even looks like her if you stretch your imagination. A spirited person, Siddons-Daniels has her hands full with two major roles this summer — Olivia in Twelfth Night and Desdemona in Othello. Julia Brothers, a tall, blonde Rutgers University graduate from New Jersey, matches Siddon-Daniels' excessive energy with a calm assurance. Brothers will play Viola, the twin to Sebastian, in Twelfth Night and Emilia in Othello. Time Winters, an actor from Oregon experienced in all media of acting (he played Trapper Baumann in the movie Sasquatch: The Legend of Bigfoot) will tackle two very difficult roles, Orsino, the love-sick Duke in Twelfth Night, and the infamous villain, Iago, in Othello. Leon Martell, an old UVM alumnus, returns to the Festival after successfully forming the Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre in San Francisco. He is the Repertory Theatre Operation Instructor and will play the role of Sir Toby Belch, a jolly fat fellow, in Twelfth Night. Robert B. Putnam, seen last summer as the gallant Sir Eglamour in Two Gentlemen of Verona, will play two significant roles this summer — Feste, the clown, in Twelfth Night and Roderigo in Othello. Between seasons in Vermont, Bob has spent a season with the New Hampshire Shakespeare Festival acting in a variety of roles. Other familiar faces on stage at the Festival include Greg Patnaude, Neave Rake, Bob Barker, Josh Conescu, Rick Whitmore, and Tom Winslow. Names new to the seasoned Festival-goer include Ted Levine, Kip Kinnard, Stacey Gladstone, Vince Rossano, Duncan Stephens, Tom Blachly, and Matthew Skeele.

And... who will play Othello? Why Ray Aranha, of course! Returning for his second season at the Festival, last summer Aranha was seen in the title role of Macbeth. He is the Equity Guest Artist with the Festival this summer, as well as last. Most unpretentious, Aranha is regarded as truly a professional.

Ray Aranha returns to star as Othello, with Nancy Siddons-Daniels and Time Winters.

From it's brilliant opening to it's tragic close, Othello combines a high concentration of emotion and action.

In the past year, the well-known playwright and New York City actor has had The Estate, a play he wrote and later acted in, produced off-off Broadway and was the 1977 recipient of a National Endowment Grant. The experience of working with professionals such as Aranha is one of the festival's premier offerings to its young prospective actors.

Prospective actors often turn out to be the greats that are known throughout the world. The Champlain Shakespeare Festival has had its share of future great names. Randy Kim, who was seen in roles such as Titus Andronicus, Richard III and Cassius in Julius Caesar, has been featured numerable times in the New York Times and is presently with the Guthrie Theatre. David Groh, seen as Cassio in Othello in 1963, went on to be known to millions of television viewers as Rhoda's husband. John Pleshette, who played Montano that same season, was recently seen in the title role in the television special regarding Lee Harvey Oswald. Jason Miller, the author of the Pulitzer-prize winning book, That Championship Season, and one of the stars of the movie The Exorcist, was a member of the Festival company. Other well-known actors who have been with the Festival at one time or another include Jeffrey DeMunn, John Milligan, Ric Zanc, and Jeanne DeBaer.

The Champlain Shakespeare Festival runs through August 12. For additional information, call 656-2094.

—Heidi Racht

Certified Instruction
Repairs, Rentals, Underwater Gear
NAUI SAFETY THROUGH EDUCATION
northern divers inc.
Open 10–6
Seven days a week
100 Main St.
862–3881
"Vermont's Most Complete Dive Shop"

THE VANTAGE PRESS
AND
INSTA-PRINT
COMPLETE OFFSET PRINTING
BOOKLETS A SPECIALITY
115 North St.
Burlington
863-4998 or 862-2125

Go fishin' for McDonald's® Filet-O-Fish.™

Our Filet-O-Fish is America's most popular fish sandwich because people can taste the effort we put into it.

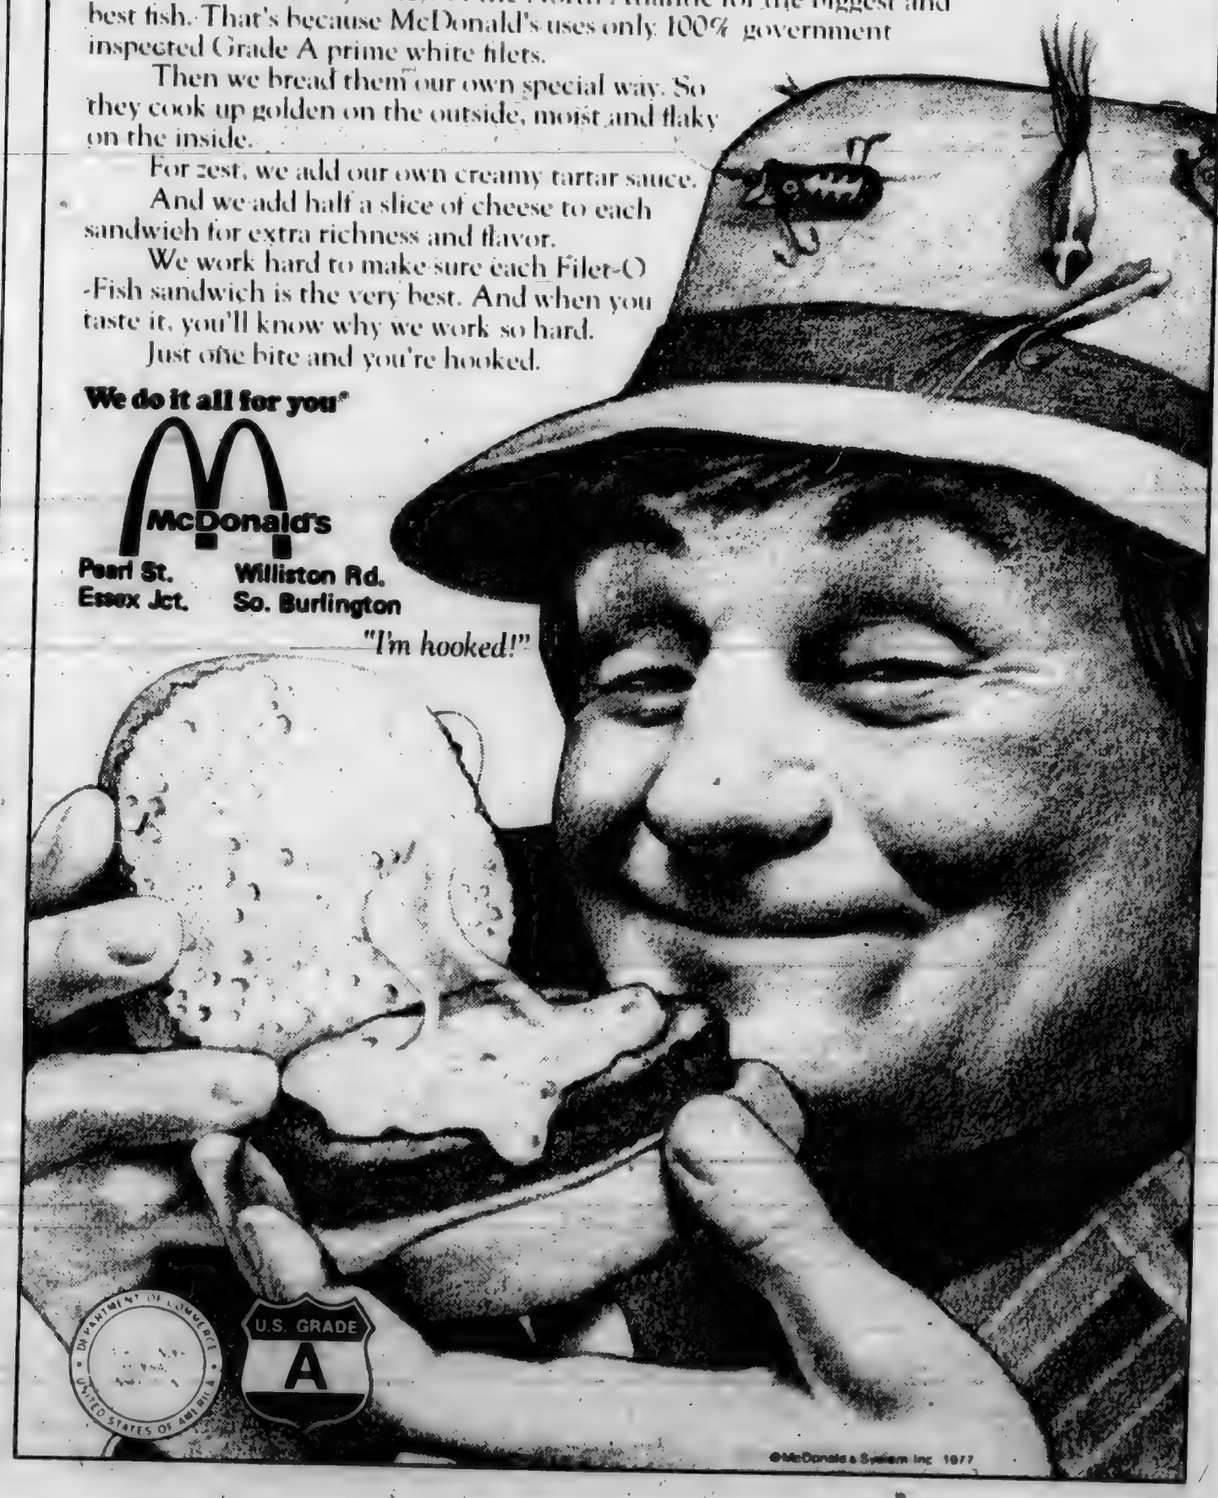
We go to the icy waters of the North Atlantic for the biggest and best fish. That's because McDonald's uses only 100% government inspected Grade A prime white filets.

Then we bread them our own special way. So they cook up golden on the outside, moist and flaky on the inside.

For zest, we add our own creamy tartar sauce.

And we add half a slice of cheese to each sandwich for extra richness and flavor.

We work hard to make sure each Filet-O-Fish sandwich is the very best. And when you taste it, you'll know why we work so hard.



Just one bite and you're hooked.

We do it all for you®

McDonald's

Pearl St. Essex Jct.
Williston Rd. So. Burlington

"I'm hooked!"

Bygone Books
Old Books
Bought & Sold
91 College St.
(Between Pine & Champlain)
Burlington, Vermont 05401
Tel. 802 862-4397
mon ~ sat.
9:30 am ~ 5:30 pm

Come in and share with us a special exhibit of

Hand carved Leather Accessories
By Mary and Bob Volk

July 1st - 29th

SUNDANCE
A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH STREET, BURLINGTON

Everyman
Sailboat Co., Inc.
On Route 127
76 Heineberg Drive
Malletts Bay
Vermont 05446
802·658·6666

Chiotts
Everyman-In-Town
87 King Street
Burlington
Vermont 05401
802·862·0910

MIX & MATCH
20% off
Foul Weather Rain Gear Sets*
*At Chiotts July 3 - 9

SUMMER CRUISE SERIES II

Fri. June 30th
PINE ISLAND
Fri. July 7th
JOHN CASSEL and band
Fri. July 14th
FRANK WAKEFIELD
and The Good Old Boys
Fri. July 21st
ZzEBRA
Perry Champlain leaves King St. dock at 8

Tickets available at
Emerald City of Oz 71 St. Paul St
Bailey's Music 88 Church Street
$6.00 advance $6.50 at the dock

Refreshments Available
Information and Reservations 862-4298
Wizard Productions

Downtown

College St. Cultural

Mountain Greenery

Old buildings often have only two choices: change your act or get torn down. At Mountain Greenery, 77 College Street, project director Bob Durand has opted for the first choice with an unusual twist: the renovation of an old warehouse into a community arts and media center.

Durand came to Burlington a few years ago with experience in journalism, broadcasting, and recording. Originally, he wanted to open a coffee house, but his ambitions grew when he purchased the brick warehouse across the street from the stately Follett House. Now, after two and a half years of indecision, all systems are go to open Mountain Greenery in early September.

Amid the rat-a-tat of jackhammers, grant secretary Ben Bergstein explained that Mountain Greenery is based on the settlement house concept of flexible space and a variety of happenings. The basement of the four story structure is fast resembling a 250-seat capacity theatre albeit without extensive lighting or staging. If all goes according to plan, the basement will be busy from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. with arts, crafts, music, dance, and drama for pre-schoolers, senior citizens, after-schoolers, and adults. Weekends will be reserved for workshops and rehearsals. Groups will sub-lease from Mountain Greenery, which technically is still leasing from owner Bob Durand. Rental rates are expected to be relatively low, "well within the range of both non-profit and profit-making groups." In addition, Mountain Greenery will sponsor various events.

While the top two floors will remain a furniture warehouse leased by John Chase, the mover, the first floor will soon be a labyrinth of compartments. The offices of the Vermont Symphony Orchestra will be moved in by the end of June, and several potential tenants are in line. Possible uses include: a graphics and poster gallery, an antique clothing shop, a recording studio, a Church St. Center office, home to Vermont Children's Magazine, and perhaps the Mozart Festival

Mountain Greenery: The old College Street

ByGone Books: Browser's Delight

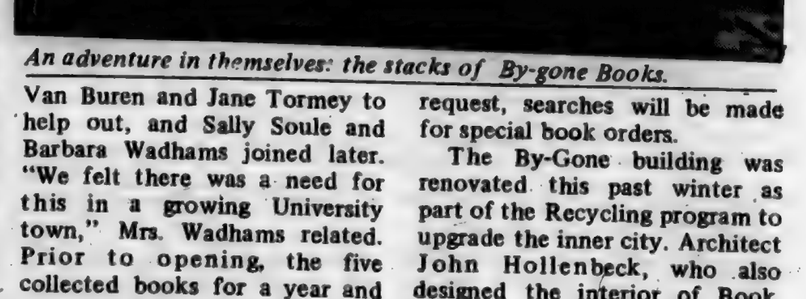
Tired of keeping up with the bestseller list? Looking for that good book you always meant to read? Since June 5, By-Gone Books at 91 College St. has been offering book lovers of all ages a wide array of old and used books.

Housed in a rust colored building behind Mountain Greenery, By-Gone Books has created a quiet, unhurried atmosphere — ideal for browsing through the store's 7,000 volumes. A visit to this used book shop is inevitably an adventure: you never know what you are going to find. Books are divided by section, but not ordered alphabetically. Where else can you come upon Geoffrey Chaucer beside Norman Mailer? The variety and condition of the books are impressive: from cookbooks to a good fiction set, to a big biography section to an ever-popular collection of Vermontiana. Other topics covered are: travel, theatre, psychology, religion, art, children's books, and you name it.



By-Gone Books is a member of the Vermont Antiquarian Book Society and buys and sells high quality hardcover and some paperbacks. The shelves contain many out-of-print books, a few first editions, classics, and curiosities. "Condition is everything," explained Vice-President Barbara Wadhams. But the marked down prices are attractive too; most paperbacks and some hardbacks go for 50 cents, there's a table of 5 for $1 bargains, and by the entrance is the "Freebies" basket. It's hard to come away empty handed; and it's easy to while away the time amid the pleasing faintly musty smell of old books.

The genesis of opening a used book store came from Priscilla Welch at her sister's urging. Mrs. Welch asked her friends Betty Van Buren and Jane Tormey to help out, and Sally Soule and Barbara Wadhams joined later. "We felt there was a need for this in a growing University town," Mrs. Wadhams related. Prior to opening, the five collected books for a year and travelled throughout New England hunting for bargains — 800 volumes from Hartford, 900 from Cape Cod, all over Vermont. The books come from a variety of sources — people move, die or just bring in books, libraries are dispersed, book fairs, and AB Bookman's Weekly listings. The travelling and searching for stock is never-ending. "Half the fun is you never know what you're going to find in a batch," smiled Mrs. Wadhams. And, upon request, searches will be made for special book orders.

The By-Gone building was renovated this past winter as part of the Recycling program to upgrade the inner city. Architect John Hollenbeck, who also designed the interior of Book Stacks, successfully dropped the original floor below ground level to produce a high, narrow yet remarkably uncramped space. Contractor Jeff Knapp did a fine job of transforming ordinary pine into handsome woodwork.

Though the summer season in Burlington was predicted to be slow, the owners have been "very busy and very surprised. There's always someone browsing."

—Tom Daniels

An adventure in themselves: the stacks of By-gone Books.

al

Street

Revival

Photos by Bob Gale

ilding will soon return to life with various arts activites.

headquarters.

Bergstein makes no claim that Mountain Greenery will fulfill the need for a performing arts civic center, but adds that the proposed civic center "is not going to suit anyone's needs locally," and called Burlington "a conservative town that does not have a history of supporting arts. The City Recreation Department has no arts program nor do Burlington schools." Private groups such as Lyric Theatre and the City Company have been trying to fill the gap. As for Mountain Greenery, Bergstein sounded determined,

The warehouse was built in 1906 by James Cashman, more renown for building City Hall and Memorial Auditorium. The oak floors and brick walls are still structurally sound. Bergstein estimated that the building would be worth close to one million dollars as commercial office space, especially as more offices are moving down toward the lake.

Remodelling began three weeks ago under the direction of architect Arthur Norcross, designer of The Barn at Philo Records. Moose Creek Restoration Co. of Burlington is reconstructing the first floor and basement, and Bergstein praised the crew as "dedicated, hardworking, and knowledgeable."

Financing the Mountain Greenery project has not been easy. After forming Mountain Greenery as a non-profit corporation, Bob Durand took over private ownership of the building in order to obtain an $85,000 construction loan from the Merchants Bank. As soon as the building becomes a functioning arts center, Durand plans to transfer ownership back to Mountain Greenery. Currently, the Greenery is $3,000 short of matching a $10,000 grant from the National Endowment on the Arts. Vermont itself is poor in local foundations giving to groups seeking grants (i.e. free money). Any local arts group will tell you that it can't survive on admissions fees alone. Bergstein figures that admissions prices cover about half of the total budget. The rest comes from donations, grants, and fundraisers: a never-ending hustle!

When asked about historic preservation moneys, Bergstein pointed across the street to Mondev's complex. "A historic district limits development potential," he said. "The Mayor would not encourage Montpelier to make us into an historic area. About a year ago, the Mayor was notified of our project, but was not interested. His participation would help."

Arts Affictionado

Ben Bergstein is no stranger to local arts organizations. His are long and impressive credentials: registered touring artist with the Vermont Council on the Arts, past president of the Champlain Arts Council, active in the Burlington Children's Puppet Theatre, Burlington Dance Theatre, and the Center for Creative Movement. Bergstein also co-directs with April Werner the Green Mountain Volunteers who perform traditional Vermont folk dances in 19th century garb. Bergstein, adept at pulling strings, swung the Volunteers a three-week tour of Europe at the end of this summer. And you may have seen

Ben as the caller for the Arm and Hammer String Band.

Vermont's Finest ALL NATURAL Ice Cream

Lunch, Light Dinner and Snacks

Corner of St. Paul and College St.

Mon-Thurs 11:30-11 Fri & Sat 11:30-12 Sun 2-11

Kilgour Tire VALUE DAYS

GENERAL TIRE

Get set for summer driving with the General Tire of your choice ...all value priced.

Steel Belted Radial

You save $11 to $16 per tire

$49.95

NEW CAR TIRE DEAL #1

The General Dual Steel II is the finest long mileage passenger tire General has ever made. Built with two steel belts for road hazard protection, and a tough two-ply polyester cord body.

Glass Belted

$31.95

NEW CAR TIRE DEAL #2

The General Jumbo 780 features two glass belts, a two-ply polyester cord body, and multi-rib tread. It's designed to provide long mileage, easy handling, and traction on both wet and dry surfaces.

For Light Trucks!

The General GLT

A great light truck tire! Featuring a modern tread design and an aggressive rib pattern.

$34.95

Larger Sizes Available At Comparable Prices

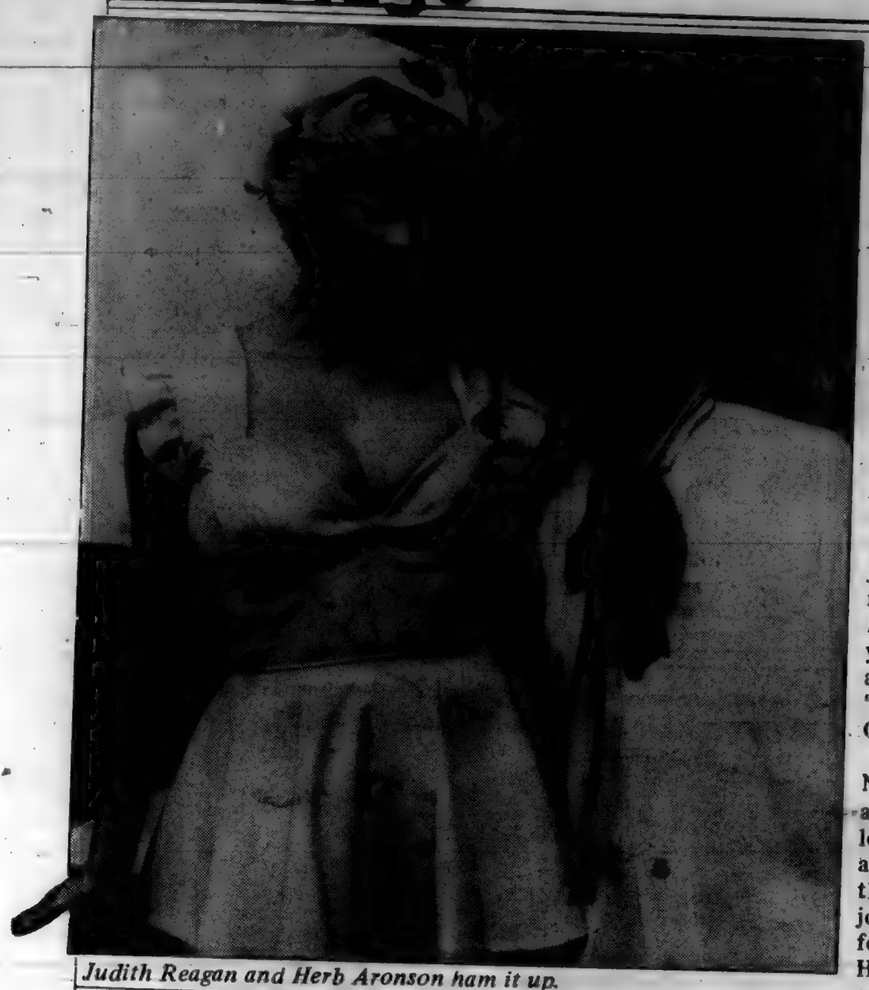
Front-End Alignment

$11.95

Most Domestic Cars

We adjust Caster, Camber, Toe-In and Toe-Out settings to manufacturer's specifications. You'll feel the difference!

TIRE SALE General Poly-Jet



$24.00

Featuring smooth riding polyester cord body, and a wide-flat tread for traction.

Sooner or later you'll own Generals

GENERAL TIRE

Kilgour Tire & Rubber, Inc.

Judith Reagan and Herb Aronson ham it up.

The Sunshine Boys: Partly Cloudy

The old adage "it's the singer not the song" aptly fits the summer premiere of the St. Michael's Playhouse in the McCarthy Arts Center. Neil Simon's The Sunshine Boys suffers from repetition and occasional trite jokes; but the actors rescued what could have been a dull night with a valiant effort.

The Sunshine Boys are the old vaudeville comedy team of Al Lewis and Willie Clark who joked around for 43 years, including six appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show. After 11 years of silent feuding, the pair are reunited by CBS to perform "The Doctor and the Tax Collector" skit for one last time.

The play opens in a run-down New York hotel, home of the aging Willie Clark. Clark no longer goes out, but waits for his agent-nephew's weekly visit and the chance for one more acting job. Clark is crusty, complaining, forgetful, and irrepressible, and Herb Aronson makes Willie a captivating personality. Richard Patrick-Warner is somewhat stuck with the role of the high-strung nephew, but he performs with good-natured energy.

The nephew finally gets the two old comedians together. though the foibles of old age are as frustrating as they are funny. Bill Farley, as Al Lewis, successfully plays a doddering, unyielding gent. But the bickering intensifies which does not appeal to one's comic sense or one's nerves.

Perhaps the best scene is the Doctor Sketch in which the jokes are racy, rapid fire, and the acting is spirited. Judith Reagan, the buxom blond nurse, adds pep (which is lacking at other times) and deserves more exposure. The sketch breaks down when Lewis reverts to his old habits of poking Clark's chest and spitting in his face. Clark, in a rage, suffers a heart attack and is confined to bed.

Joanne Rathgeb then renders an effective and realistic portrayal of Willie's attendant nurse in some of the night's best verbal dueling.

The play ends in a final nostalgic meeting between Al and Willie, and by-gones are by-gones. The Sunshine Boys is a riches-to-rags bittersweet comedy which ultimately only skims the surface. The show is smooth and amusing, but don't look for deep hidden messages. The faults in the Playhouse production are mainly Simon's script.

Director Joanne Rathgeb has done a fine job of staging; technical director Bill Neuert has created an elaborate and inviting set design; and the actors delivered. The audience responded with giggles, scattered peals of laughter, and appreciative applause.

The Sunshine Boys' remaining shows are June 29, 30, and July 1. Tickets are $5. For reservations call the box office at 655-2000, extension 2507.

Tom Daniels

MAGRAMS
fresh produce

PLUM AND TEAL...PANDORA®

Here's to you, babe. You just popped out of Pandora's box looking as fresh as summer, in our fresh produce: in plum and teal separates.

Pick a ripe plum of a jacket. Pair it up with a richly-printed challis skirt . . . and vest. Don't forget: the vest goes over the blazer now.

So what goes under the blazer? That gentle tailored blouse with soft button-front peplum-y sweater.

M-mmm. Ripe plum. Touched with teal. And rich creme. Delicious!

Magrams . . . bringing you the fresh produce of summer. Pandora coordinates in sizes 5/6-15/16. Shown: Blazer $49.00; blouse $19.00; sweater $23.00; skirt $26.00, vest $19.00. Colony on Main.

The Stones: Call 'Em What You Want

Some Girls
The Rolling Stones
Rolling Stones Records COC 39108

The Rolling Stones... remember them? "Heart of Stone" was recorded nearly fifteen years ago. 15 years — nationally, that's before President Gerry Ford, President Nixon, moonwalks, HEW, the Chicago convention, the assassinations of Kennedy and King, the escalation of the Vietnam war, President Johnson, and the Jetsons; musically they preceded punk, disco, quadrophonic systems, Altamont, the deaths of Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin and Jim Morrison, LSD, Sgt. Pepper's, the Who, the Lovin' Spoonful, and Beatlemania. While a nearsighted, tone deaf individual may enjoy a remnant of 'Beatlemania' on Broadway for seven bucks, you can bet your bottom dollar the sound of the early Stones is history.

Since Exile on Main Street, which was panned by many critics upon its release, the Rolling Stones have been spat on, degraded, insulted and generally hacked to hell by the American press for (a) failure to reproduce the musical style characteristic of the band ten years and three guitarists ago; (b) lack of creativity; and (c) being phoney.

Some Girls, the Stones' eighteenth studio effort, is the most consistent, coherent, and musically ambitious release since Exile. Good production isn't everything, however. This is simply "one of those albums" that can be equally shredded or praised, pending your perspective.

Unlike Black and Blue, where recent addition Ron Wood contributes sporadically, the ex-Faces guitarist is 'all over' Some Girls. And it's all for the better.

The lyrical tales here are typical: Jagger has been writing about getting laid since he could write. Other familiarities include a late sixties Motown piece, and the successful culmination of a rift Keith Richards has been working on for four years now. Notably interesting lyrics can be found on "Miss You" and "Before They Make Me Run," in which Richards speculates his final concert ("Watch my taillight fadin'/there ain't a dry eye in the house).

The difference between Girls and Black and Blue, however, is in the tunes. Wood is now a full fledged Stone, and consequently the band enters yet another musical phase. "Lies" literally pounds in your ear, while "Some Girls," despite some lyrics you'll swear you've heard before, is salvaged by some wailing by Wood and Richards. If you mentioned Jagger and Richards as special guests, you could insert "Lies" into "A Nod is As Good As a Wink" following "Too Bad," and the transition would be excellent. "Beast of Burden" is somewhat nostalgic, or probably a rewritten version of an early song recognizable by those who own the entire Stones collection.

Critics will blast Jagger for this album his significant contributions here are minimal. While "Shattered" is excellent, "Far Away Eyes" explains how the knowledge that God was on his side inspired Jagger to run 20 red lights one Sunday morning... "Thank you Lord, Thank you Jesus..." Thank you Mick. The Stones' interest in recording material of the later sixties is fascinating (the new Peter Tosh album, under the production of the Glimmers, will contain "Don't Look Back.") Unlike Rod Stewart's subtle massacre of "You Keep Me Hanging On," the Stones' 1978 version of "Just My Imagination" is at least interesting. Nothing to get excited about — just interesting.

This obviously isn't an easy one to call. I'm a middle Stones era man ('69 — '73) and haven't fully recovered from the departure of Mick Taylor, although you had to figure it was coming. Hearing a new Stones album is like walking into a room with your current date, and running into your first love. Obviously, she/he/it has changed, but beyond the point of all recognition?

—Russell Flannery

This is simply 'one of those albums' that can be equally shredded or praised, pending your perspective.

Kinks Keep on Cooking

Misfits
The Kinks
Arista AB 4167

It is avant chic in rock now to take on the grandiose limitations of being human. Elvis is probing the dark side of personality trauma with his seething, scapel songs. Bruce has taken to the limit the powerlessness of man in fate's funnel. Patti Smith wants to join the 1969 Rolling Stones. The Stones are entering a battle of the bands. Van Morrison is in a period of transition and Little Feat and the Who are on their yearly vacations.

Of the big boys that only leaves the Kinks. The longest running brother act in rock n' roll. With Misfits, the Kinks have dropped the subtlest bombshell in this banner year for records.

Misfits is the most perfected Kinks album to date. The sleek seventies' Kinks has honed all the raunch and slapschtick from their guitar dominated sound. Mentor/producer Ray Davis has come up with his finest collection of songs since 1971's Muswell Hillbillies. Add to that Ray has taken to bringing the vocals higher into the mix. I always knew he had a great rock voice but I never realized he could control it so well. On the album's shitkickin' rocker "Permanent Waves," he starts off content to work within the melody's strength. After the second chorus, Brother Dave slices the song open with a searing guitar solo, then Ray jumps out front with a Jaggerlike charge.

While other rockers live the life of Tut, Ray Davies remains the flesh and blood of little people. In the Kinks address to their listeners, "A Rock N' Roll Fantasy," Ray and the boys greet us:

"Hello you, hello me, hello people we used to be/ Isn't it strange, we never changed./ We've been through it all yet we're still the same./ And I know it's a miracle, we still go, and for all we know/ We might still have a way to go."

Those are personal, direct, and even optimistic words from your stereo. Usually music on records is meant to be visited and viewed like a movie, a magazine or any other leisure time trip.

Kinks songs explore our

(Continued on page 21)

Good·bye "Electro·big·sound"

The "Electro•Big•Sound" brands may be found in just about any kind of store. They are easy to spot because the speakers are usually as big as a house, and the control panel looks like the cockpit of a modern jet aircraft.

The next time you see one, listen to it, really listen to it. After a few minutes the bass starts sounding like someone is hitting the side of a rubber boat with an oar (Thud! Thud! Thud!). The highs sound like a tray of silverware dropped onto a floor (crash); tinkle, tinkle). If a vocal sounds like the singer is singing in a bucket, or through a megaphone, don't be surprised. (If you can't hear any of those things you might consider having your hearing checked).

We could go on for hours talking about how the turntable plays a $7 record like a diamond cutter cuts glass . . . so we won't. Instead, we'd like to offer you an alternative to those "Electro•Big•Sound" brands that don't sound that bad . . . they just don't sound that good either. Good•Bye "Electro•Big•Sound" . . .

$299

JUST $30.97 DOWN AND $13.85 A MONTH*

Hel lo System $299

System $299 is "An amazing blend of Hi-Fi components at a "Compact price." Just $13.85 a month with $30.97 down.*

The BSR 760 turntable is fully automatic and equipped with a diamond stylus. You can stack up to 5 records and it will play all of those records and shut off automatically.

The control center of system $299 is the AKAI AA1115 stereo receiver. It offers more than any "Electro•Big•Sound" compact could, like 15 watts each channel, and FM sensitivity of 1.9 uV to bring in those distant FM stations clearly.

The Advent 3 speakers of system $299 are not as big as a house, in fact, they are "compact." The Advent 3's bring you all of the music. The bass notes are solidly robust, and the highs are crisp and precise, never shrill or harsh. And a singer sounds as though they are singing in your living room.

Why should you spend your hard-earned money for "Electro•Big• Sound" when you can afford exceptional sound from System $299.

*For qualified customers, based on 24 monthly installments, with 10% down payment at an annual interest rate of 18.11%.

Lafayette Creative Sound

radio electronics

• 157 Pearl St., Essex Jct. • Barre-Montpelier Rd. Barre •. "In the Mall between Kmart & Martins" South Burlington

Summer is Here
And and so is HEATWAVE'S New Album!

Series 7.98
now for only $4.99

Warm it up- turn on Central Heating.

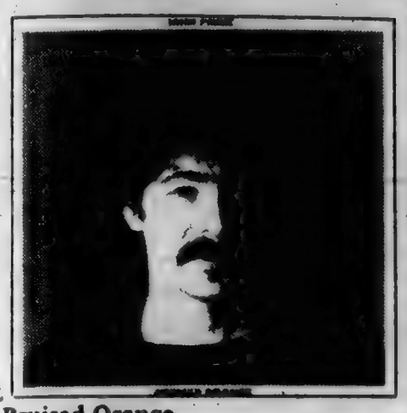
"Central Heating" is the latest in hot music devices by Heatwave, the group that transformed plain-old evenings into "Boogie Nights."

"Central Heating."
Heatwave's new album.
Featuring the smash single "The Groove Line."
On Epic Records and Tapes.



"Epic" is a trademark of CBS Inc.

University Store

Open 8:30 - 4:30 Mon. - Fri.

Recent Cuts

A Pruned Prine

Bruised Orange
John Prine
Asylum 6E-139

It seems both unfortunate and a cryin' shame that artists under contract lose the qualities that made them artistic. For John Prine and Asylum Records it is unfortúnate that one of the Midwest's more gifted songwriters can not write the ditties he was turning out in 1975 when he peaked on the diamond, Sweet Revenge.

Bruised Orange, Prine's first contractual obligation to the Asylum label is more like the pits from oranges that never had the chance to grow up.

But the redeeming quality to the album is that a half-assed John Prine album is still a John Prine album. And the prince of sardonic humor can still zing a good line now and then. In the album's pleaser about the price of relationships, "There She Goes," Prine intones:

"Well there must be something somewhere/ that makes me want to hurt myself inside,/ Yeah, we were regular Dr. Jekyll/ But together/ We were Mr. and Mrs. Hyde,/ What a rough, rough ride."

Which is nice and funny but a long way from:

"For whiskey and pain/ Both taste the same/ During the time they go down."

from Prine's second album's tears-in-your- handkerchief ditty, "The Torch Singer."

Prine seems to be closer to perfection when he writes from that which he knows and can remember as opposed to that he imagines. Next to his classic, "Angel from Montgomery," a nice song like "Sabu Visits the Twin Cities Alone," is a Saturday morning cartoon.

Poor Sabu, child star of cinematic note, is sent on a promo tour to (of all places) East St. Paul by his only-in-your-best-interest manager:

"His manager sat in the office alone/ staring at the numbers on the telephone,/ Wondering how a man could send a child actor/ to visit in the land of the wind chill factor."

But even cloying humor like that is pale and wordy in comparison when they come from a man who can be so directly humorous and pathetic concurrently as to title a song, "They Oughta Name a Drink After You." (Diamonds in the Rough)

Musically, well John Prine has always seemed as downhome as his music; it is not necessary to mix up John Prine's expertise with David Bromberg's. Now Prine with extreme foresight used to take care of that by inviting Bromberg to play along with him and Steve Brugh, Steve Goodman and some of Nashville's best studio men. On Oranges, the rest of the musicians are as faceless and lacking signature as Prine himself.

In concert, even a solo concert, it is Prine's dry humor that is best presented in his singsong, dry gulch, enchanting voice. The swagger in his voice could carry skyward even the heavy-handed humor of "Dear Abbey" on Sweet Revenge.

Steve Goodman has left his Guild guitar for the touch of the producer's board on the other side of the studio window. Which I give Prine credit for – since Goodman has a good folkie ear but Prine ain't no folkie. This ain't no Peter. Paul and Prine melody fair. Prine is the quintesenal barstool cowboy, the kind Kinky Friedman would give up his rhinestones to be.

Having traded the roughhewn whiskey voice for the syrup of schmaltz Prine seems to have traded his barbed pen for a Rolling Writer. For an artist who was closer to Franz Kafka in tone and spirit, Bruised Oranges is a step closer to the commercial reality of... well let's say Gordon Lightfoot. After all, Randy Newman proved short people buy records too.

Now I'm feeling jaded. I've just written three pages condemning one of my best friends. John Prine has always been the only cowboy with a sense of humor as dry as his mouth. The onetime diamond in the rough looks too sleek to be polished for the glint of success.

Larry Seiden

Kinks Kreate Klassik

Give the People What They Want
The Kinks
Arista AB 4164

Ray Davies is a man who knows the difference between the bread and the butter. Davies is shrewd and sensitive about his role in rock ("A Rock N' Roll Fantasy") and society ("Misfits"), and a critically crystal chronicler of the scene in which he believes he is only an "observing" participant. He pinches modern hair styles ("Permanent Waves") seasonal afflictions ("Hayfever"), bubbly transvestitism ("Out of the Wardrobe"), political/racial expediency ("Live Life" and "Black Messiah") and exposes his sympathies in "Get Up:"

"Well, ain't we goods gone bad/ But right is wrong and I don't know/ Which side I'm on lately."

Ray, who has been a vocal critic of his own reflection, has enlivened his humble stance and scored well with the spontaneous sound of his new songs.

In all the studio perfected world of harmonies and background vocals there is still nothing as pure as the harmony that can exist in family bloodlines. Ray and Dave Davies, while never perfect, possess a pair of voices that blend and compliment like tea and honey (remember "Lola").

When brother Dave steps to the limelight, watch out. If there is talent in the family, it is certainly well divided. Dave sings lead vocals on his own scorching rocker, "Trust Your Heart." I ask, "Where has the boy been all these years?" I thought he could only play guitar.

It is good to see the Kinks put out an excellent album without a needfor a total concept. Preservation I and II, Soap Opera, and Schoolboys in Disgrace were all done in an album-long narrative. Misfits is actually stronger as a whole album because each song works by itself instead of being forced to relate to the album.

I don't know what it is that has kept the Kinks going for so long. But unlike the style among groups, the Kinks rarely undergo a personnel change. It is still the Davies boys plus Mick Avory on drums, Andy Pyle on bass and the delightful John Gosling on keyboards; truly a brilliant and eccentric band that is still making a Kinks record of 1978 sound like a Kinks album from ten years previous. Since they don't walk around like rock stars and pose for People, they are often overlooked as stars for certainly no Kinkophile would forget how special they are.

The Kinks affection for our little foibles makes it seem all right to be neurotic, or at least to serve to remind us that life ain't so bad – maybe it's not a powerful bestseller, but at least it has some charming chapters.

Larry Seiden

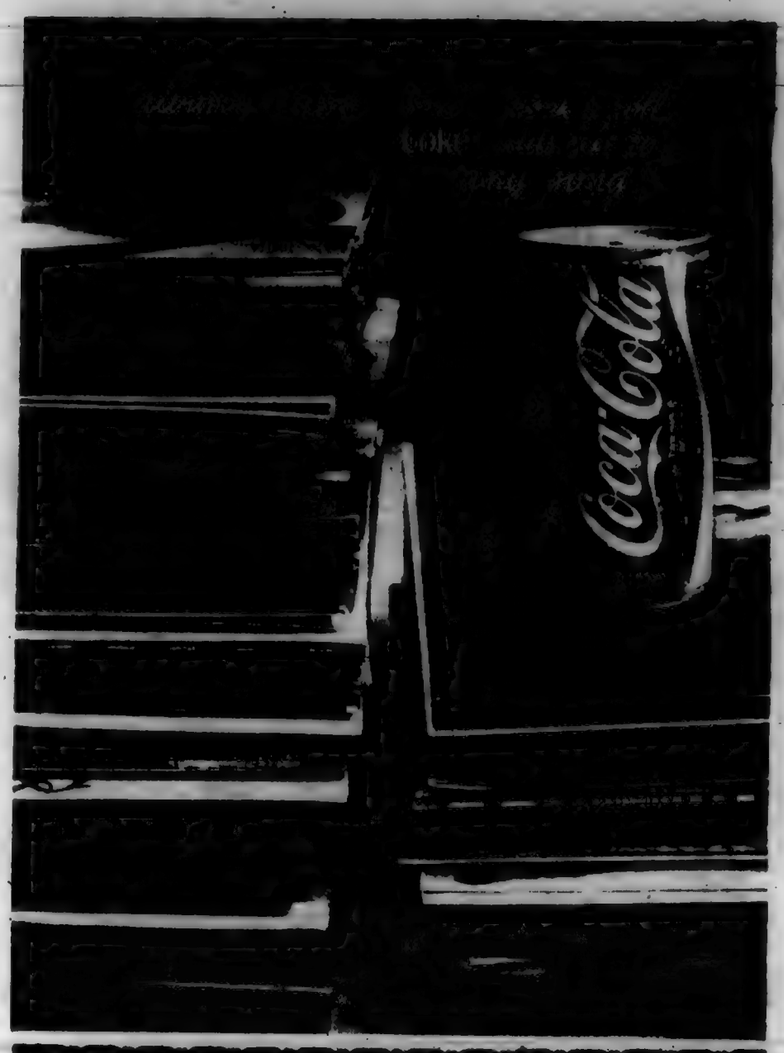
Gambri's
The Adult Discotheque

FREE DRINKS!
With This Ad Get 2 Drinks
For the Price of 1. Expires 7-13-78

beer wine
THE ONLY
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
lowest prices largest selection
kegs soda

The Best Book on Birds



The Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Birds

The First All Photographic Field Guide. Every one of the 584 identification pictures is a full-color photograph of a living bird as it appears to the naked eye or through binoculars.

The First To Be Visually Organized. Songbirds are grouped by color, the rest by shape. No need to thumb through hundreds of pictures as one must when birds are arranged by family and species.

Wit & Wisdom Bookshop
100 Dorset St., South Burlington, Vt
Mon-Sat 10-9 658-6262

THE
LAST CHANCE
SALOON

Summer Specials

Monday: Bottle Beer .50c

Tuesday: Drafts .25c
(All Night)

Wednesday: Ladies Night
(Squalls for Ladies) $1.00

Thursday: Gin & Tonic
Squalls $1.00

THE
LAST CHANCE
SALOON
147 Main St.

AIR CONDITIONED

Cyn Flicks

Just when you thought it was safe to go back to the movies..

Movie sequels are beginning to be like one-night stands. You know what you're going for, what to expect, and how you're going to feel when it's over. After all, you've been there before.

Producers Richard Zanuck and David Brown attempt to capitalize on fear for the second time with Jaws II. The depressing thing about it, however, is they succeed. Although the movie has a predictable plot, dull, overused lines, and fair to offensive acting, it does fulfill a desire for excitement. Jaws II gives the audience what it wants and, in the wake of the gripping suspense of Jaws, what it expects — a thrill.

Jaws II is indeed a perfect example of the exploitation of the moviegoer's emotions. From the very beginning, ominous fins slice through dark, misty waters — a cheap shot that has all the class and originality of a low-budget Japanese horror flick. But before the credits are even over, the shark strikes, killing two divers, and captivates the entire audience.

The plot then thickens from a mere shark-eats-man format to a major melodrama. It's not hard to follow, being basically the same as in Jaws. Another great white circles around Amity, devouring the youth and threatening the tourist industry that is the livelihood of the island. Police Chief Brody once again leads the crusade against the dreaded creature, alienating greedy real estate agents and nervous politicians. It's easy to understand why Roy Scheider, Lorraine Gary, and Murray Hamilton returned from the original cast, and it must have been easy money as well. They didn't have to learn any new roles. Scheider is as noble and self-righteous as ever as Amity's wronged police chief, Gary is still his obnoxiously devoted wife, and Hamilton as the mayor continues to place his political profile over the safety of the residents when he should have learned his lesson in Jaws. The

Excellent Is the Word

"Grease is the time,
is the place,
is the motion,
Grease is the way we are feeling..."
Grease is the word."

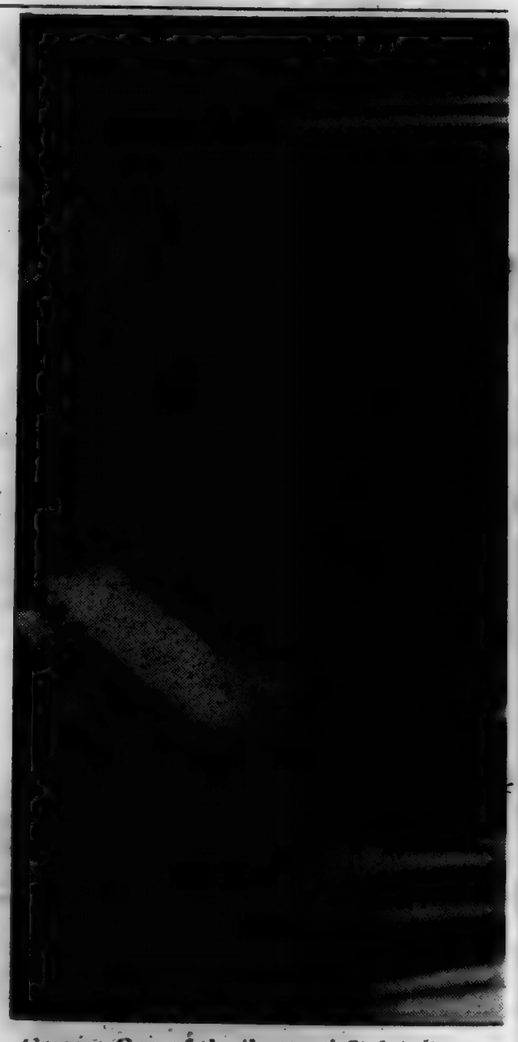
I've always been impartial to productions dealing with the fifties. The soundtrack of American Graffiti didn't spur me to jump up and bop out of the theatre with my shoes off and shades on; politically, I don't like Ike; and technically, while watching such performances, I inevitably wonder if the piece's director/author was once a member of the Dragons, the Americans for Freedom Club, or was just another athletic supporter. Moonin' is peachy, and crusin' is kinky, but enough is enough.

The rise of "disaster" flicks has coincided with a drop in the number of musicals produced by Hollywood. It is quite possible that the Gong Show is supplying Americans with all the musical entertainment they can handle. Should the trend reverse, however, and Grease and the forthcoming Annie become successful, you can rest assured American screens will be inundated with sweet stories of large-lunged kids from history's recent pages singing their way to satisfaction and glory. Try to envision John Travolta swinging his way through the Southern lines to reach his belle in "Confederate Confident"...

But forget about the future. Forget about the present. It's late August, 1957...1958... Summertime's over. "It's all over." It's back to school; grease is the word.



Rydall High, car races, dances, high school — love, and Grease's particular characteristics are about as typical to fifties films as mom and apple pie to John Wayne movies. Grease's script, however, is flawless, and although they may be a tad too old for their parts, the cast is set to match. Grease doesn't tell you about the fifties, it is the fifties, down to the sneakers on the angels' feet. This film isn't a hype; it's potentially a classic.

The cast performs with the energy characteristic of a play, not a movie. Olivia Newton-John, starring as the Austrian import, blonde 'Virgin-'Sandra" who has Danny's (John Travolta) number, is simply excellent in her motion picture debut. Period.

John Travolta, Joe Punk, dances, struts and tries to sing. Two out of three ain't bad. His natural singing ability isn't quite to par with Olivia's, but he carries his songs, and handles the subtleties of his role well. Unlike many critics in the country, I think he can act.

Eve Arden is stellar as Rydall High's principal; an unknown (to me) is Stockard Channing who, as Rizzo, is neither well versed, to do, or cute; consequently, she's always wifling. Alice Ghostley is Mrs. Murdock, the middle-aged single secretary; Sid Caesar appears as the losing high school football coach; and Sha Na Na, who have made quite a living off nostalgia, appear as "Johnny Casino and the Gamblers" (remember them?)

One of WDOT's lunch hour favorites "You're the One That I Want" is the film's musical

Grease: One of the 'hottest' flicks of the characters are the same, only the lines were changed to protect the innocent. And it was certainly a stroke of good fortune that the shark ate him in Jaws. His talent is far too great to waste on a production glutted with stock characters.

Even sillier were the so-called teenagers that were victimized by the marauding shark. The fresh-faced youths frolicked and romped through the picture like the Osmonds in a Pepsi-Cola commercial. Slender, clean, mischievously innocent and oblivious to the danger in the water, these teenagers "are probably the worst case of a writer's misconception of adolescence since the advent of the Archie comic strip. Watching the cute youngsters as they suffer the joys and sorrows of puppy love, one can only think that writers Carl Gottlieb and Howard Sackler had no respect for the intelligence and awareness of the American public when they wrote Jaws II.

But even more disappointing is the shark itself. Undoubtedly due to director and special effects wizard Steven Spielberg's tactful escape from the sequel, the shark is neither as big nor as lifelike as the one in Jaws. Fake and mechanical in appearance, the shark is just one more aspect of the predictability that pervaded the entire performance. Its attacks, like Brody's undaunted heroism and the characters' lines, were never a surprise. Unlike Jaws, where one never knew who the shark would strike next, it is possible to pick out the shark's potential victims minutes before the actual attack. In one scene, for example, the camera zooms in on a beautiful girl water skiing. A tasty morsel – she is like a worm on a hook and, not surprisingly, is quickly snatched away by the shark.

Nevertheless, it is this very predictability that makes Jaws II an entertaining flick. Like The Deep, Jaws II is one of those films where within the first fifteen minutes the audience has a good idea of how the plot will develop and resolve. Viewer satisfaction lies not in the horror or shock value of films like Jaws, but in seeing one's expectations come true. When Chief Brody pulls the mangled remains of the water skier out of the water, the audience reacted with a nervous giggle, as though they were relieved that their anticipations were fulfilled, rather than with the horrified gasps that were heard during Jaws.

But the movie's suspense is so contrived that it is offensive and degrading to the audience. Watching the bubbling teenagers as they set sail for the lighthouse while the shark lurks surreptitiously below, we know our emotions are being manipulated. This type of cheap filming is a rip-off. A good film should not attack the sentimental nerve centers that make us all so vulnerable to an automatic response, but elicit emotion naturally.

In this respect, Jaws II is a disappointment. Over-dramatized yet still effective, it has a pre-packaged, plastic plot that could be plugged into any grade-B suspense film. If Final Chapter Jaws is ever produced, we can only hope that the shark will graduate from eating helicopters to consuming the entirety of Amity Island. Only then can we be assured that Zanuck and Brown will stop milking the public in exchange for a cheap thrill.

—Vaune Davis

of the

ummer

highlight although "We Go Together" is good, and Rizzo's "There Are Worse Things I Could Do" (than get "knocked up") is effective. John Travolta's training bra clad faithful who never miss Kotter and snuck into Saturday Night Fever may be disappointed here, as Grease is strictly a musical. Actually, there are a number of 21 year olds I know who may be disappointed with this film. But for those with any interest in Broadway drama, Grease is an exceptional film version of an excellent play which shouldn't be missed.

R.F.

GREEN MOUNTAIN
★ COUNTRY BANJO FESTIVAL ★

VASSAR CLEMENTS  BILL MONROE  PETER ROWAN

Sunday, Monday, Tuesday
JULY 2·3·4
CHAMPLAIN VALLEY FAIRGROUNDS
ESSEX JCT. VERMONT

THE STOCKWELL BROTHERS
WHITE RIVER BLUEGRASS BAND
BILL CLARK
FOX WATSON
TOM AZARIAN
WALT MICHAEL and TOM McCREESH
JOE VAL and the NEW ENGLAND BLUEGRASS BOYS
TASTY LICKS With JACK TOTTLE

ALSO STARRING

THE ROWANS
THE STARSPANGLED WASHBOARD BAND
BANJO DAN
PINE ISLAND
RED CLOVER BLUEGRASS
ARM And HAMMER STRING BAND
TEX LOGAN
AND MORE....

3 day Banjo Festival ticket $20 in advance is good for all shows and camping privileges at Champlain Valley Fairgrounds (minutes from Lake Champlain and the Green Mountains). This offer is limited so make your reservation by getting your ticket early. Children free with adult. Daily show tickets $6. Three-day show ticket $13. Purchase tickets at Bailey's, Church St. in Burlington, Vermont. For information call 863-4701.

Bag it.

Go ahead. Escape from the nine-to-five routine.

There's no better way to get away from it all than by getting into the country. And when you're ready, so is EMS.

We're specialists in lightweight camping and hiking equipment. You'll find everything you need to make your escape a great one: canoes, tents, packs, sleeping bags, clothing, food, books, maps and much more.

We rent camping equipment, too ... and all our rental gear is of the same high quality you'll find on our retail shelves. And, in some cases, the rental fee can be applied to the purchase of new equipment.

So, go ahead. Pack it in.

We're ready.

EASTERN MOUNTAIN SPORTS

100 Dorset Street
South Burlington, Vermont
802-864-0473

The Romeros
July 5
8:00 pm St. Joseph's Church

For nine consecutive seasons, American audiences have thrilled to the unique and incomparable virtuosity of The Romeros – Celin, Pepe, and Angel. Rooted in the great Spanish traditions, their art finds expression in the most exciting contemporary musical medium – the guitar. Their program, which will blend classical and Spanish music for the guitar, will win for them the kind of applause in Vermont that they have won all over the world. As Time Magazine said, The Romeros are "indisputably the best guitar ensemble around."

Aulos Baroque Ensemble
July 15
8:30 pm St. Joseph's
Music at Versailles: A Royal Entertainment

This group of Juilliard laureates has achieved remarkable success and critical acclaim for their definitive interpretations of baroque chamber music. Performing on unaltered instruments of the period and exact historical replicas, the Ensemble recreates a musical world where the extraordinary tonal colors and textures of the instruments are basic to the composer's art. The Ensemble's Burlington program will recreate an evening at the court of Louis XIV, playing music by Couperin, Marais and Forqueray.

Doc Watson
July 20
8:00 pm Shelburne Farms
The South Porch

Doc Watson, "the greatest flat picker who ever lived," plays everything from "Sweet Georgia Brown" to "Mean Woman Blues" and "Blue Suede Shoes." It is his ability, considerably enhanced by his son Merle's bluesy accompaniment, to deal with the variety that is astounding. Together, the Watsons represent the ultimate in stylized picking – Doc with his intimidating speed and flair, and Merle filling in the gaps with slide style solos so economical and appropriate that a rock musician might build a career on any of them.

Keith Jarrett
August 11
Twilight Shelburne Farms
The South Porch

HIGH FIDELITY says of Keith Jarrett that, "not since Art Tatum has a more prodigious technique been on display." Last summer Jarrett electrified his Burlington audience with a brilliant display of improvisational jazz piano playing. The Lane Series is pleased to carry on its commitment to presenting the great jazz artists of our time with this special concert at Shelburne Farms.

Lane series

Ticket Information

Box Office: Open 10-4 Weekdays
Telephone: Ticket Information 656-2414
Administration 656-4455

Individual tickets on sale at Bailey's Music Room

NO REFUNDS – NO EXCHANGES

Order Form

| Date | Event | Tickets per event | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Wed. 7/5/78 | The Romeros* | | |
| Sat. 7/15/78 | The Aulos Baroque Ensemble* | | |
| Thu. 7/20/78 | Doc Watson with Merle Watson | | |
| Fri. 8/11/78 | Keith Jarrett | | |

*Limited View $5.00

Total tickets ____ @ $6.00 = $ ____

Make checks payable to: U.V.M. Lane Series

Return to: Lane Series, [illegible]

name ____
address ____
city ____
state ____ zip ____
telephone day ____ eve. ____

☐ Check here if you are interested in possible transportation from Red Stone Campground upon last concert, to and from Shelburne Farms.

Total charge for pair $ ____

Check ____ Signature (req.) ____

SUMMERTIME

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S CONCERT

INSIDE:

Arts in Review.....11
Regional Concerts Schedule.....10
How Green Are the Mountain$.....8

PANT STANCE

New Fall Expression: pair it up and pare it down. . . Your fall expression, babe.

We're talking fashion here. The herringbone blazer. Over the bulky knit vest. Over the Annie Hall blouse with string ties.

Note the trousers. They're softly pleated. Belted. And pared down.

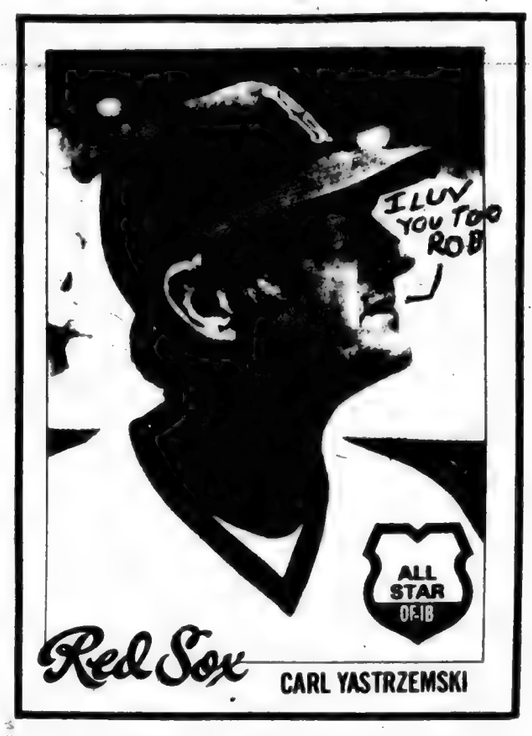
Pair up the peices. . . they add up to fashion.

P.S. Don't forget to muffle on a soft scarf or two. And hear the Kudos when you're on the street. Shown: Hukapoo grey/white blazer $63.00, San Francisco Shirtworks blouse in white $23.00. Donegain Vest in grey $16.50, Pride's Crossing black trousers $24.50. All from the Way In Shop on Main. Also: Vera muffler scarves, available from $8.50–Main Floor Accessories.

It's an experience

MAGRAMS

• DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON •



VOLUME IV NUMBER 3/JULY 13, 1978

Cover Photo by Rob Swanson

"Too much hookah"

CORRESPONDENCE

Congratulations

To the Editor:

I must extend my heartiest congratulations to you and your staff. Any paper that can put up with Rob Swanson's gonzo-photojournalism deserves the 'Fear and Loathing Award!' I realize his disrespect for fellow editors is matched only by his insatiable lust for weed and women.

I must also compliment you on the layout of Rob's pix. I notice his best shot is strategically placed opposite the drunk driving ad. Very clever.

Leo Carroll
Wayne, NJ

On a more serious note: I thought the paper was fine. I hope to hear more from Randy McMullen, and see more of the babe on pg. two, lower left.

"Kids & Drugs"

To Randy Jansen,

In response to your story "Kids and Drugs," here's a note of appreciation for an excellent piece of information and insight. As a childcare worker in a Burlington group home for pregnant and/or "unmanageable" adolescents (many of them are wards of the state), I am often frustrated and discouraged with the system's way of dealing with kids who, for whatever reason, are drug and/or alcohol abusers. I am angry at the attitudes of the teachers, principals, police officers and parents you described. The situation in your first paragraph (kids getting high before school) is indeed very real, and too many people are either unaware of it, unwilling to take it seriously, or afraid to confront it.

As a staff of concerned and competent therapists and caretakers, we do what we can. But considering the circumstances you outlined, it's nothing more than a band-aid — if even that.

A personal solution to the discouragement and fatigue which I am experiencing with this (and other) teenager-related problems is to get out of the job. I share the hopelessness that you seemed to feel in your closing paragraph.

Thank you for an article which is moving, uncomfortably factual, and written without naive platitudes or evasive socialwork jargon.

Sarah Cook
Burlington

SUMMER CYNIC

University of Vermont
Billings Center
Burlington, Vermont 05401

(802) 656-4412
(802) 656-4413

Editor: Russell Flannery

Associate Editor: Tom Daniels

Photography Editor: Rob Swanson

Ass't to the Editor: John Letteri

Advertising Manager: Nathaniel Foote

Advertising Reps: Peter Voll, Mary Landon

Business Manager: Julie Voll

Production: Dave Lord, Janice Montagne

Editorial Staff: Mary Ann Schlegal, Randy Jansen, Desmond Fitzgerald, Barry Gustin, Sarah Wesson, Vaune Davis (news); Julie Davis, Curtis Haynes, Larry Seiden, Neil Elliot, Otis Norton (arts).

Artist: Liz Hemingway

Special Thanks to UVM Security and Andy Newman.

No material contained herein may be reproduced without the written consent of the Editor of the Vermont Summer Cynic. Opinions expressed do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff or the State of Vermont.

Circulation: 9,000
The Vermont Summer Cynic is printed at the Upper Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont 05033.

Tape Art

Panasonic
RS-462S

RS-462S
AC/Battery Stereo portable cassette recorder with FM/AM stereo radio features two 5" PM dynamic speakers. Two built-in condenser mikes. Super Alloy head. $CrO_2$/normal tape selector. Level/battery/tuning meter. Cue and review. Lockable pause control. Tape counter. Auto-Stop/Auto-Sleep. Separate tone, volume and balance controls. AFC on FM. With AC cord and 6 Panasonic "D" size batteries.

$189.95

ALL SALES BACKED BY OUR FAMOUS SERVICE
BAILEY'S
MUSIC ROOMS - Church St. - Burl., Vt. 863-3210

ROBERT FROST COUNTRY
by Betsy and Tom Melvin
20 % OFF JULY 10 - 15

BOOKSTACKS
Pine Street between Main & College
862-8513
Open Weeknights 8pm. (fri.-9)

The Downhill Edge

WE ARE SERIOUS ABOUT RUNNING & TENNIS

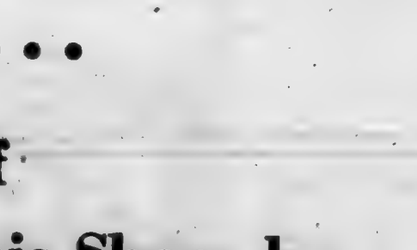
To prove it, we stock:

- Cronus liquid-crystal stop-watches
- ERG Drinking Supplement

frank shorter running gear



- Complete line of runner's books for men & women
- Runner's World Magazine
- Marathon Magazine

And MORE . . .

Complete Line of Running & Tennis Shoes by :

NIKE
PUMA
TIGER
ETONIC
BETA
NEW BALANCE

It's the downhill edge that makes the difference.

The Downhill Edge

81–85 Main St., Burlington, Vt. 05401 (802) 862-2282

On-Campus

Is There A Cure for the Summertime Blues?

Working all summer just to try to earn a dollar.....

Linda Radies draws on her cigarette and gazes into the air with an expression of bored indifference that resembles that of a middle-aged assembly line worker than an attractive young college coed. "What am I doing this summer?" she says cynically, "I'm wasting my time."

A sophomore at UVM majoring in French, Linda works five nights a week as a salad bar attendant in a fast food restaurant on Shelburne Road and six mornings waitressing at an inn. "Anybody could do the work I'm doing," she says, "You don't need any experience for these shit jobs. Don't let them fool you." Asked how much mental input was required, she looks up incredulously, points at her right hand, and says "Thinking! Adding on my fingers is about the extent of the thinking I do."

Tim Hunter, a physics major who is working forty hours a week as a short order cook, has only a slightly less bitter attitude towards monotonous summer work. "As soon as I walk into the kitchen," he says, "I just put myself on automatic – sort of a mental equivalent of cruise control – and think about something else besides flipping burgers. After awhile," he adds, "I hardly notice what I'm doing any more."

Tim and Linda are just two of the hundreds of college students working in Burlington this summer who have found that the term "summer vacation" doesn't necessarily entitle one to a life of leisure.

"Burlington is such a nice place to be in the summer," the unsuspecting are told in the dead of winter, usually by some independently wealthy upperclassman whose most pressing summer obligation is finishing in the top three of a tennis ladder. Rather than brave the suburban wildernesses of East Orange, New Jersey and Darien, Connecticut, many UVM students choose to stay close to the mountains and Lake Champlain under the pretense of "working hard and saving money." Unfortunately, because of a ruthlessly competitive job market and an abundance of motels, fast food restaurants and department stores that some developer is cloning on Shelburne and Williston Roads, most students find themselves working hard in Burlington but not earning much money.

"I looked for three weeks before I realized that I wasn't going to do any better than minimum wage," complained one woman, "and by that time all the jobs I could find were doing things like counter work at Lum's and the Tower Restaurant." Another student responded to an advertisement by the Vermont Job Service, finding that to apply she would have to wait in a line going out the door and down the street.

Fran Bagwell, assistant manager of the Vermont Job Service, has been working in employment counseling for eighteen years and feels that while the overall employment rate in Chittenden County is at 5.8% very low, the summer job situation has been "very tight this year. We haven't had that many openings for the summer," Bagwell said. "Employers either want to hire people who have worked previous summers or people who can continue on in the fall."

Bagwell believes that looking for a job is "a job in itself. You have to learn how to deal with rejection – people get discouraged too easily," she said, adding that "inevitably you have to sell yourself."

No matter how menial and tedious the job something can be learned from it, continued the Job Service employee. "Sometimes the things you learn that you don't like are even more important. Very often

Author-aut juicy job.

A Day in 'The Life'

SUMMER WORK STUDY (9 a.m. to 5 p.m.)

9:15 Arrive at office late; walk around
9:30 Coffee, newspaper.
10:00 Telephone calls (made).
10:15 Telephone calls (received)
10:30 Deliberate working
10:45 End deliberation; more coffee.
11:15 Walk around the office.
11:30 Lunch.
1:45 Return to office, walk around.
2:00 Downtown
3:00 Dairy Bar
3:45 Return to office, walk around
4:10 Sharpen pencils
4:20 Log in hours worked (9 to 5)
4:30 Finbar's

Work-study student incognito. Swanson Photos

Author-automaton, Vaune Davis, on a juicy job.

summer jobs give students the chance to deal with the real world."

Indeed for many, a summer job is an opportunity to meet people from backgrounds more diverse than Volvo-driving college students. Cathy, a striking girl with long blond hair and dark eyes who works thirty-six hours a week as a cocktail waitress, said that she definitely "feels more street wise. Most of the men who hang around the bar just talk about how great they are. A lot of times I feel out of place, like I'm stepping into a role I have to play — talking about things I know nothing about. The work was interesting at first," she said, "but then it became a tedious routine. The same people come in all the time and talk about the same things," she said. "I'm just a listener."

Nevertheless, no matter how obnoxious the work is, there are ways to cope. One McDonald's worker found the ultimate painkiller — "All I do is just leave my mind at home."

—Vaune Davis

The LAST CHANCE Saloon
Mon Nite
Bottle Beer
50c
147 Main St.

This is the best $500 stereo system that money can buy.

$500
JUST $52.00 DOWN
AND $23.15 A MONTH*

Have you ever been in a store, any store, and immediately liked the most expensive item in the store, but alas, you noticed the price was way beyond what you could afford. If that has happened to you, we know you are going to love our system $500. Not only is it truely affordable (just $23.15 per month with 10% down*) . . .

. . . It's one of the best sounding stereo systems we sell at any price.

A stereo system is a chain of equipment. The total sound that is reproduced is only as good as the weakest link. Lets tune onto a good clean FM station. We live in an area of valleys and hills and the type of music we may wish to hear may be broadcast miles away. So, our first requirement is a receiver that is sensitive enough to pull in that station clearly, and be selective enough to reduce interference from adjacent stations, and also capable of isolating noise from the actual signal so that we may listen to clean sounding stereo FM. And power so clean and pure no other receiver in its price range can come close to its performance. (.04% T.H.D.). That's why we chose the New Technics SA200 AM/FM stereo receiver for system $500.

If we are listening to a record, we want to be able to hear everything that was recorded. We chose the Audio Technica AT-11E Stereo Cartridge because it can track the most complex record grooves and still maintain high separation. We also chose the cartridge for compatability to the turntable.

The turntable must be capable of following the record grooves, turn the record at exactly 33⅓ R.P.M. (or 45 R.P.M.) without interference. It must isolate the record information from external vibrations. The JVC JLA20 turntable does these things extremely well, since it is belt drive and has a servo controlled motor. It rejects at the end of a record, smoothly and quietly, and may be cued manually (damped in up and down directions).

Perhaps the most important part of any stereo system, the speakers. Loudspeakers characterize what a stereo system sounds like. If speakers do ultimately make the greatest difference of how the system sounds, then, the most important requirement is not hearing what the speakers sound like, but how they don't sound at all. You don't want the speakers to add or detract from the source, but, rather to pass it on just as it was recorded. We've included the new Advent/1 speakers, for system $500 for those exact reasons. (They are matched for power output of the Technics AM/FM receiver.)

Since 1969 Advent has been making loudspeakers that are accurate. Putting the latest loudspeaker technology to work, to create a value oriented product. The Advent One's make this system the best that you can buy for $500. The Advent One Loudspeaker is a two way design, using the same components as the most copied speaker in the speaker industry, the large Advents. Since the Advent One contains the same components as the large Advent and sells for $100 (the large Advent sell for $150 each) something must be different ... the cabinet is smaller, the sacrifice musically then is not in the bass, middle, or high frequencies, but in the very deep bass. Advent says the last 3rd octave of music will not have the volume that is apparent on the large Advents. (Basically, you'll miss a 30 cycle organ pedal.) When you consider cost versus performance, you'll be astounded.

ECLIPSE 22
STEREO HEADPHONES
Velocity type full range headphone. Freq. response 20-20,000 Hz. $29

*For qualified customers, based on 24 monthly installments, with 10% down payment, at an annual interest rate of 18.11% (includes sales tax).

Lafayette Radio Electronics Creative Sound

• 137 PEARL ST., ESSEX JCT. • BARRE-MONTPELIER RD., BARRE • "IN THE MALL BETWEEN" KMART & MARTIN'S, SO. BURLINGTON

Drug Prices in Burlington: A Continuing Malady

The bottle of one hundred Erythromycin tablets you purchase at a drug store has been granula., tested, compressed, tested, packaged, and tested again.

If purchased in Burlington, its trek here probably began at the Eli Lilly Company of Indianapolis, Indiana, the company producing for the sale of most pharmaceutical drugs for the northern half of Vermont. They manufacture 700 different medical products with divisions including creative packaging, veterinary, and agricultural divisions. Last year's sales soared over one billion dollars.

The Plight of the Pill

Each tablet or capsule of a specific drug contains one or more active ingredients, and one or more additives. The additives to the drug are most often used when the active ingredient alone could not take up enough mass to result in a practical tablet or capsule. For example, dilvent is used in the manufacture of nitroglycerin tablets in order for those tablets to be readily handled and taken.

Eventually, the drug is packaged and sent to the respective pharmacies and hospitals. Over 90% of all the prescriptions handed out by pharmacies are prepared drugs, according to Jeffers. Such things as dermatological creams and ointments must be prepared by the pharmacist himself.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) follows each step of the drug manufacturer to assure proper active substance standards. A spokesman for the regional federal office in Boston said the FDA's Food Manufacturing Practice Regulations for Drugs "set down certain controls" for drug production. Drug labelling regulations, correct potency and purity standards, and Good Manufacturing Practice Regulations are some of the other rules that manufacturer Eli Lilly has to follow when producing drugs.

Lilly is one of twenty-three drug companies in the U.S. that carries on extensive research as well as production. The benefit here, given a study stating that drug companies not actively involved in research and development are seven times more susceptible to FDA drug recalls, subject to one and a half more FDA Drug Product Problem reports, and suffer from forty-three times more FDA initiated action.

The average wholesale price of drugs, by company, does not vary markedly. But retail prices, unregulated by either the FDA or the state, are as varied as Gerald Ford, Patti Smith, and Morris the Cat.

A spokesman for a Middlebury pharmacy claimed that any regulation of drug prices would result in the end of the free market system, and the fixed prices would create a monopoly, rather than competition, as it is now.

But, the distance between retail pharmaceutical drug prices, wholesale prices from the Drug Topic Redbook of 1978, and the retailers themselves is evident from the tables and simply is a malady that no drug can cure. Some type of regulation of drug prices is badly needed.

Admittedly, the drug market is a supplier's one, and pharmacies may charge what they deem fair, but it is unreasonable to expect people to pay outrageous prices for a basic necessity.

—John Letteri

"Retail prices, unregulated by either the FDA or the state, are as varied as Gerald Ford, Patti Smith, and Morris the Cat."

Better Living Through Chemistry

Bargain Hunting for Drugs

| | Mail Drugs | Young's Pharmacy | Greenberg Pharmacy | Gaynor Pharmacy | City Drugs | Average Wholesale Price* |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Achromycin V (250 mg.) 30 | 1.79 | 2.00 | — | 1.20 | 2.95 | 4.57/100 |
| Aldomet (250 mg.) 100 | 8.50 | 11.80 | 8.98 | 10.50 | 12.95 | 8.74/100 |
| Ampicillin (250 mg.) 24 | 2.54 | 3.60 | 2.88 | 2.40 | 3.60 | — |
| Antromid S (500 mg.) 100 | 8.53 | 10.40 | 8.98 | 8.80 | 10.25 | 7.10/100 |
| Bendectin Tablets 24 | 3.43 | 5.00 | 3.88 | 3.60 | 5.07 | 12.50/100 |
| Butazolidin Alka 30 | 3.68 | 6.00 | 4.58 | 3.13 | 5.61 | 10.53/100 |
| Coumadin (5 mg.) 100 | 6.33 | 9.35 | 7.43 | 5.40 | 8.35 | 5.60/100 |
| Dilantin (100 mg.) 100 | 3.97 | 5.20 | — | — | 4.75 | 3.68/100 |
| Diuril (500 mg.) 60 | 4.13 | 5.40 | 2.93 | 2.76 | 6.48 | 6.43/100 |
| Donnatal Tablets 100 | 2.69 | 3.35 | 1.68 | — | 3.35 | 2.00/100 |
| Drixoral 24 | 4.28 | 6.00 | — | 3.49 | 5.63 | 11.73/100 |
| Erythromycin (250 mg.) 24 | 2.40 | 2.40 | 1.88 | 2.40 | 3.60 | — |
| Gantrisin (500 mg.) 40 | 1.79 | 2.40 | 1.28 | 1.50 | 3.05 | 3.76/100 |
| Hydrodiuril (50 mg.) 100 | 6.66 | 9.00 | 6.98 | | 8.57 | 6.42/100 |
| Lanoxin (0.25 mg.) 100 | .98 | 1.75 | .99 | 1.25 | 1.95 | 1.03/100 |
| Lasix (40 mg.) 30 | 3.48 | 4.30 | 4.18 | 3.30 | 5.15 | 9.25/100 |
| Librax 60 | 6.99 | 8.40 | 6.88 | 5.10 | 9.00 | 9.29/100 |
| Mycolog Cream 15 gm. | 4.29 | 5.35 | 4.88 | 3.75, | 5.95 | 3.77/15 gm.tube |
| Orinase (0.5 gm.) 100 | 11.98 | 14.00 | 9.58 | 9.49 | 13.95 | 5.93/50 |
| Ovral unit | 3.25 | 3.75 | 3.98 | 4.13 | 3.77 | 21.10/ 6 packets |
| Ovulen 21 unit | 3.25 | 3.75 | 3.98 | 4.15 | 4.17 | 35.40/12 |
| Orthonovum 1/50 – 21 unit | 3.25 | 3.75 | 3.98 | 3.65 | 3.97 | — |
| Pavabid 60 | 7.58 | 10.00 | 7.43 | 6.06 | 10.00 | 10.38/100 |
| Preanisone (5 mg.) 60 | 1.89 | 2.50 | 1.98 | 1.80 | 2.85 | — |
| Synthroid (0.1 mg.) 100 | 2.87 | 3.40 | 1.98 | 1.98 | 3.60 | 2.04/100 |
| Sumycin (250 mg.) 30 | 1.99 | — | 1.98 | 1.20 | 2.55 | 4.69/100 |
| Tetracycline (250 mg.) 30 | 1.29 | 2.00 | 1.98 | 1.00 | 2.55 | — |
| Thorazine (25 mg.) 100 | 4.18 | 6.35 | 5.88 | 4.17 | 5.75 | — |
| Thyroid (60 mg.) 100 | .99 | 1.50 | 1.48 | 1.25 | 2.65 | — |
| Tuss Ornade Spansules 24 | 4.19 | 5.00 | 3.88 | 3.38 | 5.62 | 7.10/50 |
| Zyloprim | 7.78 | 11.60 | 9.58 | 9.00 | 9.95 | 6.95/100 |

The use of the information in this survey for promotional purposes is prohibited by law.

*Source: Drug Topic Redbook, 1978

The Overuse and Misuse of Medication

Over the past 30 years, many new and powerful drugs have been developed. Their use has proliferated so greatly that concern has been raised as to their safety. Recent studies have conclusively shown that drugs are responsible for many health problems. Every year, more than 1 million people, that is 3-5% of all hospital admissions are admitted primarily because of a negative reaction to drugs; and 30% of the patients have further adverse reactions from drugs taken during their stay. These figures fail to measure the long-term consequences of continued drug use.

Presently, there are 84 drugs associated with an increased risk of cancer. Of these, 12 are either proven carcinogens or are more strongly implicated than the others. For example, in 1971, DES, a synthetic hormone used since 1938 to prevent abortion, was discovered to cause vaginal cancer in the adolescent children of the women who took the drug. Although it was subsequently banned, the damage had already been done. Phenacetin, once a commonly used pain reliever, recently was found to cause a fatal liver disease, and may also be connected to some forms of cancer. Even more shocking is the fact that Phenacetin is still sold in pharmacies. This applies to other dangerous or lethal drugs as well, such as Chloramphenicol, a commonly used antibiotic. Both DES and Phenacetin exemplify drugs that, it has been learned, are capable of causing cancer and other diseases.

Many drugs also act as "anti-vitamins" preventing the uptake or availability of the vitamin, which may result in a dangerous vitamin deficiency. The most outstanding example is the contraceptive pill, which increases the body's need for folic acid, Vitamins $B_2$, $B_6$, $B_{12}$, and C. Deficiencies of folic acid and $B_{12}$ are responsible for anemia, while nervous dysfunction and susceptibility to infection, amongst other reactions, are related to deficiencies of $B_6$ and C, respectively. Furthermore, the "pill" has also been tied to an increased risk of heart disease and cancer of the liver. Antibiotics which are currently used for nearly all maladies are known to upset the balance of naturally occurring bacteria in the intestines, resulting in decreased resistance to harmful organisms. Additionally, most antibiotics prevent the absorption or utilization of the fat-solube vitamins (A, D, E, K), folic acid, $B_{12}$, Calcium, Magnesium, and Iron. Even Aspirin drastically lowers the blood level of Vitamin C and folic acid.

The point here is that many drugs could do more harm than good. The body is not a machine run by mechanical and manipulating switches. The introduction of any foreign chemical into the body is bound to result in some negative reaction. In our society, minor aches and pains that once were accepted as part of life are now assuaged either by stress-causing pain relievers or futile trips to the doctor. In both cases, the condition is usually self-limiting and non-treatable, the best cure resulting from the natural processes within the body. This requires rest, not pai ıkillers that suppress the warning signals and blunt the natural curative defenses.

In some cases, like fighting infectious diseases or controlling high blood pressure, the use of drugs is warranted. For the most part, however, we would all be better off if dependence on drugs were curtailed and reliance on the nutritional, hygenic, and social approach to health which emphasizes proper rest, proper food, a daily routine of exercise, and no smoking was increased.

—Barry Gustin

A Gift Shop For Adults... and Other Children

Gifts
Decoratives
Toys

Geppetto's

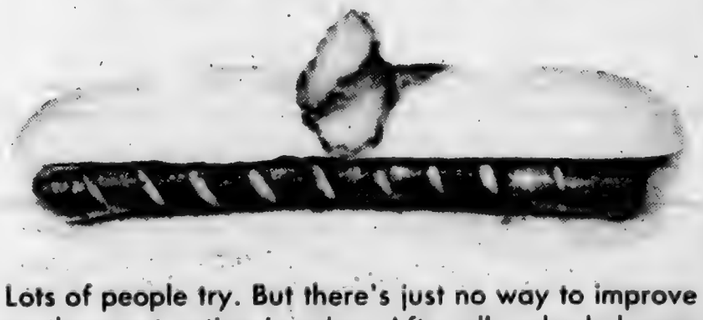
19 Church Street
(Next To Prestons)

Ladies Nite Thursday
9'til closing!

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30

Monday night
shot & draft
for only $1.25

★ Backgammon and Cribbage Sets



★ Shrimp Cocktail for only $1.25

★ Frozen Daiquiris

what ale's you

152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

No Tom, Dick or Harry can beat our frank.

Lots of people try. But there's just no way to improve on the great eating Lumdog. After all, nobody knows more about hot dogs than LUMS. Whether you like it with melted cheese, spicy chili or hot sauerkraut LUMS is a place for a great Hot Dog.

The Lumdog

LUMS

FAMILY RESTAURANTS

WILLISTON ROAD TOWARDS THE AIRPORT

How Green Are the Mountain$?

Chasing the Arts Dollar

Whatever happened to the idealistic slogan "Art for the Sake of Art"? Today, competition is the name of the game in the entertainment world and this summer music festivals, theatre repertoires, concerts, and conventions are offering Vermonters and visitors a packed calendar of fine events. Each series, festival, and get-together is determined to become an established annual occurrence; and "See You Next Year" is the basic message which is often twisted into Madison Avenue hype.

But with many events on the same day and given a limit to how much culture one can afford, the question is which organizations will survive? The most successful shows are likely to be those with broad local appeal. The Mozart Festival found that 80% of its audience were locals, and the Festival so far has sold out six of fifteen concerts before the season has begun. Seeking to exploit the Vermont mystique in the flatlands, almost every event is named after Vermont or the Green Mountains of the "Beckoning Country." Rock concerts especially have been counting on droves of weekend urban refugees to increase gate receipts. Yet the Woodstock era of outdoor camping and music seems to be waning in popularity. Although Vermont rakes in about $250 million a year in tourist dollars, out-of-staters have not as a rule been big patrons of Vermont arts.

"Is there enough demand for all these shows?" one might ask. The "summer people" attendance is more than offset by the reduced number of college students in the Burlington area, the state's cultural hub. The success of an event depends on several factors: artists, location, publicity, and date. Prices may be crucial too. With many shows occurring on the same day or weekend, it is often difficult to choose and budget among the wide assortment of cultural attractions. Stardust Productions' elegant dinner dance on the Lake costs $25 per couple; the Green Mountain Music Series in Sugarbush is asking $7.75 and $8.75 per show; Wizard Productions ferry rides and concerts are $6 and $6.50; $$$$$$ — send to the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston for more paper money!

The busiest day of the summer will be Saturday, July 29 when too many good shows were scheduled: and someone or everyone may suffer for it. Culture vultures can choose from The Craftsbury Common Fiddlers Contest, The Vermont Jazz Festival in Killington, tenor sax virtuoso Gato Barbiere at Sugarbush, folk singer-guitarist Dave Van Ronk at the Top of the Square, All-Haydn Mozart Festival performance at Shelburne Farms, Play It Again, Sam at St. Mike's, and two shows of Twelfth Night at the Royall Tyler.

Competition is not limited to rock promoters. The Lane Series, Mozart Festival, Vermont Symphony, Shakespeare Festival, St. Michael's Playhouse, and other groups find themselves directly or indirectly vying for audiences. And the conflicts between local artists and imports are hotly debated. Last week, the Lane Series and the Symphony announced they will be joining forces to present four concerts for the upcoming season. Meanwhile, the Mozart Festival is planning to expand to include an International Quartet Series of four concerts for the fall and spring '78-'79.

One possible casualty of the Vermont arts industry is the newly formed Top of the Square, Inc. Using a large tent to house performances, The Top booked a wide variety of shows but has not been able to draw against local theatre, bluegrass, rock, and classical events. Sugarbush recorded barely 1000 people for its opening Taj Mahal-Tom Rush concert and less for Havens–Sebastian. Even the Green Mountain Banjo Festival in Essex Junction attracted only 3,500 over three days, far below past Banjo Festival crowds of 8-10,000. And Shakespeare's Twelfth Night failed to sell out opening night.

Because of a lack of good indoor performance centers, summer events are mostly held outdoors. If the weather is bad, promoters can lose their shirts (except for the Vermont Jazz Festival which seems to thrive on rain and mud). Arts promotion is a risky business with only marginal financial rewards at best. Because of a lack of good indoor performance centers Arts traditionally have a record of not being able to support themselves through admission receipts alone and have relied upon grants and private donations to stay solvent. This season, the Lane Series ran a substantial deficit; the Shakespeare Festival budget was cut by $12,000 by UVM so that only two instead of the usual three plays are being staged; but the Mozart Festival wiped out a $20,000 debt; and the Vermont Symphony is in the best financial shape in years.

For rock concerts, promoters come and go, and there aren't many in this neck of the woods. Promoters put on concerts for a variety of reasons, not always the best. The most ostensible purpose is to make money, but according to one promoter, "a lot of promoters just want to rub elbows with The Stars; they forget that music is a business like any other business." Booking acts and arranging dates is a hassle. And merely getting together the necessary capital can be prohibitive. Publicity isn't much problem, but a place to play is another story. A year ago, Burlington banned rock concerts in Memorial Auditorium after vandalism at a Supertramp concert resulted in a few thousand dollars damage. Alan Abair, promoter of the eight Country Banjo Festivals tried unsuccessfully to reverse the ban. Even so, the acoustics at Memorial leave much to be desired, and several performers have refused to play there for that reason. UVM's Patrick Gym, as recent Grateful Dead fans will attest, is hot and sticky, and the acoustics are unreliable. Probably the best local shows have been staged at the Flynn Theatre, although the Flynn's stage is woefully small. Current options are to build a multi-million dollar civic center in downtown Burlington, renovate Memorial, or purchase and redo the Flynn.

Be it on water or on land, culture is expensive, but a grand luxury.

To succeed, promoters have to innovate. Wizard Productions opted for ferry rides with concerts as a refreshing novelty. The atmosphere is looser than any bar in town and music is excellent, not to mention the views. Furthermore, Mike Davis of Wizard stated, "We're not making much at all from the cruises; we're putting them on because we like to do it."

The hustling never seems to stop. The job isn't over after the show is done. There are always loose ends to wrap up – paying people, checking on details, etc.

Rock concerts have come under some criticism because they are virtual drug havens. Crowds get half loaded before the concert and get the other half at the show. Security police have been relaxed and tolerant of drinking and pot smoking. Most concerts come off without serious crime problems. But providing first aid, adequate rest rooms, and cleaning up afterwards can be a pain.

Finally, any arts organization that hopes to survive must make a name for itself. There is a tendency for local newspapers to write something favorable about any arts performance – basically because the Green Mountains get to be culture starved during the winter. But the summer on the other hand is culture saturation and audiences are more wary of what they attend. Still, some promoters don't judge their success by one season alone. The Sugarbush series, for example, is in its first year of a five-year pilot project to turn the ski area into a year-round resort. It seems unlikely that all of the current festivals, series, and concerts will prove to be financially redeeming. One can only hope that the survivors will continue to offer a wide variety of high quality shows at reasonable prices.

Next year, if all goes well, new events have been scheduled. The Green Mountain Cow Chip Throwing Contest in Addison should attract fun seekers from throughout New England, and the Vermont Oboe Festival in Woodstock is expected to flourish in high style.

–Tom Daniels

Swanson Photos

Lane series

Aulos Baroque Ensemble
July 15
8:30 pm St. Joseph's Church
Music at Versailles: A Royal Entertainment

This group of Juilliard lauréates has achieved remarkable acclaim and critical acclaim for their definitive interpretations of baroque chamber music. Performing on unaltered instruments of the period and exact historical replicas, the Ensemble recreates a musical world where the extraordinary tonal colors and textures of the instruments are basic to the composer's art. The Ensemble's Burlington program will recreate an evening at the court of Louis XIV, playing music by Couperin, Marais and [illegible]

Doc Watson
July 20
8:00 pm Shelburne Farms
The South Porch

Doc Watson, "the greatest flat picker who ever lived," plays everything from "Sweet Georgia Brown" to "Mean Woman Blues" and "Blue Suede Shoes." It is his ability, considerably enhanced by his son Merle's bluesy accompaniment, to deal with the variety that is astounding. Together, the Watsons represent the ultimate in stylized picking – Doc with his intimidating speed and flair, and Merle filling in the gaps with slide style solos so economical and appropriate that a rock musician might build a career on any of them.

All Seats $6.00

TICKETS AVAILABLE AT

★ Lane Office
284 East Ave.

★ Bailey's Music Rooms

★ The Door

Box Office: Open 10-4 Weekdays
Telephone: Ticket Information 656-3418
Administration 656-4455

NO REFUNDS—NO EXCHANGES

CARBUR'S OUTDOOR SURVIVAL KIT TO GO

Carbur's 'Grandwich,' With a Jumbo Cold Drink, Pickle & Chips, and a Juicy Red Apple

$2.35 CHEAP!

CALL AHEAD AND PICK IT UP
Burl. 864-9631
Plattsburg 561-3663

Vermont's Finest ALL NATURAL Ice Cream

Try our NEW Fresh Fruit and Salad Crepes for...

Lunch, Light Dinner and Snacks

Corner of St. Paul and College St.
Mon-Thurs 11:30-11 Fri & Sat 11:30-12 Sun 2-11

Ski Rack Means Bike Rack In The Summer

VISTA * Free 30 Day Check Up * All Bicycles Fully Assembled

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Men's Frames | 19" | 21" | 23" | 25" | |
| Ladies | 19" | | | | |

Shown Above: VISTA PACER
$145

*First in Vermont to Have Customer "Do-It-Yourself Repair Shop."

the Ski Rack
658-5313
83 MAIN ST., BURLINGTON
MON. TO THURS. 9 to 6
FRI. 9 to 9
SAT. 9 to 5

Cover Story/In Concer

Concerts Worth Travelling To

JULY 18, TUESDAY:
Willie Nelson/Emmylou Harris, Tanglewood, 7 p.m., $8.50, $7.50 and $5 (lawn seats available only on day of performance).
Crosby, Stills, and Nash, Montreal Forum, for info. tel. Ticketron.

JULY 22, SATURDAY:
Geils, Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, Cape Cod Coliseum, 8 p.m., $7.50 (advance), $8.50 (day of show) at Ticketron.

JULY 23, SUNDAY
Charlie Daniels Band, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7.00, $6.00, tel. 518-587-3330 for ticket info.

JULY 24, MONDAY:
Crosby, Stills, and Nash, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7.00 and $6.00, for info. tel. 518-587-3330.

JULY 26, WEDNESDAY:
Fleetwood Mac, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7 and $6. Tel. 518-587-3330 for ticket info. Basically sold out, but lawn seats are available on the day of the show.
Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, The Paradise, 967 Comm. Ave., Boston, 9 p.m., $7.50 (advance) $8.50 (day of the show) at Ticketron or Theatre.

JULY 27, THURSDAY:
Seals and Crofts, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7 and $6. Tel. 518-587-3330 for ticket info.

JULY 29, SATURDAY:
Ted Nugent, Cape Cod Coliseum, 8 p.m., $8.50 (advance), $9.50 (day of concert) at Ticketron.
Robert Palmer, Music Inn (outdoor concert), Lenox, MA, $7.50 (advance), $8.50 (day of show), $8.50 at Ticketron.
Neil Diamond, Montreal Forum, 8 p.m., $12.50 (SOLD OUT), $10.50, and $7.50 at Ticketron.

AUGUST 2, WEDNESDAY:
Crosby, Stills and Nash, Boston Garden, 8 p.m., $10.50, $9.50, and $8.50 at Ticketron.
The Doobie Brothers, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7 and $6. Tel. 518-587-3330 for info.

AUGUST 3, THURSDAY:
Kris Kristofferson/Rita Coolidge, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 8:15 p.m., $11, $9.50, $7, $6.50 and $5, tel. 518-587-3330 for info.

AUGUST 4, FRIDAY:
Martin Mull, Paradise, 967 Comm. Ave., Boston, 8:30 and 11:00 p.m., $8.50 at Ticketron.
Linda Ronstadt, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7 and $6, tel. 518-587-3330 for info.

AUGUST 5, SATURDAY:
Martin Mull, Paradise, 967 Comm. Ave., Boston, 8:30 and 11:00 p.m., $8.50 at Ticketron.
Linda Ronstadt, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7 and $6, tel. 518-587-3330 for info.
Eagles, Ricean Carleton Raceway, Ottawa, 6 p.m., $12.50 (first 10,000 tickets sold) tel. 514-280-3651 for details.

AUGUST 7, MONDAY:
Beach Boys/Charles Lloyd, Boston Garden, 9 p.m., $10.50, $8.50, $7.50 at Ticketron.

AUGUST 9, WEDNESDAY:
Bruce Springsteen, Montreal tel. Ticketron for info.

AUGUST 13, SUNDAY:
Foreignor, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 7 p.m., $7 and $6, tel. 518-587-3330 for further info.

AUGUST 14, MONDAY:
Peter, Paul, and Mary, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 8:15 p.m., $11.00, $9.50, $7.00, $6.50, $5.00.

AUGUST 15, TUESDAY:
Jackson Brown, Tanglewood, Lenox, MA, 7 p.m., $8.50, $7.50, $5 (lawn) at Ticketron.

AUGUST 22, TUESDAY:
Chuck Mangione, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, 8:15 p.m., $11.00, $9.50, $7.00, $6.50, $5.00, tel. 518-587-3330 for info.

AUGUST 27, SUNDAY:
Jackson Brown, Boston Garden, 8 p.m., $10, $8.50, $7.50 at Ticketron.

AUGUST 30, WEDNESDAY: AUGUST 31, THURSDAY:
Yes, Boston Garden, 8 p.m., $10, $8.50, $7.50 at Ticketron.

Random Arts. . .

Swanson Photos

Jumpin' . . .

Three days of rompin' stompin' downhome country tunes were fiddled, picked, and sung at the 8th annual Country Banjo Festival at the Champlain Valley Fair Grounds. Headliners did not disappoint, including: Vassar Clements and his magic fiddle, Bill Monroe, the mandolin playing and warbling Father of Bluegrass, Peter Rowan and his brothers, MC Bert Porter, and a slew of groups from around New England. Good times were had by all.

T.D.

Rippin'. . .

Tom Rush and Taj Mahal kicked off the Green Mountain Music Series July 1 with good performances. Rush played more rock 'n roll than usual, but Taj made the crowd dance with several famous tunes and a captivating stage presence. On July 2, John Sebastian and Richie Havens played old and new favorites.

This Saturday, July 15, band leader Maynard Ferguson with special guests guitarist Larry Coryell and renown pianist Dave Brubeck should produce some excellent jazz. Also, Harry Chapin July 22. If the weather is nice, the setting can't be beat.

T.D.

PR Photo

Brilliant . . .

The Lane Series kicked off its first summer season in five years with a sparkling performance by the Romero Brothers, guitar virtuosos. The trio skillfully played a variety of classical and flamenco pieces amid acoustically superb Baroque setting of St. Joseph's Church. Next shows are the Aulos Baroque Ensemble, July 15, and the great Doc Watson at Shelburne Farms on July 20.

T.D

Refreshing . . .

Wizard Productions launched its get-out-of-town and on to the lake ferry boat concerts with Pine Island on June 30. Pine Island played well for 2 hours; the scenery, especially sunset, was alone worth the trip. A little bit crowded but good vibes. Drink hard liquor, not beer and take the waves with bended knees. Coming up are: Frank Wakefield and the Good Old Boys (bluegrass) on July 15; and the Afro-rock fusion band Zzebra on July 21.

T.D.

beer wine
THE ONLY
BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE
IS IN WINOOSKI
lowest prices largest selection
kegs soda

BECK ARNLEY
National Discount Club
Save Up to
15% Off
on Selected Items.
Special!
All Oil-Filters $2.95
Sign Up Now at...
Imported Parts Center
3060 Williston Road
South Burlington, Vermont 05401

the alibi
Middlebury's Night Spot
Live Music on Week-ends
FROG ALLEY
MIDDLEBURY, VERMONT

July 13 - 26

THURSDAY 13

DRAMA

"Othello" Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.

"Story Theatre," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.

"Barefoot in the Park" Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, 8:30 p.m., $3.75.

"Two for the Seesaw," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m., $5.

"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," M&M Players, Essex Playhouse, 8:30 p.m., tel. 879-0195 for info.

FILMS

Rare films, "Correct Pinball with Staige Davis," 300 Main St., 9 a.m., donations rejected. Filmed in lower Billings, these rank in quality and enjoyment with Dylan's basement tapes.

"Bus Stop," B106 Cook $1.25.

FRIDAY 14

DRAMA

"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.

"Stpry Theatre," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.

"Two for the Seesaw," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m., $5.

"I Do! I Do!" M&M Players, Essex Playhouse, 8:30 p.m., tel. 879-0195 for info.

"The Nightingale and the Emperor," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 3 p.m., tel. 253-9022 for info.

"Lizard Liberation," The City Company Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream Shop, 7 p.m., tel. 863-2883 for info.

MUSIC

Classical Music Concert and Buffet Dinner, Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, UVM String Quartet (6:30 p.m.), Dinner (7:30 p.m., approx.) and the Vermont Symphony Brass Quintet (9:00 p.m.), tel. 864-5536 for info.

"Windows" (Jazz), Fleming Museum lawn, 1–2 p.m., free.

SATURDAY 15

DRAMA

"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," M&M Players, Bolton Valley Theatre, 8:30 p.m., tel. 879-0195 for info.

"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.

"Story Theatre," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.

"Two for the Seesaw," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m., $6.

"Angel Street," Marlboro Guild Theatre, Memorial Hall, Wilmington, 8 p.m. "adults" $3.50, students $3.00.

FILMS

"Living Arts of Japan," Four Winds Gallery, Ferrisburg, 5 p.m. $2.50.

AMUSEMENT

Champlain Valley Kennel Club Dog Show, Fairgrounds, Essex, 9 a.m., $2 adults, $1 ages 12-16, kids free with parents.

MUSIC

Aulous Baroque Ensemble, Lane Series, St. Joseph's Church, 8:30 p.m., tel. 656-3418 for ticket info.

Windows Jazz Quintet, Battery Park. 2 p.m. free.

Larry Coryell and Maynard Ferguson, Sugarbush Valley, Warren, 4 p.m., $7.75 (advance), $8.75 (day of concert) at ticketron outlets, Upstairs Records (no checks).

SUNDAY 16

DRAMA

"I Do! I Do!" M&M Players, Bolton Valley Theatre, 8:30 p.m. tel. 879-0195 for info.

"As You Like It," Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, 2 p.m. $3.50.

MUSIC

John Baird, Baritone, and Catrene Bair Pianist, Vermont Recital Associat Four Winds Gallery, Ferrisburg, 2, 3, a 4 p.m. free.

Frank Wakefield and the Good Ole Boy Hunts, 101 Main St., 9:00 p. (approx.) $1.50, tel. 863-9850 for mo info.

Vermont Mozart Festival, Openi Concert, UVM Showbarn, 8:00 p.m., 862-7352 for info.

TELEVISION

ETV, U.S. Open Table Tenn Championships, 2 p.m. Also Lio Hampton visits the 'Pops' at 8 p. (repeated on Friday).

THURSDAY 20

DRAMA

"I Do! I Do!" M&M Players, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m., $4.

"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.

"Kiss Me Kate," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m., $5, tel. 253-9022 for further info.

"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.

FILMS

"3:10 to Yuma," B106 Cook, 8 p.m., $1.25.

"Charlotte's Web," 101 Votey Bldg., 1:30 p.m., 50 cents.

LECTURES

"The Faces of Irish Folklore," Irish Studies Program with Maureen Murphy, 8 p.m., B112 Cook Bldg., free.

MUSIC

Doc Watson, Lane Series, Shelburne Farms, The South Porch, 8 p.m., tel. 656-3418 for ticket info.

FRIDAY 21

DRAMA

"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," M&M Players, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m., $4.00.

"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel, 656-2095 for info.

"Kiss Me Kate," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road. 8:30, $5, tel. 253-9022 for info.

"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.

MUSIC

International Folk Dancing, Top of the Square, 6:30 p.m., free.

Mozart Festival, Chapman at the Organ, UVM Recital Hall, 8:00 p.m.

TELEVISION

ETV, "Do We Really Need Stock Markets?" Wall Street Week, 8:30 p.m.

SATURDAY 22

DRAMA

Champlain Shakespeare Festival, "Othello," Royall Tyler Theatre, 2:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.

"Kiss Me Kate," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30, $6, tel. 253-9022 for info.

"A Funny Thing Happened..." M&M Players, Bolton Valley Theatre, tel. 879-0195 for info.

"Angel Street," Marlboro Guild Theatre, Memorial Hall, Wilmington, 8 p.m., "adults" $3.50, students $3.00.

AMUSEMENT

"2 Penny Circus," Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, 2 p.m. adults $2.00, kids $1.00.

MUSIC

Mozart Festival, All Handel, Shelburne Farms, 8 p.m.

Lew London, Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, 8:30 p.m., $3.75.

Harry Chapin, Sugarbush Valley, Warren, 4 p.m., $7.75 (advance), $8.75 (day of the concert) at Ticketron, Upstairs Records (no checks).

FILMS

"Say Goodbye," "Proem," "The Wrought-Iron Sculpture of Paul Aschenbach," and "The Mask-Maker," Four Winds Gallery, Ferrisburg, $2.50.

SUNDAY 23

DRAMA

"I Do! I Do!" M&M Players, Bolton Valley Theatre, dial 879-0195 for further info.

MUSIC

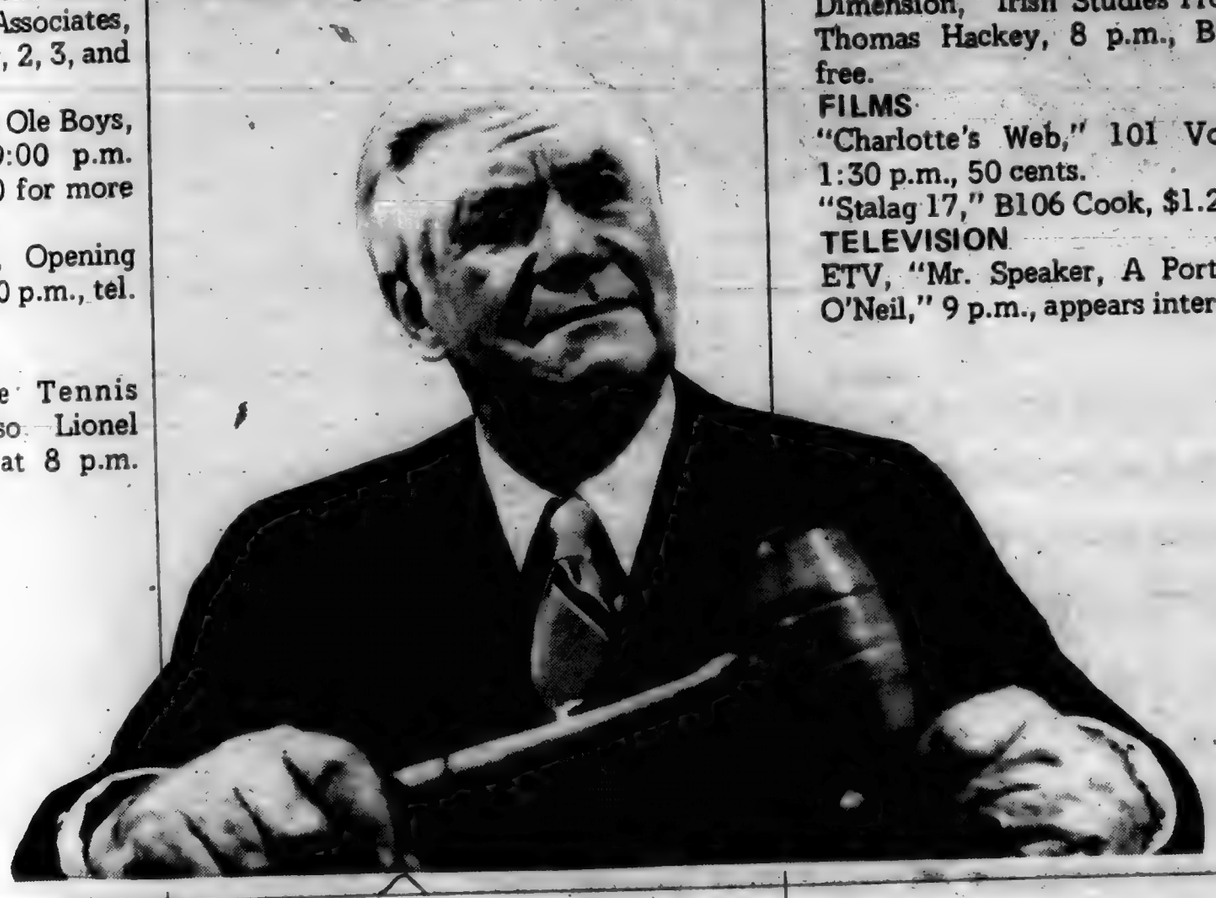
Dream on Productions, Hunts, 101 M St., 9:15 (approx.) $1.50, for info. 863-9850.



Mozart Festival – Mendelsson Oc Burlington Square Mall, 8:00 p.m.

Chamber Music, Vermont Re Associates, Four Winds Gall Ferrisburg, 2, 3, and 4 p.m., free.

AMUSEMENT

Photography Exhibition, Top of Square, Burlington Mall, "Commu Day," free. (Through July 25).

26, 1978

| DAY | MONDAY | TUESDAY | WEDNESDAY |
|---|---|---|---|
| ...'' M&M...n Valley...p.m. tel.16...,'' Top of...lington Mall, 2 p.m. | 17DRAMAChamplain Shakespeare Festival, "Twelfth Night," Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.AMUSEMENTDemonstrations and exhibition from Gardenside Nurseries, Top of the Square, "Community Day," free; (event tentative at press time). | 18DRAMA"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.AMUSEMENTPhotography Exhibition, Top of the Square, Community Day, free.LECTURES"Irish Nationalism: The American Dimension," Irish Studies Program with Thomas Hackey, 8 p.m., B112 Cook, free.FILMS"Charlotte's Web," 101 Votey Bldg., 1:30 p.m., 50 cents."Stalag 17," B106 Cook, $1.25.TELEVISIONETV, "Mr. Speaker, A Portrait of Tip O'Neil," 9 p.m., appears interesting. | 19DRAMA"A Funny Thing Happened..." M&M Players, Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, 8:30 p.m., $4.00."Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8:00 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info."Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.MUSICVermont Mozart Festival, Five Winds Cruise, "M.V. Champlain," Lake Champlain Cruise, 8 p.m.FILMS"Baobab: Portrait of a Tree," "Orozco Frescos at Dartmouth – An Epic of American Civilization," and more, Four Winds Gallery, Ferrisburg, 8 p.m., $2.50."Charlotte's Web," 101 Votey Bldg., 8 p.m., 50 cents. |
| ...one, and Catrene Baird, ...t Recital Associates, ...y, Ferrisburg, 2, 3, and...nd the Good Ole Boys, ...lain St., 9:00 p.m. ...tel. 863-9850 for more...art Festival, Opening ...howbarn, 8:00 p.m., tel. ...o....Open Table Tennis ...2 p.m. Also Lionel ...the 'Pops' at 8 p.m. ...lay). |  | | |
| ...o!'' M&M...on Valley...79-0195 for23...uctions, Hunts, 101 Main ...ox.) $1.50 for info. dial...1 – Mendelsson Octet, ...re Mall, 8:00 p.m. ...sic, Vermont Recital ...Four Winds Gallery, ... and 4 p.m., free....Exhibition, Top of the ...gton Mall, "Community ...rough July 25). | 24DRAMAChamplain Shakespeare Festival, "Twelfth Night," Royall Tyler Theatre, 8:00 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.AMUSEMENTSculpture Demonstration, Top of the Square, Burlington Mall, "Community Day," free.LECTURES"The Abbey Theatre Audience and Irish Nationalism," Irish Studies Program with Adele Dalsmier, 8 p.m., B112 Cook Bldg., free. | 25DRAMA"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info."Man of La Mancha," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, $5, for further info. tel. 253-9022."Angel Street," "Marlboro Guild Players, Memorial Hall, Wilmington, 8:30 p.m., $3.50 adults, $2.50 students.MUSICMozart – The Virtuosos Flute, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8:00 p.m., call 656-2095 for info. | 26DRAMA"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.Man of La Mancha," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m., $5.Champlain Shakespeare Festival, "Othello," Royall Tyler Theatre, 8:00 p.m., for ticket info. call 656-2095."A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," M&M Players, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m., 4:00 p.m.MUSICMozart Festival – Lake Cruise – SOLD OUT.LECTURES"Poet in Limbo," a filmed interview with Irish poet Seamus Heaney, Irish Studies Program, 8 p.m., 103 Rowell Bldg., free. |
| |  | | |

LOW COST TIRES & SERVICE...

. . . along with extra effort personal service is what you will find at E & E Tire. We believe offering lower prices to our customers is more important than having a plushly carpeted showroom, or giving away useless trinkets in order to attract people to our store .

Once you are introduced to our friendly service you will keep coming back for all your tire needs.

AT E & E TIRE WE OFFER

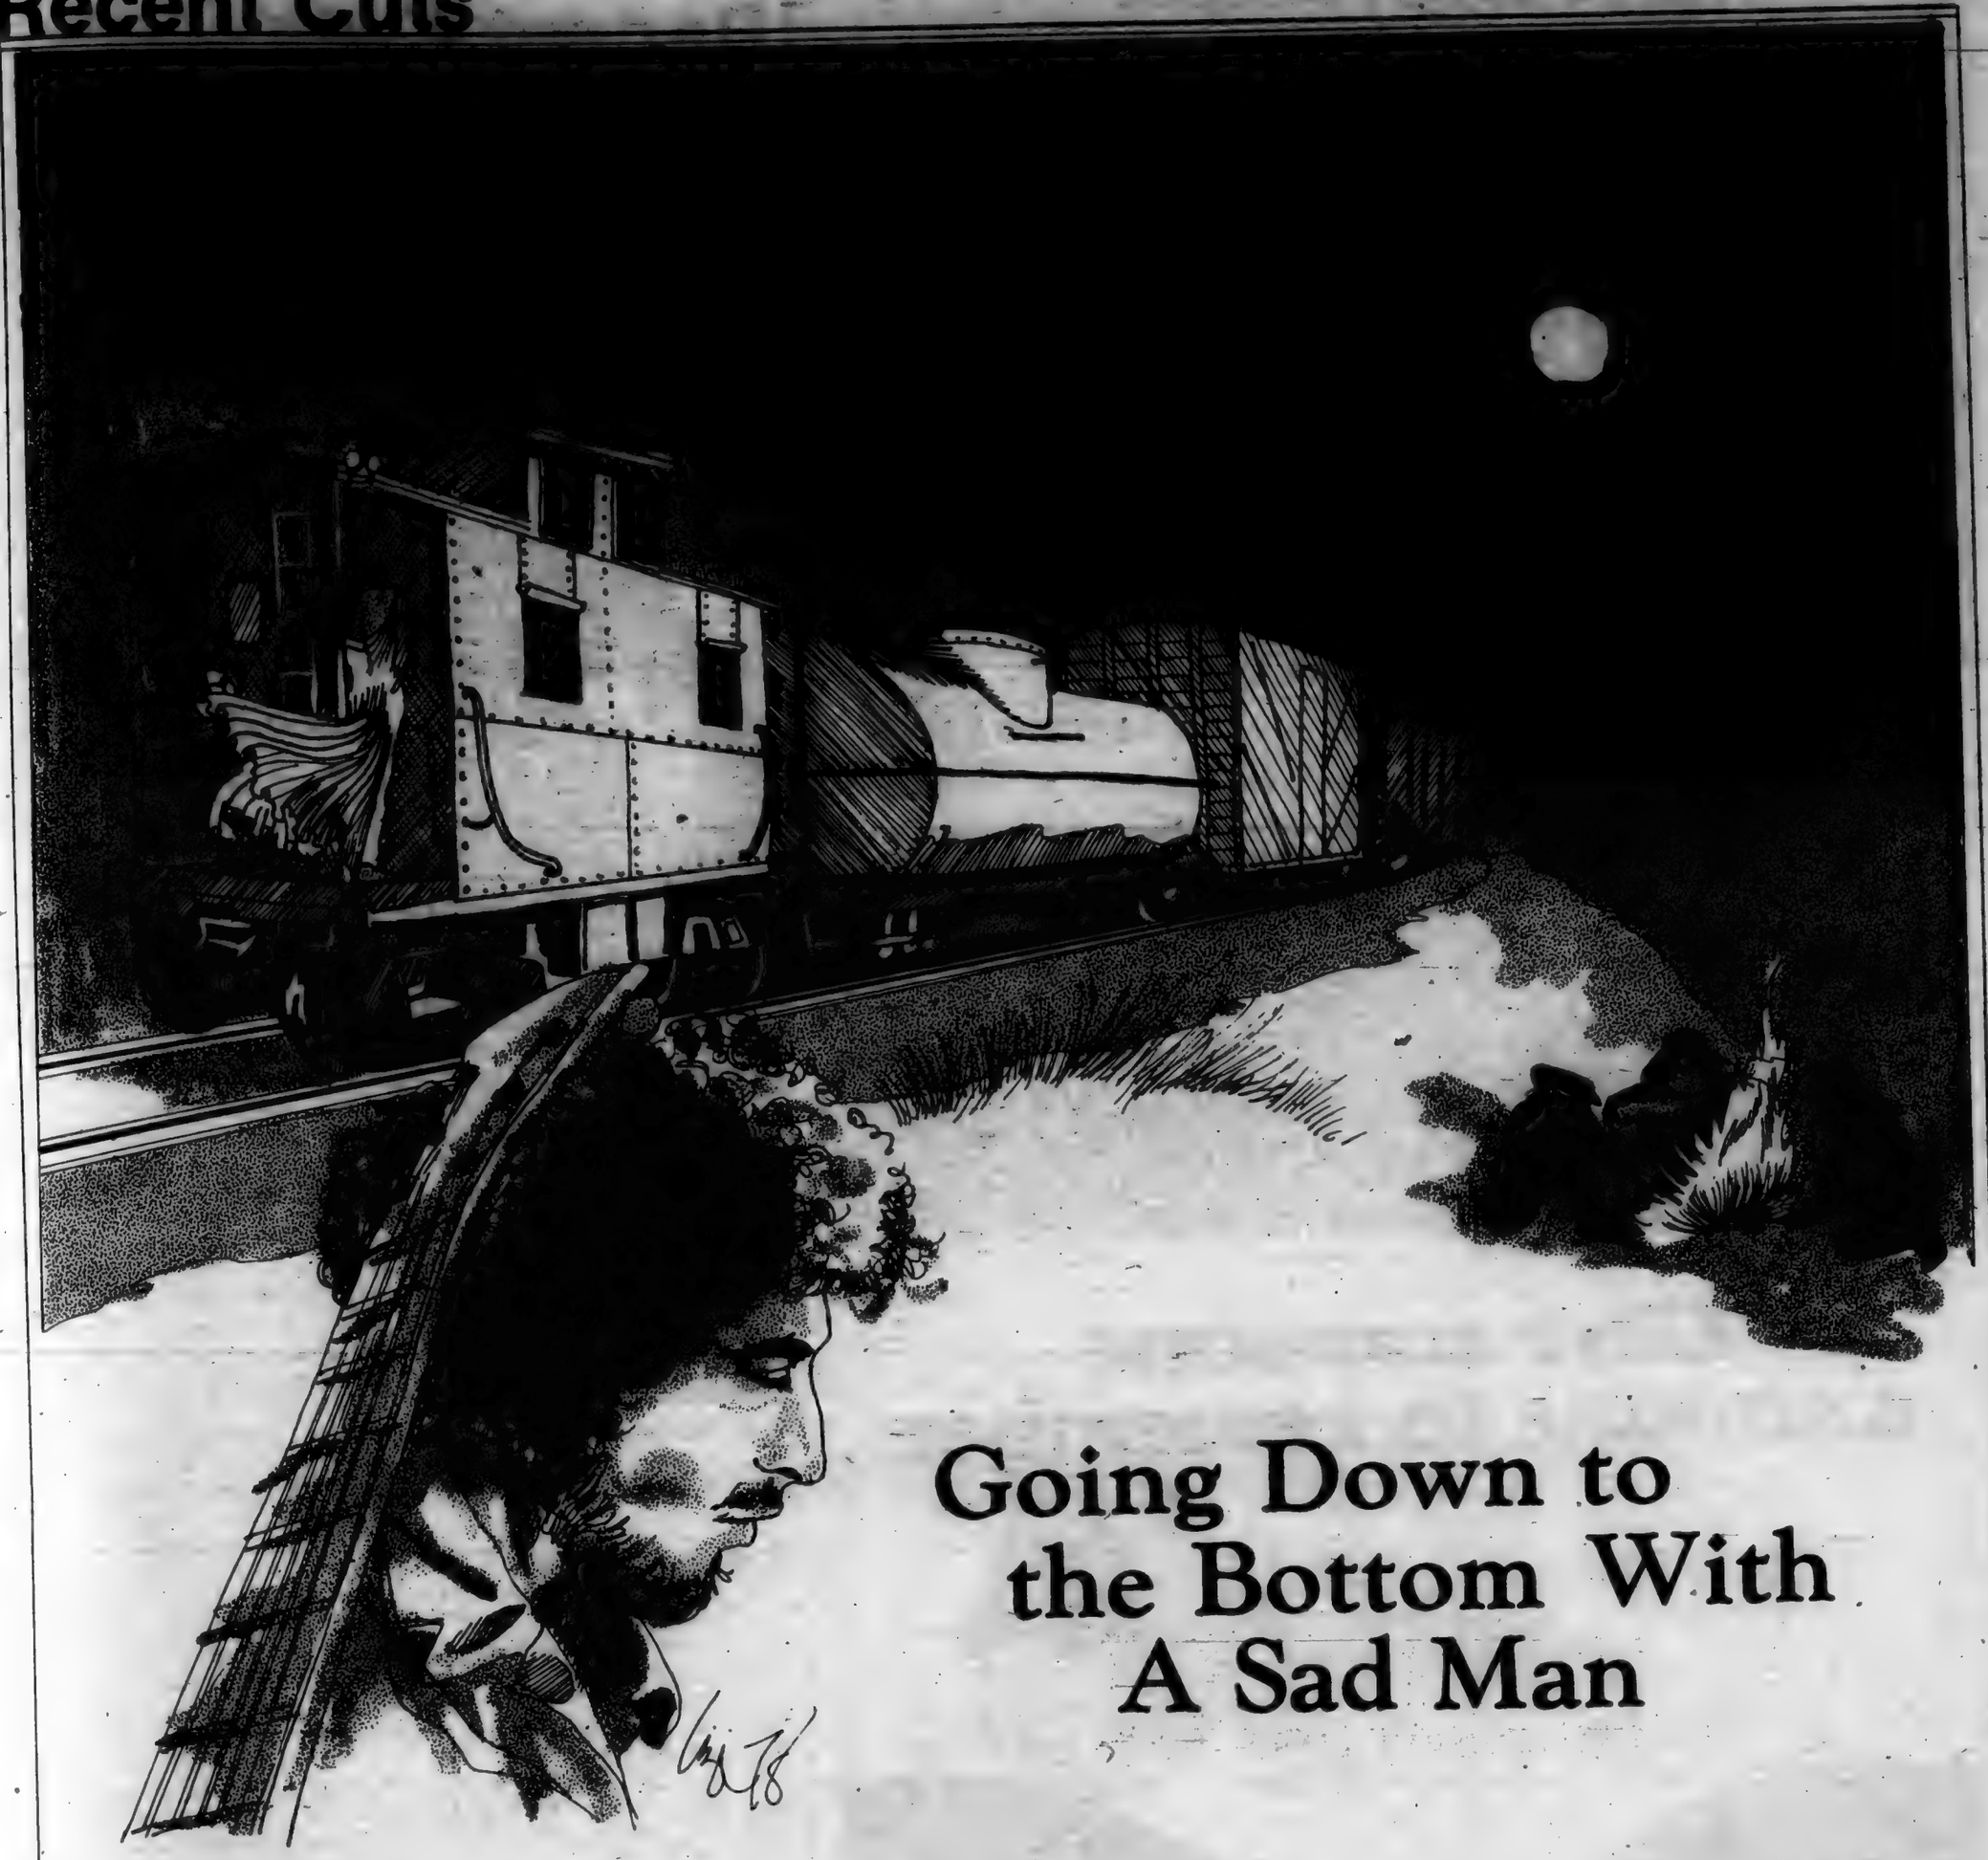
★ Every tire size possibly needed for car, small trucks, campers or trailers.



★ Inspections

★ Exhaust Work

★ Wheel Alignments

E&E TIRE

152 Riverside Ave. 864-7759

Going Down to the Bottom With A Sad Man

Street — Legal Bob Dylan
Columbia JC 35453

It really doesn't matter that growing up has a syntonic rhyme with throwing up, it remains inevitable. Even the most restless punk/poet has to face his mortality and the emotional weight of admitting it. Once acknowledged everything falls apart, everything changes.

Look at Bob Dylan's Street-Legal, a superb album, a glance at cover may bring back images of Freewheelin' or Blonde on Blonde. The marital problems of the last year have left an angry young poet, a hurt and dejected lover. Where Dylan used to spout answers like a child on a multiplication table run, he now showcases a man who can't quite believe it is all happening to him.

What might have been Freewheelin' 1978 is not even an out and about version of Footloose and Fancy Free.

Street-Legal is a blues album with touches of Tex-Mex. Not talking blues but the down and out hanging-on-a-bottle blues. The sound, with Dylan as the untitled producer, is clean, but the singer's anger is the power. And if you didn't quite hear him right, there are three female backup vocalists to accentuate every word. It is that constant repetition of a word or phrase that sets this album apart from the rest of the Dylan collection. Where Bobby D. once could utter more words in one song than any other three singers, he now repeats only the bare essentials until the message is drummed onto the back of your brain.

Maybe the cover provides the needed insight to this album. On Freewheelin' Bob was struttin' down the street, he was the different drummer. Now he's peering out from an entranceway. A touch of paranoia, possibly seeing if the lawyer is there for the alimony. On this album the image of his wife, Sarah, is not like the one who inspired Dylan to stay up for days in the Chelsea Hotel writing "Sad-Eyed Lady of the Lowlands."

Following his media overkill to promote the cinematic dud, Renaldo and Clara, Dylan has crafted his blackest album. Coming from the man who penned the most beautiful and mystical treatise on love ("To Ramona"), the utter despair (and tail-between-the-legs please-take-me-back tone) of Street-Legal stands as the bridge between the elation and the chains of love.

Side one opens with a lyrical and plotless narrative to his sixteen years of marriage, "Changing of the Guards." In it Dylan confides the effort it has taken him to bring the pain to conscious words:

"I struggled to my feet/ I run past destruction in the ditches/ With the stitches still mending/ 'neath the heart-shaped tattoo." "Changing of the Guards" is the most cryptic of the seventies Dylan repetoire. Interpreting Bob Dylan again may be de rigeur for hip high school poetry teachers again.

This is Dylan's last look back at his wedding photo album. With the omnipresent backup vocalists (Carolyn Dennis, JoAnn Harris and Helen a Springs) reiterating the lyrical struggle, Dylan has shown a new side of baleful anger in the onetime overloved and happy man of New Morning.

In the gruffest voice since Before the Flood, Dylan tears into the shitkickin' bluesrocker "New Pony." Using a heavily (like 35 times) repetitive chorus of "How Much Longer?", he screams about the merciless end of a love by substituting a pony named Lucifer for his distant lover. Sandwiched around a throaty and bluesy sax break by Steve Douglas, Dylan wonders if the only release is in leaving this earthly realm.

Aided by Alpha Banders Steven Soles and David Mansfield, drummer Ian Wallace and lead guitarist Billy Cross, Dylan has left the mellow country behind him for the streets of Malibu and Los Angeles. "No Time to Think" makes Springsteen's "Blinded by the Light" (which ain't no lightweight) sound like a child's poem. Dylan spews forth a saga of a lonely and withdrawn (Dylan) character who has taken an epic journey which coincidentally parallels Bob's career.

"Judges will haunt you/ The country priestess will want you/ Her worst is better than that/ I've seen all these decoys/ Through a set of deep turquoise/ Eyes and I feel so depressed."

Side one closes with another rocker "Baby Stop Crying." It starts with a slight echo of hope on Bob's voice after his lady has "been down to the bottom with a badman." He consoles her with "You and I know that sun will always shine." It is an outlaw blues from the "Knockin' on Heaven's Door" days with a cold-blooded Peckinpah "go get me my pistols babe, I can't tell right from wrong." What starts as a softly intoned plea "Stop crying," becomes an infuriated snarl as the man reaches his breaking point. Accented by the urgent gospel sounds of back up singers he orders:

"Go down to the river babe,/ I will meet you there/ Crawl down to the river/ Honey, I will pay your fare."

But finally the hardness mellows and he offers: "If you need a friend, come see about me," only as a second thought after the humiliation and anger have passed.

Side two opens with a Dylan that wants no part of the guilt. "Is Your Love in Vain?" is a simple it's-time-I-gotta-hit-the-road song. Don Williams, a soon to be popular country singer is among those who are privileged enough to be thanked on this album's credits. He is an extremely tender songwriter and a little of his influence could have mellowed this song. But Bob prefers to strike back after

(Continued on page 16)

R.W. Hunt's Presents

TOM RUSH

with his band

Also Philo Recording Artist

Martin Grosswendt

July 24, 25, 26 at 8 & 11

Tickets $5 on Sale Now

Quality entertainment in a comfortable club atmosphere.
Luncheon - Monday thru Friday
Dinner - Tuesday thru Sunday

101 Main 863-9850

HUNT'S

★ Prompt Delivery ★ 50c Pitchers

★ Whole Wheat Pizza ★ Thick or Thin Crust

PI EXPRESS

Winooski 655-3005, 655-0977
Essex Jct. 879-6333

Give someone a sundae to remember.

Monday through Sunday, a McDonald's® Sundae makes any day a fun day! Delicious vanilla swirls covered with your favorite topping! Strawberry! Hot Caramel!

And everybody's favorite, Hot Fudge!

So, come on in and treat yourself, and a friend, to a real sundae special. It's the perfect way to top off anything.

We do it all for you.

McDonald's

Pearl St. Essex Jct.
Williston Rd. So. Burlington

© McDonald's System, Inc. 1977

Recent Cuts

A Fine Debut Album by TRB

Power in the Darkness
Tom Robinson Band
Harvest STB-11778

1978 has been an extraordinary year for excellent releases from old favorites like the Stones, Dylan, Springsteen, etc. But no new talent has been arriving except the Tom Robinson Band. Power in the Darkness is the debut album of 1978 so far.

From the current British political turmoil of last year the TRB was formed. Within the street fightin' realm of rock and political consciousness that hung in the air in the U.S. in 1969 comes a commitment that in 1978 may seem a little distant and archaic to those who think Andy Gibb is a first-rate rocker, but in reality can give this country the real perspective it needs.

From the band's clenched fist logo comes Rock Against Rascism, "a campaign supported by rock fans and musicians alike, including TRB: 'We want rebel music, street music. Music that breaks down people's fear of one another. Crisis music. Now music. Music that knows who the real enemy is.'"

The PR man's dream is Tom Robinson's espousal of his own homosexuality and his catchy anthem "Glad to be Gay," which on this album is live and dedicated to the World Health Organiz. on, which still regards gayness as a disease. In spite of the hooks and sheer power of the song's chorus, it describes with a great deal of bitterness the lot of British homosexuals, who have to endure a nasty bit of physical abuse from "queer bashers" who feel that beating up a gay is a potent way to prove their own sexuality.

Robinson's politics hardly stop there. With explicit candor he attacks anything that reeks of fascism, which according to the British music we hear here, is running rampant. With the advent of Britain's National Front, TRB's music brings an important medium for raising American consciousness to this abomination and hence, the clenched fist logo.

At times Robinson's excess is his zeal and one-sided dichotomy. One listen to "Better Decide Which Side You're On" will clarify which side Robinson is on. The only problem is that we're all liberals (for whatever that's worth) and we know which side we're on. Without the strong fascist affiliation in this country some of TRB's songs have to be taken for just that, songs, not definitive political statements (which they're really not). For definitive and personal political he's been hurt; remember "Don't Think Twice It's Alright."

Dylan

"Senor (Tales of Yankee Power)" shows Mr Dylan has read his Castaneda. "Will there be any comfort there, Senor?" he asks his mentor. But this is not a tribute to cosmic Yanqui missionaries, but another angry voice of a lonely man who is looking for a way to find her again. With the Tex-Mex influence of the Alpha Band, this song is the closest thing we have today to "Love Potion No. 9." And like the appropriately titled Searchers, who did LP No. 9, Dylan is willing to blindly accept whatever the gypsy offers. Out of desperation he queries the seer, "Which way are we heading, This don't make sense to me no more." At least he tried.

Starting with "True Love Tends to Forget," through to the end of the album, Dylan paints a picture of love as the blackest highway that never quite seems to end. By calling his love a stone an unfeeling "monument drifting to infinity and back again" he may have finally hit on it. Dylan, always a possessive man, cries, "You belong to me, Don't forsake me baby, Don't sell me out, Don't keep me knockin' about." He ends the song by chanting the futility that is implied in the title of the song.

TRB

statements on all the bad craziness that is going down in England, I recommend The Clash and their album Garageland, which should be out by next week.

Tom Robinson's music provides the strength to his lyrical attacks. It is possible that in this golden age of mindless disco, this album plus the seven-song bonus EP, full of political songs, would be about as exciting as a Country Joe and Fish reunion. But this album to me is like a magnet. Visionary shouting, as seen in 1969, makes a group feel united but cannot bring the masses to see the revolutionary goals. But this is 1979 and Seabrook has been stopped and in Williston Pyramid may be mauled. To Tom Robinson automated radio may be nothing more than anaesthesia, but TRB has a real tradition of rude irreverence of British working class ways. And that means anger, like "Don't Take No for an Answer."

Then it is no surprise in apolitical America where even the President agonizes over what side he is on, that the hit from this album will be the only nonpolitical song on the album, "2-4-6-8 Motorway," an English Springsteen ditty about the mindlessness of truckin' down the road.

Using Simon and Garfunkel's news broadcast within a song format ("7 o'clock News/Silent Night"), the title cut is not just a paean to the freedom to decide with whom and what you do under the covers but a stirring call to the revolutionary vanguard to bring things to the proper light. According to TRB it is "the time to fight for your rights." TRB utilize record cover notes to justify their songs. For "Power in the Darkness," Tom Robinson quotes Eric Idle of Monty Python and Ruttles fame "The tories believe that the basic freedoms are being eroded: Freedom to avoid paying; freedom to hang people; freedom to censor books, plays and television."

TRB is not rockers in tax exile like many other Britains. To insure we understand this, all the songs are sung in a brutal but clear English *un*proper accent.

The frankness of message and delivery help to make this a super rock album. Ten years ago it would have made TRB bigger than Peter Frampton is today. For now they will have to suffice being a throwback to the days when rock was an offshoot of anger, an emotional release translated into an esthetic response. Remember Eddie Cochran's "Summertime Blues?"

Inspite of the fact that some critics are very close to calling TRB the next big thing, (it's really not), it is a great album for listening to. And that is the bottom line. It is a great boogie album and anyone who mentions that they drive a grey Cortina and listen to "Brucey Springsteen on the radio" gets a gold star.

—Larry Seiden

"We Better Talk This Over" is a barroom song that a literate Waylon could have written. The drunkin' shouting and pouting is over. Reconciliation with one who is "two-faced and a double dealer" will not come about. The breakup with his wife may have left Dylan with a toll even he can't pay. As the album ends we are really not sure if the champ, who has been down for the count, will ever get up to write another "It Ain't Me Babe."

The concluding song, "Where Are You Tonight? (Journey Through Dark Heat)" has left these onetime inseparable lovers as two distant individuals. The bitterness of leaving ("I couldn't tell her what my private thoughts were") has left Mr. Dylan "biting into the root of forbidden fruit and the juice running down (his) face."

As if to question the values that brought them together and finally have left them drifting apart, the remorseful singer can only wallow in fantasy, wondering where his ex is tonight.

For the rest of us, we can only be amazed at the clarity this sad singer and songwriter can bring to the metamorphic human condition. Although this album will surely be a classic, I prefer the fleet images of Blood on the Tracks to the drowning tears of Street-Legal.

—Larry Seiden

THE VANTAGE PRESS
AND
INSTA-PRINT

COMPLETE
OFFSET PRINTING

BOOKLETS A SPECIALITY

115 North St.
Burlington
863-4998 or 862-2125

"On Top Of Church Street"
Hawks Point
Never A Cover Charge
68 Church St.
"Just Jazz" Quintet
Featuring songs by Sam Armstrong
Major sporting events
on our 8-foot TV screen
Fri. and Sat. night

CHARLY B. GOOD soups — salads — sandwiches —
B. BAD LOUNGE
Billiard Table
Backgammon for fun
15 CENTER STREET; BURLINGTON, VT

finbars

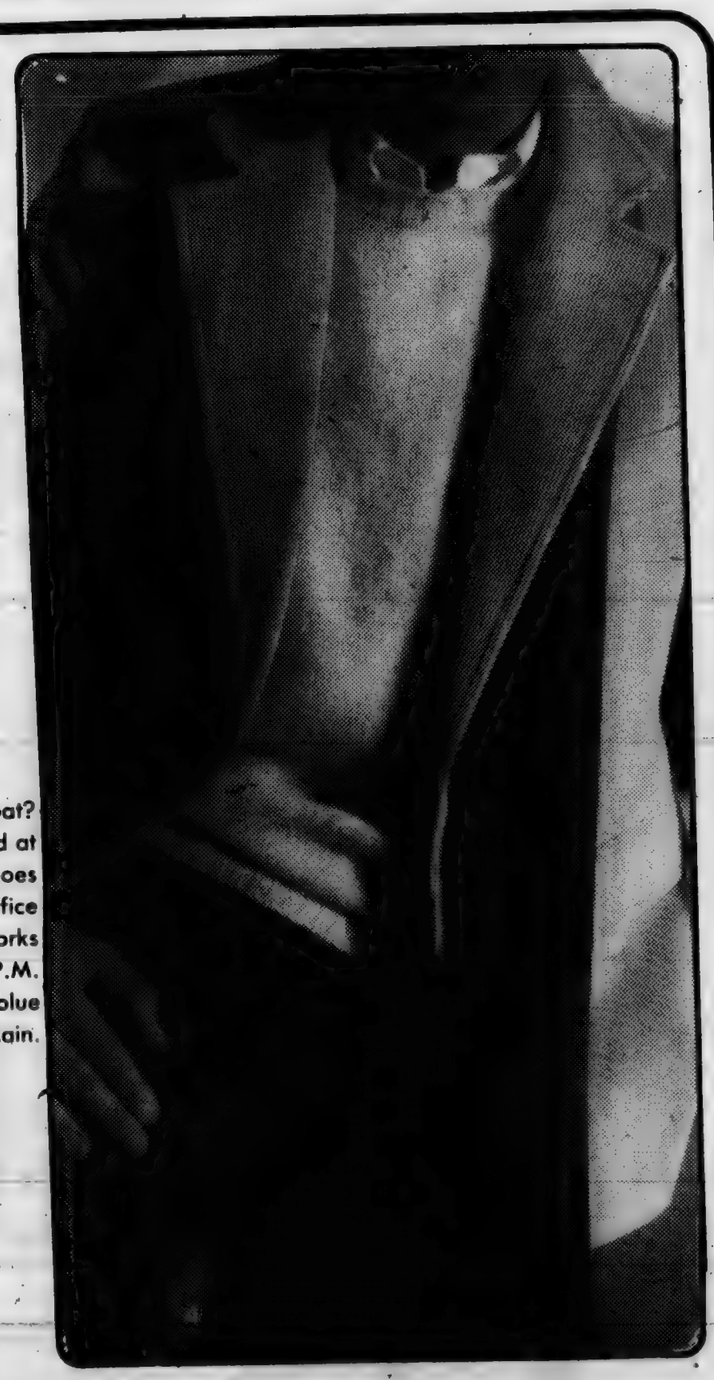
onion soup, salads, sandwiches, homemade desserts, daily specials

serving from 12 – 9

167 main st., burlington

Certified Instruction

Repairs, Rentals, Underwater Gear



NAUI SAFETY THROUGH EDUCATION

northern divers inc.

"Vermont's Most Complete Dive Shop"

Open 10–6
Seven days
a week
100 Main St.
862–3881

THE CORDUROY SPORTCOAT

$49.90

reg. $65.00

You're looking for a new sportcoat? Then go corduroy. You'll be amazed at the versatility of this jacket. It goes casual or dressy. Great for the office and dinner afterward. This jacket works from 8:00 A.M. until 11:00 P.M. Comes in tones of camel, brown, blue and teal. Men's Shop on Main.

It's an experience

MAGRAMS

DOWNTOWN BURLINGTON

Cyn Flicks

Can You Change

Remember the nauseating radio monologue-disguised-as-song called Convoy. Yup, the one that seemed a waste of vinyl. Well now they made it into a movie and what a waste of celluloid it turned out to be.

The worst part of it is to make this grade Z farce, the inscrutable talents of my favorite director, Sam (All Man) Peckinpah were utilized. Well, maybe utilized is the wrong word. For all I know Sam ingested too many worms from the bottom of tequila bottles and his bones lie in the basement of a Tijuana brothel. Probably this film is the first assignment in a UCLA freshman filmmaking class. (Professor: For your first assignment I would like you to make a remake of the amazingly successful Smokey and the Bandit, and do it without any professionalism in acting or dialogue. In other words, the more cliches you can get into 105 minutes the better.)

In his day, Peckinpah made movies about real men, individuals lost in a changing time (Wild Bunch, The Ballad of Cable Hogue), about men who knew the meaning of freedom (The Getaway) men who were heroes (Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid). He made movies with excessive violence and lusty, sweaty sex (Killer Elite, Straw Dogs, Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia).

But he never made a movie as dumb as Convoy.

In this cinematic flat tire he uses some of the actors who have previously shone under his direction. Kris Kristofferson, who played Billy the Kid, looks good as the leader of a renegade, but aimless convoy of truckers. But of all the dumb handles to lay on the man as Rubber Duck. I mean Kris has good bod, a nice tan, his blue eyes sparkle against the salt and pepper beard, so why not Outlaw or Riff or Dusty, even Burt Reynolds had the good sense to use Bandit as his handle.

Ali McGraw, the beautiful co-star of The Getaway, is cast as a spaced out, bitchy photojournalist whose acting in this schlock makes me think she'd probably forget to take the lens cap off. Actually with her short hairdo she looks like the toughest of the whole bunch of pansies in this film. If she could wrap one more tooth necklace around her neck I'd be more apt to believe she was a witchdoctor or snakecharmer rather than a photographer.

And Ernest Borgnine. If you saw Smokey, then you know that Jackie Gleason as Sheriff Rufus T. Justice was a perfect caricature of a southern redneck lawman. Ernest Borgnine, Capt. McHale, isn't really worth his chaw as the Bear. For a good Borgnine flick, see him do battle with railroad hobos in Emperor of the North.

And the movie. Well there is more action in a Wide World of Sports demolition derby. Since there is no plot except that a convoy of truckers steamroll down the southwestern highways smashing roadblocks and duke it out with dimwitted Bears. The visuals here are possibly the best part of the movie. My recommendation is bring a cassette player, some headphones and a few Delbert McClinton tapes and with a sixpack and a few doobies, that is a perfect way to spend a summer's night.

The basic trouble with the flick is its pretense at being heavy. Kristofferson is too laid back to be a national folk hero like Reynold's Bandit. With no energy and spirit in the screenplay, the epic purpose of the convoy looks flat. In a completely off the wall sequence, the New Mexico's governor's assistant asks the truckers what their mission is. They give him the most irrelevant and incoherent responses forcing you to ask yourself, "What is this, a

Laughing at the Grim Reaper

Heaven Can Wait is a cute, lively movie which gives 90 minutes of light and likable entertainment. This film succeeds because it makes no claim to be realistic: from the billowy mists of near-Heaven, to the gross opulence of the Farnsworth mansion, to a marvelously screwy boardroom meeting, to the heady excitement of the Super Bowl. But most refreshing is the good comic structure of Heaven Can Wait: tragedy is averted at the last minute and the hero and heroine walk off for a life of togetherness.

As a friend once said about smoking pot, "It takes imagination." Just so, it takes imagination to be reborn into another body, pull off feats of bravado and love, and live happily ever after. Isn't this what movies were originally intended for? Heaven Can Wait is essentially a remake of the 1941 classic comedy Here Comes Mr. Jordan. The modern version includes some excellent satire on the greed of corporate capitalism, the hollowness of love based on money and the insanity of that great American sport – football.

Warren Beatty, who recently graced the cover of Time as "Mr. Hollywood," makes a smooth transition from superstar to superman, superjock Joe Pendleton, aspiring quarterback for the L.A. Rams. Pendleton is "killed" in a car crash and is sent complete with shining cornet instead of harp to a cloudy white way station leading to heaven. End of story? Not quite. Joe gets a second chance when it turns out that the angel in the blue suit (Buck Henry) took him before his time was up! But Joe must return to earth in another body, and Mr. Jordan (James Mason), God's corporate exec, puts Joe in the frame of eccentric millionaire Lee

18 Flat Tires?

Fireside Theatre rap?"

So Rubber Duck, the last American hero, represents all us little people. His machismo (a Peckinpah trademark) looks as real as Paul Lynde's. As studly as he may be, compared to the truckers who frequent the movie's truck stops, he looks like he might have trouble trying to get the emergency brake pulled.

But before you write this flick off, it is worth noting that nobody puts action into a movie (even a bad movie) like Peckinpah. Remember Dustin Hoffman attaching the bear trap around the dude's head in Straw Dogs. That was action. In Convoy the action is highspeed chases, trucks ramming roadblocks, trucks running police cars over the embankment. All sorts of excitement that you've only seen in every truckin' movie since the Keystone Kops but done with a Peckinpah flair that is redeeming only for its visual slowmotion ballet of death.

Like Rubber Duck, Peckinpah assumes a stance of a loner who will never sell out. Unfortunately, while Kristofferson doesn't take the tit job that the Governor of New Mexico offers him, Peckinpah bites the commercial apple and finds a worm.

- Otis Norton

". . . Heaven Can Wait is a fun movie and a Warren Beatty ego trip."

Farnsworth. Farnsworth's hysterical wife (Dyan Cannon) and deadpan secretary (Charles Grodin) are desperately trying to kill him. Amid the wachiness of mansion life, Joe as Farnsworth is the goof-ball, jock, industrialist with a conscience. Joe falls for environmentalist–school marm Julie Christie and plans to marry her. Meanwhile, the Rams are charging into the Super Bowl. Farnsworth buys the team, installs himself as QB, and then is bumped off by wife and secretary just before the Big Game. But in the finest Hollywood tradition, all is not lost. Joe is once again and this time permanently reincarnated as Ram QB Tom Jarrett and with a cheering crowd in the Colosseum, you can guess the rest.

Though not as poignant as Shampoo or as fast paced as Bonnie and Clyde, Heaven Can Wait is a fun movie and a Warren Beatty ego trip. Beatty co-authored the script, co-directed and produced this flick which Time predicted will be number one at the box office this summer.

If Heaven Can Wait has faults, they are brought out because the movie is too short. Julie Christie and Beatty are nothing short of charming to watch; and more dialogue and a few more scenes would have been welcome. The movie avoids sex and could be rated G; but sexual nuances abound whenever Beatty's and Christie's eyes meet (they're old lovers from way back).

The audience seemed to like the show; laughs were common, and they applauded at the end. They probably also wished they could put off their mortality as well: what fools these mortals be!

–Curtis Haynes

Bag it.

Go ahead. Escape from the nine-to-five routine.

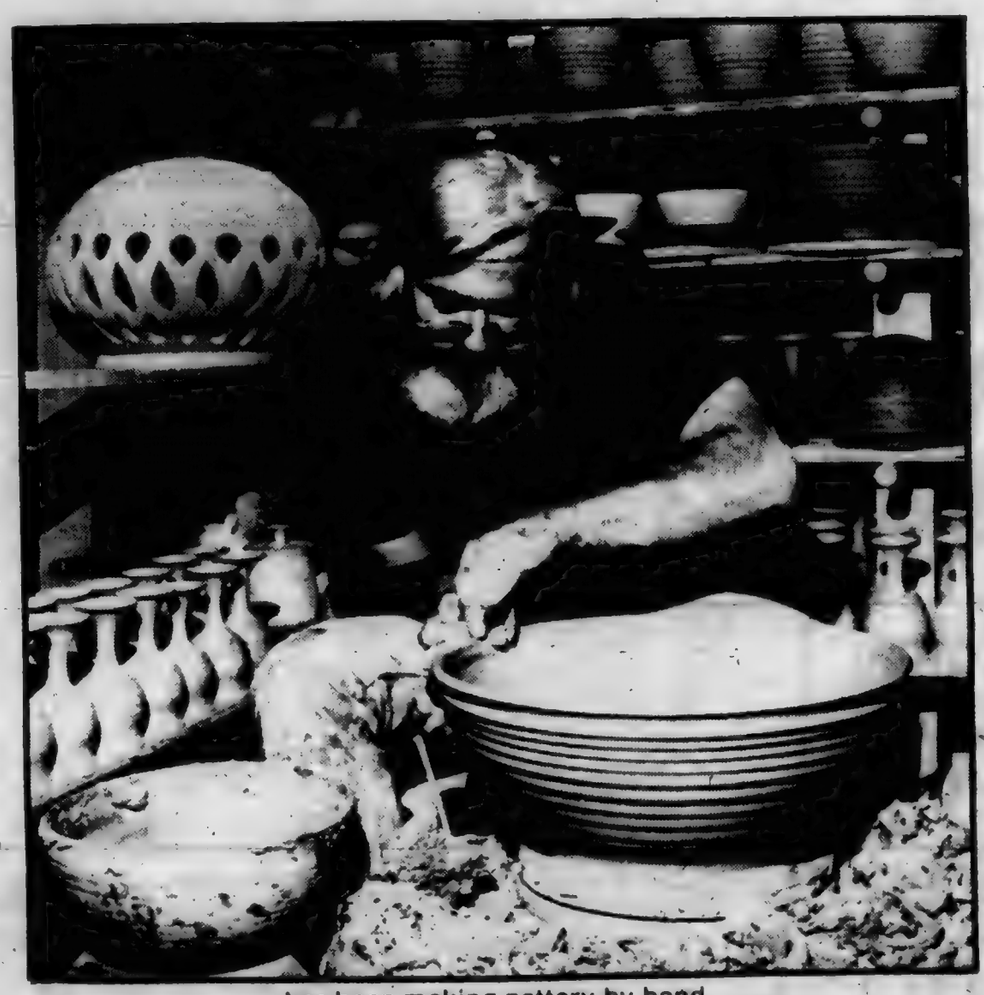
There's no better way to get away from it all than by getting into the country. And when you're ready, so is EMS.

We're specialists in lightweight camping and hiking equipment. You'll find everything you need to make your escape a great one: canoes, tents, packs, sleeping bags, clothing, food, books, maps and much more.

We rent camping equipment, too . . . and all our rental gear is of the same high quality you'll find on our retail shelves. And, in some cases, the rental fee can be applied to the purchase of new equipment.

So, go ahead. Pack it in.

We're ready.



EASTERN MOUNTAIN SPORTS

100 Dorset Street
South Burlington, Vermont
802-864-0473

GeorgeScatchard

has been making pottery by hand for over twenty-five years.

Workshop-Studio
located midway between Underhill and Cambridge on Route 15.
Open 9-5 Mon.-Sat. 899-2181

Showroom
in Burlington, just off College St. at the end of Mechanic's Lane.
Open 10-5 Mon.-Sat. 658-6555

GEORGE SCATCHARD, LTD.

SUMMER CRUISE SERIES II

Fri. July 14
Frank Wakefield

Fri. July 21 Zzebra

Check Listings for Future Friday Concerts

Ferry Champlain leaves King St. dock at 8

Tickets available at
Emerald City of Oz 71 St. Paul St
Bailey's Music 88 Church Street
$6.00 advance $6.50 at the dock

Refreshments Available
Information and Reservations 862-4298
Wizard Productions

Bygone Books

Old Books
Bought & Sold

91 College St.
(Between Pine & Champlain)
Burlington, Vermont 05401
Tel. 802 862-4397

mon ~ sat.
9:30 am ~ 5:30 pm

On Stage

Twelfth Night: Doing Shakespeare Proud

Julia A. Brothers and Robert B. Putnam frolic in Twelfth Night.

The 20th Anniversary Champlain Shakespeare Festival raised its curtains July 6 with a fun-filled, energetic rendition of Twelfth Night. Director Edward Feidner, set designer Robert Little, and costume designer Muriel Stockdale produced a remarkably picturesque opening scene with all the players frozen in place as in a Gothic tapestry. The audience was immediately drawn into the romantic world of Illyria and the actors came to life to create one enjoyable episode after another.

The identical twins Sebastian and his sister Viola are separated by a shipwreck and thus begins a train of mistaken identities and wacky romances. Time Winters is properly royal as the love-sick Duke Orsino who bids Viola (disguised as a man) to woo the fair Olivia. In an hilarious perversion of the Miles Standish-John Alden-Priscilla Mullins story, Olivia then falls for Viola, while Viola is secretly in love with Orsino. Julia Brothers gives a strong, brassy performance as Viola and Nancy Siddons-Daniels is a coy, headstrong Olivia with a fine voice.

The subplot of life at Olivia's court produces the play's best comedy. Robert Putnam comes within an ace of stealing the show as the witty, saucy, irrepressible Fool, Feste. Putnam struts, sings, tumbles, and puts down any adversary in this lively role — perhaps the most appealing Fool in all Shakespeare. Adding to the light-heartedness are Olivia's Uncle Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew, Fabian and Maria. Leon Martell as Sir Toby is a drunken ribald rascal, always entertaining in the Falstaff tradition. Duncan Stevens turns in some hysterical slapstick as Sir Andrew, the parody of a courtier. Fabian (Josh Conescu) is a comic catalyst; and Stacey Gladstone's Maria is warmly amusing.

Every play must have its bad guy and Vince Rossano is sterling as the proud puritanical Malvolio, Olivia's steward. In one of the funniest scenes, Malvolio is tricked into believing that Olivia loves him and appears cross-gartered in yellow stockings. Rossano parades across the stage with haughty buffoonery and speaks with wonderfully precise enunciation.

Director Feidner insists that his players possess a thorough command of the text and an understanding of the Elizabethan world. This sensitivity allows for a great versatility in the roles which the audience found constantly engaging. Feidner presents Twelfth Night with an interesting repertoire of music — songs, mandolins, harpsicords — which enhance the play's opening line, "If music be the food of love, then play on." From the English Country dances before the show to this well-done joyous comedy, the company treated an appreciative crowd to an all-out first rate entertainment.

—Tom Daniels

Classical Music

Mozart Festival Premiers July 16

Shelburne Farms: A magnificent setting for Mozart.

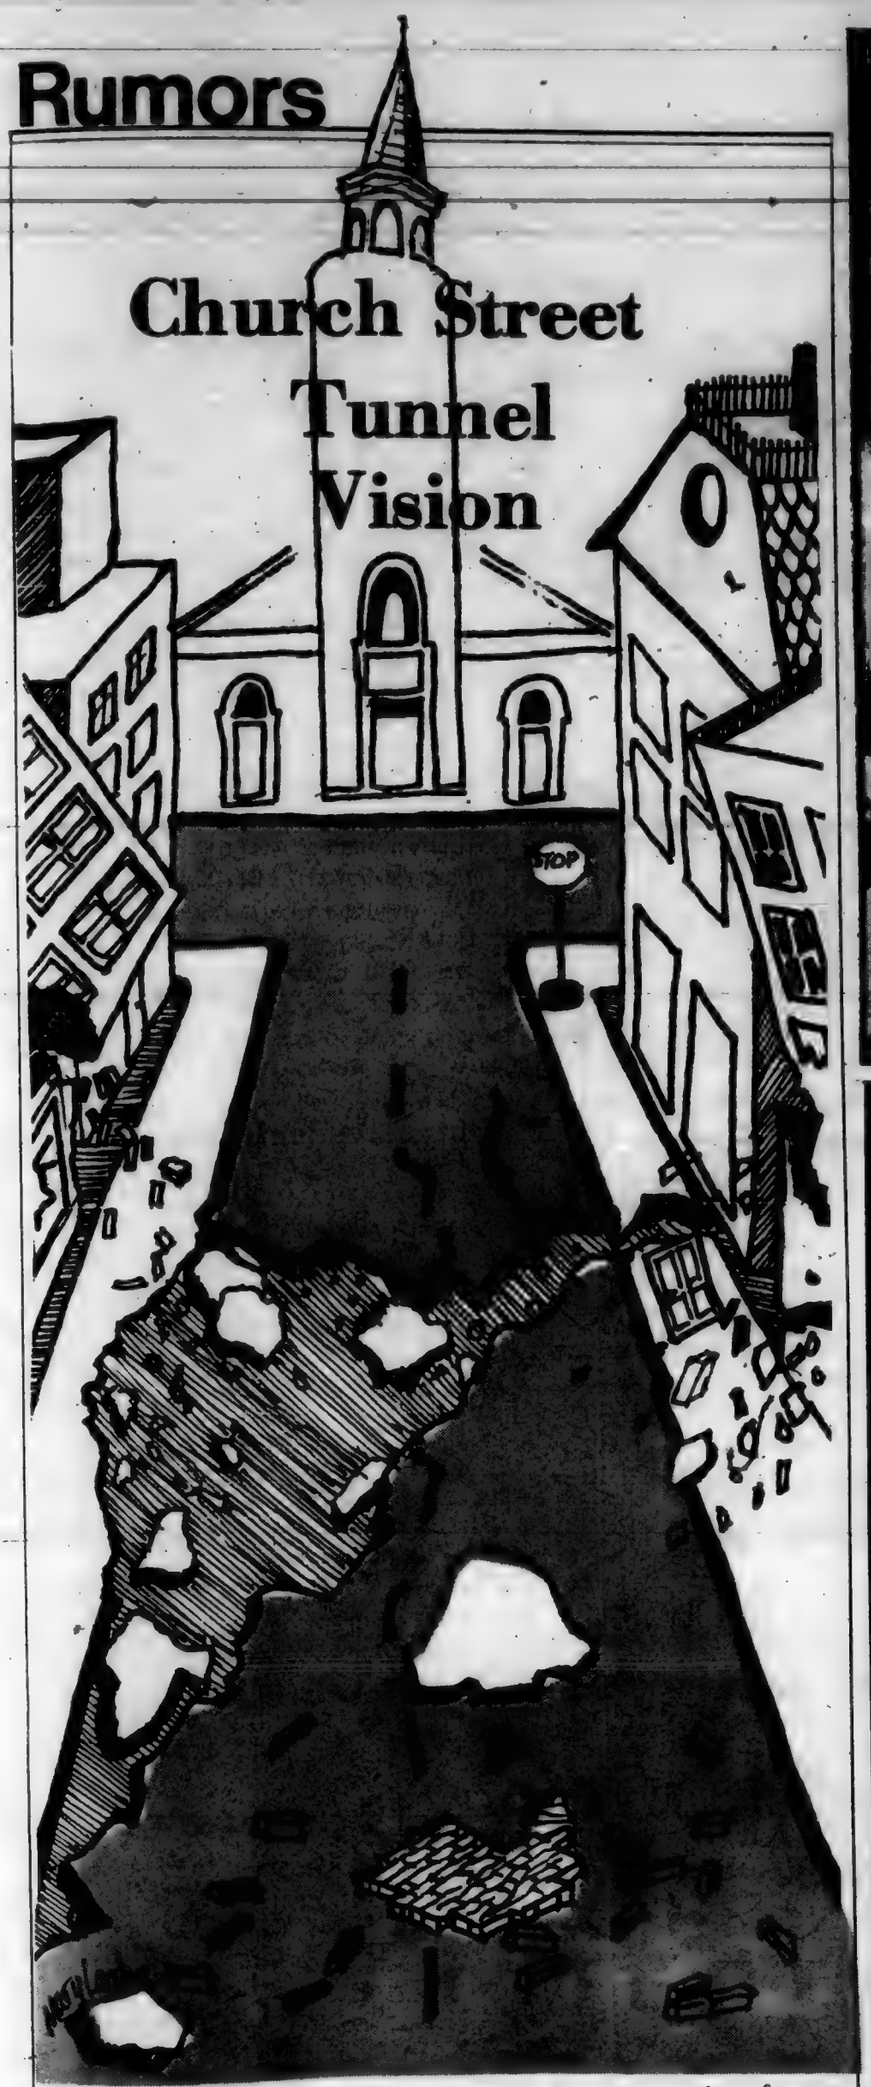
The 5th Annual Vermont Mozart Festival commences July 16 at 6:30 with an equestrian display on the athletic field beside UVM's Gutterson Field House. Eight Morgan horses will parade to Mozart's "Music for a Cavalry Display," and spectators are encouraged to bring a picnic. At 8 p.m., the Grand Opening Concert will be presented at the UVM Show Barn with Menahem Pressler, pianist; the Emerson String Quartet; the New York Chamber Soloists; and the UVM Choral Union with James Chapman conducting.

Over the three week season, the Festival will combine a diversity of fine settings with distinguished artists and ensembles performing the major works of the world's great composers. 15 concerts will be performed in the Burlington-Shelburne area, as well as special concerts in Barre, Middlebury, and Stratton, and workshops with soloists at Shelburne Farms.

This year the Festival will again include a series of six informal lecture-demonstrations designed to introduce the visiting artists to the Festival audience. The lecture-demonstrations are free and open to the public, and will be held at 4 p.m. at the Ira Allen Chapel on the following dates: July 18, Menahem Pressler, pianist; July 20, James Chapman, organist and conductor; July 25, Emerson String Quartet; July 27, John Solum, flutist.



In the first years of the Festival, Mozart was played exclusively. Although Mozart is still the featured composer, the Festival will be offering a fine variety of All-Handel, All-Haydn, and All-Bach performances and the music of Beethoven, Vivaldi, and Brahms, among others.

Concert locations include UVM's acoustically superb Recital Hall, the beautiful St. Joseph's Church, Burlington Square Mall (no shops will be open), and the Royall Tyler Theatre. But perhaps the most scenic concerts will be held amid the elegance of Shelburne Farms. Three performances will take place outdoors on the South Porch of the Main House. Overlooking the formal gardens, the lake, and the distant Adirondacks, the massive 70-room Tudor mansion creates a regal European setting well-suited to classical music. In case of rain, performances will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel.

For information and tickets write: Vermont Mozart Festival, Box 512, Bu[illegible]ton; or call 862-7352. Other ticket locations are: the Royall Tyler Theatre, Orr's Card Shop, Kado Gifts, Bailey's, Decorative Things, and the Design Shop.

—Tom Daniels

Rumors

Last week, Mayor Urban DeQuay was at it again. Impatient to turn his town into a fine example of modern sterility, DeQuay gave orders to burrow a long tunnel under the main shopping street. DeQuay had a vision of subterranean stores which could keep on selling even during a nuclear attack. Peddlers, of course, would be banned from the underground mall, and the Pyramid Co. could eat its heart out: all of the town's problems would be solved at once!

"If only Mayor DeQuay had had a crystal ball!" future residents would lament. It seems that despite the Mayor's good intention, he overlooked two important factors: soil and greed. The soil beneath Church Street was a sandy loam which was not ideal for the support of heavy buildings; and greed knows no limits to growth. Needless to say, sand and greed do not mix.

No sooner was the Badgerville Underground Mall (BUM) constructed, than the subterranean store owners began looking for ways to increase profits. One such proprietor, a vacuum cleaner dealer named Marginal Airor, had once been a miner in West Virginia. With new-found Yankee ingenuity, Airor hatched a plot to secretly burrow into the vaults of every store on Church Street and create a new version of Cash Flow. For three years, Airor dug from May to October until at last he had connected 57 cash boxes to a giant vacuum cleaner in his back office.

Unfortunately, when Airor finally flicked the switch, the vacuum pulled in not only money, but bricks, boards, and businesses! The sandy foundations of Church Street could not take the strain of so many tunnels and with a rumble not heard since King Kong met Godzilla, Church Street's fine array of buildings crashed down into the Badgerville Underground Mall. (No more Airor.) In one big suction, the town's commercial center was devastated!

The citizens of Badgerville were horror-struck: visions of Ghost Towns danced in their heads! There was only one solution — beg the mercy of those Egyptian tomb builders!

Within two months of the disastrous cave-in, Church Street was once again alive and well. The Pharoah Pyramid Co. had gladly erected a new 82-store mall: "The Urban DeQuay Memorial Mall — without whose tunnel vision this long-delayed project would not have been possible."

Coke
Trade-mark ®
adds life to... everything nice

Enjoy
Coca-Cola
Trade-mark ®

"Coca-Cola" and "Coke" are registered trade-marks which identify the same product of The Coca-Cola Company.

NIKE®

Running Shoes

NIKE WAFFLE—TRAINER

These shoes feature ultra-light nylon uppers with a jogger sole; padded collar and tongue.

Ideal for the serious, time-shaving runner.

Mens and womens sizes available.

Many other styles of NIKE shoes available.

Bass Shoe Factory Outlet

1305 Williston Road South Burlington, VT

Open Daily 9-9 Sundays 12-5

Classifieds

HOME WANTED

Free (to a stable home) Husky/shepard pup. Beautiful, friendly, happy female. She needs a good home. 5 months old, all shots to date. Call days 656-2060, nights 862-1277. Ask for Robyn.

MUSIC

Folk guitar lessons. Patient teacher, 10 years teaching experience, all ages and levels. Also mandolin, harmonica, tin whistle, theory and notation. Call Bob Shaw 862-0543.

Saxophone, clarinet, recorder. Private instruction in your home or common place. 434-3957.

APARTMENTS

Summer sublet August — 5 bedroom household needs 1 person for month of August (female). Lakeview house on North Ave. 1 block, from beach, swimming pool at house. $100. Call Pam, 863-5020.

John & Eve are looking for a 2 bedroom apartment starting Sept. 1. Please call 863-4865.

Female roommate wanted. Modern condominium, convenient location. Washer, dryer, dishwasher, etc. Mostly furnished. $100/month + utilities. Call Debbie 862-7784 after 5 or 658-6400 8—4:30.

½ house in quiet residential neighborhood, bike ride to school. Own room, furnished, 2 porches, off street parking 100.00 month includes heat. Call evenings.

862-7351. Keep trying!

APT. WANTED- 2 bedroom apartment wanted, need not be furnished, but must have appliances. Starting August 1st. Call evenings 862-3401.

Summer Cynic Classified Ads are FREE. Why not use them? $$$$$$$$$$

Single bedroom apt. wanted by responsible quiet student. Excellent references. Starting now or end of August. Up to $150. Preferably private apt. but will take a room. Very cheerful. Contact Alan Marshall, 656-4412

MISCELLANEOUS

For sale — 2 bureaus, 1 with mirror, portable typewriter, ironing board, full-length mirror, set of end tables and coffee table, wine rack. 864-9069.

1976 Fiat 131, 30,000 miles, great shape. 1 owner. Call Sure Pete 864-4294.

For sale — 1973 Honda 350 four 8,500 miles, excellent condition. Call Great Bill 864-4294.

Don't want pyramid mall? Then support citizens for responsible growth's fund-raising campaign. Buy a T- shirt with a "pyramids are foreign to Vermont" logo printed below a typical rural Vermont scene. Green on yellow shirts are 100% cotton; sizes S, M, L, XL. $4.00 each. Call 862-2841 to place order.

For sale — flight jacket official U.S. Air Force: genuine leather. Excellent condition sz to fit 42-46. Asking $70 or best offer. Call 863-2634. Ask for Bob.

I publish a crafts newsletter for people who want to buy crafts or for craft people who want to know dates and who to write to for information. 4 times year $2.00 subscription. Write Richard T. Kemp, 131 Sunset Drive, Burlington.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

The Vermont Children's Magazine needs volunteers to join its all-volunteer staff. Although the magazine is entirely written and produced by children, the non-profit organization needs help ranging from promotion, to finance, to work with children (supervising, editing and lay-out), to school planning, to printing and production advice, to silkscreening, and on and on. All skills and interests are valuable to this important organization, and all adults inclined are encouraged to call the following numbers for more info: Robert at 658-6655 or Ed at 425-2569.

When you work up an appetite . . . Come to Finast!

Finast has all your favorite snacks ready . . . we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruits
- Your favorite cold beverages

and just about everything you can think of!

Visit

Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

Finast SUPERMARKETS

825 WILLISTON ST. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

The Green

1791-1978

Billings Center
University of Vermont
June 2-July 31

Almys GRAND OPENING

ALL THIS WEEK

Serving generations of customers—since 1868, in fact—Almys has established a solid reputation. It's known far and wide for its values, for the quality and selection of its famous name merchandise, for its services. Its popularity and success are reflected in its growth to 14 big stores. The newest, and fifteenth, which opens in Burlington soon, covers over 65,000 square feet and includes over 75 departments. Designed by a foremost architect, it was built with your interests, your needs, your convenience and your well-being very much in mind.

Almys invites your approval on Thursday of its sparkling, modern look that extends from the outside to the inside, throughout the store, in every department. Almys wants you to see how it is arranged, how it is decorated and to discover all the wonderful services it has for you. Most of all, it wants to show you its tremendous assortment of fine merchandise—because for over 120 years, Almys has been a center for the latest ready-to-wear fashions for men, women and children—as well as for home furnishings, rugs and housewares. In addition, Almys has many other departments and services—including jewelry, shoes, cosmetics, notions, beauty salon and snack bar to mention a few. Don't miss Almys preview showing starting Thursday.

VALUABLE COUPON

ALMYS, UNIVERSITY MALL, SO. BURLINGTON VT., 05401

Please register my name for an opportunity to win one of the TEN $100 SHOPPING SPREES being offered in connection with Almys GRAND OPENING in University Mall, Burlington, Vt. No purchase necessary.

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____

TEL. NO._____

Deposit at Almys when store opens.

free! $1000 in shopping sprees

FILL OUT COUPON AT LEFT•DEPOSIT AT ALMYS WHEN STORE OPENS.

Ten $100 shopping sprees will be given FREE in connection with Almys Grand Opening Sale in Burlington. The coupon at left represents an opportunity to win one of them. No obligation to buy or purchase is necessary. Employees and their families not eligible. One shopping spree to a family.

Almys is your kind of store

ALMYS • UNIVERSITY MALL - DORSET ST., SO. BURLINGTON • OPEN DAILY 9:30AM TO 9:30 PM

INSIDE: Off-Key Notes from Warren; Hom Doggin'

Summer Cynic

VOLUME IV NUMBER 4 "'Tis a privilege to work for the Summer Cynic." JULY 27, 1978

Do Taxes Have You Over A Barrel?

Maybe Proposition 13 Isn't The Answer

EASTERN MOUNTAIN SPORTS

Summer Clearance Sale

| QTY | ALPINE PRODUCTS | EMS Sugg. Price | SALE PRICE |
|---|---|---|---|
| | SLEEPING BAGS | | |
| 20 | Alpine Prod No. 2 regular | 82.00 | 72.00 |
| 15 | Alpine Prod No. 2 large | 85.00 | 75.00 |
| 7 | C7 High Country small | 114.00 | 84.50 |
| 10 | Camp 7 High Country Med. | 134.00 | 89.50 |
| 9 | Camp 7 High Country large | 145.00 | 94.50 |
| 2 | Camp 7 Hut Sleeper regular | 134.00 | 89.50 |
| 4 | Camp 7 Hut Sleeper large | 145.00 | 94.50 |
| 12 | Sandpiper | 99.50 | 69.50 |
| 10 | Este's | 125.00 | 87.50 |
| 15 | Sebago regular | 145.00 | 110.00 |
| 20 | Sebago large | 155.00 | 120.00 |
| 15 | Blueridge | 59.50 | 47.50 |
| 20 | Franconia regular | 79.50 | 67.50 |
| 15 | Franconia large | 82.50 | 70.00 |
| 10 | Berkshire small | 61.00 | 51.50 |
| 20 | Berkshire regular | 64.60 | 54.50 |
| 10 | Berkshire large | 68.00 | 57.50 |
| 10 | Pocono Jr. | 32.50 | 26.50 |
| 10 | Trailwise Manatee | 72.00 | 49.50 |
| 10 | Greylock Glacier | 28.30 | 22.50 |
| 2 | Sierra Designs Double Mummy | 355.00 | 213.00 |
| 10 | Snowlion Snowfox large | 77.00 | 57.50 |
| | TENTS | | |
| 20 | EMS Kaskawalsh | 125.00 | 99.50 |
| 10 | Eureka Catskill 2 | 66.50 | 53.50 |
| 5 | Eureka Catskill 3 | 89.50 | 71.50 |
| 15 | Eureka Timberline 2 | 86.50 | 71.50 |
| 8 | Jan Sport Trail Dome | 200.00 | 165.00 |
| 4 | Sierra Designs 3 person | 220.00 | 175.00 |
| 20 | Snowlion Triplex | 180.00 | 125.00 |
| 15 | Snowlion Min. | 145.00 | 99.50 |

| | CLOTHING | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 100 | EMS Timberline Parka | 54.50 | 45.50 |
| 50 | Snowlion Mtn. Parka | 45.95 | 39.50 |
| 50 | EMS Watertight | 15.50 | 11.50 |
| 10 | EMS Watertight Pants | 12.50 | 9.50 |
| 35 | EMS Goretex shoulder parka | 44.50 | 32.50 |
| 10 | Sierra West Rain Jacket | 33.00 | 27.00 |
| 20 | Sierra West Rain Pants | 21.50 | 17.50 |
| 25 | EMS Delux Watertight | 21.50 | 15.75 |
| 60 | EMS Packboard Poncho | 26.50 | 19.50 |
| 75 | EMS Standard Poncho | 16.00 | 12.50 |
| 20 | EMS Childs Poncho | 12.50 | 10.50 |
| 75 | Sporty Delux Stretch Shorts | 24.00 | 15.75 |
| 20 | Sporty Twill (ladies) Shorts | 15.00 | 10.50 |
| 100 | EMS Twill Shorts | 10.50 | 7.00 |
| 25 | Chouinard Shorts | 18.00 | 14.00 |
| 100 | Lee Pre-Wash Jeans | 19.95 | 13.50 |
| 80 | Davenshire Pants | 14.95 | 10.95 |
| 40 | Woolrich Twill Cargo Pants | 16.50 | 11.50 |
| 50 | EMS Turtleneck | 7.95 | 5.50 |
| 60 | Duofold Cott. Knit Jersey | 13.50 | 10.50 |
| 100 | EMS Cott Knit Jersey | 9.95 | 6.95 |
| 50 | EMS Gingham Check | 10.95 | 8.95 |
| 100 | EMS Chamois Shirt | 12.50 | 8.50 |
| 50 | Woolrich Safari Short sleeve | 14.50 | 10.50 |
| 50 | Woolrich Safari Long sleeve | 16.00 | 11.50 |
| 30 | EMS Greenland Sweater | 37.00 | 34.00 |
| 50 | Chouinard Climbing Sweater | 45.00 | 33.50 |

All T-Shirts – 30% off  All Sports Pants – 35% off

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 100 | EMS Chevron Down Vest | 29.50 | 22.50 |
| 20 | EMS Supervain Pants | 29.50 | 10.00 |
| | CANOES | | |
| 2 | M.R. Explorer | 525.00 | 446.25 |
| 1 | M.R. Malacite | 439.00 | 373.15 |
| 1 | M.R. TW Special | 589.00 | 500.00 |

| | PACKS | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 10 | Kelty D-4 | 77.00 | 63.00 |
| 20 | EMS Divided | 62.50 | 50.00 |
| 15 | EMS Undivided | 54.50 | 40.50 |
| 10 | Jan Sport Ranier I | 58.00 | 46.00 |
| 10 | Jan Sport Ranier II | 50.00 | 40.00 |
| 12 | Gerry Teton | 57.50 | 30.00 |
| 15 | Kelty Basic | 49.00 | 35.00 |
| 12 | EMS Adjustable | 34.50 | 27.50 |
| 10 | Kelly Tour Pack | 75.00 | 65.00 |
| 8 | Chuck R. N. Frameless | 43.50 | 35.00 |
| 25 | Wilderness Experience Klettersack | 29.95 | 23.50 |
| 20 | Wilderness Experience Hummingbird | 17.50 | 13.50 |
| 100 | EMS Day Pack | 13.95 | 9.50 |
| 50 | EMS Book Bag | 10.95 | 8.50 |
| 25 | EMS Tenderfoot | 6.50 | 4.50 |
| 10 | EMS Cargo Bag Medium | 14.00 | 11.00 |
| 25 | EMS Cargo Bag large | 16.00 | 13.00 |
| 25 | EMS Cargo Bag x large | 18.00 | 15.00 |
| 10 | EMS Duffle Bag | 11.00 | 8.95 |
| | MISCELLANEOUS | | |
| 20 | Coleman Peak I | 28.50 | 22.50 |
| 15 | Efi Mini Stove | 19.50 | 15.50 |
| 20 | Naked Svea | 19.95 | 15.95 |
| 15 | Bluet S200 | 12.00 | 9.60 |
| 15 | Bluet S200 | 12.00 | 9.60 |
| 20 | Mirro 8" Frying Pan | 4.50 | 3.75 |
| 20 | Guzzler Canteen | 12.00 | 9.60 |
| 25 | Dial Thermometer F | 3.25 | 2.60 |
| 25 | Dial Thermometer C | 2.75 | 2.20 |

*All Insect repellant – 20% off
*All canoe accessories – 50% off
*All bike gear – 25% off

July 31 - Aug. 12

Master Charge and Visa  All Sales Final

EASTERN MOUNTAIN SPORTS

100 Dorset St.

Coming soon from the organization that broke the Hona[illegible]

THE VERMONT ENQUIRER

Pick it up at your local newsstand on August 10.

HIGHLIGHTS

4 Alcoholism and its related ills have created a serious problem in Vermont. The legislature appears more concerned with promoting budget pluses than funding treatment programs for its 22,000 alcoholics. John Letteri examines one of Vermont's more subtle, yet widespread social problems.

5 The ripples of the Proposition 13 tax cut revolt are being felt all over America. Americans are tired of taxation with representation and politicians are getting the message. Vermont is in good financial shape, after several lean years, and has some interesting approaches to tax relief.

6 Never mind your name, just give us your number.
Never mind your face, just show us your card.
And we want to know whose wing are you under?
You'd better step to the right, or we can make it hard.
I'm stuck on the border; all I wanted was some peace of mind.

"On the Border"
(Henley/Leadon/Frey)

14

The Green Mountain Music Series in Warren was to be a Vermont music lover's dream. Yet, cancellations, scheduling difficulties, and managerial errors have put a damper on this summer's series. Alan Marshall looks into the troubled series and to the future of music in Warren.

SUMMER CYNIC

University of Vermont
Billings Center
Burlington, Vermont 05401

(802) 656-4412
(802) 656-4413

Editor: Russell Flannery
Associate Editor: John Letteri
Photography Editor: Rob Swanson
General Manager: Julie Voll
Advertising Manager: Nathaniel Foote
Advertising Reps: Peter Voll, Mary Landon

Editorial Staff: Tom Daniels, Vaune Davis, Alex Eschenbrenner, Barry Gustin, Bernie Louis, Alan Marshall, Otis Norton, Larry Seiden, Shana Schartzberg, Tim Thompson
Production: Dave Lord, Janice Montagne, Sarah Wesson
Artists: Liz Hemingway, Joan Burdette

Special Thanks to UVM security and Sue Ball.
No material contained herein may be reproduced without the written consent of the Editor of the Vermont Summer Cynic.
Opinions expressed do not necessarily reflect those of the University administration, faculty, staff, or of the State of Vermont.
Circulation: 9,000
The Vermont Summer Cynic is printed at the Upper Valley Press, Bradford, Vermont 05033.

10% OFF
ON PRESCRIPTION
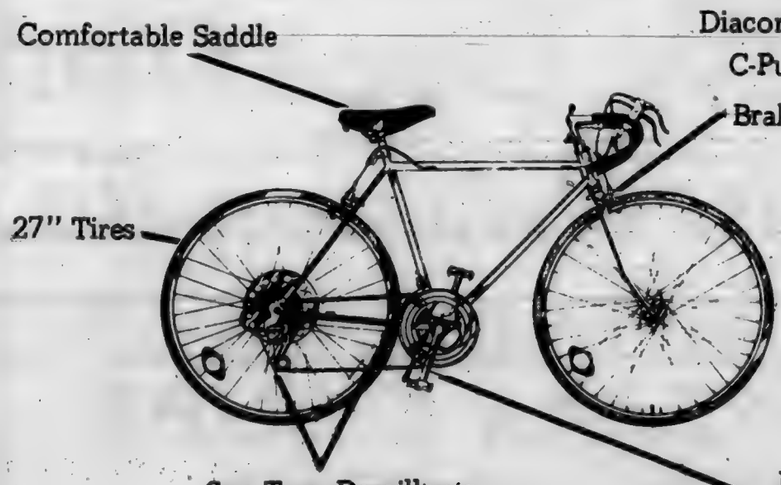
&
NON-PRESCRIPTION
EYEGLASSES

Additional Discount
With Student I.D.



OPTICAL CENTER
107 Church Street Burlington 864-7146

SKI RACK

Means Bike Rack
In The Summer

VISTA

* Free 30 Day Check Up
* All Bicycles Fully Assembled

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Men's Frames | 19" | 21" | 23" | 25" | Shown Above: VISTA PACER |
| Ladies | 19" | | | | $155 |

*First in Vermont to Have Customer "Do-It-Yourself Repair Shop."

MasterCharge VISA

659-3313
85 MAIN ST., BURLINGTON
MON. TO THURS. 9 to 6
FRI. 9 to 9
SAT. 9 to 5

Ski the Rack

There was a young business named Bygone
That woke to discover its sign gone
Without it we're lost
Consider the cost
Would you please bring it back to us by dawn

91 College St.
(Between Pine & Champlain)
Burlington, Vermont 05401
Tel. 802 862-4397

Bygone Books

Old Books
Bought & Sold

mon ~ sat.
9:30 am ~ 5:30 pm

The NoRCo Parts Specialists

Domestic Car and Truck Parts Auto Paint
Batteries Tires Foreign Car Parts

NOW OPEN
NEW Location
1776 Williston Rd.

PIZZAS & SUBS
Crusts: Regular, Thick and Whole Wheat
Every Day Special: 50c Pitchers
with Pizza (Winooski Shop Only)

π PI EXPRESS

Delivery
Winooski – 655-3005, 655-0977
Essex Jct. – 879-6333

$1 Off Any Large Itemed Pizza. Expires 8-9-78 Non- Delivered

50c Off Any Small Itemed Pizza Expires 8-9-78 Non-Delivered

Y'all Pass Me That Bottle

Vermont's 22,000 Alchoholics Create a Pressing Problem for the Green Mountain State

What could taste better after a long, hot day at work than a couple of ice cold beers? Or on the weekends, while relaxing in front of a ballgame on television or sunning on the beach? Or at a party, or at a barbeque, or just when the feeling arises? Or is it a need?

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAA) estimates there are ten million alcoholics in the United States. They may be Skid Row bums, or upper class socialites, black, white, old or young. For each of these alcoholics, the NIAA estimates four other people, whether family, employers, or friends, are directly affected by the problem drinker. As a result, a staggering forty million other Americans endure alcoholic related problems.

Alcohol is a contributing factor in fifty percent of the highway deaths in the U.S. From 1961-1971, 247,000 Americans died in crashes involving alcohol. "That's not to say it is the cause," said Assistant Project Director of Crash. Statistics will show, however, alcohol is the single greatest recurring factor in highway deaths.

Vermont is not untouched by this malady. In fact, it suffers from one of the worst alcoholic situations in the country. Compared to a national average of 6.8 – 9% of the population having drinking problems, Vermont has 11.2%, according to the Vermont State Alcohol Plan for Fiscal 1978. In addition, the plan estimates alcoholism caused Vermont a yearly net income loss of 79 million dollars through absenteeism and injuries resulting in loss of productivity on jobs, health care costs, motor vehicle costs and crime. Alcohol was a contributing factor in an average of 63% of all fatal crashes in Vermont over the last five years. The national norm is 50%. The legal limit for blood alcohol content while driving in Vermont is .1%. In every fatal accident since 1973, the blood alcohol content of the drunk driver has averaged .2%. In fiscal 1976, 2,388 persons were arrested for DWI.

Why?

Although every person drinks for his own reasons, Vermont has several characteristics conducive to alcoholism. First, Vermont contains such widespread poverty that in 1971, the National Institute of Mental Health designated the entire state as a poverty area. The NIAA recognizes poverty as a correlate to heavy drinking. Second, unemployment stands at 10%, with higher rates in other areas, such as St. Albans at 18-20%. Third, underemployment, namely lower wages, contributes to produce an unhealthy economic picture for Vermont. "There's not a lot of money to do other things with," said Patricia Colebaugh Director of the Alcohol Information and Referral Center Service (AIRS), "so it becomes cheaper and easier to drink."

Coupled with these factors is the rural nature of the state, creating isolation between people, and the harsh long winters, forcing people indoors for long periods of time. As a result of these and other factors, Vermont has 22,000 problem drinkers, and nearly one out of every five people in Vermont is either an alcoholic or comes from a family where another member of the immediate family is an alcoholic.

Colebaugh said the woman alcoholics, both on the national scene and in Vermont, are becoming more prevalent over the last ten years. Women comprise nearly 50% of the alcoholic population today, as compared to only 17% in 1950. Colebaugh mentioned the factors discussed earlier as contributing to alcoholism in Vermont, but also today as causing "certain conflicts among Vermont women who have been isolated and protected within the confines of the patriarchal family structure."

Colebaugh said in addition to changing roles, the woman alcoholic in Vermont "finds herself in an environment where alcoholism is perceived as a predominately male disease." In fact, many women alcoholics in Vermont find themselves the victims of a "double standard," alcoholism is socially and morally acceptable for a man, but totally unacceptable for a woman. Second, the "economically dependent position" of most women in Vermont makes it simply safer and easier to remain in a self-destructive situation, rather than seek treatment and bring "shame" on her family and husband, according to Celebaugh. Finally, statistics show that 9 out of 10 women stay with a man drunk, but 9 out of 10 men leave a woman drunk.

Current thinking on alcoholism has termed it a health and social problem, rather than the moral and legal problem it was once thought to be. A bill before the Vermont House of Representatives setting forth new guidelines on combating alcoholism, ( 268) states "alcoholism is a disease which can be effectively treated; the alcoholic should be provided treatment, not punishment."

Physiologically, continued abuse of alcohol can lead to cirrhosis of the liver, ulcers, heart disease, nervous or mental disorders, or brain damage. Alcohol can be physiologically addicting, creating severe withdrawal symptoms when alcohol intake drops, or producing the "DT's," facial muscle spasms, or shaking hands and arms before the first drink of the day. Health and medical costs – Vermont lost 30 M.

Socially, half of all the murders and one third of all suicides in the U.S. are alcohol-related (NIAA). Vermont lost between 45 and 50 million dollars through loss of productivity resulting from alcohol-related absenteeism and injuries on jobs, and 6.5 million dollars on alcohol-related crimes.

What can be done?

Vermont combats problem drinking on many fronts.

Swanson Photos

including de-toxification units, half-way houses, and individual counseling. First, and most importantly, however, the alcoholic must be made aware he is suffering from a disease that can be cured, and not shamed or scorned. "Because you drink you aren't bad people," said Colebaugh.

Mrs. Colebaugh said Airs deals with the immediate problem first. "We try to get them to understand they are problem drinkers, and recognize the difficulties, both socially and health-related, they are causing themselves." She stressed AIRS does not try to educate them on the problem and get them to talk about it.

"When alcohol begins to impede self-growth, self-actualization, and self-esteem, then it becomes a real problem," said Colebaugh. She said AIRS realizes many people drink, and they're not out to "sober up the world," but rather to help people who have a problem with it.

Three halfway houses, in Brattleboro, Rutland, and Burlington, "provide a supportive environment for the recovering alcoholic who has completed the intensive phase of treatment, but may not have a suitable living situation to return to." (The Vermont Alcohol and Drug Information Clearing House.)

In addition, Vermont offers school-age education on alcoholism, community programs, project CRASH, and state sponsored seminars and informational meetings on alcoholism and its related problems. AIRS has instituted a task force on the woman alcoholic in Burlington, and with federal funds hopefully due in September, it will become one of the few programs in the nation that deal specifically with women.

The bill currently before the Vermont House recognizes alcoholism as a disease to be treated and not a moral problem to be hidden and punished. It states public intoxication should no longer be considered a criminal or civil offense in the state, and calls for the repeal of current laws relating to public intoxication and the punishment of it. It further recognizes many of the needed services to combat alcoholism are already available, and it states that police officers will be saved from unnecessary time, travel and paperwork by simply handing an inebriant over to the proper state alcohol services, rather than putting him in jail, and "babysitting" him. The bill also calls for the co-ordination of all alcohol treatment funds and services under a single governmental unit. DWI and other crimes committed while under the influence will still be prosecuted. It has the support of such lumminaries as the Attorney General, the Vermont Medical Society, and Governor Snelling.

The bill also states, however, passage would not require any additional appropriation of state funds to alcohol rehabilitation and education programs. The numerous alcohol treatment programs throughout the state are funded primarily through federal funds, and the Vermont Alcohol and Drug Information Clearinghouse stated some of the services provided to alcoholics are in difficulty even with federal support. They recognize Vermont is committed to the solutions of the state's drinking problem, but cannot "realistically maintain the range of services which are available with federal aid."

Colebaugh said AIRS receives $34,500 from the NIAA, $22,000 in Federal Title 20 money and only $4,000 in Vermont state appropriations. AIRS serves four counties, two hundred clients, and "we scrape along." This situation is "typical" of other agencies in the state.

Vermont, however, took in over 12 million dollars in revenues generated through taxes on liquor, wine and beer sales in 1977. In return, the state appropriated a little over $200,000, or less than 2%, to combat its serious alcohol abuse problem. The state is also expected to have between a six and ten million dollar budget surplus for fiscal 1978. This is not an indication of astute money management, but rather a policy of choking programs like AIRS, to give the aura of proper management, for obvious political purposes.

With alcoholics accounting for from 4-5% above the national norm in Vermont's population, with an average of 63% of the highway deaths in Vermont partly attributable to drivers with an avg. blood alcohol content of .2%, with well over 2,000 arrests for DWI each year in Vermont, and with an estimated 79-100 million dollar economic loss per year to the state because of alcohol, legislators should accept more of a responsibility for a problem that is serious and hurting the state, both economically and in terms of health. Perhaps legislators should reconsider the appropriations to alcohol treatment and education programs, and at least bring them into proportion with the magnitude of the problem.

—John Letteri

'Etiquette, you know, etiquette'

Friday night — the weekend begins and the people who work all week get ready to camp, fish, go to parties. For the ten or twelve people around the Inn's bar, however, it was just like any other night: music from the jukebox lilted in the background while Wonder Woman flashed on the color TV. The faces were always the same. Tired, drawn, somewhat dirty; the conversation restricted to outbursts of slurred nothingness, night after night, drink after drink. While late night eyes tried several times to line up match and end of cigarette, they all laughed at the one who was trying. When he succeeded, it was quiet again. Wonder Woman calmed a wild horse, and was bent talking to a young boy, revealing her fullness.

"Wow! Look at those tits," said Doby, "Ho-ho, wouldn't I like to muckle onto those."

"It's not tits, Doby, you say boobs," said Erma jealously. Erma was about fifty years old, with a liquor inflated abdomen, an extremely drawn face, and quite framkly — ugly. She talked incessantly, regardless of whether a receptive ear was near or not.

"You're full of shit, will you look at those tits Nelson," Dody yelled to a comrade at the end of the bar.

"Ya," said Nelson.

"It's not polite to say tits Doby! You say boobs!" continued Erma. "It's etiquette you know, etiquette. Christ, you might say tits and there'd be women around. It's boobs, do you hear me?"

Wonder Woman stood and breathed deeply.

"My God, will you look at those tits," said Doby.

"Boobs!" shouted Erma.

"Oh, shut up, you old hag," said Doby disgustedly, "you're full of shit anyway."

"And your father was Adolph Hitler," said Erma vengefully.

"What are you talking about? I was five years old and he hadn't even come to power," said Doby.

"He was your father, now don't lie to me."

"You're full of shit!" he said angrily. "Now let me watch television."

Nelson dropped his glass, en route to his mouth, onto the bar. Glass and beer sprayed everywhere. Nelson merely rested his arm in the middle of the mess, then slowly lowered his head onto his arm. The others roared with laughter.

--J.L.

A Feast

The Romans weren't the only ones who could cook!
Our Victorian Western Setting Proves It!

Not only fine atmosphere but fine food to match
Come on in see if you don't agree

SIRLOIN SALOON®

SHELBURNE RD. SHELBURNE, VERMONT
985-2200

Quality Rated by AAA and MOBIL TRAVEL GUIDE

AMERICAN EXPRESS
MASTER CHARGE
VISA

Nate's INC.
Vermont's Largest Men's Clothiers
* Burlington
*St. Albans
*Montpelier
*St. Johnsbury

MID-SUMMER
CLEARANCE SALE
ON FAMOUS BRAND MENSWEAR
NOW GOING ON

Cover Story

Ride The Wild Surf:

Can Vermont Hang Ten On The Tax Cut Wave?

"Let me tell you how it will be. / There's one for you, 11 for me. 'Cause I'm the Tax Man...
Tax Man, The Beatles

Not surprisingly, there is nothing new about an American who hates to pay taxes. Out on taxless Walden Pond, Henry David Thoreau wrote, "That government is best which governs least." At the same time the 13 colonies were protesting against taxation without representation, Adam Smith, the Father of Economics, was preaching, "Each man knows best how to make use of his resources (i.e. money)." With Smith's idea in mind, today's taxpayer is saying that taxation with representation doesn't necessarily work either!

"There are certain things a government can do which private enterprise can't" – that was the New Deal-Depression reasoning for strong government. But after spending the nation and the world into high inflation, the proponents of Big Government and deficit spending are going underground. And taxpayers are starting to believe that holding down taxes is one way to save money against the ravages of corporate administered prices which rise faster than wages.

WHERE THE BIG BREAKERS ROLL

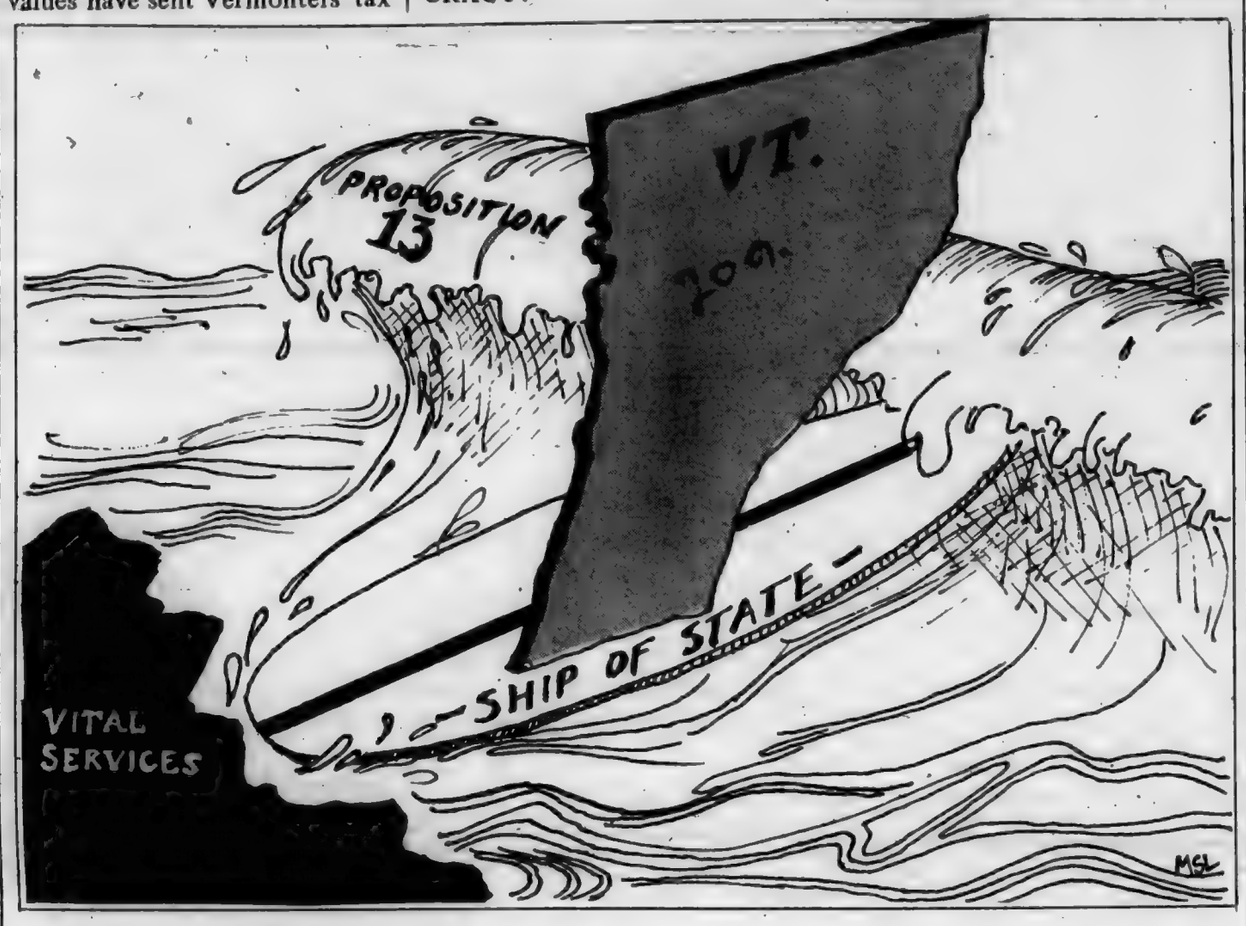
Somehow, it seems only fitting that a tax revolt should initiate in the nation's most populous state. California has been America's trend setter for the second half of the 20th century. Where else could you discover Hollywood, Disneyland, Haight-Ashbury, The Beach Boys, Dick Nixon, The Grateful Dead, Hell's Angels, Jerry Brown, and Howard Jarvis?

But this spring, the classic West Coast style of hang-loose-and-go-with-the-flow was smashed by a tidal wave of tax slashing called Proposition 13. Since then, the tax revolt fever has spread throughout the country with every politician telling voters that government is too big and taxes too high.

Proposition 13 is targeted to limit property taxes to 1% of a taxpayer's income, and turns property assessments back to what they were five years ago. By a conservative estimate, California's property taxes are being halved and the state has been thrown into turmoil. Local services (fire, police, education) which depend on property tax revenues are being drastically reduced. And pundits are whispering that this wealthy state of 45 million will live to regret its decision.

California and Vermont have about as much in common as do Lake Champlain and the Pacific Ocean. The tax systems are quite different: California does not have a long and strong tradition of local control; property taxes are collected by the state which then redistributes them to the cities and towns. Vermont towns keep local taxes, which are then supplemented by state education and highway aid.

That Vermonters are heavily taxed is undeniable: we rank 3rd in the nation in taxes burden per person and only 39th in income per person. Vermonters pay $300 million annually to the federal government, $200 million to the state government, and $150 million to their local government. This is a total tax burden of $650 million a year – $1,500 for every man, woman, and child in Vermont.



Property taxes account for almost all local taxes. Recently, several towns have experienced rapid growth and have had to build schools, roads, sewage, and provide police and fire protection. Growth coupled with inflation and soaring land values have sent Vermonters' tax bills sky high to cover town budgets. The lesson is clear: with its small tax base, Vermont cannot afford to support a large increase in population.

Heavy property tax burdens led to the creation of Vermont's far-sighted tax relief program long before Proposition 13 was ever thought of. In 1974, at the urging of Governor Thomas Salmon, the Legislature passed a law limiting property taxes to 6% of income for a homeowner earning up to $20,000, or 20% of rent for a renter. The state then rebates up to $500 to each qualifying homeowner and renter. For example, someone earning $10,000 and paying $1,000 in property taxes receives a $400 rebate ($1,000 - $600). The property tax relief program applies to a house and up to 2 acres of land, and costs the state about $6 million a year.

Vermont's farmers, who still own one-quarter of the state, have long been hit with heavy property taxes, averaging over 20% of net income. Last session, the Legislature passed bill H. 361 which assesses bona fide operating farms and forest lands at their use value, not the inflated fair market value. Town losses in property taxes are then made up out of state revenues. This program begins in 1981 and is predicted to cost $3 million a year.

Though not as extravagant or rash as Proposition 13, Vermont's property tax relief system is working. Vermont's system is more flexible, does not threaten essential services, and provides relief for those who need it most. Yet, there is a movement underway to expand property tax relief in Vermont. Democratic Lieutenant gubernatorial candidate Madeleine Kunin is calling the property tax "a wicked tax" and favors using the present state surplus of $6.4 million to raise the $500 rebate limit and to increase state education aid to towns which also takes pressure off the local property tax.

BUDGET BICKERING AND BIG BELLIED BUREAUCRACY?

Over the past 13 years, Vermont's state government has more than doubled in size and cost. But when inflation is accounted for, Tax Department figures show that Vermont is spending about as much now for state government as it did five years ago! In economics, one speaks of "economies of scale" to describe a situation where all the advantages of size have been achieved. Chances are, we have reached our "economy of scale" for government in Vermont: expansion would be costly and cuts would be sharply felt.

In the late 60's, state agencies were often created to comply with federal regulations (especially welfare) designed for large rather than small states. Add Parkinson's Law for the tendency of bureaucracies to grow and jealously covet their gains, and the size of Vermont's government has been an easy target. "There's got to be some fat, some fraud, or some corruption," taxpayers and politicians argue. The Welfare State may be accepted, but only grudgingly.

Two controversial questions immediately arise: (1) are the state's services necessary and commensurate with the money spent? and (2) is the tax burden fairly distributed?

Nearly every state in the country had a surplus budget this year; and Vermont is in good financial shape for the second consecutive year. Politicians claim that constituents are overtaxed and call for returning the surplus to the taxpayers. (Notice how politicians are bending to please public opinion, as a cure for the public distrust of politicians generated by Watergate.)

Vermont has 25 different kinds of taxes – liquor, highways, sales, business, tobacco, income, property, and on. One reason for the Vermont surplus is that income taxes have produced more revenue as inflation pushes wage earners into higher tax brackets (but without a concurrent increase in purchasing power). After a $21 million surplus in fiscal 1977, the state income tax rate was reduced from 27.25% to 25% of the federal income tax bill. But 1978 Vermont income taxes have been running at about 8% above estimates – $66.4 million vs. a projected $61.5 million. Yet few people seem to complain about income taxes which tend to be progressive (i.e. the wealthy pay a greater percentage of their income in taxes).

But are Vermonters getting what they pay for? The general feeling, influenced by Proposition 13, is we are getting more government than we need, and cutbacks are imminent. Incumbent Governor Richard Snelling has suggested amending the Vermont constitution to limit state budget increases to 5-7% a year, less than the current inflation rates of 8-10%. Some state services would be reduced, but Snelling argues that a tighter budget will force the state to set priorities. At present ¼ of the state budget is spent on highways, and over one-third on education and human services.

Snelling's proposal is moderate compared to the plans of Raymond Matthews of Castleton. Matthews, Vermont's answer to tax messiah Howard Jarvis, wants to cut state sales and income taxes and local property taxes in half. If Matthews scheme were enacted, no roads would be plowed in the winter, and the state's schools would not bother to open.

A more serious challenge to Snelling is coming from a coalition of Legislators committed to a "zero-growth budget." Leader Rep. Daniel Woodward claims to have about 35 legislators on his side, and the no-growth movement is gaining momentum. If the state budget were not allowed to rise above the current $202.4 million, inflation would wipe out $16-20 million in services, and hundreds would lose their jobs. State services have been repeatedly in a budget bind. In surplus years, the tendency is to cut taxes; in a deficit year, the tendency is to cut services.

Critics are forever complaining that government is "less efficient" than private enterprise. But government doesn't seek to make profits from putting poisonous additives in food or marketing 100 different kinds of deodorant. In recent years, several systems have been developed to make government more accountable. One of these, zero-based budgeting, asks the head of each state agency to justify each dollar he is requesting from the state budget. Another plan, lately offered by Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Bernard O'Shea, would allow the governor to veto certain parts of a budget, rather than all or nothing. Governor Snelling has received considerable flack for his much boasted Cost Control Council Report, which sits in a tightly guarded safe in Montpelier and is available only after pulling teeth. Apparently, the Report has not saved Vermont any money, and Snelling has not vetoed budgets which have grown by 20% since he took office. In addition, Snelling lobbied hard against repealing the sales tax on up to $75 worth of clothing. The sales tax is a "regressive" tax, which hits low-income people more heavily than those well-off.

If you drive a car, I'll tax the street./ If you get too cold, I'll tax the heat./ If you take a walk, I'll tax your feet.

The danger of overtaxation is amply illustrated in the turmoil of our Mother Country. The "British Disease" is synonymous with strikes and laziness; but the true illness is a high rate of inflation coupled with heavy taxes, up to 35% on the first $10,000 earned and 83% on anything over $30,000! The incentive to work disappears and Britons have been fleeing by the dozens to Australia, Canada, and the United States.

VERMONT: INDIVIDUALS AND COMMUNITIES

"Everything is tied to everything else" is the first rule of ecology, and the same is true of government and taxes: education, human services, highways, environmental protection, the health of the state and national economies. The connections are complicated and the balances delicate.

Vermont has great traditions of individualism and community spirit. Some Vermonters warn that Proposition 13's are scare tactics aimed at cutting essential services. Others are tired of paying taxes and are dissatisfied with government performance. Once more, the struggle between the individual and the community shows that one can't live without the other; and the two must strike a compatible relationship.

P.S. The waves on Lake Champlain are calmer and not as cold as those on the Pacific.

–Tom Daniels

Summer Travel

Coping with Customs:

You only live once, so think twice

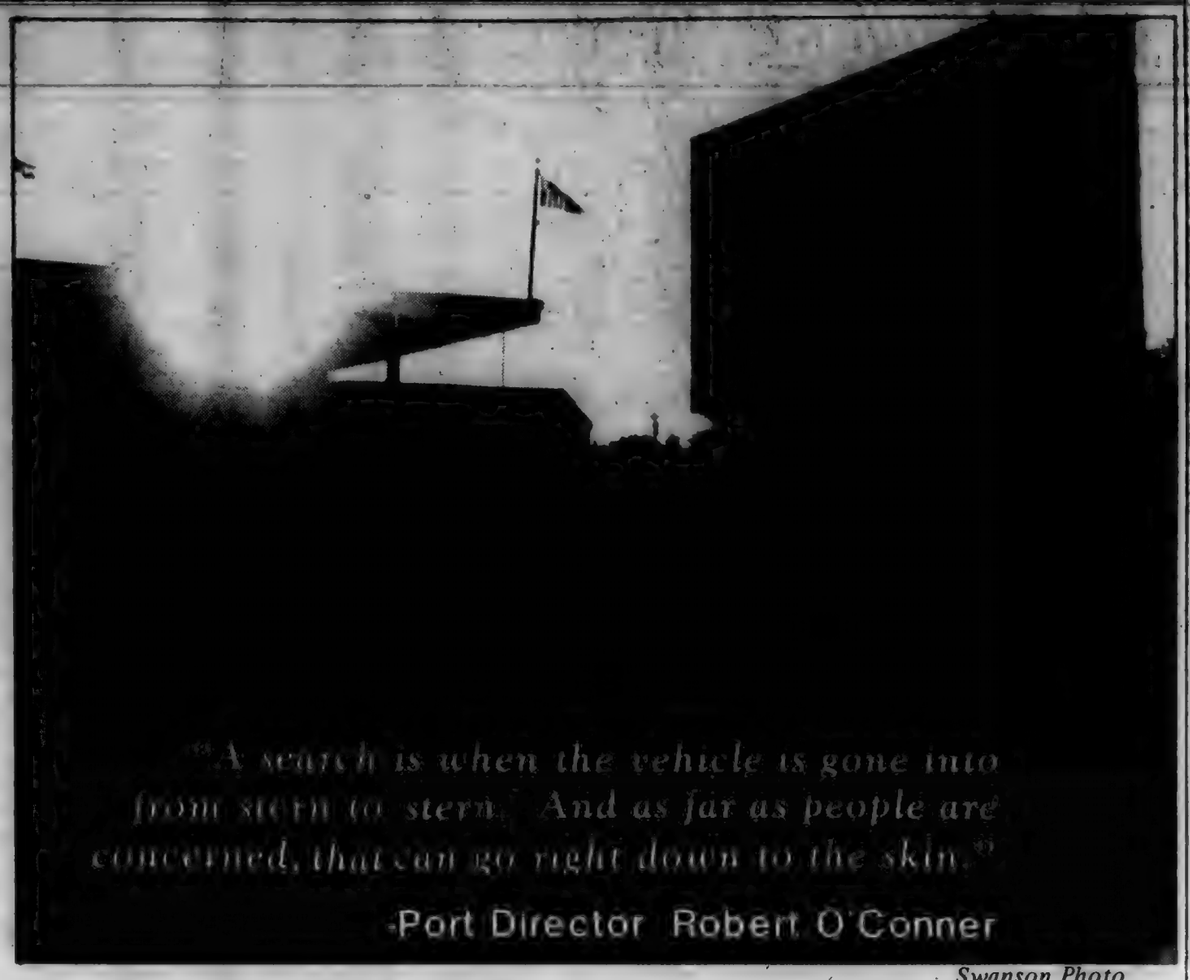
By Russell Flannery

For an estimated 350,000 people, entry into the United States at Highgate Springs, Vermont this year will signal the end of a weekend vacation, a shopping excursion, or simply a brief trek to a sporting or musical event. The greatest concentration of travelers will venture during the summer, when school's out, tourism crests, and life's worth living.

For some, however, the journey may not necessarily be so pleasant. Through either ignorance or blatant violation of U.S. law, many individuals will suffer a loss of goods, money and occasionally even face and freedom. Nearly 24,000 people were arrested at border stations throughout the U.S. in 1977, and a decline is not expected in 1978.

The U.S. Customs Office holds responsibility for informing traveling U.S. residents of their privileges and rights. When founded in 1789, Customs inspected ocean vessels, levied import taxes and duties, and restricted entry of prohibitive goods and material. In 1978, the U.S.'s geographical and technological advancements have accordingly increased the magnitude of the Custom Office's responsibility.



The Highgate Springs border station houses the Customs Office, as well as the U.S. Immigration Service, whose responsibility is to monitor the residence and intent of U.S. visitors. Given the constant expansion and protectionist practices by government agencies, the Customs Office also enforces importation restrictions set forth by the Food and Drug Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Internal Revenue Service, and other government agencies whose direct representation at the border is obviously impractical.

For example, firearms, meats, fruits, flowers and numerous common items are among the items whose transport requires customs' approval. Furthermore, the Customs Office performs 'look outs' for fugitives and individuals under observation by either the U.S. or Canada.

Enforcement of these seemingly common, yet by defense standards, vital restrictions, was deemed vital enough by the forefathers that Customs inspectors in the line of duty were deemed exempt from the Fourth Amendment. In effect, these individuals may lawfully invade one's private surrounds and belongings, when a violation of an applicable U.S. law is presumed to have occurred.

******

"If an officer makes a search (at the Highgate Springs border station) that results in a government violation, or even worse, no violation, and that individual decides to take him to court, he'd certainly have to articulate his reasons for making that search; (for example) if the person is absolutely clean, the car is clean and he didn't have anything to go on, what in the hell are you doing searching the person?..." (Robert O'Conner, Director of the Customs Office at the Highgate Spring port )

Swanson Photo

******

"The first time I was hassled, the guy stopped me, looked through my camera and opened it up. I was upset, but no big deal.

I went through it again with a friend of mine, coming back he pulled my car over for no reason whatsoever. I don't have a record of any kind. They asked me my name and where I worked, and I told them. After that, I said to him, "what's that little machine there?" because he was putting down my license plates. He said, "Would you please pull over?"

So, I pulled over. I was with my girlfriend. We had just gone through for the night and we were on our way back. We got out of the car – they pulled apart my entire car. I had about 80 cassette tapes, and they opened up every cassette tape case, they – I had dirty laundry in the back of the truck and they were throwing it all over the place – it was really embarrassing. Then they told me to go inside and they made me take my clothes off. And I was furious because there was no reason – except that I asked them what that machine was and I was sort of giggling – sort of getting nervous. They went through our pocketbooks and everything and we went in, separately. I took my shirt off and she got embarrassed because I wasn't wearing a bra. She goes "OK, you can put it on now." They made my friend take all her clother off – they searched her whole body.

OK, I said there's no way I'm going through again, because that's the second time it's happened and there's no reason for it...

So I'm going through on a bus. There were five people on the bus and they pull me off, for no reason whatsoever. It wasn't as if they found roaches in my

(continued on page 8)

So you think that the Canadians are lenient ...

"I was going to the David Bowie concert, expecting your typical Canadian border crossing questions: 'your beloved, name, where you're going?' I've been to Canada about 15 times in my life and I've never had any problem at all. They'll say 'Concert? OK, have a good time!' So, you go.

This time, however, they say, 'Pull the car over.' So I pull the car over and the guy starts searching the car. It's definitely different this time around. They bring us into the building there. We go in, and I have a little bit in my pocket – just a little bit of marijuana – two grams (about one joint) – and it was all sticks and seeds. I did have a pipe in my pocket, which was the part that screwed me later. I'd been asked to go in other times, too but that was just to prove that I had money, or for identification. This time they asked us to empty our pockets, which is the first time this has ever happened to me at the Canadian border. So I emptied my pockets, except for auh – what I didn't want them to see. Then, they frisked me. Obviously, they felt the pipe there. They reached in the pocket and they pull it out – the pipe and the marijuana and everything. So, I'm just sitting there, not knowing what's really going to happen. Then the lady starts typing up all the official forms, never really telling me what was going on.

Then, the drug officer comes in. He has blue jeans on, and you know, he looks like a real hippie. He takes me into a little room and explains how it is illegal in Canada, contrary to what most Americans think, and he says they do have drug laws up there. He says, 'You know what's going to happen now?' and I said, 'Maybe there'll be a fine or something, and I'll give you some money, and we'll go to the show!' He says, 'No, you'll spend the night in jail, and you'll make a court appearance tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock,' or whatever time. From then on, it got pretty nasty.

All the border people – and I had to sit around the border for the ride to the jail, were pretty nice. The general feeling around the place, though, was that they thought the Canadian people who got busted going into the states got hit a lot harder. They really didn't feel sorry for any Americans who were getting busted. They said, 'Your fine is only going to be $25 or $50. Do you know what happens to a Canadian that gets busted going into the states? It's at least $100, and your car is confiscated!' At least they explained to me why the crack down, that the United States customs people had told them to start cracking down, and I guess the financial situation was part of it. Outside of the reasons for cracking down, the jail part of it was the pits. For somebody's first experience behind bars, which for two grams of marijuana doesn't seem to be anything, you get – they make you strip, you take your shower, and it's like the real thing, the real jail. You get your own little room, your own little cubicle, a toilet with no seat on it or anything like that.

The thing I remember most is going to court. There were eight of us who were going to go to court the next morning.

They had leg irons, hand cuffs – for everybody. Not chained together, but individually. And if you don't have the money you know they impose a fine... Well, anyway, they take your money when you get to jail. They take all your things and check it in. They don't let you take it to court. My girlfriend was there (not busted) and she had money. So, they imposed the fine – $25. She had the money to pay it, and I had money back at the jail. Once the fine is imposed, though, you still can't be released. I had to wait until every one else had their court appearance, and sit in this little sound-proof-like room with seven other guys – in a cell room. No bars, but locks and stuff like that. We sat there until about noon, and then I had to go back to court. The jail was in Cowansville and the court was in Granby. So we had to wait for the papers to be driven from Granby to Cowensville which is about another three hours of waiting in jail. Although everyone knew what my fine was going to be, it was just a matter of waiting for the official documents to show up.

The food was terrible the experience in jail was not worth the while. That would be my comment to make. Don't do it, it's just not worth it. Not at all. The border people have a job to do. I always thought the Canadian customs were different from the states' customs and that the Canadians really didn't care as long as you were an American coming into the country with money, but they started this new thing where they do

Boyd, age 22

BECK ARNLEY

National Discount Club

Save Up to

15% Off

on Selected Items.

Special!
All Oil-Filters $2.95

Sign Up Now at...

Imported Parts Center
3060 Williston Road
South Burlington, Vermont 05401

beer wine

THE ONLY

BEVERAGE WAREHOUSE

IS IN WINOOSKI

lowest prices largest selection

kegs soda

WHAT'S YOUR BEEF

Burlington's Favorite Rib House

DINNER MENU

OPEN FOR DINNER 7 NIGHTS A WEEK
SUN - THURS TIL 10 FRI & SAT TIL 10:30.

Prime Rib
Ed & Jay's Cut
Rib & Shrimp
Top Sirloin
Top & Shrimp
Teriyaki
New York Sirloin
Barnyard
Crablegs
Odd Couple
Stuffed Filet of Sole
Stuffed Shrimp
Broiled Scallops
Chicken Teriyaki
Stuffed Trout

Prices From $5.50 to $9.95

Includes Salad W/ Baby Shrimp, Egg, and Choice of dressing, Hot Bread, and Potato.

HAPPY HOUR 4-7 MON. - FRI.
Cheese and Cracker, Finger food in the

WHAT ALE'S YOU Lounge

152 St. Paul St., Burlington
862-0326

Swanson Photo

(continued from page 7)

car last time, they found nothing. At this point I said they must have my name on file. So, I went in. They looked through my entire address book and asked me about every single person in my address book. They looked through my wallet – they didn't ask me to undress or anything. They asked me every name in my book, and they got to my last name and said, 'Well, I guess you're Sarah Rosenberger,' so I said, 'Yea, I guess so.' I had ID's with pictures. They made me stay there for another ten minutes, and then let me go back on. Now I refuse to go back through.

I have never been busted. I've never – I've associated with people who have been busted, but they don't know that up there. I've never lived with anyone who had been busted, and I didn't have anybody's name in my address book (who had been busted)."

–Sarah, age 22 (pseudonym)

Although numerous factors spur the instigation of a search, the actual procedure is a two-faced process. The 'primary activity' occurs underneath the canopy outside of the Customs office building. To insure against illegal transportation of prohibited materials, the inspection of a 'vessel' and its baggage space are commonplace activities. The determination of residence and intent are also typical of any border crossing. However, "if the people are apprehensive – can not give clear and distinctive answers to the questions – and the questions are not that obtuse that people can not figure out what you're saying – unless there's a language barrier," a search, or the secondary phase of an investigation is likely.

"A search is when the thing is actually gone into from stem to stern and the people in it as well," said O'Conner. "And that search, as far as people are concerned," he added, "can go right down to the skin."

Figures are unavailable regarding the number of secondary searches conducted by the Highgate Springs station in any given period of time. The Port Director did estimate, however, that roughly 15% of all vehicles seeking entry to the U.S. are pulled away from the front canopy and examined.

******

Drug traffic is the major difficulty associated with American college students by both Canadian and American authorities.

"A few years ago they gave a lot more attention to (cars bearing students attempting to enter the U.S. following a concert in Montreal) than they do now," said O'Conner. "If we wanted to – Christ, we could seize them all in on any given night. They almost always have something in them. We're not interested in that anymore – seeing if somebody has a joint in their pocket. If they're stupid enough to have one sticking out of their mouth, then that's their problem."

In cases when possessions are apparently for redistribution, federal prosecution by the U.S attorney is imminent. Civi penalties, which result in on cars where the driver is ignorant of a passenger's possession of a drug (although the individual is technically libel for aiding and abetting).

Flannery Photo

Left, Swanson; Right, Canadian Customs inspector peers in.

Furthermore, continued O'Conner, "a guy with three joints in his pocket is subject to federal prosecution, but it's very likely we wouldn't bother with it. And if we thought it was worthwhile to inform the state, we might... The charge would be aiding and abetting illegal importations. He's got the marijuana in his pocket – or in the body of his car – it makes no difference. He's driving the car, he's the master of the vehicle, the vehicle is under his control. The penalty is against the car, not against the individual, so the car is seized. Literally seized. It's then up to him to petition the government – if he wants to do so – to what amounts to redress of grievances. He would ask for litigation of the penalty based on extenuating circumstances. For example, 'I never did this before, I don't have a criminal history...' "If we want to litigate it, we can say, OK, you can have your car back for $500... $1,000 – it depends on the situation..." –

"The difference amounts to what is deliberate and what is an error in judgment. We don't consider the importation of drugs on the person/in the car an error in judgment. The best that can be said of it is it was stupid, and the worst that can be said is it was deliberate, especially in purposes of selling the thing..."

******

Although area students have quoted Canadian border officials as stating the U.S. Customs Office is "leaning" on the Canadian office to step up the efforts in searching for prohibited materials prior to entry into Canada. O'Conner and a spokesman for both the Canadian Customs branch and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) have denied such allegations. Furthermore, refuting the claims of two UVM students who were busted enroute to a Nazareth concert in May, the RCMP spokesman insisted a quota system is not employed by the Canadian Customs Office.

Whatever the case, Montreal, Nova Scotia, and Quebec City are indeed 'decent' places to visit. If you're anticipating carrying in anything illegal "that makes you happy" (O'Conner) think twice, because it may not be all right. The American Port Director sounded a traditional warning: "Anytime you're in another country you're subject to its laws and that's the end of that," and the RCMP officer explained to me three separate times that if busted, "we would put you in jail for the evening, or until we could find a judge..."

Individuals planning an extended stay abroad should contact the Customs Office regarding taxes and duties prior to leaving.

Summer Health

"The Pill": Convenient, Effective, and Harmful

Oral contraceptives, used since 1960, are the most efficient method of preventing pregnancy, short of sterilization. Because of its great convenience and effectiveness, it is the chosen method by the majority of women using contraceptives. In a college survey, it was found that 76% of the women questioned preferred oral contraception.

Since their introduction, much research has been done to determine what adverse effects these agents have on body composition and functioning. Recent discoveries have proven that "the Pill" may present many significant health hazards.

The most common type of pill is composed of two female hormones, progesterone and estrogen, the latter being implicated as the culprit in bodily changes. In addition to causing alterations in Carbohydrate and fat metabolism, "the Pill" increases the body's need for certain vitamins and minerals, in effect increasing the risk of nutritional deficiencies.

Folic acid is a vitamin that is already marginal in the diets of many women. "The Pill" further lowers its level in blood serum and red blood cells. If the woman happens to be a moderate to heavy drinker of alcohol the ensuing reduced blood level could lead to a severe condition called megaloblastic anemia, characterized by abnormal red blood cells. Folic acid supplements of 1000 mcg/day are highly recommended.

An additional vitamin, $B_6$, is depleted by continued use of oral contraceptives; and like folic acid deficiency, this is amplifyed by drinking alcohol. Because much of the vitamin is already lost from our food when grains are milled or vegetables are frozen, "the Pill" tends to complicate the problem. It was suggested by Dr. Luhby in 1971 and by Dr. Winston in 1973 that the depression and mood and sleep pattern changes sometimes associated with the use of oral contraceptives may be related to a Vitamin $B_6$ deficiency. These symptoms disappeared with supplements of this vitamin (25-50 mg/day).

There are two other B vitamins whose need is increased when taking "the Pill:" Vitamin $B_{12}$ and Vitamin $B_2$. A deficiency of Vitamin $B_{12}$ is associated with pernicious anemia. Vegetarians who use "the Pill" are especially susceptible because of their diet which will be deficient if no animal products are consumed.

A deficiency of Vitamin $B_2$, which is necessary for growth and the utilization of foodstuffs, may precipitate birth defects.

Reduced levels of Vitamin C are also consistently seen, both in the white blood cells — responsible for fighting infection — and in the blood platelets which are intimately involved in clotting. Dr. Kalesh postulated in 1971 that this reduced level of Vitamin C in the blood vessels predisposes one to atherosclerosis — fat accumulation in the arteries.

Other researchers have linked "the Pill" to heart disease, stroke, and associated vessel disorders. An article even appeared in a recent issue of the British Medical Journal saying that continued use of "the Pill" elevates blood pressure and causes hypertension in many women.

The weight gain commonly experienced is most likely due to fluid retention. This weight gain corresponds closely with high blood sugar and abnormal glucose tolerance, as well as an increase in some types of blood fat: all factors associated with an increased risk of heart disease.

Sir Richard Doll, a prominent doctor and scientist, stated in a recent issue of Nature that oral contraceptives are related to an increased incidence of cancer of the liver. Furthermore, says Doll, estrogens given to post-menopausal women may be responsible for the increase in cancer of the uterus lining in the United States.

Oral contraceptives are also responsible for the lowering of Calcium, Magnesium, and Zinc levels in the blood. The implications of this imbalance may have some long-term consequences.

"The Pill" not only lowers certain nutrients in the blood, but is also responsible for elevating the level of some nutrients. Although the elevation of fat-soluable vitamins A, E, and K has been documented, the significance of this rise remains unknown. Also, the increased level of copper combined with a protein can destroy Vitamin C and this may be the reason for its decrease in the blood. Vitamin C supplements should be taken. Although authorities recommend 500 mg/day, I feel that much larger dosages are warranted here — perhaps 2-4 grams/day.

"The Pill" is the most trustworthy contraceptive device. However, other devices which are highly effective and have less side-effects are available. In my opinion, the best amongst these is the diaphragm, which, unlike the IUD (intra-uterine device), rarely gives any local discomfort or bleeding. When used properly with spermicidal jelly or cream, the diaphragm is definitely not as convenient as "the Pill" or IUD. Yet its lack of any adverse effects more than compensate for the time lost in preparation, insertion, and the 20 minute wait.

After considering all of the facts, individuals who elect to continue using "the Pill" should be especially aware of their diet, and should be diligent in their taking of the aforementioned supplemental nutrients. Because of the many risks which can't be abrogated, the use of "the Pill" should really only be confined to emergency procedures when controlling world population. But even here, it is my hope that a less harmful alternative will soon be discovered.

—Barry Gustin

Barry Gustin's Summer Health columns are subject to editorial revision.

WE HAVE THE RIGHT TIRE FOR YOU!

Chittenden County Volkswagon, Inc.
'Authorized Dealer'
1325 Shelburne Rd., So. Burlington
Tel. 658-1130

ben & jerry's homemade

NEW SUMMER MENU

Salad Crepes
Fresh Fruit Crepes
$1.50 - $2.50

Plus Our Specilty:
Coquilles St. Jacques
(Prepared to Order)

New Shady Umbrellas

Corner of St. Paul and College St.
Mon-Thurs 11:30-11 Sun 2-11
Fri & Sat 11:30-12

Tues., Bloody Mary Nite

Happy Hour
Weekdays 4-6:30

Ladies Nite Thursday
9'til closing!

Monday night
shot & draft
for only $1.25

★ Backgammon and Cribbage Sets
★ Shrimp Cocktail for only $1.25
★ Frozen Daiquiris

what ale's you

152 St. Paul St. Burlington 862-1364

Buckin' With The Big Boys

Although rodeos are generally considered uncommon in Vermont, Photo Editor Rob Swanson recently covered one such event in Castleton.

Like baseball, this sport begins with the national anthem. Instead of a half-hearted shout of 'Play Ball,' however, the Saturday Night Family Rodeo in Castleton revs up to a deep-throated "Let's rodeo, boys."

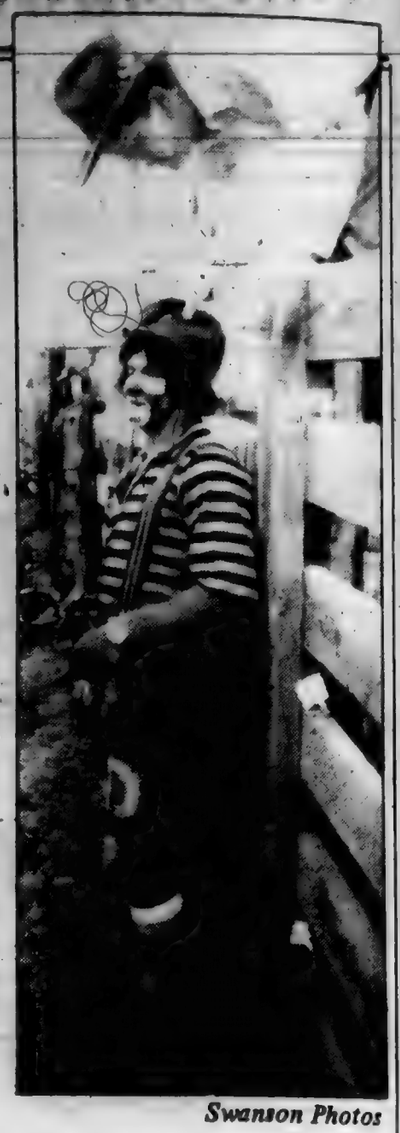
Held every Saturday night at the Pond Hill Ranch, Vermont's only regularly scheduled rodeo is a "family fun thing" sponsored by Pond Hill Ranch owner Harry O'Rourke.

Roughly two hundred people attend on an average Saturday night. These spectators back their pickups and campers up to the corral and kick back to watch two dozen Green Mountain cowboys pound the dirt on top of broncs with names like 'Skyrocket,' and Brahma Bulls like 'Scrap Iron' and 'Paleface.'

Although the prize money or the horses are not of the same caliber as can be found west of the Mississippi, the local cowboys hang on with rock ribbed grit until being tossed by one of Vermont's four-legged finest. About half of the cowpokes are professionals who ride daily at New York's Frontierland rodeo show. The others are farmers or stablehands from around the state.

Since sponsorships are unavailable in the Northeast, Vermont lacks true professional rodeo riders, as prize money is usually just enough to cover expenses for traveling and brew.

But what the cowboy life



Tom Brennan, a Stowe based waiter and part-time Castleton cowboy, recalled a time he brought a girlfriend down to the show. "She didn't know anything about rodeos, so I told her they weren't anything very dangerous at all. Next thing I knew I was in the Rutland Hospital. My horse had KO'd me with a kick to my head that took 17 stitches to close. She doesn't come to the rodeo anymore."

The Pond Hill rodeo usually consists of four events: bronc-busting, in which a barebacked and bristling horse is ridden with one hand and judged on style; calf roping; barrel racing (for the ladies), where a special pony costing anywhere from $700 to $5,000 is raced around a triangular course, circling each point while running against the clock. And, last but far from least, is the bareback bull ride.

Bullriders are judged by the duration of their ride beyond an eight second minimum. In other words, it's how long they forestall the inevitable crash.

Several cowboys were thrown into the dirt instantly after blasting out of the chute or starting gate. After the rodeo clowns distracted one bull long enough for a fallen cowpoke to escape over a fence. I overheard one wizened ranch hand chuckle, "Good old Scrap Iron. Get in front of him and he'll gore you or do his best to."

As I looked up, a bull had just stomped dead center on one grounded cowboy's chest, immediately sending him to the ambulance. "Oh shit," said one of the officials, picking up a list full of signatures, "I hope that one signed his release form."

Swanson Photos

Horn Doggin' in the 7th Inning Stretch

Why the Expos Flop Every Midseason

There is something about baseball players that make them as pastoral as the national past time itself. Athletes in contact sports spend the pre-game moments preparing the mind for the pain the physical body will soon endure.

Baseball players spend their pre-game moments scoping out the stands for beaver. "Hey Sexy," Expo rightfielder Ellis Valentine addresses an admirer as she bends her pulchritudinous body over the railings. Ellis moves as quickly to the stands as he does to first base.

Or how about this exchange with Atlanta Brave Gary Mathews, who makes over $100,000 a year and owns homes in Atlanta, L.A. and S.F.:

Cynic: What's happening, Gary?

GM: Not much.

At this moment a lost Montreal Alouette cheerleader wanders through the player's tunnel onto the field. Mathews turn around as fast as we turn around. What she is wearing would make my mother blush.

Mathews and Cynic (together): Hey are you looking for me?

Mathews glares at us. "Hey, are you interviewing me?"

Cynic: The interview is over.

While we slug it out for chivalry, she leaves to find some intense football players.

Second baseman Dave Cash wears the smallest glove in the National League. "It's a small ball," he explains succinctly.

Tony Perez of Dorian Suit fame wears a batting glove that says "Big Dog." He asks me how to spell Thanks for an autograph hunter. I tell him and he forgets the k. He also keeps two fingers outside of his monstrous first baseman's mitt. Probably to protect his writing hand. It must need all the protection it can get.

******

Bob Horner, the sensational rookie of the Atlanta Braves, has been in the majors for six weeks. He already has five home runs, not bad for a man who graduated Arizona State in June. Not too many players go straight from college to starting in the majors, without being classified as a jock.

Cynic: How does it feel to be in the majors?

Horner: Better than the minors.

********

Ross Grimsley, a former Oriole who signed as a free agent with the Expos for a substantial raise, is earning his money this season. Grimsley will have the dubious distinction of facing Pete Rose the next night as Rose tries to continue his 33 game hitting streak. Grimsley's face turns from Warren Beatty gorgeous into a Nixonion scowl when asked if he plans to go down in the record books as the second Montreal pitcher this year to achieve notoriety. (Earlier this season Steve Rogers gave up Rose's 3,000th hit). "Sure I'll stop Rose. I'll walk him four times." Although Grimsley already has luscious blue eyes, he wears blue contacts for effect. He's from Tennessee. He says his son roots for Cincinnati.

********

Steve Rogers is the ace hurler for the Expos. When queried about what he likes most about Montreal, he replied. "The winters because I spend them in Oklahoma."

********

Expo manager Dick Williams has been in the game for 32 years. He took six months off once. It drove him crazy. Grimsley calls him "a nice guy. He don't say much."

Williams was the last American League manager to win back to back world championships. He did it a few years ago with Reggie Jackson and the Oakland Athletics. Williams says he got along fine with Reggie. "He's a nice guy. He really didn't say much."

********

The Press Box at Olympic Stadium is a freeloader's delight. All you can eat and drink for zippo. Why doesn't Finbar's extend the same courtesy to the press?

A few seats away in the private boxes, the most famous brother act in hockey history is putting them away for free, courtesy also of the management. The only difference is we have to get up and get ours. Theirs is brought by a white-suited bartender. Henri "the Pocket Rocket" Richard has a beautiful tan, 12 layers deep. He didn't get that tan in Montreal. Looks like a Bahamas' job. Maurice "The Rocket" Richard is embarrassingly overweight. They both smoke cigars longer than their French noses. The only thing you have to pay for in the press room is butts which cost $1.15. Even cancer ain't cheap anymore.

********

During the game Expo shortstop Chris Speir hit for a cycle and drove in six runs. It is not everyday one gets to see a game with a cycle (single, double, triple and homer) in it. Happens about four times a season in the majors. Afterwards Speir said, "I didn't know I hit a cycle." That beaver can really take your mind off the game.

********

Ellis Valentine, the sixth leading hitter in the National League, went 0 for 3 (he did walk in the seventh). After the game, he admonished us for having the audacity to ask if it was a bad game. "A bad game! Are you kidding? It is not easy to go 0 for 3. I had to miss the pitch by this much (he measured a foot and a half with his hands.)

After the game he was besieged in the parking lot by fans who wanted his autograph. We asked him that if he got this much adulation when he was hitless, does he ever make it to his car if he goes 2 for 3.

********

Woody Fryman, the 38-year-old wunderkind of the Expos, pitches the best eight innings of his 19th season with the exception of a shaky second in which the Braves scored three runs. After that he only let up one hit. The reporter for UPI is amazed. "Sure looks like a 32-year-old rookie with a beer belly."

********

In the seventh inning Expo Warren Cromartie is hit on the wrist by a Mickey Mahler pitch. The hand goes numb on him and he is removed from the game. In the lockerroom after, he shakes it off saying, "I'm lucky, real lucky. I've been hit everywhere including the head. You gotta be ready."

********

After Fryman takes his ninth inning shower, Mike Garman comes in to mop up the victory. With two outs, he catches pinchhitter Rowland Office spacing with a called third strike. Office wakes up to protest the call to home plate umpire Nick Colosi, but Nick the Quick is already in the lockerroom. Office mumbles a few "Ah Shits" and dogs it to the showers.

********

The Expos, incidentally, won the game 7-3. Tune in to find out if Ross Grimsley will walk Pete Rose four times or will Steve Rogers make his second notch in history.

—Larry Seiden with testimony by Tim L. Thompson

Classifieds

For sale — pet cage (meets S.P.C.A. standards) reg. size medium for air transport. Contact L. Jensen, 16 College Parkway, Winooski, 05404.

For sale — 1970 Oldsmobile Vista Cruiser station wagon, inspected, one owner, $300. 658-2530.

Help wanted... blood donors. No experience necessary. Red Cross Blood Center, 32 N. Prospect St., Burlington (behind John Dewey Hall) Open weekdays 10 to 1. Call 658-6400 for an appointment or walk in.

APT. WANTED- 2 bedroom apartment wanted, need not be furnished, but must have appliances. Starting August 1st. Call evenings, 862-3401

OUTDOOR EQUIPMENT

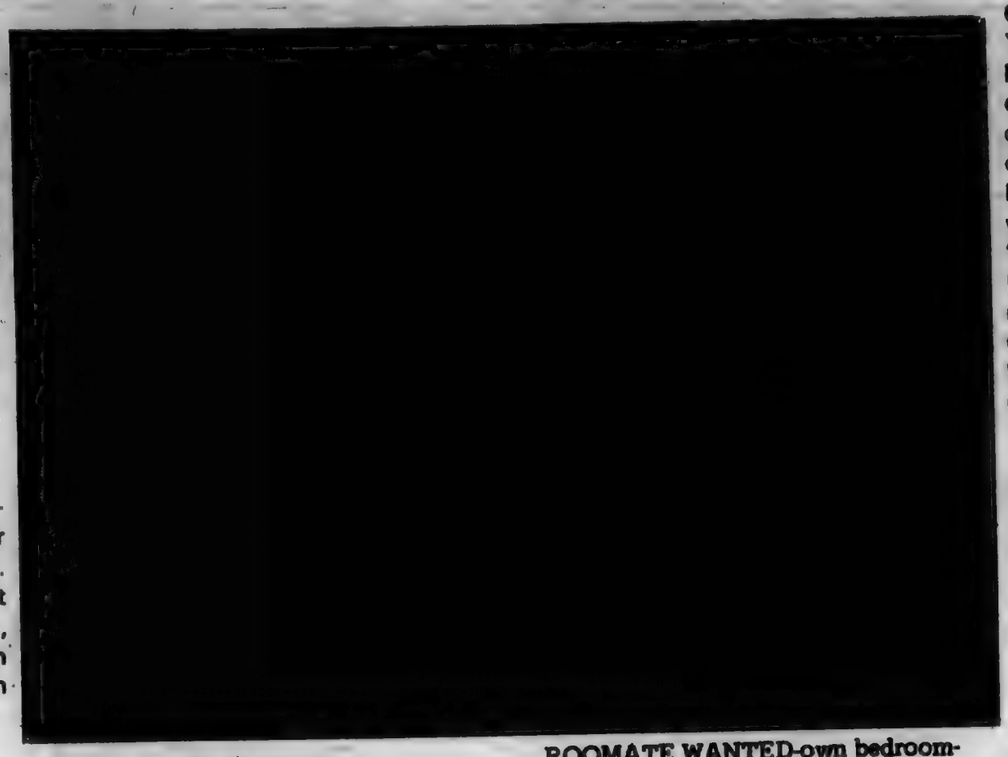
For sale — Fischer coverglass skis — 195 cm — new! Never even drilled for bindings. Wood core. High torsion index. Gleaming red and white. Newly bought at $145, asking a mere $75. Also, Healthways scuba star regulator with 3000 psi guage. A steal at $50! Call Alan at 862-6270 after 9:30 p.m.



ROOMATE WANTED to share 3 bedroom apartment on Pearl St. Rent: $70/mo. plus utilities. Available for month of Aug. Call 862-1664, evenings.

For sale — woman's 10 speed bike. New. Price negotiable. Call 863-4038.

For sale — 1973 Honda 350 four 8,500 miles, excellent condition. Call Great Bill 864-4294.

1976 Fiat 131, 30,000 miles, great shape. 1 owner. Call Sure Pete 864-4294.

Wanted: Juicer. 879-7963.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Guitars

Epiphone double pick-up guitar, $150.
Alvarez 6-string acoustic guitar, $225.
Country-Western 12-string jumbo, $100.

ROOMATE WANTED-own bedroom-Avail. Aug. 15-Call 862-4696, 2-4 p.m. Keep trying!

For sale — brand new Garrard 440 turntable $40 (not compatible with new receiver). Also Panasonic receiver with speakers, $20. Call Teri at 863-4038.

FREE LANCE WRITERS

What's happening in the Northeast? From Vermont's Green Mountains to South Jersey's white sands, from Cambridge to Bryn Mawr, from New York City to Philadelphia, the pace is hectic, exciting. Art, music, sporting events, country fairs and city festivals; campus events and wilderness treks; ocean surfing and snow skiing; sober lectures and plain foolishness. Freelance writers, to cover their region for our new "weekend" travel section, are wanted. File a report with us each week and receive $50! Join our travel team. Contact Monika Wynters at the Aquarian Weekly, 1 the Crescent, Montclair, N.J. 07042 (201-746-0973).

For sale — tabletop fridge, almost new, ideal for room or small apartment. Contact L. Jensen, 16 College Pkwy Winooski, 05404, leave telephone no.

Don't want pyramid mall? Then support citizens for responsible growth's fund-raising campaign. Buy a T- shirt with a "pyramids are foreign to Vermont" logo printed below a typical rural Vermont scene. Green on yellow shirts are 100% cotton; sizes S, M, L, XL. $4.00 each. Call 862-2841 to place order.

When you work up an appetite . . . Come to Finast!

Finast has all your favorite snacks ready . . . we knew you would be hungry!

- Potato Chips
- Snack Crackers
- Fresh Fruits
- Your favorite cold beverages

and just about everything you can think of!

Visit

Mr. Deli

You'll find a world of Eating Pleasure at our own Mr. Deli Counter. You'll find Fresh Cold Cuts, Domestic and Imported Cheeses, Fresh Made Salads and Baked Goods. Our Mr. Deli experts are Ready to Serve you. Ask about our Delicious Party Platters available for your next get-together.

Finast SUPERMARKETS

825 WILLISTON ST. BURLINGTON, VERMONT

July 27 - Aug

| THURSDAY | FRIDAY | SATURDAY | SUND |
|---|---|---|---|
| 27 | 28 | 29 | |

DRAMA
"I Do, I Do," M & M Players, Top of the Square, 7:30 p.m. $4.00.
"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.
"Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info.
"Man of La Mancha," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m. $5.
FILMS
"The Quare Fellow," Irish Studies Program, 103 Rowell Bldg., 8 p.m., free. The movie version of Brendan Behan's play.

DRAMA
"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.
"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Opera," M & M Players, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m., $4.00.
"Man of La Mancha," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Road, 8:30 p.m., $5.00
DANCE
International Folk Dancing, Top of the Square, 6:30 p.m. free admission.
MUSIC
"Sukay," Mountain Greenery, 8:30 p.m., traditional music from the high plateaus of the Andes, for more info. tel. 862-3057.

DRAMA
"Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 2:00 and 8 p.m., 656-2095 for info.
"Play It Again, Sam," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for forther info.
"Man of La Mancha," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m. $6.00, tel. 253-9022 for reservations/info.
"Angel Street," Marlboro Theatre Company, Wilmington Memorial Hall, 8 p.m., tel. 257-0205 for info.
"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," M & M Players, Bolton Valley Ski Area, tel. 879-0195 for info.
MUSIC
Vermont Jazz Festival (see article, page 15), Killington, Vt.
Craftsbury Common Fiddler's Contest, Craftsbury.
Mozart Festival, Hayden on the Porch, Shelburne Farms, 8:00 p.m.
Dave Van Ronk, Top of the Square, 9 p.m., $4.00
TV
"Saturday Night Live," Steve Martin returns, Channels 5 & 6 (NBC).

DRAMA
"I Do, I Do," M
Players, Bolton Valley
Area, tel. 879-0195
info.
TV
ETV, "Person to Interviews from 195
Edward Murrow intervi believe it or don't, Harp
WORKSHOPS
Animal Workshop
Discovery Museum, E Krieg (UVM alum
admission, tel. 878-868
MUSIC
Vermont Jazz Festival
15) Killington, Vt.
Mozart Festival, All-
Farms, 8:00 p.m.
George Gritzbach, Hun
tel. 863-9850 for info.

| 3 | 4 | 5 | |
|---|---|---|---|

DRAMA
"Where's Charley?" Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m. $5, tel. 253-9022 for info/reservations.
"Absurd Person Singular," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.
"Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info.
TV
ETV, "Vermont Report," guest is director of the Shelburne Museum, 7:30 p.m.
ETV, "In Search of the Real America" examines charges that work is boring and meaningless in a segment titled "Worker's Lib." 8:30 p.m.
FILM
"The Wild Bunch," B106 Cook, 8:00 p.m., $1.25.
DANCE
Marlene Pennisch and Dancers, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m., $3.75.
LECTURE
"The Irish in Vermont," Vincent Feeney, B112 Cook, 8 p.m., free.

DRAMA
"Where's Charley?" Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m., $5, tel. 253-9022 for info/reservations.
"Absurd Person Singular," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.
"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info.
"Mattress," Top of the Square, 9:00 p.m., tel. 864-5536 for more info.
"The Freedom of the City," Irish Studies Program, a dramatic reading by members of the City Co., Billings Center, 8 p.m., free.
TV
ETV, "Firing Line" compares American and British attitudes toward public affairs, 10 p.m.
MUSIC
Mozart Festival, Brahms Love Songs, St. Paul's, 8:00 p.m.
DANCE
International Folk Dancing, Top of the Square, 6:30 p.m., free.

DRAMA
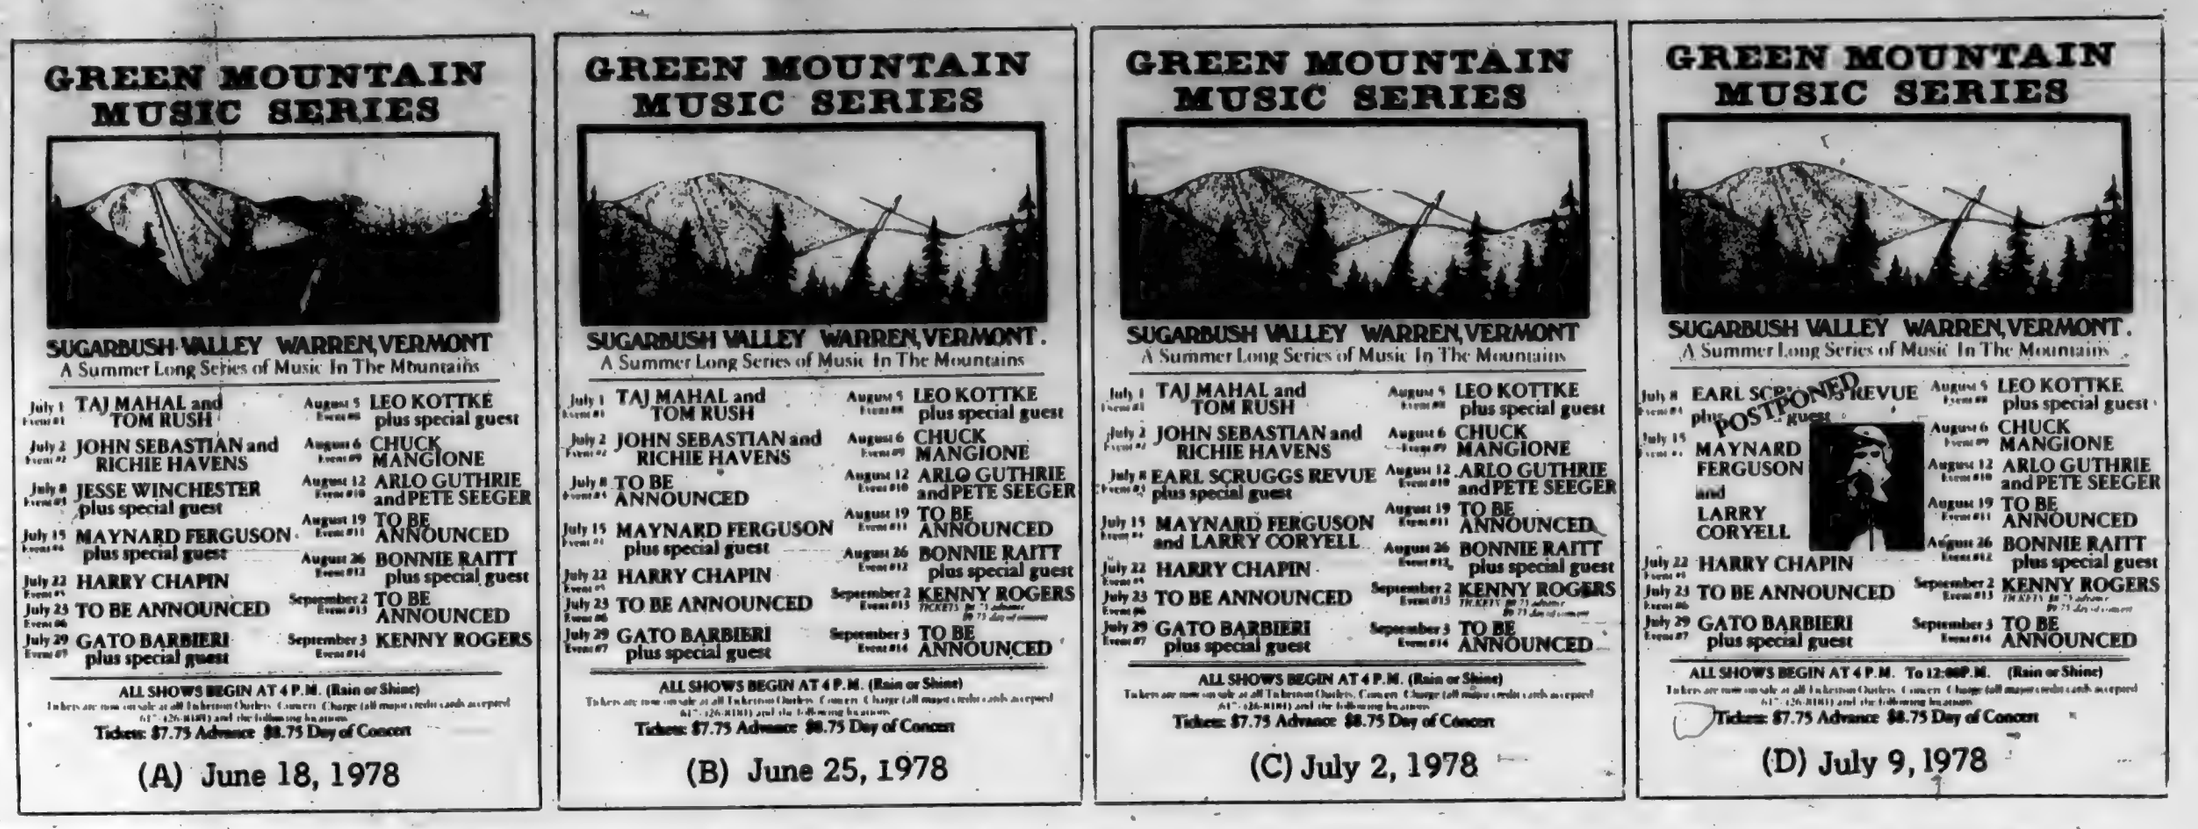
"Where's Charley?" Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m., $6, tel. 255-9022 for reservations and additional info.
"Angel Street," Marlboro Theatre Company, Wilmington Memorial Hall, 8 p.m., tel. 257-0205 for info.
"Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 2 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.



"Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 8 p.m., tel. 656-2095 for info.
"Absurd Person Singular," St. Michaels Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info.
"Mattress," Top of the Square, 9:00 p.m.
MUSIC
Mozart Festival, Coronation Mass, St. Joseph's, 8:30 p.m.

MUSIC
John Stanfield, Hunt's,
Main St., 863-9850 for
Chuck Mangione
Sugarbush Valley,
(advance) $8.75 (da
Upstairs Records (no ch

August 9, 1978

| SUNDAY | MONDAY | TUESDAY | WEDNESDAY |
|---|---|---|---|
| 30RAMADo, I Do," M & M ayers, Bolton Valley Ski rea, tel. 879-0195 for fo.VTV, "Person to Person: Selected terviews from 1953-1959," 7 p.m. dward Murrow interviews Groucho and elieve it or don't, Harpo Marx.ORKSHOPSimal Workshop, "Pet Care," iscovery Museum, Essex, with Carol ieg (UVM alumni), 50 cents mission, tel. 878-8687 for info.t Jazz Festival (see article, page , Killington, Vt.ozart Festival, All-Bach, Shelburne rms, 8:00 p.m.eorge Gritzbach, Hunt's, 101 Main St., l. 863-9850 for info. | 31DRAMAA mime and mask show by Donna Viahoff, Discovery Museum, Essex, 12 p.m., 50 ce[illegible] 878-8687 for info."Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info.LECTUREIrish Studies Program, Filmed interview with Eamonn Valera, Ireland's elder statesman, 103 Royall Bldg. 8 p.m., free.  | 1DRAMA"Absurd Person Singular," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info."Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info."Angel Street," Marlboro Theatre Company, Wilmington Memorial Hall, 8 p.m., tel. 257-0205 for info.TVETV, "The Edelin Conviction," 9 p.m. A "docu-drama" centering on the 1975 trial of Boston's Dr. Kenneth Eddin for manslaughter as a result of a legal abortion.MUSICMozart Festival, Airs and Horns, UVM Recital Hall, 8:00 p.m.FILMS"Mickey One," B106 Cook 8 p.m., $1.25.LECTURE"The Irish in the United States," Lawrence McCaffrey B112 Cook, 8 p.m., free. | 2DRAMA"Where's Charley?" Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m., $5. tel. 253-9022 for reservations/info."Absurd Person Singular," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info."Othello," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info.KIDSChildren's Needlepoint Workshop, Discovery Museum, Essex, materials provided, but $1 fee. 10 a.m., tel. 878-8687 for info.LECTURESMrs. Jean Howe discusses her lifetime experience in birding, Discovery Museum, Essex, 8 p.m., tel. 878-8687 for info.DANCEMarlene Pennison and Dancers, Top of the Square, 8:30 p.m., $3.75.MUSICMozart Festival, Lake Cruise- Sold Out. |
| 6USIChn Stanfield, Hunt's, 101 ain St., 863-9850 for info.[illegible] Mangionne, arburn Valley, 4 p.m. $7.75 dvance) $8.75 (day of show) at stain Records (no checks). | 7DRAMA"Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info. | 8DRAMA"Angel Street," Marlboro Theatre Company, Wilmington Memorial Hall, 8 p.m., tel. 257-0205 for info."Absurd Person Singular," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info."Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, tel. 656-2095 for info."Sleuth," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m., $5, tel. 253-9022 for reservations/info.FILMS"Marlowe," B106 Cook, 8 p.m., $1.25.MUSIC"I Am of Ireland," Treasa O'Driscoll, B112 Cook 8 p.m., free. A concert of traditional Irish Song. | 3DRAMA"Twelfth Night," Champlain Shakespeare Festival, Royall Tyler Theatre, 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. tel. 656-2095 for info.  "Absurd Person Singular," St. Michael's Playhouse, tel. 655-2000 for info."Sleuth," Stowe Summer Theatre, Mountain Rd., 8:30 p.m. $5, tel. 253-9022 for info.LECTURE"Christians at War," Irish Studies Program, B112 Cook, 8 p.m., free. A BBC documentary dealing with the conflict in Ulster.MUSICRecital, Donna Grey, Soprano, Four Winds Gallery, Ferrisberg, 8:00 p.m., $3.50 adults, $2.50 for students. |

Series on the Skids: There Ain't Much Green In

The lush mountains of Vermont have proved to be a successful setting for music-lovers to listen and clap to their hearts' content with the famous Craftsbury Common Fiddlers Contest and the Vermont Jazz Festival held at Glen Ellen for the last two years.

By employing 'target' advertising techniques in urban publications, the three Green Mountain Music Series' promoters hoped to bring in fellow New Englanders and fill even more ears this year. The fourteen event series in Warren, featuring such 'big' names as Taj Mahal, Chuck Mangione and Bonnie Raitt, could be, as promoter Neil Rohrs from Waitsfield said, "one of the finest in the East."

In the month following the opening July 1 Taj Mahal performance, however, five of the seven scheduled events have been cancelled – the other two attracting less than a thousand people each.

The questionably priced tickets ($7.75 advance, $8.75 day of concert) have forced young and low-budget pockets to be selective. Tickets are selling well for later concerts like Chuck Mangione (Aug. 6) and Arlo Guthrie (Aug. 12), according to Rohrs, a co-partner in the Great American Dream, Inc. Yet the Corporation's potential profits from charging the same ticket price for Chuck Mangione ($10,000 and up per show) as Earl Scruggs ($3,000 – $3,500 per show) have raised questions in the minds of many price conscious, musically aware local consumers. While one UVM summer session student said, "For the talent and the plastic atmosphere when you get there, I'd say it's a big rip off." Boston promoter Freddy Taylor personally maintained his ticket prices are "the cheapest in the country," but added "the key to any booking is if you have an act people want to see."

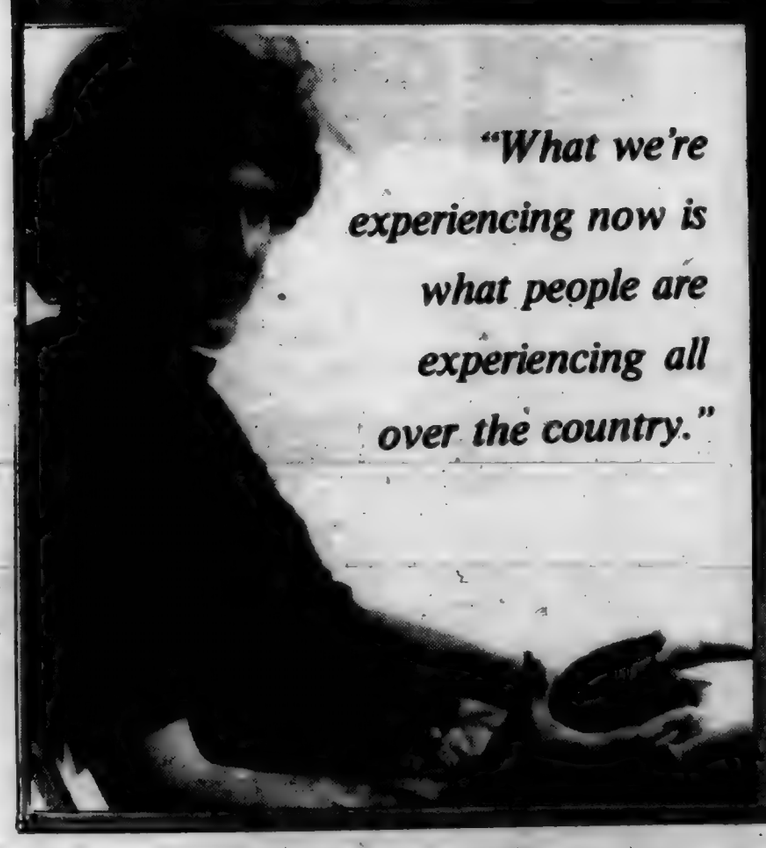
However, John Sebastian and Richie Havens managed to hold over only 700-900 people from the Taj concert on the previous day. Maynard Ferguson with special guests Dave Brubeck and home-talent Johnny Cassel played for a similar sized audience on July 15th.

The low opening weekend turnout combined with the costs of area security, and advertising in the New York Times, Village Voice, and Boston Phoenix, to name a few, surely made for an economic loss. Accordingly, Rohrs confirmed the promoters had to expand the show by pushing the starting time back to 1:00, converting the concert into an all-day event. "From an economic and business point of view, we needed to put on more music and shoot for the local market," Rohrs said in a telephone interview. Taylor said it differently: "We expanded to an afternoon event to take advantage of a good local opportunity."

Local criticism has been aimed at the promoters for realizing their errors only after the consequences have been felt. One source said the series was "poorly planned" and been neither "thought out," nor "researched enough." Furthermore, claimed another, the alleged accumulation of debts will not aid other promoters seeking credit. Indeed, errors seem numerous: The advertising in Boston for the Taj show proved somewhat futile because the artist was giving a benefit concert in the hub city the same weekend.

Despite the 'rain or shine' advertising, the Earl Scruggs concert was cancelled. Taylor said the cancellation resulted from the promoters' failure to erect a roof, which would disspell the possibility of "electrocution" from adverse weather. "That was our fault," admitted Taylor. According to one informed source, however, the Scruggs cancellation was due to the financial risk for the promoters: "Coming off a bad weekend, it was questionable whether Scruggs would bring the money around."

The Gato Barbieri show (July 29) has been cancelled because special guest Phoebe Snow, the tour's other headliner, cancelled all her performances. (Phoebe Snow hired a new manager, Mrs. Billy Joel, who did not want her touring with Barbieri).



Most recently, however, the Harry Chapin concert was cancelled, or as the Free Press four inch advertisement on the day prior to the concert said, "postponed." Chapin is performing in Ludlow, Vermont for the benefit of the World Hunger Project, which he co-founded. The August 19 concert in Ludlow was confirmed as too close in distance and time by the promoters.

"That was a bad booking move," said Rohrs. "We support that project though, and our Chapin ticket can be used there or exchanged for money or another of our concerts."

Ironically, as one looks further down the calendar, the Green Mountain Music Series has a "to be announced" concert scheduled for the same day as the Chapin benefit. Jesse Winchester's agent, Monterrey Penninsula from California, confirmed he was booked for Warren on August 19.

Larry Coryell was advertised as a special guest for the Maynard Ferguson event, but pulled a 'no show,' claiming he couldn't return from California, according to the promoters.

Initial posters for the Music Series boasted 14 events for the Mad River Valley this summer. Four of them were "to be announced." The first such event, Earl Scruggs, was cancelled. The second, scheduled for July 23rd, one day after the scheduled Chapin concert, "was just not there," said Taylor. "In the very beginning, we just put it in and thought we'd do

These Mountains

(E) July 27, 1978

The Key:

A. The original Series schedule

B. Jesse's cancelled, Roger's is shifted

C. Enter Scruggs

D. Exit Scruggs

E. Current Cynic scorecard something."

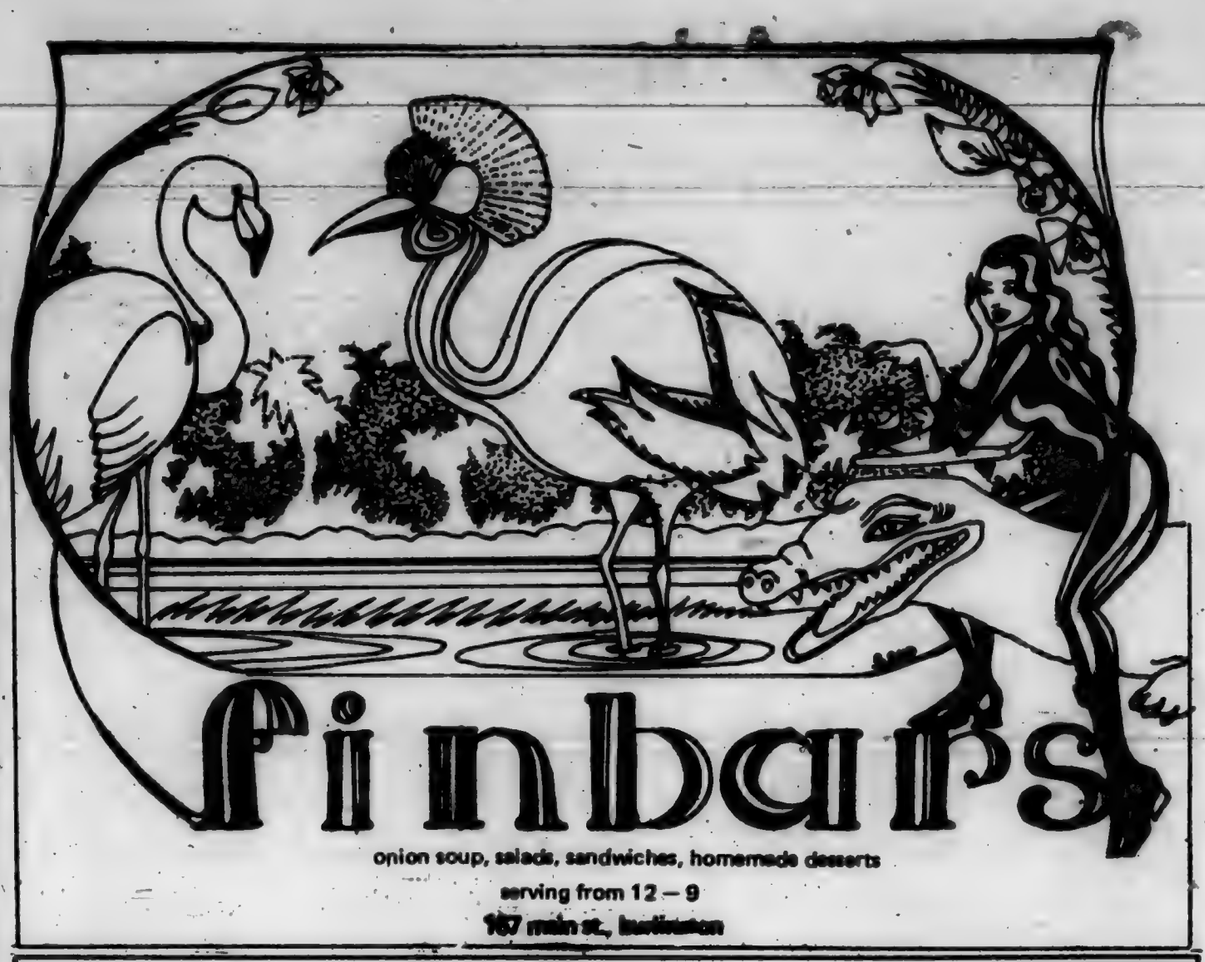
"You must understand," he continued, "it is almost impossible to sustain two acts in two days unless you have two really good acts." Nonetheless, the three promoters of the Music Series (Taylor, Rohrs, and George Paige) had originally scheduled two-day events.

The Leo Kotke event (Aug. 5) has also been cancelled, because it was the day prior to the Mangione performance. Monterrey Penninsula of California, Kotke's agent, however, still has him booked for that date, at press time. Taylor insists they are attempting to switch Kotke to play with Mangione on August 6 or with Winchester on August 19.

********

This is the first year for the Green Mountain Music Series, and as Taylor said, "we were over optimistic for the first time around."

"We came into an area that's never had concerts before, with a concept to develop a series. And we're trying to make this thing work. It is the nature of this business (that one must advertise before contracts and everything else are fully settled.)"



"We are trying to balance it by giving it a good program," he said. The expanded events will be hiring some Vermont talent into the remaining shows, for example, Paul Asbell, the best Vermont jazz guitarist, and the Birdland Quartet will play at the Mangione concert. Rohrs affirms the promoters are "calling for good local talent."

The initial poor turnout, cancellations and poor planning have caused problems, preventing the Sugarbush ski area from shaping into a summer haven for music, as it was hoped.

The whole promotion of the Green Mountain Music Series, including the out-of-state and tourist money that capitalized it, has come under scrutiny. It is only hoped that the remaining concerts will reflect a sense of responsibility – not only for the promoters sake, but for the area as well.

–Alan Marshall

Alan Marshall is the Features Editor for the Vermont Cynic

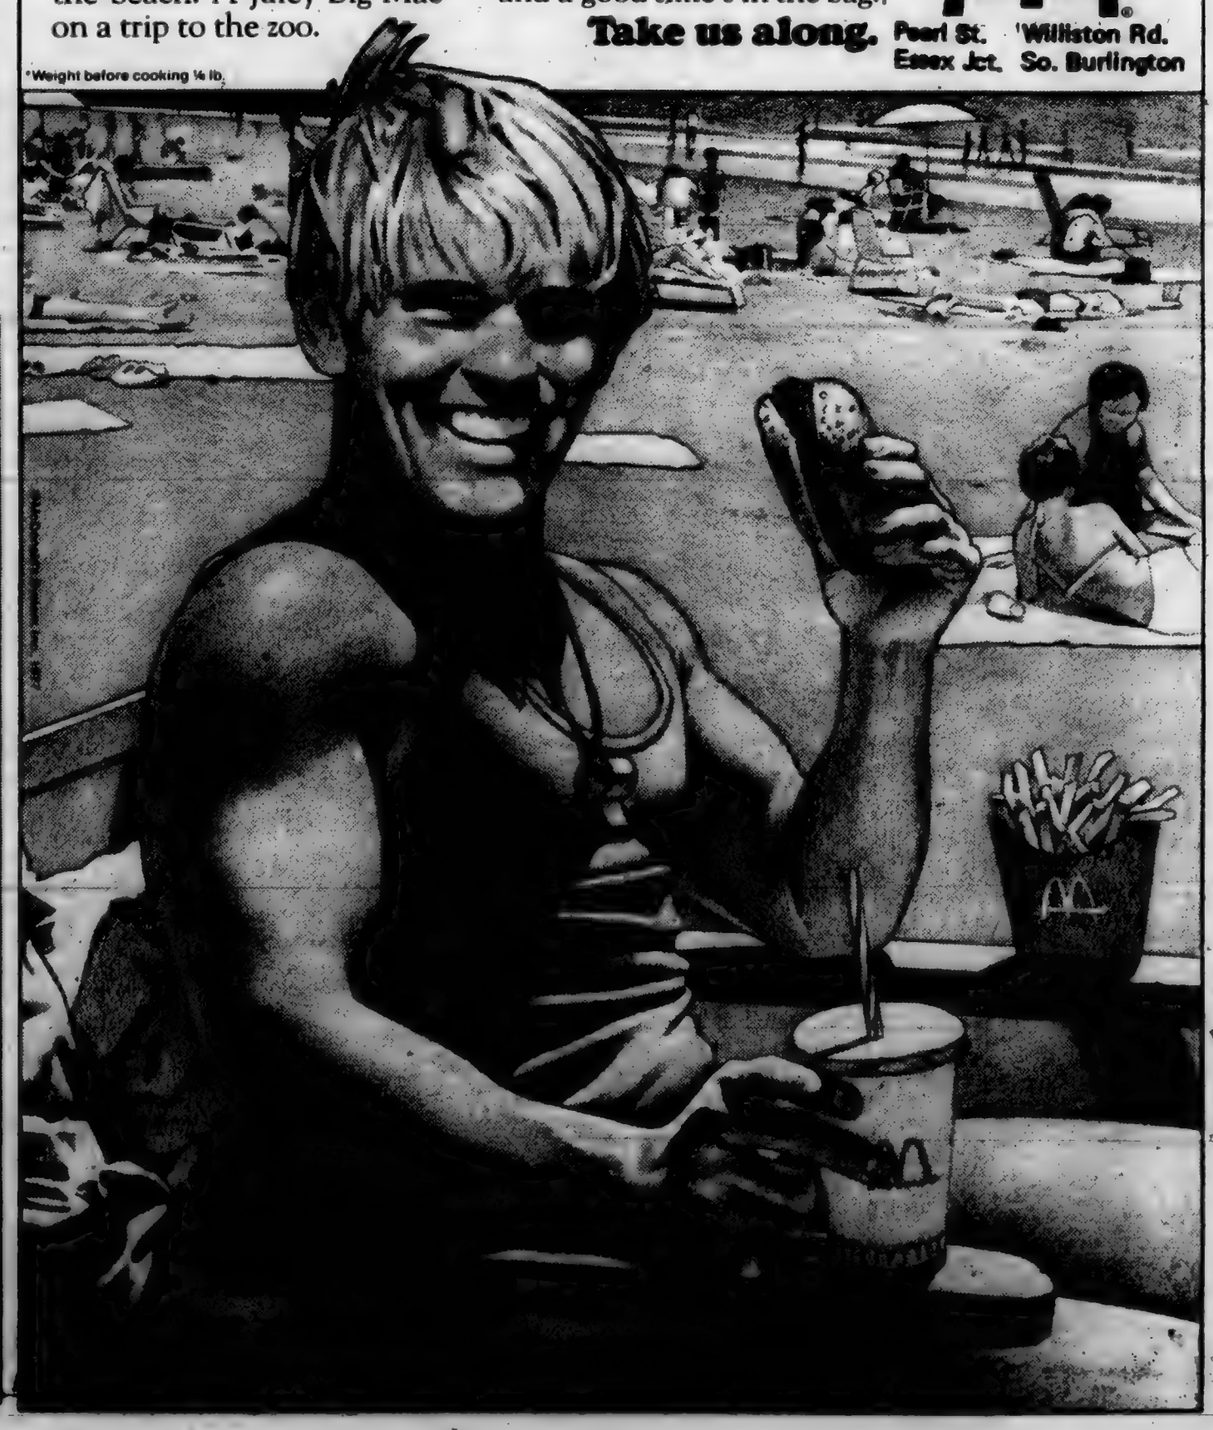
Certified Instruction
Repairs, Rentals, Underwater Gear
NAUI SAFETY THROUGH EDUCATION
northern divers inc.
Open 10–6
Seven days a week
100 Main St.
862–3881
"Vermont's Most Complete Dive Shop"

Another great place to eat out.
Brought to you by McDonald's.

Any place is a great place to eat out. As long as you take McDonald's along.

Try a Quarter Pounder® at the beach. A juicy Big Mac™ on a trip to the zoo.



Or a Filet-O-Fish™ and a Coca-Cola® under that big oak tree in the park.

Take us wherever you go and a good time's in the bag..

Take us along.

We do it all for you®
McDonald's®
Pearl St. Essex Jct.
Williston Rd. So. Burlington

*Weight before cooking ¼ lb.

THE UNOFFICIAL GREEN MOUNTAIN SERIES QUIZ!

Why was the Earl Scruggs concert cancelled?

a.) Earl's truck was stuck in Nashville b.) Earl's afraid to get wet
c.) The promoters could have taken a bath

Why were the concerts' starting times moved to 1 pm?

a.) It gets dark
b.) It gets chilly
c.) the promoters could have taken a bath

Swanson Photo

"I think it's the people who didn't attend the concert who are more able to criticize."

had a lot of middle-of-the-road artists that draw a medium crowd. But now we're really going to go for it and try to get major talent in here and still try to keep the traffic and everything within tolerable limits. So, the Earl Scruggs postponement and the Harry Chapin postponement is all actually in a way fitting into our plans for the future, and that is what we want to do is go for major artists – not that they're not major artists, but what we're really talking about is blockbuster acts.

Cynic: What prompted a switch from your original attitude?

Paige: That's interesting. That's an interesting question. Um... well I think first of all...

Cynic: (tape recorder for battery test)

Paige: It's on the red, huh?

Cynic: It registers from the red. Anyway...

Paige: In originally laying out the series, we wanted a whole cross section of shows, and we wanted a country show, a jazz show. And in order to do such an ambitious thing like that you, I mean you have such a large number of artists to draw from – well I don't know.

Cynic: (repositions tape recorder)

Paige: You having troubles there?

Cynic: Nope; OK.

Paige: Well, we just felt that the market area can support large acts like that. You know this is really virgin territory. Artists either come to Montreal or New York, and during the wintertime when UVM's open, they certainly go to UVM. But in the summertime around this area, there's really not much happening, so we found out that this area can support major artists moreso than they can – Vermonters, it's not easy to get them out of their houses and one of the best ways to do that is I think to bring them high high concert acts (heh-heh). When I say high, I mean they're all high, but um... major concert acts.

Cynic: OK, the last question... Do you think the number of cancellations and the apparent dissatisfaction by students, concertgoers, etc. with the series will have any effects on future projects by local concert promoters?

Paige: On local concert promoters? I don't see it as having much effect on any other local concert promoters. We really don't see it as having much effect on us right now. Our ticket sales on advance concerts are going extremely well. Anybody who's attended our concerts, believe me, came away really happy and pleased. I think it's the people who didn't attend the concerts who are more able to criticize. These problems that happened are beyond our control. And we've been pretty faithful to the series overall. We're here forever; I mean we're here on a long term basis, and certainly next year will be better than this year, and the following year will be even better than that year, so I don't see in any way how it can affect local promoters, and I can't see how it's going to affect us too much. People grumble, but we have coming up in August one of the most incredible line-ups that you can imagine...

Cynic: We shouldn't anticipate any further cancellations?

Paige: No, we anticipate no cancellations or postponements, and that's you know – that's it.

Cynic: That's it.

Good-bye "Electro-big-sound"

The "Electro-Big-Sound" brands may be found in just about any kind of store. They are easy to spot because the speakers are usually as big as a house, and the control panel looks like the cockpit of a modern jet aircraft.

The next time you see one, listen to it, really listen to it. After a few minutes the bass starts sounding like someone is hitting the side of a rubber boat with an oar (Thud! Thud! Thud!). The highs sound like a tray of silverware dropped onto a floor (crash), tinkle, tinkle). If a vocal sounds like the singer is singing in a bucket, or through a megaphone, don't be surprised. (If you can't hear any of those things you might consider having your hearing checked).

We could go on for hours talking about how the turntable plays a $7 record like a diamond cutter cuts glass . . . so we won't. Instead, we'd like to offer you an alternative to those "Electro-Big-Sound" brands that don't sound that bad . . . they just don't sound that good either. Good-Bye "Electro-Big-Sound" . . .

$329

Just $32 down
and $14.85 a month

Hello System $329

System $329 is "An amazing blend of Hi-Fi components at a "Compact price." Just $14.85 a month with $32.00 down.*

The BSR 2260 turntable is fully automatic and equipped with a diamond stylus. You can stack up to 5 records and it will play all of those records and shut off automatically.

The control center of system $329 is the JVC JR 61W stereo receiver. It offers more than any "Electro-Big-Sound" compact could, like 15 watts each channel, and FM sensitivity of 1.8 uV to bring in those distant FM stations clearly.

The Advent 3 speakers of system $329 are not as big as a house, in fact, they are "compact." The Advent 3's bring you all of the music. The bass notes are solidly robust, and teh highs are crisp and precise, never shrill or harsh. And a singer sounds as though they are singing in your living room.

Why should you spend your hard-earned money for Electro-Big-Sound when you can afford exceptional sound from System $329.

*For qualified customers, based on 24 monthly installments, with $32 down payment at an annual interest rate of 18.11%.

Lafayette radio electronics Creative Sound

• 157 Pearl St., Essex Jct. • Barre-Montpelier Rd., Barre • "In the Mall between Kmart & Martin's," South Burlington

Vermont Jazz Festival

In its third year, the annual Vermont Jazz Festival has swollen out of the Glen Ellen ski area and into Killington, where on July 29 and 30, an expected 8,000 jazz enthusiasts will swarm on the slopes of the snowshed area.

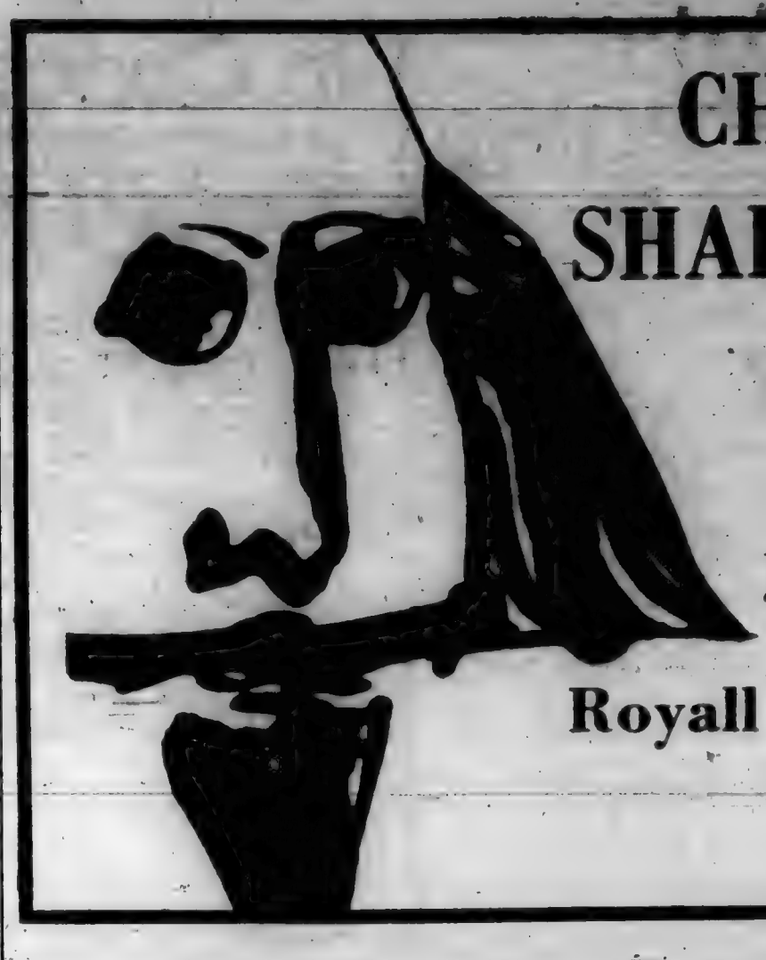
Originally just a mild moneymaker, the Vermont Jazz Festival has attracted bigger and more far-reaching crowds every year. Advertised heavily not only in Vermont but in New York, Boston, and Montreal as well, the festival has become too hot for the Mad River Valley to handle. Last year, when more than 6,000 people a day came to hear the likes of Chick Corea and Maynard Ferguson, only desperate organization prevented the festival from becoming a complete fiasco. Inadequate parking was combatted by running a number of shuttle buses around the valley, rescuing people who had to leave their cars miles from the concert site. Fields were mown along route 100 and converted into makeshift campgrounds with dozens of portable toilets standing along the perimeter like soldiers. Hundreds of cars and tents were packed into each of the three campsites which, lined in neat, colorful rows, soon looked like some abstract artist's impression of a suburb.

Because of the tight organization, the crowded conditions added to the spirit of the festival rather than detract from it. [illegible] concert each day, when even the buses weren't big enough to take everyone back to town, those who were lucky enough to score a parking spot at Glen Ellen packed as many people as they could into their cars and gave them a lift. At night in the campgrounds, people from all over the northeast, bonded together not only by their common interest in jazz, sat around fires playing music and exchanging food, drugs and stories.

When the inevitable rain came — some think it's an institution for it to rain at least 50% of the time — people either shared rain ponchos, tents, and any available shelter or gave up and romped together in the rain and mud.

Despite the financial benefits that the festival brought to the winter resort area, the Glen Ellen residents' opinion of the festival is generally low. "It just got too big. We can't handle that many people," said one Valley Area Association member, who noted that the drug scene was "awful."

Promoters expect that the Killington area will be more than adequate to accommodate the crowds. Numerous parking areas and four hundred campsites will be available at the concert site. Camping is by reservation only and will cost $5.00 a night per site. Those interested should call 422-3757.



A common complaint regarding the actual music program is that not enough jazz is offered. Hard core jazz fanatics scorned the addition of Roberta Flack to the last year's program, claiming that she is "not really a jazz singer." Promoters claim, however, that the festival is "an audience event." "The important thing is to reach as wide an audience as possible — that's what draws a crowd," said one organizer.

This year's program indeed offers something for everybody. From the contemporary disco/funk sound of Herbie Mann to the traditional ragtime style of Earl "Fatha" Hines, Saturday's program will be a tribute to the diversity of styles and backgrounds that characterize the art of jazz. Also appearing Saturday are Al Jarreau, the "acrobat of scat" who won the Downbeat Readers' Poll last year as Best Male Vocalist, Ramsey Lewis, Marva Josie, and the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Band. Miles Davis once said of Jones/Lewis Band, "I'd rather hear Thad Jones miss one note than hear Freddie Hubbard play twelve." Well known for their rich, full arrangements of brass, flutes and reeds interspersed with Lewis' soaring flueglehorn solos, the band should give an interesting, if not amazing performance.

On Sunday, Ray Charles will lug his entire ensemble, including the female vocal group, the Raelettes, and the massive Ray Charles Orchestra to the mountain and give an added touch of Las Vegas to the festival. Betty Carter, considered to be one of the few remaining "real" jazz vocalists, will be appearing, in addition to Stanley Turrentine, Noel Pointer, Gap Mangione, and Vermont's own Paul Asbell.

The music will begin at 11 a.m. each day and continue into the evening. Tickets are $13 for a single day and $22.50 for both days (advance) and $15 or $25 at the gate. Performances will be held rain or shine, so be prepared — there has always been a generous supply of rain at the festival. Tickets may be purchased locally at What's Your Beef?, Tech Hi Fi, Upstairs Records, Mt. Jam Music in Stowe, Buch Spieler in Montpelier and All Good Things in Middlebury.

—Vaune Davis

CHAMPLAIN SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL
1978
July 6-Aug. 12
Royall Tyler Theatre
UVM Campus
656-2094

CARBUR'S OUTDOOR SURVIVAL KIT TO GO

Carbur's 'Grandwich,'
With a Jumbo Cold Drink,
Pickle & Chips, and a
Juicy Red Apple

CALL AHEAD AND PICK IT UP
Burl. 864-9631
Plattsburg 561-3663

BOOK & RECORD SALE

★ ALL records are on sale
(and record connoisseurs call our collection one of the very best)

★ Books discounted from 10% to 80%
(and we have thousands and thousands and thousands from which to choose)

Sale ends Saturday, Aug. 5th

These are Middlebury 'Middle-of-the Summer' Sale days, when you can buy clothing, sports equipment - - just about everything! - - on sale at ALL the stores. Come to Middlebury, shop, have lunch - - and have a good day!

Vermont's Foremost Book & Record Shop

The Vermont Book Shop

38 Main Street 388-2061 Middlebury

SUMMER CRUISE SERIES II

PREVIOUS SHOWS HAVE SOLD OUT!!!

GET YOUR TICKETS EARLY!!!

Fri. Aug. 4

Friday Night Fever

Disco on the Lake with Light Show and Prizes

Fri. Aug. 11

John Lincoln Wright and the Sour Mash Boys

Fri. Aug. 25

John Cassel

Back by Popular Demand

Sun. Sept. 3

Labor Day Bash Bongo Moon

Final Show Sat. Sept. 9

Ferry Champlain leaves King St. dock at 8

Tickets available at
Emerald City of Oz 71 St. Paul St
Bailey's Music 88 Church Street
$6.00 advance $6.50 at the dock
Refreshments Available
Information and Reservations 862-4298
Wizard Productions

A Gift Shop For Adults... and Other Children

Gifts
Decoratives
Toys

Geppetto's

19 Church Street
(Next To Prestons)

In Concert

Marvelous Mozart

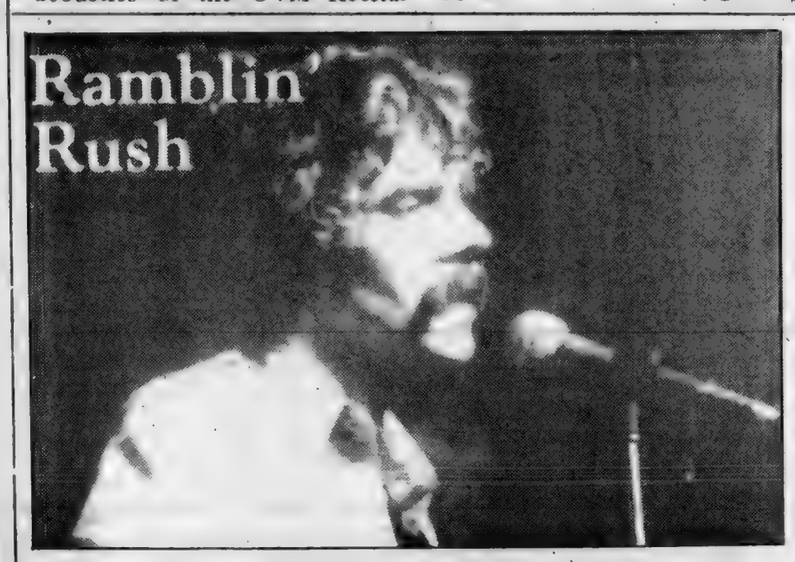
The Fifth Annual Vermont Mozart Festival opened its first week July 16 with several superb performances in a variety of settings. The award-winning Emerson String Quartet, the seasoned New York Chamber Soloists, and master pianist Menahem Pressler commenced with inspired renditions of two Mozart pieces and one by Beethoven. After intermission, the UVM Choral Union under the direction of James Chapman proved a pleasing addition to the repertoire.

On July 18, Israeli-American Menahem Pressler turned in a marvelous display of piano virtuosity. Aided by the superb acoustics of the UVM Recital Hall, Pressler played with uncanny precision and wonderful feeling.

July 19 was the "Five Winds Cruise," the first of three ferry boat concerts on the lake. The five winds are comprised of flutist John Solum; Melvin Kaplan, oboe; Anthony Miranda, French horn; Morris Newman, bassoon; and Anand Devendra, clarinet. The five winds are each nationally renown, and blended together beautifully.



July 21, the Festival returned to the Recital Hall for the organ music of Dr. James Chapman. A professor of music at UVM, Dr. Chapman proved that he has more than just an academic approach to music. Beginning with the requisite Bach fugue, Chapman dexterously played lesser known works by Clerambault and Albrechtsberger interspaced by Bach and Mozart's curious Fantasia.

On July 22, the Mozart Festival returned to the regal setting of the Main House at Shelburne Farms for the first of four concerts. Buoyed by the return of gifted violinist Helen Kwalwasser, The New York Chamber Soloists gave a thoroughly enjoyable All-Handel performance.

sticky evening, the music was brilliant, and only the bugs deterred the performers from giving an encore.

Tom Daniels

Ramblin' Rush

New Hampshire folk rocker Tom Rush and band play for a full house at R.W. Hunt's Monday night. Rush soloed several songs, including "Merrimac County," "Wind on the Water," and "Making the Best of a Bad Situation," while his four piece backup band, consisting of Dana Perry on lead guitar, Paul Tamasello on bass, Tim Jackson on drums, and Larry Luddcke on keyboards filled out the sound during the remainder of the set. "Williston's Favorite Son" Martin Grosswendt warmed up the crowd with a half hour of bluesy country.

—Rob Swanson

Do It, Doc

Billed as "the greatest flat-picker who ever lived," Doc Watson justified his reputation with a spell-binding array of folk and country tunes at Shelburne Farms July 20. Playing without his son Merle, the Doc proved he is ageless as he rippled on both banjo and guitar and warbled beautifully. Songs included classics "Shady Grove," "Nine Pound Hammer," and "T for Texas." The Doc maintained a warm rapport with his audience throughout the concert and finished with a superb rendition of that great ballad "Tennessee Stud."

Tom Daniels

Jazz Jamboree

Maynard Ferguson dragged his 14 piece band up to Sugarbush on July 15 and proved that big band jazz is alive and well and living outside the studio. Few bands but Ferguson's, whose tight, full arrangements and distinctive style give him wide appeal, could draw the crowds necessary to support such a big act. Playing everything from Joe Zawinul's "birdland" and "Over the Rainbow" to more commercialized tunes such as the themes from "Rocky" and "Star Wars," Ferguson's show was a clean mix of precise orchestration and wild improvisation.

Dave Brubeck with his "new Dave Brubeck Quartet," however, did not fare so well. Composed of himself and his sons Danny (drums), Chris (electric bass and trombone), and Darius (electric piano and synthesizer), the quartet lacked the coherence and just plain skill that has marked Brubeck's past endeavors. It was sad indeed to see such a great musician fall victim to such musical nepotism.

John Cassel opened the concert and received a well-deserved award for his contribution to Vermont music from Richard Snelling, but on the campaign trail.

V.R.P.

Recent Cuts

Chicago Transit Authority
Live in Concert
Magnum MR-604

Given a recent lawsuit by Chicago and their current record company (CBS) against Magnum Records, who the band contends have released an album whose rights belong to CBS, and the recent accidental death of guitarist Terry Kath, it seemed like a good idea to do an interview with either Chicago's keyboardist, Robert Lamm, or their producer, Jim Guercio, regarding the live album's release, and the possibility of a shift from the band's recent more meaningful style of play. With the boldness of a rabbit in the night sprinting toward an oncoming Mack truck, I made it through Rolling Stone, CBS, and the Chicago management's front line, only to be squashed by their personal rep's secretary. The lights became too bright.

********

Although Chicago's political voice has been of decreasing significance since 1972, the band remains amazing in their ability to continually sell a product. In 1976, the off-beat single "If You Leave Me Now" carried the comparatively jazzless Chicago X album to a platinum record award. Last year I picked up Chicago XI, listened to it four times, wrote a rather negative review ("This album should have never been recorded...") and returned it as a defective record the following day, only to find it already flying up Billboard's charts. Fortunately, Chicago has had better days, which occasionally are captured on this controversial bootlegger's dream come true.

Chicago Transit Authority – Collector's Edition is a partial soundtrack from a 1969 Rock and Roll Revival Concert held in Toronto. Inscribed on this album's outer jacket is an epitaph to Kath:

Chicago Transit Authority... Recently one of the original members was involved in a fatal accident. His death stunned the music world. Since this album represents one of the last performances of the Chicago Transit Authority, it is respectfully dedicated to Terry Kath.

Indeed, an emotional expression by Magnum Records, but not by Chicago who, with their current record label CBS, are now suing Magnum not only for illegally manufacturing an album which they had no rights to (infringement of copyright and trademark laws), but additionally for the exploitation of Terry Kath's name. The Kath aspect withstanding, this band, whose debut liner notes read "...(the band) endeavors to be judged in terms of contribution above rather than the tag fixed upon it..." apparently has lost its face in the face of the millions of dollars each member has been estimated to possess in 1978.

Technically, this disc is a truly horrendous recording. The splices are terrible and the mix is detractingly uneven. You'll immediately appreciate the technical achievements of Running On Empty.

Musically, however, this is the Chicago that captured the imagination of even the Dead cult during the latter sixties. They were classically jazz ("Introduction Song"); sentimental ("Beginnings"); yet rockers ("Poem 58"). 'I, a former Chicago freak, find Robert Lamm's vocals on the live version of "I'm a Man" more than pleasantly nostalgic, given the fact, he's burnt out his voice and never will vocally wail again. In short, CTA – Collector's Edition is certainly worthless in the broad sense, and of limited value to Chicago-heads. Buy it at your own risk.

Ely Hubbard

Ely Hubbard is a Burlington free-lance writer.

Why Do People Go Solo?

The Prodigal Son Falls Down

Single
Bill Champlin
Full Moon/Epic JE 35367

The Sons of Champlin to this day remain America's least known band extraordinaire. They were the first band in rock to utilize a horn section, which was before Blood, Sweat & Tears and the Chicago Transit Authority. This San Francisco band goes all the way back.

But if you're interested in getting into this band that makes wonderfully light, synchopated, rock with a delightful and positive approach, don't pick up Bill Champlin's first (and I hope only) solo album. Try Follow Your Heart, The Sons or even Welcome to the Dance. But, I repeat, let this one warp on the record store's shelf.

Bill Champlin has always been a first rate keyboard man and that still shows on this album. Unfortunately his songwriting talents and arrangements are geared for those who will think he is a newcomer to the Top 40, pure cosmic fluff.

Of the nine songs on this record, seven sound like outtakes from Boz Scagg's Silk Degrees. So much so, in fact, that after three cuts, I went over to the turntable to make sure I didn't get the wrong album in the right jacket.

Only "Yo' Mama," and "Elayne" bear any resemblance to the expectations I had for this album. The Sons' roots were somewhere between the music of Buddy Holly, and James Brown with the harmonies of Crosby, Stills and Nash.

Actually, the more I think about it, probably Champlin is in nirvana on the Monteray Peninsula and a computer turned this garbage out based on data that was fed to it by a Top 40 radio station that believes hits are mechanically produced, not humanly created.

Larry Seiden

Gilmour's Phony Floyd

David Gilmour
Columbia JC 35388

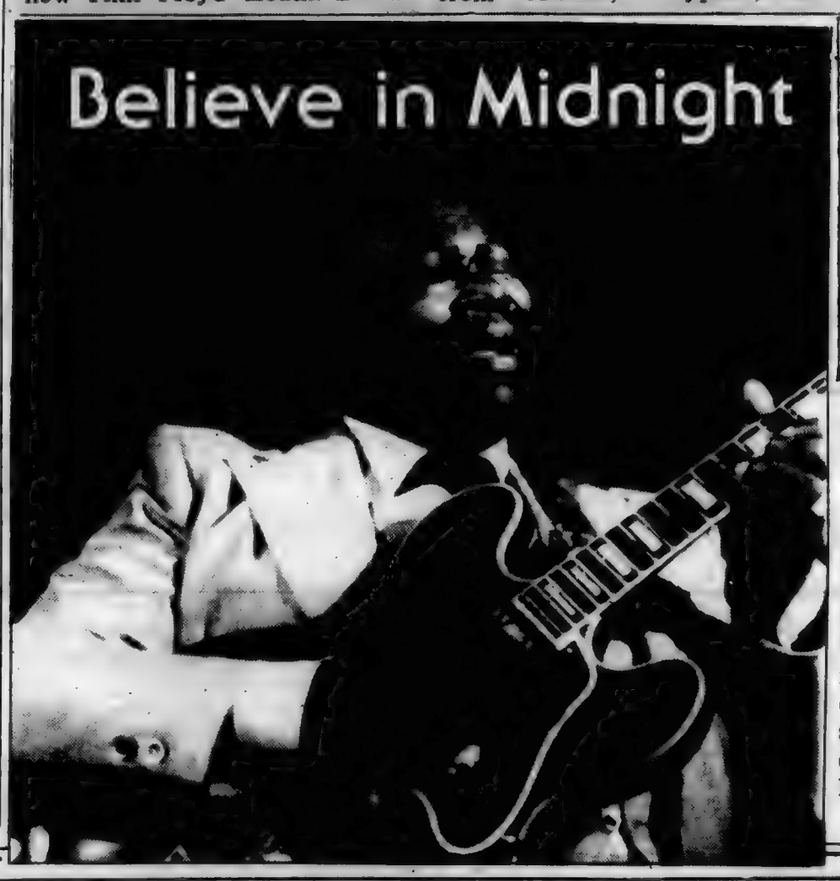
To a certain extent this is supposed to be as satisfying as a new Pink Floyd album. David Gilmour is about as directionless and vague as that sentence implies.



Marred by songs that sound closer to outtakes from Animals than trains of imaginative thought, Pink Floyd's singer/lead guitarist's debut effort fails to consistently capture any characteristics of the Floyd mystique, much less chart any break throughs of Gilmour's own.

David Gilmour is not a 'concept' album, which leaves the guitarist too much room to drift. The music sounds like that of Pink Floyd, but, without meaning or drive. Cuts range from "Mitialis," a typical, but bland Floyd sounding tune, to the meaningless narrative, "I Can't Breathe Anymore."

Maybe it's not all that bad. An occasionally *Who's Next*ish sounding rhythm line on "Snort and Sweet" is intriguing, and "There's No Way Out of Here," a song which should have been on Dark Side of the Moon, is fine if heard in that context.

Yet something is definitely missing. David Gilmour isn't really bad, but for a guy who hasn't recorded in nearly two years, it could have been much better.

—Bernard W. Louis

Midnight Believer
B. B. King
ABC AA 1061

By Larry Seiden

Still one of the greatest shows on this earth (with apologies to Ringling Bros. & Barnum) is a B. B. King concert. The man is master of the wince, wink and wriff. Unfortunately B.B.'s records have never come close to catching that magnetism. On stage it is hard to divert your eyes from his presence. On vinyl, his records are truly appreciated

(continued on page 21)

The
LAST CHANCE
Saloon
Mon Nite
Bottle Beer
50c
147 Main St.

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN SHOP
JULY SPECIALS

30 % OFF ALL
SHORT SLEEVED
SHIRTS
AND SHORTS

ALSO ON SALE:
ARENA BATHING SUITS
EUREKA CANVAS TENTS

BOTH 20% OFF

Quantities
Limited

DAKIN'S MOUNTAIN
SHOP

SUPER MIRAGE
- Touring performance for the average bicylist
- Hours of trouble-free riding
- Low maintenance
- Quality components
- 30 day free tune-up
- Mens' and Ladies' frames $219 95

MOTOBECANE
One of the few things in life in a class of its own.

pagocycle 864-6878

HOURS
MON.-FRI.
9-9
SAT.
9-6

227 MAIN ST., BURLINGTON

The Ultimate Mellow:

Cruisin' On Lake Champlain

Looking for a truly memorable vacation week? Just head down the hill, past the lines at the Dairy Bar, past Church Street traffic, past King Street congestion, to the edge of shimmering Lake Champlain. If it's Saturday afternoon or Sunday, you'll see, calmly reposing at her berth, the Schooner Richard Robbins. And unlike the other boats around her, unless you happen to own one, she is available for your pleasure.

Every Monday morning since June, The Robbins has been slipping out for weekly cruises on the lake. Manned by the skipper, Neal E. Parker, a crew of four, and up to eighteen passengers, the schooner sails wherever the wind takes her. The days are long and lazy for those lucky enough to be aboard – reading, playing bridge or backgammon, or just contemplating the Adirondacks in the sun. The evenings, after the anchor drops, are for exploring the coves and historic villages along the lake, with ample time for a swim and gourmet dining afterward.

The fare aboard The Robbins is a highlight of the trip. Michelle Oliphant, cook on ship, ships up amazing meals with homemade bread and pastries, fresh fruit and vegetables, and even hand-cranked ice cream. And all of this is accomplished with a wood stove in the compact quarters of the ship's galley.

The ship itself has truly elegant lines, drawing admiring looks and being photographed by the other sailors on the lake. Trim and sleek, she is, nevertheless, very stable and smooth even in the choppy waters of Lake Champlain. A veteran in the waves, she was built in 1902 in Greenwich, New Jersey. The Robbins has beencompletely refurbished for the cruising trade, after being part of an oyster fleet in Delaware Bay. six double cabins and six single berths below deck provide very comfortable sleeping quarters for all passengers. The largest part of the trip, however, is spent above, lounging on the spacious fifty-eight-foot-long frame. Any feeling of claustrophobia is quickly dissipated as the vast freedom of sailing Lake Champlain sinks in.

Above deck after breakfast last Friday, the group aboard was getting down to serious relaxation on the last day of their cruise. With the schooner under way out of Malletts Bay, which required help from all hands to crank up the huge anchor and to man all the "sheets," the passengers assumed their well-rehearsed postures of repose. The most strenuous activity attempted was turning pages, the predominant type of book being the thick, trashy paperback with a provocative picture on the cover. The sheer leisure of it all hung in the air with the grey summer haze.

It was an interesting assortment of people, ranging from a New Jersey filter-manufacturing company president in long pants, socks, and Hush Puppies, to a bearded journaliste from Montreal in a tres, tres little bikini. Overcoming a little initial discord, and perhaps, culture shock, a relaxed, cohesive group emerged on Friday. This development of a closely-knit community spirit in such an uncommon situation adds an exciting and rewarding element to the trip. The same group of diverse people who knew nothing about each other on Monday were planning a party for later in the summer at Ed's house in New York and many had decided to head up to Stowe for the weekend when the boat docked.

The afternoon found a spontaneous body-painting session in full swing, thanks to someone's pastels left on deck. When the chalk dust settled, Lucille, who looked like a Girl Scout leader, sported anchors on both arms in charming shades of sea green, and John had been transformed into a middle-aged Indian in war paint right to the top of his bald head. When a bottle of Chivas Regal appeared at three, the party took a different course.

The group was obviously content after a week of this relaxed revelry on board ship. Although one woman would have preferred a stricter itinerary and more shoreline sight-seeing, her shipmates were happy cruising with the wind and generally mellowing out.

The Robbins' crew contributes heartily to the success of the trips. Very low key and good-natured, Skipper Parker adds "please" and "thank-you" to directions for crew members Jeff Cohen, Bill Schwaneflugel and Ron Rost as they keep the ship sailing smoothly. Their lively horseplay and good spirits make it clear it's been a terrific summer on the boat.

But if you're still not happy with your summer, it's not too late to salvage it. The schooner will sail forth every Monday until October 16 in pursuit of leisurely adventure. For more information, or to make reservations (cost is $265 per person per week), give a call to the ship's owner, Mr. Kempton E. Webb at 802-759-2411, or write to him at Box 195, Vergennes, Vt. 05491. If you'd like to look at the ship and talk to the Skipper and his crew, stroll down to the King Street Dock one weekend. There's the biggest sailboat there. And then when you look out across the lake, catch a brilliant sunset, just think how much more beautiful it would be from the deck of the Richard Robbins, surrounded by the waters of Lake Champlain.

—Julie Voll

Recent Cuts

Atypical Southern

What If
The Dixie Dregs
Capricorn Records CPN 0203

What if the Dixie Dregs put out an album that was extremely diverse in nature, near technical perfection, but hard as hell to describe?

The new Dixie Dregs album, What If, is precisely all these things. Indeed, diversity is an understatement of this album's character. What If delves to encompass a wide range of musical genres, which keep the band balancing between keyed up jazz/rock tunes and easy listening songs that might serve as background music for a scenario set in the outer limits of the biosphere or deep under the ocean.

Clearly, the Dixie Dregs are not an ordinary "Southern rock band." Recently discovered by the Capricorn people, the Band is mutual friends of the Greg Allman Band, Dicky Betts and the Great Southern, and Sea Level, to name a few. Their recent concert in L.A. drew Carlos Santana and John McGloughlin into the audience. Their single lead guitarist and frequent classical riffs are quite dissimilar to the dual or triple guitar, rocking leads of the Allman, Outlaws, or Marshall Tucker. What If, when viewed from the fact that Chuck Levell's forthcoming classically influenced effort, may actually reflect a new Southern tradition in the making.

Although a vocal occasionally could be heard on their debut effort, Freefall (which didn't get too far off the ground financially), What If is purely an instrumental production, leaving the hypothetical message somewhat difficult to discern. The band frequently transverses from a decidedly electrifying uptempo jazz based sound into the mellower sounds of a classically based lead guitar and rhythm. Indeed, the band is apparently on the "odyssey" the second cut here suggests. The Dreg's collectively seem to be venturing into the realms of darkness, and then back again with a sigh of relief.

What If represents one of the strongest attempts at classical/rock/jazz fusion to date. Imagine a song with definite country overtones, a bluesy piano slipping into the breaks, accompanied by a hard driving bass and guitar; then listen to "Gina Lola Breakdown." This prompted memories of my last Dixie Dregs concert which I heard in a small club last summer. Their encore was a couple of Allman Brothers' songs, with the lead guitarist playing a perfect lead on Duane's old guitar. No wonder the Dregs have been receiving attention lately. In an age where nearly anyone with a gimmick and a good agent can become a pop star, it's nice to know that room still exists for unadulterated talent, and that there are people who recognize it. What if they didn't?

—Shana Schwartzberg

C'est Garbage

ALIVE MOTHER FOR YA
Billy Cobham, Steve Khan, Alphonso Johnson, Tom Scott
Columbia JC 35349

ALIVE MOTHER FOR YA prompts visions of George Steinbrenner. The album is strictly a financially motivated effort which, like the Yankees, bats barely over .500 strictly due to natural ability, not any sense of inward drive.

Remarkably, the striking feature of this piece is the liner notes. Remember Columbia's PR smeared "The Inner Sleeve" record jackets of 1972? Although the record company has restricted the propaganda to this album's artists, the tactic has returned, but this time on the album's back cover.

Try skimming this:

"We are in San. Francisco, Fall, 1977. Present are drummer/guitarist Steve Khan, drummer Billy Cobham, reedman Tom Scott, bassist Alphonso Johnson and keyboardist Mark Sashin. There is an excited chatter amongst the players, each waiting the signal to begin.

"The five are in a rehearsal studio, several of them fresh from triumph at the Montreux Jazz Festival where a group of musicians, assembled under the aegis of CBS, blew the Festival apart (you can hear it on the Columbia albums Montreux Summit, I and II).

"It was a subsequent brainwave that suggested a touring group, similar in statue, but considerably smaller in size — why not a quartet of musicians who were recording for the CBS family?"

These are only the liner's first three paragraphs. The proceding 16 could be the written work of Phil Rizzuto under a pseudonym, or at least were written by a younger fan with Rizzuto's flair for unbias commentary. Why anyone with the talent and widespread acceptance of Tom Scott would allow his name to appear under these conditions is not beyond reason, but truly is a disappointment.

When ALIVE MOTHER FORYA inevitably reaches "the back of the discount rack like another can of beans" (Billy Joel), you might pick it up as an album to play when you suspect your stereo's needle is beginning to wear out. Might...

—R.F

B.B.'s Blues

(continued from pg. 19)

but never seem to hit the turntable enough.

Midnight Believer is not a great album. But it comes close to being a very good one. If you close your eyes and start to imagine the robust man with the agile fingers caressing Lucille, at first gently, then firmly, finally stinging the stretched strings until they cry to be released.

To pull off Midnight Believer, B.B. teams with the Crusaders, who all had a hand in the production along with Stewart Levine. Much to their credit they didn't add too much of their jismo jazz trying to funkify the blues. But to their discredit, the arrangements suffer from the same old blues. With the exception of "I Just Can't Leave Your Love Alone," with its uptempo New Orleans gumbo horns and "Ha-chi-cha-cha" chorus, there is an annoying sameness to the rest of the album that is exactly what almost everyone of the almost 50 B.B. King albums suffer from. It is not that the blues are such a limited pastiche but that bluespeople seem to get stuck retaining the same feeling in each song. It happens to other artists too. Many of the jazz/funk/rock crossover musicians are caught up in the same unvarying sounds.

By changing the tempo of "I Just Can't Leave Your Love Alone" a whole new approach to the basic blues is achieved. Some creole crooning by the Sea Saint horn section proves the blues don't have to be dull to ring true. B.B.'s baritone can leave an audience mesmerized even if he sang "Frere Jacque." By eliminating the old 4/4, a little spunk is added. In fact it becomes an unbearably and unfortunately unmatched good boogie tune.

After almost 50 years in showbiz, B.B. stands as an institution. The man tours almost 300 days a year. On "Let Me Make You Cry. A Little Longer," B.B. reflects on his long showbix life and the cryin' shame feeling he brings to the song just makes you wanna hang your head and cry for the po' boy:

You know by now that I've been passed/ Through an awful lot of hands/ And all I have is what is left/ From ten thousand one night stands.

On the plus side give B.B. all the credit for the quality of this album. He never lets any of the songs speak for themselves. He powers them home with his compelling voice. The man was just meant to sing the blues. He has that rare talent to make a lackluster song like "Hold On (I Feel Our Love is Changing)" and through the artistry of interpretation turn it into a damn good give-me-one-last-chance number.

The songs thrive on the image of B.B., as a strong man who will always be there for his woman ("When It All Comes Down [I'll Still Be Around]", "Never Make a Move Too Soon," and "A World Full of Strangers") and it is his voice that belies that power that keeps this man sane in the face of his women, who are always ready to hit the road. Of course, B.B. also yaks away through Lucille, and no Gibson ES 355 ever spoke so eloquently as Lucille.

Midnight Believer will please B.B. fans and a few new friends will be attracted to the contemporary sound of the same old blues.

Tape Art

Panasonic
RS-462S

RS-462S
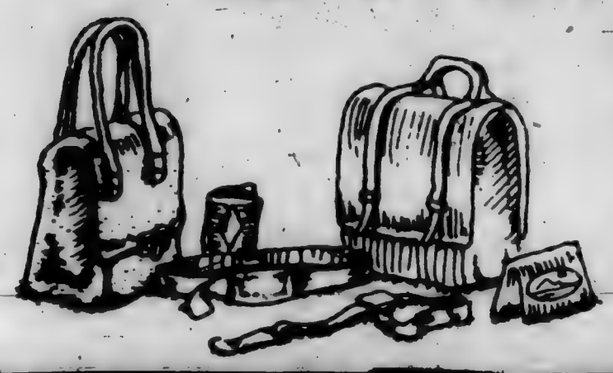
AC/Battery Stereo portable cassette recorder with FM/AM stereo radio features two 5" PM dynamic speakers. Two built-in condenser mikes. Super Alloy head. $CrO_2$/normal tape selector. Level/battery/tuning meter. Cue and review. Lockable pause control. Tape counter. Auto-Stop/Auto-Sleep. Separate tone, volume and balance controls. AFC on FM. With AC cord and 6 Panasonic "D" size batteries.

$189.95

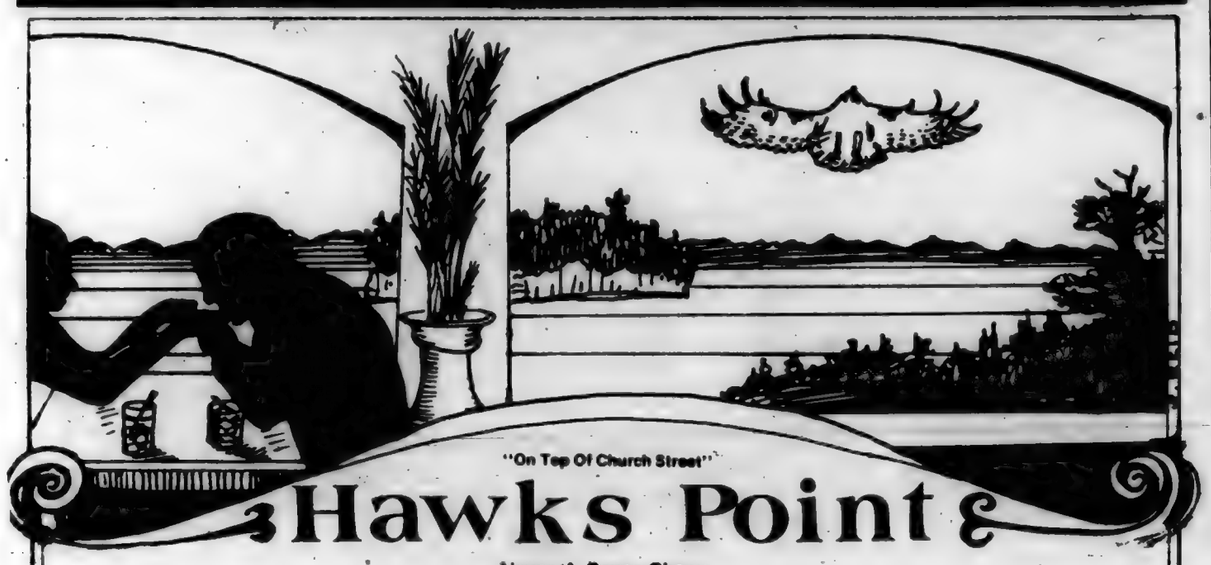
ALL SALES BACKED BY OUR FAMOUS SERVICE
BAILEY'S
MUSIC ROOMS - Church St. - Burl., Vt. 863-3210

THE PROTEAN BODY
A Rolfer's View of Human Flexibility
by Don Johnson
$ 5.95
20% off
July 31 to Aug. 5
BOOKSTACKS
Pine Street between Main & College
862-8513
Open Weeknights 8pm. (fri.-9)

Our STYLES Are IN STYLE



HATS
$12
And
Up



BAGS
$19
And
Up

160 COLLEGE
Crispin Leather

Walk into our store.. and you'll know
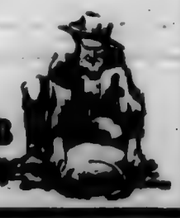
what we're all about
LEATHER

SUNDANCE
A HERITAGE OF AMERICAN CRAFTS
CHURCH ST • BURLINGTON • OPPOSITE WOOLWORTH'S



"On Top Of Church Street"
Hawks Point
Never A Cover Charge
68 Church St.
"Just Jazz" Quintet
Featuring songs by Sam Armstrong
Fri. and Sat. night
Major sporting events
on our 8-foot TV screen

E&E TIRE
with extra effort
service

152 Riverside Ave. 864-7759

R.W. Hunt's Presents
An Evening of Country Blues and Ragtime with GEORGE GRITZBACH
Sun. July 30 9:00 $1.50 at the Door
ZZEBRA
Thurs., Fri., & Sat.
Aug. 3, 4 & 5

Quality entertainment in a comfortable club atmosphere.
Luncheon - Monday thru Friday
Dinner - Tuesday thru Sunday
101 Main 863-9850

Cyn Flicks

Let It Be: Sgt. Pepper's Isn't THAT Bad

No, this isn't a Burger King ad.

What happens when you mix Peter Frampton, the Bee Gees, disco music, typical seventies glitter, a movie camera and classic songs by John Lennon and Paul McCartney? A handful of AM hits, and a movie lacking dramatic excellence, but nonetheless entertaining, Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Heart's Club Band.

The film contains very little dialogue, and the plot is simply the literal enactment of dozens of Lennon/McCartney songs. This mode proves to be optimal for this movie since it places minimal demands on the super rock stars' acting ability.

The predominately musical soundtrack, which is about the only reason people would show interest in this film, is fair. Although the Lennon/McCartney songs were not written for disco, they fared the transformation admirably well. Any of the songs' symbolic meaning was omitted in this movie's interpretation, as quite often, the 60's air of the lyrics clashed with the 70's style of the film. "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds," for example, fell even below the Elton John version, while others, such as Earth, Wind and Fire's interpretation of "Got to Get You Into My Life" actually made the Beatles' version seem musically inadequate.

Sgt. Pepper's proves that Lennon/McCartney era songs can stand up to nearly anything, including a typical, intellectually degrading, yet somehow amusing, rock and roll flick

—Alex Eschenbrenner

Revenge Was Never So Silly

This had better be the last Pink Panther film. Not that the comedy and humor have worn thin on the fifth time around, but viewers will begin to confuse what happened in which Pink Panther episode.

In The Revenge of the Pink Panther, Peter Sellers is the incomparable bungler, yet seemingly immortal, Inspector Clouzot. A master of disguises, Sellers trips, stumbles, and falls his way into every movie-goers' funny bone. One never knows what he will look like next: Toulouse-Lautrec, transvestite, Swedish fisherman, or Chinese coolie.

The plot is simple. Phillipe Douvier, a French businessman dealing in heroin, needs a show of strength. So he hires scores of assassins to bump off Clouzot. After two failures, it appears that Clouzot has been done in at last; but no, Clouzot lives on to seek revenge!

Back on the screen to join Sellers is Herbert Lom as Inspector Dreyfus, who had been driven mad by Clouzot. Dreyfus is released from a mental hospital to hunt down Clouzot's "killers," when he would rather reward them. Clouzot's manservant Cato (Burt Kwouk) is a karate-chopping fumbler who at one point opens France's answer to Suzie Wong's Pleasure Palace. Robert Webber is a straight-forward bad guy as Douvier, and Dyan Cannon, as his secretary Simone Legree (sic!) is entertaining, though short on laughs.

The spilled paint, errant bullets, broken windows, and fireworks culminate in Hong Kong. Sellers gives an hysterical rendition of "The Godfather" which makes Brando look like a shrivilled prune! Of course, the cops capture the crooks, Clouzot is decorated and one wonders if Hollywood will try to milk a sixth fortune from this old Pink Beast.

The humor is at times trite and vacillates between low-key puns and wild slapstick. There's plenty of action and color — the perfect movie to take the wife and kids to. You guys and gals out on your first date will dazzle at the romantic French settings and the laughter will help you break the ice.

Curtis Haynes

On Stage

Allan Felix (Ray DeMattis) tangles with his fantasies.

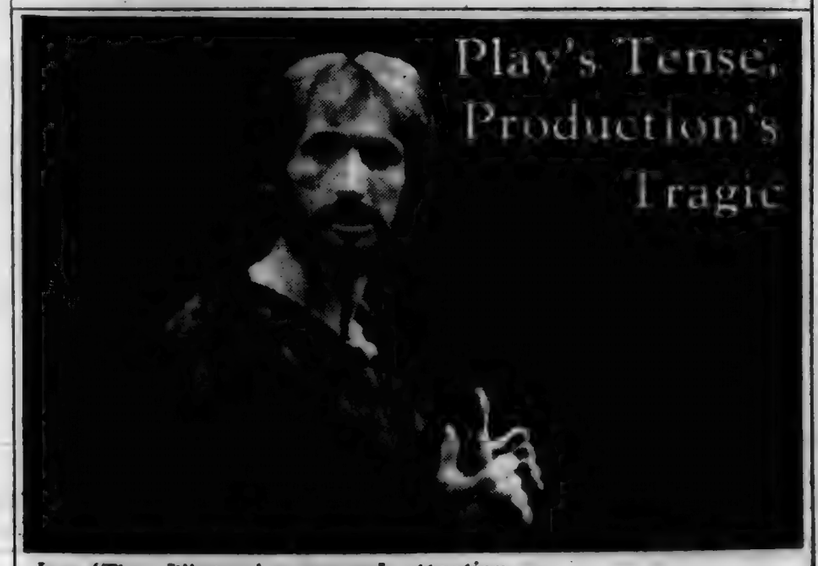
Woody Allen is alive and well, but unfortunately not living nearby, so we'll have to settle for the St. Michael's Playhouse production of his autobiographical Play It Again, Sam for our dosage of his zany humor. It's not even that hard to swallow, despite apprehension about anyone else trying to fill Woody's shoes.

Ray DeMattis does the job admirably, taking the leading role of Allan Felix, abandoned by his wife Nancy (Judith Reagan), and forced to confront his numerous insecurities and fantasies while resuming the dating game. Unlike Woody's nervous, neuroses-ridden characterization, DeMattis comes across more like a clumsy teddy bear who would arouse the mother instinct in any woman.



Richard Patrick-Warner, as the natty executive immersed in work and oblivious to the affair right under his nose, generally comes on too strong throughout the play. A bit more finesse and less shouting into the telephone would make him much more believable and easier to watch. Cynthia Neer, as his "perfect corporate image" wife, is almost too perfect – she says she is neurotic, but it sure doesn't show.

The other women of his fertile imagination who stroll through the scenes are marvelous. Judith Reagan and Denise Correa each handle their roles with flair and sophistication. Correa also did the costumes and came up with some amazing sixties' garb of psychedelic dresses and white go-go boots. As Felix's ultimate fantasy however, David Emge as Bogart is superb. The physical resemblance is astounding, and as he coaches Felix's moves on Linda, he draws some of the biggest laughs of the night.

The setting and lighting by Bill Neuert are excellent, smoothly aiding the passage of the dreamlike characters with numerous hidden entrances and exits cleverly built into the apartment set. The tight timing and smooth blocking are evidence of Margaret O'Brien's capable direction of the entire operation.

Woody Allen's bright comedy is always good for a refreshing break and this production of Play It Again, Sam is no exception.

—J. Cilley

Iago (Time Winters) commands attention.

Tragedies are more difficult to stage than comedies as the 20th Anniversary Champlain Shakespeare Festival will attest. After a thoroughly enjoyable performance of Twelfth Night, Othello is a mild disappointment. A pallor seems to hang over the play from the beginning, and it is not until the second half that this production achieves a professional polish. The opening scenes are painfully slow, without much movement from the actors. The action gradually picks up and the play gains a cohesion which the audience appreciated.

